5*l*. 10*s*. from the customer for the coals, leaving with him the receipted invoice, and embezzled the money. It was held that there was such a privity as to make the defendant the agent of the company in receiving the money, and that it was not received for or on account of the prosecutor, his master, but for and on account of the company. R. v. Beaumont, Dears. 270; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 54; 6 Cox, 269. H., the defendant's master, was the agent of a railway company for delivering goods, and employed his own servants, of whom the defendant was one, and used his own drays and horses, and was answerable to the company for moneys collected by his servants for carriage. It was the defendant's duty to go out with a dray, to take with him goods and a delivery-book handed to him by a clerk of the company, and to receive the amount of carriage therein specified as due to the company, and then to account for the sums so received with the company's clerk. The sums charged as being embezzled were sums received by the defendant for carriage, and entered in the delivery-book, and such sums were paid to the defendant and received by him as due to the company, and he gave receipts for the same in the name of the company. It was held that the defendant was properly convicted on an indictment charging that he received the money for and in the name and on the account of H., his master; for that, although he received it in the name of the company, he received it for and on account of his master. R. v. Thorpe, Dears. & B. 562; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 64; 8 Cox, 29. The defendant was the miller of a mill in a county gaol, being paid a weekly salary as such out of the county rate, and it was his duty to direct persons who brought grain to be ground at the mill to obtain at the porter's lodge a ticket specifying the quantity of grain brought, and his business then was to receive the grain with the ticket, to grind it, to receive the money for the grinding, and to account for it to the governor of the gaol, who in his turn accounted to the county treasurer. The defendant received and ground grain brought without a ticket, and, without directing the persons who brought it to obtain one, received the money for grinding it, and did not account for it, but applied it to his own use. It was held that upon these facts he could not be convicted of embezzlement, as the conclusion to be drawn from them was that he had made an improper use of the mill by grinding the corn for his own benefit, and so he did not receive the money for or on behalf of his masters. R. v. Harris, Dears. 344; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 110; 6 Cox, 363: and see R. v. Cullum (infra). It is not necessary, however, that the person paying the money to the servant should have paid it to him on account of his master; it is sufficient if the servant received it on account of his master. The prisoner was the clerk of an insurance company, and head manager at their chief office at L. In course of business he received several cheques payable to his order from the managers of branch offices, and it was his duty to indorse these cheques and hand them over to the company's cashier. Instead of doing so, he indorsed the cheques and obtained money for them from friends of his own, who paid the cheques into their own banks. The money thus obtained the prisoner appropriated to his own use, and, having been convicted of embezzling it, it was held that the proceeds of the cheques, though received by the prisoner, not from the bankers, but from third persons who knew nothing of the prisoner's nasters in the transactions, were received by him on account of the company, nd that he was rightly convicted. R. v. Gale, 2 Q. B. D. 141; 46 L. J. M. C.) 134; 13 Cox, 340: cf. R. v. Wheeler, 14 W. R. 848 (C. C. R. Ir.).

Under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 44 (2) (ante, p. 506), upon an indictment for mbezzlement, the defendant is not entitled to be acquitted if the offence turns ut to be larceny, but may be convicted and punished as for larceny, and vice ersâ. Where, however, the prisoner is indicted for larceny a general verdict f guilty cannot be sustained upon evidence of embezzlement only. R. v. Gorbutt, Dears. & B. 166; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 47; 7 Cox, 221.

Though it is not necessary, under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 17, that the money, tc., alleged to have been embezzled should have been received by the servant y virtue of his employment, it is necessary that it should when received by he servant be the master's property, and therefore a servant cannot be guilty f embezzling money which he has earned by an unauthorized and wrongful se of his master's implements of trade from a person who contracted with the ervant only and knew nothing of the master in the transaction. R. v. Cullum, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 28; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 64; 12 Cox, 469. Therefore where a ervant whose duty it was to take a barge belonging to his master with cargo rom A. to B., and receive back such return cargo, and from such persons as is master should direct, and such only, contrary to the express orders of his master, which were to return empty from B. to C., part of the return voyage o A., took nevertheless a return cargo from B. to C., and received the freight rom the owner of the cargo (who knew only the prisoner in the transaction), nd did not account to his master for the freight, and denied having carried uch return cargo; it was held, that an indictment against the servant for mbezzling the money received by him as freight for such return cargo could ot be sustained. Id. And where a gamekeeper, not authorized to kill or take abbits for his own use, took and killed some wild rabbits upon his master's and, and dishonestly converted them to his own use by selling them,—the aking, killing, removing, and selling, being parts of one continuous action; t was held that a conviction of the gamekeeper for embezzling the rabbits ould not be sustained, apparently on the ground that the rabbits could not e said to have been received or taken into possession by him for or in the ame or on account of his master. R. v. Read, 3 Q. B. D. 131; 47 L. J. M. C.) 50; 14 Cox, 17.

And, lastly, prove that the defendant embezzled the money, etc., so received, r some part of it. An unstamped receipt for the money given by the defendant admissible as evidence against him (see ante, p. 447). As to the constructive eceipt of the money, see R. v. Baxter, 5 Cox, 302. The usual presumptive vidence of this fact is, that the defendant never accounted with his master or the money, etc., so received by him, or that he denied his having received . Where the defendant charged himself in his master's book with money eceived by him, it was held that an embezzlement was not proved merely by is not paying it over to the master. R. v. Hodgson, 3 C. & P. 422. On the ther hand, the defendant is not exempted from the operation of the statute erely by entering the receipt of the money correctly in his master's book. . v. Lister, Dears. & B. 118; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 26; 7 Cox, 203: R. v. Guelder, Bell, 284; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 34; 8 Cox, 372. If, instead of denying the appropriation of the money, the party in rendering his account admits it, alleging a right in himself, however unfounded, or setting up an excuse, however frivolous, he ought not to be convicted of embezzlement; R. v. Norman, C. & Mar. 501, Cresswell, J.; even though he afterwards absconds and does not pay over the money. R. v. Creed, 1 C. & K. 63. But where it is the servant's duty to account for and pay over the moneys received by him at stated times, his wilfully not doing so is an embezzlement, although he does not actually deny the receipt of them. R. v. Jackson, 1 C. & K. 384, Coleridge, J. R. v. Jones, 7 C. & P. 833, which seems to the contrary, must be taken to be overruled. And even where no precise time can be fixed at which it was his duty to pay them over, his not accounting for them, if found by the jury to have been done fraudulently, is equally an embezzlement. R. v. Welch, 20 L. J. (K. B.) 101; 1 Den. 199; 2 C. & K. 296; 2 Cox, 85. See R. v. Squire (ante, p. 607): R. v. Wortley (ante, p. 612), and as to where there is a general deficiency, see post, p. 619.

Venue.]—The defendant, who was employed as a travelling salesman by a tradesman living at Nottingham, received two sums for his master in the county of Derby, appropriated them to his own use, and neglected to return and account to his master for the money as it was his duty to do. Two months afterwards he was met by his master in Nottingham; and being asked by him respecting the two sums of money, said he was very sorry for what he had done, that he had spent the money. It was held that there was evidence to go to the jury of an embezzlement in Nottingham, and therefore that the defendant was rightly tried there. R. v. Murdock, 2 Den. 298; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 22; 5 Cox, 360. It was the duty of the prisoner, a commercial traveller, to remit daily to his employers, who resided in London, the money which he collected. The prisoner on the 1st and 2nd March, 1878, collected at Newark two sums of money, which he never remitted and did not account for till the first week in April, when one of his employers went to Grantham, where the prisoner resided, saw him, and taxed him with receiving moneys and not accounting for them. The prisoner then and there handed to his employer a list of moneys he had collected, and not accounted for, including the above two sums. There was no evidence that the prisoner returned from Newark (which is within fifteen miles of Grantham) to Grantham on either of the days on which he received the money, nor indeed that he was ever at Grantham between the time when he received the sums of money and the time when he met his employer there. It was held upon these facts there was no evidence of embezzlement at Grantham, and therefore that the defendant could not be tried at the quarter sessions for that borough. R. v. Treadgold, 48 L. J. (M. C.) 102; 14 Cox, 220. A clerk whose duty it was to remit at once to his employers in Middlesex all moneys collected by him, collected at York, on the 18th April, a sum of money, but never remitted it. On the 21st April, he wrote and posted at Doncaster to his employers in Middlesex a letter which was intended to make them believe that he had not then collected the money in question. The letter was received by the employers in Middlesex.

t was held that the receipt of such letter in Middlesex was evidence of mbezzlement in that county, and that the prisoner was rightly tried there. . v. Rogers, 3 Q. B. D. 28; 47 L. J. (M. C.) 11; 14 Cox, 22. Semble, also. hat on these facts there was evidence of embezzlement in Yorkshire, and that he prisoner might have been tried there. Id.

By s. 39 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ante, p. 502), person charged with embezzlement, or any other offence against the Act, ay be proceeded against, indicted, tried, and punished in any county or lace in which he was apprehended or is in custody as if the offence had been ommitted in that county or place; and for all purposes incidental to or consequential on the prosecution, trial, or punishment of the offence, it shall be eemed to have been committed in that county or place. This provision will et rid of the difficulties formerly experienced in some cases of embezzlement.

Where general deficiency of moneys.]—In R. v. Grove, 1 Mood. 447; 7 C. & P. 635, a majority of the judges (eight against seven) are reported to have eld that an indictment for embezzlement might be supported by proof of a general deficiency of money's that ought to be forthcoming, without showing ny particular sum received and not accounted for. See also R. v. Lambert, 2 Cox, 309, Erle, J.: R. v. Moah, Dears. 626; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 66; 7 Cox, 60: R. v. King, 12 Cox, 73 (C. C. R.), ante, p. 614: and R. v. Skerrett [1902] 2 West Austr. Rep. 101. But in R. v. Lloyd Jones, 8 C. & P. 288; where upon an indictment for embezzlement, it was opened that the prisoner had been shopman to the prosecutrix, and it would be proved that there was a deficiency n the prisoner's accounts, but that there was no proof of the embezzlement f any particular sum, Alderson, B., said, "Whatever difference of opinion there night be in R. v. Grove (supra), that proceeded more upon the particular facts of hat case than upon the law. It is not sufficient to prove at the trial a general leficiency in account. Some specific sum must be proved to be embezzled, n like manner as in larceny some particular article must be proved to have een stolen." See also R. v. Chapman, 1 C. & K. 119; 1 Cox, 47, Williams, J.: R. v. Wolstenholme, 11 Cox, 313, Brett, J.: 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1396. Where mbezzlement of a cheque was charged and the cheque could not be found the ounterfoil was admitted in evidence. R. v. Wilkinson, 10 Cox, 537.

Where the indictment contains only one count, charging the receipt of a ross sum on a particular day, and it appears in evidence that the money was eceived in different sums on different days, the prosecutor will be put to his lection and must confine himself to one sum and one day. R. v. Williams, C. & P. 626. If, however, in that case, it had appeared that although the ross amount had been received in different sums on different days, the risoner's duty was, on a certain day, to render an account and pay over the ross amount received, and that the prisoner had on that day failed to account r to pay over the gross amount, but embezzled the money, the prisoner might ave been indicted in only one count for embezzling the gross amount, and vidence of the different sums received on different days might have been dmitted to show how such gross amount was made up. R. v. Balls, L. R. C. C. R. 328; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 148; 12 Cox, 96. And in R. v. Wright, 27 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 65; Dears. & B. 431 (ante, p. 614), which was an indictment for larceny by a bank clerk, where the evidence showed a deficiency of over 3,000*l.*, and the prisoner admitted that he had taken over 3,000*l.*, it was held that the jury need not find that a specific sum was taken on any specific day, but might find that he stole some money. In R. v. Balls, supra, the prisoner was a member of a co-partnership, and was indicted under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 116, s. 1 (rep. and re-enacted by 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 40 (4), ante, p. 503), for embezzling the co-partnership moneys. It was his duty to receive money for the co-partnership, and once a week to render an account and pay over the gross amount received during the previous week. During each of three several weeks, within six months, the prisoner received various small sums, and failed to account for them at the end of the week, or to pay over the gross amount, but embezzled the money. It was held that he might be properly charged with embezzling the weekly aggregates; that three acts of embezzlement of such weekly aggregates within six months might be charged and proved under one indictment; and that evidence of the small sums received during each week was admissible to show how these aggregates were made up. The difficulties arising in the above cases with regard to the embezzlement of gross amounts can now often be surmounted by indicting the defendant under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 24 (The Falsification of Accounts Act, 1875): post, p. 734.

Where an indictment for embezzlement charged three offences, and it appeared that the prisoner had made correct entries of a number of payments made by him in one week, but had cast up the whole 2*l.* less than the correct amount; and in another week there was a precisely similar error of the same amount, and the same in a third week, and these were the cases charged in the indictment: it was held that evidence of a series of similar errors, both before and after those which formed the subject of the indictment, was admissible in order to anticipate the defence that the three cases contained in the indictment were merely accidental errors. R. v. Richardson, 2 F. & F. 343; 8 Cox, 448. See R. v. Proud, L. & C. 97; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 71; 9 Cox, 22: R. v. Stephens, 16 Cox, 387 (C. C. R.); and for general rules as to such evidence, ante, pp. 355, 360. While the receipt of the money must have taken place during the service—R. v. Hoare, 1 F. & F. 647—it seems not to be necessary to allege or prove the embezzling to have taken place while the prisoner continued clerk or servant to the prosecutor. R. v. Lovell, 2 M. & Rob. 236, Coleridge, J.: see 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1401.

An indictment for embezzling money will not be sustained by evidence of embezzling goods. R. v. Clarke, 69 J. P. 150 (C. C. R.).

24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 86.—Not to deprive party aggrieved of remedy.—Conviction not to be evidence in civil suit.]—Nothing in any of the last eleven preceding sections of this Act contained, nor any proceeding, conviction, or judgment to be had or taken thereon against any person under any of the said sections, shall prevent, lessen, or impeach any remedy at law or in equity which any party aggrieved by any offence against any of the said sections might have had if this Act had not been passed; but no conviction of any such offender shall be received in evidence in any action at law or suit in equity against him: and nothing in the said sections contained shall affect or prejudice any agreement entered into or security given by any trustee, having for its object the restoration or repayment of any trust property misappropriated.

Sect. 87.—Offences not triable at quarter sessions.]—No misdemeanor against any of the last twelve preceding sections of this Act shall be prosecuted or tried at any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace.

26 & 27 Vict. c. 87 (Savings Bank Act, 1863), s. 9.—Officers of savings banks receiving deposits and not paying over same.]—If any actuary, cashier, secretary, officer, or other person holding any situation or appointment in any savings bank shall receive any sum or sums of money from or on account of any depositor or person desirous of becoming such, or on account of such savings bank, and shall not forthwith, or in the case of local receivers acting on behalf of any savings bank within the time specified in the rules of the said savings bank, duly account for and pay over the same to the trustees or managers thereof, or to such person as may be directed by the rules of the said savings bank, such actuary, cashier, secretary, officer, or local receiver, or other person as aforesaid, on being convicted thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [Punishable as stated, ante, pp. 238, 239. As to friendly societies, etc., see ante, p. 608.]

8 Edw. 7, c. 69 (Companies Consolidation Act, 1908), s. 175.—Power in England to order public examination of promoters, directors, etc.]—(1) When an order has been made in England for winding up a company by the court, and the official receiver has made a further report under this Act stating that in his opinion a fraud has been committed by any person in the promotion or formation of the company, or by any director or other officer of the company in relation to the company since its formation, the court may, after consideration of the report, direct that any person who has taken any part in the promotion or formation of the company, or has been a director, or officer of the company, shall attend before the court on a day appointed by the court for that purpose, and be publicly examined as to the promotion or formation or the conduct of the business of the company, or as to his conduct and dealings as director or officer thereof.

(2) The official receiver shall take part in the examination, and for that purpose may, if specially authorised by the Board of Trade in that behalf, employ a solicitor with or without counsel.

(3) The liquidator, where the official receiver is not the liquidator, and any creditor or contributory, may also take part in the examination either personally or by solicitor or counsel.

(4) The court may put such questions to the person examined as the court thinks fit.

(5) The person examined shall be examined on oath, and shall answer all such questions as the court may put or allow to be put to him.

(6) A person ordered to be examined under this section shall at his own cost, before his examination, be furnished with a copy of the official receiver's report, and may at his own cost employ a solicitor with or without counsel, who shall be at liberty to put to him such questions as the court may deem just for the purpose of enabling him to explain or qualify any answers given by him: Provided that if he is, in the opinion of the court, exculpated from any charges made or suggested against him, the court may allow him such costs as in its discretion it may think fit.

(7) Notes of the examination shall be taken down in writing, and shall be read over to or by, and signed by, the person examined, and may thereafter be used in evidence against him, and shall be open to the inspection of any creditor or contributory at all reasonable times.

(8) The court may, if it thinks fit, adjourn the examination from time to time.

(9) An examination under this section may, if the court so directs, and subject to general rules, be held before any judge of county courts, or before any officer of the Supreme Court, being an official referee, master, or registrar in bankruptcy, or before any district registrar of the High Court named for the purpose by the Lord Chancellor, or, in the case of companies being wound up by a palatine court, before a registrar of that court, and the powers of the court under this section as to the conduct of the examination, but not as to costs, may be exercised by the person before whom the examination is held. [This section re-enacts 53 & 54 Vict. c. 63, s. 8.]

Sect. 216.—Falsification of books.]—If any director, officer, or contributory of any company being wound up destroys, mutilates, alters, or falsifies any books, papers, writings, or securities, or makes or is privy to the making of any false or fraudulent entry in any register, book of account, or document belonging to the company with intent to defraud or deceive any person, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. [This section re-enacts 25 & 26 Vict. c. 82, s. 166, and appears to apply only to falsification of books, etc., on or in connection with the winding-up of a company. In the case of the London and Globe Finance Corporation [1903] 1 Ch. 728, an order was made under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 82, s. 167 (rep.), by Buckley, J., directing the official receiver "to institute and conduct against W. W. a criminal prosecution for such offences under ss. 83 and 84 of the Larceny Act, 1861, and s. 166 of the Companies Act, 1862, as he may be advised." The falsifications charged against the accused having been committed upon dates prior to the winding-up of the company in question, and having no direct reference thereto, no count alleging an offence against s. 166 was included in the indictment eventually preferred against him.]

Sect. 217.—(1) : Direction of prosecution by Court in case of winding-up by Court.—Expenses of prosecution.]—If it appears in the course of a winding-up by or subject to the supervision of the Court that any past or present director, manager, officer, or member of the company has been guilty of any offence in relation to the company, for which he is criminally responsible, the Court may, on the application of any person interested in the winding-up or of its own motion, direct the liquidator to prosecute the offence, and may order the costs and expenses to be paid out of the assets of the company. [This section re-enacts 25 & 26 Vict. c. 82, s. 167. See Re London and Globe Finance Corporation, supra.]

(2) If it appears to the liquidator in the course of a voluntary winding-up that any past or present director, manager, officer, or member of the company has been guilty of any offence in relation to the company for which he is criminally responsible, the liquidator, with the previous sanction of the Court, may prosecute the offender, and all expenses properly incurred by him in the prosecution shall be payable out of the assets of the company, in priority to all other liabilities. [This section re-enacts 25 & 26 Vict. c. 82, s. 168.]

Indictment against a Director of a Public Company for fraudulently appropriating the Company's Money. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 20 (1) (ii), ante, p. 621.)

THE KING v. A. B.

Surrey Assizes
held at Guildford.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Fraudulent conversion of property, contrary to section 20 (1) (ii) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the 1st day of June, A.D. 1917, in the county of Surrey, then being a director ["director, member, or public officer"] of a certain public company ["any body corporate or public company"] called the —— Company (Limited), fraudulently did take or apply for his own use or benefit ["for his own use or benefit, or for any use or purposes other than the use or purposes of such body corporate or public company"] certain money, to wit, one thousand pounds being the property ["any property," see 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46, ante, p. 508] of the said company.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years, 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 20 (ante, p. 621); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 37 (5) (a) (c) (ante, p. 501).

"Then being a director" is a sufficient averment of the fact that J. S. was a director: cf. R. v. Somerton, 7 B. & C. 463 (ante, p. 606).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 38 (1) (b) (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant was, at the time of the commission of the offence, a director of the public company mentioned in the indictment. It is doubtful whether proof of his acting in that capacity will be sufficient primâ facie evidence of his being director. R. v. Atkins, 64 J. P. 361; but see R. v. Lawson, post, p. 630. The statute does not define what is to be deemed a "public company" within these sections; but there can be no doubt that any company constituted by Act of Parliament or by charter, or registered under the Companies Acts, 1862-1908, would be held within them. See In re Griffith, 12 Ch. D. 655. Prove also that he took and applied to his own use the money of the company, as stated in the indictment, or some part thereof, and that he did so fraudulently (see ante, pp. 352, 360). See Nelson v. R. [1902] App. Cas. 250; 71 L. J. (P. C.) 55; 20 Cox, 150. The provisions of 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43 (3) (ante, p. 506), and 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 59, s. 166 (ante, p. 625), apply to an indictment for this offence, where the defendant has been examined in bankruptcy: but a similar protection is not afforded to a defendant who has been examined in the winding-up of a company. 8 Edw. 7, c. 69, s. 175 (7) (ante, p. 625).

Indictment against Directors and Members of a body corporate for making false entries in Books. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 83, ante, p. 624).

Commencement as in last precedent.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Falsifying books, contrary to section 83 of the Larceny Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., C. D. and E. F., in the county of ——, then being directors of a certain body corporate ("any body corporate or public company"), to wit, the —— Building Society; and G. H. then being a member of the said body corporate on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, with intent to defraud, did make or concur in the making of a false entry ("make or concur in the making of any false entry, or omit or concur in omitting any material particular") in a book of account of the said body corporate ("in any book of account, or other document") called the ledger, to wit, an entry of the sum of ——l., under the name of premium, to the credit of an account in the said ledger called the "Premiums" account.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 83 (ante, p. 624); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 117 (ante, p. 562).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 87 (ante, p. 106).

Indictment against Directors, etc., for publishing Fraudulent Statements.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 84, ante, p. 624).

Commencement as in precedent on p. 627.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Publishing fraudulent statements, contrary to section 84 of the Larceny Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——. A.D. ——, in the county of ——, being a director of a public company called the —— Company (Limited), did circulate or publish ["make, circulate, or publish, or concur in making, circulating, or publishing"] a certain written statement or account ["any written statement or account"], which was false in certain material particulars, to wit, in that it was therein falsely stated that (state the particulars), he the said A. B. knowing the said written statement or account to be false in the several particulars aforesaid; with intent thereby then to deceive or defraud J. N., a shareholder of the said public company or to induce divers persons unknown to become shareholders therein ["with intent to deceive or defraud any member, shareholder, or creditor of such body corporate or public company, or with intent to induce any person to become a shareholder or partner therein, or to intrust or advance any property to such body corporate or public company, or to enter into any security for the benefit thereof"].

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment with or without hard labour for not more than two years. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 84; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, p. 238). As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 117 (ante, p. 562). See the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 87 (ante, p. 625).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant was a director. If the indictment is against a manager, it is sufficient to prove that the defendant in fact managed the business of the company; and it is not necessary to prove that he was duly appointed to the office of manager. R. v. Lawson [1905] 1 K. B. 541; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 296; 20 Cox, 812: Gibson v. Barton, L. R. 10 Q. B. 329; 44 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 81. It is submitted that R. v. Lawson is equally applicable to directors and other officers, but see R. v. Atkins, 64 J. P. 361. Prove also that he circulated and published, or concurred in circulating and publishing a statement in writing, or in print, relating to the affairs of the company, false in some material particular or particulars, as stated in the indictment (the materiality will be a question for the judge to determine); that it was false in such particular or particulars to the defendant's knowledge, which may be shown either expressly, by his acts or declarations, or impliedly, from the situation he filled in the company, the part he took in its management, and his opportunities of knowing its condition; and that he did so with the fraudulent intent set forth in the indictment, which will in general be inferred from its tendency to produce the effect alleged to have been intended; and prove his knowledge of the falsehood of the statement. This last head of evidence of course includes the proof that J. N. was a shareholder, etc., as stated in the indictment. It is not necessary to prove that any person was actually prejudiced by the fraudulent statement. On the indictment against the manager and secretary of a joint-stock bank, charging them in one set of counts with this offence, and in another set of counts with conspiracy to commit this offence, the prosecution was put to elect upon which set of counts it would proceed. R. v. Burch, 4 F. & F. 407, Montague Smith, J. As to the evidence necessary to prove such conspiracy, Id., and see R. v. Brown, 7 Cox, 442; S. C. sub nom. R. v. Esdaile, 1 F. & F. 213. The provisions of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 85 (ante, p. 624), and of 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 59, s. 166 (ante, p. 625), apply to an indictment for this offence; but a similar protection is not afforded to a defendant who has been examined in the winding up of a company. 8 Edw. 7, c. 69, s. 175 (7) (ante, p. 626). It would seem that if the statements are proved to be false to the knowledge of the accused, an intention to defraud may be presumed; see R. v. Birt, 63 J. P. 328, Ridley, J.

Deceive or defraud.]—" To deceive is to induce a man to believe that a thing is true which is false, and which the person practising the deceit knows or believes to be false. To defraud is to deprive by deceit; it is by deceit to induce a man to act to his injury. More tersely it may be put, that to deceive is by falsehood to induce a state of mind; to defraud is by deceit to induce a course of action" : Re London and Globe Finance Corporation [1903] 1 Ch. 728, 732; 72 L. J. (Ch.) 368, Buckley, J. : cited with approval in R. v. Bennett, 23 Cox, 609; 9 Cr. App. R. 146.

Indictment for fraudulent conversion of Property. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 20 (1) (iv.), ante, p. 621.)

Commencement as ante. p. 627.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count.

Fraudulent conversion of property, contrary to section 20 (1) (iv.) (a) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, fraudulently converted to his own use and benefit certain property, that is to say, 100*l.* intrusted to him by H. S., in order that he, the said A. B., might retain the same in safe custody.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count.

Fraudulent conversion of property, contrary to section 20 (1) (iv.) (b) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, fraudulently converted to his own use and benefit certain property, that is to say, the sum of 200*l.* received by him for and on account of L. M.

Misdemeanor.—Penal servitude for not more than seven or less than three years, or imprisonment with or without hard labour not exceeding two years. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 20 (ante, p. 621; Id. s. 37 (4) (ante, p. 501). As to fines and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 37 (5) (a) (c) (ante, p. 501).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 38 (1) (b) (ante, p. 502).

Evidence.

Upon the first count prove that the defendant was intrusted, either solely or jointly with any other person, with the property, as stated in the indictment, and that it was intrusted to him for safe custody (a), or for the purpose stated —and, lastly, that he converted it to his own use and benefit, or to the use and benefit of some other person.

H. received sums of money from S. and others who entered his employment as security for their honesty whilst in his employment, and promised to repay the said sums to the depositors on their leaving his employment. He did not do so, but used the money for his own purposes. On an indictment against H. under s. 1 (a) of 1 Edw. 7, c. 10 (rep.), alleging that H. had been intrusted by S. with certain property, to wit, ten pounds in money of and belonging to S., in order that (in one set of counts) he, H., might retain the same in safe custody and thereafter pay it back to S., and (in another set of counts) in order that he, H., might thereafter pay ten pounds the proceeds thereof back to S. in three months' time or on S. leaving the service of H., it was held by Bosanquet, Common Serjeant, after consulting Phillimore, J., that there was no evidence against H. of the offence so charged against him. R. v. Hotine, 68 J. P. 143. This case is of doubtful authority, but was followed in R. v. O'Brien, 75 J. P. 392. It is submitted that in cases of this description, where there is evidence from which the jury may infer that the prisoner never intended to repay the money, he might be indicted for larceny by a trick. See R. v. Buckmaster, 20 Q. B. D. 182, ante, p. 518. In a later case the defendant was employed by the prosecutors to collect debts due to them from customers. His duty was to collect the money and pay it over to the prosecutors, after deducting a percentage for his own remuneration. He collected various sums, but did not pay them over or account for them to the prosecutors. It was held that the defendant was rightly convicted of an offence under s. 1 (1) (b) (rep.) (ante, p. 621), Alverstone, C.J., expressing no opinion upon R. v. Hotine, supra, and Darling, J., adding that the question in that case may have to be considered

Let me know how you would like to have it invested, whether in the funds or on mortgage." The answer, dated 9th of April, was:—"Will consult G. at once about the money, and let you know. I do not wish it placed in the funds. I am very glad it is paid over, and hope it will be well secured this time." At or very near the date of these letters it was clear that the defendant had fraudulently appropriated the money to his own use. Held, that this was a fraudulent conversion to his own use of property intrusted to the defendant for safe custody within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 76 (rep.). R. v. Fullagar, 14 Cox, 370 (C. C. R.); 41 L. T. (N. S.) 448. In the course of the argument in that case, Hawkins, J., said:—"If you say that the letters show that the defendant was intrusted with the money to invest on mortgage, then they amount to a direction in writing within s. 75; and if they do not, then the money was intrusted to the defendant for safe custody within s. 76 until the prosecutrix gave further directions how it was to be dealt with." But where a solicitor was intrusted by a client with money to invest on mortgage on the client's behalf, and he, instead of doing so, fraudulently appropriated the money to his own use, it was held that he was not intrusted with such money "for safe custody" within s. 76. R. v. Newman, 8 Q. B. D. 706 (C. C. R.); 51 L. J. (M. C.) 87. The decision in this case turned upon the absence of any evidence that the money was to be treated as intrusted for safe custody until opportunity for investment should arise, and Stephen, J., expressly approved of the direction of Bowen, J., to the jury in the Court below, viz., that "if they were satisfied that the money was intrusted to the prisoner to be invested on mortgage, and to be kept safely in his own hands until such mortgage was effected by him, and if instead of investing the money so intrusted to him he converted it fraudulently to his own use, they should find the prisoner guilty." See also the observations of Denman and Stephen, JJ., upon R. v. Cooper, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 123; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 89; 12 Cox, 600.

again some day. R. v. Lord [1905] 69 J. P. 467 (C. C. R.). See also R. v. Noel [1914] 3 K. B. 848; 84 L. J. (K. B.) 142; 112 L. T. 47; 24 Cox, 486; 10 Cr. App. R. 255.

6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 20, does not affect trustees under an express trust created by deed or will nor mortgagees, in respect to any act done by them in relation to the property comprised in or affected by the trust or mortgagee (see ante, p. 621). As to the liability of such trustees, see s. 21, ante, p. 621. The sanction of the Attorney-General is not a necessary preliminary to the prosecution of an offender against s. 20. R. v. Davies [1913] 1 K. B. 573; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 471; 23 Cox, 351.

No person shall be convicted of an offence against s. 20 by any evidence in respect of any act done by him, if at any time previously to his being charged with the offence he shall have first disclosed such act on oath, in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law, or equity, in any action, suit, or proceeding which shall have been bonâ fide instituted by any party aggrieved, 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43 (2) (ante, p. 506). See R. v. Strahan, 7 Cox, 85; and the cases discussed ante, pp. 561, 564. Nor is a statement or admission made by any person in any compulsory examination or deposition before any court on the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy admissible in evidence against that person in any proceeding in respect of any offence against s. 20 (see 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43 (3), ante, p. 506).

Upon the second count prove that the defendant received the property for and on account of another person, as stated in the indictment, and that he converted to his own use, etc., all or part of the property or some of the proceeds thereof. As to what constitutes receipt for or on account of another, see ante, p. 613. S. having traded as a coal dealer under a trade name, by an agreement with the prosecutor gave him the right to trade under that name. S. was to obtain orders for coal, for which he was to be paid by certain royalties or commissions, paying over to the prosecutor sums received from customers, in full, twice a week. The prosecutor was to supply the coal to the customers. Business was entered into under this agreement, and S. failed to hand over or account for certain sums received from customers. It appeared that the customers knew S. under the trade name he had transferred to the prosecutor, and that they did not know the prosecutor, or that they were doing business with him. On these facts Bosanquet, Common Serjeant, held that there was no evidence to go to the jury that S. had received the moneys "for or on account of" the prosecutor. R. v. South [1907] 71 J. P. 191. And see R. v. Solomons [1909] 2 K. B. 980; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 8; 22 Cox, 178; 25 T. L. R. 747; 2 Cr. App. R. 288: Doggett v. Waterloo Taxicab Co. Ltd. [1910] 2 K. B. 336; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 1085: R. v. Messer, 107 L. T. 31; 23 Cox, 59; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 913.

A person may be "entrusted" with property, or may "receive" it for or on account of another person within the meaning of the section, notwithstanding that the property is not delivered to him directly by the owner, and that the owner does not know of his existence and has no intention of entrusting the property to him. If the accused has obtained or assumed the control of the property of another person under circumstances whereby he becomes entrusted, or whereby his receipt becomes a receipt for or on account of another person, and fraudulently converts it or the proceeds, he commits an offence within the section. R. v. Grubb [1915] 2 K. B. 683; 84 L. J. (K. B.) 1744; 113 L. T. 510; 25 Cox, 77; 79 J. P. 430; 31 T. L. R. 429; 11 Cr. App. R. 153.

On a mere contract of sale and purchase of shares and the payment of money by the purchaser to the vendor, followed by failure on the part of the vendor to deliver the shares, there is not an entrusting of the money to the vendor within the meaning of sub-s. (1) (iv.) (a) But where there is no company, and therefore no shares in existence at the time of the agreement between the parties, and the recipient of the money undertakes to allot shares in the company when formed to the persons who have paid the money, it is open to the jury to find that the money was paid in order to assist the promotion of the company, and this would be an entrusting of the money for the purpose of applying it in a particular way within the meaning of the sub-section. R. v. Laurens, 11 Cr. App. R. 215.

Indictment for fraudulent conversion by a trustee. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 21.)

Commencement as ante, p. 627.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Fraudulent Conversion of Property contrary to section 21 of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, being a trustee of certain property, to wit, five thousand pounds three per centum consolidated bank annuities, for the benefit of J. N. [or for a certain public (or charitable) purpose, that is to say (stating the purpose)] did convert or appropriate the said property to his own use [" convert or appropriate the same or any part thereof to or for his own use of benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than such person as aforesaid, or for any purpose other than such public or charitable purpose as aforesaid, or otherwise dispose of or destroy such property or any part thereof "] with intent to defraud.

Definition of Property.]—See ante, p. 508.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 21 (ante, p. 621); Id. s. 37 (4) (ante, p. 501). As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see s. 37 (5) (a) (c) (ante, p. 501).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. Id. s. 38 (1) (b) (ante, p. 502).

The prosecution must be commenced with the sanction of the attorney-general, and, if civil proceedings have already been taken against the accused, also of the judge before whom the civil proceeding has been heard or is pending. Id. s. 21 (ante, p. 621). It is not necessary to aver the obtaining of such sanction. Vide ante, p. 122.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant was a trustee within 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46 (1) (ante, p. 623), as stated in the indictment, by producing and proving the deed, will, or other instrument in writing whereby the trust (which must be an express and not an implied trust) was created, and also, if the defendant is the heir or personal representative of the original trustee, by proving his heirship, or the will or letters of administration, as the case may be, of the original trustee (see ante, pp. 426, 445). Also to produce to the clerk of the Court the written fiat of the attorney-general authorizing the prosecution. See R. v. Dexter, 19 Cox, 360 (ante, p. 122): R. v. Waller [1910] 1 K. B. 364; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 184: R. v. Turner, Id. 346. A trustee of a savings bank is not a trustee of property "for a public or charitable purpose" within s. 21, supra. He is, however, a trustee for the benefit "of some other persons" within that section. R. v. Fletcher, L. & C. 180; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 206; 9 Cox, 189: cf. R. v. Gibbs, Dears. 445; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 62; 6 Cox, 455. The rules of a savings bank are an "instrument in writing" within s. 46 (1) (ante, p. 623). Id. The defendant applied to his bankers for an advance as against goods consigned to him and then at sea. The advance was made on his signing a letter of hypothecation by which he undertook to hold the goods in trust for the bankers, and to hand over to them the proceeds to the amount of the advance. It was held that this letter contained a declaration of an express trust such as made the giver of it a trustee for the bankers within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 80 (rep.). R. v. Townshend, 15 Cox, 466, Day, J. It was also held that a letter of hypothecation is a bill of sale within the definition of the Bill of Sale Acts as being a declaration of trust without transfer of possession, and is required to comply with the provisions of those Acts as to form and registration; but that in this case, the goods being at sea at the time of the execution of the letter of hypothecation, it came within the exception as to "goods at sea" contained in the Bill of Sale Acts, and so was not affected by these provisions. Id. If the defendant is charged as a trustee in bankruptcy, the proceedings must be produced and proved (see ante, p. 430), in order to show his character as trustee. If as liquidator under the Companies Consolidation Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 69), or any of the Acts thereby repealed, it must be shown that the company was one that had been duly registered by producing the certificate of registration: and if the appointment as liquidator was one by the Court of Chancery, the order of the Court appointing the defendant must be proved; if by the company in general meeting, the appointment by such general meeting must be proved. Then prove that the defendant appropriated the property of which he was such trustee, or some part thereof, to his own use, or disposed of or destroyed it, or some part of it, as the case may be, and that he did so with intent to defraud, which intent must in general be implied from the circumstances of the case (see ante, pp. 352, 360). The definition of "property" is very wide (see ante, p. 508).

A statement or admission by the defendant in any compulsory examination or deposition before any court on the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy is not admissible in evidence against him. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43 (3) (ante, p. 506). See R. v. Pike [1902] 1 K. B. 552; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 287; 20 Cox, 164.

And if he has previously to the charge, first disclosed the act on oath under compulsory process of any court of law or equity, in any action, etc., bonâ fide instituted by any party aggrieved, he cannot be convicted by any evidence whatever, 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43 (2) (ante, p. 506). As to what constitutes first disclosure, see R. v. Oliver, 3 Cr. App. R. 246, and ante, p. 561; and as to what amounts to compulsory process, see R. v. Noel [1914] 3 K. B. 848 (ante, p. 561).

Indictment against a Factor for unlawfully pledging Goods of the Principal. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 22, ante, p. 622.)

Commencement as ante, p. 627.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Unlawful pledging, contrary to section 22 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the 1st day of June, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, being a factor or agent intrusted by J. N. with ten bales of cotton ("intrusted with the possession of goods or of any document of title to goods"), contrary to or without the authority of the said J. N., for his own use or benefit, and in violation of good faith, made a deposit of the said ten bales of cotton with one J. P., as a pledge, lien, or security for the sum of fifty pounds, then borrowed by the said A. B. from the said J. P.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 22 (ante, p. 622); Id. s. 37 (4) (ante, p. 50). As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see Id. s. 37 (5) (a) (c) (ante, p. 501).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. Id. s. 38 (1) (b) (ante, p. 502).

Evidence.

Prove that the goods, etc., described in the indictment were intrusted by J. N. to the defendant as his agent: that the defendant deposited the goods with J. P. as a security for an advance of money, etc.; and, lastly, circumstances must be shown from which the jury may infer that the defendant pledged the goods in violation of good faith, and contrary to and without the authority of the prosecutor. A factor who has a lien upon goods may pledge them to the extent of his lien. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 22 (1), proviso (ante, p. 622). A statement or admission by the defendant in any compulsory examination or deposition before any court on the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy is not admissible in evidence against him. Id. s. 43 (3) (ante, p. 506). And if he have, previously to the charge, first disclosed the act on oath under compulsory process of any court of law or equity, in any action, etc., bonâ fide instituted by any party aggrieved, he cannot be convicted by any evidence whatever. Id. s. 43 (2). (See ante, p. 506).

As to what is an intrusting within the statute, see s. 22 (2) (a) (ante, p. 622), and as to what are to be considered as documents of title to goods, see s. 46 (1) (ante, p. 508). A person intrusted with goods, or the documents of title thereto, as agent, was held, after his authority as agent had been revoked, not to be "an agent intrusted" within the meaning of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, s. 1 (rep.), so as to protect a pledge by him to an innocent pledgee. Fuentes v. Montes, L. R. 4 C. P. 93; 38 L. J. (C. P.) 95 (Ex. Ch.). The Factors Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 45), s. 2, sub-s. 2, and the Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 71), s. 25, appear to protect the innocent pledgee in such a state of circumstances, but the question perhaps still remains whether a person whose authority has been so revoked is "a factor or agent intrusted" within the meaning of 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 22. (See ante, p. 622).

Agent.]—The words "or other agent" occurring after the words "bankers, merchant, broker, attorney" in the repealed s. 75 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 were held to apply only to persons whose occupation is ejusdem generis with that of a "banker, etc." R. v. Portugal, 16 Q. B. D. 487; followed in R. v. Kane [1901] 1 K. B. 472; 19 Cox, 658; and semble the meaning of "agent" in s. 78 is similarly limited to an "agent" ejusdem generis with "factor," though the word "other" does not occur in s. 78. See R. v. Portugal, supra.

ROBBERY, ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO ROB, ETC.

Statute.

6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50 (Larceny Act, 1916), s. 23.—Robbery.]—(1) Every person who—(a) being armed with any offensive weapon or instrument, or being together with one other person or more, robs, or assaults with intent to rob, any person; (b) robs any person and, at the time of or immediately before or immediately after such robbery, uses any personal violence to any person; shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof liable to penal servitude for life, and, in addition, if a male, to be once privately whipped. [This sub-section re-enacts 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 43; and reproduces the provisions of 26 & 27 Vict. c. 44, s. 1, as amended by 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 36, relating to whipping.] (2) Every person who robs any person shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years. [This sub-section re-enacts so much of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 40, as related to robbery. The portion relating to larceny from the person is re-enacted by 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 14, ante, p. 597.] (3) Every person who assaults any person with intent to rob shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding five years. [This sub-section re-enacts 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 42.]

Sect. 44.—Verdict.]—(1) If on the trial of any indictment for robbery it is proved that the defendant committed an assault with intent to rob, the jury may acquit the defendant of robbery and find him guilty of an assault with intent to rob, and thereupon he shall be liable to be punished accordingly. [This sub-section re-enacts 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 41.]

Indictment for robbery.

Commencement as ante, p. 627.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Robbery, contrary to section 23 (2) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, robbed C. D. of a watch.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour: 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 23 (2); 37 (4) (ante, pp. 501, 637). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

Evidence.

Robbery consists in the felonious and forcible taking from the person of another, or in his presence against his will, of any money or goods to any value, by violence, or putting him in fear. 4 Bl. Com. 243; 1 Hawk. c 34; 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1137. See R. v. Reane, 2 Leach, 616; 2 East, P. C. 734: R. v. Edwards, 1 Cox, 32. And in order to maintain this indictment, you must prove a larceny, and prove it to have been committed under the circumstances which, together with it, constitute the offence of robbery, and which we shall now consider under the following heads:—

In bodily fear, etc.]—The prosecutor must either prove that he was actually in bodily fear, from the defendant's actions, at the time of the robbery, or he must prove circumstances from which the Court and jury may presume such a degree of apprehension of danger as would induce the prosecutor to part with his property; Fost. 128; and in this latter case, if the circumstances thus proved be such as are calculated to create such a fear, the Court will not pursue the inquiry further, and examine whether the fear actually existed. Therefore, if a man knocks another down, and steals from him his property whilst he is insensible on the ground, this is robbery. Fost. 128. A stage-coach having frequently been robbed on a particular road, J. N. went in it for the purpose of apprehending the robber; the robber met the coach, presented a pistol and demanded money of the passengers; J. N. delivered his money but immediately afterwards jumped out of the coach, and with the assistance of others, secured the robber; and this was held to be robbery. Norden's case, Fost. 129. Where the defendant tore a lady's ear through, in snatching an earring from it, the judges held it to be robbery. R. v. Lapier, 1 Leach, 320: 2 East, P. C. 557, 708. So, where the prisoner tore some hair from a lady's head in snatching a diamond pin from it, the pin having a corkscrew stalk, and being twisted very much in her hair, this was held to be robbery. R. v. Moore, 1 Leach, 335. Where the defendant laid hold of the seals and chain of the prosecutor's watch, and pulled the watch out of his fob, but the watch, being secured by a steel chain which went round the prosecutor's neck, the defendant could not take it until, by pulling and two or three jerks, he broke the chain, and then ran off with the watch, this was held to be robbery. R. v Mason, R. & R. 419. So, if there be a struggle for the property, and it be wrested from the prosecutor by superior force, it will be robbery. R. v. Davies, 2 East, P. C. 709. But merely snatching property from a person unawares and running away with it, will not be robbery. R. v. Steward, 2 East, P. C. 702; R. v. Horner, Id. 703: R. v. Baker, 1 Leach, 290: R. v. Robins, Id., n.: R. v. Macauley, Id. 287: R. v. Walls, 2 C. & K. 214, because fear cannot in fact be presumed in such a case. Where the prisoner caught hold of the prosecutor's watch chain, and jerked his watch from his pocket with considerable force, upon which a scuffle ensued, and the prisoner was secured, Garrow, B., held that the force used to obtain the watch did not make the offence amount to robbery, nor did the force used afterwards in the scuffle; for the force necessary to constitute robbery must be either immediately before or at the time of the larceny, and not after it. R. v. Gnosil, 1 C. & P. 304. The rule, therefore, appears to be well established, that no sudden taking or snatching of property unawares from a person is sufficient to constitute robbery unless some injury is done to the person, or there has been a previous struggle for the possession of the property, or some force used to obtain it.

If a man takes another's child, and threatens to destroy him unless the other give him money, this is robbery. Per Eyre, C.J., in R. v. Reane, 2 East, P. C. 735, 736; and see R. v. Donnally, Id. 715, 718; 1 Leach, 193. So, where the defendant, at the head of a mob, came to the prosecutor's house and demanded money, threatening to destroy the house unless the money were given, and the prosecutor thereupon gave him 5*s.*, but he insisted on more, and the prosecutor, being terrified, gave him 5*s.* more; the defendant and the mob then took bread, cheese, and cider from the prosecutor's house, without his permission, and departed; this was held to be a robbery. R. v. Simons, 2 East, P. C. 731: R. v. Brown, Id. So, where, during some riots at Birmingham, the defendant threatened the prosecutor that unless he would give him a certain sum of money he should return with the mob and destroy his house, and the prosecutor, under the impression of this threat, gave him the money, this was held by the judges to be robbery. R. v. Astley, 2 East, P. C. 729. So, where, in the riots of 1780, a mob, headed by the defendant, came to the prosecutor's house and demanded half-a-crown, which the prosecutor, from terror of the mob, gave, this was held to be robbery, although no threats were uttered. R. v. Taplin, 2 East, P. C. 712.

Upon an indictment for robbery, it appeared that a mob came to the house of the prosecutor, and with the mob the prisoners, who advised the prosecutor to give them something to get rid of them and prevent mischief, by which means they obtained money from the prosecutor; and Parke, J. (after consulting Vaughan, B., and Alderson, B.), admitted evidence of the acts of the mob at other places before and after on the same day, to show that the advice of the prisoners was not bonâ fide, but in reality a mere mode of robbing the prosecutor. R. v. Winkworth, 4 C. & P. 444.

Obtaining money under a threat of charging the prosecutor with an unnatural crime had in many cases been held to be robbery at common law. R. v. Jones, 1 Leach, 139; 2 East, P. C. 714: R. v. Donnally, 1 Leach, 193; 2 East, P. C. 715: R. v. Cannon, R. & R. 146; R. v. Gardner, 1 C. & P. 479; even where it appeared that the prosecutor parted with his money from a fear merely of losing his character or situation by such an imputation; R. v. Hickman, 1 Leach, 278; 2 East, P. C. 728: R. v. Egerton, R. & R. 375: R. v. Elmstead, 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1149. It was held that the property must be at once parted with in consequence of fear due to the threat. R. v. Fuller, R. & R. 308: R. v. Jackson, 1 Leach, 193 n.; 2 Id. 618 n. This form of robbery is now punishable under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 29 (1) (iii.) (post, p. 681). But it would seem that where by such accusation or threat any property is actually obtained, the offender may still be indicted for robbery. See R. v. Stringer, 2 Mood. 261; 1 C. & K. 188; doubting R. v. Henry, 2 Mood. 118. Where the property is parted with by threats to accuse, other than those specified in the statute, the indictment may also be for robbery, if the party was put in fear, and parted with his property in consequence. R. v. Norton, 8 C. & P. 671.

Where the prosecutrix was threatened by some persons at a mock auction to be sent to Bow-street, and from thence to Newgate, unless she paid for some article they pretended was knocked down to her, although she never bid for it; and they accordingly called in a pretended constable, who told her that unless she gave him a shilling she must go with him: and she gave him a shilling accordingly, not from any apprehension of personal danger, but from a fear of being taken to prison; the judges held that the circumstances of the case were not sufficient to constitute the offence of robbery; it was nothing more than a simple duress. R. v. Knewland, 2 Leach, 721: R. v. Wood, 2 East, P. C. 732. It would seem, however, that a similar state of facts would sustain an indictment under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 30 (post, p. 682): R. v. Robertson, L. & C. 483; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 35, and that it would also sustain an indictment for simple larceny. R. v. MacGrath, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 205; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 7: R. v. Lovell, 8 Q. B. D. 185; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 91; ante, p. 526. Where the defendant, with intent to take money from a prisoner who was under his charge for an assault, handcuffed her to another prisoner, kicked and beat her while thus handcuffed, put her into a hackney-coach for the purpose of carrying her to prison, and then took four shillings from her pocket for the purpose of paying the coach hire; the jury, finding that the defendant had previously the intent of getting from the prosecutrix whatever money she had, and that he used all this violence for the purpose of carrying his intent into execution, the judges held that this was robbery. R. v. Gascoigne, 2 East, P. C. 709. Even in a case where it appeared that the defendant attempted to commit a rape upon the prosecutrix, and she, without any demand from him, gave him some money to desist, which he put into his pocket, and then continued hi attempt until he was interrupted; this was held by the judges to be robbery. R. v. Blackham, 2 East, P. C. 711.

And it is of no importance under what pretence the robber obtains the money, etc., if the prosecutor is forced to deliver it from actual fear, or under circumstances from which the Court can presume it. As, for instance, if a man with a sword drawn ask alms of me, and I give it him, through mistrust and apprehension of violence, it is as much a robbery as if he had demanded money in the ordinary way. 4 Bl. Com. 242. So, if thieves come to rob A., and finding little upon him, force him by menaces to swear to bring them a greater sum, which he does accordingly, this is robbery, if, at the time he delivered the money, the fear of the menace continued to operate upon him. Fitz. Cor. Pl. 464; 1 Hale, 532. Where the defendant, at the head of a riotous mob, stopped a cart laden with cheeses, insisting upon seizing them for want of a permit; after some altercation he went with the driver, under pretence of going before a magistrate, and during their absence the mob pillaged the cart; this was held to be a robbery. Merriman v. Chippenham Hundred, 2 East, P. C. 709. So, where the defendant took goods from the prosecutrix of the value of eight shillings, and by force and threats compelled her to take one shilling, under pretence of payment for them; this was held to be robbery. R. v. Simons, 2 East, P. C. 712; and see R. v. Spencer, Id.

The fear must precede the taking. For, if a man privately steals money from the person of another, and afterwards keeps it by putting him in fear, this is no robbery, for the fear is subsequent to the taking. R. v. Harman, 1 Hale, 534; 1 Hawk. c. 34, s. 7; see R. v. Gnosil, 1 C. & P. 304 (ante, p. 639).

From the person, etc.]—The goods must be proved to have been taken either from the person of the prosecutor or in his presence. See R. v. Francis, 2 Str. 1015; 2 East, P. C. 708: R. v. Grey, 2 East, P. C. 708: R. v. Hamilton, 8 C. & P. 49. If a thief puts a man in fear, and then in his presence drives away his cattle, it is robbery. 1 Hale, 533. So, if a man, assaulted by a robber, throws his purse into a bush, or flying from a robber, lets fall his hat, and the robber, in his presence, takes up the purse or hat and carries it away; this would be robbery. Id. Upon an indictment for robbery, it appeared that the prosecutor was in company with another, who had the prosecutor's bundle, and who, upon the prosecutor being attacked with great violence by the prisoners, dropped the bundle, and ran to the prosecutor's assistance, when one of the prisoners took up the bundle, and ran off with it: Vaughan, B., is reported to have held that this was not robbery, because the bundle was not in the prosecutor's possession at the time. R. v. Fallows, 5 C. & P. 508; sed quære. See R. v. Thompson, L. & C. 225; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 53; 9 Cox, 244 (ante, p. 533).

Against the will.]—It must appear in evidence that the goods were taken against the will of the party robbed; that is, that they were either taken from him by force and violence, or delivered up by him to the defendant, under the impression of that degree of fear and apprehension which is necessary to constitute robbery. Therefore, where the party robbed concerted and connived at the robbery, and got one of his confederates to procure two strangers to commit it, for the purpose of getting a reward upon the apprehension and conviction of the strangers, the judges held that it was not a robbery, because the property was not taken against the party's will. R. v. MacDaniel, 19 St. Tr. 745; Fost. 121, 228.

Take and carry away.]—An actual taking either by force or upon delivery must be proved: that is, it must appear that the robber actually got possession of the goods. Therefore, if a robber cuts a man's girdle in order to get his purse, and the purse thereby falls to the ground, and the robber runs off or is apprehended before he can take it up: this would not be robbery, because the purse was never in the possession of the robber. 1 Hale, 533. But it is immaterial whether the taking were by force or upon delivery; and if by delivery, it is also immaterial whether the robber have compelled the prosecutor to it by a direct demand in the ordinary way, or upon any colourable pretence. See ante, p. 638.

A carrying away must also be proved, as in other cases of larceny. (See ante, p. 533.) And therefore, where the defendant, upon meeting a man carrying a bed, told him to lay it down, or he would shoot him, and the man accordingly laid down the bed, but the robber, before he could take it up so as to remove it from the place where it lay, was apprehended; the judges held that the robbery was not complete. R. v. Farrell, 1 Leach, 322 n. (b). But where the defendant snatched at a lady's earring, and succeeded in separating it from the ear, and it was afterwards found among the curls of her hair; the Court held this a sufficient proof of asportation to support the indictment. R. v. Lapier, 1 Leach, 320; 2 East, P. C. 557, 708. Where the prisoner put his hand into the prosecutor's pocket, seized his purse and drew it to the edge of the pocket, but failed to draw it completely out of the pocket owing to its being caught in the prosecutor's belt, this was held to be sufficient evidence of asportation to support a charge of simple larceny, but not of larceny from the person. R. v. Taylor [1911] 1 K. B. 674; 80 L. J. (K. B.) 311; 75 J. P. 1; 27 T. L. R. 108.

It may be necessary to add here, that if the property is once taken, the offence will not be purged by the robber's delivering it back to the owner. 1 Hale, 53; 1 Hawk. c. 34, s. 2: R. v. Peat, 1 Leach, 228; 2 East, P. C. 557.

On this indictment the accused can be convicted of and punished for an assault with intent to rob. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 44 (1) (ante, p. 638).

Indictment for Robbery with Violence. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 23 (1) (b) ante, p. 637.)

Commencement as ante, p. 627.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Robbery with violence, contrary to section 23 (1) (b) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, robbed C. D. of a watch, and at the time of or immediately before or immediately after such robbery did use personal violence to the said C. D.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for any term not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. The Court may also order the convict to be whipped. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 23 (1), 37 (4) (ante, pp. 637, 501). As to recognizances, and sureties for keeping the peace, see Id. s. 37 (5) (b), ante, p. 501.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

The evidence to support this indictment will be the same as in ordinary cases of robebry, see ante, pp. 638 et seq. But in addition you must prove that the defendant either immediately before, at the time of, or immediately after the robbery, according to the allegation, wounded, beat, etc., the prosecutor, as the case may be. As to the nature of the evidence necessary to sustain the allegation of a wounding, see post, tit. Assaults, etc. What period of time can be comprised within the words "immediately before" or "immediately after," will be a question for the Court.

If the prosecutor should fail to prove the wounding, etc., the prisoner may be convicted of the robbery, and have sentence for the minor offence accordingly. And if he should fail to prove a robbery, but should prove an assault with intent to rob, the defendant may, on this indictment, be convicted and sentenced for such assault. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 44 (1), ante, p. 638. And wherever a robbery with aggravated circumstances, i.e., by a person armed, or by several persons together, is charged in the indictment, the jury may convict of an assault with intent to rob attended with the like aggravation, and the defendant may, upon such conviction be sentenced to penal servitude for life, etc., under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 23 (1) (a): the assault following the nature of the robbery. R. v. Mitchell, 2 Den. 468; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 135: R. v. Greenwood, 2 C. & K. 359: R. v. Barnett, 2 C. & K. 594; 3 Cox, 432.

Indictment for Robbery by a Person armed. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 23 (1) (a), ante, p. 637.)

Commencement as ante, p. 627.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Robbery with aggravation, contrary to section 23 (1) (a) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, being armed with a life preserver, robbed C. D. of 10*l*.

Felony: for punishment, see notes to last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p 106).

Evidence.

The evidence to support this indictment will be the same as in ordinary cases of robbery (see ante, p. 638 et seq.), with the additional proof that the prisoner at the time of the robbery was armed with an offensive weapon or instrument. As to what will amount to an offensive weapon or instrument, see the cases referred to under the heads Smuggling and Poaching, post. If the offence were committed by several persons, and one of them were armed, the others being present aiding and abetting, it would seem that that would be sufficient to convict them all of the whole charge in the indictment. See R. v. Smith, R. & R. 368. The defendant may be convicted of the robbery only, or of an assault with intent to rob (ante, p. 638).

An indictment for robbery by two or more persons in company will be the same as an indictment for robbing alone (see infra), except that it should charge that the defendants together robbed the prosecutor; if one of them only be apprehended, it will charge him by name, "and a certain other person [or certain other persons] unknown," etc. See R. v. Raffety, 2 Lew. 271: R. v. Ramsden, 1 Cox, 37.

Indictment for an Assault with Intent to Rob. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 23 (3), ante, p. 637.)

Commencement as ante, p. 627.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Assault, with intent to rob, contrary to section 23 (3) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

J. S., on the first day of June, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, assaulted J. N. with intent to rob him.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 23 (3), 37 (4), ante, pp. 637, 501. As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, Id. s. 37 (5) (b), ante, p. 501. On an indictment for this offence the prisoner cannot be convicted of a common assault. R. v.

The defendant may be convicted of this offence on an indictment for robbery. Id. s. 44 (1), ante, p. 638.

Indictments for assault with intent to rob, the prisoner being armed, or for assault with intent to rob, together with one or more person or persons, may easily be framed by comparing this with the precedents for robbery under the same circumstances. (See ante, p. 643). The punishment is the same as for such robbery. (See ante, p. 643.)

Evidence.

To support this indictment, you must prove the assault, and that it was coupled with an intent to rob. See R. v. Barnett, 2 C. & K. 594; 3 Cox, 432.

In proof of the former, it is not necessary to show that the defendant committed actual violence upon J. N.; for an assault is an attempt to commit a forcible crime upon another; and therefore, if the defendant, intending to rob J. N., did anything in his presence, with reference to him, in furtherance of that intent, it will be sufficient. The evidence upon this indictment usually proves a robbery with the exception of the taking and carrying away. In R. v. Thomas, 1 Leach, 330; 1 East, P. C. 417, it was held, that an indictment which alleged the assault to have been made upon J. N., was not supported by proof that the assault was made upon the driver of the post-chaise in which J. N. was; but this indictment was framed on 7 G. 3, c. 21 (rep.), which made it felony for any person with an offensive weapon to assault any other person, with intent to rob such person; and the more general words of the present statute would probably be satisfied by an indictment charging an assault upon A. with an intent to rob B.

The intent to rob must, of course, be proved from circumstances. It is a question entirely for the jury to determine, and which they will, in general, have to presume from the circumstances attending the assault, the time and place in which it was committed, the expressions or gestures of the defendant at the time, and the like. No actual demand of money, etc., is necessary to support this indictment. R. v. Trusty, 1 East, P. C. 418 : R. v. Sharwin, Id. 421. Assaulting and threatening to charge with an infamous crime, with intent thereby to extort money, was held to be an assault with intent to rob. R. v. Stringer, 2 Mood. 261; 1 C. & K. 188.

Where the defendant decoyed the prosecutor into a house, and chained him down to a seat, and there compelled him to write orders for the payment of money and for the delivery of deeds, and the paper on which he wrote remained in his hands half an hour, but he was chained all the time, this was held not to be an assault with intent to rob. R. v. Edwards, 6 C. & P. 515, 521; see R. v. Phipoe, 2 Leach, 673; 2 East, P. C. 599. Such cases as this, however, are now provided for by 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 29 (2), post, p. 681.

PIRACY JURE GENTIUM.

Indictment.

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Piracy.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

J. S., K. S., and L. T., on the first day of August, A.D. ——, upon the high seas, assaulted and put in fear of their lives certain mariners, unknown, in a ship called the Windsor Castle, and stole the apparel and tackle of the said ship and seventy chests of opium on board the said ship.

As to venue and place of trial, see ante, pp. 29 et seq.

Piracy jure gentium is robbery within the Admiralty jurisdiction; Att.-Gen. for Hong-Kong, v. Kwok a Sing, L. R. 5 P. C. 179, 200; 42 L. J. (P. C.) 64; 12 Cox, 565: R. v. Dawson, 13 St. Tr. 451, Holt, C.J.; and see Republic of Bolivia v. Indemnity Mutual Marine Assurance Co., Ltd. [1909] 1 K. B. 785, where the meaning of "piracy" in international, criminal, and commercial law is fully considered. Unlike piracy under municipal law, it is justiciable by the courts of every nation. In England it was justiciable only by the admiral (2 Hale, 370), until by 28 H. 8, c. 15, it was made triable according to the course of the common law, and punishable with death, and with loss of lands and goods, in the same manner as upon an attainder for robbery on land. The Offences at Sea Act, 1799 (39 G. 3, c. 37), ss. 1, 2, made all offences committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty punishable in the same manner as if they had been committed on land. See R. v. Curling, R. & R. 123. The Offences at Sea Act, 1820 (1 G. 4, c. 90), s. 1, extended to such offences the benefit of clergy, as if committed on land; and subjected the offences so made clergyable to the same punishment as if committed on land. And the Criminal Law Act, 1827 (7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28), s. 12, enacts that "all offences prosecuted in the High Court of Admiralty of England should, upon every first and subsequent conviction, be subject to the same punishment, whether of death or otherwise, as if such offences had been committed upon the land." See now 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 88, s. 3 (post, p. 652). The law as to piracy jure gentium and the mode of trying that offence is not altered by the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 73); see s. 6. But where such offence is also an offence defined by that Act it may be tried under that Act.

The procedure as to arraignment, pleading, etc., on the trial of piracy is the same as in the case of felony. See 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, ss. 1, 2, 3 (ante, pp. 165, 191). 12 G. 3, c. 20, as to the consequences of standing mute on arraignment, is virtually repealed as to England.

Evidence.

Prove a robbery, and prove it to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty. Attend also to the following particulars of evidence :—

Upon the high seas.]—The offence must be proved to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty, that is, upon some part of the sea which is not infra corpus comitatûs. 15 R. 2, c. 3 (repealed 1879, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 59, to " in any wise "). According to Coke, all rivers in this country, until they flow past the furthest point of land next the sea, are within the jurisdiction of the courts of common law, and not of the Court of Admiralty (see 3 Co. Inst. 113; Velthusen v. Ormsby, 3 T. R. 315); and the Admiralty jurisdiction does not extend to any haven, creek, arm of the sea, or other place within the body of a county : 3 Co. Inst. 113; 1 Hawk. c. 37, s. 16; thus, where the sea flows in between two points of land in this country, a straight imaginary line being drawn from one point to the other, the courts of common law have jurisdiction of all offences committed within, the Court of Admiralty of all offences without it. According to Hale, whose opinion seems to be better, the Admiralty had concurrent jurisdiction in such waters as to murder and maiming, and exclusive jurisdiction as to piracy. R. v. Bonnet, 15 St. Tr. 1231; and see ante, p. 31. And if a robbery be committed in creeks, harbours, ports, etc., in foreign countries, the Court of Admiralty indisputably has jurisdiction of it, and such offence is consequently piracy. R. v. Jemot, Old Bailey, 28th Feb., 1812, MS. For the Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction over British ships in foreign rivers, below the bridges, where the tide ebbs and flows, and where great ships go, although the municipal authorities of the foreign country may be entitled to exercise concurrent jurisdiction. R. v. Anderson, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 161; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 12, ante, p. 32 : R. v. Carr, 10 Q. B. D. 76; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 12, ante, p. 33; and see Russell, Cr. (7th ed.) 32 n. Indeed, on an indictment for larceny out of a vessel lying in a river at Wampu, in China, the prosecutor gave no evidence as to the tide flowing or otherwise where the vessel lay; but the judges held that the Admiralty had jurisdiction, it being a place where great ships go. R. v. Allen, 1 Mood. 494. The Admiralty have exclusive jurisdiction over offences committed beyond the low-water mark; and between that and the high-water mark the Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction over offences done upon the water when the tide is in : and the courts of common law over offences committed upon the strand when the tide is out. But see Embleton v. Brown, 3 E. & E. 234 : 30 L. J. (M. C.) 1. and ante, p. 31 et seq. All the other parts of the high seas are indisputably within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty. See ante, pp. 31 et seq.

In a ship, etc.]—This must be proved as laid. If the name of the ship is unknown, it should be so stated in the indictment. (See ante, pp. 49, 51).

In the King's peace.]—If the persons robbed are subjects of a state at war with this country, although it may perhaps be piracy, yet it is not cognizable as such in any court of Admiralty within this realm. 4 Co. Inst. 154; Y. B. 2 Ric. 3, f. 2. See R. v. Sawyer, R. & R. 294.

In fear, etc.]—This must be proved in the same manner as in robbery. Sir L. Jenk. xciv.

Piratically.]—The goods must be proved to have been taken animo furandi, as in other cases of larceny. Molloy, 71, s. 73. (See ante, pp. 511 et seq.) And they must be proved to have been either taken with force and violence, or delivered to the pirates under the impression of that degree of fear and apprehension which is necessary to constitute robbery upon land. (See ante, pp. 638 et seq.)

The taking, to be piracy, must be without authority from any prince or state. If a party making a capture at sea does so by the authority of any prince or state, it cannot be considered piracy; for a nation never can be deemed pirates; fixed domain, public revenue, and a certain form of government exempt a people from that character. Even a capture by authority of the states of Algiers, Tunis, or Tripoli, was not treated as piracy. 2 Sir L. Jenk. 790; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 256.

At common law, if a subject of this realm committed acts of hostility against another subject, under the authority of a commission from a foreign prince, it was not piracy; 2 Sir L. Jenk. 754; but the law has been altered in this respect by 11 W. 3, c. 7, and 18 G. 2, c. 30, s. 1 (post, p. 651). See R. v. Evans, 2 East, P. C. 798. As to trials for piracy of persons acting under the commission of Jas. 2, after his deposition, see R. v. Golding, 12 St. Tr. 1269.

If the subjects of the same state commit robbery upon each other, upon the high seas, it is piracy. If the subjects of different states commit robbery upon each other, upon the high seas, if their respective states are in amity, it is piracy; if at enmity, it is not; for it is a general rule, that enemies can never commit piracy on each other, their depredations being deemed mere acts of hostility. 1 Sir L. Jenk. xciv.; 4 Co. Inst. 154.

But if a commissioned ship, by mistake, capture a vessel belonging to the subjects of a friendly power, imagining it to belong to an enemy, and bring it into port for condemnation, that is not piracy. See 1 Sir L. Jenk. xciv.

Indictment for Piracy with Violence. (7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 88, s. 2.)

Commencement as ante, p. 627.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Piracy with violence, contrary to section 2 of the Piracy Act, 1837.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

J. S., K. S., and L. T., on the 1st day of August, A.D. ——, on the high seas assaulted and put in fear of their lives certain mariners unknown in a ship called the Good Hope, and stole 100*l.* on board the said ship, and at the time of or immediately before or immediately after such piracy stabbed, cut, or wounded one J. N. on board the said ship.

The evidence will be the same as stated ante, p. 647, with the addition of the proof necessary to sustain the above allegation. An indictment against sailors for "confining their master" under 11 W. 3, c. 7, s. 8, will be supported by evidence that, although no force was used, the master was restrained by the presence and gestures of the prisoners, and deprived of his lawful command, and compelled to remain in certain parts of the vessel. R. v. Jones, 11 Cox, 393, Bovill, C.J., and cf. R. v. McGregor, 1 C. & K. 429.

Sect. 13.—Definition of "night."]—The time at which the night shall commence and conclude in any offence against the provisions of this Act shall be the same as in cases of burglary (ante, p. 655).

Indictment for Burglary, and Larceny to the value of 5l. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 13, 25.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Burglary and larceny, contrary to sections 13 and 25 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., in the night of the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, did break and enter the dwelling-house of C. D. with intent to steal therein, and did steal therein one watch, the property of S. T., the said watch being of the value of ten pounds.

It is usual and proper to add a count for receiving where the felony intended and committed was larceny (see post, p. 726).

This form of count charges two offences. R. v. Hungerford, 2 East, P. C. 518 : R. v. Withal, 1 Leach, 88 ; but has always been held good, notwithstanding the rules against duplicity (vide ante, p. 53).

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—6 & 7 Geo. 5 c. 50, ss. 25, 37 (4) (ante, pp. 654, 501). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501). As to the punishment for the larceny, see s. 13 (ante, p. 653).

This offence is triable at quarter sessions, but the justices may commit for trial at assizes if to do so appears to be in the interests of justice. Id. s. 38 (ante p. 655).

Evidence.

Burglary, at common law, is the breaking and entering of the dwelling-house of another in the night-time, with intent to commit a felony therein : 1 Hale 549, 556; 1 Hawk. c. 38, ss. 1, 2; 4 Bl. Com. 224; 3 Co. Inst. 63; 2 Stephen Hist, Cr. L. 56; 3 Id. 150 : R. v. Polly, 1 C. & K. 77. A man cannot be indicted for committing burglary in his own house. Kel. (J.) 84; 2 East, P. C. 502, 506. At common law it would seem that a church may be the subject of burglary: 3 Co. Inst. 64; 1 Hale, 559: R. v. Baker, 3 Cox, 581; but church breaking is now dealt with under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 24 (ante, p. 654). By 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 25 (1) (ante, p. 654), the common law definition of burglary is incorporated into the Larceny Act, 1916, while by s. 25 (2) (ante, p. 654), the breaking out of the dwelling-house of another in the night-time, having entered it with intent to commit felony, or having committed a felony while in it, is also declared to be a burglary, thus re-enacting 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 51 (rep.). In order to maintain the above indictment, the prosecutor must prove that the defendant broke and entered the dwelling-house of C. D., in the night-time, with an intent to steal: and whether he succeed or fail in this, he may proceed to prove a larceny of the goods of S. T. in the dwelling-house of C. D. to the value of 5*l.*, in the manner directed post, p. 673, and if he succeeds in proving the larceny, but fails in proving it to have been committed in the dwelling-house of C. D., or the goods to have been of the requisite value, the defendant may be convicted of the simple larceny.

Having made these few general observations, we shall now proceed to state the evidence in burglary more particularly.

In the night.]—By the old authorities with reference to the meaning of night-time in cases of burglary, the day was divided into three parts: daylight, twilight, and night. If the breaking and entering were in the night, it was burglary, if in daylight it was not. If it were committed during twilight, then, if there were not daylight, or crepusculum, enough. begun, or left, to discern a man's face withal, it was a burglary; otherwise not. 3 Co. Inst. 63; 1 Hale, 550; 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 2; 4 Bl. Com. 224. But this did not extend to moonlight; for then many midnight burglaries would go unpunished. 4 Bl. Com. 224; 1 Hale, 551. These authorities are superseded by the definition of night in 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46 (1) (ante, p. 655). The time appears now to be ascertained by reference to Greenwich mean time. (See ante, p. 655).

The breaking and entering must both be committed in the night-time: if the breaking is in the day, and the entering in the night, or the breaking in the night, and entering in the day, it is no burglary. 1 Hale, 551. But the breaking may be on one night, and the entry on another, Id., provided the breaking be with intent to enter, and the entry with intent to commit a felony. Id.: R. v. Smith, R. & R. 417: R. v. Jordan, 7 C. & P. 432.

The dwelling-house of C. D.]—To prove this allegation, the prosecutor must prove that the defendant broke and entered the dwelling-house of C. D., in which he was in the habit of residing; 4 Co. Inst. 64; or some building between which and the dwelling-house there was a communication, either immediate, or by means of a covered and enclosed passage leading from the one to the other. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46 (2) (ante, p. 655). And evidence of a breaking and entering of such a dwelling will sustain an indictment charging a breaking and entry of the dwelling-house. R. v. Garland, 1 Leach, 144: 2 East, P. C. 493, 512.

Every permanent building in which the tenant or owner and his family dwell and lie, is deemed a dwelling-house, and burglary may be committed in it.

Even a set of chambers in an inn of court or college is deemed a distinct dwelling-house for this purpose. 1 Hale, 556; 3 Co. Inst. 65; 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 18 : see Monks v. Dykes, 2 M. & W. 567 : Fenn v. Grafton, 2 Bing. (N. C.) 617; 3 Scott, 56. And it will be sufficient if any part of the family reside in the house. Thus, where a servant boy of the prosecutor always slept over his brewhouse, which was separated from his dwelling-house by a public passage, but occupied therewith, it was held, upon an indictment for burglary, that the brewhouse was a distinct dwelling-house of the prosecutor, although, being separated by the passage it could not be deemed to be part of the house in which he himself actually dwelt. R. v. Westwood, R. & R. 495. So, where upon an indictment for burglary in a shop, it appeared that the prosecutor had left his house without an intention of returning, and had let some of the rooms to lodgers, but continued his business there, and his apprentice and foreman and the foreman's wife, who was also his servant, employed in keeping the apartments clean, dwelt there, but received weekly wages, it was held to be the dwelling-house of the prosecutor. R. v. Gibbons, R. & R. 442. And where a counting-house, over which there were two rooms communicating by a trapdoor, which was never used, was broken open, and it appeared that the prosecutor's cooper and his family lived in the two rooms, under a contract that they should have the rooms to live in, and firing, and weekly wages, it was held that the counting-house was the dwelling-house of the prosecutor. R. v. Stock, R. & R. 185; 11 R. R. 605. The mere temporary absence of the owner and his family will not deprive the house of this protection the law gives it; as, for instance, if a man has a town and a country house, in which he resides alternately, and whilst he and his family are residing for the season in the country house, the town house is broken and entered; 1 Hale, 556; or if a man locks up his house and goes a journey, and, during his absence, it is broken and entered : R. v. Murray, 2 East, P. C. 496; or if a barrister has a set of chambers, in which he resides during the term only, and during the vacation they may be broken and entered : 1 Hale, 556; in these and the like cases the houses and set of chambers respectively, even although no person actually resided in them at the time, are deemed dwelling-houses, and the breaking and entering of them, burglary; provided it appear that the owners, when they left them, had an intention to return to them. 1 Hale, 556; Fost. 77 : R. v. Nutbrown, Fost. 76. But burglary cannot be committed in a tent or booth in a market or fair, even although the owner lodges in it; 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 35; 1 Hale, 557; because it is a temporary, not a permanent edifice. But if it is a permanent building, though used only for the purposes of a fair, it is a dwelling-house. R. v. Smith, 1 M. & Rob. 256. Breaking open a house in which no man resides, or is in the habit of residing, is no burglary, even though the owner use it for his meals and the purposes of his businesses; for it is not a dwelling-house. R. v. Martin, R. & R. 108. If a porter spends the night in a warehouse for the purpose of protecting goods, R. v. Smith, 2 East, P. C. 497; 2 Leach, 1019 n., or a servant spends the night in a barn in order to watch thieves, R. v. Brown, 2 East, P. C. 501; 2 Leach, 1018 n.; this does not make the warehouse or barn a dwelling-house, in which burglary can be committed. So, where the landlord of a dwelling-house, after the tenant had quitted it, put a servant into it, to sleep there at night, until he should re-let it to another tenant, but had no intention to reside in it himself: the judges held that it could not be deemed the dwelling-house of the landlord. R. v. Davies, 2 Leach, 876; 2 East, P. C. 499. And where the prosecutor left his house without an intention of returning to live in it, but retained it as a workshop and warehouse, and two women employed in his business, not as domestic servants, slept in the house merely for the purpose of taking care of it, but did not take their meals there, or use the house for any other purpose, it was held not to be the dwelling-house of the prosecutor. R. v. Flanagan, R. & R. 187. So, where the tenant had put all his goods and furniture into the house, preparatory to his removing to it with his family, but neither he nor any of his family had as yet slept in it: it was held not to be a dwelling-house in which burglary could be committed. R. v. Hallard, 2 East, P. C. 498: R. v. Thompson, Id.; 2 Leach, 771. And the same has been ruled, where, under such circumstances, the tenant had put a person (not being one of the family) into the house, and for the protection of the goods and furniture in it, until it should be ready for his residence. R. v. Harris, 2 Leach, 701; 2 East, P. C. 498: R. v. Fuller, 2 East, P. C. 498; 1 Leach, 186 n. See R. v. Jones, 2 East, P. C. 499: R. v. Flanagan, R. & R. 187: and where a house was under repair and was not inhabited though containing property of the owner. R. v. Lyons, 1 Leach, 185; 2 East, P. C. 497.

A dwelling-house may be divided so as to form two or more dwelling-houses (within the meaning of the word in the definition of burglary), by letting a part of it to a tenant: provided there be no internal communication between the part so let and the remainder of the dwelling-house. Upon an indictment for burglary it appeared that the house in which the burglary was alleged to have been committed formed the centre of a building, having two wings: in one of which A. lived, and the other consisted of the dwelling-houses of B. and C. respectively; the centre consisted of three manufactories, in one of which A., B., D. and other persons were jointly concerned, and of the remaining two D. was the sole proprietor; C. was merely in the employment of D. There was no internal communication between the centre building and the houses of A. and B., nor between it and the house of C., except a window in the house of C., which looked into a passage that ran the whole length of the centre building. One of the counts in the indictment alleged the centre building to be the dwelling-house of C.; but the judges held that the window merely was not such an internal communication as could make the centre building be deemed parcel of C.'s house. R. v. Egginton, 2 B. & P. 508. Whether a part of a dwelling-house let separately from the rest can be considered a distinct dwelling-house and the subject of burglary depends on the mode of its user. Thus if a man hires a shop, parcel of another man's house, and unconnected with it by internal communication, and the tenant works or trades in it, but never sleeps there, it is no dwelling-house, and burglary cannot be committed in it. 1 Hale, 557, 558. If, on the contrary, he or any part of his family lie there it is deemed his dwelling-house, and may be laid to be so in an indictment for burglary. Id.; and see R. v. Rogers, 1 Leach, 89, 428: 2 East, P. C. 506. So, if he lets off part, and does not by himself or any of his family dwell in the other part, the part let off is the dwelling-house of the tenant, whether it communicate with the other part or not, but the part not let off is not the subject of burglary. But if the owner of the dwelling-house lets the shop, which is unconnected by internal communication with the house, and also lets some rooms in the house, which are connected with the other parts of it, to the same person; and the tenant or some of his family sleep in the rooms; a breaking and entering of the shop, in that case, will be burglary, and it may be laid to be committed in the dwelling-house of the landlord. R. v. Gibson, 1 Leach, 357; 2 East, P. C. 508. See Lee v. Gansel, 1 Cowp. 1, 8: R. v. Stock, R. & R. 185; 2 Leach, 1015: R. v. North Collingham, 1 B. & C. 578: R. v. Great Bolton, 6 L. J. (M. C.) 81; 8 B. & C. 71: R. v. Ditcheat, 7 L. J. (M. C.) 110; 9 B. & C. 176: R. v. Macclesfield, 2 B. & Ad. 870: Fenn v. Grafton, 2 Bing. (N. C.) 617; 3 Scott, 56.

The term "dwelling-house" includes in its legal signification all outhouses occupied with and immediately communicating with the dwelling-house. But by 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46 (2) (ante, p. 655), no building, although within the same curtilage (see post, p. 679) with the dwelling-house, and occupied therewith, shall be deemed to be part of such dwelling-house for any of the purposes of that Act, unless there be a communication between such building and dwelling-house, either immediate or by means of a covered and enclosed passage leading from the one to the other.

Where the prosecutor's house consisted of two living-rooms, another room used as a cellar, and a washhouse on the ground-floor, and of three bedrooms upstairs, one of them over the washhouse, and the bedroom over the house-place communicated with that over the washhouse, but there was no internal communication between the washhouse and any of the rooms of the house, but the whole was under the same roof, and the defendant broke into the washhouse, and was breaking through the partition wall between the washhouse and the house-place, it was held that the defendant was properly convicted of burglary in breaking the house. R. v. Burrowes, 1 Mood. 274. But where adjoining to the house was a kiln, one end of which was supported by the wall of the house, and adjoining to the kiln a dairy, one end of which was supported by the wall of the kiln, the roofs of all three being of different heights, and there being no internal communication from the house to the dairy, it was held that burglary was not committed by breaking into the dairy. R. v. Higgs, 2 C. & K. 322, Wilde, C.J. To be within the meaning of this section, the building must be occupied with the house in the same right; and therefore where a house let to and occupied by A. adjoined and communicated with a warehouse let to and occupied by A. and B., it was held that the warehouse could not be considered a part of the dwelling-house of A. R. v. Jenkins, R. & R. 244. If the building is not proved to be a dwelling-house the defendant must be acquitted of burglary. If there is any doubt as to the nature of the building broken and entered, a count may be inserted for breaking and entering a building within the curtilage. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 26, ante, p. 654; and see post, p. 678.

Ownership of the dwelling-house.]—It has been already stated that the house must be occupied; and occupation rather than legal ownership must be proved. Occupation by a tenant at will is enough to make him owner for the purposes of this indictment. R. v. Collett, R. & R. 498. The person described as owner must be proved to occupy in his own right, however precarious his tenure. Thus, an insolvent has been held to be rightly described as owner of a house in which he lived, although it was rented by his daughter, and she carried on business but did not live there. R. v. Bridges, 1 Cox, 261, Erle, J.

Where it is laid to be the dwelling-house of J. N., proof that it was occupied by his wife and her establishment alone will support the indictment. In such a case it was at common law necessary to allege it to be the dwelling-house of the husband, even although the wife lived separate from him, and the house had been taken by her, and she paid the rent, taxes, etc. R. v. Farre, Kel. (J.) 43; 1 Leach, 1064 n.: and see Boggett v. Frier, 11 East, 301: R. v. Smyth, 5 C. & P. 201; 1 M. & Rob. 155, Tenterden, C.J.: R. v. French, R. & R. 491: R. v. Wilford, R. & R. 517. This rule does not apply where the wife has obtained a judicial separation under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 25, or a protection order under s. 21 of that Act, or a justice's separation order under 58 & 59 Vict. c. 39, ss. 4, 5. And under the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), a wife can hold her separate property without the intervention of trustees (s. 1), and has the same remedies and redress by way of criminal proceedings, for the protection and security of her own separate property, as if such property belonged to her as a feme sole. (See 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 36, ante, p. 48). If, therefore, the house in which a burglary is committed or goods therein are the separate property of a married woman and in her occupation, it should be described in the indictment as hers. See R. v. Murray [1906] 2 K. B. 385; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 593; 21 Cox, 256.

If a man occupies a dwelling-house by his servants, and does not reside in it himself, the indictment must allege it to be the dwelling-house of the master; and evidence of an occupation by his servants will maintain the indictment. A difficulty very frequently arises in such cases, to ascertain whether the occupation by the servant is in his own right or in that of his master. Where three persons were in partnership in a bank and brewhouse, the business of which was transacted in the lower rooms of the house in question, and a cooper in the service of the partnership, at weekly wages, lived with his family in the upper rooms, which communicated with the lower rooms by means of a trapdoor and a ladder, but there was also a separate entrance to these rooms from without; the lower rooms were broken and entered, and property stolen from them; and the judges held that the house was well laid in the indictment to be the dwelling-house of the partners. R. v. Stock, R. & R. 185; 2 Leach, 1015; 2 Taunt. 339. Where a warehouseman, with his family, lived in a dwelling-house upon his master's premises, for which and for coals he paid his master a rent of 11*l.* a year, and the master let the house, which was worth 20*l.* per annum to an ordinary tenant, to the warehouseman at the lower rent, that he might reside upon the premises as a security, it was held that the warehouseman stood in the character of tenant, for the master might have distrained upon him for rent, and could not arbitrarily have removed him. R. v. Jarvis, 1 Mood. 7. See R. v. Smyth, 5 C. & P. 501. So where, with certain wages, a workman had a cottage rent-free to live in, it was held that, as the workman occupied this cottage for his own benefit, and not for the benefit of his master, it was well described as the dwelling-house of the workman. R. v. Jobling, R. & R.

525. Where a toll-gate house, occupied by a person employed by the lessee of the tolls to collect the tolls, at weekly wages, with the privilege of living in the toll-gate house erected by the trustees of the road for that purpose, was broken and entered in the night-time, it was held that the house was well described as the dwelling-house of the toll-gate keeper, because he had the exclusive possession, and it was unconnected with the premises of the lessee, who did not appear to have any interest in it. R. v. Camfield, 1 Mood. 42. So, where a gardener lived in the house of his master, quite separate from the dwelling-house of his master, and had the entire control of the house he lived in, and kept the key, it was held that it might be laid either as his or his master's house. R. v. Rees, 7 C. & P. 568, Denman, C.J. And where a servant lived rent-free in a house belonging to his master, and his master paid the taxes, and his master's business was carried on in the house, but the servant and his family were the only persons who slept in the house, and that part of the house in which his master's business was carried or was at all times open to those parts in which the servant lived; upon an indictment for breaking and entering that part of the house in which the master's business was carried on, it was held that it might be described as the servant's house; but it was not decided that it might not also be described as the house of the master. R. v. Witt, 1 Mood. 248; and see R. v. Courtenay, 5 Cox, 218 (Ir.). Where the house was described as the house of J. B., and it appeared that J. B. worked for one W., who did carpenter's work for a public company, and put J. B. into the house in question, which belonged to the company, to take care of it, and some mills adjoining, J. B. receiving no more wages than before he went to live in the house, it was held not rightly laid. R. v. Rawlins, 7 C. & P. 150. Where apartments in the house of a corporation are appropriated as lodgings for servants of the corporation, a burglary committed in them must be laid to have been committed in the dwelling-house of the corporation. R. v. Picket, 2 East, P. C. 501: R. v. Hawkins, Fost. 38; 2 East, P. C. 485: and see R. v. Maynard, 2 East, P. C. 501. So, a club-house cannot be laid as being a dwelling-house of the house-steward, who sleeps in it, and has charge of the property stolen. R. v. Ashley, 1 C. & K. 198. So, where apartments are assigned to any person in a royal palace, a burglary committed in them must be laid to have been committed in the mansion of the King. R. v. Williams, 1 Hale, 522: and see R. v. Burgess [1663] Kel. (J.) 27. But where a company in the country rented a house in London for their agent, in the upper part of which he resided with his family, and in the lower part transacted his business, it is reported to have been held by Graham, B., and Grose, J., that a burglary in the house was well laid to have been committed in the dwelling-house of the agent. R. v. Margetts, 2 Leach, 930. Where a house rented by A. and B., partners, was divided into two houses for the convenience of their respective families, the family of A. residing in one, the family of B. in the other, and there was no internal communication between them; a burglary in the part occupied by A. was held to be well laid to have been committed in the dwelling-house of A., and not of the partners, although the rent of both houses was paid jointly out of the partnership funds. R. v. Jones, 1 Leach, 537; 2 East, P. C. 504. But a house, the joint property of partners in trade, in which their business is

Where the room occupied by a guest in an inn is broken and entered in the night-time, an indictment for the burglary must lay it to have been committed in the dwelling-house of the innkeeper; 1 Hale, 557: R. v. Prosser, 2 East, P. C. 502; and the same in all other cases where the occupier has the use merely, and no interest in the apartment he occupies. See 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 26. Apartments let to lodgers, however, admit of a different consideration. If part of a house is let to a lodger, who sleeps there, and no other person resides in the remainder of the house, a burglary in the lodgings must be laid to have been committed in the dwelling-house of the lodger. Where a coachman rented the loft over a coach-house and stables, and he and his family resided in it, a burglary committed in it was held to be well laid to have been committed in the dwelling-house of the coachman. R. v. Turner, 1 Leach, 305; 2 East, P. C. 492. So, if the house is let out to several lodgers, and the owner does not reside in it, a burglary in it must be alleged to have been committed in the dwelling-house of the person whose lodgings were broken and entered. R. v. Rogers, 1 Leach, 89; 2 East, P. C. 506: and see R. v. Trapshaw, 1 Leach, 427; 2 East, P. C. 506, 780. So where the shop of a dwelling-house is divided into two shops, with a door in each opening towards the street, and another into a common passage leading to the common staircase, and the whole of the house is occupied by the two occupiers of the shops, the separate shop of each may be described as the dwelling-house of each. R. v. Bailey, 1 Mood. 23. And where a lodger occupied a sleeping-room on the first floor, and the workshop in the attic, and the rest of the house was occupied by other lodgers, a burglary in the workshop was held by the judges to be well laid to have been committed in the dwelling-house of the lodger who rented it. R. v. Carrell, 1 Leach, 237; 2 East, P. C. 606. But if the owner of the house resides in a part of it, and lets the rest out in lodgings—then, if the part occupied by the lodger is severed from that occupied by the owner, that is, if there is no internal communication between them, and the lodger and owner enter the house by different outer doors, a burglary in the part occupied by each respectively must be laid to have been committed in the dwelling-house of the person so occupying it; but if they are not severed, and the lodger and the owner enter by the same outer door, then the burglary must be laid to have been committed in the dwelling-house of the owner. 1 Leach, 90 n.; Kel. (J.) 83, 84; 2 East, P. C. 503. Where, therefore, the servant of the prosecutor dwelt in part of the house, and the rest, excepting the shop, was let off to lodgers; it was held that the shop in the prosecutor's occupation was properly described as the dwelling-house of the prosecutor. R. v. Gibbons, R. & R. 442. And where the prosecutor let to his son a shop, which had a separate entrance from the street, but communicated with the dwelling-house of the prosecutor by a back door, and the son used the shop as a place of business only, and did not reside there, it was held that the shop was properly described as the dwelling-house of the prosecutor. R. v. Sefton, R. & R. 202. If a person lets off part of his house, but does not dwell in the part reserved, the part let is the dwelling-house of the tenant, but the part reserved is not the subject of burglary; it is not the dwelling-house of the tenant, because it forms no part of his holding, and it is not that of the owner, because he does not dwell in it. R. v. Wilson, R. & R. 115. The governor of a workhouse, under a contract for seven years with the guardians and overseers of the poor, occupied and dwelt in the governor's house, with the exception of one room reserved to the guardians and overseers as their office, of which the governor had one key, and the clerk of the guardians and overseers the other, but the governor's servant cleaned the room; upon an indictment for breaking and entering this room, it was held that it could not be described as the dwelling-house of the governor. Id.: and see R. v. Frowen, 4 Cox, 266.

Break.]—There must be a breaking of the house, either actual or constructive, to constitute burglary. If a man leaves his doors or windows open, and another enters therein with intent to commit a felony, it is no burglary. 1 Hale, 551; 3 Co. Inst. 64. So if there is an aperture in a cellar window to admit light, through which a thief enters in the night, this is not burglary. R. v. Lewis, 2 C. & P. 628: R. v. Spriggs, 1 M. & Rob. 357.

An actual breaking is, where the offender for the purpose of getting admission for any part of his body, or for a weapon or other instrument, in order to effect his felonious intention, breaks a hole in the wall of a house, breaks a door or window, picks the lock of a door, or opens it with a key, or even by lifting a latch, or unlooses any other fastening to doors or windows which the owner has provided. 3 Co. Inst. 64; 1 Hale, 552. Pugh v. Griffith, 71 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 169; 7 A. & E. 827, 836, Coleridge, J. Thus, an entry effected by taking out the glass from a door, was held to be burglary. R. v. Smith, R. & R. 417. So also where a pane of glass was broken, R. v. Perkes, 1 C. & P. 300; 15 R. R. 280: R. v. Tucker, 1 Cox, 73: or a cut pane of glass was pushed out. R. v. Bird, 9 C. & P. 44. And where the defendant pulled down the sash of a window which had no fastening, and was only kept in its place by the pulley-weight, it was held to be burglary, although there was an outer shutter which was not put to. R. v. Haines, R. & R. 451. So, where he raised a sash-window which was shut down close, but not fastened, though it had a hasp which might have been fastened. R. v. Hyams, 7 C. & P. 441. And where a window opening upon hinges, and fastened with wedges, but so that by pushing against it, it could be opened, was opened; it was held to be burglary. R. v. Hall, R. & R. 355. So, where a party thrust his arm through the broken pane of a window, and in so doing broke some more of the pane, and thus got at and removed the fastening of the window and opened it, it was held to be a sufficient breaking. R. v. Robinson, 1 Mood. 327: and see Ryan v. Shilcock, 7 Ex. 72. In R. v. Callan, R. & R. 157, the prisoner after committing larceny in a dwelling-house by night broke out of the premises by lifting up a heavy flap of a cellar, which was not bolted, and upon a question reserved whether this was a sufficient breaking out to constitute a burglary, the judges were equally divided. Cf. R. v. Lawrence, 4 C. & P. 231. But in R. v. Russell, 1 Mood. 377, it was decided that lifting up the flap of a cellar usually kept down by its own weight is a sufficient breaking for the purpose of burglary. See R. v. Brown, 2 East, P. C. 487; 2 Leach, 1016 n. If a window is partly open, but not sufficiently o admit a person, the raising of it so as to admit a person, is not a breaking f the house. R. v. Smith, 1 Mood. 178. Obtaining admission to a house by getting down the chimney is burglary; for the chimney is as much closed as the nature of things will admit. R. v. Brice, R. & R. 450; and see 1 Hawk. c. 38, . 6; 1 Hale, 552.

A constructive breaking is where the offender, with intent to commit a felony, obtains admission by some artifice, trick, or threat, for the purpose of effecting t. As, for instance, if a man knocks at a door, and upon its being opened, rushes in with a felonious intent; or upon pretence of taking lodgings, falls upon the landlord and robs him; or procures a constable to gain admittance in order to search for traitors, and then binds the constable and robs the house: ll these entries have been adjudged burglaries, although there were no actual breaking; for the law will not suffer itself to be trifled with by such evasions, especially under the cloak of legal process. 1 Hawk. c. 38, ss. 9, 10; Bl. Com. 226. So, where the defendants frightened the inmates of the house into admitting them. R. v. Swallow, 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1070, 2287. So, where the defendant obtained admission by promising a boy, who was in the care of the house, some ale; and whilst the boy was gone for the ale, robbed the house; his was held to be burglary. R. v. Hawkins, 2 East, P. C. 485; Fost. 38. And, if a servant conspires with a robber, and lets him into the house by night, his is burglary in both; 1 Hale, 553; 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 14: R. v. Cornwall, 2 Str. 881; and see Saqui & Lawrence v. Stearns [1911] 1 K. B. 426; 80 L. J. (K. B.) 451. But if a servant pretending to agree with a robber, opens the door and lets him in for the purpose of detecting and apprehending him, this is no burglary, for the door is lawfully open. R. v. Johnson, C. & Mar. 218, Maule, J., and Rolfe, B. The prisoner induced a pawnbroker's assistant to let him have the key of the pawnbroker's shop so that he could have a false key made. The assistant, in allowing the prisoner to have the key, was acting with the knowledge of his employer and of the police in order to effect the arrest of the prisoner, who was arrested upon opening the door of the shop with the false key. It was held, distinguishing R. v. Johnson (supra), that the prisoner was rightly convicted of breaking and entering the shop with intent to steal, for he did not walk in by an open door, but broke open the door with a key. R. v. Chandler [1913] 1 K. B. 125; 82 (L. J. (K. B.) 106; 23 Cox, 330; 108 L. T. 352; 77 J. P. 80; 29 T. L. R. 83. Cf. R. v. Lawrence, 4 Cox, 440, ante, p. 533.

And the breaking necessary to constitute burglary is not restricted to the breaking of the outer wall, or doors, or windows of a house; if the thief gets admission into the house by the outer door or window being open, and afterwards breaks or unlocks, etc., an inner door, for the purpose of entering one of the rooms, etc., in the house, it is burglary. 1 Hale, 553; R. v. Johnson, 2 East, P. C. 488. So, if a servant opens his master's chamber-door, or the door of any other chamber not immediately within his trust, with a felonious design; or if any other person lodging in the same house, or in a public inn, opens and enters another door with such evil intent, it is burglary. 1 Hale, 553, 554. It is doubted, whether breaking open cupboards, etc., in the inside of a house, affixed to the freehold, is burglary; see 1 Hale, 527; Fost. 108; and

Mr. Justice Foster, in favorem vitæ, recommended that it should not be so considered. Fost. 109. And clearly, the breaking open chests, etc., in a dwelling-house is not burglary. 1 Hale, 553, 554. The breaking must be of some part of the house; and, therefore, when the defendant opened an area gate with a skeleton key, and thence passed through an open door into the kitchen, it was held not to be a breaking, there being no free passage from the area to the house in the hours of sleep. R. v. Davis, R. & R. 322. And upon the same principle, it was held that the breaking of a door which was in the outward fence of the curtilage of a dwelling-house, and opened, not into any building, but into the yard only, was not a breaking of the dwelling-house. R. v. Bennett, R. & R. 289. Where a shutter-box partly projected from a house, and adjoined the side of the shop-window, which side was protected by wooden panelling, lined with iron; it was held that the breaking and entering the shutter-box did not constitute burglary. R. v. Paine, 7 C. & P. 135.

And enter.]—And there must be an entry, as well as a breaking, to constitute burglary; although we have seen that the entry need not be on the same night as the breaking. (Ante, p. 657.) Any the least degree of entry, however, with any part of the body, or with any instrument held in the hand, is sufficient; as, for instance, after breaking the door or window, etc., to step over the threshold, to put a hand or a finger, R. v. Davis, R. & R. 499, or a hook or other instrument in at a window to draw out goods, or a pistol, with intent to kill or demand money, are all of them burglarious entries. 1 Andr. 114; 1 Hale, 555; 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 11, 12; 3 Co. Inst. 54: R. v. Gibbons [1752] Fost. 107. See R. v. Meal, 3 Cox, 70, as to the amount of evidence necessary. So, if the defendant introduces his hand through a pane of glass broken by him, between the outer window and an inner shutter, for the purpose of undoing the window-latch, it is a sufficient entry. R. v. Bailey, R. & R. 341: and see R. v. Tucker, 1 Cox, 73. So, an entry down a chimney is a sufficient entry into a house, for the chimney is part of the house. R. v. Brice, R. & R. 450. But an entry through a hole in the roof left for the purpose of admitting light is not a sufficient entry to constitute burglary; for a chimney is a necessary opening and needs protection; whereas, if a man chooses to leave a hole in the wall or roof of his house, instead of a fastened window, he must take the consequences. R. v. Spriggs, 1 M. & Rob. 357. It has even been said that discharging a loaded gun into a house is a sufficient entry. 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 11; secus 1 Hale, 555. But there must be an entry: if, for instance, a man assaults a house, or even breaks a hole in it, and before the entry the owner flings his money to the thief, it would not be burglary. 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 3; 1 Hale, 555. So, if the instrument with which the house is broken happens to enter the house, but without any intention on the part of the burglar to effect his felonious intent (as, for instance, to draw out the goods) with it, this will not be a sufficient entry to constitute a burglary. R. v. Hughes, 1 Leach, 406; 2 East, P. C. 491. See R. v. Roberts, 2 East, P. C. 487; R. v. O'Brien, 4 Cox, 398. Where, therefore, the defendant threw up a window, and introduced a crow-bar to force the shutters, which were three inches from the window, but no part of his hand was within the window, this was held not to be an entry, lthough the jury found that the defendant did this with intent to steal. R. v. Rust, 1 Mood. 183. Where the breaking with intent to commit a felony is roved, but there is no proof of entry, the jury may convict the prisoner of he attempt to commit burglary. R. v. Spanner, 12 Cox, 155, per Bramwell, B., fter consultation with Martin, B.

Entry without breaking.]—The cases as to what constitutes entry are equally pplicable to offences under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 27 (ante, p. 654), which unishes entry by night into a dwelling-house without breaking with intent to ommit a felony therein.

With intent, etc.]—The intent laid in the indictment must be to commit ome felony (and whether a felony at common law or by statute is immaterial; Kel. (J.) 46, 67; 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 38; 2 East, P. C. 513) in the dwelling-ouse, such as larceny, murder, rape, etc.; and the intent must be proved as aid. See R. v. Pearson, 74 J. P. 175; 4 Cr. App. R. 40. Where the intent s at all doubtful it may be laid in different ways in different counts: R. v. Thompson, 2 East, P. C. 515; 2 Leach. 1105 n.; or in the alternative in the ame count. 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, rule 5 (1), ante, p. 46.

The best evidence of the intent is, that the defendant actually committed the elony alleged to have been intended by him: see R. v. Locost, Kel. (J.) 30: r you may give in evidence any other facts from which the intent may be resumed by the jury. (See ante, pp. 357, 359.) Where the defendant was liscovered in the chimney of a shop in the night-time, and the jury found him guilty of the burglary with intent to steal, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to warrant the conviction. R. v. Brice, R. & R. 450.

And did steal therein, etc.]—There must be an actual and not merely a constructive taking, but in all other respects the larceny must be proved in the manner directed (ante, p. 511 et seq.). Then prove that it was committed in the dwelling-house of C. D, situate as described in the indictment, or in some building occupied therewith and connected or communicating therewith, either immediately or by means of a covered and inclosed passage. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46 (2) (ante, p. 655; post, p. 679). It seems, however, that to convict the defendant of the felony charged to have been committed, it must appear to have been concurrent with the burglary; you cannot give evidence of a felony committed at a different time. Where it appeared in evidence, that, upon entering the house at three o'clock in the day, the owner found that some person had removed certain goods to a different part of the house from that in which he had placed them, seemingly for the purpose of stealing them; and the defendants afterwards, on the same evening, having broken and entered the house, were taken in it, before they had attempted to move or carry away anything: having failed at the trial to prove the burglary, the prosecutor was proceeding to prove the defendants guilty of the antecedent larceny: but the Court refused to receive the evidence, saying, that the transactions were perfectly distinct, and that the prosecutor might as well attempt to prove a larceny committed seven years before. R. v. Vandercomb, 2 Leach. 708; 2 East, P. C. 514.

If you succeed in proving a larceny, but fail in proving the burglary, the defendant may be convicted, as the proof may be, of the simple larceny, or of stealing in the dwelling-house. R. v. Withal, 1 Leach, 88; 2 East, P. C. 515, 517 : and see R. v. Compton, 3 C. & P. 418. See also ante, pp. 211, 212. If two or more are indicted, one may be found guilty of the burglary and larceny, and the other of the larceny only. R. v. Butterworth, R. & R. 520 (see ante, p. 56) : R. v. Turner, 1 Sid. 171, contra. Where a room-door was latched, and a person lifted the latch and entered the room, and concealed himself for the purpose of committing a larceny there, which he afterwards effected; and two other persons were present with him when he lifted the latch, for the purpose of assisting him to enter, and screened him from observation by opening an umbrella, it was held that those two were in law parties to the breaking and entering, and were answerable for the larceny which afterwards took place, though they were not near the spot when it was perpetrated. R. v. Jordan, 7 C. & P. 432. Where the breaking is on one night, and the entry the night after, a person present at the breaking, though not present at the entering, is in law guilty of the whole offence. Id.

Indictment for Burglary by breaking out of a House after stealing therein. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 25 (2), ante, p. 654.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Burglary, contrary to section 25 (2) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., in the night of the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, being in the dwelling-house of J. N., stole therein one silver sugar-basin of the value of three pounds, six silver table-spoons of the value of three pounds, and twelve silver tea-spoons of the value of two pounds, the property of J. O., and having committed the felony aforesaid, afterwards, to wit, in the night of the same day, broke out of the said dwelling-house of the said J. N.

Felony: 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 25 (2). See the precedent, ante, p. 656.

This offence is triable at quarter sessions. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 38 (ante, p. 655).

Evidence.

Prove a larceny in the dwelling-house of J. N., as directed ante, pp. 657 et seq. And prove a breaking of the house by the defendant, in the night-time, in order to get out of the same. In R. v. Lawrence, 4 C. & P. 231, Bolland, B., held that escaping from a house by lifting a heavy flap-door which had no fastening, but was kept down by its own weight, was not a sufficient breaking out of a house, although, as we have seen (ante, p. 665), it would constitute a good breaking into a house. But in R. v. McKearney, Jebb, Circ. Ct. Ir., 99, it was held that a man was properly convicted of burglary by breaking out, who broke a skylight from within and put his head out but was struck and captured before he could get out. It is not the less a burglary, because the defendant was lawfully in the house, as a lodger, or a guest at an inn. R. v. Wheeldon, 8 C. & P. 747.

If it is doubtful whether a felony can be proved, but there is sufficient evidence of an intent to commit a felony, a count may be added stating the intent. To prove this count, the prosecutor must prove the entry, the intent as in other cases, and the breaking out.

Indictment for being found by Night armed, with intent to break into a building and to commit a Felony therein. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 28 (1), ante, p. 654.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Being found by night armed, with intent, contrary to section 28 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., in the night of the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, was found armed with a crow-bar [any dangerous or offensive weapon or instrument], with intent to break and enter [break or enter] into the shop ["any building"] of J. N. and to steal the property of the said J. N. therein. At the London County Sessions a stone and a piece of linen with treacle on it, such linen being used by housebreakers to prevent any sound of broken glass, were held each to be implements of housebreaking under this section; R. v. Percival [1905] 69 J. P. 320. It is not necessary to aver that the goods and chattels were the property of any particular person; R. v. Lawes, 1 C. & K. 62 (and ante, p. 47). The indictment must, as in burglary, allege the ownership of the premises intended to be broken into, R. v. Jarrald, L. & C. 301; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 258; 9 Cox, 307; and it seems also that it ought to allege the particular felony intended to have been committed. Id. per Crompton, J.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 28 (b), 37 (4). As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see Id. s. 37 (5) (a) (c) (ante, p. 501). For the like offence after a previous conviction for felony or such misdemeanor, penal servitude for not more than ten nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, Id. ss. 28 (a), 37 (4) (ante, p. 501). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, Id. s. 37 (5) (a) (c) ante, p. 501).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant was found by night, that is, between nine o'clock p.m. and six o'clock a.m., see 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46 (1) (ante, p. 657), and armed as alleged in the indictment. Then prove the intent, which may be inferred from the nature of the weapon or instrument with which the defendant is found armed, the place in which he is found, or from his declarations, or from other circumstances (see ante, pp. 355, 357, 397). It is necessary that the defendant should be proved to have had the intent of breaking into or entering some particular building, and proof of a general intent to break into houses will be insufficient. R. v. Jarrald, supra.

Indictment for having in Possession, by Night, Implements of Housebreaking. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 28 (2), ante, p. 654.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Being found by night with implements of housebreaking, contrary to section 28 (2) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., in the night of the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, was found having in his possession without lawful excuse, certain implements of housebreaking, that is to say, ten keys, ten picklocks, and two crows.

Misdemeanor: 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 28 (ante, p. 654). See the last precedent.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant was found by night (that is, between nine p.m. and six a.m., see supra), having in his possession one or more of the implements of housebreaking mentioned in the indictment. Every instrument which from its nature is capable of being used for housebreaking, although ordinarily used for lawful purposes, e.g., a house door-key, or a pair of pincers, is an implement of housebreaking within the statute, if the jury are of opinion, from the circumstances, that at the time when the defendant was found in possession of it, it was his intention to use it as such. R. v. Oldham, 2 Den. 472; 3 C. & K. 249; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 134. The lawful excuse for possession, if any, must be proved by the defendant. Where the alleged implements of housebreaking—namely, a chisel and a screwdriver—were tools ordinarily used by bricklayers, and the defendant stated at the trial that he was a bricklayer and that the tools were the ordinary tools of his trade, it was held that he had primâ facie satisfied the onus cast upon him of proving that he had a lawful excuse for the possession of the tools, and that the onus was then cast upon the prosecution of proving that the accused had no lawful excuse for being in possession of the tools at the particular time and place. R. v. Ward [1915] 3 K. B. 696; 85 L. J. (K. B.) 483; 80 J. P. 16; 114 L. T. 192; 11 Cr. App. R. 245; 25 Cox, 255. Where several persons are found at night acting in pursuance of a common purpose to break into houses, but one only has housebreaking implements, all may be convicted of possessing them. R. v. Thompson, 11 Cox, 362 (C. C. R.). As to what constitutes finding by night, see R. v. Stevenson, 69 J. P. 84.

Semble, that it was a misdemeanor at common law to have possession of instruments of housebreaking, with intent to break into a house and steal the goods therein : see R. v. Lee, Cas. (K. B.) temp. Hardw. 371 (cit.); sed quære; see ante, p. 3.

Indictment for breaking and entering a Church or Chapel and stealing therein. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 24 (1), ante, p. 654.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Sacrilege, contrary to section 24 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

J. S., on the 1st day of June, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, broke and entered the church of the parish of —— [or a certain chapel, in the parish of ——] ("any place of divine worship"), and stole, in the said church, one silver cup, the property of the parishioners of the said parish.

If a chapel which is private property be broken and entered, lay the property as in other cases of larceny.

As to burglary in a church, see R. v. Baker, 3 Cox, 581. As to breaking into a church with intent to commit felony, see 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 27 (2) (ante, p. 654).

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour—6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 24, 37 (4) (ante, p. 654). As to recognizances, and sureties for keeping the peace, Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant broke and entered the church or chapel described in the indictment, in the same manner as in burglary (ante, p. 664), except that it need not be proved to have been done in the night-time. The vestry is part of the church for this purpose. R. v. Evans, C. & Mar. 298. So is a church tower, unless it is a structure quite separate from the church. R. v. Wheeler, 3 C. & P. 585. If the evidence fails in this respect, the defendant may be convicted for simple larceny. Then prove the larceny, as directed (ante, pp. 511 et seq.). In R. v. Nicholas, 1 Cox, 218, on an indictment for breaking into a church in the night-time, it was held unnecessary to lay the ownership of the property in the church in any person. See now 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, r. 6 (ante, p. 47). The allegation of property in the parishioners, rector or churchwardens, will be sufficiently proved by evidence that the church is a parish church; but the property in goods in a chapel must be proved as in ordinary cases. Where a prisoner was indicted for stealing a Bible, a hymn-book, and a pair of brass sconces, the property of J. B. and others, which it appeared had been stolen from a Methodist chapel at Fakenham, and the Bible and hymn-book had been presented to the Society of Methodists there, of which J. B. was one, and also a trustee of the chapel, but the trust deed was not produced, Parke, J., held, that as J. B. was one of the society, the property was well laid in him. R. v. Boulton, 5 C. & P. 537. Where the property stolen was a box containing money collected for the poor, which was screwed to the outside of a pew in the centre aisle of a church, the box was held not to be affixed to the freehold, and the property was held to be well laid in the churchwardens in their individual names. R. v. Wortley, 1 Den. 162; 2 C. & K. 283; 2 Cox, 32.

Indictment for Housebreaking. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 26 (1), ante, p. 654.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Housebreaking and larceny, contrary to section 26 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, broke and entered the dwelling-house of J. N. and stole a dressing-case of the value of 5*l.* the property of the said J. N. in the said dwelling-house.

If the evidence fails to prove the actual stealing, but the breaking, entry and intent to steal is proved, the prisoner may be convicted under this indictment of the felony described in 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 27 (2). If the evidence fail to prove the breaking, but if the stealing in the dwelling-house to the amount of 5 be proved, the prisoner may be convicted of the felony described in 6 & 7 Geo. 5 c. 50, s. 13 (a) (ante, p. 653).

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, r imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.— & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 26, 37 (4) (ante, p. 501). As to recognizances and ureties for keeping the peace, see Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

Evidence.

The dwelling-house of J. N.]—This must be proved in the same manner as in urglary. As to what buildings are included in the term dwelling-house, see & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46 (2) (ante, p. 655).

Did break and enter.]—This must be proved in the same manner as in urglary; 1 Hale, 596; Fost. 108 (see ante, pp. 664 et seq.); except that it need ot be proved to have been done in the night-time, but if it is proved to have een done in the night-time, so as to amount to burglary, the defendant may otwithstanding be convicted upon this indictment.

In the said dwelling-house.]—There must be an actual and not merely a onstructive taking, but in all other respects the larceny may be proved in the nanner directed, ante, p. 511 et seq. Where the prosecutor, in consequence of he threat of an armed mob, fetched provisions out of his house and gave them o the mob, who stood outside the door, this was held not to be stealing in the dwelling-house. R. v. Leonard, Cheshire Special Commission, 1842. Where t appeared that the prisoner, after breaking and entering the house, took two alf-sovereigns from a bureau in one of the rooms, but, being immediately letected, threw them under the grate in that room, Park, J., held that this vas a sufficient asportation to constitute a stealing within this section of the tatute. R. v. Amier, 6 C. & P. 344. The value of the goods is immaterial, f a breaking and entry are proved.

If the prosecutor succeeds in proving the larceny, but fails in proving any f the other circumstances above mentioned, the defendant may be convicted of imple larceny; or if the prosecutor fails in proving the breaking and entry, nd the goods are laid and proved to be of the value of five pounds, the defendant ay be convicted of stealing in the dwelling-house. The defendant cannot, on is indictment, be convicted of breaking and entering the dwelling-house, and tempting to steal the prosecutor's goods, when it appears that the goods ecified in the indictment were not in the house at the time, though other ods of the prosecutor's were. R. v. M'Pherson, Dears. & B. 197; 36 L. J. [. C.) 134; 7 Cox, 281. He may, however, it would seem, under such circum- ances, be convicted of breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony nder 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 27 (2) (ante, p. 632); and see R. v. Ring, 61 L. J. [. C.) 116 (ante, p. 534).

Indictment for breaking into and stealing in a Shop. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 26 (1), ante, p. 654.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Shop breaking and larceny, contrary to section 26 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, broke and entered the shop of J. N. and stole twenty yards of muslin, the property of the said J. N. in the said shop. The indictment need not allege expressly that the defendant stole the goods in the shop: R. v. Andrews, C. & Mar. 121, overruling R v. Smith, 2 M. & Rob. 115.

Felony: see the last precedent. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 26 (1) (ante, p. 654).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant broke and entered the shop, etc., in question, in the same manner as upon an indictment for burglary (ante, p. 664), except that it is immaterial whether the breaking and entry be by night or by day; if this proof fails, the defendant may be convicted of the simple larceny. Prove that the shop, etc., was at the time, etc., the shop of J. N., that is, that he occupied it, and carried on the business there; then prove the larceny of the goods enumerated in the indictment, in the same manner as upon an indictment for housebreaking (supra), or stealing in the dwelling-house (post, p. 675). The value is immaterial. And, lastly, prove that the shop, etc., is situate as described in the indictment.

A " warehouse " need not be such as factors or traders keep their goods for sale in, and where customers go to view them, but includes such as are used for the safe keeping of goods merely: R. v. Hill, 2 M. & Rob. 458, Rolfe, B. There is a dictum of Alderson, B., upon 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 15 (rep.), that a shop, to be within it, must be a shop for the sale of goods, and that a mere workshop (such as a carpenter's or blacksmith's shop) would not be sufficient R. v. Sanders, 9 C. & P. 79; but in R. v. Carter, 1 C. & K. 173, Denman, C.J. dissented from that dictum, and held that a blacksmith's shop, used as a work shop only, was within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 15 (rep.). By 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 26, a workshop is expressly protected.

As to what building is a counting-house within the statute, see R. v. Potter, 2 Den. 235; C. & K. 179; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 170; 5 Cox, 187, decided on 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 15 (rep.).

By s. 26 of the Larceny Act, 1916, in addition to the buildings specified in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 56 (rep.), it is made an offence to break and enter any " office, store, garage, pavilion, factory or workshop, or any building belonging to His Majesty, or to any Government Department, or to any municipal other public authority," and to commit a felony therein. See also s. 27 (2) of the Larceny Act, 1916 (ante, p. 654).

Opening by a servant of the door of a shop under the same roof as the house in which he served, was held a breaking and entering within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 12 (rep.). R. v. Wenmouth, 8 Cox, 348.

Indictment for stealing in a Dwelling-house, some Person therein being put in fear. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 13 (b), ante, p. 653.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Larceny and threats, contrary to section 13 (b) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the first day of May, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, stole one silver basin, of the value of five pounds, the property of J. N., in the dwelling-house of the said J. N., and by a menace or threat put one J. L. and M. his wife, being therein, in bodily fear. The indictment must expressly allege that some person in the house was put in fear by the defendant. R. v. Etherington, 2 Leach, 671; 2 East, P. C. 635. The value if amounting to 5l. had better always be inserted, as the prisoner may be convicted on this indictment of stealing to the value of 5l., in the dwelling-house, if no menace or threat should be proved. See ante, p. 211.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour—5 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 13, 37 (4) (ante, p. 501). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

Evidence.

Prove the larceny in the dwelling-house as directed (ante, pp. 511, 673). The value is immaterial, if some person was in the house at the time, and was put in bodily fear by a menace or threat of the defendant; which may be either by words or gestures. R. v. Jackson, 1 Leach, 267. Lastly, prove that the person mentioned in the indictment was in the house at the time, and was put in fear by the menaces or threats of the defendant or his accomplices. R. v. Etherington (supra). It is not necessary that all the accused should be in the house if some entered and all acted together. R. v. Murphy, 6 Cox, 340. On the former statutes, which did not require that the party should be put in fear by a menace or threat, it does not appear to have been settled whether it was necessary to prove an actual sensation of fear: but now, by the express words of the present statute, it must be proved that the putting in fear was by an actual menace or threat.

If the prosecutor fails to prove that the person mentioned in the indictment was in the dwelling-house, and was put in fear, the defendant may still be convicted of simple larceny; or if the goods stolen in the dwelling-house are laid and proved to be of the value of five pounds, he may be convicted of stealing in the dwelling-house.

Indictment for stealing in a Dwelling-house to the value of 5l.
(6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 13 (a), ante, p. 653.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Larceny, contrary to section 13 (a) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, stole one silver sugar basin, of the value of three pounds, six silver table-spoons, of the value of three pounds, and twelve silver tea-spoons, of the value of two pounds, the property of J. G., in the dwelling-house of J. N.

Felony: see the last precedent. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 13 (ante, p. 653).

Evidence.

Prove the larceny as directed ante, pp. 511 et seq. Prove it to have been committed in the dwelling-house of J. N., or in some building occupied therewith, and connected or communicating therewith, either immediately or by means of a covered and enclosed passage leading from the one to the other (ante, p. 655); and prove the goods stolen to be of the value of five pounds or more.

If you fail to prove the larceny, the defendant must be acquitted altogether unless you prove an attempt to commit larceny, in which case the defendant may be convicted of such attempt under 14 and 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (ante, p. 215). If you fail to prove the larceny to have been committed in a dwelling-house or some building communicating therewith (such as burglary might be committed in, 2 East, P. C. 644, and see ante, p. 676), or fail to prove that it was the dwelling-house of J. N., R. v. White, 1 Leach, 252: R. v. Woodward, Id. 253 n.; or fail to prove the goods (stolen at any one time, R. v. Petrie, 1 Leach, 294: see R. v. Hamilton, Id. 348: R. v. Jones, 4 C. & P. 217: R. v. Dunn, 1 Mood. 146: R. v. Smith, Id. 178) to be of the value of five pounds, the defendant must be acquitted of the compound offence, and may be found guilty of simple larceny only, without a separate count for that offence. See Campbell v. R., 11 Q. B. 799, at p. 812; 15 L. J. (N. S.) 76; and ante, p. 56.

It was held in several early cases, that if a man stole the goods of another in his own house (R. v. Thompson, 1 Leach, 338), or a woman stole the goods of a stranger in the house of her husband (R. v. Gould, 1 Leach, 217), it was not within the statute then in force, which was not intended to protect property which might be in a house from the owner of the house, but from the depredations of others; but these cases appear to be overruled by R. v. Bowden, 1 C. & K. 147; 2 Mood. 285, where all the judges agreed that stealing in a dwelling-house to the value of 5*l.*, by the owner of the house, was within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 12 (rep.). Cf. R. v. Taylor, R. & R. 418.

If the goods are under the protection of the person of the prosecutor at the time they are stolen, the case will not be within the statute. As, for instance, where the defendant procured money to be delivered to him for a particular purpose and then ran away with it: R. v. Campbell, 2 Leach, 564; 2 East, P. C. 644; and where the prosecutor, by the trick of ring dropping, was induced to lay down his money upon a table, and the defendant took it up and carried it away: R. v. Owen, 2 Leach, 572; 2 East, P. C. 645; these cases were held not to be within the statute. For a case to be within the meaning of the statute, it is necessary that the goods should be under the protection of the house, and be deposited in it for safe custody. But property left at a house for a person supposed to reside there, will be under the protection of the house, and the stealing of it will be within the statute. Two boxes belonging to A., who resided at 38, Rupert Street, were delivered by a porter (whether by mistake or design did not appear) at No. 33 in the same street; the owner of the house, imagining that they were for the defendant, who lodged there, delivered them to him; the defendant converted the contents of the boxes to his own use, and absconded; it was doubted at the trial whether the goods were sufficiently within the protection of the dwelling-house to bring the case within the statute, but the judges held that they were, and that the conviction for the capital offence was therefore correct. R. v. Carroll, 1 Mood. 89. If one, on going to bed, put his clothes and money by his bedside, these are under the protection of the dwelling-house, and not of the person. R. v. Thomas, Car. Supp. 295. So, where a man went to bed with a prostitute, having put his watch in his hat on a table, and the woman stole the watch while he was asleep; this was held to be a stealing in the dwelling-house and not a stealing from the person. R. v. Hamilton, 8 C. & P. 49. It is a question for the Court and not for the jury, whether goods are under the protection of the dwelling-house, or in the personal care of the owner. R. v. Thomas, supra.

Indictment for Breaking and entering a Dwelling-house, etc., with intent to commit any Felony therein. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 27) (2), ante, p. 654.)

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Housebreaking with intent, contrary to section 27 (2) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, broke and entered the dwelling-house of J. N. ("any dwelling-house, place of divine worship, or any building within the curtilage, or any school-house, shop, warehouse, counting-house, office, store, garage, pavilion, factory, or workshop, or any building belonging to His Majesty, or to any Government Department, or to any municipal or other public authority") with intent to commit a felony, namely, to steal therein.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour—6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 27, 37 (4) (ante, p. 501). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

Evidence.

Prove that the prisoner broke and entered the dwelling-house in question, and that it was at the time in the occupation of J. N., and also the prisoner's intent to steal. Lastly, prove that the dwelling-house is situate as described in the indictment. The intent to steal may no doubt often be reasonably inferred from the mere fact of breaking and entering.

Where the prisoner was indicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 27, for breaking and entering a shop with intent to commit a felony, viz., to steal, and it appeared that the prisoner broke in the roof, intending to enter and steal, and was then disturbed, but there was no evidence that he ever actually entered the shop, he was held to have been rightly convicted of the misdemeanor of attempting to commit a felony. R. v. Bain, L. & C. 129; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 88; 9 Cox, 98.

Where the accused opened a door of a house and entered the hall and gave no satisfactory account of his presence there, it was held that there was sufficient evidence to justify the jury in finding a felonious intent. R. v. Wood, 76 J. P. 103; 7 Cr. App. R. 56.

Indictment for breaking into a Building within the curtilage of a Dwelling-house, etc. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 26 (1), ante, p. 654); and see s. 46 (2) (ante, p. 655).

Commencement as ante, p. 646.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count.

Housebreaking and larceny, contrary to section 26 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, broke and ntered a certain building within the curtilage of the dwelling-house of J. N., nd occupied therewith, and stole, in the said building, a silver watch, the roperty of the said J. N.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count.

Housebreaking with intent, contrary to section 27 (2) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the said county, broke and ntered the said building with intent to steal therein. This count may be added o an indictment for burglary, housebreaking, or stealing in a dwelling-house to he amount of five pounds, and should be added whenever it is doubtful whether he building is in strictness a dwelling-house. If the evidence fails to prove the ctual stealing, but the breaking, entry, and intent to steal is proved, the risoner may be convicted under this indictment of the felony described in 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 27 (2) (ante, p. 654).

Felony: penal servitude on first count for not more than fourteen, on second ount for not more than seven, nor less than three years, or imprisonment for ot more than two years, with or without hard labour—6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 26, 27, 37 (4) (ante, pp. 654, 501). As to recognizances and sureties for eeping the peace, see Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant broke and entered the building in question; that he building so broken and entered was occupied, at the time when the offence was committed, by J. N., together with his dwelling-house, and was within he curtilage thereof; and that the defendant there stole the goods, etc., enumerated in the indictment.

The breaking and entering must be proved in the same manner as in burglary (ante, p. 664), except that it is immaterial whether it be done in the day or night. If this proof fails, the defendant may be convicted of simple larceny.

Within the curtilage.]—The building described in the statute is "any building within the curtilage of a dwelling-house, and occupied therewith, not being part of the dwelling-house," that is, "not communicating with the dwelling-house, either immediately or by means of a covered and enclosed passage leading from the one to the other." In Termes de la Ley, curtilage is defined as "garden, yard, or piece of void ground lying near to or belonging to the messuage;" so also Sheppard Touchstone, 94, with the further explanation, "something which would pass by conveyance of the messuage." To break and enter a building within the curtilage was, before the present statute, burglary, or housebreaking. If the barn, stable, or warehouse is parcel of the mansion-house, and within the same common fence, though not under the same roof and contiguous, a burglary may be committed therein; 4 Bl. Com. 224; but if the buildings are at any distance from the house, "it has not been usual of late to proceed against offences therein as burglaries;" 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 22: see 28 L. J. Newsp. 858; and although the present enactment, which expressly defines the building meant thereby to be a building within the curtilage, excludes many buildings which were formerly deemed parcel of the dwelling-house, from their adjoining to the dwelling-house, and being occupied therewith, although not within any common enclosure or curtilage; yet some of the cases decided upon these subjects may afford some guide to the construction of the present section. Where the defendant broke into a goosehouse, which opened into the prosecutor's yard, into which yard the prosecutor's house also opened, and the yard was surrounded, partly by other buildings of the homestead, and partly by a wall in which there was a gate leading to the road, and some of the buildings had doors opening into the lane, as well as into the yard, the goose-house was held to be part of the dwelling-house. R. v. Clayburn, R. & R. 360. Where the prosecutor's house was at the corner of a street, and adjoining thereto was a workshop, beyond which a coach-house and stable adjoined, all of which were used with the house, and had doors opening into a yard belonging to the house, which yard was surrounded by adjoining buildings, and was altogether enclosed, but the shop had no internal communication with the house, had a door opening into the street, and its roof was higher than that of the house, the workshop was held to be parcel of the dwelling-house. R. v. Chalking, R. & R. 334. So, a warehouse, which had a separate entrance from the street, and had no internal communication with the dwelling-house, with which it was occupied, but was under the same roof, and had a back door opening into the yard into which the house also opened, and which enclosed both, was held to be part of the dwelling-house. R. v. Lithgo, R. & R. 357. So, where in one range of buildings the prosecutor had a warehouse and two dwelling-houses, formerly one house, all of which had entrances into the street, but had also doors opening into an enclosed yard belonging to the prosecutor; and the prosecutor let one of the houses between his house and the warehouse together with certain easements in the yard; it was held that the warehouse was parcel of the dwelling-house of the prosecutor before the division of the house, and remained so afterwards. R. v. Walters, 1 Mood. C. C. 13. And where the dwelling-house of the prosecutor was in the centre of a space of about an acre of land, surrounded by a garden wall, the front wall of a factory, and the wall of the stable-yard, the whole being the property of the prosecutor, who used the factory, partly for his own business and partly in a business in which he had a partner; and the factory opened into an open passage, into which the outer door of the dwelling-house also opened; it was held that the factory was properly described as the dwelling-house of the prosecutor. R. v. Hancock, R. & R. 170. See R. v. Eggington, 2 Leach, 913; 2 B. & P. 508: R. v. Sefton, R. & R. 202 (ante, p. 664). But a building separated from the dwelling-house by a public thoroughfare cannot be deemed to be part of the dwelling-house. R. v. Westwood, R. & R. 495; nor, semble, to be within the curtilage. So, neither is a wall, gate, or other fence, being part of the outward fence of the curtilage, and opening into no building, but into the yard only, part of the dwelling-house. R. v. Bennett, R. & R. 289; nor is a gate of an area, which opens into the area only, if there is a door or fastening to prevent persons from passing from the area into the house, although that door or other fastening may not be secured at the time. R. v. Davis, R. & R. 322. Where the building broken into was in the fold-yard of the prosecutor's farm, to get to which from the house it was necessary to pass through another yard called the pump-yard, into which the back door of the house opened, the pump-yard being divided from the fold-yard by a wall four feet high, in which there was a gate, and the fold-yard being bounded on all sides by the farm buildings, a wall from the house, a hedge and gates; it was held that the building was within the curtilage. R. v. Gilbert, 1 C. & K. 84. As to the meaning of "curtilage" in connection with a will or conveyance of lands: see Wright v. Wallasey Local Board, 18 Q. B. D. 783; 56 L. J. (Q. B.) 259; Marson v. L. C. & D. R. Co., L. R. 6 Eq. 101; 37 L. J. (Ch.) 483 and Stroud Jud. Dict.

Under ss. 26 and 27 of the Larceny Act, 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. 5. c. 50), it is an offence to break and enter, etc., a garage or pavilion, whether such buildings are or are not within the curtilage of a dwelling-house. See ante, p. 654.

The larceny in the building must be proved in the same manner as upon an indictment for housebreaking (ante, p. 672), or stealing in a dwelling-house (ante, p. 675)

DEMANDING WITH MENACES, ETC.

Statute.

6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50 (Larceny Act, 1916), s. 29.—Demanding money, etc., with menaces.]—(1) Every person who—(i.) utters, knowing the contents thereof, any letter or writing demanding of any person with menaces, and without any reasonable or probable cause, any property or valuable thing; (ii) utters, knowing the contents thereof, any letter or writing accusing or threatening to accuse any other person (whether living or dead) of any crime to which this section applies, with intent to extort or gain thereby any property or valuable thing from any person; (iii.) with intent to extort or gain any property or valuable thing from any person accuses or threatens to accuse either that person or any other person (whether living or dead) of any such crime; shall be guilty of felony, and on conviction thereof liable to penal servitude for life, and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, to be once privately whipped in addition to any other punishment to which he may by law be liable. (2) Every person who with intent to defraud or injure any other person—(a) by any unlawful violence to or restraint of the person of another, or (b) by accusing or threatening to accuse any person (whether living or dead) of any such crime or of any felony, compels or induces any person to execute, make, accept, endorse, alter, or destroy the whole or any part of any valuable security, or to write, impress, or affix the name of any person, company, firm or co-partnership, or the seal of any body corporate, company or society upon or to any paper or parchment in order that it may be afterwards made or converted into or used or dealt with as a valuable security, shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof liable to penal servitude for life. (3) This section applies to any crime punishable with death, or penal servitude for not less than seven years, or any assault with intent to commit any rape, or any attempt to commit any rape, or any solicitation, persuasion, promise, or threat offered or made to any person, whereby to move or induce such person to commit or permit the abominable crime of buggery, either with mankind or with any animal. (4) For the purposes of this Act it is immaterial whether any menaces or threats be of violence, injury, or accusation to be caused or made by the offender or by any other person. [This section consolidates 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 44, 46, 47, 48, 49. The words "whether living or dead" are taken from 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 35 (rep.).]

Sect. 30.—Demanding with menaces, with intent to steal.]—Every person who with menaces or by force demands of any person anything capable of being stolen with intent to steal the same shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding five years. [This section re-enacts 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 45.]

Sect. 31.—Threatening to publish, with intent to extort.]—Every person who with intent—(a) to extort any valuable thing from any person, or (b) to induce any person to confer or procure for any person any appointment or office of profit or trust, (1) publishes or threatens to publish any libel upon any other person (whether living or dead); or (2) directly or indirectly threatens to print or publish, or directly or indirectly proposes to abstain from or offers to prevent the printing or publishing of any matter or thing touching any other person (whether living or dead); shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years. [This section re-enacts 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 3. The words "whether living or dead" are taken from 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 35 (rep.) There is no power to arrest without warrant for an offence against this section. See 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 41 (1), ante, p. 504.]

Indictment for uttering a Letter demanding Money, etc. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 29 (1) (i), ante, p. 681.)

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Uttering threatening letter, contrary to section 29 (1) (i) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, uttered, knowing the contents thereof, a letter or writing demanding money ("any property or valuable thing") from J. N. with menaces and without any reasonable or probable cause.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping—6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 29 (1), 37 (4) (ante, p. 681, 501). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, ibid. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Give the letter in evidence, and prove it to have been uttered by the defendant, as charged in the indictment.

Uttered.]—Proof that the defendant dropped the letter in a place where he knew the prosecutor would come, and that it was picked up by another person, and by him delivered to the prosecutor: R. v. Lloyd, 2 East, P. C. 1122: R. v. Vagstaff, R. & R. 398; or that the letter is in the handwriting of the defendant, and that it came to the prosecutor by the post: R. v. Heming, 2 East, P. C. 1116: and see R. v. Jepson, Id. 1115: was held (upon the repealed statutes) sufficient evidence of a sending by the defendant, and would clearly warrant a conviction for uttering under the present law. So, where the prosecutor, having received such a letter, traced it to a woman who was in the habit of going errands for the prisoners in Newgate, and she proved that she received it from the defendant, then a prisoner in Newgate, to put in the post office, and the servant of the post office proved that the letter in question was brought to the office by the last witness, and forwarded in the regular course; this was held sufficient evidence, not only of the sending by the defendant, but that he also knew its contents. R. v. Girdwood, 2 East, P. C. 1120; 1 Leach, 142. And sending the letter to A. in order that he may deliver it to B., is a sending to B., if the letter is delivered by A. to B. R. v. Paddle, R. & R. 484.

A letter, etc.]—The words in this statute are "any letter or writing," and therefore the decisions upon the earlier statutes as to what constitutes a "letter" are inapplicable to the present.

In R. v. Harris, 6 C. & P. 105, Bolland, B., ordered the letter to be deposited in the hands of the clerk of the peace, in order that the defendant's witnesses might inspect it before the trial.

Demanding money.]—"Any 'property,' or valuable thing." See 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46 (1) (ante, p. 508). If there be any doubt, which of two or three things was demanded, it may be stated in the alternative in the same count. 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90. Where the letter contained a request only, but intimated that, if it were not complied with, the writer would publish a certain libel then in his possession, accusing the prosecutor of murder; this was held to amount to a demand. R. v. Robinson, 2 Leach, 749; 2 East, P. C. 1110. As to threatening to publish a libel, see 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 31 (ante, p. 682). A mere request, such as asking charity or the like without imposing any conditions, would not come within the meaning of the word "demand" in the statute. Per Buller, J., in R. v. Robinson, 2 East, P. C. 1114.

With menaces.]—The demand must be with menaces. The word "menaces" includes "not merely threats of injury to persons or property, but menaces which would involve injury to a third person intended to be injured, and would induce the person to whom the menaces are addressed to part with money or valuable property," such as threats to accuse of misconduct not amounting to crime. R. v. Tomlinson [1895] 1 Q. B. 706; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 97; 18 Cox, 75: R. v. Boyle, 83 L. J. (K. B.) 1801; 24 Cox, 406; 30 T. L. R. 521; 10 Cr. App. R. 180: cf. R. v. Chalmers, 10 Cox, 450: R. v. Smith, 1 Den. 510; 2 C. & K. 882; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 80; 4 Cox, 42; and see 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 29 (4) (ante, p. 682). The question of the meaning is for the jury; and it is the duty of the Court not to direct as matters of law that a threat is a menace within the statute, but merely to lay down the principle on which the jury should proceed in considering whether the letter amounts to a menace within the statute. R. v. Walton, 32 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 79; L. & C. 288; 9 Cox, 268: R. v. Tomlinson, supra: R. v. Carruthers, 1 Cox, 138: R. v. Boyle, supra. The prosecutor may be asked what he thought the letter meant. R. v. Hendy, 4 Cox, 243.

Without reasonable or probable cause.]—The demand must also be without reasonable or probable cause. It is for the jury to decide whether there was reasonable or probable cause for making the demand. But it is not for them to decide whether the accused believed that he had reasonable and probable cause for making it. The belief of the accused affords no defence. R. v. Dymond [1920] 2 K. B. 260; 84 J. P. 103; 36 T. L. R. 421; 15 Cr. App. R. 1; overruling R. v. Miard, 1 Cox, 22. Cf. R. v. Wheat and Stocks [1921] 2 K. B. 119; 37 T. L. R. 417; 15 Cr. App. R. 134. Where the evidence completely negatived any circumstance on which the prisoner could found any just demand of money, and there was no foundation for any such belief on his part, Kelly, C.B., "left it to the jury to consider whether there was any reasonable or probable cause for the demand of the money." R. v. Chalmers, 10 Cox, 45 (C. C. R.). The words apply to the money demanded, and not to the accusation threatened, the truth or falsity of which is immaterial. R. v. Hamilton, 1 C. & K. 212 (under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 8 (rep.)). Evidence of the contents of similar letters, the subject of other indictments, appears to be admissible to show the intent of the accused. R. v. Graham, 3 Cr. App. R. 252.

Indictment for sending a Letter threatening to accuse, with Intent, etc.
(6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 29 (1) (ii), ante, p. 681.)

Commencement as ante, p. 682.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Uttering threatening letter with intent, contrary to section 29 (1) (ii) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, uttered, knowing the contents thereof, a letter or writing threatening to accuse ("accusing or threatening to accuse") J. N. ("any other person whether living or dead") of a certain crime, to wit, of having attempted and endeavoured to commit the abominable crime of buggery with the said A. B. ("any crime punishable with death or penal servitude for not less than seven years, or any assault with intent to commit any rape or any attempt to commit any rape or any solicitation, persuasion, promise, or threat offered or made to any person, whereby to move or induce such person to commit or permit the abominable crime of buggery, either with mankind or with any animal") with intent to extort or gain money ("any property or valuable thing") from the said J. N. ("from any person").

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping—6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 29 (1), 37 (4) ante, pp. 681, 501). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, d. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, . 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant uttered the letter, as directed, ante, p. 683. Whether the letter amounts to a threat to accuse the prosecutor of the offence mentioned is a fact to be determined by the jury. See R. v. Girdwood, 2 East, '. C. 1120; 1 Leach, 142. If it does not appear from the letter itself of what offence the defendant threatened to accuse the prosecutor, the defendant's declaration of meaning of the letter may be given in evidence to explain it. : .v. Tucker, 1 Mood. 134. The threat need not be to accuse before a court f justice. R. v. Robinson, 2 M. & Rob. 14; 2 Lew. 273.

The intent must also be proved, as in the last case: and in order to prove it, ther letters received by the prosecutor from the defendant upon the same ubject may be given in evidence (see R. v. Graham, ante, p. 684), or it may be nferred from the previous, contemporaneous, or even subsequent conduct and xpressions to third persons. R. v. Menage, 3 F. & F. 310; cf. R. v. Cooper, Cox, 547.

Punishable with penal servitude for not less than seven years.]—See observaons on evidence under s. 29 (1) (iii), post, p. 686.

Indictment for threatening to accuse a Man of a Crime with Intent, etc. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 29 (1) (iii), ante, p. 681.)

Commencement as ante, p. 682.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Threatening to accuse of crime with intent, contrary to section 29 (1) (iii) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, with intent to extort or gain money ("any property or valuable thing") from J. N. ("any person") threatened to accuse ("accuses or threatens to accuse") him the said J. N. ("either that person or any other person whether living or dead") of a crime, to wit, of having attempted and endeavoured to commit the abominable crime of buggery with one J. S. ("any crime punishable with death or penal servitude for not less than seven years, or any assault with intent to commit any rape, or any attempt or endeavour to commit any rape, or any solicitation, persuasion, promise or threat offered or made to any person, whereby to move or induce such person to commit or permit the abominable crime of buggery, either with mankind or with any animal").

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.—6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 29 (1) (ante, p. 681; Id. s. 37 (4) (ante, p. 501). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the threat or accusation, and the intent. It is for the jury to decide what the defendant meant by the threatened accusation: R. v. Cooper, 3 Cox, 547: R. v. Braynell, 4 Cox, 402. It is submitted that the meaning of the words in 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 29 (3) "any crime punishable by law with penal servitude for not less than seven years" is any crime for which a sentence of seven years or more may be awarded; and therefore that where the threatened accusation is one of indecent assault upon a male person such an accusation is within the above statute, the maximum punishment for an indecent assault upon a male person being penal servitude for ten years by virtue of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 62. Before the passing of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (rep. as to the above offences) it was held that where the threatened accusation was one of indecent assault (upon a male person) it was for the jury to determine whether such an accusation might not amount to an "infamous crime" within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 8, as being "a solicitation to permit or commit such crime." R. v. Cooper, supra, Cresswell, J.: cf. R. v. Braynell, supra: R. v. Middleditch, 1 Den. 92; 2 Cox, 313. The offence of gross indecency between mal persons created by 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 11, is not within the sub-section : see R. v. Gilgannon, 63 J. P. 457.

The words " whether living or dead " were first introduced by 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58 s. 35 (rep.).

The threat must be a threat to accuse, or an accusation : if A. B. is indicted, or in custody for an offence, and the defendant threatens to procure witnesses to prove the charge, this will not be a threat to accuse within the meaning of the statute. R. v. Gill, 1 Lew. 305. But it need not be a threat to accuse before a judicial tribunal; a threat to charge before any third person is sufficient. R. v. Robinson, 2 M. & Rob. 14. And it is immaterial whether the prosecutor be innocent or guilty of the offence imputed to him; R. v. Gardner, 1 C. & P. 479; if the prisoner intended to extort money by the accusation, R. v. Richards, 11 Cox, 43. And therefore, although the prosecutor may be cross-examined as to his guilt of the offence imputed to him, with a view to shake his credit, yet no evidence will be allowed to be given, even in cross-examination, by another witness, to prove that the prosecutor was guilty of such offence. R. v. Cracknell, 10 Cox, 408. If the prisoner makes the accusation believing it to be true and without any purpose at that time to extort money thereby, and afterwards endeavours to compromise it by payment of money, he may be guilty of the offence of compounding a felony, but not of an offence under s. 29 (1) (iii). R. v. Richards, 11 Cox, 43, Blackburn, J. The last-named case appears to be hardly reconcileable with the above cases of R. v. Gardner and R. v. Cracknell, but the facts in R. v. Richards were exceptional. Proof that the prisoner went to the prosecutor and threatened to accuse his son of an unnatural offence with a mare unless the prosecutor would buy the mare for 3*l.*, was held to sustain an indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 47 (rep.). R. v. Redman, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 12; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 89; 10 Cox, 159.

If the intent does not appear sufficiently from the accusation or threat itself, it must be proved by circumstances from which the jury may fairly presume it (see ante, p. 352): as by subsequent expressions of the defendant. R. v. Kain, 8 C. & P. 187. Evidence of an exactly similar act committed by the prisoner on a previous occasion has been held admissible as evidence of intent. R. v. Cooper, 3 Cox. 547, Cresswell, J.; and see R. v. Graham, 3 Cr. App. R. 252, and ante, pp. 355 et seq.

Indictment for demanding Property, etc., with Menaces or by Force, with Intent to steal the same. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 30, ante, p. 682.)

Commencement as ante, p. 682.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Demanding with menaces, contrary to section 30 of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, with menaces or by force demanded a watch ("anything capable of being stolen," see s. 1 (3), ante, p. 500) of J. N. with intent to steal the same.

Felony: penal servitude for not less than three years and not exceeding five years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour—6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 30 (ante, p. 682; Id. s. 37 (4) (ante, p. 501). As to requiring the offender to enter into recognizances and find sureties for keeping the peace, Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

Evidence.

To support this indictment, the prosecutor must prove a demand by the defendant of the money or other thing stated in the indictment, "by menaces or force," with intent to steal it. As to what constitute menaces see ante, p. 684. It is not necessary to prove an express demand in words; the statute says, "if any person shall, with menaces or by force demand," etc.; and menaces are of two kinds—by words or by gestures; so that, if the words or gestures of the defendant at the time were plainly indicative of what he required, and tantamount in fact to a demand, it should seem to be sufficient proof of the allegation of demand in the indictment. See R. v. Jackson, 1 Leach, 269. The offence may be committed although the language used may be only a request and not an explicit demand. A request imposing conditions may be evidence of a demand. R. v. Studer, 85 L. J. (K. B.) 1017; 114 L. T. 424; 25 Cox 312; 11 Cr. App. R. 307.

Where the defendant demanded a shilling, and on being refused threatened to burn up the prosecutor, and actually tried to fire one of his stacks, it was held that he had demanded money by menaces. R. v. Taylor, 1 F. & F. 511, Pollock, C.B.

If a person, with menaces, demands money of another, who does not give it him, because he has it not with him, this is a felony within the statute.

In order to bring a case within this section, the demand, if successful, must amount to stealing, and to constitute a menace within that section it must be of such a nature as to unsettle the mind of the person upon whom it operates, and to take away from his acts that element of voluntary action which alone constitutes consent; it must therefore be left to the jury to say whether the conduct of the prisoner is such as to have had that effect on the prosecutor. R. v. Walton, L. & C. 288; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 79; 9 Cox, 268. Where a policeman, professing to act under legal authority, threatens to imprison a person on a charge not amounting to an offence in law, unless money be given him, and the person believing him gives him money, the policeman may be indicted under that section, although he might also have been indicted for stealing the money. R. v. Robertson, L. & C. 483; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 35; 10 Cox, 9.

(6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 31, ante, p. 682.)

Commencement as ante, p. 682.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Threatening to publish a libel with intent, contrary to section 31 of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, threatened to publish a libel upon J. N. ("any other person, whether living or dead") with intent to extort money from the said J. N. ("with intent to extort any valuable thing, from any person, or with intent to induce any person to confer or procure for any person any appointment or office of profit or trust"). If it is doubtful whether the matter threatened to be published be libellous, add a count charging that the defendant " proposed to the said J. N. to abstain from printing or publishing a certain matter or thing touching the said J. N. [or one E. F.], with intent," etc.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years—6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 31 (ante, p. 682).

Evidence.

Prove the threat by the defendant to publish libellous or other matter concerning the prosecutor. Or, if the indictment is for proposing to the prosecutor to abstain from publishing matter concerning him, prove the proposal, and the nature of the matter proposed to be suppressed. Prove the intent as directed (ante, pp. 352, 357). The intent to extort money may be implied from the circumstances, and does not require an express demand for money. R. v. Menage, 3 F. & F. 310. But, if it appears that the object is to compel the delivery of accounts of moneys honestly believed to be due and owing, there is no evidence of the intent to extort money. Id. There is no power to arrest without warrant for this offence. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 41 (1), ante, p. 504.

[See R. v. Hudson, Bell, 263; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 145; 8 Cox, 305; and for indictment, see post, p. 720.] To come within this section, there must be cheating during the playing of the game. R. v. Governor of Brixton Prison, Ex parte Sjoland [1912] 3 K. 63 & 64 Vict. c. 51 (Money Lenders Act, 1900), s. 4.—False statements and representations by money lenders.]—If any money lender, or any manager agent, or clerk of a money lender, or if any person being a director, manager or officer of any corporation carrying on the business of a money lender, by any false, misleading, or deceptive statement, representation, or promise, or by any dishonest concealment of material facts, fraudulently induces or attempts to induce any person to borrow money or to agree to the terms on which money is or is to be borrowed, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable on indictment to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine not exceeding 500*l.* or to both.

Sect. 6.—Definition of money lender.]—Includes persons whose business is that of money lending, or who advertise or announce themselves as carrying on that business, but excepts pawnbrokers, registered friendly societies, bonâ fide banks, and insurance offices, etc.

6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50 (Larceny Act, 1916), s. 32.—False Pretences.]—Every person who by any false pretence—(1) with intent to defraud, obtains from any other person any chattel, money, or valuable security, or causes or procures any money to be paid, or any chattel or valuable security to be delivered to himself or to any other person for the use or benefit or on account of himself or any other person; or (2) with intent to defraud or injure any other person, fraudulently causes or induces any other person—(a) to execute, make, accept, endorse, or destroy, the whole or any part of any valuable security; or (b) to write, impress, or affix his name or the name of any other person, or the seal of any body corporate or society, upon any paper or parchment in order that the same may be afterwards made or converted into, or used or dealt with as, a valuable security; shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding five years. [This section consolidates 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 88, 89, 90.]

Sect. 40.—Procedure.]—(1) On the trial of an indictment for obtaining or attempting to obtain any chattel, money, or valuable security by any false pretence, it shall not be necessary to prove an intent to defraud any particular person, but it shall be sufficient to prove that the person accused did the act charged with intent to defraud. [This sub-section is taken from 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88.]

(2) An allegation in an indictment that money or bank-notes have been embezzled or obtained by false pretences can, so far as regards the description of the property, be sustained by proof that the offender embezzled or obtained any piece of coin or any bank-note or any portion of the value thereof, although such piece of coin or bank-note may have been delivered to him in order that some part of the value thereof should be returned to any person and such part has been returned accordingly. [This sub-section is taken from 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 18.]

Sect. 44.—Verdict.].—(3) If on the trial of any indictment for stealing it is proved that the defendant took any chattel, money, or valuable security in question in any such manner as would amount in law to obtaining it by false pretences with intent to defraud, the jury may acquit the defendant of stealing and find him guilty of obtaining the chattel, money, or valuable security by false pretences, and thereupon he shall be liable to be punished accordingly. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 39 (2).]

(4) If on the trial of any indictment for obtaining any chattel, money, or valuable security by false pretences it is proved that the defendant stole the property in question, he shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of obtaining such property by false pretences. [This sub-section is taken from 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88.]

Sect. 46 (1).—Definition of valuable security.]—See ante, p. 508.

8 & 9 Geo. 5, c. 55 (School Teachers (Superannuation) Act, 1918), s. 11.—False representation and fraud.]—(1) If any person (a) for the purpose of obtaining for himself or any other person any superannuation allowance or gratuity, personates any person or makes any false certificate, false representation, or false statement, or makes use of any false certificate or document, false representation, or false statement, knowing the same to be false; or (b) by means of any false certificate, false document, false representation, or false statement, or by personation or other fraudulent means obtains or attempts to obtain for himself or any other person any superannuation allowance or gratuity, he shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, and on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to a fine not exceeding twenty-five pounds.

(2) Any penalty for any offence under this section may be in addition to any refusal, reduction or suspension of the allowance or gratuity.

(3) Any reference in this section to the obtaining of a superannuation allowance or gratuity, shall include a reference to the obtaining of an increase of a superannuation allowance or gratuity, and to the preventing, or the obtaining the rescission of, the suspension of a superannuation allowance, and the obtaining of any sum in respect of a superannuation allowance or gratuity.

11 & 12 Geo. 5. c. 31 (Police Pensions Act, 1921), s. 16.—Obtaining police pensions, &c., by fraud.]—(1) If a person obtains or attempts to obtain for himself or for any other person—(a) any pension, gratuity or allowance under this Act, or any payment on account thereof; or (b) the return of any rateable deductions from pay under this Act; by means of any false declaration, false certificate, false representation, false evidence, or personation, or by malingering or feigning disease or infirmity, or by maiming or injuring himself, or causing himself to be maimed or injured, or otherwise producing disease or infirmity, or by any other fraudulent conduct, he shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to a fine not exceeding twenty-five pounds, and in either case to forfeit any pension, gratuity, allowance or other sum so obtained. (2) Any fine imposed or sum forfeited for an offence under this section shall be paid to the police fund of the force from which the pension, gratuity, allowance or other sum was obtained or attempted to be obtained.

Indictment for obtaining Goods, etc., by false Pretences.

THE KING v. A. B.

Kent Quarter Sessions held at Maidstone.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Obtaining goods by false pretences, contrary to section 32 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of Kent, with intent to defraud, obtained from S. P. five yards of cloth by falsely pretending that he the said A. B. was a servant to J. S., and that he the said A. B. had then been sent by the said J. S. to S. P. for the said cloth, and that he the said A. B. was then authorised by the said J. S. to receive the said cloth on behalf of the said J. S.

It is common practice to include a count for obtaining credit under false pretences or by means of fraud other than false pretences, where there is any doubt as to which offence has been committed: but where this is done care should be taken that the verdict shows on which count the accused is found guilty, as he cannot be guilty on more than one count in respect of the same transaction, and the punishment is different. Where there is a general verdict on such an indictment the Court of Criminal Appeal on appeal may in a proper case treat the conviction as if it had been upon the lesser of the charges. See R. v. Johnston, 9 Cr. App. R. 262 : R. v. Smith, 11 Cr. App. R. 81. The rule laid down in R. v. Norman [1915] 1 K. B. 341, 11 Cr. App. R. 58, that all the counts of such an indictment should not be tried together but that the prosecution should be called upon to proceed on one count at a time is not a rule of general application but is to be confined to the particular facts of that case. R. v. Pickering, 15 Cr. App. R. 175.

Indictment for obtaining Goods or Money by means of a Cheque which the defendant knows will not be paid.

[Commencement as in the last precedent]—by falsely pretending that a certain cheque which he the said A. B. then produced and delivered to the said S. P., then was a good and valid order for the payment of 5*l.*, and that he the said A. B. then had authority to draw a cheque for the payment of 5*l.* upon the . . . Bank situate at . . . [See R. v. Hazelton, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 134; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 11 (post, p. 703).

Indictment for obtaining Goods by means of Representations contained in a letter calculated to induce the prosecutor to believe that the writer was a dealer in a large way of business.

Commencement as in the last precedent but one]—with intent to defraud, obtained from C. D. forty sacks of potatoes by falsely pretending that he the said A. B. then was a dealer in potatoes, and that as such dealer in potatoes he then was in a large way of business, and that he then was in a position to do a good trade in potatoes, and that he then was able to pay for large quantities of potatoes as and when the same might be delivered to him. See R. v. Cooper, 2 Q. B. D. 510; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 219 (post, p. 705); 13 Cox, 617 : R. v. King [1897] 1 Q. B. 214; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 87 (post, p. 703); 18 Cox, 447 : R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 83; 19 Cox, 182, and cf. R. v. Bates, 3 Cox, 201. The indictment must state to whom the pretences were made, and from whom the goods, etc., were obtained. R. v. Sowerby [1894] 2 Q. B. 173; 63 L. J. (M. C.) 136; 17 Cox, 767, where the form of indictment in R. v. Hunter, 10 Cox, 642, was held bad, and that in R. v. Douglass, 1 Camp. 212, was approved. But an indictment is good which states that the pretence was made to all the King's subjects by an advertisement in a newspaper. R. v. Silverlock [1894] 2 Q. B. 766; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 233; 18 Cox, 104.

In indictments for a conspiracy to obtain money by false pretences, or receiving property obtained by false pretences, it is unnecessary to specify the false pretences. R. v. Gill, 2 B. & Ald. 204 : Taylor v. R. [1895] 1 Q. B. 25; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 11.

The pretences must be set forth with sufficient certainty. But where the pretence alleged was a wager made "with a colonel in the army, then at Bath," without naming him—the Court held it to be sufficient; for probably the defendant at the time did not mention the name of the colonel. Young v. R., 3 T. R. 98; 2 East, P. C. 828, 837, 838; 1 Leach, 505.

Ownership of the goods need not be alleged, nor intent to defraud any particular person. 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, rr. 6, 10 (ante, pp. 47, 52). All persons who have concurred and assisted in the fraud may be indicted and convicted as principals, though not present at the time of making the pretence and obtaining the money or goods. R. v. Moland, 2 Mood. 276; 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 35. If the goods, etc., are not obtained, or are not obtained through the false pretence, the accused can be convicted of the attempt. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100 s. 9 (ante, p. 215). See R. v. Hensler, 11 Cox, 570 (C. C. R.).

Venue.]—Prior to the Larceny Act, 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50), it was held that one who obtains goods by false pretences in one county, and afterwards brings them into another county, where he is apprehended with them, cannot be indicted for the offence in the latter county, but must be indicted in the county where the goods were obtained. R. v. Stanbury, L. & C. 128; 31 L. J. (M. C. 88; see post, p. 708. But by s. 39 (1) of that Act, a uniform venue has been created for all offences against the Act (see ante, p. 502). As to false pretence made in England to a person abroad, or vice versâ, see R. v. Holmes, 1

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not less than three years and not exceeding five years, or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 32, 37 (4) (ante, pp. 691, 501). As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, d. s. 37 (5) (a) (c) (ante, p. 501).

An indictment for obtaining money or other property by false pretences is subject to the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 17), as amended by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 1 (ante, p. 67). But an indictment for attempting to obtain money or other property by false pretences is not. R. v. Burton, 3 Cox, 71 (C. C. R.). It seems probable that the protection of the Vexatious Indictments Acts will be, to some extent, removed in consequence of 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 39 (2) (repealed and re-enacted by 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 44 (3), ante, p. 691), as a conviction for false pretences can be sustained on an indictment for larceny.

False pretences within the Act.]—The first statute on this subject, 33 H. 8, c. 1, extended only to cases where the money, etc., was obtained by means of a false token or counterfeit letter in the name of another; but this provision not being deemed sufficiently extensive, 30 G. 2, c. 24, was passed for the purpose of including all false pretences whatsoever. See 3 Chitty, Cr. L. 1000. These two statutes, the former entirely, and the latter so far " as relates to obtaining by false pretence or pretences any property therein mentioned " : and also the whole of 52 G. 3, c. 64, which extended the provisions of 30 G. 2, c. 24; and also so much of 3 G. 4, c. 114, as relates to the punishment for obtaining any property as therein mentioned by false pretences—were repealed by 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 27, and consolidated and amended by 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 53, which substituted the words " by any false pretence " for the words " by false pretence or pretences," which were in 30 G. 2, c. 24, s. 1. The same words were repeated in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88, and again in the present statute, 6 & 7 G. 5, c. 50, s. 32 (ante, p. 691). The phrases in all these Acts are in substance the same, and consequently most of the decisions upon the repealed statutes are applicable to cases arising under the Larceny Act, 1916.

As to existing fact.]—It may be laid down as a general rule for the interpretation of the statute, that wherever a person fraudulently represents as an existing fact that which is not an existing fact, and so gets money, etc., that is an offence within the Act. See R. v. Woolley, 1 Den. 559; 3 C. & K. 98; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 165; 4 Cox, 193. This rule has been recognized by the legislature in 62 & 63 Vict. c. 22 (Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1899), which enacts (s. 3), that " Where a court of summary jurisdiction proposes to deal summarily in pursuance of this Act with a charge of obtaining by false pretences from any person any chattel, money, or valuable security, with intent to defraud the court shall, after the charge has been reduced to writing and read to the person charged, state in effect that a false pretence means a false representation by words, writing, or conduct, that some fact or facts existed, and that a promise as to future conduct not intended to be kept is not by itself a false pretence. . . ." And see R. v. Carpenter, 22 Cox, 618; 76 J. P. 158, Channell, J. Where a carrier falsely pretending that he had carried certain goods to A. B., demanded, and thereupon obtained from the consignor sixteen shillings for the carriage of them, it was held to be within the statute. R. v. Coleman, 2 East, P. C. 672 · R. v. Airey, Id. 831; 2 East, 30. The defendant, on entering the service of a railway company, signed a book of rules, a copy of which was given to him. One of the rules was, "No servant of the company shall be entitled to claim payment of any wages due to him on leaving the company's service until he shall have delivered up his uniform clothing." On leaving the service, the defendant knowingly and fraudulently delivered up to an officer of the company, as part of his own uniform, a great-coat belonging to a fellow-servant, and so obtained the wages due to him. It was held that he was properly convicted of obtaining by false pretences the money so paid to him as wages. R. v. Bull, 13 Cox, 608 (C. C. R.). Where the defendant falsely pretended to J. N. that he was intrusted by the Duke de Lauzun to take some horses from Ireland to London for him, and that he had been detained so long by contrary winds that his money was all spent, by means of which representation he induced J. N. to advance him money; this was held to be within the Act. R. v. Villeneuve, 2 East, P. C. 830; 3 T. R. 104. So, where the defendant, who had actually taken premises and was doing a small business in coal, obtained forty coal bags on credit from the prosecutor by falsely pretending that he had a lot of trucks of coal at a railway station on demurrage and that he required forty coal bags, this was held to be a false pretence within the statute. R. v. Willot, 12 Cox, 68 (C. C. R.). So, where the defendants, falsely pretending that they had made a bet with A. B. that one of them should run ten miles within an hour, prevailed upon J. N. to join them in the bet, and obtained from him twenty guineas as his share in it; the judges held this to be within the statute, notwithstanding the pretence was probably one against which common prudence might have guarded. Young v. R., 3 T. R. 98; 1 Leach, 505. Cf. R. v. Asterley, 7 C. & P. 191. Where a servant, who had authority to buy goods, and was to be repaid on producing a ticket containing a statement of the purchase, produced such a ticket and obtained the amount stated therein, no purchase having in fact been made, this was held to be not larceny, but obtaining money by false pretences. R. v. Barnes, 2 Den. 59; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 34. And see R. v. Green, Dears. 323; 6 Cox, 296 : R. v. Prince (post, p. 705). Where the foreman of a manufacturer, who was in the habit of receiving from his master money to pay the workmen, obtained from him by means of false written accounts of the wages earned by the men, more than the men had earned or he had paid them, the judges held it to be within the Act; they said that all cases where the false pretence creates the credit are within the statute; and here the defendant would not have obtained the excess above what was really due to the workmen, were it not for the false account he had delivered to his master. R. v. Witchell, 2 East, P. C. 830. It was the prisoner's duty to ascertain daily the amount of dock dues payable by his master, and, having ascertained it, to apply to his master's cashier for the amount, and then to pay it in discharge of the dues. On one occasion, by epresenting falsely to the cashier that the amount was larger than it really vas, as he knew, the prisoner obtained from the cashier the sum he stated it o be, and then paid the real amount due, and appropriated the difference to is own use. This was held to be not larceny, but obtaining money by false retences. R. v. Thompson, L. & C. 233; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 57; 9 Cox, 222. t is difficult to distinguish the essential facts of this case from those in R. v. Cooke, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 295; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 68 (ante, p. 530), where the risoner was held to be guilty of larceny. R. v. Thompson was cited and bserved upon in R. v. Cooke, although not overruled. Bovill, C.J., saying that he decision in R. v. Thompson went entirely on the question whether there vas a larceny in the obtaining of the money in the first instance, and that the oint was not considered whether the subsequent misappropriation was larceny. So, where the defendant obtained goods by falsely stating that he wanted hem for J. S., who lived at N., and was a person whom he would trust with 1000*l*., and who went out to New Orleans twice a year to take goods to his ons, this was held to be a sufficient false pretence within the statute. R. v. Archer, Dears. 449; 6 Cox, 515. So, where the false pretence alleged was. hat a person who lived in a large house down the street, and had had a laughter married some time back, had been to him (the defendant) about some arpet, and had asked him to procure a piece of carpet, whereby the defendant btained from the prosecutor twenty yards of carpet: this was held sufficient. R. v. Burnsides, Bell, 282; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 42; 8 Cox, 370. Receipt of a heque by a clerk to a savings bank from the manager on a false representation hat a depositor had given notice of withdrawal, and for the purpose of handing he cheque to the depositor, was held to be obtaining by false pretences and ot larceny. R. v. Essex, Dears. & B. 371; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 20; 7 Cox, 384.

Where the secretary of an Odd Fellows' Lodge told a member that he owed he lodge 13*s*. 6*d*., and thereby obtained that sum from him fraudulently, whereas the member owed 2*s*. 2*d*. only, he was held to be rightly convicted of obtaining money by false pretences. R. v. Woolley, 1 Den. 559; 3 C. & K. 98; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 165; 4 Cox, 193. A creditor who wilfully and fraudulently represents to a third person who holds money of his debtor that a larger sum is due to him from the debtor than is really the case, and thus obtains from such third person payment of the larger sum, is guilty of a false pretence within he statute, and that too although he may have obtained a judgment by default, not set aside, against his debtor for the larger sum. R. v. Taylor, 5 Cox, 265, 268 (Q. B. D.). Obtaining a gift of money by means of false statements of the name and circumstances of the defendant or any other person, in a begging letter, is within the statute. R. v. Jones, 1 Den. 551; 19 L. J. M. C.) 162; 4 Cox, 198.

An indictment charging the prisoner with obtaining money from a wife, whose husband had run away, by falsely pretending to her that she, the prisoner, had power to bring him back, is good, and sufficiently states an indictable offence. R. v. Giles, L. & C. 502; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 50; 10 Cox, 44.

Mere promise of future conduct insufficient.]—A pretence that the party would do an act which he did not mean to do (e.g., a promise to pay for goods on delivery) is not a false pretence within the Act, but merely a promise for future conduct. R. v. Goodhall, R. & R. 461; R. v. Burrows, 11 Cox, 258 (C. C. R.); 62 & 63 Vict. c. 22, s. 3, ante, p. 695. So, where the defendant obtained money from the prosecutor by the false pretence that he was going to pay his rent, whereas he had no intention of paying his rent, this was held to be no false pretence within the statute. R. v. Lee, L. & C. 309; 9 Cox, 304. So, also, a false pretence that the defendant wanted a loan of 30*l.* to enable him to take a public-house is not within the statute. R. v. Woodman, 14 Cox, 179, Mellor, J. And a pretence to a parish officer, as an excuse for not working, that the party had not clothes, when he really had, though it induced the officer to give him clothes, is not a pretence within the statute, the statement being rather a false excuse for not working than a false pretence to obtain goods. R. v. Wakeling, R. & R. 504. An indictment for obtaining money from A., under the false pretence that the defendant intended to marry A., and wanted the money to pay for a wedding suit he had bought, was held not sufficient to sustain a conviction. R. v. Johnston, 2 Mood. 254. And where the false pretence averred in the indictment was that there was a certain sum due and owing to the defendant on account of certain work executed by him, whereas only a smaller sum was due to him; this was held bad, as not sufficiently averring a false pretence of an existing fact, and being provable by evidence of a mere wrongful overcharge. R. v. Oates, Dears. 459; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 123; 6 Cox, 540. Where an indictment alleged that the defendant falsely pretended to P., who lived at one T.'s that the said P. was to give the defendant 10*s.*, and that T. was going to allow him 10*s.* a week, it was held (Blackburn, J., and Piggot, B., dub.) that the indictment did not allege with sufficient certainty any false pretence respecting any existing fact. R. v. Henshaw, L. & C. 444; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 132.

False pretence as to existing fact, coupled with promise, sufficient.]—But where the statement consists partly of a fraudulent misrepresentation of an existing fact, and partly of a promise to do something in futuro—as, that the defendant kept a shop, and that the prosecutrix might go and live with her at the said shop until she obtained a situation; whereas the defendant kept no shop; and the jury find that the prosecutrix parts with her money or goods, relying wholly or in part upon the misrepresentation of fact; this is a sufficient false pretence within the Act. R. v. Fry, Dears. & B. 449; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 68; 7 Cox, 394. R. v. Bates, 3 Cox, 201. So, where the false representation was that the defendant had bought certain skins, and would sell them to the prosecutor. R. v. West, Dears. & B. 575; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 227; 8 Cox, 12. And where a married man induced a woman to give him money by representing himself to be unmarried, and by promising that with the money he would furnish a house and return and marry her, he was held indictable for obtaining money by false pretences. R. v. Jennison, L. & C. 157; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 146; 9 Cox, 158: cf. Anon., Lofft, 146: R. v. Johnston, 2 Mood. 254: R. v. Williams, 62 J. P. 311. Where the defendant obtained money from a woman under the threat of an action for breach of promise of marriage, he being in fact a married man already, an indictment, laying as the false pretence that was entitled to maintain an action against her for the breach of promise, as held to be good, for that this was a false pretence within the statute. v. Copeland, C. & Mar. 516. "A promise to do a thing in futuro may volve a false pretence that the promissor has the power to do that thing, for hich false pretence the promissor may be indictable." R. v. Giles, L. & C. 2; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 50; 10 Cox, 44: adopted in R. v. Bancroft, 26 T. L. R. ; 3 Cr. App. R. 16, 20. And where the false pretence charged was at the defendant said he had got a carriage and pair and expected it down, ther that day or the next, this was held to be proved by evidence of his ving said that he expected his carriage and pair down. R. v. Howarth, Cox, 588 (C. C. R.). Where money was obtained by the defendant by the lse representation that W. was about to publish a new directory, and that e defendant was collecting information for it, this was held to be a false retence of an existing fact. R. v. Speed, 15 Cox, 24 (C. C. R.). And see v. Bancroft (supra). A false pretence by a prisoner of power to communite with the spirits of deceased and other persons not present where he then as, and that he had power to cause such spirits to be present, was held a lse pretence of an existing fact. R. v. Lawrence, 36 L. T. (N. S.) 404: cf. enny v. Hanson, 18 Q. B. D. 478; 56 L. J. (Q. B.) 41; 16 Cox, 173: R. v. ntwistle [1899] 1 Q. B. 846: 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 580; 19 Cox, 317: R. v. Giles upra): R. v. Stephenson, 68 J. P. 524.

As to business.]—Where the defendant pretended that he was carrying on an xtensive business as a surveyor and house agent, and thereby induced the rosecutor to deposit with him 25*l.*, as a security for his (the prosecutor's) delity as a clerk, whereas the defendant was not carrying on any business as surveyor or house agent, this was held to be a false pretence within the atute. R. v. Crab, 11 Cox, 85 (C. C. R.). But where the defendant prended (1) that he was doing a good business, and (2) that he had recently old a good business, and thereby induced the prosecutor to deposit with him l., as a security for the prosecutor's fidelity as an assistant, whereas in truth efendant's business was worthless and the defendant was a bankrupt, it was eld that neither of the false pretences alleged came within the statute, because he first pretence was a mere exaggerated representation of value (see post, p. 701, 702), upon which, though fraudulent, an indictment would not lie, and ecause the second was too remote. R. v. Williamson, 11 Cox, 328. Byles, J. n the former of these two cases there was no existing business at all, whereas the latter there appears to have been an existing, although a worthless, usiness. See also R. v. Watson, Dears. & B. 348; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 18, in hich, although it was not necessary to decide the point, Erle, J., said:—"I ish not to be supposed to assent to the proposition that an indictment [for lse pretences] can be sustained by proof of mere exaggeration of the prosperity a business, where there is an original business. It is difficult to draw a ecided line; but I think it has been decided that exaggerated praise does not nder a person liable within the statute." As to the general doctrine that aggerated praise does not render a prisoner liable within the statute, and the nitations of that doctrine, see R. v. Bryan, and other cases, post, pp. 701, 702.

For instances of indictments for obtaining money by false pretences where the business carried on by the defendant was a "bogus" business, see R. v. Cooper, 2 Q. B. D. 510; 13 Cox, 617: R. v. King [1897] 1 Q. B. 214; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 87; 18 Cox, 447 (C. C. R.); R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 83; 19 Cox, 182: and indictments charging defendants with obtaining money by falsely pretending that they "were then carrying on a genuine business as —— at ——" are constantly preferred at the Central Criminal Court against persons publishing fraudulent advertisements and the like. Upon the trial of such an indictment, receipts given to a defendant by firms which have sold him goods, and entries in his bank pass-books showing payments made by him, are relevant to the issue and admissible in evidence on his behalf. R. v. Sagar [1914] 3 K. B. 1112; 84 L. J. (K. B.) 303; 112 L. T. 135; 24 Cox, 500; 79 J. P. 32.

Existence of contract.]—In R. v. Codrington, 1 C. & P. 661, where the prisoner sold to the prosecutor a reversionary interest which he had previously sold to another, and the prosecutor took a regular assignment of it, with the usual covenants for title, Littledale, J., ruled that he could not be convicted for obtaining money by false pretences; for if this were within the statute, every breach of warranty or false assertion at the time of a bargain might be treated as a false pretence. In R. v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49; 12 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 135; 1 Dav. & M. 208, that decision was much questioned; and it was strongly intimated that the execution of a contract between the same parties does not secure from punishment the obtaining of money under false pretences, in conformity with that contract. And in R. v. Abbott, 1 Den. 273; 2 C. & K. 630; 2 Cox, 430, it was decided unanimously by the judges, upon a case reserved, that the law was so. See R. v. Burgon, Dears. & B. 11; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 105; 7 Cox, 131: R. v. Dark, 1 Den. 276; and R. v. Goss, Bell, 208; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 86 in which, upon the authority of R. v. Abbott, the same law was laid down. See also R. v. Sanders [1919] 1 K. B. 550; 14 Cr. App. R. 9, citing with approval R. v. Kenrick, supra, and explaining R. v. Pywell, Stark. 402. In R. v. Meakin, 17 W. R. 683; 11 Cox, 270 (C. C. R.), where the defendant induced the prosecutor to lend him money on a bill of sale of furniture, and the joint and several promissory note of the defendant and another person, by representing that the furniture was unincumbered, whereas the defendant had previously given a bill of sale of the same furniture to another person, although not to its full value, this was held to be an indictable false pretence.

Quantity or weight.]—Where the defendant, having contracted to sell and deliver to the prosecutrix a load of coal at 7*d.* per cwt. delivered to her a load of coals which he knew weighed only 14 cwt., but which he stated to her contained 18 cwt., and produced a ticket, showing 18 cwt. to be the weight which he said he had himself made out when the coals were weighed; and she thereupon paid him the price as for 18 cwt., which was 2*s.* 4*d.* more than was really due; it was held that the defendant was indictable for obtaining the 2*s.* 4*d.* by false pretences. R. v. Sherwood, Dears. & B. 251; 26 L. J. (M. C.)

81; 7 Cox, 270. This decision was approved and followed in R. v. Lee, L. & C. 418; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 129; 9 Cox, 460; and cf. R. v. Ridgway, 3 F. & F. 838, Bramwell, B. So. where the prosecutor bought of the defendant and paid him for a quantity of coal on a false representation by him that there were 15 cwt., whereas in fact there were only 8 cwt., but so packed in the cart as to have the appearance of a larger quantity, this was held to be an indictable false pretence. R. v. Ragg, Bell. 214; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 86; 8 Cox, 262. See also R. v. Eagleton (post, p. 718).

Quality or value.]—A person who obtains from a pawnbroker, upon an article which he falsely represents to be silver, a greater advance than would otherwise have been made, is guilty of a false pretence within the statute; although the pawnbroker have the opportunity of testing the article at the time. R. v. Ball, 7. & Mar. 249: see R. v. Roebuck. Dears. & B. 24; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 101; Cox, 126: R. v. Goss, Bell. 208 (infra). And a false representation that a stamp on a watch is the hall-mark of the Goldsmiths' Company, and that the number 18, part thereof, indicates that it is made of eighteen carat gold, is a false pretence, and is not the less so because accompanied by the representation that the watch is a gold one, and some gold is proved to have been contained in its composition. R. v. Suter, 10 Cox, 577 (C. C. R.). But a false representation of what is mere matter of opinion, falling within the category of untrue praise in the course of a contract for sale, is not indictable. The defendant was convicted on an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, the pretences charged being that certain spoons were of the best quality, that they were equal to Elkington's A (meaning spoons made by Messrs. Elkington, and stamped by them with the letter A); that the foundations were of the best material, and that they had as much silver on them as Elkington's A. The representations were made to a pawnbroker for the purpose of obtaining, and the defendant did thereby obtain, advances of money on the spoons, which were in fact of inferior quality, and were of less value than the money advanced on them, and the pawnbroker stated that he was induced by the defendant's misrepresentations alone to advance the money, and that if he had known the real quality of the spoons he would have advanced no money on them. The jury found the defendant guilty of fraudulently and falsely representing that the spoons had as much silver on them as Elkington's A, and that the foundations were of the best material, etc., and that he thereby obtained the money. It was nevertheless held by a large majority of the judges, that the conviction could not be sustained. R. v. Bryan, Dears. & B. 265; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 84; Cox, 312. See also R. v. Levine, 10 Cox, 374. The decision in R. v. Bryan is said by Erle, C.J., to have gone "upon the sound principle, that indefinite praise upon a matter of indefinite opinion cannot be made the ground of an indictment for false pretences"; R. v. Goss, 29 L. J. (M. C.) 86, 90 (infra); and by Byles, J., to have been governed by the maxim simplex commendatio non obligat. R. v. Ardley, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 301, 306; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 88; 12 Cox, 23: cf. R. v. Lee, 8 Cox, 233: R. v. Williamson, 11 Cox, 328 (ante,

p. 699).. But a false representation respecting an alleged matter of definite fact knowingly made, is a false pretence within the statute, and that, too, although the representation is merely as to the quality of goods sold or pledged. Therefore, where the defendant induced the prosecutor to purchase a chain from him by fraudulently representing that it was fifteen carat gold, when, in fact, it was only of a quality a trifle better than six carats, knowing at the time that he was falsely representing the quality of the chain as fifteen carat gold, it was held that the statement that the chain was fifteen carat gold, not being mere exaggerated praise, nor relating to a mere matter of opinion, but a statement as to a specific fact within the defendant's knowledge, was a sufficient false pretence to sustain an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences. R. v. Ardley, supra. And where the defendant induced a purchaser to buy and pay for a cheese of a very inferior description by the wilfully false statement that a taster of a different and superior cheese produced as a sample had formed part of and been taken out of the cheese sold, it was held that he might be convicted of obtaining money by false pretences. R. v. Goss, 208; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 86; 8 Cox, 262. So, where the defendant sold spurious blacking as " Everett's Blacking," he was held to be indictable for the false pretences. R. v. Dundas, 6 Cox, 380, Erle, J., Where the defendant falsely represented to the prosecutrix that certain packages which he sold to her contained good tea, whereas, in fact, each package contained a mixture of which only one-fourth part was tea, the remaining three-fourths consisting of sand and other articles unfit for food or drink, and the jury found that the defendant knew of the real nature of the contents of the packages, that it was not tea, but a mixture of articles unfit for drink, and that he designedly falsely pretended that it was good tea with intent to defraud, and the defendant was convicted, it was held that the conviction was right. R. v. Foster, 2 Q. B. D. 301; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 128; 13 Cox, 393. In R. v. Spiro, 64 J. P. 794, Darling, J., the prisoner was convicted of obtaining money by false pretences where he had held an auction and had induced persons to hand up sovereigns to him by a representation that they would get them back and also watches offered by him for sale.

Selling goods in wrappers which are a colourable imitation of those of another firm would, it seems, be a false pretence (R. v. Smith, Dears. & B. 566; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 225; 8 Cox, 32); but certainly falls within the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 28).

As to false representations of the soundness of a horse, see R. v. Keighley, Dears. & B. 145; 7 Cox, 217.

The defendant and two other persons entered into articles of partnership, by the terms of which the profits were to be divided equally among them. By a subsequent verbal arrangement the defendant was to act as agent for the sale of the partnership goods, and was to receive a commission on all orders obtained by him, which commission was to be paid out of the partnership funds before any division of profits was made. The defendant, by falsely pretending that he had obtained some orders, got his partner to pay him a sum for commission. It was held that he was not indictable for false pretences, as his charges were payable out of the partnership funds, and his false statement was a misrepresentation concerning a partnership matter, and would have to be investigated, and the sum paid duly considered, in taking the partnership accounts, in order to ascertain the profits. R. v. Evans, L. & C. 252; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 38; 9 Cox, 238.

Form of pretence.]—When the false pretences are by letter the prosecutor may be asked his opinion as to its meaning, and as to his belief when he received it with respect to the truth of the statements contained in it: but the proper inferences to be drawn from the letter are for the jury: R. v. King [1897] 1 Q. B. 214; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 87; 18 Cox, 447; and not for the judge. R. v. Rosenson, 12 Cr. App. R. 235. It is not necessary that the pretence should be by words; the conduct and acts of the party will be sufficient, without any verbal or written representation: R. v. Barnard, 7 C. & P. 784; 62 & 63 Vict. c. 22, s. 3 (ante, p. 695): R. v. Hunter, R. v. Carter, 10 Cox, 642 (C. C. R.): R. v. Giles, L. & C. 502: 34 L. J. (M. C.) 50; 10 Cox, 44: R. v. Cooper, 2 Q. B. D. 510 (post, p. 705). Thus, if a person obtains goods from another upon giving him in payment his cheque upon a banker, with whom in fact he has no account, this (although not indictable as a fraud at common law, R. v. Lara, 6 T. R. 565 (post, p. 720): see R. v. Flint, R. & R. 460) is a false pretence within the meaning of the Larceny Act. R. v. Jackson, 3 Camp. 370: cf. R. v. Martin, 5 Q. B. D. 34; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 11; 14 Cox, 375: R. v. Garratt, 10 Times L. R. 167 (C. C. R.). But if the defendant, at the time he gives the cheque, believes, although he has no account at the banker's, that the cheque will be paid on presentation, he cannot be convicted of a false pretence. R. v. Walne, 11 Cox, 647 (C. C. R.). Thus, where the defendant bought a mare, and paid for her on Thursday by a cheque drawn on a banker with whom he had no account, but told the prosecutor not to present the cheque until Saturday, to which the prosecutor assented, but nevertheless did present it on Thursday, when it was dishonoured, and it appeared from the evidence that the defendant was on Thursday in daily expectation of having money paid to him which would have enabled him to place the banker in funds to meet the cheque on Saturday, this was held not to be criminal because the accused had no intent to defraud. Id. But a man who makes and gives a cheque for the amount of goods purchased in a ready-money transaction, makes a representation that the cheque is a good and valid order for the amount inserted in it: and if such person has only a colourable account at the bank on which the cheque is drawn without available assets to meet it, and has no authority to overdraw, and knows that the cheque will be dishonoured on presentation, and intends to defraud, he may be convicted of obtaining such goods by such false pretence. R. v. Hazleton, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 134; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 11: 13 Cox, 1. Where the prisoner was charged with falsely pretending that a post-dated cheque, drawn by himself, was a good and genuine order for 25*l.*, and of the value of 25*l.*, whereby he obtained a watch and chain; and the jury found that, before the completion of the sale and delivery of the watch by the prosecutor to the prisoner he represented to the prosecutor that he had an account with the bankers on whom the cheque was drawn, and that he had a right to draw the cheque, though he postponed the date for his own convenience.

all which was false; and that he represented that the cheque would be paid on or after the day of the date, but that he had no reasonable ground to believe that it would be paid, and that he had no funds to pay it; he was held to be properly convicted. R. v. Parker, 2 Mood. 1; 7 C. & P. 825. Where the defendant obtained goods in exchange for a cheque on a bank at which he falsely represented that he had an account, though he knew that the account was closed, and the cheque would not be honoured, it was held that he obtained the goods and not merely credit by false pretences. R. v. Cosnett, 20 Cox, 6; 65 J. P. 472 (C. C. R.). But where the indictment stated that the defendant falsely pretended to A. B. that he was a captain in the East India Company's service, and that a certain promissory note, which he then produced and delivered to A. B., was a valuable security for 21*l.*, by means of which false pretences he fraudulently obtained from A. B. 8*l.* 15*s.*; whereas the defendant was not a captain, etc., and the note was not a valuable security, etc., it was held (in error) that as it did not appear but that the note was the defendant's own promissory note, or that he knew it to be worthless, the falsification was not sufficient; and, as the two pretences were to be taken together, that the conviction was bad. R. v. Wickham, 10 A. & E. 34 (a). See also R. v. Philpotts, 1 C. & K. 112. Where the prisoner passed the note of a country bank, which he knew had stopped payment, it appearing that one of the partners was solvent, Gaselee, J., held that he could not be convicted for obtaining money under false pretences. R. v. Spencer, 3 C. & P. 420. It would seem, however, that an indictment which charged that the defendant obtained money by falsely pretending that a certain piece of paper was a bank note then current, and of the value for which it purported to be made, would be supported by evidence that it was the note of a bank which had stopped payment, and was no longer in existence, and that it had paid only a small dividend, and that these facts were known to the defendant. R. v. Evans, Bell, 187; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 20; 8 Cox, 257. But in that case an allegation that the note was of no value whatever was held not to be supported by the above evidence. Cf. R. v. Williams, 7 Cox, 351, Martin, B., where the indictment was for passing in 1857 as good a note of a bank which as the prisoner knew had in 1857 stopped payment; and R. v. Flint, R. & R. 460. Where an indictment charged the defendant with obtaining money, by falsely pretending that a piece of paper was a bank note then current and of the full value of 5*l.*, and the evidence was that the piece of paper was the note of a bank which had stopped payment forty years before, and had not been reopened, and that the defendant knew it, this evidence was held sufficient to justify a conviction, although it appeared from the cross-examination of a witness for the prosecution, that the bank had been made bankrupt, and the bankruptcy proceedings were not produced, and there was no evidence as to what dividend, if any, had been paid. R. v. Dowey, 37 L. J. (M. C.) 52; 11 Cox, 115: cf. R. v. Smith, 6 Cox, 314. Under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12 (ante, p. 213), the prisoner can now be convicted of misdemeanor in cases where the facts given in evidence amount in law to a felony : e.g. to forgery, as in R. v. Evans, 5 C. & P. 553 : cf. R. v. Anderson, 2 M. & Rob. 469. And where the cashier of a bank, who had a general authority to conduct the business of the bank, and to part with its property on the presentation of a genuine order from a customer, was deceived by a forged order, and parted with the property of the bank to the person who presented the order, and who knew the order to be forged, it was held that the latter was guilty of obtaining by false pretences the money so paid on the order. R. v. Prince, 38 L. J. (M. C.) 8; L. R. 1 C. C. R. 150. Fraudulently offering a "flash note" in payment under the pretence that it is a bank note, is a false pretence within the statute. R. v. Coulson, 1 Den. 592; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 182; 4 Cox, 227. A person who fraudulently obtains goods by forwarding to the vendor the half of a bank note, having previously parted with the corresponding half to a third person, is guilty of obtaining goods by false pretences, as by forwarding the half-note he represents that he has the corresponding half ready for the vendor's satisfaction. R. v. Murphy, Ir. Rep., 10 C. L. 508; 13 Cox, 298 (C. C. R. Ir.) : cf. R. v. Freeth, R. & R. 127. So, where a person at Oxford, who was not a member of the university, went, for the purpose of fraud, wearing a commoner's gown and cap, and obtained goods, this was held a sufficient false pretence to satisfy the statute, though nothing passed in words. R. v. Barnard, 7 C. & P. 784. So, where the prisoner, who had previously pledged ingots of silver with the prosecutor, brought bars of worthless metal similar in appearance, and laid them down, saying, "Eight ounces each at 4*s.* an ounce," the same as before. R. v. Stevens, 1 Cox, 83.

Ordering a meal at a restaurant without the means to pay may not amount to a false pretence within 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 32 (1) (ante, p. 691), but amounts to fraud other than false pretences within s. 13 (1) of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62). R. v. Jones [1898] 1 Q. B. 119; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 41; 19 Cox, 87.

Indeed, it may be laid down generally that, as it is not necessary that the statement of the existing facts should be in words, but it may be conveyed by the conduct and acts of the party (ante, p. 695), so also if made by words or writing it is not necessary that such statement should be made expressly, if the statement may be naturally and reasonably, although not necessarily, inferred from such words or writing, and the defendant intended the prosecutor to put upon them a construction supporting the pretences charged in the indictment. R. v. Cooper, 2 Q. B. D. 510; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 219; 13 Cox, 617 : R. v. King [1897] 1 Q. B. 214; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 87; 18 Cox, 447. Thus, where C. was convicted of obtaining potatoes from the prosecutor by falsely pretending that he was then in a large way of business, that he was in a position to do a good trade in potatoes, and that he was able to pay for large quantities of potatoes as and when the same might be delivered to him, and the evidence that C. had so pretended was the following letter written by him to the prosecutor :—"Send me one truck of regents and one truck of rocks, as samples, at your prices named in your letter; let them be good quality, then I am sure a good trade will be done for both of us. I will remit you cash on arrival of goods and invoice. I may say if you use me well I shall be a good customer," it was held, affirming the conviction, that the words of the letter were fairly and reasonably capable of a construction supporting the pretences charged, and that it was a question for the jury whether the writer intended the prosecutor to put that construction upon them. R. v. Cooper, ante, p. 705. So, where the defendant was convicted of obtaining money from the prosecutor by falsely pretending that there was a person named A. Brient, living at Holt, Trowbridge, in the county of Wilts, who was a minister of religion, and that the said A. Brient had instituted a "bonâ fide competition for the production of the greatest number of words from the word 'Barnardo,' and that the said A. Brient had made arrangements to present prizes to the successful competitors, of the respective values of two pounds, one pound, and ten shillings, and had further arranged to give the proceeds derived from the entrance fees of competitors after deducting the said prizes, to a charitable institution known as Dr. Barnardo's Home for Destitute Children,—and the evidence that the defendant had so pretended was that he had inserted the following advertisement in a newspaper:—'Barnardo. 2*l.*, 1*l.*, 10*s.* for most words from Barnardo. Proceeds to go to Dr. Barnardo's Home for Destitute Children. Alphabetical lists, with 1*s.* 3*d.* to Revd. A. Brient, Holt, Trowbridge, Wilts,'" it was held, affirming the conviction, that the words in the advertisement were reasonably capable of the construction put upon them in the indictment and that it was a question for the jury whether the defendant intended the prosecutor to put that construction upon them. R. v. Randell, 16 Cox, 335 (C. C. R.). See also R. v. Rosenson, 12 Cr. App. R. 235.

Obtaining as a loan (see post, p. 707), from the drawer of a bill accepted by the prisoner and negotiated by the drawer, part of the amount, for the purpose of paying the bill, under the false pretence that the prisoner was prepared with the residue of the amount, was held to be an offence within the statute, the prisoner being shown not to be prepared, and not intending so to apply the money. R. v. Crossley, 2 M. & Rob. 17, Patteson, J. In like manner, where the defendant obtained goods by a false statement that a bill drawn on and accepted by himself, and purporting to be payable at the London and Westminster Bank, which he gave the prosecutor for the price of the goods, would be paid at the bank the next day, and that he had made arrangements for it, this was held a false pretence within the Act. R. v. Hughes, 1 F. & F. 355.

"Prepared to pay"—Intention.]—"A promise as to future conduct not intended to be kept is not by itself a false pretence." (62 & 63 Vict. c. 22, s. 3, ante, p. 695; 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1551). On the special facts of R. v. Gordon, 23 Q. B. D. 354; 58 L. J. (M. C.) 117 (post, p. 719), an averment that the prisoner falsely pretended that he was "prepared to pay" money to the prosecutor was held to be a sufficient statement of an existing fact: cf. R. v. Bates, 3 Cox, 201, where the pretences that the prisoner "then had the means of paying," and "was able and willing to pay" were held sufficient by Platt, B. "There must be a misstatement of an existing fact; but the state of a man's mind is as much a fact as the state of his digestion," Edgington v. Fitzmaurice, 29 Ch. D. 459, 483; 55 L. J. (Ch.) 650, Bowen, L.J. The Court in R. v. Gordon (supra), however, specially refrained from deciding the question there raised by Wills, J., whether a statement of present intention is a sufficient representation of an existing fact, and semble, that it might be unsafe to base an indictment under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 32 (1), upon such a statement alone. Cf. R. v. Johnson, 2 Mood. 254.

A false pretence actually made to A. in B.'s hearing, whereby money is obtained from B., may be laid as made to B. R. v. Dent, 1 C. & K. 249, Rolfe, B. And where the indictment alleged the false pretence to have been made to B. and others, and it was proved that B. was one of a firm, and that the false pretence was made to him alone, but with intent to defraud the firm, it was held sufficient, the words "and others" being rejected as surplusage. R. v. Kealey, 2 Den. 68; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 57; 5 Cox, 193. The jury may connect together representations made in several distinct conversations (if from their nature they can be connected), and convict the defendant for obtaining money, etc., by means of false pretences made in those several conversations. R. v. Welman, Dears. 188; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 118; 6 Cox, 153. A false pretence made through an innocent agent is the same as if made by the defendant himself, and may be so charged. R. v. Butcher, Bell, 6; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 14; 8 Cox, 77. K. represented to B. that he had a quantity of good tobacco, and induced B. to agree to buy some. P. was with K. at the time, and it was arranged that P. was to deliver the tobacco to B., and that B. was to pay P. for K. P. afterwards delivered to B. two bales purporting to be tobacco, as if in pursuance of the contract, and received payment from B. The bales contained little else but rubbish; K. and P. were parties to the fraud. It was held on these facts that K. was liable to be convicted on an indictment charging him with obtaining money from B. by falsely pretending that he was possessed of a quantity of good tobacco. R. v. Kerrigan, L. & C. 383; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 71; 9 Cox, 441.

It is not necessary to allege that the money, etc., obtained was the property of the person whom it was intended to defraud (see 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, r. 6, ante, p. 47), nor to allege that the pretence was made with intent to obtain the money, etc.; it is sufficient to show that the pretence was made, that the money, etc., was obtained thereby, with intent to defraud, and that the pretence was false to the knowledge of the defendant. Hamilton v. R., 9 Q. B. 271; 16 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 9. It is still, however, necessary to allege in the indictment and to prove that the defendant obtained the money, etc., "with intent to defraud," and if those words are omitted the indictment is bad, and could not be amended under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 (rep.), by inserting them. R. v. James, 12 Cox, 127, Lush, J. Such an indictment might now be amended under 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, s. 5 (1); sed quære. See ante, p. 54.

Loans.]—The offence is completed by the obtaining of the money, etc., and it is no defence, where the indictment charges the obtaining of money, that the money had been obtained only by way of a loan, and that the defendant intends to repay it; R. v. Crossley, 2 M. & Rob., 17; because the property in money that is lent passes as much in a case of loan as on a sale, there being no expectation that the same money which is lent will be returned. See R. v. Burgon, 25 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 105; Dears. & B. 11, 20, Crompton, J. Where,

It is not necessary to allege that the money, etc., obtained was the property of the person whom it was intended to defraud (see 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, r. 6, ante, p. 47), nor to allege that the pretence was made with intent to obtain the money, etc.; it is sufficient to show that the pretence was made, that the money, etc., was obtained thereby, with intent to defraud, and that the pretence was false to the knowledge of the defendant. Hamilton v. R., 9 Q. charged; proof of part of the pretence and that the money was obtained by such part, is sufficient. R. v. Hill, R. & R. 190: R. v. Lince, 12 Cox, 451 (C. C. R.). It is sufficient if the actual substantial pretence which was the main inducement to part with the money, etc., is alleged in the indictment and proved, although it may be shown by the evidence that other matters not laid in the indictment in some measure operated as an inducement upon the prosecutor's mind. R. v. Hewgill, Dears. 315: R. v. English, 12 Cox, 171, Cockburn, J.: R. v. Lince, 12 Cox, 451 (C. C. R.). Where, however, two false pretences are laid as together conducing to the fraud, and the jury find a general verdict of guilty, and it afterwards appears that one of them is not a sufficient false pretence within the statute, it would seem that a conviction cannot be sustained. See R. v. Wickham (ante, p. 704.) If the false pretence is in writing, it may be proved by secondary evidence, if the paper is lost before the trial. R. v. Chadwick, 6 C. & P. 181. The opinion formed by the prosecutor as to the position or occupation of the prisoner upon the receipt of a letter from the prisoner respecting the goods the subject of the indictment (such letter being put into the prosecutor's hands at the trial) is admissible in evidence. R. v. King [1897] 1 Q. B. 214; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 87 (ante, p. 703).

He must next prove that the goods, etc., stated in the indictment, or some part of them (for the rule in this respect is the same as in larceny: see ante, p. 541), were obtained from him by means of the pretences alleged. Proof that money was actually paid to the defendant by the wife of A. B. in her husband's absence, but by his authority, in consequence of false pretences made by the defendant to A. B., is sufficient to support an indictment charging the defendant with obtaining money by false pretences from A. B. R. v. Moseley, L. & C. 92; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 24; 9 Cox, 16 (C. C. R.). Where a false pretence was made to the secretary of a friendly society, and the secretary accompanied the prisoner to the treasurer, who paid over the money, it was held that the treasurer was merely a mechanical medium, and that the false pretence to and obtaining from the secretary was proved. R. v. Rouse, 4 Cox, 7, Erle, J.: cf. R. v. Taylor, 65 J. P. 547 (C. C. R.). The words in the statute are "any chattel, money, or valuable security."

Intent to defraud.]—This is an essential ingredient of the offence, though in many cases it may be inferred from the facts of the case. R. v. Ferguson, 9 Cr. App. R. 113. Where money is obtained by pretences that are false, primâ facie there is an intent to defraud. R. v. Hammerson, 10 Cr. App. R. 121. And use of false statements or documents to obtain the money, though the money might have been obtained without them, is evidence from which there may be inferred an intent to defraud. R. v. Hopley, 11 Cr. App. R. 248. But unless the intent is clear from the facts, the jury should be directed on the point, and told that an important element in the case is an intent to defraud. R. v. Ferguson, supra; though it is not essential in a clear case. R. v. Carr, 12 Cr. App. R. 140. Where A. owed B. a debt, of which he could not get payment, and C., B.'s servant, went to A.'s wife, and obtained from her two sacks of malt, saying that B. had bought them of A., and C. knew this to be false, but took the malt to B., his master, to enable him to pay himself the debt, it was ruled that C. could not be convicted of obtaining the malt by false pretences. R. v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 354, Coleridge, J. The fact that the defendant at the time he obtained goods by false pretences intended to pay for them when it should be in his power to do so affords no defence to an indictment for obtaining such goods by false pretences. R. v. Naylor, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 4; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 61; 10 Cox, 149. If a man makes statements of fact which he knows to be untrue, and makes them for the purpose of inducing persons to deposit with him money which he knows they would not deposit but for their belief in the truth of his statements, and if he intends to use the money thus obtained for purposes different from those for which he knows the depositors understand from his statements that he intends to use it—then, although he may intend to repay the money if he can, and although he may honestly believe, and may even have good reason to believe, that he will be able to repay it, he has an intent to defraud. R. v. Carpenter, 22 Cox, 618; 76 J. P. 158, Channell, J.: and see R. v. Bennett, 23 Cox, 560; 9 Cr. App. R. 146, approving the definition of Buckley, J., in In re London & Globe Finance Corporation, Ltd. [1903] 1 Ch. 728; 72 L. The position of a banker differs from that of an ordinary trader. The ordinary trader by the mere fact that his premises are open and that his business is being carried on does not represent that he is solvent; but in the case of a banker the mere fact of his keeping his doors open for business and carrying on business may afford some evidence from which a jury may find that he impliedly represents that he is solvent. R. v. Parker and Bulteel, 25 Cox, 145, Avory, J.

As to the effect of a verdict of guilty, to which the jury add that there is not sufficient evidence of an intent to defraud, and therefore recommend the prisoner to mercy, see R. v. Gray, 17 Cox, 299 (C. C. R.) (ante, p. 219). And see R. v. Petch, 2 Cr. App. R. 71; 25 T. L. R. 401.

As to where evidence of other obtainings is admissible in order to prove guilty knowledge, see post, p. 716.

It is sufficient to show that the pretence was made, that the money, etc., was obtained thereby, with intent to defraud, and that the pretence was false to the knowledge of the defendant. Hamilton v. R., 9 Q. B. 271; 16 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 9: R. v. Dutt, 8 Cr. App. R. 51.

Falsity.]—Lastly, it must be proved that the pretences made use of were false in fact: or, in other words, the averments negativing the pretences must be proved. But it does not seem to be essential that they should all be proved; if so many of them as show the falsity of the substance of the pretence are proved, it would seem to be sufficient. Thus, under the precedent (ante, p. 693), if it were to appear in evidence that the defendant was really the servant of J. S., yet if it were also to appear that he had no directions from him to get the cloth in question, and that, after he had obtained it, he converted it to his own use, it would be sufficient. Nor is it necessary that the falsity of the pretences should be shown by direct evidence. Thus, where the pretences charged were, that the defendant had a carriage and pair, and expected it down in a few days, and that he had large property abroad, and there was no direct evidence to show that he had no carriage or no property abroad, but it was proved that three days before he made the pretence he was in another place assuming to be a man of position and wealth, but was in a destitute condition and unable to pay his hotel and other bills, this was held to be evidence from which the jury might well infer that the pretences were false. R. v. Howarth, 11 Cox, 588 (C. C. R.). Where the defendant, the agent of a life assurance company, had received from the prosecutor a premium for the renewal of a life policy for the year 1883, but had not paid over such premium to the company, and had represented to them that it had not been paid by the prosecutor, in consequence of which the company had treated the policy as lapsed, and the defendant afterwards represented to the prosecutor that the policy was still in existence, and so induced him to pay to him the premium for its renewal for the year 1884, it was held that he was guilty of obtaining such last-mentioned premium by false pretences. R. v. Powell, 54 L. J. (M. C.) 26; 15 Cox, 568. Where the defendants were charged with obtaining money by colour and pretence of their being collectors of the property-tax, and it appeared in evidence that they had in fact been appointed collectors by the commissioners, though in an informal manner; the pretence was held not to be false within the meaning of the Act. R. v. Dobson, 7 East, 218. Upon an indictment for obtaining money by a false pretence made by the defendant that he was an attorney, it is not necessary to prove the negative in any other way than by the production of the Law List in which the defendant's name does not appear. R. v. Wenham, 10 Cox, 222 (ante, p. 416).

Chattel.]—A railway ticket which enabled the defendant to travel free by the railway from B. to H., and was to be given back to the railway company at H., was held to be a "chattel" within this section. R. v. Boulton, 1 Den. 508; 2 C. & K. 917; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 67. This case seems to conflict with R. v. Kilham (ante, p. 708), as the defendant did not intend, nor was it necessary for his purpose to intend, wholly to deprive the railway company of their property in the ticket; but it is distinguishable from R. v. Kilham, in this respect, that the defendant by using the ticket for the purpose of travelling on the railway entirely converted it to his own use, for the only purpose for which it was capable of being applied. See the judgment in R. v. Kilham (supra). R. v. Boulton (supra) was approved and followed in R. v. Chapman, 4 Cr. App. R. 276. A dog, not being the subject of larceny at common law, is not a chattel within this Act. R. v. Robinson, Bell, 34 (ante, p. 550).

Valuable security.]—The defendant, who was the secretary to a burial society, had, by the false pretence of a death, obtained from the president of the society an order on the treasurer in the following form :—"B. United Burial Society, No. 23. Bolton, Sept. 1, 1853. Mr. A. E., treasurer :—Please to pay the bearer 2*l.* 10*s.*, Greenhalgh, and charge the same to the above society, R. L., president" : this was held to be a "valuable security" within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 53 (rep.), as explained by s. 5 of that Act (see now 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 46 (1), ante, p. 508). R. v. Greenhalgh, Dears. 267; 6 Cox, 257 (C. C. R.).

Where, in order to induce his bankers to pay his cheques, a defendant drew a bill on a person on whom he had no right to draw, and which had no chance of being paid, in consequence of which the bankers paid money for him, it was held not to be within the Act, because he only obtained credit, not any specific sum on the bill. R. v. Wavell, 1 Mood. 224. See R. v. Crosby, 1 Cox, 10: R. v. Garrett, Dears. 232; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 20; 6 Cox, 260. This, however, would seem to come under s. 13, sub-s. 1 of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), which is expressly aimed at the obtaining of credit under false pretences, or by other fraud. (See post, p. 714).

Conviction for attempt where prosecutor not deceived.]—It is not an essential element in the offence of attempting to obtain goods by false pretences that the mind of the prosecutor shall have been affected by the false pretences. R. v. Light, 84 L. J. (K. B.) 865; 112 L. T. 1144; 24 Cox, 718; 31 T. L. R. 257; 11 Cr. App. R. 111. Where the defendant offered a chain in pledge to a pawnbroker, which he falsely stated to be silver, but the pawnbroker stated that he advanced money on it, not in consequence of the defendant's statement, but in reliance on its withstanding a test which he himself applied to it, it was held that the defendant could not be convicted of obtaining the money by means of the false pretence, but that he was properly convicted of attempting to obtain money by false pretences. R. v. Roebuck, Dears. & B. 24; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 101; 7 Cox, 126. So, also, wherever the prosecutor himself knows the falsehood of the pretence, but parts with his money or goods notwithstanding, the defendant cannot be convicted of obtaining by false pretences. R. v. Mills, Dears. & B. 205; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 79; 7 Cox, 263. In R. v. Ady, 7 C. & P. 140, the head note is to the effect that "if the defendant obtained the money by a false pretence, knowing it to be false, it is no answer to show that the party from whom he obtained it laid a plan to entrap him into the commission of the offence." In R. v. Mills, R. v. Ady was cited, and it was pointed out that Patteson, J., left to the jury the question whether the prosecutor parted with his money in belief in the pretence. And a defendant in such a case as R. v. Ady may be convicted of attempting to obtain by false pretences, even where the indictment charges him with obtaining; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (ante, p. 215: R. v. Roebuck, supra); or he may, under such a state of facts, be indicted for the attempt simply. R. v. Hensler, 11 Cox, 570 (C. C. R.). But the fact of the prosecutor having the means of such knowledge will not of itself excuse the defendant from being convicted of obtaining by false pretences; for example, where the defendant falsely represented a 1*l.* Irish bank note to be a 5*l.* note, and thereby obtained the full value of a 5*l.* note: though the prosecutor could read, and the note on the face of it furnished obvious means of detecting the fraud, the defendant was held to be properly convicted. R. v. Jessop, Dears. & B. 442; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 70; 7 Cox, 399. Where the defendant was indicted for conspiring with others to obtain money by false pretences, it was held to be no bar to his conviction that the prosecutor had the intention of cheating the defendant if he could. R. v. Hudson, Bell, 263; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 145; 8 Cox, 305.

Obtaining board and lodging.]—Where the prisoner was received as a lodger into a house without making any false pretence, but afterwards falsely stated to his landlady that he had come directly from the house of a person whom she knew, and that he had left clothes there, and at the time of making this statement requested to be provided with board as well as lodging, and the landlady knowing the person to whom the prisoner referred, and believing his statement that he had come from that person's house and had clothes there, supplied him with meat and drink as a boarder, it was held that on these facts he was rightly convicted of obtaining goods—the meat and drink supplied to him as board—by false pretences. R. v. Burton, 16 Cox, 62 (C. C. R.). The defendant, by falsely pretending that he was a naval officer, induced the prosecutrix to enter into a contract with him to board and lodge him at a guinea a week, under which contract he was lodged and supplied with various articles of food. It was held that a conviction for obtaining the articles of food by false pretences could not be supported, for that the obtaining of the food was too remotely the result of the false pretence. R. v. Gardner, Dears. & B. 40; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 100; 7 Cox, 136 (C. C. R.): R. v. Bryan, 2 F. & F. 567. See, however, the comments on R. v. Gardner and R. v. Bryan, in R. v. Martin, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 56; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 20, followed in R. v. Moreton, 109 L. T. 416; 23 Cox, 560; 8 Cr. App R. 214. These cases can now be dealt with as obtaining credit by means of fraud within s. 13 of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62). See R. v. Jones [1898] 1 Q. B. 119; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 41; 19 Cox, 87, where the defendant went to a restaurant and ordered and ate a meal knowing that he could not pay for it. See also R. v. Wyatt [1904] 1 K. B. 188; 73 L. J. (K. B.) 15 : and ante, p. 361.

Continuing false pretence.]—In R. v. Martin, supra, it was held, that in order to support an indictment for obtaining a chattel by false pretences, it is not necessary that the chattel should have been in existence when the false pretence was made, but that the obtaining is within the statute, if the pretence is a continuing one, so that the chattel is made and delivered in pursuance of the pretence, and that the question whether the pretence is or is not a continuing one, is one of fact for the jury. This case was approved and followed in R. v. Moreton, 23 Cox, 560; 109 L. T. 416; 8 Cr. App. R. 214. Another instance of a continuing false pretence is where the defendant by a false pretence obtained a cheque from the prosecutor, which the banker upon whom it was drawn refused to pay, owing to there being a material omission in the body of it. The defendant thereupon returned the cheque to the prosecutor, who immediately tore it up, drew another for the same amount, and gave it to the defendant, who got it cashed and appropriated the money to his own use. It was held that the false pretence which induced the prosecutor to give the first cheque continued in force, and induced him to give the second cheque, and that therefore the money which the defendant obtained by getting it cashed was obtained by him by false pretences. R. v. Greathead, 14 Cox, 108 (C. C. R.).

On an indictment for attempting to obtain property by false pretences, it was proved that entries for two handicap races in athletic sports were sent to the secretary of the sports in the name of S., containing statements as to the last four races in which S. had run. The prisoner personated S. at the sports and came first in both races. The entries sent in were not in the writing either of S. or the prisoner. After the first race the prisoner was asked whether he was S., and whether the performances specified in the entry were really prisoner's. He answered both questions falsely in the affirmative. Held that the attempt to obtain the prizes was not too remote from the pretence, and that the prisoner was rightly convicted. R. v. Button [1900] 2 Q. B. 597; 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 901; 19 Cox, 568, disapproving R. v. Larner, 14 Cox, 497; and following R. v. Dickenson, 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1551 : Roscoe, Cr. Ev. (13th ed.), 408. Where the defendant, by false and fraudulent representations as to the value and profits of his business, induced the prosecutor to enter into partnership with him, and to advance 500*l.* as part of the capital of the concern, and the prosecutor, after such advance, recognized and acted in the partnership; it was held that this was not obtaining money by false pretences within the meaning of the statute, for the prosecutor, as partner, continued to be interested in the money. R. v. Watson, Dears. & B. 348; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 18; 7 Cox, 364. Parol evidence may be given of the false pretences laid in the indictment, though a deed between the parties, stating a different consideration for parting with the money, be put in evidence for the prosecution; such deed having been made for the purpose of the fraud. R. v. Adamson, 2 Mood. 286; 1 C. & K. 192.

Conviction for false pretences where offence is larceny.]—The distinction between larceny and obtaining by false pretences is often obscure and difficult to ascertain (ante, p. 525). Formerly, if the evidence proved not only an intent to cheat or defraud, but also established a pre-existing animus furandi, and a constructive taking, such as to constitute larceny, the misdemeanor being merged in the felony, the defendant was entitled to his acquittal. R. v. Pear, 2 East, P. C. 685; 1 Leach, 212. But under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 44 (4) (ante, p. 506), the defendant may be convicted upon an indictment for false pretences, although it appear at the trial the offence amounts to larceny, and not merely to obtaining money, etc., by false pretences. And by s. 44 (3) (ante, p. 506) the defendant upon an indictment for larceny may be convicted of false pretences, where the evidence establishes the latter offence. These two offences are especially difficult to distinguish, in cases where there has been a constructive taking. R. v. Essex, Dears. & B. 371; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 20; 7 Cox, 384. R. v. Solomons, 17 Cox, 93 (ante, p. 520); but the difficulties arising from this circumstance appear to be obviated by the above-mentioned statutory provisions. It is not, however, sufficient under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 44 (4) to prove any larceny. The true meaning of the provision is, that if the misdemeanor is proved as it is laid in the indictment, the defendant is not to be acquitted of the misdemeanor simply because the case amounts to larceny. R. v. Bulmer, L. & C. 476; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 171; 9 Cox, 492. Where the indictment averred an obtaining of a particular sum of money, with intent to defraud the prosecutor of the same, and it appeared that the intent was to defraud him of a part only of that sum, the rest being really due, it was held that the prisoner might nevertheless be convicted. R. v. Leonard, 1 Den. 304; 2 C. & K. 514; 3 Cox, 284. Where goods are obtained on a contract induced by the false pretences of the prisoner that he is another person, it would seem that the contract is null (Cundy v. Lindsay, 3 App. Cas. 459; 47 L. J. (Q. B.) 581), and that the offence might be treated as larceny by a trick, see R. v. George, 65 J. P. 729. It is only necessary to allege in the indictment, and to prove, an intent to defraud generally, without alleging or proving an intent to defraud any particular person. 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, r. 10 (ante, p. 52); 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 40 (1) (ante, p. 502).

Guilty knowledge—Evidence of other obtainings.]—On an indictment for attempting to obtain money by falsely pretending that a ring was composed of diamonds, which in fact was composed of crystals, evidence is admissible of a false pretence by the defendant on a prior occasion to another person that a chain was gold, whereas it was plated, and on another distinct occasion that a ring was of diamonds, which it was not, on the ground that these previous transactions are evidence of the guilty knowledge of the prisoner at the time he made the false pretence charged in the indictment. R. v. Francis, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 128; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 97; 12 Cox, 612. And where the prisoner was indicted for obtaining eggs by false pretences, he having falsely represented by advertisements in newspapers that he was carrying on a bonâ fide dairyman's business, whereas in truth and in fact the business was a "bogus" one, evidence that on occasions subsequent to the transactions the subject of the charge he had obtained eggs from other persons by means of similar advertisements was held admissible. R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 83; 19 Cox, 182, where R. v. Holt, Bell. 280; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 11; 8 Cox, 411, is distinguished. See the remarks on R. v. Holt, made by Blackburn, J., in R. v. Francis, and the general rules as to admission of such evidence (ante, pp. 355, 361). In R. v. Fisher [1910] 1 K. B. 149; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 187; 22 Cox, 270; 102 L. T. 111; 74 J. P. 104; 26 T. L. R. 122, the law was stated as follows: "The falsity of [particular] statements is not proved by giving evidence that in other cases the prisoner made other false statements, though it does tend to show that the prisoner was a swindler. But there is no rule of law that swindling is as regards proof different from any other offence, and if a man is charged with swindling in a particular manner his guilt cannot be proved by showing that he has also swindled in some other manner." This direction was approved and followed in R. v. Ellis [1910] 2 K. B. 746; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 841; 22 Cox, 330; 102 L. T. 922; 74 J. P. 388; 26 T. L. R. 535.

The prisoner, having been acquitted on an indictment charging him with obtaining from A. a cheque by falsely pretending that another cheque which he then gave to A. was a good and valid order for the payment of money, was tried on a second indictment charging him with obtaining money from B. and C. by similar false pretences as to three other cheques: it was held that the evidence of A. which had been given on the first indictment, upon which the prisoner had been tried and acquitted, was admissible upon the trial of the second indictment. R. v. Ollis [1900] 2 Q. B. 758; 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 918; 19 Cox, 555. "The evidence was relevant as showing a course of conduct on the part of the accused, and a belief on his part that the cheques would not be met," Id per Russell, C.J. It "tended to show that the conduct of the prisoner was not inadvertent or accidental, but was part of a systematic fraud:" Id. per Wright, J. On the same principle, where the prisoner was charged with obtaining credit by fraud under s. 13 (1) of the Debtors Act, 1869, in respect of food and lodging obtained by him from A., evidence of similar obtainings from B., C., and D. immediately preceding the commission of the alleged offence was held admissible. R. v. Wyatt [1904] 1 K. B. 188; 73 L. J. (K. B.) 15; 68 J. P. 34. See R. v. Smith, 20 Cox, 804; 69 J. P. 51: R. v. Charlesworth, 4 Cr. App. R. 167.

The prisoner was indicted in four counts for obtaining money by false pretences from four persons named, the four statements alleged being the same in all these counts; in a fifth count, for inserting, with intent to defraud the Queen's subjects, an advertisement in a newspaper containing the false statements mentioned in the previous counts, and obtaining money thereby. It was shown at the trial that the prisoner had inserted in a newspaper an advertisement containing statements found to be false, offering permanent employment in the preparation of carte-de-visite papers, and adding, "Trial paper and instructions, 1*s.*," and giving an address. Six envelopes were found in the possession of the prisoner on his being apprehended, each directed to the address given, and containing an answer to the advertisement, and twelve postage stamps. Two hundred and eight-one other letters were produced by a post-office clerk. These letters had been addressed to the prisoner under the address given in the advertisement, and had been received at the post office like the other letters; but, having been stopped by the post-office authorities, none of them had ever been in the prisoner's possession or custody; nor was any proof adduced that they were written by the persons from whom they purported to come. Each letter had been opened at the post office before production at the trial, and each contained twelve stamps. The two hundred and eighty-one letters were admitted in evidence. It was held that, under the circumstances, the letters were rightly received in evidence. R. v. Cooper, 1 Q. B. D. 19; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 15; 13 Cox, 123. In Re Pinter, 17 Cox, 497, an extradition case, it was held that dealing in 1890 under a false name with bonds stolen in 1883 and stopped, was some evidence to support a charge of falsely representing that they were current bonds, and honestly held. For other decisions on this subject, see ante, p. 361.

Attempt.]—As every attempt to commit a crime is itself an indictable misdemeanor at common law (see ante, p. 3), wherever the intention to obtain money or goods by false pretences is manifested by any overt act, the party may be indicted for the attempt to commit the statutable misdemeanor. R. v. Hensler, 11 Cox, 570 (C. C. R.). And he may be convicted of the attempt to obtain, although the indictment changes an actual obtaining. See R. v. Roebuck, Dears. & B. 24 (ante, p. 713). 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (ante, p. 215). But where the indictment charges an attempt only the nature of the attempt must be set forth in the indictment with reasonable certainty. And where the indictment stated that the defendant "did unlawfully attempt and endeavour fraudulently, falsely, and unlawfully, to obtain from an insurance company a large sum of money, to wit, the sum of 22*l.* 10*s.*, with intent thereby then and there to cheat and defraud the said company," etc.; this was held insufficient. R. v. Marsh, 1 Den. 505; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 12. The defendant had contracted with the guardians of a poor-law union to deliver loaves of a specified weight to any poor person bringing a ticket from the relieving officer. The tickets were to be returned by the defendant at the end of each week, together with a statement of the number of tickets sent back, whereupon he would be credited for the amount, and the money would be paid at the time stipulated in the contract. The defendant delivered to certain poor people who brought tickets loaves of less than the certified weight, returned the tickets with a note of the number sent, and obtained credit in account for the loaves so delivered, but before the time for payment had arrived the fraud was discovered. It was held that the mere delivery of a less quantity of bread than that contracted for was a mere private fraud, no false weights or tokens having been used, and therefore not an indictable offence; but that the defendant was properly convicted of attempting to obtain money by false pretences; for although he had only obtained credit in account, and could not, therefore, have been convicted of the offence of actually obtaining money by false pretences, yet he had done all that was depending on himself towards the payment of the money, and was therefore guilty of the attempt; and that this was a case within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 53 (rep.), because it was an attempt to obtain money by a false and fraudulent representation of an antecedent fact; it was not a mere sale of goods by a false pretence of their weight; R. v. Eagleton, Dears. 376, 515; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 158; 6 Cox, 559; and semble, that he could now be convicted of obtaining credit under false pretences under s. 13 (1) of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62). Mere preparation to commit an offence is not an attempt. A jeweller, with the intention of defrauding underwriters with whom he was insured against burglary, represented to a police sergeant that a burglary had taken place upon his premises, and that he had been robbed of a large quantity of jewellery. For the purpose of carrying out his scheme he had secreted the jewellery on his premises, and was found by the police sergeant tied up in his shop as if by burglars. He had made no application for the insurance money. It was held by the Court of Criminal Appeal that this did not amount to an attempt to commit the offence, but was only preparation for the commission thereof. The police were not agents of the underwriters. R. v. Robinson [1915] 2 K. B. 342; 84 L. J. (K. B.) 1149; 113 L. T. 379; 24 Cox, 726; 79 J. P. 303; 31 T. L. R. 313; 11 Cr. App. R. 124. It is not an essential element in the offence of attempting to obtain goods by false pretences that the mind of the prosecutor shall have been affected by the false pretences. R. v. Light, 84 L. J. (K. B.) 865; 112 L. T. 1144; 24 Cox, 500; 79 J. P. 32; 11 Cr. App. R. 111.

Indictment for obtaining the Acceptance to a Bill of Exchange by False Pretences. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 32 (2) (a), ante, p. 691.)

Commencement as ante, p. 693.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Obtaining the acceptance to a bill of exchange by false pretences, contrary to section 32 (2) (a) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the first day of June, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, with intent to defraud or injure, induced C. D. to accept a bill of exchange for £100 by falsely pretending that [state the false pretence used, as in the last precedents].

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 32, 37 (4), ante, pp. 691, 501. As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see Id. s. 37 (5) (a) (c), ante, p. 501.

Evidence.

The evidence will be governed by the like rules as would apply to an indictment under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 32 (1) (see ante, pp. 695 et seq.). The prosecutor must prove the pretences as stated in the indictment: that by means of them or some of them he was induced to accept the bill of exchange; their falsehood; and the intent to defraud, which of course will generally be implied from the circumstances of the case.

Where the prisoner was convicted on an indictment charging that by the false pretence to the prosecutor that he "was prepared to pay him" 100*l.*, he did then unlawfully and fraudulently induce the prosecutor to "make a certain valuable security," to wit, a promissory note for 100*l.*, with intent thereby to defraud the prosecutor, it was held that the indictment was good, as it must be taken by necessary inference to allege a false pretence by the prisoner of an existing fact, viz., that he was prepared to pay the prosecutor 100*l.*, and had the money ready for him on his signing the promissory note: and that the indictment showed an offence within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 90 (rep.), of fraudulently causing a person to "make a valuable security," although the promissory note in question might not be of value until it had been delivered into the prisoner's hands. R. v. Gordon, 23 Q. B. D. 354; 58 L. J. (M. C.) 117; 16 Cox, 622. The facts of this case would bring it within the Money Lenders Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 51), s. 4, ante, p. 690. Where the signature is obtained to a piece of paper which is intended to be used as a valuable security, a conviction under this section may be good though there is some defect in the document which might have rendered it invalid if an attempt to use it had been made. R. v. Graham, 8 Cr. App. R. 149.

Indictment for winning Money at Cards, etc., by Fraud. (8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17, ante, p. 690.)

Commencement as ante, p. 693.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Cheating at cards, contrary to section 17 of the Gaming Act, 1845.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, by fraud or unlawful device or ill-practice in playing at or with cards won £50 from C. D. to himself ("to himself or any other or others") and thereby obtained £50 from C. D. by a false pretence. [Where the offence was committed by two or more, and there is any doubt whether the game or fraud comes within 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17, a count should be added as in R. v. Hudson, Bell, 263; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 145; 8 Cox, 305, charging a conspiracy to cheat.]

Misdemeanor: punishable as obtaining money by false pretences. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17 (ante, p. 690).

Evidence.

To maintain the indictment, it is necessary not only to prove that A. B. won of C. D. the money, etc., laid in the indictment, or some part of it, see R. v. Darley, 1 Stark. (N. P.) 359, but also to prove that it was won by "fraud or unlawful device or ill-practice." See R. v. Rogier, 1 B. & C. 272; 2 D. & R. 431. A variance between the indictment and evidence as to the game played (if stated) would be fatal, unless amended. See Cooke v. Stratford, 13 M. & W. 379. It does not seem, however, to be necessary to state the name of the game. As to what frauds and games come within 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17, see R. v. Bailey, 4 Cox, 390; followed in R. v. Governor of Brixton Prison, Ex parte Sjoland [1912] 3 K. B. 568; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 5: and see R. v. Moore, 10 Cr. App. R. 54: R. v. Hudson, supra: R. v. O'Connor, 15 Cox, 3, Lush, J., where a watch was obtained by tossing coins for a wager: R. v. Governor of Brixton Prison, Ex parte Stallman [1912] 3 K. B. 424; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 8.

Common Law Cheats.

It is a cheat punishable on indictment at common law to obtain money from another by a false message or token; 1 Hale, 506, and see 3 Chit. Cr. L. 994 et seq. For other cheats indictable at common law, see Tremaine, P. C. 85 to 110. They include wilful sale of unwholesome food: Treeves' case [1796] 2 East, P. C. 821, 822 (not there correctly reported; see R. v. Brailsford [1905] 2 K. B. 730, at p. 745); 75 L. J. (K. B.) 64: R. v. Dixon, 4 Camp. 12; 3 M. & Sel. 11; 15 R. R. 381: selling a forged picture, R. v. Closs, Dears. & B. 460; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 54: and the fraudulent use of devices or tokens to support a false and fraudulent statement. R. v. Lara, 6 T. R. 565; 2 Leach, 647, 652; 2 East, P. C. 819: R. v. Ward, 2 Str. 747; and cf. R. v. Vreones [1891] 1 Q. B. 360;

60 L. J. (M. C.) 62; 17 Cox, 267; and post, tit. Perjury; and see also 1 Hawk. c. 71; Fabian's case [1664] Kel. (J.) 39; 1 East, P. C. 194; and 2 East, P. C. 816. But it is not an offence at common law to make short delivery under a contract, unless false weights, measures or tokens are used as the general course of dealing or to all or many customers, or there is a conspiracy to cheat. R. v. Wheatly, 2 Burr. 1125, 1127, Lord Mansfield, C.J.

Indictment for Selling by False Scales (common law).

Commencement as ante, p. 693.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Cheating.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

J. S., on the first day of August, A.D. ——, and on divers other days between that day and the day of the taking of this inquisition, in the county of ——, kept in a shop wherein he carried on business as a grocer a false pair of scales, and fraudulently sold to divers persons divers goods weighed in and sold by the said false scales, which goods were short of the weight at which the same were sold by the said J. S.

Misdemeanor at common law, punishable by fine or imprisonment (with or without hard labour for the whole or any part of such imprisonment, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 29), or both. It is also summarily punishable under the Weights and Measures Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 49).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant carried on the business mentioned in the indictment; that the false scales described in the indictment were found in his shop or warehouse, etc., and that he has used them in weighing goods sold by him to his customers. If you have proof that the scales were used by his shopmen or servants, it will be sufficient, as it will be presumed that they were used by his orders (see ante, p. 26).

Where a cheat or fraud at common law against a private individual is charged, there are two conditions precedent to the offence: (1) that the act has been completed; (2) that there has been injury to the individual. R. v. Vreones [1891] 1 Q. B. 360; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 62, per Pollock, B.

If a man in the course of his trade or business publicly carried on, puts a false mark or token upon a spurious article, so as to pass it off as a genuine one, and the article is sold and money obtained by means of the false mark or token, he is indictable for a cheat at common law. R. v. Closs, Dears. & B. 460; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 54. See R. v. Worrell, Trem. 106; R. v. Farmer, Id.

197. The forgery of a trade-mark is also punishable as a misdemeanor under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 28). And the forgery of artists' initials and frauds in the sale of paintings, etc., are punishable in a summary way under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 68. As to frauds in the stamping and sale of chain cables and anchors, see 62 & 63 Vict. c. 23, ss. 13, 14, 15, 16, which supersedes previous enactments on the same subject.

RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY.

Common Law and Former Statutes.

At common law to receive stolen property with knowledge that it was stolen was a misdemeanor where the receiver did nothing which made him an accessory after the fact to the larceny. Fost. 370.

By 3 W. & M. c. 9, s. 4, persons buying or receiving stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen were to be deemed accessories after the fact, and punished accordingly.

By 6 Ann. c. 9 (5 Ann. c. 31, Ruffhead), s. 5, persons buying or receiving stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen were to be deemed accessory to the felony, and liable to suffer death, but with benefit of clergy. Under this Act, s. 6, if the principal could not be taken, so as to be prosecuted and convicted, the receiver might be tried and punished as for a misdemeanor. R. v. Wild, 1 Str. 57.

By 4 G. 1, c. 11, such persons were made liable to transportation for fourteen years.

All the enactments above referred to were repealed as to England by 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 27, s. 1, and their substance was re-enacted in 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 54. In R. v. Cross, 1 Ld. Raym. 711, 712, Holt, C.J., held that the common law misdemeanor of receiving had merged in the felony created by 3 W. & M. c. 9, s. 4. This decision appears to be accepted as good law in respect of all cases of receiving which formerly fell within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 91 (rep.), see R. v. Payne [1906] 1 K. B. 97, 102; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 15; 21 Cox, 121, Alverstone, C.J. But where the stealing was not a felony at common law, nor under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (rep.), it has been held that a receiver of stolen goods may be punished as for a common law misdemeanor. R. v. Payne, sup.: R. v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 266; 39 L. J. (Q. B.) 112.

Larceny both at common law and by statute has been consolidated by the Larceny Act, 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50), and by s. 36 (ante, p. 500) the provisions of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, ss. 12, 16), relating to thefts by a husband or wife from the other have been incorporated, so that in future there is unlikely to be any instance of larceny which is not a felony under the Act of 1916. By s. 33 of that Act (infra) receiving stolen, etc., property is either a felony or a misdemeanor according to whether the property has been feloniously stolen or unlawfully obtained under circumstances amounting to misdemeanor. On an indictment for receiving as a common law misdemeanor where the evidence proved a felony within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 91 (rep.), it has been held that a conviction for common law misdemeanor was good under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12 (ante, p. 213). R. v. Garland [1910] 1 K. B. 154; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 239.

The punishment for the common law misdemeanor is imprisonment with or without hard labour (ante, pp. 239, 241) and (or) fine.

Statutes in force.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 40 (Hosiery Act, 1843), ss. 4, 5, 11.—Summary proceedings for purchasing or receiving materials or tools embezzled by persons employed in the woollen, worsted, linen, cotton, flax, mohair or silk manufactures.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 112 (Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871), s. 13.—Penalty on dealers in old metals purchasing quantities less than stated in schedule.]—Any dealer in old metals who either personally or by any servant or agent, purchases, receives, or bargains for any metal mentioned in the first column of the schedule annexed hereto, whether new or old, in any quantity at one time of less weight than the quantity set opposite each such metal in the second column of the schedule annexed hereto, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds. For the purposes of this section the term "dealer in old metals" shall mean any person dealing in, buying, and selling old metal, scrap metal, broken metal, or partly manufactured metal goods, or defaced or old metal goods, and whether such person deals in such articles only, or together with second-hand goods or marine stores. [The schedule enumerates lead 112 lbs.; copper, brass, tin, pewter, German silver and spelter, 56 lbs. The schedule extends to composites the chief ingredient of which is any of the metals above named. See also 24 & 25 Vict. c. 110, s. 4; 38 & 39 Vict. c. 25, ss. 9, 10; 7 Edw. 7, c. 53, s. 86; and as to Ireland, 3 Edw. 7, c. 44; Toppin v. Marcus [1908] 2 Ir. Rep. 423.]

35 & 36 Vict. c. 93 (Pawnbrokers Act, 1872), s. 38.—Pawnbroker convicted of receiving stolen goods.]—If a pawnbroker is convicted on indictment of any fraud in his business, or of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen, the Court before which he is convicted may, if it thinks fit, direct that his licence shall cease to have effect, and the same shall so cease accordingly.

8 Edw. 7, c. 48 (Post Office Act, 1908), s. 52.—Receiving mail-bag or postal packet stolen, etc.]—See ante, p. 581.

6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50 (Larceny Act, 1916), s. 33.—Receiving.]—(1) Every person who receives any property knowing the same to have been stolen or obtained in any way whatsoever under circumstances which amount to felony or misdemeanour, shall be guilty of an offence of the like degree (whether felony or misdemeanour) and on conviction thereof liable—(a) in the case of felony, to penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years; (b) in the case of misdemeanour, to penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years; (c) in either case, if a male under the age of sixteen years, to be once privately whipped in addition to any punishment to which he may by law be liable. (2) Every person who receives any mail bag, or any postal packet, or any chattel, or money, or valuable security, the stealing, or taking, or embezzling, or secreting whereof amounts to a felony under the Post Office Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 48), or this Act, knowing the same to have been so feloniously stolen, taken, embezzled, or secreted, and to have been sent or to have been intended to be sent by post, shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof liable to the same punishment as if he had stolen, taken, embezzled, or secreted the same. (3) Every such person may be indicted and convicted, whether the principal offender has or has not been previously convicted, or is or is not amenable to justice. (4) Every person who, without lawful excuse, knowing the same to have been stolen or obtained in any way whatsoever under such circumstances that if the act had been committed in the United Kingdom the person committing it would have been guilty of felony or misdemeanour, receives or has in his possession any property so stolen or obtained outside the United Kingdom, shall be guilty of the offence of the like degree (whether felony or misdemeanour) and on conviction thereof liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. [This section consolidates 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 91, 95; 8 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 52; 59 & 60 Vict. c. 52.]

Sect. 39.—Venue.]—(1) A person charged with any offence against this Act may be proceeded against, indicted, tried and punished in any county or place in which he was apprehended or is in custody, as if the offence had been committed in that county or place; and for all purposes incidental to or consequential on the prosecution, trial, or punishment of the offence, it shall be deemed to have been committed in that county or place. [This sub-section is new, and creates a wider venue in cases of receiving than existed formerly under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 96.]

(3) Every person who receives in any one part of the United Kingdom any property stolen or otherwise feloniously taken in any other part of the United Kingdom may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished in that part of the United Kingdom where he so receives the property in the same manner as if it had been originally stolen or taken in that part. [This sub-section re-enacts 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 114, with regard to receiving.]

Sect. 40.—Procedure.]—(3) In an indictment for feloniously receiving any property under this Act any number of persons who have at different times so received such property or any part thereof may be charged and tried together. [This sub-section re-enacts 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 93.]

Sect. 42.—Search warrants.]—(1) If it is made to appear by information on oath before a justice of the peace that there is reasonable cause to believe that any person has in his custody or possession or on his premises any property whatsoever, with respect to which any offence against this Act has been committed, the justice may grant a warrant to search for and seize the same. [This sub-section is taken from 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 103.]—(2)—(a) Any constable or peace officer may, if authorized in writing by a chief officer of police, enter any house, shop, warehouse, yard, or other premises, and search for and seize any property he believes to have been stolen, and, where any property is seized in pursuance of this section, the person on whose premises it was at the time of seizure or the person from whom it was taken shall, unless previously charged with receiving the same knowing it to have been stolen, be summoned before a court of summary jurisdiction to account for his possession of such property, and such court shall make such order respecting the disposal of such property and may award such costs as the justice of the case may require. (b) It shall be lawful for any chief officer of police to give such authority as aforesaid— (i.) when the premises to be searched are or within the preceding twelve months have been in the occupation of any person who has been convicted of receiving stolen property or of harbouring thieves; or (ii.) when the premises to be searched are in the occupation of any person who has been convicted of any offence involving fraud or dishonesty and punishable with penal servitude or imprisonment. (c) It shall not be necessary for such chief officer of police on giving such authority to specify any particular property, but he may give such authority if he has reason to believe generally that such premises are being made a receptacle for stolen goods. [This sub-section re-enacts 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 16.]

Sect. 43.—Evidence.]—(1) Whenever any person is being proceeded against for receiving any property, knowing it to have been stolen, or for having in his possession stolen property, for the purpose of proving guilty knowledge there may be given in evidence at any stage of the proceedings—(a) the fact that other property stolen within the period of twelve months preceding the date of the offence charged was found or had been in his possession; (b) the fact that within the five years preceding the date of the offence charged he was convicted of any offence involving fraud or dishonesty. This last-mentioned fact may not be proved unless—(i.) seven days' notice in writing has been given to the offender that proof of such previous conviction is intended to be given; (ii.) evidence has been given that the property in respect of which the offender is being tried was found or had been in his possession. [This sub-section re-enacts 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 19, with the addition of the words in italics. See post, p. 730.]

Sect. 44.—Verdict.]—(5) If on the trial of any two or more persons indicted for jointly receiving any property it is proved that one or more of such persons separately received any part of such property, the jury may convict upon such indictment such of the said persons as are proved to have received any part of such property. [This sub-section re-enacts 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 94.]

Indictment against a Receiver of Stolen Goods.

Commencement as ante, p. 693.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Receiving stolen goods, contrary to section 33 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, did receive a bag, the property of C. D., knowing the same to have been stolen.

The above count will usually be added to an indictment containing a count for larceny. See ante, p. 509.

Any number of receivers at different times of stolen property may now be charged with substantive felonies in the same indictment: 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 40 (3) (ante, p. 503). It is not necessary for the purposes of 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43 (1) (b) (ante, p. 506), to charge in the indictment the previous conviction of the prisoner.

The defendant may be convicted both on a count charging him as accessory before the fact and on a count for receiving. R. v. Hughes, Bell, 242; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 71: R. v. Goodspeed, 75 J. P. 232; 27 T. L. R. 255; 55 S. J. 273. And where the first count of the indictment charged the defendant with stealing certain goods, and the second with receiving "the goods and chattels aforesaid so as aforesaid feloniously stolen," it was held that a conviction on the latter count was good, the words "so as aforesaid feloniously stolen" being immaterial. R. v. Huntley, Bell, 238; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 70. Where the indictment charges the defendant both with stealing and receiving the defendant cannot, strictly speaking, on the same facts, be found guilty of both, but such a verdict may be treated as a general verdict of guilty on the indictment where it makes no difference as to the sentence. R. v. Lockett [1914] 2 K. B. 720; 78 J. P. 196; 24 Cox, 114; 30 T. L. R. 233; 9 Cr. App. R. 268. As to the venue, see ante, pp. 43, 724.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 33 (1) (a), (c); 37 (4) (ante, p. 501). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see Id. s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501). If a pawnbroker is convicted on indictment of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen, the Court before which he is convicted may, if it thinks fit, direct that his licence shall cease to have effect, and the same shall so cease accordingly. 35 & 36 Vict. c. 93, s. 38 (ante, p. 723).

The receiver or receivers may be indicted and convicted whether the principal be or be not convicted, or be or be not amenable to justice. 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 33 (3) (ante, p. 723).

Restitution.]—The owner on prosecuting the receiver on conviction is entitled to restitution of his property, except in the case of a valuable security bonâ fide paid or if a negotiable security transferred for a valuable consideration, Id. s. 45 (ante, pp. 293 et seq.).

Evidence.

Prove a larceny of the goods mentioned in the indictment, as directed ante, pp. 511 et seq., for which purpose the principal felon is a competent witness, and indeed to prove the whole case. R. v. Haslam, 1 Leach, 418. Where the only evidence, however, against the alleged receiver is that of the thief, the presiding judge will advise the jury to acquit. R. v. Robinson, 4 F. & F. 43. Cf. R. v. Jennings, 7 Cr. App. R. 242. And the mere fact that the stolen goods were found upon the alleged receiver's premises on the day of the theft, is not sufficient to confirm the evidence of the thief, so as to make it proper to convict. R. v. Pratt, 4 F. & F. 315. It is competent to the defendant to disprove the guilt of the principal. Fost. 365. But the circumstances in which the defendant received the goods may of themselves be sufficient to prove that the goods were stolen and also that at the time the defendant received them he knew they were stolen. It is not a rule of law that there must be other evidence of the theft. R. v. Sbarra, 82 J. P. 171; 13 Cr. App. R. 118; 26 Cox, 305. A conviction of the principal for embezzlement is sufficient to warrant a conviction of the receiver, by virtue of 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 33 (1), and was held to be so before the passing of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 91 (rep.). See R. v. Frampton, Dears. & B. 585; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 229. Where the prisoners were indicted and convicted of larceny of lead piping at common law, and the evidence disclosed no offence at common law, but an offence under s. 31 of the Larceny Act, 1861 (repealed and replaced by s. 8 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916, ante, p. 572), the Court of Criminal Appeal held that the jury would upon the evidence, if their attention had been called to the particular point, have convicted the prisoners (on the second count) of receiving under s. 91 (rep.), and therefore under ss. 4 (1) and 5 (1) of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, held that the prisoners were properly convicted of receiving. R. v. Cooper [1908] 24 T. L. R. 867. (a) But the evidence must warrant such a substituted verdict or the conviction will be quashed. R. v. Molloy, 10 Cr. App. R. 75. It was not a felony punishable under s. 91 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (rep.) to receive stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen, if the stealing was not a felony either at common law or under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, although the stealing was a felony under the Larceny Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 116), s. 1 (rep.). R. v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 266; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 112: R. v. Streeter, infra. And therefore where A. and B were in partnership, and B. stole the partnership goods, and disposed of them to the prisoner, who received them knowing them to have been so stolen, and the prisoner was afterwards indicted and convicted as a receiver under 24 & 25 Vict.

(a) Where the prisoner was indicted at common law for stealing and receiving a detachable amalgam plate which was an essential part of an undoubted fixture, and convicted of receiving, the Supreme Court of Victoria held (a) that the plate was itself a fixture and therefore could not be the subject of larceny at common law; (b) that the conviction for receiving must be quashed. R. v. Dowsey [1904] 29 Vict. L. R. 453.

c. 96, s. 91, the conviction was quashed. R. v. Smith, supra. But by s. 33 (1) of the Larceny Act, 1916 (ante, p. 723), an offence is committed in receiving any property "knowing the same to have been stolen or obtained in any way whatsoever under circumstances which amount to felony or misdemeanor," and the difficulties which sometimes arose under the Act of 1861 have therefore been got rid of. A wife, although she may have committed adultery, could not at common law steal her husband's goods; and therefore the adulterer, receiving from her the goods which she had taken from her husband, could not be guilty of receiving stolen goods. R. v. Kenny, 2 Q. B. D. 307; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 156. This case was decided before the passing of 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 16, by virtue of which a married woman may under certain circumstances be guilty of stealing her husband's goods (see R. v. James [1902] 1 K. B. 540, and ante, pp. 538, 540). The receiver from her with a guilty knowledge could not be indicted for receiving under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 91; R. v. Streeter [1900] 2 Q. B. 601; 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 915; 19 Cox, 570; 64 J. P. 537, explaining statements in Roscoe, Cr. Ev. (12th ed.) 485: and see Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.) 317-320: he could only be indicted and convicted of the receiving as a common law misdemeanor. R. v. Payne [1906] 1 K. B. 97; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 114; and see R. v. Garland [1910] 1 K. B. 154; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 239 (ante, p. 723). The provisions of 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 16, have, however, been reproduced in s. 36 of the Larceny Act, 1916, so that a receiver of goods stolen by a wife from her husband can be indicted under s. 33 (1) of the latter Act.

Having proved the larceny, you must prove the goods stolen to have been received by the defendant. Where stolen property is found in a man's house, it is a question of fact for the jury whether the property was found in his possession, that is to say, whether it was there with his knowledge and sanction. R. v. Savage [1906] 70 J. P. 36; and see R. v. Lewis, 4 Cr. App. R. 96. But finding the goods in a house of which the accused had been tenant, but which he had vacated more than a week before the theft, is not evidence of his having received them, though there may be other evidence to show association with the thieves. R. v. Batty, 76 J. P. 388. See also R. v. Foreman, 9 Cr. App. R. 216, where the goods were found in a flat occupied by the accused, but in a room in that flat which had been let by him to another man. And even if there is proof of a criminal intent to receive, and a knowledge that the goods were stolen, if the exclusive possession still remains in the thief, a conviction for receiving cannot be sustained. R. v. Wiley, 2 Den. 37; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 4: R. v. Crane, 76 J. P. 261: R. v. Ashworth, 6 Cr. App. R. 112: R. v. Cook, 8 Cr. App. R. 91: R. v. Berger, 11 Cr. App. R. 72; 84 L. J. (K. B.) 541; and see R. v. Hill, 1 Den. 453; 2 C. & R. 978. So, a principal in the second degree, particeps criminis, cannot at the same time be treated as a receiver. R. v. Perkins, 2 Den. 459; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 152: R. v. Coggins, 12 Cox, 517 (C. C. R.). But a person having a joint possession with the thief may be convicted as a receiver. R. v. Smith, Dears. 494; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 135. Where A., knowing that goods had been stolen, directed B., his servant, to receive them into his premises, and B., in pursuance of that direction, afterwards received them in A.'s absence, B. also knowing that they had been stolen, they were held to be indictable jointly. R. v. Parr, 2 M. & Rob. 346. Two or more persons may be indicted jointly for receiving stolen property, though each successively received the whole of the same at different times; and it makes no difference whether the receipt was direct from the thief or from an intermediate person. R. v. Reardon, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 31; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 171. Proof that the goods were found in the defendant's possession is good presumptive evidence of the fact; or it may be proved by the principal felon. On proof that the defendant not only received the articles, but also assisted in stealing them, he may still be convicted, provided some other person assisted in the theft; because the stealing and receiving are both felonious, and a theft by several is a theft by each. See R. v. Dyer, 2 East, P. C. 767 : R. v. Attwell, Id. 768. If a husband, knowing that his wife has stolen goods, receives them from her, he may be convicted of receiving. R. v. M'Athey, L. & C. 250; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 35. Husband and wife were indicted jointly for receiving. The jury found both guilty, and found also that the wife received the goods without the control or knowledge of the husband, and apart from him, and that "he afterwards adopted his wife's receipt." It was held that this finding did not necessarily mean that the husband took an active part in the matter and therefore did not warrant his conviction. R. v. Dring, Dears. & B. 329; 7 Cox, 382; and see R. v. Pritchard, 23 Cox, 682; 9 Cr. App. R. 210. A wife, in her husband's absence, and without his knowledge, received stolen goods, and paid money on account of them. The thief and the husband afterwards met, and the latter then learnt that the goods were stolen, and agreed on the price to be paid for them, and paid the balance to the thief. On these facts the husband was held to have been properly convicted of receiving. R. v. Woodward, L. & C. 122; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 91. A wife indicted jointly with her husband for receiving, may be convicted if there is evidence that she acted independently in receiving the stolen goods. R. v. Baines, 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 681; 19 Cox, 524. The question as to whether the accused was in possession of the thing stolen is a question for the jury, and where there are any circumstances of difficulty it calls for careful and clear direction on the part of the judge. See R. v. Flatman, 8 Cr. App. R. 256 : R. v. Ashworth, 6 Cr. App. R. 112 : R. v. Crane, 76 J. P. 261 : R. v. Hagan, 9 Cr. App. R. 25 : R. v. Pritchard, supra. Mere aiding and abetting in the disposal of stolen property will not make a man guilty of receiving, but may be sufficient to make him an accessory after the fact. R. v. Watson [1916] 2 K. B. 385; 85 L. J. (K. B.) 1142; 115 L. T. 159; 80 J. P. 391; 32 T. L. R. 580.

Constructive possession.]—The actual manual possession or touch of the goods by the defendant, however, is not necessary to the completion of the offence of receiving; it is sufficient if they are in the actual possession of a person over whom the defendant has a control, so that they would be forthcoming if he ordered it. R. v. Smith, Dears. 494; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 135 : R. v. Gleed, 12 Cr. App. R. 32; cf. R. v. Miller, 6 Cox, 353 (Ir.). (a) But a master cannot be convicted of receiving on proof that the goods were received by his servant unless there is evidence that the servant received them with the authority and knowledge of the master. R. v. Pearson (No. 2), 72 J. P. 451. The possession proved need not be exclusive, but may be joint or several. R. v. Payne, 3 Cr. App. R. 259; and see R. v. Cook, 8 Cr. App. R. 91. The prisoner stole a watch at Liverpool, and sent it by rail to a confederate in London: it was held that the constructive possession still remained in the prisoner, and that he was triable in London. R. v. Rogers, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 136; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 83; 6 Cox, 38.

(a) Where it was proved that stolen property was deposited in a lane (used by the accused as a yard) in the early morning following the night on which such property had been stolen, and there was evidence that the property had been intentionally placed in

Evidence of guilty knowledge.]—And, lastly, it must be proved that the defendant, at the time he received, or bought the goods, knew them to be stolen. This is proved, either directly, by the evidence of the principal felon, or circumstantially, by proving that the defendant bought them very much under their value, 1 Hale, 619, or denied their being in his possession or the like. See ante, p. 401. Where knowledge at the time of receipt that the thing received was stolen is negatived, and the evidence is that such knowledge was obtained some days after the thing had come into the possession of the accused, the offence is not made out, though he still continues the possession, unless there is evidence of a fresh receipt. R. v. Johnson, 75 J. P. 464; 27 T. L. R. 489; 6 Cr. App. R. 218.

Under paragraph (a) of 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43 (1) (ante, p. 506), on the trial of an indictment for receiving stolen goods, evidence may be given that other property stolen within the period of twelve months preceding the date of the offence charged was found or had been in the possession of the prisoner, although such other property is the subject of another indictment against him, to be tried at the same assizes. See R. v. Jones, 14 Cox, 3, Lopes, J. The evidence which may be given under this section by the prosecution as to the finding of such other stolen property in the prisoner's possession is not limited to the fact of its having been so found, but includes evidence as to the circumstances in which it was found and as to statements made at the time by the prisoner in explanation of the property being found in his possession; and, further, the evidence as to its being stolen property need not be given before, but may be given after, the evidence as to its being found in the prisoner's possession, and, in the event of a failure by the prosecution to prove, with regard to a portion of it, that it was stolen property, such failure will not, if substantially all the property is proved to have been stolen, be a ground for quashing the conviction. R. v. Smith [1918] 2 K. B. 415; 13 Cr. App. R. 151; 34 T. L. R. 481. Such evidence ought not to be admitted if the real offence charged is stealing and not receiving. R. v. Girod [1906] 22 T. L. R. 720; 70 J. P. 514. (a) R. v. Ballard, 12 Cr. App. R. 1. "The mere fact of the lane in pursuance of a pre-existing arrangement between the accused and the thieves that if stolen property were left there the accused would pay for it, but there was no evidence that the accused knew the property had been so deposited or had exercised any act of dominion over it, the Supreme Court of Victoria held that the accused was not guilty of receiving. R. v. Merriman [1907] Vict. L. R. 1.

(a) The headnote to this case in 70 J. P. 514 is incorrect. R. v. Harding, 3 Cr. App. R. 10.

putting a count for receiving in the indictment will not make such evidence admissible," Alverstone, C.J. R. v. Bromhead [1907] 71 J. P. 103. It is essential, in order to admit such evidence, that there must be evidence that the property which is found is stolen property; if the prosecution fails to prove this, then the evidence admitted under this section ought to be withdrawn by the judge from the consideration of the jury. R. v. Girod, supra. Formerly, under the analogous provision of 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 19 (rep.), in order to show guilty knowledge it was not sufficient merely to prove that " other property stolen within the preceding period of twelve months " had at some time previously been dealt with by the prisoner, but it was necessary to prove further that such " other property " was found in the prisoner's possession at the time when he was found in possession of the property which was the subject of the indictment. R. v. Carter, 12 Q. B. D. 522; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 96 : R. v. Drage, 14 Cox, 85, Bramwell, L.J. : R. v. Hardy, 74 J. P. 396. The above decisions, which had been somewhat whittled down by R. v. Rowland [1910] 1 K. B. 458; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 327; 3 Cr. App. R. 277, have been got rid of by 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43, (1), ante, p. 506, so that it is now sufficient to prove that other property stolen within the period of twelve months preceding the date of the offence charged had been in the prisoner's possession, although he may have disposed of it prior to his arrest. On a trial for receiving, evidence by the thief to prove that he had sold stolen property to the receiver at any previous time is admissible against the receiver, and is not excluded by the time limitation in the statute. R. v. Powell, 3 Cr. App. R. 1. Where evidence was tendered on behalf of the prosecution to prove receipt by the prisoner at different times from the same person of articles which were not those the subject of the charge and had been stolen on different occasions antecedent to the date of the receiving charged in the indictment, this was held to be admissible. R. v. Dunn, 1 Mood. 146. So, where evidence was tendered that on various former occasions portions of the commodity stolen had been missed by the prosecutor, and that the prisoners, the alleged thief and receiver, had after such occasions been found selling such a commodity, that which was sold on the last of these occasions being identified as part of the commodity missed by the prosecutor, this was held to be admissible as proof of guilty knowledge. R. v. Nicholls, 1 F. & F. 51, Cockburn, C.J. The prisoner was indicted for receiving certain jewellery knowing the same to have been stolen. No stolen jewellery was proved to have been found in his possession, but evidence that he had received large quantities of stolen jewellery from the same person (who had acted as intermediary between the thief and the receiver) on various occasions antecedent and on one occasion subsequent to the receiving charged in the indictment was held to be admissible on the authority of R. v. Dunn, supra : R. v. Hobinstock [1902] 135 Cent. Crim. Court, Sess. Pap. 169, Fulton, Recorder. See 37 Law Journ. Newsp. 106.

Upon paragraph (b) of the same section (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43 (1) : ante, p. 506) it would appear that on an indictment for receiving stolen goods, service of a notice under that paragraph, and proof of a previous conviction, do not relieve the prosecution from the necessity of proving that the prisoner knew that the goods had been stolen. R. v. Davis, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 272; 39 L. J.

(M. C.) 135. That case was, however, decided upon 32 & 33 Vict. c. 99, s. 11 (rep.), which is somewhat differently worded from 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 43 (1). When evidence has been given that the stolen property was found or had been in the possession of the prisoner, and the conditions of the section have been complied with, evidence may be given of the previous conviction. See R. v. Bromhead [1907] 71 J. P. 103. On the question of what is sufficient proof of service upon the prisoner of the notice in writing as required by the section, see R. v. Whitley [1908] 72 J. P. 272.

Resumption of possession by owner.]—Where stolen goods were returned to the thief, who then on the owner's instructions sold them to D., it was held that D. was not liable to conviction under such circumstances, inasmuch as at the time of the receipt the goods were not stolen goods. R. v. Dolan, Dears. 436; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 59; overruling R. v. Lyons, C. & Mar. 217; cf. R. v. Hancock, 14 Cox, 119 (C. C. R.). Stolen goods were sent by the thief in a parcel by railway addressed to the prisoner. An officer of the railway company, from information he had received, examined the parcel at the railway station at the place of its destination, and stopped it. It was called for by the thief on the day of its arrival, and refused to him. Next day a porter of the company, by the officer's direction, took it to a house which the thief had designated, and it was there received by the prisoner. It was held that the prisoner could not be convicted of receiving, as the goods had ceased to be stolen goods at the time when he received them. R. v. Schmidt, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 15; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 94: R. v. Villensky [1892] 2 Q. B. 597; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 218.

Recent possession.]—Where the prisoner was found in the recent possession of stolen property, of which he could give no satisfactory account, and it might reasonably be inferred from the circumstances that he was not the thief, it was held that there was evidence for the jury that he received it knowing it to have been stolen. R. v. Langmead, L. & C. 427; 9 Cox, 464. So also where the prisoner was indicted for larceny, and also for receiving, and the evidence against her consisted of the fact of the stolen property having been found concealed on her person at about ten o'clock in the morning after the night on which it was stolen, and of her having made two contradictory statements as to how she became possessed of it, and the jury acquitted her on the count of larceny, but convicted her on the count for receiving, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to sustain the conviction. R. v. McMahon, 13 Cox, 275 (C. C. R. Ir.) See also R. v. Deer, L. & C. 240; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 33, ante, p. 539. The onus of proving guilty knowledge always remains upon the prosecution. The judge, in directing the jury, should tell them that, upon the prosecution establishing that the accused was in possession of goods recently stolen, they may, in the absence of any explanation by the accused of the way in which the goods came into his possession, which might reasonably be true, find him guilty; but that if an explanation were given which the jury think might reasonably be true, and which is consistent with innocence, although they were not convinced of its truth, the prisoner was entitled to be acquitted, inasmuch as the prosecution would have failed to discharge the duty cast upon it of satisfying the jury beyond reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused. R. v. Schama: R. v. Abramovitch, 84 L. J. (K. B.) 396; 112 L. T. 480; 24 Cox, 591; 79 J. P. 184; 31 T. Indictment against a Receiver where the principal Offence is a Misdemeanor. (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 33 (1) (b), ante, p. 724.)

Commencement as ante, p. 693.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Receiving goods obtained by false pretences, contrary to section 33 (1) (b) of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, in the county of ——, did receive a silver tankard, the property of C. D., knowing the same to have been obtained by false pretences.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping (Id.) —6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, ss. 33 (1) (b), 37 (4) (ante, pp. 724, 501). As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see Id. s. 37 (5) (a) (c) (ante, p. 501).

The receiver may be indicted and convicted, whether the principal shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice. 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 33 (3), ante, p. 724.

Evidence.

Prove the principal offence, and the receipt with guilty knowledge by the defendant, as in the last case.

SECT. 4.

FALSIFICATION OF ACCOUNTS BY CLERKS, ETC.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (Larceny Act, 1861), s. 82.]—Officers of companies keeping fraudulent accounts (ante, p. 623).

38 & 39 Vict. c. 24 (Falsification of Accounts Act, 1875), s. 1.]—If any clerk, officer, or servant, or any person employed or acting in the capacity of a clerk, officer, or servant, shall wilfully and with intent to defraud, destroy, alter, mutilate, or falsify any book, paper, writing, valuable security, or account which belongs to or is in the possession of his employer, or has been received by him for or on behalf of his employer, or shall wilfully and with intent to defraud make or concur in making any false entry in, or omit or alter, or concur in omitting or altering, any material particular from or in any such book, or any document, or account then in every such case the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable to be kept in penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven years . . . [NOTE.—Falsification of accounts is not in all cases forgery, but it may take such a form as to amount to forgery within 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 27 : see Re Arton, No. 2 [1896] 1 Q. B. 509, 517; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 50, per Russell, L.C.J.]

Sect. 2.—Form of indictment.]—Repealed by 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90.

Sect. 3.—Act to be read with 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96.]—This Act shall be read as one with the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96).

8 Edw. 7, c. 69 (Companies Consolidation Act, 1908), s. 216.—Falsification of books on winding-up of company.]—See ante, p. 626.

Indictment.

Commencement as ante, p. 693.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count.

Falsification of accounts, contrary to section 1 of the Falsification of Accounts Act, 1875.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, being clerk or servant to C. D., with intent to defraud, made or concurred in making a false entry in a cash book belonging to the said C. D., his employer, purporting to show that on the said day 100*l.* had been paid to L. M.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count.

Same as first count.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, being clerk or servant to C. D., with intent to defraud, omitted or concurred in omitting from or in a cash book belonging to the said C. D., his employer, a material particular, that is to say, the receipt on the said day of 50*l.* from H. S.

The "document or account" mentioned in the latter part of the section must "belong to or be in the possession of the employer." R. v. Palin [1906] 1 K. B. 7; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 15; 69 J. P. 423.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, 38 & 39 Vict. c. 24, s. 1; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see 38 & 39 Vict. c. 24, s. 3; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 117 (ante, p. 562).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant at the time he committed the alleged offence was clerk or servant to C. D. The proof under this head will be the same as in cases of embezzlement, as to which see ante, p. 606. Prove that the book belonged to C. D. Prove, as to the first count, that the defendant made the entry and that it was false to the defendant's knowledge; and, as to the second count, that the defendant omitted to make the entry and that it was his duty to have made it. The intent to defraud would probably be implied by the jury if they were satisfied of the wilful false entry or omission (ante, pp. 352, 360). The proof of other facts, however, might render such implication irresistible, as that the defendant before he made the false entry as alleged had received 100*l.* from his master to pay over to L. M. and had not paid it over. The question of intent to defraud is essentially one for the jury; and where a chairman of quarter sessions summed up a case of falsification in such a way as to withdraw from the jury circumstances bearing upon that question and a conviction ensued, the conviction was quashed. R. v. Drewett, 69 J. P. 37; 21 T. L. R. 164. A person may be guilty of making a false entry under this Act, although he does not make such entry with his own hands, but fraudulently and wilfully procures it to be made by a third person acting innocently and without any knowledge that the entry is otherwise than true. R. v. Butt, 15 Cox, 564 (C. C. R.). The defendant was employed in Paris by a firm carrying on business in London, and it was his daily duty to enter on slips an account of all sums received by him in Paris for his employers, and to transmit these slips to them in London in order that the amounts might be entered up in a cash-book kept in London. He received three sums in Paris which he fraudulently appropriated to his own use, and omitted to enter an account of them on the slips sent by him on that day to London, intending that the same should be omitted from the cash-book in London, as was the case. Held that he was rightly convicted in London of omitting material particulars from the cash-book. R. v. Oliphant [1905] 2 K. B. 67; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 591.

A poor-rate collector in the accounts kept by him for the overseers, between them and the parish, made the only balance in hand 131*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* He did not account to the overseers for the sum. Held that the entry as between the overseers and the parish being true, he was not liable to be convicted. R. v. Williams, 19 Cox, 239; 63 J. P. 103 (C. C. R).

A taxicab was intrusted to the driver on the terms that he should comply with certain regulations and receive, in lieu of wages, a proportion of his takings, as indicated by the taximeter. He drove customers in the cab without setting the taximeter in motion, and made a false return of his takings when signing a sheet which was filled up from the automatic record of the taximeter. It was held that he was a servant within this Act, and that the taximeter sheet was an account within the meaning of the Act. R. v. Solomons [1909] 2 K. B. 980; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 8; 22 Cox, 178; 2 Cr. App. R. 288; 25 T. L. R. 747.

SECT. 5.

ARSON.

SETTING FIRE TO HOUSES AND OTHER BUILDINGS, ETC.

Common Law.

At common law, arson is the malicious and voluntary burning of the house of another by night or day: 1 Hale, 566; 1 Hawk. c. 39, ss. 1, 7-15. "House" includes not only the dwelling-house but all outhouses which are parcel thereof, though not contiguous nor under the same roof, such as the barn, stable, cow-house, sheep-house, dairy-house, or mill-house. 1 Hale, 567. The common law has been supplemented by the enactments given below.

12 G. 3, c. 24, s. 1.—Setting fire to Crown Dockyards, etc. (see post, p. 748).

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 1.—Setting fire to churches, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any church, chapel, meeting-house, or other place of divine worship, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. Sect. 4.—Setting fire to railway station, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any station, engine house, warehouse, or other building belonging to or appertaining to any railway, port, dock, or harbour, or to any canal or other navigation, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 8, with the addition of the words italicized.]

Sect. 5.—Setting fire to public buildings.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any building, other than such as are in this Act before mentioned, belonging to the King, or to any county, riding, division, city, borough, poor law union, parish or place, or belonging to any university, or college or hall of any university, or to any inn of court, or devoted or dedicated to public use or ornament, or erected or maintained by public subscription or contribution, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section was new law in 1861: see R. v. Donnavan, 1 Leach, 69; 2 W. Bl. 683; 2 East, P. C. 1020.]

Sect. 6.—Setting fire to other buildings.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any building other than such as are in this Act before mentioned shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section was new law in 1861.]

Sect. 7.—Setting fire to goods in buildings.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any matter or thing being in, against, or under any building, under such circumstances that if the building were thereby set fire to, the offence would amount to felony, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen . . . years, or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section was framed from 7 & 8 Vict. c. 62, s. 2; and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 8. The words in italics were added to get rid of R. v. Lyons, Bell, 38; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 33; 8 Cox, 84.

Sect. 8.—Attempt to fire buildings.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously by any overt act attempt to set fire to any building, or any matter or thing in the last preceding section mentioned, under such circumstances that if the same were thereby set fire to the offender would be guilty of felony, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen . . . years, or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male, under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 7, with the addition in italics. For indictment, see post, p. 746.]

Sect. 56.—Accessories, etc.]—In the case of every felony punishable under this Act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this Act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this Act shall on conviction be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement; and every person who shall aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of any misdemeanour punishable under this Act, shall be liable to be proceeded against, indicted, and punished as a principal offender.

Sect. 57.—Persons loitering at night, and suspected of felony against this Act may be apprehended.]—Any constable or peace officer may take into custody, without warrant, any person whom he shall find lying or loitering in any highway, yard or other place, during the night, and whom he shall have good cause to suspect of having committed or being about to commit any felony against this Act, and shall take such person as soon as reasonably may be before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law. [This section is an extension of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, ss. 13, 14.]

Sect. 58.—Malice against owner of property unnecessary.]—Every punishment and forfeiture by this Act imposed on any person maliciously committing any offence, whether the same be punishable upon indictment or upon summary conviction, shall equally apply and be enforced, whether the offence shall be committed from malice conceived against the owner of the property in respect of which it shall be committed or otherwise. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 Vict. c. 30, s. 25, and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 44, s. 2.]

Sect. 59.—Act to apply to persons in possession of property injured.]—Every provision of this Act not hereinbefore so applied shall apply to every person who, with intent to injure or defraud any other person, shall do any of the acts hereinbefore made penal, although the offender shall be in possession of the property against or in respect of which such act shall be done. [This was new law in 1861, and intended to bring tenants and bailees within the Act. As to the former law, see Mills v. Collett, 6 Bing. 85.]

Sect. 60.—Indictment.—Intent to injure or defraud.]—It shall be sufficient in any indictment for any offence against this Act, where it shall be necessary to allege any intent to injure or defraud, to allege that the party accused did the act with intent to injure or defraud (as the case may be), without alleging an intent to injure or defraud any particular person; and on the trial of any such offence it shall not be necessary to prove an intent to injure or defraud any particular person, but it shall be sufficient to prove that the party accused did the act charged with an intent to injure or defraud (as the case may be). [This section was new law as to malicious damage in 1861.]

Sect. 61.—Apprehension of offenders.]—Any person found committing any offence against this Act, whether the same be punishable upon indictment or upon summary conviction, may be immediately apprehended, without a warrant, by any peace officer, or the owner of the property injured, or his servant, or any person authorized by him, and forthwith taken before some neighbouring justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 28.]

Sect. 67.—Summary conviction a bar to other proceedings.]—When any person convicted of any offence punishable upon summary conviction by virtue of this Act shall have paid the sum adjudged to be paid, together with costs, under such conviction, or shall have received a remission thereof from the Crown, or the lord-lieutenant . . . of Ireland, or shall have suffered the imprisonment awarded for non-payment thereof, or the imprisonment awarded in the first instance, or shall have been so discharged from his conviction by any justice as aforesaid, he shall be released from all further or other proceedings for the same cause. [This section was framed from 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 36, and 22 & 23 Vict. c. 32.]

Sect. 72.—Admiralty offences.]—All indictable offences mentioned in this Act which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England or Ireland shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature and liable to the same punishments as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in any county or place in England or Ireland in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if they had been actually committed in that county or place; and in any indictment for any such offence, or for being an accessory to such an offence, the venue in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas:" provided that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of his Majesty's land or naval forces. (See ante, pp. 31 et seq.)

Sect. 73.—Fine and sureties.]—Whenever any person shall be convicted of any indictable misdemeanour punishable under this Act, the Court may, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any of the punishments by this Act authorized, fine the offender, and require him to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour; and in case of any felony punishable under this Act, the Court may, if it shall think fit, require the offender to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any punishment by this Act authorized; provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this clause for not finding sureties for any period exceeding one year. (See ante, pp. 246, 247.)

Sect. 75.—Whipping.]— . . . whenever whipping may be awarded for any indictable offence under this Act, the Court may sentence the offender to be once privately whipped; and the number of strokes, and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted, shall be specified by the Court in the sentence. (See ante, p. 244.)

Sect. 77.—Costs.]—Repealed as to England by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10 (ante, p. 267).

Indictment for setting Fire to a house, with Intent, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, ante, p. 737).

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Arson, contrary to section 3 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously set fire to a house with intent to injure or defraud.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 3; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict .c. 97, s. 73 (supra).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Date, etc.]—The time here stated need not be proved as laid: if the offence is proved to have been committed at any time before or after, provided it is some day before the finding of the indictment, it is sufficient. (See ante, pp. 51, 350.)

Malice.]—The burning must be done wilfully and maliciously, in order to be an offence, either at common law or under the statute; and therefore no negligence or mischance amounts to it. 4 Bl. Com. 222; 3 Co. Inst. 67; 1 Hawk. c. 39, s. 19; 1 Hale, 566; unless the prisoner does the act recklessly, without caring whether the house is set on fire or not. R. v. Child, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 307; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 127: R. v. Pembliton, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 119; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 91: R. v. Welch, 1 Q. B. D. 23; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 17; 13 Cox, 121 (and see post, p. 800). Therefore, if an unqualified person, by shooting with a gun, happen to set fire to the thatch of a house, it is not felony according to Lord Hale, contrary to the opinion of former writers. 1 Hale, 569. But see R. v. Dossett, 2 C. & K. 306 (post, p. 743). But if a man, intending to commit a felony, by accident sets fire to another's house, this, it has been said, would be arson at common law, and also within the old statutes. But see R. v. Faulkner, 13 Cox, 550; Ir. Rep. 11 C. L. 8 (post, p. 749). If, intending to set fire to the house of A., he accidentally sets fire to that of B., it is felony. 1 Hale, 569. And if a man, by wilfully setting fire to his own house, burns also the house of one of his neighbours, it will be felony (see R. v. Probert, 2 East, P. C. 1030; R. v. Isaac, Id. 1031); for the law, in such a case, implies malice, particularly if the party's house were so situate that the probable consequence of its taking fire was that the fire would communicate to the houses in its neighbourhood; and generally, if the act is proved to have been done wilfully, it may be inferred to have been done maliciously, unless the contrary is proved. Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 247, 255 (ante, p. 400). The absence of malice or spite against the owner or occupier is no answer to the charge. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 58 (ante, p. 738); see R. v. Salmon, R. & R. 26; R. v. Davies, 1 F. & F. 69. At common law, where a man set fire to a house of which he was in possession, he was guilty only of misdemeanor. R. v. Scofield, Cald. 397.

Set fire to.]—The words in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 1-7, are "set fire to," merely; and therefore it is not necessary to aver in the indictment that the house, etc., was burnt; nor need it be proved that the house, etc., was actually consumed, nor that any flame was visible. R. v. Salmon, R. & R. 26: R. v. Stallion, 1 Mood. 398. But under these sections, as well as to constitute the offence of arson at common law, there must be an actual burning of some part of the house; a bare intent, or attempt to do it, is not sufficient. Where, upon an indictment under 9 G. 1, c. 22 (rep.), for setting fire to a paper mill, it appeared that the defendant set fire to some paper that was drying in one of the lofts, but that no part of the mill itself was burnt; the judges held, that it did not amount to an offence within the Act. R. v. Taylor, 1 Leach, 49.

And where the defendant set fire to a parcel of unthreshed wheat it was held not to be within that statute. R. v. Judd, 2 T. R. 255. But the burning and consuming of any part of the house, however trifling, is sufficient, although the fire is afterwards extinguished. 1 Hawk. c. 39, s. 17; 3 Co. Inst. 66; 1 Hale, 569; Dalt. c. 159. Where, on an indictment under 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 3 (rep.), it was proved that "the floor of a room was scorched; that it was charred in a trifling way; it had been at a red heat, but not in a blaze," this was held a sufficient burning to support the indictment. R. v. Parker, 9 C. & P. 45, Bosanquet, J., and Parke, B. But where, a small faggot having been set on fire on the boarded floor of a room, the boards were thereby "scorched black, but not burnt," and no part of the wood was consumed: this was held insufficient. R. v. Russell, C. & Mar. 541, Cresswell, J.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 7 (ante, p. 738), the maliciously setting fire to "any matter or thing being in, against, or under any building, under such circumstances that if the building were thereby set fire to the offence would amount of felony," is itself made a felony. In R. v. Child, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 307; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 127; 12 Cox, 64, the prisoner maliciously set fire to goods in a dwelling-house with intent to injure the owner of the goods, who was a lodger in the house, and not to injure the house or the landlord. The house, though endangered, was not set fire to. The prisoner was indicted for the offence described in s. 7, supra, and the jury found him "guilty, but not so that if the house had caught fire, the setting fire to the house would have been wilful and malicious." This was held to be equivalent to a finding that the prisoner was not aware that what he was doing would probably set the house on fire, and so necessarily injure the owner; and that he was not reckless as to whether it took fire or not; and that upon such finding the prisoner was not properly convicted. If a person maliciously, with intent to injure another by merely burning his goods, sets fire to such goods in his house, that does not amount to a felony under s. 7, even although the house catches fire, unless the circumstances are such as to show that the person setting fire to the goods knew that by so doing he would probably cause the house also to take fire, and was reckless whether it did so or not, in which case there would be abundant evidence that he intended to bring about the probable consequence of his act, namely, the burning of the house. R. v. Nattrass, 15 Cox, 73; R. v. Harris, Id. 75; 95 Cen. Cr. Ct. Sess. Pap. 523, Hawkins, J. It is not necessary in an indictment under s. 7 to allege an intent to defraud, and it is sufficient to follow the words of the section without setting forth the particular "circumstances" relied on as constituting the offence. R. v. Heseltine, 12 Cox, 404, Pollock, B., after consulting with Archibald, J. Wilfully throwing a light into a post-office letter-box in a house with intent to burn the letters, but not the house, is not a felony within s. 7. R. v. Balstone, 10 Cox, 20.

It is seldom that a wilful burning by the defendant can be made out by direct proof; the jury, in general, have to presume the defendant's guilt from circumstantial evidence. (See ante, p. 396.) Where a house was robbed and burnt, evidence that the defendant was found in possession of some of the goods which were in the house at the time it was burnt, was admitted as tending to prove him guilty of the arson. R. v. Rickman, 2 East, P. C. 1035. So, where the question is whether the burning was accidental or wilful, evidence is admissible to show that on another occasion the defendant was in such a situation as to render it probable that he was then engaged in the commission of the like offence against the same property. R. v. Dossett, 2 C. & K. 306; 2 Cox, 243, Maule, J. And see R. v. Taylor, 5 Cox, 138: R. v. Harris, 4 F. & F. 342, Willes, J..: R. v. Gray, 4 F. & F. 1102, Willes, J. (ante, p. 359). But on a charge of arson, where the question was as to the identity of the prisoner, evidence that a few days previous to the fire in question another building of the prosecutor's was on fire, and that the prisoner was then standing by with a demeanor which showed indifference or gratification, was rejected. R. v. Harris, supra. As to the admisibility of evidence of the commission of other offences in support of a charge of arson, see ante, p. 359.

Evidence of experiments made after a fire is admissible to show how the building was set on fire. R. v. Heseltine, 12 Cox, 404, Pollock, B.

The thing set fire to.]—As to the common law, see ante, p. 736. The present statute extends to the burning of any house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malt-house, hop-oast, barn, storehouse, granary, hovel, shed, or fold, or of any farm-building, or any building or erection used in farming land or in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any branch thereof. Upon an indictment for burning a dwelling-house, either at common law or under the statute, it would, perhaps, be sufficient to prove a burning of a building, parcel of the dwelling-house. (See ante, p. 657.) Outhouse seems to mean some building annexed or accessory to a dwelling-house. R. v. Hammond, 1 Cox, 60, Alderson, B. Where an outhouse was burnt, and an indictment under 9 G. 1, c. 22 (rep.), described it as a "certain outhouse," an objection, that the offence should have been described as a burning of the dwelling-house (the word "outhouse" in the statute meaning, as it was suggested, an outhouse which is not parcel of the dwelling-house), was overruled by the judges. R. v. North, 2 East, P. C. 1021. So, where the indictment described the house, in some of the counts, as "a certain outhouse," in others as a "certain house," and the evidence was of a burning of a school-room, separated from the dwelling-house by a small passage, but the roof of one extending over the roof of the other; it was held that the evidence satisfied the description in both sets of counts. R. v. Winter, R. & R. 295. Where the indictment under 9 G. 1, c. 22 (rep.), charged the burning of "a certain house" of the corporation of Liverpool, and the proof was of a burning of a gaol belonging to the corporation, the judges held it to be sufficient. R. v. Donnavan, 1 Leach, 69; 2 East, P. C. 1020: 2 W. Bl. 683. But in R. v. Connor, 2 Cox, 65, a gaol was held by Parke, B., not to be a dwelling-house, and it falls rather within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 5 (ante, p. 737). An unfinished building intended, when finished, to be used as a house, is not a "house" within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 3 (ante, p. 737). R. v. Edgell, 11 Cox, 132. But an unfinished house, of which all the walls, external and internal, are built and finished, the roof on and finished, the flooring of a considerable part laid, and the internal walls and ceilings prepared for plastering, is a "building" within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 6 (ante, p. 737); R. v. Manning, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 338; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 11; quære, however, whether an unfinished house, the walls of which had only been raised a short distance from the ground, would be a "building" within s. 6. Id. Many of the distinctions raised in the older cases were rendered immaterial by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 62, s. 1 (rep.) (of which 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, is in this respect a re-enactment), which extends to "any hovel, shed, or fold, or any farm building, or any building or erection used in farming land:" and arson in respect of "any building other than such as are in this Act before mentioned" is specifically dealt with in s. 6 of the present statute. A building twenty-four feet square, with wooden sides, glass windows, slated roof, and commonly called the workshop, used as a storehouse for seasoned timber, as a place for the deposit of tools, and for the working up of timber, was held to be well described as a "shed" under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 62, s. 1 (rep.), supra. R. v. Amos, 2 Den. 65; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 103; 5 Cox, 222; cf. R. v. Munson, 2 Cox, 186, Coleridge, J.

It is unnecessary, in an indictment under s. 3 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, to allege the ownership of the house, nor need the ownership be proved. R. v. Newboult, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 344; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 63; 12 Cox, 148. In that case the house was described in the indictment as "of and belonging to" the prisoner, and he was charged with setting fire to it "with intent thereby to injure," without mentioning the person intended to be injured; it was held that he might be convicted of setting fire to the house, of which he was proved to be merely the tenant, with intent to injure the landlord. R. v. Newboult renders of little practical value the following decisions under former statutes: R v. Glandfield, 2 East, P. C. 1034: R. v. Rickman, Id.: R. v. Ball, 1 Mood. 30: and R. v. Wallis, Id. 344. At common law, and under 9 G. 1, c. 22 (rep.), it was necessary to describe and prove the house to be the house of another; as a man could not commit arson by firing his own house. See R. v. Gowen, 1 Leach, 246 n.; 2 East, P. C. 1027: R. v. Harris, 2 East, P. C. 1023.

With intent, etc.]—It is not necessary to allege or prove an intent to injure or defraud any particular person, but it is sufficient to prove that the party accused did the act charged with an intent to injure or defraud (as the case may be). 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 60 (ante, p. 739). Where the offence consists of the setting fire to the house of a third person, the intent to injure that person is inferred from the act, for every person is deemed to intend the necessary consequences of his own act; and therefore where the defendant was indicted for setting fire to a certain mill, with intent to injure the occupiers thereof, it was held that he was properly convicted, although it appeared at the trial that he was a harmless, inoffensive man, and had no motive to induce him to commit the act. R. v. Farrington, R. & R. 2007. (See ante, p. 400.) But this doctrine can only arise where the act is wilful; and therefore, if the fire appears to be the result of accident, the party who is the cause of it will not be liable. (Ante, p. 741, and see 14 G. 3, c. 78, s. 86.) On the other hand, where the defendant is charged with setting fire to his own house, the intent to defraud cannot be inferred from the act itself, but must be proved by other evidence. Therefore, upon an indictment for arson with intent to defraud an insurance company, the policy must be produced, or secondary evidence of it given after a proper notice to produce. It is now immaterial whether the policy is or is not stamped: 54 & 55 Vict. c. 39, s. 14, sub-s. 4 (ante, p. 447). Where a sufficient notice to produce the policy had not been given, it was held that secondary evidence of it could not be given, and there being no other evidence of the insurance, that the defendant must be acquitted. R. v. Kitson, Dears. 187; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 118; 6 Cox, 159: R. v. Doran, 1 Esp. 127. As to the length of notice necessary, see R. v. Ellicombe, 1 M. & Rob. 260; 5 C. & P. 522: R. v. Barker, 1 F. & F. 326. Where on a trial for arson, with intent to defraud an insurance office, no policy of insurance was produced, and the only evidence of its existence was that of the agent of the insurance company, who stated that the prisoner came to him in May, 1867, about effecting an insurance on the premises, the subject of the alleged arson, and that on the 30th of August, 1871 (about a month before the alleged arson), the prisoner came again to him, and said he wished to renew his policy, and then paid 10*s.*, this was held to be sufficient evidence of the existence of an insurance, as being an admission by the prisoner that there was a policy. R. v. Newboult (ante, p. 744). Where, on an indictment for arson, the counsel for the prosecution, in opening the case, suggested as a motive for the act the desire to realize the sum insured by the prisoner upon her goods, evidence was admitted to show that she was in easy circumstances, so as to negative the motive suggested. R. v. Grant, 4 F. & F. 322, Pollock, C.B.

Indictment for setting Fire to a Church or Chapel. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 1, ante, p. 736.)

Heading as on p. 740.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Arson, contrary to section 1 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously set fire to a [church, chapel, meeting house, or other place of divine worship, as the case may be].

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 1. See the precedent, ante, p. 740.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Indictment for setting Fire to a Dwelling-house, some Person being therein. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 2, ante, p. 737.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Arson, contrary to section 2 of the Malicious Damage Act.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously set fire to a dwelling-house, one F. G. being therein.

The defendant cannot, upon this indictment, be convicted under s. 3 (ante, p. 737), because under that section an intent to injure or defraud must be alleged and proved. R. v. Paice, 1 C. & K. 73.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 2 (ante, p. 737); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 237, 238). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant wilfully set fire to the dwelling-house (see ante, pp. 741, 742); and that at the time F. G. was in the house. It is not sufficient to prove that he was in the house at the time when the defendant set fire to an adjoining building, from which the flames communicated to the house, he having then left it. R. v. Fletcher, 2 C. & K. 215: R. v. Warren, 1 Cox, 68. The offence is committed even if the prisoner was the only person in the house when he set fire to it. R. v. Pardoe, 17 Cox, 715, Coleridge, C.J. If any one in the house is burnt to death as the result of an offence within this section the incendiary is indictable for murder. R. v. Serné, 16 Cox, 311, Stephen, J.

Indictment for attempting to set Fire to a Building. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 8, ante, p. 738.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Attempting to set fire to a building, contrary to section 8 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously attempted to set fire to a building [or a matter or thing within section 7, naming it in ordinary language, as the case may be.]

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 8; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Wilfully throwing a light into a post-office letter-box in a house with intent to burn the letters, but not the house, is not a felony within this enactment. R. v. Batstone, 10 Cox, 20.

SETTING FIRE TO COAL MINES, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 26.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any mine of coal, cannel coal, anthracite, or other mineral fuel shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section is taken from 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 9, and 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 9, with the additions italicized.]

Sect. 27.—Attempting to set fire to mines.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously by any overt act attempt to set fire to any mine, under such circumstances that if the mine were thereby set fire to the offender would be guilty of felony, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen . . . years, or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 7, with the additions italicized.]

Indictment for setting Fire to a Coal Mine. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 26.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Arson, contrary to section 26 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously set fire to a mine of coal [or of cannel coal, anthracite, or other mineral fuel, naming it, as the case may be].

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 26; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

SETTING FIRE TO OR DESTROYING SHIPS, ETC.

Statutes.

12 G. 3, c. 24 (Dockyards, etc., Protection Act, 1772), s .1.]—If any person or persons shall either within this realm, or in any of the islands, countries, forts, or places thereunto belonging, wilfully and maliciously set on fire or burn, or otherwise destroy, or cause to be set on fire, or burnt, or otherwise destroyed, or aid and procure, abet, or assist in the setting on fire, or burning, or otherwise destroying any of his Majesty's ships or vessels of war, whether the said ships or vessels of war be on float or building, or begun to be built, in any of his Majesty's dockyards, or building or repairing in any private yards, for the use of his Majesty, or any of his Majesty's arsenals, magazines, dockyards, rope-yards, victualling offices, or any of the buildings erected therein or belonging thereto, or any timber or materials therein placed for building or repairing, or fitting out of ships or vessels; or any part of his Majesty's military, naval, or victualling stores, or other ammunition of war, or any place or places where such military, naval, or victualling stores, or other ammunition of war is or shall be kept, or deposited; that then the person or persons guilty of any such offence being thereof convicted in due form of law shall be guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as in cases of felony. . . . [For indictment, see post, p. 751.]

Sect. 2.—Venue.]—See ante, pp. 31 et seq.

29 & 30 Vict. c. 109 (Naval Discipline Act), s. 34.]—Every person subject to this Act who shall unlawfully set fire to any dockyard, victualling yard, or steam factory yard, arsenal, magazine, building, stores, or to any ship, vessel, hoy, barge, boat, or other craft, or furniture thereunto belonging, not being the property of an enemy, pirate, or rebel, shall suffer death or such other punishment as hereinafter mentioned.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 42.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to, cast away, or in anywise destroy any ship or vessel, whether the same be complete or in an unfinished state, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, ss. 4, 6. In R. v. Guy, Hants assizes, July, 1902, G. was indicted under s. 42 for unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to a yacht of which he was captain. He did so in conjunction with the owner in order as he knew to defraud underwriters. Held by Bigham, J., that though s. 43 dealt with this offence specifically, G. could be convicted under s. 42.]

Sect. 43.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to, or cast away, or in anywise destroy any ship or vessel, with intent thereby to prejudice any owner or part-owner of such ship or vessel, or of any goods on board the same, or any person that has underwritten or shall underwrite any policy of insurance upon such ship or vessel, or on the freight thereof, or upon any goods on board the same, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 6.]

Sect. 44.—Attempting to set fire to ships.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously, by an overt act, attempt to set fire to, cast away, or destroy any ship or vessel, under such circumstances that if the ship or vessel were thereby set fire to, cast away, or destroyed, the offender would be guilty of felony, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 9 & 10 Vict c. 25, s. 7, with the additions italicized.]

Indictment for setting Fire to a Ship. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97. s. 42, supra.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Arson, contrary to section 42 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of —— [or on the high seas, as the case may be], maliciously set fire to a ship or vessel called the Rattler.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 42; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 8, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 237, 238). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant set fire to the ship. (See ante, p. 741). Where a sailor on board a ship entered a part of the vessel where spirits were kept, for the purpose of stealing rum, and, while tapping a cask of rum, a lighted match, held by him, came in contact with the spirits which were flowing from the cask tapped by him, and a fire ensued which destroyed the vessel, it was held that a conviction for arson of the ship could not be upheld. R. v. Faulkner, Ir. Rep. 11 C. L. 8; 13 Cox, 550. It is immaterial whether the ship were complete or in an unfinished state. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 42. Where a pleasure boat, eighteen feet long, was set fire to, Patteson, J., inclined to think that it was a vessel within the meaning of 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 10 (rep.), but the prisoner was acquitted on the merits, and no decided opinion was given. R. v. Bowyer, 4 C. & P. 559, Patteson, J. Upon an indictment for firing a barge, Alderson, B., said, that if the prisoner was convicted he would take the opinion of the judges as to whether a barge was within the meaning of that statute: the prisoner was acquitted. R. v. Smith, 4 C. & P. 569. The burning of a ship, of which the defendant was a part-owner, was held to be within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 10: R. v. Wallace, C. & Mar. 200; 2 Mood. 200. (See s. 59, ante, p. 739.)

Prove that it was done maliciously (see ante, p. 741.) Where, upon an indictment against P. for setting fire to a ship with intent to prejudice E. and G. his part-owners, it appeared that the defendant had declared that E. and G. were part-owners, and a bill of sale was produced, by which forty-three sixty-fourths of the vessel were transferred by the defendant, the sole owner to E. and G.; and also an entry in the books of registry, in the following form: "Custom House, Padstow, 11th August, 1829. P., of etc., has sold, by bill of sale, dated, etc., forty-three sixty-fourth shares, to G., of etc., and E., of etc. Signed," etc.,—and it was objected that the bill of sale was not valid, because by 6 G. 4, c. 110, s. 37 (rep.), the entry must contain not only the date of the bill of sale, but also the date of the production of it, the judge thought that the date, 11th August, in the commencement of the entry, might be considered as the date of the production of it, particularly as the entry followed the form given by the statute; and it was held that the defendant was properly convicted. R. v. Philp, 1 Mood. 263. Indeed, it would seem that acts of ownership would of themselves be sufficient to prove this allegation, subject to contradiction by the entry in the register. Registry of a British ship is now proved under 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 64 (ante, p. 415).

Indictment for setting Fire to a Ship, with Intent, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 43, ante, p. 749.)

Statement of Offence.

Arson with intent, contrary to section 43 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

Particulars of Offence.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, on the high seas, maliciously set fire to a ship or vessel called the Rattler with intent to prejudice C. D., the owner [or part-owner, as the case may be] of the ship or vessel [or E. F. the owner of goods on board the same, or E. F. who has underwritten a policy of insurance on the said ship or vessel or on certain goods on board the same, as the case may be.]

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 43.—The punishments are the same as under the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

If the intent is laid to be to prejudice the owner of the ship or goods, prove the case as directed under the last form; and in the latter case prove the shipment of the goods. In R. v. Philp, 1 Mood. 263 (supra), there was no proof of malice against the owners, and the ship was insured for more than its value; but it was ruled at the trial that the defendant must be understood to contemplate the consequence of this act; and on a case reserved the judges held that, as to this point, the conviction was right. See R. v. Newill, 1 Mood. 458. The destruction of a vessel by a part-owner shows an intent to prejudice the other part-owners, though he has insured the whole ship, and promised that the other part-owners shall have the benefit thereof. Id. See R. v. Wallace, C. & Mar. 200 (ante, p. 750). The underwriters on a policy of goods fraudulently made are within the statute, though no goods are put on board. S. C. 2 Mood. 200.

If the intent is laid to prejudice the underwriters. then, in addition to this evidence, prove the policy, (see ante, p. 745), and that the ship sailed on her voyage.

If the intent is not proved as laid, but the wilful and malicious setting fire is proved, it appears that the accused may be convicted of an offence under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 42, and that section seems to render it unnecessary to indict under s. 43.

Indictment for setting Fire to Ships of War, etc.
(12 G. 3, c. 24, s. 1, ante, p. 748.)

Statement of Offence.

Arson, contrary to section 1 of the Dockyards Protection Act, 1772.

Particulars of Offence.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously set on fire or burned or otherwise destroyed [or as the case may be, see the section] His Majesty's ship or vessel of war called the Hawk.

Felony: punishment, death.—12 G. 3, c. 24, s. 1. The sentence of death may be recorded. (See ante, p. 235.)

And see 29 & 30 Vict. c. 109, s. 34 (ante, p. 748).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. See 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

For an instance of the offence, see R. v. Hill, 20 St. Trials, 1318.

SETTING FIRE TO CROPS, STACKS, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 16.—Setting fire to crops, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any crops of hay, grass, corn, grain, or pulse, or of any cultivated vegetable produce, whether standing or cut down, or to any part of any wood, coppice, or plantation of trees, or to any heath, gorse, furze, or fern, wheresoever the same may be growing, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 17, with the addition of the words italicized.]

Sect. 17.—Setting fire to stacks, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any stack of corn, grain, pulse, tares, hay, straw, haulm, stubble, or of any cultivated vegetable produce, or of furze, gorse, heath, fern, turf, peat, coals, charcoal, wood, or bark, or to any steer of wood or bark, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned, . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 10, with the addition of the words italicized. The words "haulm" and "stubble" appear to have been added in the repealed statute to get rid of R. v. Reader and Turner, 4 C. & P. 245; 1 Mood. 239, decided on 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 17.]

Sect. 18.]—Attempting to set fire to crops or stacks.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously by any overt act attempt to set fire to any such matter or thing as in either of the last two preceding sections mentioned, under such circumstances that if the same was thereby set fire to the offender would be, under either of such sections, guilty of felony, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven . . . years or to be imprisoned, . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 7, with the addition of the words italicized. It is a sufficient overt act to constitute an attempt if the prisoner went to a stack and lit a match to fire the stack, but desisted on finding that he was watched. R. v. Taylor, 1 F. & F. 511, Pollock, C.B.]

(24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 17.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Arson, contrary to section 17 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously set fire to a stack of wheat [or as the case may be, see the words of the statute].

No intent need be stated. R. v. Newill, 1 Mood. 458. No local description of the position of the stack is necessary. R. v. Woodward, Id. 323.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 17; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant wilfully set fire to the stack of wheat, etc., as stated in the indictment (see ante, pp. 741, 742). Indictments for setting fire to a stack of beans (R. v. Woodward, 1 Mood. 323); or barley (R. v. Swatkins, 4 C. & P. 548), have been held good, the Court taking judicial notice that beans are pulse, and that barley is corn. A stack composed of the flax-plant with the seed or grain in it (the jury finding that the flax-seed is a grain) was held to be a stack of grain within 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 10 (rep.). R. v. Spencer, Dears. & B. 131; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 16; 7 Cox, 189. A haycock has been held not to be a stack within the statute. R. v. McKeever [1871] Ir. Rep. 5 C. L. 86; and a stack of sedge and rushes was held not to be within 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89; R. v. Baldock, 2 Cox, 55. Qu. whether it is "cultivated vegetable produce" within the present Act. A quantity of straw, packed on a lorry, in course of transmission to market, and left for the night in an inn yard, is not a stack of straw within s. 17 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97. R. v. Satchwell, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 21; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 63; 12 Cox, 449. Upon 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 17 (rep.), which did not contain the word "haulm," or the words "any cultivated vegetable produce," it was held that an indictment for setting fire to a stack of straw was not supported by proof that the stack was composed partly of stubble and partly of cole-seed straw. R. v. Tottenham, 7 C. & P. 237; 1 Mood. 461, cit. The prisoner was indicted for setting fire to a stack of wood, and it appeared that the wood set fire to consisted of a score of faggots heaped on each other in a temporary loft over the gateway: Parke, J., held this not to be a stack of wood. R. v. Aris, 6 C. & P. 348.

Indictment for setting Fire to Crops of Corn, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 16, ante, p. 752.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Arson, contrary to section 16 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously set fire to a crop of wheat [or as the case may be, see the section].

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s 16; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to crops of corn, grain, or pulse, or to any part of a wood, coppice, or plantation of trees, or to any heath, gorse, furze or fern, is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106). That statute, however, does not exclude from the jurisdiction of sessions the setting fire to crops of hay or grass, or to crops of any cultivated vegetable produce, other than of corn, grain, or pulse.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant set fire to the crop of wheat, etc., as stated in the indictment. Proof of setting fire to a single detached tree will not, it seems, support the indictment. R. v. Davy, 1 Cox, 60, Alderson, B.

Where the defendant set fire to a summer-house in a wood, and the fire was thence communicated to the wood, he was held to be properly convicted on an indictment charging him with setting fire to the wood. R. v. Price, 9 C. & P. 729 and see ante, p. 741. Where the prisoner was indicted for setting fire to growing furze, Lopes, J., directed the jury that if she set fire to the furze thinking, although erroneously, that she had a right to do so, they ought not to convict. R. v. Twose, 14 Cox, 327.

SECT. 6.

MALICIOUS DAMAGE.

ENDANGERING LIFE OR PROPERTY BY USE OF EXPLOSIVES.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 9.—Attempting to blow up dwelling-houses, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously, by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance, destroy, throw down, or damage the whole or any part of any dwelling-house, any person being therein, or of any building, whereby the life of any person shall be endangered, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, ss. 1, 2. For indictments, see post, p. 761.]

Sect. 10.—Putting explosives near building with intent, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously place or throw in, into, upon, under, against, or near any building, any gunpowder, or other explosive substance, with intent to destroy or damage any building, or any engine, machinery, working-tools, fixtures, goods or chattels, shall, whether or not any explosion take place, and whether or not any damage be caused, be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen . . . years or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. 46 & 47 Vict. c. 3 (Explosives Substances Act, 1883), s. 2.—Causing explosion likely to endanger life or property.]—Any person who unlawfully and maliciously causes by any explosive substance an explosion of a nature likely to endanger life or to cause serious injury to property shall, whether any injury to person or property has been actually caused or not, be guilty of felony, and on conviction shall be liable to penal servitude for life, or for any less term (not less than the minimum term allowed by law (see 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-s. 1, ante, p. 238,)), or to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two years. (For indictment, see post, p. 763.)

Sect. 3.—Attempts to cause explosions, or making or keeping explosives with intent to endanger life or property.]—Any person who, within or (being a subject of his Majesty) without his Majesty's dominions, unlawfully and maliciously—

(a) Does any act with intent to cause by an explosive substance, or conspires to cause by an explosive substance an explosion in the United Kingdom of a nature likely to endanger life or to cause serious injury to property; or shall, whether any explosion does or does not take place, and whether any injury to person or property has been actually caused or not, be guilty of felony, and on conviction shall be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding twenty years [nor less than three years, 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-s. 1, ante, p. 238], or to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two years, and the explosive substance shall be forfeited.

(b) Makes, or has in his possession, or under his control, any explosive substance, with intent by means thereof to endanger life, or cause serious injury to property in the United Kingdom, or to enable any other person by means thereof to endanger life or cause serious injury to property in the United Kingdom;

Sect. 4.—Making or possessing explosives under suspicious circumstances.—Competency of defendant and his or her wife or husband as witness.]—(1) Any person who makes or knowingly has in his possession or under his control any explosive substance, under such circumstances as to give rise to a reasonable suspicion that he is not making it or does not have it in his possession or under his control for a lawful object, shall, unless he can show that he made it or had it in his possession or under his control for a lawful object, be guilty of felony, and, on conviction, shall be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding fourteen years [nor less than three years, 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-s. 1, ante, p. 238], or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and the explosive substance shall be forfeited.

(2) In any proceeding against any person for a crime under this section, such person and his wife, or husband, as the case may be, may, if such person thinks fit, be called, sworn, examined, and cross-examined as an ordinary witness in the case. [This enactment seems to be superseded as to England by the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36), ante, pp. 458 et seq.]

Sect. 5.—Accessories.]—Any person who, within or (being a subject of his Majesty) without his Majesty's dominions, by the supply of or solicitation for money, the providing of premises, the supply of materials, or in any manner whatsoever, procures, counsels, aids, abets, or is accessory to, the commission of any crime under this Act, shall be guilty of felony, and shall be liable to be tried and punished for that crime, as if he had been guilty as a principal.

Sect. 6.—Inquiry by the Attorney-General.]—(1) Where the Attorney-General has reasonable ground to believe that any crime under this Act has been committed, he may order an inquiry under this section, and thereupon any justice for the county, borough, or place in which the crime was committed, or is suspected to have been committed, who is authorized in that behalf by the Attorney-General, may, although no person may be charged before him with the commission of such crime, sit at a police-court, or petty sessional or occasional court-house or police-station in the said county, borough, or place, and examine an oath concerning such crime any witness appearing before him, and may take the deposition of such witness, and, if he see cause, may bind such witness by recognizance to appear and give evidence at the next petty sessions, or when called upon within three months from the date of such recognizance; and the law relating to the compelling of the attendance of a witness before a justice, and to a witness attending before a justice and required to give evidence concerning the matter of an information or complaint, shall apply to compelling the attendance of a witness for examination and to a witness attending under this section.

(2) A witness examined under this section shall not be excused from answering any question on the ground that the answer thereto may criminate, or tend to criminate, himself; but any statement made by any person in answer to any question put to him on any examination under this section shall not, except in the case of an indictment or other criminal proceeding for perjury, be admissible in evidence against him in any proceeding, civil or criminal.

(3) A justice who conducts the examination under this section of a person concerning any crime shall not take part in the committing for trial of such person for such crime.

(4) Whenever any person is bound by recognizance to give evidence before justices, or any criminal court, in respect of any crime under this Act, any justice, if he sees fit, upon information being made in writing, and on oath, that such person is about to abscond or has absconded, may issue his warrant for the arrest of such person, and if such person is arrested any justice, upon being satisfied that the ends of justice would otherwise be defeated, may commit such person to prison until the time at which he is bound by such recognizance to give evidence, unless in the meantime he produces sufficient sureties: Provided that any person so arrested shall be entitled on demand to receive a copy of the information upon which the warrant for his arrest was granted.

Sect. 7.—No prosecution except by leave of Attorney-General.—Local jurisdiction.—Saving for common law and other Acts.]—(1) If any person is charged before a justice with any crime under this Act, no further proceeding shall be taken against such person without the consent of the Attorney-General, except such as the justice may think necessary by remand, or otherwise, to secure the safe custody of such person. [The absence of such consent invalidates the proceedings. R. v. Bates [1911] 1 K. B. 964; 80 L. J. (K. B.) 507; 104 L. T. 688; 75 J. P. 271; 27 T. L. R. 314.]

(3) For all purposes of and incidental to arrest, trial, and punishment a crime for which a person is liable to be punished under this Act, when committed out of the United Kingdom, shall be deemed to have been committed in the place in which such person is apprehended or is in custody.

(4) This Act shall not exempt any person from any indictment or proceeding for a crime or offence which is punishable at common law, or by any Act of Parliament other than this Act, but no person shall be punished twice for the same criminal act (cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33, ante, p. 160).

Sect. 8.—Application of provisions of Explosives Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 17), as to search warrants, etc.

Sect. 9.—Definitions.—"Explosive substance."—"Attorney-General."]—(1) In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires—

The expression "explosive substance" shall be deemed to include any materials for making any explosive substance; also any apparatus, machine, implement, or materials used, or intended to be used, or adapted for causing, or aiding in causing, any explosion in or with any explosive substance; also any part of any such apparatus, machine or implement.

The expression "Attorney-General" means his Majesty's Attorney-General for England or Ireland, as the case may be, and in case of his inability, or of a vacancy in the office, his Majesty's Solicitor-General for England or Ireland, as the case requires.

Sect. 63 (1).—Sending explosives by post.]—See ante, p. 583.

10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 43 (Firearms Act, 1920), s. 6.—Prohibition of manufacture, etc., of weapons discharging noxious liquids, etc.]—(1) It shall not be lawful for any person without the authority of the Admiralty or the Army Council or the Air Council to manufacture, sell, purchase, carry, or have in his possession any weapon, of whatever description, designed for the discharge of any noxious liquid, gas, or other thing, or any ammunition containing or designed or adapted to contain any such noxious thing, and such a weapon is in this Act referred to as a prohibited weapon.

(2) If any person contravenes the provisions of this section, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds, or to both such imprisonment and fine.

Sect. 7.—Penalty on possession of firearms with intent to injure.]—Any person who has in his possession or under his control any firearm or ammunition with intent by means thereof to endanger life or cause serious injury to property, or to enable any other person by means thereof to endanger life or cause serious injury to property, shall whether any injury to person or property has been caused or not, be deemed to have been guilty of an offence under section three of the Explosive Substances Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 3), and the provisions of that Act shall apply accordingly.

Sect. 11.—Provisions to forfeiture of firearms, cancellation of certificates, and search warrants.]—(1) Where any person is convicted of an offence under this Act, or is convicted of any crime for which he is sentenced to penal servitude or imprisonment, or where a person has been ordered to be subject to police supervision or to enter into a recognizance to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, a condition of which is that the offender shall not possess, use, or carry a firearm, the court before whom he is convicted or by whom the order is made may make such order as to the forfeiture or disposal of any firearm, prohibited weapon, or ammunition found in his possession, or used or carried by him, as the court think fit, and may cancel any firearm certificate held by the person convicted.

Where the court cancel a firearm certificate under this section, they shall cause notice to be sent to the chief officer of police by whom the certificate was granted.

(2) If a justice of the peace is satisfied by information on oath that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence under this Act has been, is being, or is about to be committed, he may grant a search warrant authorising any constable named therein to enter at any time any premises or place named in the warrant, if necessary by force, and to search the premises or place and every person found therein, and to seize and detain any firearm, prohibited weapon, or ammunition which he may find on the premises or place, or on any such person, in respect of which or in connection with which he has reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence under this Act has been, is being, or is about to be committed, and, if the premises are those of a registered firearms dealer, to examine any books relating to the business.

(3) The constable making the search may arrest without warrant any person found on the premises whom he has reason to believe to be guilty of an offence against this Act.

(4) A court of summary jurisdiction may, on the application of the chief officer of police, order any firearm, prohibited weapon, or ammunition seized and detained by a police constable under this Act to be destroyed or otherwise disposed of.

Sect. 12.—Interpretation.]—(1) In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires—

The expression "firearm" means any lethal firearm or other weapon of any description from which any shot, bullet, or other missile can be discharged, or any part thereof, and the expression "ammunition" means ammunition for any such firearms, and includes grenades, bombs, and other similar missiles, whether such missiles are capable of use with a firearm or not, and ingredients and components thereof:

Provided that a smooth bore shot-gun or air-gun or air-rifle (other than air-guns and air-rifles of a type declared by rules made by a Secretary of State under this Act to be specially dangerous) and ammunition therefor shall not in Great Britain be deemed to be a firearm and ammunition for the purpose of the provisions of this Act other than those relating to the removal of firearms and ammunition from one place to another or for export :

The expression " offence under this Act " includes any act, omission, or other thing which is punishable under this Act :

The expression " gun licence " means a licence to use or carry a gun granted under the Gun Licence Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 57), and any reference to a gun licence shall include a reference to a licence or certificate to kill game taken out under the law with respect to such a licence or certificate :

The expression " police district " means any district for which there is a separate police force, and the expression " the chief officer of police " has the meaning assigned to it by the Police Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 45), and with respect to the City of London means the Commissioner of the City Police.

(2) The provisions of this Act as to selling and purchasing shall apply to letting on hire, giving, lending, transferring and parting with possession, and to hiring, accepting and borrowing, in the same manner as they apply to selling and to purchasing, and the expressions " seller " and " purchaser " shall be construed accordingly.

Sect. 13.—Savings. —(1) Nothing in this Act relating to firearms shall apply to an antique firearm which is sold, bought, carried, or possessed as a curiosity or ornament.

(2) The provisions of this Act as to the possession of firearms without a firearm certificate shall not apply to firearms which are possessed as trophies of the present or any former war, if the owner thereof has given notice of the fact in the prescribed form to the chief officer of police of the district in which he resides, and the chief officer has signified that a certificate in respect thereof can be dispensed with, which dispensation shall be granted unless the chief officer is of opinion that the owner is not a person to whom a firearm certificate would be granted :

Provided that such firearms possessed as trophies shall not be used or carried, and that no ammunition therefor may be purchased.

(3) The provisions of this Act relating to ammunition shall be in addition to and not in derogation of any enactment relating to the keeping and sale of explosives.

Sect. 14.—Saving for the Mystery of Gunmakers.]—Nothing in this Act contained shall apply to the proof houses of the Master, Wardens, and Society of the Mystery of Gunmakers of the City of London and the guardians of the Birmingham proof house or the rifle range at Small Heath, near Birmingham, where firearms are sighted and tested, so as to interfere in any way with the operations of those two companies in proving firearms under the provisions of the Gun Barrel Proof Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. cxiii.), or any other Acts for the time being in force, or to any person carrying firearms to or from any such proof house when being taken to such proof house for the purposes of proof or being removed therefrom after proof.

Indictment for destroying by Explosion part of a Dwelling-house, some Person being therein. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 9, ante, p. 755.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Commencement as ante, p. 740.

Attempting to blow up a dwelling-house, contrary to section 9 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance maliciously destroyed, threw down, or damaged the whole or part of a dwelling-house, C. D. being therein [or a building whereby the life of C. D. was endangered, as the case may be].

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 9; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant, by himself or with others, destroyed or was present aiding and abetting in the destruction of, some part of the dwelling-house in question, by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance mentioned in the indictment. It is submitted that a destruction, etc., of some part of the freehold must be shown, by analogy to the decisions under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 8 (rep.) (see post, p. 765). It has been held that firing a gun loaded with powder through the key-hole of the door of a house, in which were several persons, and by which the lock of the door was blown to pieces, was not within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 9. R. v. Brown, 3 F. & F. 821. Prove that the act was done maliciously, i.e., wilfully. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800.) Prove also that C. D. was in the house at the time of the setting fire to it. (See ante, p. 746.) No particular intent need be laid or proved.

Where the indictment is for destroying any building, whereby the life of any person is endangered, prove that the defendant destroyed or damaged the building in question, or was present aiding and abetting the destruction, or damaging of it by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance mentioned in the indictment. Prove that the act was done maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800). And prove that the life of C. D. was endangered by the defendant's act. This will depend, in almost all cases, on medical evidence. The endangering of life, to be within the mischief of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 9, must result from the damage to the house: but the persons put in danger need not be within the house, and it is not necessary to prove actual injury, but sufficient to show such exposure to risk or chance of injury as will satisfy the jury that actual danger to life was caused. R. v. McGrath, 14 Cox, 598.

Indictment for throwing Gunpowder into a Building with Intent, etc.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 10, ante, p. 755.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Putting explosive near a building, contrary to section 10 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously placed in or threw into [upon, under, against, or near, as the case may be] a building gunpowder or other explosive substance with intent to destroy or damage the said building [or an engine, machinery, working tools, fixtures, goods, or chattels, as the case may be.]

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under the age of sixteen, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 10; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove the act done by the defendant, as alleged in the indictment; that it was done maliciously (see ante, p. 741, post, p. 800); and prove circumstances from which the jury may infer the intent to destroy or damage the house, as stated in the indictment. Where the prisoner was indicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 10, for throwing gunpowder against a house, and the evidence was that the prisoner had thrown a bottle containing gunpowder against the house, and that there was a fuse in the neck of the bottle, Kelly, C.B., ruled that unless the fuse was lighted at the time the bottle was thrown against the house the offence was not made out, and said that, "if anybody merely threw a bottle containing gunpowder, that would not comply with the conditions of the statute. If the fuse was not lighted it could not cause an explosion, and it would be merely throwing a bottle against a house." R. v. Sheppard, 11 Cox, 302.

Indictment for causing Explosion likely to endanger Life or Property.
(46 & 47 Vict. c. 3, s. 2, ante, p. 756.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Causing an explosion, contrary to section 2 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1883.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously caused by gunpowder or other explosive substance an explosion of a nature likely to endanger life or to cause serious injury to property.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years with or without hard labour.—46 & 47 Vict. c. 3, s. 2 (ante, p. 238); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 239).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant by himself or with others, caused or was present aiding and abetting in the causing of the explosion in question, by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance mentioned in the indictment. Prove that the act was done maliciously, i.e. wilfully and not by accident (see ante, p 741, post, p. 800). Prove that the explosion was of a nature likely to endanger life, etc.; it is not necessary (as it is under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 9) to prove that life was actually endangered. No intent need be laid or proved. Any part of a vessel which when filled with an explosive substance is adapted for causing an explosion is an explosive substance within the Act. R. v. Charles, 17 Cox, 499, Hawkins, J. If several persons are connected in a common design to have articles amounting to an explosive substance within the Act made for an unlawful purpose, each of the confederacy is responsible in respect of such articles as are in the possession of others connected in the carrying out of their common design. Id.

RIOTIOUSLY DEMOLISHING HOUSES, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 11.—Riotously demolishing houses, etc.]—If any persons, riotously and tumultuously assembled together to the disturbance of the public peace shall unlawfully and with force demolish, or pull down or destroy, or begin to demolish, pull down, or destroy, any church, chapel, meeting-house, or other place of divine worship, or any house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malt-house, hop-oast, barn, granary, shed, hovel, or fold, or any building or erection used in farming land, or in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any branch thereof, or any building, other than such as are in this section before mentioned, belonging to the King, or to any county, riding, division, city, borough, poor law union, parish, or place, or belonging to any university, or college or hall of any university, or to any inn of court, or devoted or dedicated to public use or ornament, or erected or maintained by public subscription or contribution, or any machinery, whether fixed or movable, prepared for or employed in any manufacture, or in any branch thereof, or any steam-engine or other engine for sinking, working, ventilating, or draining any mine, or any staith, building, or erection used in conducting the business of any mine, or any bridge, waggon-way, or trunk for conveying minerals from any mine, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 8, with the additions in italics.]

Sect. 12.—Riotously damaging houses, etc.]—If any persons, riotously and tumultuously assembled together to the disturbance of the public peace, shall unlawfully and with force injure or damage any such church, chapel, meeting-house, place of divine worship, house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malt-house, hop-oast, barn, granary, shed, hovel, fold, building, erection, machinery, engine, staith, bridge, waggon-way, or trunk, as in the last preceding section mentioned, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . : Provided that, if, upon the trial of any person for any felony in the last preceding section mentioned, the jury shall not be satisfied that such person is guilty thereof, but shall be satisfied that he is guilty of any offence in this section mentioned, then the jury may find him guilty thereof, and he may be punished accordingly. [This section was new law in 1861, and was framed to get rid of the decisions in R. v. Thomas, 4 C. & P. 237 : R. v. Price, 5 C. & P. 510; R. v. Batt, 6 C. & P. 329; R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437; 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1087; and R. v. Adams, C. & Mar. 299, in which it was held that to justify a conviction under 7 & 8 G 4, c. 30, s. 8 (rep.) it was necessary to prove an intent to demolish the whole building.]

Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 11, supra.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Riotous damage, contrary to section 11 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., C. D., and E. F., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, being riotously assembled together demolished, pulled down, or destroyed [or began to demolish, pull down, or destroy] a church [or as the case may be, see the section, p. 763.]

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 11; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, p. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p 106).

Evidence.

Prove a riotous assembly, as stated post, tit. Riot. The number of persons composing it is not material, provided they were three at the least. Prove that the assembly began with force to demolish the building in question. It must appear that they began to demolish some part of the freehold: for instance, the demolition of moveable shop shutters is not sufficient. R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437; 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1087. A demolition by fire is within the statute. Id.: R. v. Christian, 12 L. J. (M. C.) 26 : R. v. Harris, C. & Mar. 661; 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1387. Prove that the defendants were either active in demolishing the house, or present aiding and abetting. R. v. Harris, supra: R. v. Simpson, C. & Mar. 669; 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1387. To convict under s. 11 the jury must be satisfied that the ultimate object of the rioters was to demolish the house, and that, if they had carried their intention into effect, they would in point of fact have demolished it; for if the rioters merely do an injury to the house, and then of their own accord go away, as having completed their purpose, it is not a beginning to demolish within s. 11, though it may be an offence within s. 12. See cases in note to that section supra; and Drake v. Footitt, 7 Q. B. D. 201; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 141 : Drake v. Hankin, Id. But on an indictment under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 8 (rep.), containing a count for riotously, etc., demolishing a dwelling-house, it was held that it was not necessary to prove a total demolition, though the parties were not interrupted : it was enough if the house was destroyed as a dwelling. Therefore, the fact that the rioters left a chimney remaining would not prevent the statute from applying. R. v. Phillips, 2 Mood. 252; S. C. as R. v. Langford, C. & Mar. 602, Patteson, J.

Where a mob, after the obnoxious person had escaped, continued to attack a house until the police interfered, Gurney, B., left it to the jury to say whether they had not the intention to demolish the house as well as to injure the person; and the jury, being of that opinion, found the defendants guilty. R. v. Batt, 6 C. & P. 329.

If the house, etc., is riotously demolished, etc., in the bonâ fide assertion of a supposed, though unfounded, claim of right, no offence within s. 11 is committed. R. v. Phillips (supra); and see notes to s. 51 (post, p. 800) : R. v. Clemens [1898] 1 Q. B. 556; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 482; 19 Cox, 18 : Heaven v. Crutchley, 68 J. P. 53.

If the jury are not satisfied that the evidence establishes the felony charged, but are satisfied that it proves riotous, unlawful, and forcible damage within s. 12, they may find the accused guilty of a misdemeanor under that section.

DAMAGE TO HOUSES, ETC., BY TENANTS.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 13.]—Whosoever being possessed of any dwelling-house or other building, or part of any dwelling-house or other building, held for any term of years or other less term, or at will, or held over after the termination of any tenancy, shall unlawfully and maliciously pull down or demolish, or begin to pull down or demolish, the same or any part thereof, or shall unlawfully and maliciously pull down or sever from the freehold any fixture being fixed in or to such dwelling-house or building, or part of such dwelling-house or building, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [This section was framed on 9 G. 4, c. 56, s. 24 (Ir.).]

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Damage to building by tenant, contrary to section 13 of Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, being possessed of a dwelling-house [or other building, describing it, as the case may be] for a term of years [or as the case may be], maliciously pulled down or demolished [or began to pull down or demolish] the said dwelling-house or a part thereof.

Misdemeanor (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 13) : imprisonment with or without hard labour (see ante, pp. 239, 241), or fine (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73, ante, p. 740), or both. As to recognizances, see s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant was possessed of the dwelling-house for a subsisting term of years, or other less term, or at will, or that he was holding it over after the determination of his tenancy therein. If the tenancy was created by a lease or agreement in writing, the terms of it must be proved by the written instrument itself, or its non-production must be accounted for in order to let in other evidence of its contents. (See ante, pp. 367, 368.) Prove that the dwelling-house was situate as described in the indictment. Then prove that the defendant, or some other person or persons by his direction, demolished or began to demolish the house, or some part thereof. (See ante, p. 765). Lastly, prove that the act was done maliciously; that is, wilfully, and without any claim or pretence of right to do it. (See ante, p. 741, and post, p. 800.)

DESTROYING, ETC., GOODS IN PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE, AND MACHINERY.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 14.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, or destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or to render useless, any goods or article of silk, woollen, linen, cotton, hair, mohair, or alpaca, or of any one or more of those materials mixed with each other or mixed with any other material, or any frame-work-knitted piece, stocking, hose, or lace, being in the loom or frame, or on any machine or engine, or on the rack or tenters, or in any stage, process, or progress of manufacture, or shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, or destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or to render useless, any warp or shute of silk, woollen, linen, cotton, hair, mohair, or alpaca, or of any one or more of those materials mixed with each other or mixed with any other material, or shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, or destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or render useless, any loom, frame, machine, engine, rack, tackle, tool, or implement, whether fixed or moveable, prepared for or employed in carding, spinning, throwing, weaving, fulling, shearing, or otherwise manufacturing or preparing any such goods or articles, or shall by force enter into any house, shop, building, or place, with intent to commit any of the offences in this section mentioned, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life, . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 3, with addition of the words in italics to settle doubts expressed in R. v. Ashton, 2 B. & Ad. 750.]

Indictment for cutting, etc., Goods in the Loom, etc.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Damaging goods in a loom, contrary to section 14 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously cut, broke, or destroyed [or damaged with intent to destroy or to render useless] any goods or article of silk [or as the case may be, see the words in the section, supra] being in the loom [or as the case may be, see the section.]

The words " with intent, etc.," appear to apply only to the word " damage " and not to the preceding words " cut, break." See R. v. Smith, 6 Cox, 198. The words " in any stage or process of manufacture " in the section appear to include products until fit for sale. R. v. Woodhead, 1 M. & Rob. 549, and see R. v. Clegg, 3 Cox, 295.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 14; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant cut or destroyed, etc., the goods in the loom as stated in the indictment, and then prove that it was done maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800). It is not necessary to prove that it was done out of actual malice to the owner. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 58 (ante, p. 738).

If an intent is charged in the indictment, it must be proved by circumstances, if it cannot be inferred from the act itself. (See ante, pp. 352, 357, 397.)

Where the prisoner, in company with others, unfastened and took away a certain part of a stocking-frame called the half-jack, without which the frame was useless, but did no further injury either to the half-jack or to the frame, than the removal of the half-jack; it was held that this was a damaging the frame within 28 G. 3, c. 55, s. 4 (rep.), as it made the frame imperfect and inoperative. R. v. Tacey, R. & R. 452; cf. R. v. Fisher, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 7; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 57; 10 Cox, 146.

DESTROYING, ETC., MACHINES USED IN AGRICULTURE OR CERTAIN MANUFACTURES.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 15.—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, or destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or to render useless, any machine or engine, whether fixed or moveable, used or intended to be used for sowing, reaping, mowing, threshing, ploughing or draining, or for performing any other agricultural operation, or any machine or engine, or any tool or implement, whether fixed or moveable, prepared for or employed in any manufacture whatsoever (except the manufacture of silk, woollen, linen, cotton, hair, mohair, or alpaca goods, or goods of any one or more of those materials mixed with each other, or mixed with any other material, or any frame-work-knitted piece, stocking, hose, or lace), shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 4, with the additions italicized.]

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Damaging a machine, contrary to section 15 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously cut, broke or destroyed [or damaged with intent to destroy or to render useless] a threshing-machine [or as the case may be, see the section, p. 768.]

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 15; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant cut, broke, or destroyed the threshing-machine in question (see ante, p. 768); R. v. Tacey, R. & R. 452). Prove that it was done maliciously (see ante, p. 741); but whether from malice against the owner or otherwise is immaterial. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 58 (ante, p. 738). In R. v. Crutchley, 5 C. & P. 133, upon an indictment under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 4 (rep.), for breaking a threshing-machine, Patteson, J., allowed the prisoner's counsel to ask whether the mob had not compelled several persons to join them, and to give each a blow with a sledge-hammer to every machine that was broken; he also allowed the witnesses for the prisoner to prove that he had been forced by the mob to join them, and had resolved to escape on the first opportunity. If the damage is alleged to have been done with intent to destroy the machine, or to render it useless, the intent must be proved by circumstances, if it cannot be implied from the act done. (See ante, pp. 352, 357, 397.) If a threshing-machine is taken to pieces and separated by the owner, the destruction of any part of it is within that statute. R. v. Mackerel, 4 C. & P. 448. So is the destruction of a water-wheel, by which a threshing-machine is worked. R. v. Fidler, 4 C. & P. 449; or the displacing of a machine. R. v. Foster, 6 Cox, 25. Even if the side-boards of the machine were wanting (without which it would act, but not perfectly), it was held to be within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 4 (rep.). R. v. Bartlett, 2 Deacon, Cr. L. 1517: and see R. v. Chubb, Id. 1518: R. v. Hutchins, Id. 1517. But where the machine was taken to pieces, and in part destroyed by the owner from fear, the remaining parts were held not to be a machine within the meaning of that statute. R. v. West, Id. 1518. It is not necessary that the damage done should be of a permanent kind. Where the prisoner was indicted for maliciously damaging a steam-engine, the evidence was that he had maliciously screwed up parts of the engine, so that they would not work while so screwed up, and had reversed the plug of the pump which supplied the engine with water, and that the engine was rendered temporarily useless and liable to burst. But the prosecutor discovered the state of the engine before any permanent damage was done, and the screws were loosened, and the plug properly replaced, and the engine was made just as good as before. Held that the prisoner was properly convicted. R. v. Fisher, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 7; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 57; 10 Cox, 146.

A table, with a hole in it for water, used in the manufacture of bricks, was held not to be a "machine prepared for or employed in any manufacture" within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 4 (rep.). R. v. Penny, Chester Sum. Ass. 1855 (per Jervis, C.J., after consulting Campbell, C.J.). But it would no doubt be held to be a "tool" or "implement" within the present enactment.

DROWNING MINES, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 28.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cause any water to be conveyed or run into any mine, or into any subterranean passage communicating therewith, with intent thereby to destroy or damage such mine, or to hinder or delay the working thereof, or shall, with the like intent, unlawfully and maliciously pull down, fill up, or obstruct, or damage with intent to destroy, obstruct, or render useless any air-way, water-way, drain, pit, level or shaft, of or belonging to any mine, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping.

Provided that this provision shall not extend to any damage committed underground by any owner of any adjoining mine, in working the same, or by any person duly employed in such working. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 6, with the additions italicized.]

Indictment for drowning a Mine. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 28.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Drowning a mine, contrary to section 28 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously caused water to be conveyed into a mine with intent to destroy or damage it [or to hinder its working, etc., as the case may be, see the statute, supra].

The mine may be laid as the property of a person in possession of and working it, though only as agent for others. R. v. Jones, 1 C. & K. 181; 2 Mood. 293. But this case does not seem definitely to decide that it is necessary to prove the ownership.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 28; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant caused the water to be conveyed into the mine and that it was done maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800.) Prove the intent by circumstances from which it may be inferred. (See ante, pp. 352, 357, 397.) Underground damage by adjoining mine owners and their servants is not punishable under this section: see the proviso.

Where the indictment is for pulling down an airway under the same section, prove that the defendant pulled down, etc., the airway of a mine as described in the indictment. If workmen stop up an airway by order of their master in a portion of his mine, it is not felony in the workmen, even though the master know that he has no right to the airway; but if the workmen know that the stopping of the airway is a malicious act of the master, it is felony in the workmen. R. v. James, 8 C. & P. 131. Prove that it was done maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800.) And prove the intent, as above. If the act is done by the prisoner under a bonâ fide claim of right, it is not within the statute. R. v. Matthews, 14 Cox, 5, Brett, J.: cf. R. v. Phillips, 2 Mood. 252: R. v. Clemens [1898] 1 Q. B. 556; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 482. The proviso to 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 28 (ante, p. 770), applies to this offence.

DESTROYING, ETC., ENGINES, ERECTIONS, ETC., USED IN MINES.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 29.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously pull down and destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or render useless, any steam engine or other engine for sinking, draining, ventilating, or working, or for in anywise assisting in sinking, draining, ventilating, or working any mine, or any appliance or apparatus in connection with any such steam or other engine, or any staith, building, or erection used in conducting the business of any mine, or any bridge, waggon-way, or trunk for conveying minerals from any mine, whether such engine, staith, building, erection, bridge, waggon-way, or trunk be completed or in an unfinished state, or shall unlawfully and maliciously stop, obstruct, or hinder the working of any such steam or other engine, or of any such appliance or apparatus as aforesaid, with intent thereby to destroy or damage any mine, or to hinder, obstruct, or delay the working thereof, or shall unlawfully and maliciously wholly or partially cut through, sever, break, or unfasten, or damage with intent to destroy or render useless, any rope, chain, or tackle, of whatsoever material the same shall be made, used in any mine, or in or upon any inclined plane, railway or other way, or other work whatsoever in anywise belonging or appertaining to or connected with or employed in any mine, or the working or business thereof, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section was framed from 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 7, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, with the additions in italics.]

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Damaging a steam engine, contrary to section 29 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously pulled down and destroyed [or damaged, with intent to destroy or to render useless] a steam engine [or engine for sinking, etc., as the case may be, see the statute].

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 29; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant pulled down or destroyed the engine described in the indictment, and that it was erected for the purposes described in the indictment. It is immaterial whether it was completed or in an unfinished state. A scaffold, erected at some distance above the bottom of a mine, for the purpose of working a vein of coal on a level with the scaffold, was held to be an erection used in conducting the business of the mine within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 7 (rep.). R. v. Whittingham, 9 C. & P. 234. Where a steam-engine used in working a mine had been stopped and locked up for the night, and the defendant got into the engine-house and set it going, and there being no machinery attached, the engine went with great velocity, and received injury, this was held to be a damaging of the engine within that statute. R. v. Norris, Id. 241. Where a mine was worked by a steam-engine, which caused a cylinder called a drum to revolve, and take up the rope as the coal was drawn up from the mine, it was held on 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 7 (rep.), that proof of damaging the drum would not support an indictment which charged the damaging of the steam-engine. R. v. Whittingham, supra. But the words of the present statute include "any appliance or apparatus in connection with any such steam or other engine," and apply also to many other injurious acts which were not mentioned in the former statutes. Prove that the act was done maliciously (see ante, p. 741, post, p. 800); and, if an intent is stated, prove it from circumstances from which that intent may be inferred, if it cannot be implied from the act itself. (See ante, pp. 352, 357, 397.)

DESTROYING, ETC., SHIPS WITH INTENT, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 42, 43, 44.]—Ante, pp. 748. 749.

Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 42, ante, p. 748.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Destroying a ship, contrary to section 42 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, on the high seas, maliciously cast away or destroyed a ship or vessel called the Rattler.

If the offence is committed in the body of a county, see the precedent, ante, p. 749. For precedent under section 43 alleging intent to prejudice the owner of the ship, etc., see ante, p. 750.

Felony. (For punishment, see ante, p. 749.)

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant cast away or otherwise destroyed the vessel. (See ante, p. 749.) It is immaterial whether the ship were complete or in an unfinished state. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 42. A pleasure boat eighteen feet long is, it seems, a vessel within the meaning of these sections. R. v. Bowyer 4 C. & P. 559. See R. v. Smith, 4 C. & P. 569 (ante, p. 750). If the ship had only run aground, and it was afterwards got off in a condition so as to be easily refitted, it seems it would not be an offence within the Act. See R. v. De Londo, 2 East, P. C. 1098. Prove the offence to have been done maliciously (see ante, p. 741, post, p. 800), and with the intent charged in the indictment. Proving that it was done wilfully is of itself sufficient evidence from which the jury may presume that it was committed with intent to prejudice either the owner or part-owner of the ship or of the goods; but if the intent charged is to prejudice the underwriters, you must prove the policy (see ante, p. 745), the inception of the risk, and circumstances from which the jury may infer the intent. (See ante, pp. 352, 357, 397.)

DAMAGING SHIPS WITH INTENT, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 46.—Damaging ships otherwise than by fire or explosives.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously damage, otherwise than by fire, gunpowder, or other explosive substance, any ship or vessel, whether complete or in an unfinished state, with intent to destroy the same or render the same useless, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 10, with the additions italicized.]

Sect. 45.—Attempting to damage ships with explosives.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously place or throw in, into, upon, against, or near any ship or vessel, any gunpowder or other explosive substance with intent to destroy or damage any ship or vessel, or any machinery, working tools, goods, or chattels, shall, whether or not any explosion take place, and whether or not any injury be effected, be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 6. And see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 30, post, p 948.]

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Damaging a ship, contrary to section 46 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861, supra.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously damaged [state in ordinary language how; the section applies to damage otherwise than by fire, gunpowder, or other explosive substance] a ship or vessel called the Rattler, with intent to destroy it or to render it useless.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 46; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant damaged the ship in the mode stated in the indictment. It is immaterial whether the ship were in a complete or unfinished state. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 46. Prove that the act was done maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800.) Prove circumstances from which the intent stated in the indictment may be inferred (see ante, pp. 352 et seq.), if it cannot be presumed from the act itself. A pleasure boat eighteen feet long is, it seems, within this enactment. R. v. Bowyer, 4 C. & P. 559. See R. v. Smith, 4 C. & P. 569 (ante, p. 750).

EXHIBITING FALSE SIGNALS, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 47.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully mask, alter, or remove any light or signal, or unlawfully exhibit any false light or signal, with intent to bring any ship, vessel, or boat into danger, or shall unlawfully and maliciously do anything tending to the immediate loss or destruction of any ship, vessel, or boat, and for which no punishment is hereinbefore provided, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 5, with the additions italicized.]

57 & 58 Vict. c. 60 (Merchant Shipping Act, 1894), s. 220.]—Misconduct endangering life or ship. Ss. 667 to 680 (1.)]—Penalties for misleading fires and lights, and proceedings for their removal.

Indictment for exhibiting False Signals. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 47.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Altering Signals [or exhibiting false signals], contrary to section 47 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, masked or altered [or removed, as the case may be] a light or signal [or exhibited a false light or signal, as the case may be] with intent to bring a ship or vessel or boat called the Mary into danger.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 47; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

The intent must be proved by the circumstances of the case which fairly and naturally lead to that conclusion or by statements made by the defendant. See ante, pp. 352 et seq.

DESTROYING PARTS OF SHIPS IN DISTRESS, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 49.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously destroy any part of any ship or vessel which shall be in distress, or wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, or any goods, merchandise, or articles of any kind belonging to such ship or vessel, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years. . . . [This section re-enacts 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 8.]

Indictment for destroying Part of a Ship, etc., in Distress.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Destroying part of a ship, contrary to section 49 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously destroyed a part of the ship or vessel called the Mary, which was wrecked [stranded or cast on the shore, as the case may be].

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 49; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the ship was stranded or cast ashore; prove the destruction of a part of the ship, and that it was done by the defendant maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800.)

CUTTING AWAY, ETC., BUOYS, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 48.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut away, cast adrift, remove, alter, deface, sink, or destroy, or shall unlawfully and maliciously do any act with intent to cut away, cast adrift, remove, alter, deface, sink, or destroy, or shall in any other manner unlawfully and maliciously injure or conceal any boat, buoy, buoy-rope, perch, or mark used or intended for the guidance of seamen, or the purpose of navigation, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section was new law in 1861.]

57 & 58 Vict. c. 60 (Merchant Shipping Act, 1894), ss. 666, 680.]—Summary proceedings for injuring light-houses, removing buoys, etc. See 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1798.

Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 48).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Injuring a buoy, contrary to section 48 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, on the high seas maliciously cut away [etc., see the section, supra] a buoy [or as the case may be, see the section] intended for the guidance of seamen, or for the purpose of navigation.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 48; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the buoy, etc., in question was used or intended for the guidance of seamen, or in some manner for the purpose of navigation, and that the defendant cut it away maliciously, that is, wilfully. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800).

DESTROYING SEA AND RIVER BANKS, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 30.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously break down or cut down or otherwise damage or destroy any sea-bank or sea-wall, or the bank, dam, or wall of or belonging to any river, canal, drain, reservoir, pool, or marsh, whereby any land or building shall be, or shall be in danger of being, overflowed or damaged, or shall unlawfully and maliciously throw, break or cut down, level, undermine, or otherwise destroy, any quay, wharf, jetty, lock, sluice, flood-gate, weir, tunnel, towing-path, drain, water-course, or other work belonging to any port, harbour, dock, or reservoir, or on or belonging to any navigable river or canal, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 12, with the additions italicized.]

Indictment for cutting down River or Sea Banks. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 30, supra.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Cutting down a river bank, contrary to section 30 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously cut down or broke down part of the bank of the river Tyne [or as the case may be, see the section, supra], by means of which certain land was then overflowed or damaged or was in danger of being overflowed or damaged.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 30; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant broke down or cut down the banks of the river, situate as described in the indictment. Prove, also, that the offence was committed maliciously (see ante, p. 741, post, p. 800); and prove that, in consequence of the breaking or cutting of the banks, certain land was, or was in danger of being, overflowed, as stated in the indictment.

Indictment for throwing down, etc., Locks on Rivers, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 30, ante, p. 778.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Breaking down a lock, contrary to section 30 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously threw or broke or cut down [or levelled, undermined, as the case may be] or otherwise destroyed a lock [or as the case may be, see the section supra] belonging to a harbour [or as the case may be, see the section supra].

Felony. See the last precedent.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 30.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant threw down, etc., the lock in question upon the canal or navigable river, as described in the indictment; prove the local situation of the canal or river, and prove that it was done maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800.)

DESTROYING OR REMOVING, ETC., PILES, ETC., IN RIVERS, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 31.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut off, draw up, or remove any piles, chalk, or other materials fixed in the ground, and used for securing any sea-bank or sea-wall, or the bank, dam or wall of any river, canal, drain, aqueduct, marsh, reservoir, pool, port, harbour, dock, quay, wharf, jetty or lock, or shall unlawfully and maliciously open or draw up any flood-gate or sluice, or do any other injury or mischief to any navigable river or canal, with intent and so as thereby to obstruct or prevent the carrying on, completing or maintaining the navigation thereof, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 12, with the additions italicized.]

Indictment for cutting, etc., Piles, etc., in Rivers or Sea-banks. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 31.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Removing piles from a sea-wall, contrary to section 31 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously cut off, drew up or removed certain piles [or as the case may be, see the section] used for securing a sea-wall [or as the case may be, see the section, supra].

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 31; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the pile was fixed in the ground and used to secure the sea-wall; prove that the defendant cut it, or as the case may be, and prove that he did so maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800.)

Indictment for opening Flood-gates, etc., with intent, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 31.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Opening a flood-gate, contrary to section 31 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously opened or drew up a flood-gate or sluice of a navigable river [or canal] with intent and so as to obstruct or prevent carrying on [completing] or maintaining the navigation of the said river.

Felony. See the last precedent.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 31.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant opened or drew up the flood-gate of the navigable river in question. Prove that he did so maliciously (see ante, p. 741, post, p. 800); prove the intent from circumstances from which the jury may infer it (see ante, pp. 352 et seq.); and prove that the navigation was obstructed, which even alone is reasonable evidence of the intent.

DESTROYING BRIDGES, VIADUCTS, AND AQUEDUCTS.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 33.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously pull or throw down or in anywise destroy any bridge (whether over any stream of water or not), or any viaduct or aqueduct, over or under which bridge, viaduct or aqueduct any highway, railway, or canal shall pass, or do any injury with intent and so as thereby to render such bridge, viaduct, or aqueduct, or the highway, railway, or canal passing over or under the same, or any part thereof, dangerous or impassable, shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 13, with additions, to settle doubts which existed as to what was a public bridge. See R. v. Oxfordshire, 1 B. & Ad. 289: R. v. Same, 1 B. & Ad. 297 n.: R. v. Derbyshire, 2 Q. B. 745.]

Indictment for pulling down a Bridge. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 33.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Destroying a bridge, contrary to section 33 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously pulled or threw down or destroyed a bridge [viaduct or aqueduct] over [or under] which a highway [or as the case may be, see the section] passed, with intent and so as to render the bridge [or highway, etc., as the case may be] or a part thereof dangerous or impassable.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 33; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant did the injury to the bridge stated in the indictment. Prove that the bridge is situated as described: and prove that the act was done maliciously by the defendant. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800.) It must also be proved that the bridge was, by the act of the defendant, rendered dangerous or impassable, and this, even alone, is reasonable evidence of the intent.

DESTROYING TOLL-BARS, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 34.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously throw down, level, or otherwise destroy, in whole or in part, any turnpike-gate or toll-bar, or any wall, chain, rail, post, bar, or other fence belonging to any turnpike-gate or toll-bar, or set up or erected to prevent passengers passing by without paying any toll directed to be paid by any Act of parliament relating thereto, or any house, building or weighing-engine erected for the better collection, ascertainment, or security of any such toll, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 14.]

Punishment: imprisonment with or without hard labour (Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914 (4 & 5 G. 5, c. 58), s. 16 (1), ante, p. 740), and (or) fine (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73, ante, p. 740), or both. As to recognizances see s. 73, ante, p. 740.

All turnpike trusts in England and Wales have now expired. As to toll-bars for collecting franchise tolls, see New Windsor (Mayor, etc.) v. Taylor [1889] A. C. 41; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 87.

INJURIES TO RAILWAYS, TELEGRAPHS AND ELECTRIC LINES.

Statutes.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 97 (Regulation of Railways Act, 1840), s. 13.]—Summary punishment of railway servants guilty of misconduct or neglect, whereby life or limb of persons on the railway, or the works of the line might be endangered, or the passage of trains obstructed.

Sect. 14.]—Power to send the case to quarter sessions.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 35.—Maliciously obstructing, etc., railways, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously put, place, cast, or throw upon or across any railway any wood, stone, or other matter or thing, or shall unlawfully and maliciously take up, remove, or displace any rail, sleeper, or other matter or thing belonging to any railway, or shall unlawfully and maliciously turn, move, or divert any points or other machinery belonging to any railway, or shall unlawfully and maliciously make or show, hide, or remove, any signal or light upon or near to any railway, or shall unlawfully and maliciously do or cause to be done any other matter or thing, with intent, in any of the cases aforesaid, to obstruct, upset, overthrow, injure or destroy any engine, tender, carriage, or truck using such railway, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 6, with the substitution of " unlawfully " for " wilfully."]

Sect. 36.—Unlawfully obstructing railways.]—Whosoever, by any unlawful act, or by any wilful omission or neglect, shall obstruct or cause to be obstructed any engine or carriage using any railway, or shall aid or assist therein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. [This section re-enacts 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, s. 15, with the additions italicized. See R. v. Pardenton, 6 Cox, 247.]

Sect. 37.—Destroying telegraphs.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, throw down, destroy, injure, or remove any battery, machinery, wire, cable, post, or other matter or thing whatsoever, being part of or being used or employed in or about any electric or magnetic telegraph, or in the working thereof, or shall unlawfully and maliciously prevent or obstruct in any manner whatsoever the sending, conveyance, or delivery of any communication by any such telegraph, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour: Provided that if it shall appear to any justice, on the examination of any person charged with any offence against this section, that it is not expedient to the ends of justice that the same should be prosecuted by indictment, the justice may proceed summarily to hear and determine the same, and the offender shall, on conviction thereof, at the discretion of the justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for any term not exceeding three months, or else shall forfeit and pay such sum of money not exceeding ten pounds as to the justice shall seem meet. [This section was new law in 1861.] The term "electric telegraph" seems to include telephone. See Att.-Gen. v. Edison Telephone Co., 6 Q. B. D. 244; 50 L. J. (Q. B.) 145: and the preamble to s. 1 of the Telegraph Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 59). The powers of a single justice under this section are limited in England by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 20, (7).

Sect. 38.—Attempts to commit offences against s. 37.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously, by any overt act, attempt to commit any of the offences in the last preceding section mentioned, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice of the peace, at the discretion of the justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding three months, or else shall forfeit and pay such sum of money not exceeding ten pounds as to the justice shall seem meet. [This section was new law in 1861.]

45 & 46 Vict. c. 56 (Electric Lighting Act, 1882), s. 22.—Injuring electric lines or works with intent to cut off supply of electricity.]—Any person who unlawfully and maliciously cuts or injures any electric line or work with intent to cut off any supply of electricity shall be guilty of felony, and be liable to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding five years or to be imprisoned with or without hard labour for any term not exceeding two years; but nothing in this section shall exempt a person from any proceeding for any offence which is punishable under any other provision of this Act, or under any other Act, or at common law, so that no person be punished twice for the same offence (see ante, p. 160).

48 & 49 Vict. c. 49 (Submarine Telegraph Act, 1885), s. 3.—Making or injuring submarine telegraph cables.]—(1) A person shall not unlawfully and wilfully, or by culpable negligence, break or injure any submarine cable to which the Convention [the Submarine Telegraph Convention, 1884] for the time being applies, in such manner as might interrupt or obstruct, in whole or in part, telegraphic communication.

(2) Any person who acts, or attempts to act, in contravention of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction—

(a) if he acted wilfully shall be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding five years, or to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two years, and to a fine, either in lieu of or in addition to such penal servitude or imprisonment; and

(b) If he acted by culpable negligence, shall be liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, without hard labour, and to a fine not exceeding 100*l.*, either in lieu of, or in addition to, such imprisonment.

(3) Where a person does any act with the object of preserving the life or limb of himself or of any other person, or of preserving the vessel to which he belongs, or any other vessel, and takes all reasonable precautions to avoid injury to a submarine cable, such person shall not be deemed to have acted unlawfully and wilfully within the meaning of this section.

(4) A person shall not be deemed to have unlawfully and wilfully broken or injured any submarine cable where in the bonâ fide attempt to repair another submarine cable injury has been done to such first-mentioned cable, or the same has been broken, but this shall not apply so as to exempt such person from any liability under this Act, or otherwise, to pay the cost of repairing such breakage or injury.

(5) Any person who within or (being a subject of his Majesty) without his Majesty's dominions, in any manner procures, counsels, aids, abets, or is accessory to the commission of any offence under this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable to be tried and punished for the offence as if he had been guilty as a principal.

Indictment for placing Wood on Rails with Intent, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 35, ante, p. 783.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count.

Offence under section 35 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously displaced a sleeper belonging to the Great Western Railway Company with intent to obstruct, upset, overthrow, injure or destroy an engine, tender, carriage or truck using the said railway.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count.

Obstructing railway, contrary to section 36 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, by unlawfully displacing a sleeper belonging to the Great Western Railway Company obstructed or caused to be obstructed an engine or carriage using the said railway.

Sect. 35.—Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.—54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

Sect. 36.—Misdemeanor: imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for not more than two years, and whipping as above.

As to requiring the offender to enter into recognizances and find sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740). As to summary trial of youthful offenders, see 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, ss. 10, 11, sched. 1.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant placed the piece of wood upon or across the railway named and situate as described in the indictment, or was present aiding and assisting in doing so. It does not matter whether the railway is public or private. O'Gorman v. Sweet, 54 J. P. 663. Prove that he did it maliciously (see ante, p. 741, and R. v. Hoyroyd, 2 M. & Rob. 339). The intention may be inferred from the circumstances from which the jury may presume it (see ante, pp. 352, 357, 397). In general, the act being done wilfully, and its being likely to obstruct or upset the railway train, would be sufficient primâ facie evidence of an intent to do so. See R. v. Upton, 5 Cox, 298. Semble, the intent to injure or destroy a train, provided against by this section, is an intent to injure or destroy otherwise than by burning, which is specially mentioned in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 4 (ante, p. 737). See R. v. Sanderson, 1 F. & F. 37.

A person may be convicted of a misdemeanor under s. 36, though no train is in fact obstructed by his act, and the line is not formally open to traffic. See R. v. Bradford, Bell, 268; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 171; 8 Cox, 309. Where the defendant had unlawfully altered some railway signals at a railway station, and this alteration caused a train which would otherwise have passed the station without slackening speed, to slacken speed, and to come nearly to a stand, it was held (Martin, B., diss.) that he was guilty of "obstructing" a train within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 36. R. v. Hadfield, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 253; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 131; 11 Cox, 574. And so where the defendant, by holding up his arms in the mode used by inspectors of the line when desirous of stopping a train, intentionally induced the driver of a train to reduce his speed from twenty miles to four miles an hour, although the train was not wholly stopped, but immediately afterwards resumed its ordinary speed, he was held to be guilty of an unlawful obstruction within that section. R. v. Hardy, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 278; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 62; 11 Cox, 656. "Any unlawful act" in s. 36 includes each of the acts mentioned in s. 35. Id. An acquittal on an indictment framed under s. 35 is no bar to a subsequent indictment upon the same facts for a misdemeanor under s. 36. R. v. Gilmore, 15 Cox, 85, Huddleston, B., and see ante, p. 157.

DESTROYING DAMS OF FISH-PONDS, ETC.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 32.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut through, break down, or otherwise destroy the dam, flood-gate, or sluice of any fish-pond, or of any water which shall be private property, or in which there shall be any private right of fishery with intent thereby to take or destroy any of the fish in such pond or water, or so as thereby to cause the loss or destuction of any of the fish, or shall unlawfully and maliciously put any lime, or other noxious material, in any such pond or water, with intent thereby to destroy any of the fish that may then be or that may thereafter be put therein, or shall unlawfully and maliciously cut through, break down, or otherwise destroy the dam or flood-gate of any mill-pond, reservoir, or pool, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 15, with the additions italicized.]

36 & 37 Vict. c. 71 (Salmon, etc., Fisheries Act, 1873, s. 13.]—The provisions of the 32nd section of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), so far as they relate to poisoning any water with intent to kill or destroy fish, shall be extended and apply to salmon rivers, as if the words " or in any salmon river " were inserted in the said section in lieu of the words " private rights of fishery " after the words " noxious material in any such pond or water." (As to the proper construction to be placed upon this section, see R. v. Vasey and Lally [1905] 2 K. B. 748; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 19; 21 Cox, 49.)

Indictment for breaking down the Dam of a Fish-pond. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 32, supra.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Destroying dam of fish-pond, contrary to section 32 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously cut through, broke down or otherwise destroyed the dam [flood-gate or sluice] of a fish-pond with intent to take or destroy some of the fish in the pond.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping.—

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 32; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine and recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant broke down or destroyed the dam of the fish-pond situate as described in the indictment, and that it was done maliciously (see ante, p. 741, post, p. 800); and prove circumstances from which the intent may be inferred (see ante, pp. 352, 357); and if the loss of fish is stated in the indictment, prove that fact.

OFFENCES WITH REFERENCE TO ANIMALS.

(a) Killing or Maiming.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 40.—Killing or maiming cattle.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously kill, maim or wound any cattle shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years. . . . [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 16.]

Sect. 41.—Killing or maiming animals other than cattle.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously kill, maim, or wound any dog, bird, beast or other animal, not being cattle, but being either the subject of larceny at common law, or being ordinarily kept in a state of confinement, or for any domestic purpose, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice of the peace, at the discretion of the justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months, or else shall forfeit and pay, over and above the amount of injury done, such sum of money not exceeding twenty pounds as to the justice shall seem meet; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such term not exceeding twelve months as the convicting justice shall think fit. [This section was new law in 1861. The accused can elect to be tried on indictment. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (ante, p. 7). The indictment need not state the fact of the election. R. v. Chambers, 65 L. where a gamekeeper killed a trespassing dog at which he had shot (with the intention of driving it away, and in order to protect his master's pheasants), it was held that the test of liability to be convicted under this section was whether he acted under the bonâ fide belief that what he did was necessary for the protection of his master's property, and that it was the only way in which it could be protected. Miles v. Hutchings [1903] 2 K. Indictment for killing a Horse. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 40.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Killing or maiming cattle, contrary to section 40 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously killed [maimed or wounded] a horse.

It has been held that the particular species of cattle killed, maimed, or wounded, must be specified, and that an allegation that the prisoner maimed certain cattle is not sufficient. R. v. Chalkley, R. & R. 258. But see now the Indictments Act, 1915, s. 3, ante, p. 44. The word "cattle" is the only word in s. 40, and this in former statutes upon this subject (9 G. 1, c. 22, s. 1; 4 G. 4, c. 54, s. 2) was held to include horses, as well as oxen, etc., R. v. Paty, 2 W. Bl. 721; 2 East, P. C. 1074; and also pigs, R. v. Chapple, R. & R. 77; and asses, R. v. Whitney, 1 Mood. 3.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.— 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 40; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant killed the horse. Prove also that it was done maliciously (see ante, p. 741, post, p. 800); but it is not now necessary, as it was formerly, to prove the offence to have been committed from malice to the owner. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 58 (ante, p. 738); R. v. Tivey, 1 Den. xviii. 63; 1 C. & K. 704. On an indictment under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 16 (rep.), for unlawfully and maliciously killing a mare, it was proved that the prisoner caused the death of the mare through injuries inflicted by his inserting the handle of a fork into her vagina. There was no evidence that the prisoner was actuated by ill-will towards the owner of the mare, or spite towards the mare, or by any motive except the gratification of his own depraved taste. The jury found that the prisoner did not intend to kill the mare; but that he knew what he was doing would or might kill her, and nevertheless did what he did recklessly, and not caring whether the mare was injured or not. The jury having convicted the prisoner, it was held that there was sufficient malice, and that the conviction was right. R. v. Welch, 1 Q. B. D. 23; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 17.

Upon an indictment for administering sulphuric acid to a horse, evidence may be given of other acts of administering, in order to show the intent. R. v. Mogg, 4 C. & P. 364, and ante, pp. 352 et seq.

To constitute maiming, a permanent injury must be inflicted on the animal. R. v. Jeans, 1 C. & K. 539. But if a wounding is alleged, it is not necessary to prove a permanent injury. Where the wounding proved was driving a nail into the frog of a horse's foot, but it appeared that the horse was likely to recover, it was objected that no wounding was within the meaning of 9 G. 1, c. 22 (rep.), that was not productive of permanent injury to the animal; but the judges overruled the objection, holding that the word "wound" was used by the legislature as contra-distinguished from maiming, which is a permanent injury. R. v. Haywood, 2 East, P. C. 1076; R. & R. 16. It is not necessary to constitute a wounding within this section that any instrument other than the hand should be used. R. v. Bullock, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 115; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 47; 11 Cox, 125.

Upon an indictment for killing, wounding, and maiming a mare, it appeared that the defendant poured nitrous acid into her ears, some of which either ran into her eye, or was poured into it, and blinded her; she was killed by her owner, and surgeons proved that the injuries done to the ears were not wounds, but ulcers; the defendant was therefore convicted of the maiming, and the judges held the conviction right. R. v. Owens, 1 Mood. 205.

Upon an indictment for wounding a sheep, it appeared that the prisoner set a dog at the sheep, which bit it; and Parke, J., held that this was not a wounding within the meaning of 4 G. 4, c. 54, s. 2 (rep.). R. v. Hughes, 2 C. & P. 420. But see R. v. Elmsly, 2 Lew. 126. And where the prisoner set fire to a cow-house, in which was a cow, which was burnt to death, Taunton, J., held that the prisoner could be convicted upon an indictment for killing the cow. R. v. Haughton, 5 C. & P. 559.

Where the injury is done in self-defence, the defendant is entitled to acquittal. See Hanway v. Boultbee, 4 C. & P. 350; 1 M. & Rob. 15.

Upon an indictment under this section, Russell, C.J., after consulting Grantham, J., held that a man could be convicted for maliciously injuring an animal of his own. R. v. Parry [1900] 35 L. J. Newsp. 456, sed quære. Such an act falls within the Protection of Animals Act, 1911, infra.

As to injuries to trespassing animals, see note to s. 41 (ante, p. 788), and R. v. Fetzer [1900] 19 N. Z. L. R. 438.

(b) Cruelty to Animals.

The Protection of Animals Act, 1911 (1 & 2 G. 5, c. 27), which repeals and replaces the Cruelty to Animals Acts of 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 92) and 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 60), does not create any offence punishable on indictment. The penalty for cruelty to animals under this Act is six months' imprisonment, but this has been reduced to three months by s. 1 of the Protection of Animals Act (1911) Amendment Act, 1912 (2 & 3 Geo. 5, c. 17). Section 2 of the Act of 1849 (replaced by s. 1, (1) (a) of the Act of 1911) applied to cock-fighting. Allen v. Small [1904] 2 Ir. Rep. 705 : Budge v. Parsons, 3 B. & S. 382. Where a gamekeeper shot a dog (which he found disturbing pheasants in a field over which the keeper's master had sporting rights), meaning not to kill it, but to injure it, if necessary, for the purpose of frightening it away, it was held that proof of the existence of such intent as above stated did not necessarily render the keeper liable to conviction under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 2. Armstrong v. Michell, 67 J. P. 329. Where, under the same section, C. was convicted of overstocking five cows with milk, it was held, on application for a certiorari, that it was not necessary to have a separate summons and conviction in respect of each cow. R. v. Cable [1906] 1 K. B. 719; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 381; 70 J. P. 246. Where the alleged cruelty consisted in a practice which was found as a fact to be reasonably necessary for the identification of sheep, the summons was held to have been rightly dismissed. Bowyer v. Morgan, 70 J. P. 253. As to the construction of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 2 (replaced by 1 & 2 G. 5, c. 27, s. 1 (1) (a)), see Johnson v. Needham [1909] 1 K. B. 626; 78 L. J. (K. B.) 412.

The Cruelty to Animals Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 77), as appears from its preamble, was passed to amend the law relating to cruelty to animals, by extending it to the cases of animals which for medical, physiological, or other scientific purposes are subjected when alive to experiments calculated to inflict pain. For this purpose it enacts in s. 2, that a person shall not perform on a living animal any experiment calculated to give pain, except subject to the restrictions imposed by the Act, under a penalty not exceeding 50*l.* for the first offence, and not exceeding 100*l.* or imprisonment for not exceeding three months for a second or any subsequent offence; and in s. 6, that an exhibition to the general public, whether admitted on payment of money or gratuitously, of experiments on living animals calculated to give pain, shall be illegal, and shall subject the offender to a penalty not exceeding 50*l.* for the first offence, and not exceeding 100*l.* or imprisonment for not exceeding three months for a second or any subsequent offence. By s. 14, in England offences against this Act may be prosecuted and penalties under this Act recovered before a court of summary jurisdiction in manner directed by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts; but by s. 15, " In England, where a person is accused before a court of summary jurisdiction of any offence against this Act, in respect of which a penalty of more than five pounds can be imposed, the accused may, on appearing before the Court of summary jurisdiction, declare that he objects to being tried for such offence by a court of summary jurisdiction, and thereupon the Court of summary jurisdiction may deal with the case in all respects as if the accused were charged with an indictable offence, and not an offence punishable on summary conviction, and the offence may be prosecuted on indictment accordingly." (Cf. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17, ante, p. 7.) By s. 21, "A prosecution under this Act against a licensed person shall not be instituted except with the assent in writing of the secretary of state."

DESTROYING HOPBINDS.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 19.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut or otherwise destroy any hopbinds growing on poles in any plantation of hops shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years, . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 18, as to which see R. v. Boucher, 5 Jur. 709.]

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Destroying hopbinds, contrary to section 19 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously cut or otherwise destroyed certain hopbinds growing on poles in a plantation of hops.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under the age of sixteen, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 19; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant cut or otherwise destroyed the hopbinds, or some part of them, as alleged; that they were at the time growing in a plantation of hops, situate as described. Prove, also, that the act was done maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 799.)

DESTROYING TREES, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 20.—Destroying trees in parks, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, bark, root up, or otherwise destroy or damage the whole or any part of any tree, sapling, or shrub, or any underwood, growing in any park, pleasure-ground, garden, orchard, or avenue, or in any ground adjoining or belonging to any dwelling-house (in case the amount of the injury done shall exceed the sum of one pound) shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude . . . or to be imprisoned. . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 19.]

Sect. 21.—Destroying trees not in parks, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, bark, root up, or otherwise destroy or damage, the whole or any part of any tree, sapling, or shrub, or any underwood, growing elsewhere than in any park, pleasure-ground, garden, orchard, or avenue, or in any ground adjoining to or belonging to any dwelling-house (in case the amount of injury done shall exceed the sum of five pounds) shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 19.]

(24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 20.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Damaging trees, contrary to section 20 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously damaged an oak tree [sapling or shrub or underwood, as the case may be] growing in a park, or pleasure garden [orchard or avenue, etc., see the section, supra], and thereby did injury exceeding the sum of one pound.

A count may be added for cutting with intent to steal the trees. (See ante, p. 574).

Felony: penal servitude for not less than three years and not exceeding five years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 20; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant "cut, broke, barked, rooted up, or otherwise destroyed or damaged" one or more of the trees mentioned in the indictment, and that the injury done exceeds the sum of one pound. Prove that the trees, at the time, were growing in a park situate as described in the indictment (or, "in a pleasure-ground, garden, orchard, or avenue, or in any ground adjoining or belonging to a dwelling-house") (see R. v. Hodges, M. & M. 341, ante, p. 575). Prove, also, that the trees were cut maliciously (see ante, p. 741, post, p. 800); but if it is doubtful whether the defendant did not intend to steal the trees, add a count to meet that. (See ante, p. 575.)

Indictment for cutting, etc., Trees, etc., growing elsewhere, Value about 5l.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 21, ante, p. 793.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Damaging trees, contrary to section 21 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously damaged an oak tree there growing, and thereby did injury exceeding the sum of 5*l.*

Felony: see the last precedent.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 21.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant cut, etc., the tree mentioned in the indictment; that damage exceeding five pounds was done at one time (R. v. Williams, 9 Cox, 338 (C. C. R. Ir.)), or as part of one continuing transaction (see ante, p. 676); and that the cutting was done maliciously (ante, p. 741, post, p. 800). The "amount of injury done" means the actual injury done to the trees, etc., by the defendant's act; it is not sufficient to bring the case within the statute, that, although the amount of such actual injury is less than 5*l.*, the amount of consequential damage (as by its being necessary, in consequence of the defendant's act, to stub up and replace a hedge) would exceed 5*l.* R. v. Whiteman, Dears. 353; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 120; 6 Cox, 370. (See ante, p. 575.) It is not necessary to prove that the trees grew elsewhere than in a park, etc.

DESTROYING TREES, ETC., AFTER TWO PREVIOUS CONVICTIONS.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 22.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, bark, root up, or otherwise destroy or damage the whole or any part of any tree, sapling, or shrub, or any underwood, wheresoever the same may be growing, the injury done being to the amount of one shilling at the least, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice of the peace, at the discretion of the justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for any term not exceeding three months, or else shall forfeit and pay, over and above the amount of the injury done, such sum of money, not exceeding five pounds, as to the justice shall seem meet; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence, either against this or any former Act of Parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall for such second offence be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such term, not exceeding twelve months, as the convicting justice shall think fit; and whosoever, having been twice convicted of any such offence (whether both or either of such convictions shall have taken place before or after the passing of this Act), shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 20. The accused, when charged after a first conviction, can elect to be tried on indictment. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (ante, p. 7). The election need not be averred: see ante, p. 788.]

Indictment after two previous Convictions for cutting Trees, etc., wheresoever growing, Value 1s.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Damaging trees, contrary to section 22 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously damaged an oak tree there growing, and did injury to the amount of two shillings.

A. B. has been twice previously convicted of an offence under section 22 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861, namely, at ——, on the —— day of ——, and at ——, on the —— day of ——.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 22. As to fine, recognizances, and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant cut and damaged the tree: prove that it was done maliciously (see ante, p. 741, post, p. 800); and prove that the damage amounted at least to one shilling. (See ante, p. 575.) Prove the two previous convictions in the manner directed by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, p. 421), and the identity of the defendant.

In Heaven v. Crutchley [1903] 68 J. P. 52, it was held that a person could be convicted under this section for damage done in assertion of a legal right if the damage exceeded what could be reasonably supposed to be necessary for the assertion of the right. The court followed R. v. Clemens [1898] 1 Q. B. 556; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 482; 19 Cox, 18.

DESTROYING PLANTS, ETC., AND FENCES.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 23.—Plants growing in gardens.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously destroy, or damage with intent to destroy, any plant, root, fruit, or vegetable production, growing in any garden, orchard, nursery-ground, hothouse, greenhouse, or conservatory shall on conviction thereof before a justice of the peace, at the discretion of the justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months, or else shall forfeit and pay, over and above the amount of the injury done, such sum of money, not exceeding twenty pounds, as to the justice shall seem meet;

Sect. 24.—Plants not growing in gardens.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously destroy, or damage with intent to destroy, any cultivated root or plant used for the food of man or beast, or for medicine, or for distilling, or for dyeing, or for or in the course of any manufacture, and growing on any land, open or enclosed, not being a garden, orchard, or nursery-ground, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice of the peace, at the discretion of the justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding one month, or else shall forfeit and pay, over and above the amount of the injury done, such sum of money not exceeding twenty shillings as to the justice shall seem meet, and in default of payment thereof, together with the costs, shall be committed as aforesaid for any term not exceeding one month, unless payment be sooner made;

And whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence, either against this or any former Act of Parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such term not exceeding six months, as the convicting justice shall think fit. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 22. On a charge for a second or subsequent offence, the accused can elect to be tried on indictment. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (ante, p. 7). The election need not be averred: see ante, p. 788.]

Sect. 25.—Destroying fences.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, throw down, or in anywise destroy any fence of any description whatsoever, or any wall, stile, or gate, or any part thereof respectively, shall, on conviction thereof, before a justice of the peace, for the first offence, forfeit and pay over and above the amount of the injury done, such sum of money not exceeding 5*l.*, as to the justice shall seem meet;

And whosoever having been convicted of any such offence, either under this or any former Act of Parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such term not exceeding twelve months, as the convicting justice shall think fit. [This section is taken from 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 23. On a charge for a second or subsequent offence, the accused can elect to be tried on indictment. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (ante, p. 7). The election need not be averred: see ante, p. 788.]

Indictment after a previous Conviction, for destroying Plants, etc., in a Garden, etc. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 23, ante, p. 796.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Damaging plants, contrary to section 23 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously destroyed, [or damaged with intent to destroy] a rhubarb plant or root [plant, root, fruit or vegetable production] growing in a garden [or orchard, nursery-ground, hothouse, greenhouse or conservatory].

A. B. has been previously convicted of an offence against section 23 of the Malicious Damage Act, namely, at ——, on the —— day of ——.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 23; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove the first offence stated in the indictment: that the defendant destroyed the rhubarb plant, situate as described in the indictment; and that the offence was committed maliciously. (See ante, p. 741, post, p. 800.) Prove the previous conviction in the manner directed by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, p. 421), and the identity of the defendant.

The words "plant" or "vegetable production" do not apply to young trees. R. v. Hodges, M. & M. 341. (See ante, p. 575.)

DESTROYING OR DAMAGING WORKS OF ART, ETC., IN MUSEUMS, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 39.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously destroy or damage any book, manuscript, picture, print, statue, bust, or vase, or any other article or thing kept for the purposes of art, science, or literature, or as an object of curiosity, in any museum, gallery, cabinet, library or other repository, which museum, gallery, cabinet, library or other repository is either at all times, or from time to time, open for the admission of the public or of any considerable number of persons to view the same, either by the permission of the proprietor thereof, or by the payment of money before entering the same, or any picture, statue, monument, or other memorial of the dead, painted glass, or other ornament or work of art, in any church, chapel, meeting-house, or other place of divine worship, or in any building belonging to the queen, or to any county, riding, division, city, borough, poor-law union, parish or place, or to any university, or college or hall of any university, or to any inn of court, or in any street, square, churchyard, burial-ground, public garden or ground, or any statue or monument exposed to public view, or any ornament, railing, or fence surrounding such statue or monument, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping:

Provided that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the right of any person to recover, by action at law, damages for the injury so committed. [This section was framed from 8 & 9 Vict. c. 44, ss. 1, 4; and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 33, s. 6, with the additions italicized. The defacing of tombs, etc., is said to be punishable at common law. See Corven's case, 12 Co. Rep. 105; Greaves, Crim. Law Cons. Acts (2nd ed.), p. 238.

MALICIOUS DAMAGE TO PROPERTY TO AMOUNT OF FIVE POUNDS.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (Malicious Damage Act, 1861), s. 51.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously commit any damage, injury, or spoil to or upon any real or personal property whatsoever, either of a public or private nature, for which no punishment is hereinbefore provided, [the damage, injury, or spoil being to an amount exceeding five pounds,] shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour: and in case any such offence shall be committed between the hours of nine of the clock in the evening and six of the clock in the next morning, shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude. . . . [This section was new law in 1861. The words italicized between square brackets have been repealed by 4 & 5 G. 5. c. 58, s. 14 (2), infra.]

4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58 (Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914), s. 14.—Provisions as to malicious damage to property.]—(1) If any person wilfully or maliciously commits any damage to any real or personal property whatsoever, either of a public or private nature, and the amount of the damage does not, in the opinion of the court, exceed twenty pounds, he shall be liable on summary conviction—(a) if the amount of the damage, in the opinion of the court, exceeds five pounds, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds; and (b) if the amount of the damage is, in the opinion of the court, five pounds or less, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two months or to a fine not exceeding five pounds; and in either case to the payment of such further amount as appears to the court reasonable compensation for the damage so committed which last-mentioned amount shall be paid to the party aggrieved: Provided that this provision shall not apply where the alleged offender acted under a fair and reasonable supposition that he had a right to do the act complained of.

(2) So much of section fifty-one of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861, as limits the cases which may be dealt with under that section to cases where the damage, injury or spoil exceeds five pounds, shall be repealed but a court of summary jurisdiction shall not commit any person for trial for an offence under that section unless it is of opinion that the damage, injury or spoil exceeds five pounds.

(3) Except so far as otherwise provided in the last foregoing sub-section, nothing in this section shall be construed as preventing a court of summary jurisdiction from committing a person for trial for an offence notwithstanding that the offence is an offence which the court has power to deal with summarily under this section.

Indictment.

An indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 51, can be framed from the precedents, ante, pp. 793, 795.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. If committed between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m., the offender may be sentenced to penal servitude for not more than five years nor less than three years. See 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (1), ante, pp. 237, 238. As to fine and recognizances, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73, ante, p. 740.

Evidence.

To justify a conviction under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 51, the act done by the prisoner must be done wilfully, or at least recklessly. Where a prisoner was indicted for unlawfully and maliciously committing damage, about the value of 5*l.*, to a window in a house, and the jury found that the prisoner threw a stone which broke the window, but that he threw it at some people he had been fighting with, intending to strike one or more of them with it, but not intending to break the window, and returned a verdict of guilty; it was held that upon this finding the conviction must be quashed. It was, however, intimated by the Court that if the jury had found that the prisoner was aware that the window was where it was, and that he was likely to break it, and was reckless whether he did so or not, the case might have been different. R. v. Pembliton, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 119; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 91. See R. v. Latimer, 17 Q. B. D. 359; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 135 (where the meaning of the decision in R. v. Pembliton is explained), and R. v. Welch, 1 Q. B. D. 23; 45 L. J. (M. C.) (ante, p. 741). Where a thief broke a window in order to reach and steal goods in a shop, it was held that his act was a misdemeanor within the Malicious Damage Act, 1861. M'Dowell v. Mayor, etc., of Dublin [1903] 2 Ir. Rep. 541, C. A. In Re Borrowes [1902] 2 Ir. Rep. 593 (C. A.), some boys, who had been allowed to visit a demesne, from motives of curiosity broke open the doors and windows of a building in the demesne and entered the building. In getting out again, one of the boys broke some mirrors stored in the building by wilfully and recklessly climbing over them. It was held that these acts were wanton and malicious, and punishable under s. 52. Where the defence to an indictment under the section is that the acts complained of were done in exercise of the claim of right, it will fail unless the defendants can show that they acted in bonâ fide exercise of a supposed right, and did no more damage than they could reasonably have supposed to be necessary for its assertion. R. v. Clemens [1898] 1 Q. B. 556; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 482; 19 Cox, 18; and see Heaven v. Crutchley, 68 J. P. 53: Croydon Rural District Council v. Cowley, 73 J. P. 205. In an indictment under s. 51 for maliciously damaging certain articles of personal property, the damage exceeding 5*l.*, it is not necessary to allege the value of each article injured, but only that the amount of damage done to the several articles exceeded 5*l.* in the aggregate. R. v. Thoman, 12 Cox, 54 (C. C. R.); cf. R. v. Forsyth, R. & R. 274. The measure of damage is the cost of replacing the damaged property. R. v. Hewitt, 76 J. P. 360; 28 T. L. R. 378; 7 Cr. App. R. 219. Where A. and B. were jointly indicted under s. 51, and it was proved that A. broke a window of less value than 5*l.* while B. broke other windows a few yards away, the value of which added to the value of that broken by A. exceeded 5*l.*, and there was some evidence that A. and B. were acting in concert, it was held that A. had been rightly convicted, and that it was unnecessary for each to know of the existence of the other if they were both acting under the direction of the same organisation. R. v. Joachim, 28 T. L. R. 380. The soil of a town moor was vested in the corporation of the town in fee, but freemen were under statute entitled to the " full right and benefit of the herbage " of the moor for pasturing cows. It was held that this right to the herbage was not " any real or personal property whatsoever " within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 52, which applies only to tangible property and not to a mere incorporeal right. Laws v. Eltringham, 8 Q. B. D. 283; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 13. In Gardner v. Mansbridge, 19 Q. B. D. 217, picking wild mushrooms was held not to be within s. 52. In Gayford v. Chouler [1898] 1 Q. B. 316; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 404, damaging grass by walking over it was held within that section. Sect. 52 has the words " wilfully or maliciously," whereas s. 51 has " unlawfully and maliciously ": see Roper v. Knott [1898] 1 Q. B. 868; 61 L. J. (Q. B.) 574; 19 Cox, 69. " Wilfully " means " deliberately and intentionally, not by accident or inadvertence " : see R. v. Senior [1899] 1 Q. B. 283, 291; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 175.

ATTEMPTED INJURIES TO POST OFFICE LETTER-BOXES.

Statute.

8 Edw. 7, c. 48 (Post Office Act, 1908), s. 61.—Placing injurious substances in or against post office letter-boxes.]—(1) A person shall not place or attempt to place in or against any post office letter-box any fire, any match, any light, any explosive substance, any dangerous substance, any filth, any noxious or deleterious substance, or any fluid, and shall not commit a nuisance in or against any post office letter-box, and shall not do or attempt to do anything likely to injure the box, appurtenances or contents. (2) If any person acts in contravention of this section he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding 10*l.*, and on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a period not exceeding twelve months. SECT. 7.

FORGERY.

The earliest law books treat of forgery only in the case of forging seals of state, which was treason. Bracton de Coronâ, ff. 118 b, 119 b. Other forms of forgery came to be treated as misdemeanors, in all cases of "forging any document by which any other person may be injured, or uttering any such document knowing it to be forged, with intent to defraud." Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 350; 4 Bl. Com. 247. R. v. Coogan, 1 Leach, 448: R. v. Ward, 2 Str. 747; 2 East, P. C. 861; R. v. Jones, 2 East, P. C. 991: R. v. Wilcox, R. & R. 50.

Effect of Forgery Act, 1913.]—By the Forgery Act, 1913 (3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 27), s. 4, forgery of any document which is not made felony under that or any other statute for the time being in force, if committed with intent to defraud (or in the case of a public document, with intent to defraud or deceive) is a misdemeanor punishable with imprisonment with or without hard labour for any term not exceeding two years. By s. 14 (1) (b) of the same Act, provision is made as to the venue in the case of an offence indictable at common law. See post, p. 828.

Common Law.

Forgery at common law is defined by Blackstone (4 Com. 247) as the fraudulent making or alteration of a writing to the prejudice of another man's right; and this definition was accepted in R. v. Elsworth, 2 East, P. C. 986, and R. v. Riley [1896] 1 Q. B. 309; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 74; 18 Cox, 285. Notwithstanding some ancient authorities to the contrary, forgery is indictable at common law even if the fraud contemplated to be effected thereby is not actually effected, and the offence is committed if intent to defraud is proved. See R. v. Ward, 2 Str. 747; 2 Ld. Raym. 1461; 2 East, P. C. 861, 862; 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1643. It is not necessary to allege in the indictment an intent to defraud any particular person. 3 & 4 Geo. 5. c. 27, s. 17 (2), post, p. 829, Indictments Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90), rule 10, ante, p. 52. Forgery must be of a writing (R. v. Closs, Dears. & B. 460; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 54; 7 Cox, 494), but may be of the body of the writing, or the signature or the seal. R. v. Collins, 1 Cox, 57, and for a discussion as to what amounts to forgery at common law, see R. v. White, 1 Den. 208.

The following have been held to be forgeries at common law if done with intent to defraud or deceive:—Counterfeiting a letter of credit, Style, 12; a bill of lading, R. v. Stocker, 1 Salk. 342; a debtor's discharge, R. v. Fawcett, 2 East, P. C. 862; a summons in the common law county court, R. v. Collier, 5 C. & P. 160; a magistrate's order to a gaoler to discharge a prisoner, as upon bail having been given, R. v. Harris, 1 Mood. 393; 6 C. & P. 129; an order of admission to see a prisoner committed for trial, R. v. Barrett, 130, C. C. C. Sess. Pap. 797, Fulton, Common Serjeant; a certificate of the master of a ship that the defendant had served on board the ship, and conducted himself in a sober and orderly manner, the production of such certificate being necessary to enable the defendant to undergo the voluntary examination at the Trinity House, as to his ability to act as a master, R. v. Toshack, 1 Den. 492; 4 Cox, 38; a certificate of ordination, R. v. Etheridge, 19 Cox, 676; a testimonial as to character in order to obtain an appointment as a schoolmaster, R. v. Sharman, Dears. 285; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 51; 6 Cox, 312; a recommendation to a situation as a police constable, R. v. Moah, Dears. & B. 550; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 204; a railway pass, R. v. Boult, 2 C. & K. 604; forgery by a money lender of the signature of an Admiralty official in order to obtain payment of a debt justly due, R. v. Parker, 74 J. P. 208. And see 2 East, P. C. 862, and the authorities there cited, and R. v. Riley [1896] 1 Q. B. 309; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 74; and 2 Russ, Cr. (7th ed.) 1600 et seq.

Where B., the prosecutor, made powders called B.'s Baking Powders, which he sold in packets wrapped up in printed papers, and the defendant caused a great number of wrappers to be printed, so nearly resembling B.'s as to deceive persons of ordinary observation, and make them believe they were B.'s, in which the defendant inclosed powders of his own, which he fraudulently sold as B.'s powders; this was held not to be forgery, but obtaining money by false pretences. R. v. Smith, Dears. & B. 566; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 225. Frauds of this kind are also punishable under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 28).

Forgery of a signature on a painting is not forgery at common law. R. v. Closs, Dears. & B. 460; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 54; 7 Cox, 494. But the offence is a common law cheat if the picture is sold as genuine, or it may be the subject of an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, or may be punished summarily under the Fine Arts Copyright Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 68, ss. 7, 8).

It has been held not to be forgery at common law to forge a medical diploma, unless there was at the time of the forgery an intent to defraud (R. v. Hodgson, 25 L. J. (M. C.) 78; Dears. & B. 3; 7 Cox, 122).

Falsification of accounts (ante, p. 734) is in some, but not all, cases, forgery. Re Arton (No. 2) [1896] 1 Q. B. 509, 517; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 50, Russell, L.C.J. Filling up the voting papers of marksmen with their assent has been held not to be forgery at common law. R. v. Hartshorne, 6 Cox, 295. Nor is it forgery at common law for a bank clerk to make false entries in a book of account kept by the bank (Re Windsor, 34 L. J. (M. C.) 163; 6 B. & S. 522; 10 Cox, 118).

Uttering.]—It is a misdemeanor at common law knowingly to utter a forged document, the forging whereof is a misdemeanor at common law; and it is not necessary to prove that any fraud was actually effected by means of the uttering. R. v. Sharman, Dears. 285; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 51; 6 Cox, 312, expressly overruling R. v. Boult, 2 C. & K. 604.

FORGERY BY STATUTE.

The Forgery Act, 1913 (3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 27), has now consolidated the statute law relating to forgery and kindred offences, and rendered unnecessary much of the matter which appeared in the 24th edition of this book. Some cases are retained as illustrative of provisions in the Act of 1913 which are similar to provisions in the Act of 1861, or other Acts now superseded by the consolidating statute.

Statutes.

3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 27 (Forgery Act, 1913), s. 1.—Definition of forgery.]—(1) For the purposes of this Act, forgery is the making of a false document in order that it may be used as genuine, and in the case of the seals and dies mentioned in this Act the counterfeiting of a seal or die, and forgery with intent to defraud or deceive, as the case may be, is punishable as in this Act provided.

(2) A document is false within the meaning of this Act if the whole or any material part thereof purports to be made by or on behalf or on account of a person who did not make it nor authorise its making; or if, though made by or on behalf or on account of the person by whom or by whose authority it purports to have been made, the time or place of making, where either is material, or, in the case of a document identified by number or mark, the number or any distinguishing mark identifying the document, is falsely stated therein; and in particular a document is false :—(a) if any material alteration, whether by addition, insertion, obliteration, erasure, removal, or otherwise, has been made therein; (b) if the whole or some material part of it purports to be made by or on behalf of a fictitious or deceased person; (c) if, though made in the name of an existing person, it is made by him or by his authority with the intention that it should pass as having been made by some person, real or fictitious, other than the person who made or authorised it.

(3) For the purposes of this Act—(a) It is immaterial in what language a document is expressed or in what place within or without the King's dominions it is expressed to take effect; (b) Forgery of a document may be complete even if the document when forged is incomplete, or is not or does not purport to be such a document as would be binding or sufficient in law; [This provision gets rid of such difficulties as occurred in R. v. Wall, 2 East, P. C. 953.] (c) The crossing on any cheque, draft on a banker, post-office money order, postal order, coupon, or other document the crossing of which is authorised or recognised by law, shall be a material part of such cheque, draft, order, coupon, or document.

Definition of forgery.]—Before the Act of 1913 the statutes relating to forgery did not define forgery. The following instances of acts held to be or not to be forgery may still be of some use as illustrations. The slightest alteration of a genuine instrument in a material part, whereby a new operation is given to it; e.g., making a lease of the manor of Dale appear to be a lease of the manor of Sale, by changing the D to S; 1 Hawk. c. 70, s. 2; making a bill of exchange for eight pounds appear to be eighty pounds, by adding a cipher to the 8; R. v. Elsworth, 2 East, P. C. 986, 988; altering a banker's one-pound note by substituting the word ten for the word one; R. v. Post, R. & R. 101; or altering the notes of a country banker, as to the place at which they were made payable in London. R. v. Treble, R. & R. 164; 3 Taunt. 328; 1 Leach. 1040; expunging an indorsement of part payment on a bill; R. v. Bigg, 3 P. Wms. 419; 2 East, P. C. 855, 882; counterfeiting the signature of one of several parties to a bond, though the other signatures are genuine; R. v. Richards, 1 Cox, 62; altering a document already forged by the person who makes the alteration: R. v. Kinder, 2 East, P. C. 855; were all held to be forgeries.

Forging the signature of the drawer of a bill of exchange was deemed to be the same precisely as forging the entire bill, and could be laid as such. Where an illiterate woman of the name of Dunn represented herself to the prosecutor as the widow of a deceased seaman of the name of Wallace, and obtained from him a loan of money upon her promissory note; the note was written by the prosecutor, and upon his asking her what name he should put to it, she answered "Mary Wallace;" he thereupon subscribed the name "Mary Wallace" to the note; and she affixed her mark in the usual place, between the christian and surname; the judges held this to be a forgery of the note. R. v. Dunn, 2 East, P. C. 962, 976; 1 Leach, 57. And whether the name forged was that of a merely fictitious person, who never existed, or of a person actually existing, was wholly immaterial: it was as much a forgery in the one case as in the other; R. v. Lewis, Fost, 116: R. v. Wilks, 2 East, P. C. 957: R. v. Bolland, Id. 958; 1 Leach, 83: R. v. Lockett, Id. 94; R. & R. 389: R. v. Sheppard, 1 Leach. 226: R. v. Francis, R. & R. 209: R. v. Peacock, Id. 278: and see R. v. Webb, 3 B. & B. 228; R. & R. 405: R. v. Watts, R. & R. 436: R. v. Mitchell, 1 Den. 282 n.; if the fictitious name was assumed for the purpose of fraud in the particular instance in question, R. v. Bontien, R. & R. 260. And the signing of a bill of exchange in the name of a non-existing firm, or in the defendant's own name to represent a fictitious firm with intent to defraud, was forgery. R. v. Rogers, 8 C. & P. 629. But merely assuming and signing a fictitious name, without any intention to defraud by the use of such fictitious name, although the transaction may be fraudulent in other respects, was not forgery. R. v. Martin, 5 Q. B. D. 34; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 11; 14 Cox, 375; and cf. R. v. Whyte, 5 Cox, 290. So, where the prisoner, Robert M., in payment for goods bought by him from the prosecutor, drew a cheque in the name of William M. in the presence of the prosecutor upon a bank at which the prisoner had no account, and gave it to the prosecutor as his own cheque drawn in his own name, the prisoner knowing at the time he drew the cheque that it would be dishonoured, and the prosecutor, who well knew the prisoner and his real name, receiving the cheque in the belief that it was drawn in the prisoner's own name, it was held that the prisoner was not guilty of the offence of forgery. Id.

Where a man drew a bill on Williams & Co., bankers, 3, Birchin Lane, London, and at the time he paid away the bill he was asked if the drawees were Williams, Burgess & Co., the London bankers, and he answered in the affirmative; the bill was presented, not to Williams, Burgess & Co., who lived at No. 20 in the same street, but at a counting house, No. 3, where the words "Williams & Co." were on a brass plate on the door, and it was there accepted in the name of "Williams & Co."; proof was given at the trial that the acceptance was not that of Williams, Burgess & Co., and that there were no other London bankers of that name; the prisoner was convicted; but, upon the point being afterwards argued before the judges, ten of them held that it was not a forgery. R. v. Watts, R. & R. 436; 3 B. & B. 197. But where a bill, payable to J. S. or order, got into the hands of another person of the same name, and he indorsed it, it was held to be a forgery. Mead v. Young, 4 T. R. 28. It was forgery for a person, having authority to fill up a blank acceptance or a cheque for a certain sum, to fill up the bill or cheque for a larger sum (R. v. Minter Hart, 1 Mood. C. C. 486; 7 C. & P. 652: R. v. Bateman, 1 Cox, 186: R. v. Wilson, 1 Den. 284; 2 C. & K. 527; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 82: see R. v. Richardson, 8 Cox, 448; 2 F. & F. 343); or to fill in the sum on a cheque signed in blank. Flower v. Shaw, 2 C. & K. 703. And it was forgery for a man to put the name of another on a bill of exchange without his authority, even if when he did so he expected to be able to meet the bill when due. R. v. Forbes, 7 C. & P. 224. See R. v. Hill, 2 Mood. 30; 8 C. & P. 274: R. v. Cooke, 8 C. & P. 582.

Intent.]—For forgery to constitute an offence there must be an intent to defraud or deceive. In the case of forgeries within section 2, infra, an intent to defraud is necessary; in the case of forgeries within sections 3, 4, and 5 the intent may be either to defraud or to deceive. See further as to Intent, post, p. 833.

Sect. 2.—Forgery of certain documents with intent to defraud.]—(1) Forgery of the following documents, if committed with intent to defraud, shall be felony and punishable with penal servitude for life:—(a) Any will, codicil, or other testamentary document, either of a dead or of a living person, or any probate or letters of administration, whether with or without the will annexed; (b) any deed or bond, or any assignment at law or in equity of any deed or bond, or any attestation of the execution of any deed or bond; (c) any bank note; or any indorsement on or assignment of any bank note.

(2) Forgery of the following documents, if committed with intent to defraud, shall be felony and punishable with penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years:—(a) Any valuable security or assignment thereof or endorsement thereon, or, where the valuable security is a bill of exchange, any acceptance thereof; (b) any document of title to lands or any assignment thereof or endorsement thereon; (c) any document of title to goods or any assignment thereof or endorsement thereon; (d) any power of attorney or other authority to transfer any share or interest in any stock, annuity, or public fund of the United Kingdom or any part of His Majesty's dominions or of any foreign state or country or to transfer any share or interest in the debt of any public body, company, or society, British or foreign, or in the capital stock of any such company or society, or to receive any dividend or money payable in respect of such share or interest or any attestation of any such power of attorney or other authority; (e) any entry in any book or register which is evidence of the title of any person to any share or interest hereinbefore mentioned, or to any dividend or interest payable in respect thereof; (f) any policy of insurance or any assignment thereof or endorsement thereon; (g) any charter-party or any assignment thereof; (h) any declaration, warrant, order, affidavit, affirmation, certificate, or other document required or authorised to be made by or for the purposes of the Government Annuities Act, 1829, or the Government Annuities Act, 1832, or by the National Debt Commissioners acting under the authority of the said Acts; (i) any certificate of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue or any other Commissioners acting in execution of the Income Tax Acts; (j) any certificate, certificate of valuation, sentence or decree of condemnation or restitution, or any copy of such sentence or decree, or any receipt required by the Slave Trade Acts.

Sect. 2 (1) (a).—Any will, etc.]—Sub-section 1 (a) of s. 2 replaces ss. 21, 39 of the Forgery Act, 1861, with the addition of the words printed in italics. It now expressly enacts that forgery may be committed by the false making of the will of a living or dead person, and by s. 1 (2) (b) a document is false if it purports to be made by a fictitious or deceased person. As to whether the forgery of the will of a fictitious person is within this section, see R. v. Kennaway [1917] 1 K. B. 25; 12 Cr. App. R. 147; 25 Cox, 559; R. v. Avery, 8 C. & P. 596. Proof that the will has been proved and that the probate is unrevoked is not conclusive evidence in bar of an indictment for forging a will. R. v. Buttery, R. & R. 342.

On an indictment for uttering a forged will, which, together with writings in support of it, it was suggested had been written over pencil marks that had been rubbed out, it was held that the evidence of an engraver, who had examined the paper with a mirror, and traced the pencil marks, was admissible on the part of the prosecution. R. v. Williams, 8 C. & P. 434.

In R. v. Tylney, 1 Den. 319, the judges were equally divided upon the question whether in the absence of the existence of some person who could have been defrauded by the forged will a count for forging it with intent to defraud a person or persons unknown could be supported. But on this case, see Greaves' Crim. Law Cons. Acts (2nd ed.) 303, 306. Now by s. 17 (2) it is not necessary to allege or prove an intent to defraud or deceive any particular person.

As to the privilege of solicitors with respect to the production of wills alleged to be forged, see ante, p. 471.

Sect. 2 (1) (b).—Any deed or bond, etc.]—Sub-section 1 (b) of s. 2 replaces ss. 20, 39 of the Forgery Act, 1861, and s. 32 of the Local Loans Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 83).

The forging of a deed, which is directed to be in a particular form by particular statutes, which had not been complied with, was held within 2 G. 2, c. 25 (rep.). R. v. Lyon, R. & R. 255. And see now s. 1 (3) (b) of the Act of 1913. So was a power of attorney to transfer Government stock, signed, sealed, and delivered. R. v. Fauntleroy, 1 Mood. 52; 2 Bing. 413; 1 C. & P. 421; and see R. v. Pringle, 9 C. & P. 408; 2 Mood. 127. The forging of such a power of attorney is now within s. 2 (2) (d) of the Act of 1913. A letter of orders, a document under the hand and seal of a bishop, testifying that he has admitted the person named therein into holy orders, was held not to be a deed within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 20 (now replaced by s. 2 (1) (b) of the Act of 1913.) R. v. Morton, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 22; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 58; but to fabricate such a document is forgery at common law. R. v. Etheridge, 19 Cox, 676; and would now come within s. 4 (1) of the Act of 1913. The giving of an administration bond to the ordinary in a false name is a forgery. R. v. Barber, 1 C. & K. 434. A man may be guilty of forgery by making a deed in his own name, but containing a false date: R. v. Ritson, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 200; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 10; 11 Cox, 352; or by making a deed in the name of another person bearing the same name. Re Cooper, 20 Ch. D. 611, 634; 51 L. J. (Ch.) 862, Lindley, L.J.

Sect. 2 (1) (c).—Any bank note.]—Sub-section 1 (c) of s. 2 replaces s. 12 of the Act of 1861. By s. 18 (1) of the Act of 1913 the expression bank note includes, unless the context otherwise requires, any note or bill of exchange of the Bank of England or Bank of Ireland, or of any other person, body corporate, or company carrying on the business of banking in any part of the world, and includes "bank bill," "bank post bill," "blank bank note," "blank bank bill of exchange," and "blank bank post bill."

By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 2, s. 1, the Bank of England may cause the name of their cashier or other officer appointed to sign, to be impressed by machinery upon their bank notes, bank post bills, and bank bills of exchange, and all bank notes, etc., on which the name of the authorized officer is so impressed, shall be as good and valid to all intents and purposes as if such notes had been subscribed in the proper handwriting of such officer, and shall be deemed and taken to be bank notes, and may be described as such in all indictments, and other criminal and civil proceedings whatsoever.

By 4 & 5 Geo. 5. c. 14 (Currency and Bank Notes Act, 1914), s. 1 (5), currency notes under the Act shall be deemed to be bank notes within the meaning of the Forgery Act, 1913, and any other enactment relating to offences in respect of bank notes, which is for the time being in force in any part of the British Islands.

Sect. 2 (2) (a).—Any valuable security.]—By s. 18 (1) of the Act of 1913, unless the context otherwise requires, the expression "valuable security" includes any writing entitling or evidencing the title of any person to any share or interest in any public stock, annuity, fund, or debt of any part of His Majesty's dominions or of any foreign state, or in any stock, annuity, fund, or debt of any body corporate, company, or society, whether within or without His Majesty's dominions, or to any deposit in any bank, and also includes any scrip, debenture, bill, note, warrant, order, or other security for the payment of money, or any accountable receipt, release, or discharge, or any receipt or other instrument evidencing the payment of money, or the delivery of any chattel personal.

Sub-section 2 (a) of s. 2 replaces the following provisions of various Acts, which are now repealed either wholly or in part, relating to forgery of specified documents: 52 G. 3, c. 143, s. 6 (land tax certificates); 10 G. 4, c. 24, s. 41: 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 59, s. 19 (Government annuities); 10 G. 4, c. 50, s. 124: 39 &

40 Vict. c. 36, s. 28 (Customs and Excise drafts); 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 53, s. 49 (prize money); 2 & 3 Vict. c. 51, s. 9 (pension orders); 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, s. 181 : 53 & 54 Vict. c. 21, s. 37 (2) (Inland Revenue certificates); 14 & 15 Vict. c. 102, s. 55 (seamen's pensions); 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 2 : 25 & 26 Vict. c. 7, s. 14 : 32 & 33 Vict. c. 102, s. 19 : 38 & 39 Vict. c. 83, s. 32; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 59, s. 21 (shares, transfers, and powers of attorney); 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 7 (East India bonds) and subsequent East India Loans Acts; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 1, as amended by 40 & 41 Vict. c. 2, s. 10 (Treasury bills), and extended by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 62, s. 19, to L.C.C. Bills; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 22, 39 (bills of exchange and promissory notes); 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 23, 24, 25, 39 (warrants, etc., for payment of money, and accountable receipts); 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 26 (debentures); 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 33; 35 & 36 Vict. c. 44, s. 12 (certificates of Paymaster-General); 25 & 26 Vict. c. 7, s. 14 (India Stock transfer certificates); 26 & 27 Vict. c. 73, s. 13 (India Stock certificates); 29 & 30 Vict. c. 25, s. 15 : 40 & 41 Vict. c. 2, s. 10 (Treasury bills); 33 & 34 Vict. c. 58, s. 3 : 33 & 34 Vict. c. 71 : 40 & 41 Vict. c. 59, s. 21 (stock certificates and coupons under Part v. of National Debt Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 71) and Colonial Stocks Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 59); 33 & 34 Vict. c. 58, s. 6 (certificates under Part vi. of National Debt Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 71); 8 Edw. 7, c. 69, s. 38 (share warrants or coupons under Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908).

The above definition of valuable security was followed in s. 46 of the Larceny Act, 1916 (ante, p. 508), and is wide enough to include many documents the forging of which was previously not specifically punishable; e.g., documents of companies not within the provisions of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, as well as stock and share certificates of companies within that Act.

Forgery of any document specified in any of the foregoing Acts, if not included in the above definition of "valuable security," will be punishable as a misdemeanor under s. 4 of the Act of 1913 (post, p. 820).

The following cases decided under former statutes in reference to valuable securities may still be of use by way of illustration.

Bills of exchange.]—"A bill of exchange is an unconditional order in writing addressed by one person to another, signed by the person giving it, requiring the person to whom it is addressed to pay on demand, or at a fixed or determinable future time, a sum certain in money to, or to the order of, a specified person or to bearer." 45 & 46 Vict. c. 61, s. 3 (1). "A cheque is a bill of exchange drawn on a banker payable on demand." Id. s. 73. "A promissory note is an unconditional promise in writing made by one person to another, signed by the maker, engaging to pay on demand, or at a fixed or determinable future time, a sum certain in money to, or to the order of, a specified person or to bearer." Id. s. 83 (1): see R. v. Harrison, 1 Leach, 180; 2 East, P. C. 923. It has been held that a document in the ordinary form of a bill of exchange, but requiring the drawee to pay to his own order, and purporting to be indorsed by the drawer, and accepted by the drawer, cannot, in an indictment for forgery or uttering, be described as a bill of exchange. R. v. Bart- lett, 2 M. & Rob. 362. But such a bill is now valid as a promissory note. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 61, s. 5. An instrument payable to the order of A., and directed "At Messrs. P. & Co., Bankers," was held to be properly described as a bill of exchange. R. v. Sidney Smith, 2 Mood. 295 : see Gray v. Milner, 8 Taunt. 739.

A bill payable ten days after sight, purporting to have been drawn upon the commissioners of the navy, by a lieutenant, for the amount of certain pay due to him, was held to be a bill of exchange within 2 G. 2, c. 25 (rep.) R. v. Chisholm, R. & R. 297. So a note promising to pay A. and B., "stewardesses" of a certain benefit society, "or their successors," a certain sum of money on demand, has been held to be a promissory note within the meaning of that Act, although it appeared that the society was not duly enrolled, as directed by Act of Parliament; for, within the meaning of the Act, it was not necessary that the note should be negotiable. R. v. Box, 6 Taunt. 325; R. & R. 300. See R. v. M'Keay, 1 Mood. 130. An instrument drawn by A. on B., requiring him to pay to the administrators of C. a certain sum at a certain time "without acceptance," is a bill of exchange, and may be so described in the indictment. R. v. Kinnear, 2 M. & Rob. 117. So, though there be no person named as drawee, the defendant may be indicted for uttering a forged acceptance on a bill of exchange : R. v. Hawkes, 2 Mood. 60; for the act of putting the acceptance is a sort of estoppel to say it was not a bill of exchange. And see s. 1 (3) (b) of the Act of 1913. Forgery may be committed on unstamped paper of a bill which by law requires a stamp. R. v. Hawkeswood, 1 Leach, 257; 2 T. R. 606 n. : R. v. Morton, 2 East, P. C. 955 : R. v. Reculist, Id. 956; 2 Leach, 703 : and see 54 & 55 Vict. c. 39, s. 14, sub-s. 4 (ante, p. 447). A seaman's advance note, purporting to be signed by the master and owner, and in the following form—"Ten days after the ship C. sails from the port of L. the undersigned hereby promise and agree to pay to any person who shall advance 4*l.* to H. on this agreement the sum of 4*l.*, provided that the said H. shall sail in the said ship from the said port of L."—is not a promissory note. R. v. Howie, 11 Cox, 320.

The adding of a false address to the name of the drawee of a bill, while the bill is in the course of completion, in order to make the acceptance appear to be that of a different existing person, is a forgery. R. v. Blenkinsop, 1 Den. 276; 2 C. & K. 531; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 62. So is the adding of an address to a bill so as to make it appear that the acceptance though really written by a person of the same name is that of a different person—whether such person existed or not. R. v. Epps, 4 F. & F. at p. 85, Willes, J. Putting off the bill of A., an existing person, as the bill of A., a fictitious person, has been held forgery. R. v. Nisbett, 6 Cox, 320, 324 n. And see s. 1 (2) (c) of the Act of 1913. As to what is a fictitious party to a bill of exchange, see Vagliano's case [1891] App. Cas. 107; 60 L. J. (Q. B.) 145; Clutton v. Attenborough [1895] 2 Q. B. 707; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 122; [1897] A. C. 90; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 221 : North and South Wales Bank v. Macbeth [1908] A. C. 137, 77 L. J. (Q. B.) 464.

An indorsement "per procuration, J. S.," signed in the defendant's own name, was held, on 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 3 (rep.), not to be a forgery, though the defendant falsely alleged that he had authority from J. S. to indorse. R. v. White, 1 Den. 208; 2 C. & K. 404; 2 Cox, 210. But such a case was within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 24, R. v. Holden [1912] 1 K. B. 483; 81 L. J. (K. B.) 327; 22 Cox, 727; 106 L. T. 305; 76 J. P. 143; 28 T. L. R. 173; and is now within s. 2 (2) (a) of the Act of 1913.

Warrant, order, or other security for payment of money.]—It was not necessary, in order to constitute a document a "warrant," etc., for the payment of money, that it should appear to be so on its face. It was sufficient if the party to whom it was addressed had been in the habit of treating similar documents as warrants, etc., for the payment of money. And therefore a document, in form a mere receipt given by a depositor to a building society that received money on deposit, could properly be described in an indictment as a "warrant" for the payment of money, if, by the custom of the society, such receipts were in fact treated as warrants for the payment of money. R. v. Kay, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 257; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 118; 11 Cox, 529. A cheque, in addition to being a bill of exchange (see ante, p. 809), is also, even if post-dated (R. v. Taylor, 1 C. & K. 213) a warrant and order for the payment of money: R. v. Willoughby, 2 East, P. C. 944; as is any other form of bill of exchange. R. v. Sheppard, Id. 944; 1 Leach, 226: R. v. Smith, 1 Den. 79; 1 C. & K. 700. So an order to pay "all my prize money due to me for my services on board his Majesty's ship 'Leander,'" without specifying any particular sum, was held to be within 7 G. 2, c. 22 (rep.). R. v. M'Intosh, 2 East, P. C. 942; 2 Leach, 883. So is a letter of credit. R. v. Raake, 8 C. & P. 626; 2 Mood. 66. In R. v. Lee, 3 Cox, 80, it was held forgery to counterfeit the signatures of the chairman and committee of a society to a cheque (requiring their signatures and that of the clerk) with the object and result of obtaining the genuine signature of the clerk. A mere transposition of the words in a cheque has been held not to make it invalid. R. v. Boreham, 2 Cox, 189. On an indictment for forging and uttering a "warrant and order for the payment of money, to wit, a warrant and order for the payment of 85*l.*," and for forging an acquittance and receipt for money, to wit, for 85*l.*, it was proved that J. M. had paid 85*l.* into a country bank, and had taken an accountable receipt for that amount, and that the course of dealing at the bank was to treat such receipt with the depositor's name thereon, as an order for the payment of the money deposited, and interest. The defendant took the receipt to the bank, and having written the name of "J. M." thereon, delivered it to the bankers, who paid him 87*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, for principal and interest. He was held to have been rightly convicted. R. v. Atkinson, 2 Mood. 215; C. & Mar. 325. Where the instrument was an order to pay the prisoner, or order, the sum of four pounds five shillings, being a month's advance on an intended voyage to Quebec, in the ship "Mary Ann," as per agreement with G. M., master: and the prisoner had written in the margin of the order, "On receiving this cheque I agree to sail, and to be on board within sixteen days from the date of this cheque:" it was held a good order for the payment of money within 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 3 (rep.). R. v. Bamfield, 1 Mood. 416. And see R. v. Anderson, 2 M. & Rob. 469; and R. v. Howie, 11 Cox, 320 (ante, p. 810).

So, a foreign letter, requesting a correspondent in England to advance money, it being proved that such letters are in the course of business treated as orders, was held to support a charge of forging an order for the payment of money. R. v. Raake, 2 Mood. 66; 8 C. & P. 626. A dividend warrant of a railway company, signed by the secretary and addressed to a banker, requiring him to pay the sum named in the warrant to a certain shareholder, and to charge the same to the company's revenue account, was held to be properly described as a warrant and an order for the payment of money. R. v. Autey, Dears. & B. 294; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 190; 7 Cox, 329. And the document containing a statement that the shareholder's name must be indorsed on the back, without which indorsement it was proved that the money would not be paid even to him, a forgery of such indorsement was held to be a forgery of the entire document. Id. A writing purporting to authorize the bearer to receive money deposited in a bank by a friendly society on accountable receipts and purporting to be signed by the principal officers of the society (the bank having received the money on terms of repayment to the order of the society), was held to be well described as a warrant for the payment of money, and it was held no objection that the defendant was himself a member of the society. R. v. Harris, 2 Mood. 267; 1 C. & K. 179. Where the forged paper was as follows: "This is to certify that R. R. has swept the flues and cleaned the bilges, and repaired four bridges of the 'Princess Victoria,' J. N. 4*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*:" and it was proved that, by the course of dealing between the parties, this voucher, if genuine, would have authorized L. & Co. to pay the 4*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*; this was held sufficient to support an indictment charging it as a warrant for the payment of money. R. v. Rogers, 9 C. & P. 41. But a paper in the following terms:—"I hereby certify that the within-named W. M. is gaining his living by hawking;" the production of which was necessary in order that the defendant might obtain payment of a sum of money,—was held not to be either a warrant, or an order for the payment of money, and to be the subject only of forgery at common law. R. v. Mitchell, 2 F. & F. 44. A forged document, purporting to be a bill for goods sold to the prosecutor, with a request for its payment, was held to be both a warrant and an order for the payment of money. R. v. Dawson, 2 Den. 75; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 102. A letter written to a wholesale house in London, in the name of a customer in the country, in the following terms:—"I shall feel obliged by your paying Mr. B. the sum of 2*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*, and debiting me with the same; you will please have a receipt, and add the amount to invoice of order on hand:" was held not to be either a warrant, or an order for the payment of money; but a request. R. v. Thorn, 2 Mood. 210; C. & Mar. 206. See also R. v. Roberts, 2 Mood. 258; C. & Mar. 652. The forgery of a "request" for the payment of money was an indictable offence under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 23 (rep.), but the definition of "valuable security" in the Act of 1913 does not include a request for the payment of money, nor is the term to be found in any other part of the Act. A forged request for the payment of money is, however, a forged instrument within s. 7 of the Act of 1913 (R. v. Cade [1914] 2 K. B. 209; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 796; post, p. 824), and forging such request is an indictable misdemeanor under s. 4 of the Act of 1913 (post, p. 820).

A " warrant or order " for the payment of money must purport, or must be shown by evidence, to be made by some person who might command the payment of the money, and to be made upon a person who was compellable to obey it. See R. v. Clinch, 2 East, P. C. 938, 940. Thus, an order to a tradesman to let the bearer have certain goods, which it was optional for the tradesman to obey or not, was held not to be within 45 G. 3, c. 89 (rep.), the words of which were " warrant or order for the delivery of goods." R. v. Williams, 1 Leach, 114; 2 East, P. C. 938: R. v. Mitchell, Fost. 119: and see R. v. Baker, 1 Mood. 231: R. v. Newton, 2 Mood. 59: R. v. Thorn (supra): R. v. Mitchell (supra): R. v. Ellor, 1 Leach, 323; 2 East, P. C. 938. So forgery of a justice's order under 17 G. 2, c. 5 (rep.) for a reward for apprehending a vagrant, which appeared upon the face of it to be defective, as not being under seal, or directed to the constable, etc., was held not to be within 7 G. 2, c. 22 (rep.); for, without these requisites, it was nothing more than the order of a mere individual, which the treasurer was not bound to obey. R. v. Rushworth, R. & R. 317; 1 Stark (N. P.) 396: cf. R. v. Graham, 2 East, P. C. 945. An indictment for forging an order for relief to a discharged prisoner, under 5 G. 4, c. 85 (rep.), being in many places ungrammatical, and at variance from the Act, was held bad. R. v. Donnelly, 1 Mood. 438. Such an instrument, however, was properly described as an order for the payment of money. R. v. M'Connell, 2 Mood. 298; 1 C. & K. 371. Where a defendant was indicted for forging the order of a justice upon the treasurer of a county made under the Burial of Drowned Persons Act, 1808 (48 G. 3. c. 75), by which a justice may order the treasurer of a county to pay churchwardens, etc., the expenses of burying dead bodies cast on shore, and it did not appear on the order that the person to whom the money was to be paid was an officer within the words of that statute; it was held to be an order within the statute; because it did not appear that the party was not such an officer, and the treasurer was bound to conclude that the justice would not make such an order without satisfying himself that the party was such an officer. R. v. Froud, R. & R. 389; 1 B. & B. 300. Where the defendant, who was in the employ of a tanner, and paid by the job, was employed also to arrange the accounts for himself and the other men, and made out the account weekly, and brought it to the foreman, stating therein the amount to which he was entitled, and the foreman looked it over, and if he found it correct, signed it, and then the defendant took it so signed to the cashier, who on seeing the signature paid the amount; and the defendant on one occasion presented to the cashier an account for a larger sum than was due to him, with the name of the foreman forged thereto; this was held not to be a forgery of a warrant for the payment of money, inasmuch as, assuming the document to be genuine, the cashier would have no claim in respect of it on the foreman. R. v. Pilling, 1 F. & F. 324. A forged draft on a banker, in a fictitious name, or in the name of a person who never kept cash with the banker, was held to be a warrant or order within the meaning of 7 G. 2, c. 22 (rep.) (R. v. Lockett, 2 East, P. C. 940; 1 Leach, 94: R. v. Abraham, 2 East, P. C. 941), for it imports, upon the face of it, to be an order by a person having authority to make it. So, a forged draft in the name of a person who does keep cash with the banker, is an order within the Act, whatever be the state of his account at the time. R. v. Carter, 1 Den. 65; 1 C. & K. 741. Where, on the contrary, a man obtains goods or cash upon his own draft on a banker, with whom he does not keep cash, we have seen (ante, p. 691) that the proper mode of proceeding against him criminally is by indictment for obtaining by false pretences.

The cases on this subject, some of which it is not easy to reconcile, were all considered by the judges in R. v. Vivian, 1 Den. 35; 1 C. & K. 719; in which they laid down the principle, that any instrument for the payment of money, under which, if genuine, the payer might recover the amount against the party signing it, might properly be considered as a warrant for the payment of money; and that it was equally such whatever were the state of account between the parties, and whether the party apparently signing it had at the time funds in the hands of the party to whom it was addressed or not. In that case the forged instrument was as follows :—" Mr. M. will be pleased to send by the bearer 10*l.* on Mr. H.'s account, as Mr. H. is very bad in bed, and cannot come himself." Signed, " M. R., foreman, St. A. foundry." M. was a clerk of bankers, with whom H. kept an account, and by drafts on whom he paid his workmen. M. R. was H.'s foreman, having authority to pay the workmen, but not to draw for the money. H. being ill in bed, the defendant forged this paper in the name of M. R. and obtained the 10*l.* from M. by means of it. It was held that he was properly convicted under 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 3 (rep.), although M. R. himself had no account with the bankers; because by this instrument, if genuine, M. R. said in effect that he had authority from H., who had an account with them; and as against him, therefore, it was as much a warrant as if he himself had had such account, and would equally have bound him. This decision seems to render the authority of some of those before referred to at least questionable. (See also R. v. Carter, supra: R. v. Ferguson, 1 Cox, 241: R. v. Rouse, 4 Cox, 7: R. v. Turberville, 4 Cox, 13, Erle, J.)

In R. v. Rogers, 9 C. & P. 41, Bosanquet, J., and Parke, B., held that a warrant for the payment of money need not, in order to come within 45 G. 3, c. 89, s. 1 (rep.), be addressed to any particular person: but that it was sufficient if it would, if genuine, have been an authority to a certain person to pay the amount mentioned in it. And in R. v. Snelling, Dears. 219; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 8, where the forged instrument was thus :—" Sir, please to pay," etc., it was held that it might be shown by evidence to be an order for the payment of money, and for whom it was intended. These cases appear to overrule contrary decisions on the prior statutes as to " orders," e.g., R. v. Richards, R. & R. 193: R. v. Denny, 1 Cox, 178: R. v. Ravenscroft, R. & R. 161.

It was no offence, under the Acts before 1861, now repealed, to forge an indorsement on a warrant or order for the payment of money (R. v. Arscott, 6 C. & P. 408); but the Act of 1861 expressly included " any indorsement on or assignment of any such undertaking, warrant, order, authority, or request " : and now the Forgery Act, 1913, s. 2 (2) (a), includes any indorsement on a valuable security.

Receipt, etc.]—A scrip receipt, in which a blank was left for the subscriber's name, was held not to be a receipt within 2 G. 2, c. 25, s. 1 (rep.): R. v.

Lyon, 2 Leach, 597; 2 East, P. C. 933; and see 2 Leach, 808; but it would have been otherwise if the blank had been filled up. A memorandum, importing that A. B. had paid to C. D. a sum of money, but importing no acknowledgment from C. D. of his having received it, was held not to be a " receipt " within 2 G. 2, c. 25, s. 1 (rep.), which, however, did not contain the words " accountable receipt." R. v. Harvey, R. & R. 227. A scrip certificate of a railway company was held not to be a receipt, or a receipt and acquittance within 1 W. 4, c. 66 (rep.) R. v. West, 10 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 133; 1 Den. 258; 2 C. & K. 496: Clarke v. Newsam, 1 Ex. 131; 16 L. J. (Ex.) 296. A pawnbroker's ticket or duplicate, given in the form prescribed by 39 & 40 G. 3, c. 99, s. 6 (rep.), was held to be an accountable receipt for goods within s. 23 of the Forgery Act, 1861 (rep.). R. v. Fitchie, Dears. & B. 175: 26 L. J. (M. C.) 90. This decision appears to apply to tickets given under the Pawnbrokers Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 93), see ss. 6, 24, 49. A turnpike toll-gate ticket was held to be a receipt for money. R. v. Fitch, R. v. Howley, L. & C. 159; 9 Cox, 160. An ordinary passenger's railway ticket was held not to be an acquittance or receipt for money. R. v. Gooden, 11 Cox, 672, Cleasby, B. (but see ante, p. 803). The following document was held to be an " accountable receipt " for goods :—" By order of R. F. Pries we have this day transferred into the name of Messrs. C. & S. 759 quarters and 4 bushels of wheat on 'August Ferdinand,' Captain Richards, at Neustadt, entered by R. F. Pries, and now lying at our granaries Bermondsey Wall. The wheat is insured against risk of fire by us. B. & Y. Corn Exchange, Oct. 23, 1852." R. v. Pries, 6 Cox, 165; and cf. R. v. Meigh, 7 Cox, 401. A document in the form of an agreement to release claims for a sum containing a receipt or release was held an accountable receipt. R. v. Hill, 2 Cox, 246, Coleridge, J. The prisoner was indicted for forging and uttering a receipt on an order for the payment of money, which appeared to be thus :—" Received, for R. Aikman, G. Arscott " (his own name being G. Arscott), written on the back of a bill of exchange payable at a banker's : Littledale, J., Vaughan, J., and Bolland, B., held that the evidence did not support the indictment, and directed an acquittal. R. v. Arscott, 6 C. & P. 408. Where it was shown to be the custom of bankers to give receipts on the deposit of money in the following form :—" Received of A. B. 85*l.* to his credit. This receipt not transferable;" and to repay the same, with interest, on the return of the receipt with a name written on it; it was held that the forging the name of A. B., and receiving the money due, on its return, was a forging and uttering of an acquittance for the 85*l.* and interest. R. v. Atkinson, 2 Mood. 215; C. & Mar. 325. A receipt given by bankers to poor-rate collectors for moneys paid to the account of the guardians was held an accountable receipt. R. v. Johnston, 5 Cox, 133 (C. C. R. Ir.). A receipt signed by the captain of a detachment, on the authority of which money is received from an army agent, on account of the monthly subsistence of such detachment, was held to be properly described as a receipt for money, although it appeared that such instruments were frequently cashed upon indorsement by tradesmen in the neighbourhood of the place where the regiment was stationed, and the amount afterwards received by them of the army agent. R. v. Rice, 6 C. & P. 634: R. v. Hope, 1 Mood. 414. Where a high constable had issued his precept for the payment of a county rate for a certain amount, and, having received it, wrote a receipt at the foot, and the prisoner, who had collected the rate, afterwards fraudulently altered the precept, by adding a figure in the amount (viz., changing 5*s.* to 15*s.*), and claimed to be allowed that larger amount in the account, this was held to be a forgery of the receipt. R. v. Vaughan, 8 C. & P. 276. And see R. v. Griffiths, Dears. & B. 548; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 205; 7 Cox, 501. Whether an addition by the prisoner of words to the receipt is a material alteration is a matter for the jury. R. v. Milton, 10 Cox, 364; cf. Upfold v. Leit, 5 Esp. 100. The prisoner, who was a rate-collector, received money from the prosecutor on account of a rate for which he gave a receipt. After he had ceased to be a collector he called on the prosecutor for the balance, which the prosecutor paid to him, and for a receipt the prisoner altered the figures in the former receipt, which then appeared as a receipt for the entire rate. Pigott, B., and Martin, B., doubted whether these facts amounted to a forgery of a receipt. R. v. Sargent, 10 Cox, 161. It was the practice of the treasurer of the county of S., when an order had been made on him for the payment of the expenses of a prosecution, to pay the whole amount to the attorney for the prosecution or his clerk, and to require the signature of every person named in the order to be written on the back of it, and opposite to each name the sum ordered to be paid to each person respectively; it was held, that such a signature was not a receipt the forging of which is an offence against the statute, but was merely an authority to the treasurer to pay the amount. R. v. Cooper, 2 C. & K. 586; R. v. Parker, 2 Cox, 274, Erle, J. A friendly society had branches in various towns. A member belonging to one branch could not be received in another branch as a clearance member without a document called a "clearance," certifying that he had paid all the demands of the branch to which he originally belonged, and authorizing the other branch to receive him. The prisoner was secretary of the society, and had received from a member all the fees due to his branch, and the member thereupon became entitled to a clearance. The prisoner ought to have paid the money over to the treasurer of the society, but did not do so, and sent, nevertheless, a clearance to the member. To this clearance the prisoner forged the signature of two of the officers of the society, without whose signatures the clearance would not have been accepted. It was held that this clearance was not an acquittance or receipt for money. R. v. French, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 217; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 58. If a person, with intent to defraud and to cause it to be supposed, contrary to the fact, that he has paid a certain sum into a bank, makes in a book, purporting to be a pass-book of the bank, a false entry, which denotes that the bank has received the sum, he is guilty of forging an accountable receipt for money. R. v. Moody, L. & C. 173; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 156: R. v. Smith, L. & C. 168; 13 L. J. (M. C.) 154; 9 Cox, 162: and see R. v. Hunter, 2 East, P. C. 928, 977.

Sect. 2 (2) (b).—Any document of title to lands.]—This includes any deed, map, roll, register, or instrument in writing being or containing evidence of the title or any part of the title to any land, or to any interest in or arising out of any land, or any authenticated copy thereof. Forgery Act, 1913, s. 18 (1). Cf.

Larceny Act, 1916 (ante, p. 508). Sub-s. (2) (b) of s. 2 replaces ss. 30, 31 of the Forgery Act, 1861, and s. 45 of the Declaration of Title Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 67). It is no longer necessary that forgery of documents under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 67, should be " in the course of proceedings before the High Court of Justice under that Act." The definition will also include documents connected with the registration of title, which previously were not specifically dealt with.

Sect. 2 (2) (c).—Any document of title to goods.]—This includes any bill of lading, India warrant, dock warrant, warehouse keeper's certificate, warrant or order for the delivery or transfer of any goods or valuable thing, bought or sold note, or any other document used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods, or authorising or purporting to authorise, either by endorsement or by delivery, the possessor of such document to transfer or receive any goods thereby represented or therein mentioned or referred to. Forgery Act, 1913, s. 18 (1). Cf. Larceny Act, 1916 (ante, p. 508). Sub-s. 2 (c) of s. 2 replaces ss. 23, 39 of the Act of 1861. An order " to deliver my work to bearer " (and which was explained in evidence to mean an order to Goldsmiths' Hall to deliver certain plate a silversmith had sent there to be marked) was held to be within 7 G. 2, c. 22 (rep.), although it did not specify any particular articles. R. v. Jones, 1 Leach, 53; 2 East. P. C. 941. A pawnbroker's ticket is a warrant for the delivery of goods. R. v. Morrison, Bell, 158; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 210. At the London Docks, a person bringing a " tasting order " from a merchant having wine there, is not allowed to taste until the order has across it the signature of a clerk of the company. The defendant uttered a tasting order with the merchant's name forged to it, by presenting it to the company's clerk for his signature across it, which the clerk refused. It was held to be in this state a forged order for the delivery of goods. R. v. Illidge, 18 L. J. (N. S.) (M. C.) 179; 1 Den. 404; 2 C. & K. 871.

Sect. 2 (2) (d).—Any power of attorney, etc.]—Sub-s. 2 (d) of s. 2 replaces 10 G. 4, c. 24, s. 41; 10 G. 4, c. 50, s. 124; 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 59, s. 19; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 2, 4. The former law is extended to all powers of attorney within the sub-section, which follows the wording of the first part of the definition of valuable security in s. 18 of the Act of 1913.

Sect. 2 (2) (e).—Any entry in any book or register, etc.]—Prior to the Act of 1913, forgery of such entries was only punishable at common law.

Sect. 2 (2) (f).—Any policy of insurance, etc.]—Prior to the Act of 1913, forgery of an insurance policy was only punishable at common law, unless the policy was under seal and therefore a deed.

Sect. 2 (2) (g).—Any charter-party, etc.]—Prior to the Act of 1913, forgery of a charter-party was only punishable at common law.

Sect. 2 (2) (h).—Any declaration, warrant, order, etc., under Government Annuities Acts.]—This sub-section replaces 10 G. 4, c. 24, s. 41, and 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 59, s. 19.

Sect. 2 (2) (i).—Any certificate of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, etc.]—This sub-section replaces 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, s. 181, and 53 & 54 Vict. c. 21, s. 37 (2).

Sect. 2 (2) (j).—Any certificate, etc., required by the Slave Trade Acts.]—This sub-section replaces 5 G. 4, c. 113, s. 10. Such documents probably fall under other sections of the Act of 1913, but are specifically referred to in view of the special provisions with regard to jurisdiction in the cases of offences under the Slave Trade Acts. See s. 14, post, p. 828.

Sect. 3.—Forgery of certain documents with intent to defraud or deceive.]—(1) Forgery of the following documents, if committed with intent to defraud or deceive, shall be felony, and punishable with penal servitude for life :—Any document whatsoever having thereupon or affixed thereto the stamp or impression of the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, His Majesty's Privy Seal, any privy signet of His Majesty, His Majesty's Royal Sign Manual, any of His Majesty's seals appointed by the Twenty-fourth Article of the Union between England and Scotland to be kept, used, and continued in England, the Great Seal of Ireland or the Privy Seal of Ireland.

(2) Forgery of the following documents, if committed with intent to defraud or deceive, shall be felony, and punishable with penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years :—(a) Any register or record of births, baptisms, namings, dedications, marriages, deaths, burials, or cremations, which now is, or hereafter may be, by law authorised or required to be kept in the United Kingdom, relating to any birth, baptism, naming, dedication, marriage, death, burial, or cremation, or any part of any such register, or any certified copy of any such register, or of any part thereof; (b) any copy of any register of baptisms, marriages, burials, or cremations, directed or required by law to be transmitted to any registrar or other officer; (c) any register of the birth, baptism, death, burial, or cremation of any person to be appointed a nominee under the provisions of the Government Annuities Act, 1829, or any copy or certificate of any such register, or the name of any witness to any such certificate; (d) any certified copy of a record purporting to be signed by an assistant keeper of the Public Records in England; (e) any wrapper or label provided by or under the authority of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue or the Commissioners of Customs and Excise.

(3) Forgery of the following documents, if committed with intent to defraud or deceive, shall be felony, and punishable with penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years :—(a) Any official document whatsoever of or belonging to any court of justice, or made or issued by any judge, magistrate, officer, or clerk of any such court; (b) any register or book kept under the provisions of any law in or under the authority of any court of justice; (c) any certificate, office copy, or certified copy of any such document, register, or book or of any part thereof; (d) any document which any magistrate or any master or registrar in lunacy is authorised or required by law to make or issue; (e) any document which any person authorised to administer an oath under the Commissioners for Oaths Act, 1889 (52 Vict. c. 10), is authorised or required by law to make or issue; (f) any document made or issued by an officer of state or law officer of the Crown, or any document upon which, by the law or usage at the time in force, any court of justice or any officer might act; (g) any document or copy of a document used or intended to be used in evidence in any Court of Record, or any document which is made evidence by law; (h) any certificate required by any Act for the celebration of marriage; (i) any licence for the celebration of marriage which may be given by law; (j) any certificate, declaration, or order under any enactment relating to the registration of births or deaths; (k) any register book, builder's certificate, surveyor's certificate, certificate of registry, declaration, bill of sale, instrument of mortgage, or certificate of mortgage or sale under Part I. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), or any entry or endorsement required by the said Part of the said Act to be made in or on any of those documents; (l) any permit, certificate, or similar document made or granted by or under the authority of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise.

Sect. 3 (1).—Any document having the stamp or impression of the Great Seal, etc.]—This sub-section replaces part of s. 1 of the Act of 1861. Forgery of the seals themselves is dealt with in s. 5 (1) (a) of the Act of 1913, post, p. 820.

Sect. 3 (2) (a).—Any register or record of births, etc.]—This sub-section replaces 3 & 4 Vict. c. 92, s. 8; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, s. 15; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 36; 26 & 27 Vict. c. 11, s. 56; 26 & 27 Vict. c. 90, s. 23; and extends to registers of cremations. The words "United Kingdom" have been substituted for "England and Ireland." The offences of destroying, defacing, etc., such registers are still punishable under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 36 (post, p. 843).

Sect. 3 (2) (b).—Any copy of any register of baptisms, etc.]—This sub-section replaces part of s. 37 of the Forgery Act, 1861, and extends to copies of registers of cremations.

Sect. 3 (2) (c).—Any register of births, etc., under the Government Annuities Act, 1829.]—This sub-section replaces 10 G. 4, c. 24, s. 41, and 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 59, s. 19, and extends to registers of cremations.

Sect. 3 (2) (d).—Any certified copy of a record purporting to be signed by an assistant keeper of the Public Records in England.]—This sub-section replaces 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, s. 19. Prior to the Act of 1913, it was only an offence to forge the signature of such assistant keeper. Forgery of the Seal of the Record Office is dealt with in s. 5 (1) (b) of the Act of 1913 (post, p. 821).

Sect. 3 (2) (e).—Any Inland Revenue or Customs and Excise wrapper or label.]—This sub-section replaces 16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 116, and extends its provisions to all wrappers and labels provided under the authority of the Commissioners.

Sect. 3 (3) (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g).—Judicial documents, etc.]—These sub-sections replace various provisions of numerous statutes dealing with forgery of judicial documents. The punishment, which previously varied from five years' penal servitude to penal servitude for life, has been made uniform, and fixed at seven years' penal servitude. Forgery of the seal of any court of record is still punishable with penal servitude for life under s. 5 (1) (c) of the Act of 1913 (post, p. 821). In every case where it was previously an offence to forge the signature to a judicial document, it is now an offence to forge the whole or any part of such document. The offence specified in paragraph (f) was, prior to the Act of 1913, only punishable at common law. As to substituting names in a subpœna, see In re Taylor [1912] A. C. 347.

Sect. 3 (3) (h), (i).—Any marriage certificate or licence.]—These provisions replace s. 35 of the Forgery Act, 1861.

Sect. 3 (3) (j).—Any certificate, etc., of births or deaths.]—This sub-section replaces 37 & 38 Vict. c. 88, ss. 40 (2), 46; 43 & 44 Vict. c. 13, ss. 30 (2), 36. The offence is made a felony instead of, as previously, a misdemeanor, and the proviso limiting the time within which proceedings must be commenced has been omitted.

Sect. 3 (3) (k).—Any register book, etc., under Part I. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894.]—These provisions also appear in 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 66, and have been left standing there.

Sect. 3 (3) (l).—Any Customs and Excise permit, etc.]—This sub-section generalises the provisions of 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 16, s. 4; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 121, s. 18; 43 & 44 Vict. c. 24; 53 & 54 Vict. c. 21, s. 37; extends them to similar documents, and makes the offence a felony instead of, as previously, a misdemeanor.

Sect. 4.—Forgery of other documents with intent to defraud or to deceive a misdemeanor.]—(1) Forgery of any document, which is not made felony under this or any other statute for the time being in force, if committed with intent to defraud, shall be a misdemeanor and punishable with imprisonment with or without hard labour for any term not exceeding two years.

(2) Forgery of any public document which is not made felony under this or any other statute for the time being in force, if committed with intent to defraud or deceive, shall be a misdemeanor and punishable with imprisonment with or without hard labour for any term not exceeding two years.

Unspecified documents.]—Section 4 of the Act of 1913 reproduces common law forgery, and in addition gathers together all statutory forgeries which have not already been made felonies by ss. 2 and 3 of the Act. Forgery of such documents, for example, as ballot papers and nomination papers, hackney carriage licences, certificates under the Explosives Act, 1875, etc., will now be punishable under this section. The uniform punishment of imprisonment with or without hard labour for any term not exceeding two years is substituted for the varying punishments under former enactments. It would seem that an indictment would not lie under this section in the case of a document the forging of which is made felony under this or any other statute for the time being in force (R. v. Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 164); but such indictment, if drawn per incuriam, might still, it is submitted, be held good in certain cases as charging a common law misdemeanor. See R. v. Garland [1910] 1 K. B. 154; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 239.

As to the meaning of public document, see Sturla v. Freccia, 5 A. C. 623, 643, per Lord Blackburn; and ante, pp. 402 et seq.

FORGERY OF SEALS AND DIES.

Sect. 5.—Forgery of seals and dies.]—(1) Forgery of the following seals, if committed with intent to defraud or deceive, shall be felony and punishable with penal servitude for life:—(a) The Great Seal of the United Kingdom, His Majesty's Privy Seal, any privy signet of His Majesty, His Majesty's

Royal Sign Manual, any of His Majesty's seals appointed by the Twenty-fourth Article of the Union between England and Scotland to be kept, used, and continued in Scotland, the Great Seal of Ireland or the Privy Seal of Ireland; [This paragraph replaces 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 1.] (b) the seal of the Public Record Office in England; [This paragraph replaces 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, s. 19.] (c) the seal of any court of record; [This paragraph replaces various statutory provisions as to forging seals of courts of record, viz.: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 60, s. 397; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, s. 28; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 79, s. 33; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 27, 28, 36; 34 & 35 Vict. c. 22, s. 50; 34 & 35 Vict. c. 49, s. 18; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 43, s. 180; 53 Vict. c. 5, s. 147.] (d) the seal of the office of the Registrar-General of Births, Deaths, and Marriages. [This paragraph replaces 3 & 4 Vict. c. 92, s. 8.]

(2) Forgery of the following seals, if committed with intent to defraud or deceive, shall be felony, and punishable with penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years:—(a) The seal of any register office relating to births, baptisms, marriages, or deaths; [This paragraph replaces 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 36.] (b) the seal of any burial board or of any local authority performing the duties of a burial board; [This paragraph extends the provisions of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 36, to local authorities performing the duties of a burial board.] (c) the seal of or belonging to any office for the registry of deeds or titles to lands. [This paragraph replaces 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 31, and extends to "titles to lands" in view of recent legislation with regard to registration of title.]

(3) Forgery of the following seals, if committed with intent to defraud or deceive, shall be felony and punishable with penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years:—(a) The seal of any court of justice other than a court of record; [This paragraph replaces 7 & 8 Vict. c. 19, s. 5, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 28.] (b) the seal of the office of any master or registrar in lunacy: [This paragraph replaces 34 & 35 Vict. c. 22, s. 50, and 53 Vict. c. 5, s. 147.]

(4) Forgery of the following dies, if committed with intent to defraud or deceive, shall be felony and punishable with penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years:—(a) Any die provided, made, or used by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue or the Commissioners of Customs and Excise; [This paragraph replaces 54 & 55 Vict. c. 38, s. 13.] (b) any die which is or has been required or authorised by law to be used for the marking or stamping of gold or silver plate, or gold or silver wares. [This paragraph replaces 13 G. 3, c. 52, s. 14; 23 & 24 G. 3, c. 23, s. 28 (I.); 5 G. 4, c. lii. s. 22; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 22, s. 2.]

(5) Forgery of the following die, if committed with intent to defraud or deceive, shall be felony and punishable with penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years:—Any stamp or die provided, made, or used in pursuance of the Local Stamp Act, 1869. [This sub-section replaces 32 & 33 Vict. c. 49, s. 8.]

Meaning of "seal," "stamp," "die."]—By s. 18 (1) the expression "seal" includes any stamp or impression of a seal or any stamp or impression made or apparently intended to resemble the stamp or impression of a seal, as well as the seal itself. The expression "stamp" includes a stamp impressed by means of a die, as well as an adhesive stamp. The expression "die" includes any plate, type, tool, or implement whatsoever, and also any part of any die plate, type, tool, or implement, and any stamp or impression thereof or any part of such stamp or impression. [This definition is taken from the Stamp Duties Management Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 38).]

Treason.]—As to the offence of treason in connection with counterfeiting the privy signet, see Robinson's Case, 2 Rolle Rep. 50; 1 Hale, 184. The mere misuser of the great seal was not treason; 1 Hale, 183; 3 Co. Inst. 15; as, for instance, the taking of the great seal from an original patent and appending it to a pretended patent. Bro. Abr., Treason, pl. 3; 1 Hale, 182: Leate's Case, 12 Co. Rep. 15. Nor was the alteration of the instrument to which the real seal is appended treason within the meaning of the statutes. 3 Co. Inst. 15; 1 Hale, 183.

UTTERING.

Sect. 6.—Uttering.]—(1) Every person who utters any forged document, seal, or die shall be guilty of an offence of the like degree (whether felony or misdemeanor) and on conviction thereof shall be liable to the same punishment as if he himself had forged the document, seal, or die.

(2) A person utters a forged document, seal, or die, who, knowing the same to be forged, and with either of the intents necessary to constitute the offence of forging the said document, seal, or die, uses, offers, publishes, delivers, disposes of, tenders in payment or in exchange, exposes for sale or exchange, exchanges, tenders in evidence, or puts off the said forged document, seal, or die.

(3) It is immaterial where the document, seal, or die was forged.

Uttering.]—Sub-s. (2) of s. 6 of the Act of 1913 defines the offence of uttering a forged document, seal, or die. It will now no longer be necessary in any case to prove that the uttering was to a particular class of persons (see 10 G. 4, c. 24, s. 41; 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 59, s. 19); or in a particular manner (see 31 & 32 Vict. c. 37, s. 4; 45 & 46 Vict. c. 9, s. 4: "utters by tendering in evidence"; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 49, s. 8: "sells or exposes for sale"). Uttering was not punishable under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, s. 19; nor under 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, ss. 66, 282. The following decisions under other statutes, now repealed, are still retained by way of illustration. Where on an indictment under 13 G. 3, c. 79 (rep.), which contained the words "utter or publish," it appeared that the defendant merely showed a forged instrument to a person, though with intent to raise a false idea of his substance, and afterwards left the instrument under cover, in the custody of that person, as he pretended, for safe custody, it was held not to be an uttering or publishing within these words. R. v. Shukard, R. & R. 200. But such conduct might now be held to amount to using the document with intent to deceive, and so to constitute the offence of uttering as defined by s. 6 (2) of the Act of 1913. The showing of a forged receipt to a person with whom the defendant is claiming credit for it, was held to be an offering or uttering within the statute then in force (1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 10), though the defendant refused to part with the possession of it. R. v. Radford, 1 Den. 59; 1 C. & K. 707. Where a pawnbroker, upon the hearing of an application against him under 39 & 40 G. 3, c. 99, s. 14 (rep.), to compel him to deliver up goods which had been pledged with him (the money advanced, with interest, having been repaid), produced and delivered to the magistrates, through the hand of his attorney, a forged duplicate as the genuine one, which he had given when the goods were pledged, and which he had received back when the money was repaid: this was held to amount to an uttering by the pawnbroker of an accountable receipt within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 23 (rep.). R. v. Fitchie, Dears & B. 175; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 90; 7 Cox, 257. And where the defendant placed a forged receipt for poor-rates in the hands of the prosecutor, for the purpose of inspection only, in order, by representing himself as a person who had paid his poor-rates, fraudulently to induce the prosecutor to advance money to a third person, for whom the defendant proposed to become a surety for its repayment: this was held to be an offering, etc., within the statute. R. v. Ion, 2 Den. 475; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 166. And the rule there laid down by the Court is, that a using of the forged instrument in some way, in order to get money or credit upon it, or by means of it, is sufficient to constitute the offence described in the statute. On an indictment for uttering forged bonds in this country, it was held that such uttering here was sufficiently proved by evidence of the bonds having been posted in England to a firm at Brussels for negotiation. R. v. Finkelstein, 16 Cox, 107, Common Serjeant, after consulting Stephen, J. The uttering of the bill of A., an existing person, as that of a fictitious person of the same name, has been held felonious. R. v. Nisbett, 6 Cox, 320. Where it appeared that the defendant sold a forged note to an agent employed by the bank to procure it from him, the judges held this to be an uttering, although it was objected that the prisoner had been solicited to commit the act proved against him, by the bank themselves, by means of their agents. R. v. Holden, 2 Taunt. 334; R. & R. 154.

Questions have arisen upon the subject of uttering, as to the quality of the offences of different parties, viz., whether they were indictable as principals or accessories. It has been decided that the giving of a forged note to an innocent agent, or to an accomplice, in order that he may utter it, is a disposing of and putting away of the note. R. v. Palmer, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 96; R. & R. 72; 2 Leach, 978: R. v. Giles, 1 Mood. 166; and see Brooks v. Warwick, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 389. But where several, by concert, are privy to the uttering of a forged note, which is uttered by one only in the absence of the others, he only who utters it is a principal, but the others are accessories before the fact. R. v. Soares, R. & R. 25: R. v. Badcock, Id. 249: R. v. Stewart, Id. 363: R. v. Davis, Id. 113. See R. v. Morris, Id. 270; 2 Leach, 1096: R. v. Harris, 7 C. & P. 416; and post, tit. "Accessories."

A conditional uttering is as much a crime as any other. Where the defendant gave a forged acceptance, knowing it to be so, to the manager of a bank where he kept an account, saying that he hoped the bill would satisfy the bank as a security for the money he owed them, and the manager replied that that would depend on the result of inquiries as to the acceptors, this was held a sufficient uttering. R. v. Cooke, 8 C. & P. 782. The offence of uttering a forged stamp is complete, although, at the time of uttering, certain parts of it are concealed. R. v. Collicott, R. & R. 212; 2 Leach, 1048. As to the distinction between uttering forged paper and false pretences, see R. v. Inder, 1 Den. 325; 2 C. & K. 635.

DEMANDING PROPERTY ON FORGED DOCUMENT.

Sect. 7.—Demanding property on forged documents, etc.]—Every person shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof shall be liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years, who, with intent to defraud, demands, receives, or obtains, or causes or procures to be delivered, paid or transferred to any person, or endeavours to receive or obtain or to cause or procure to be delivered, paid or transferred to any person any money, security for money or other property, real or personal :—(a) under, upon, or by virtue of any forged instrument whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged; or (b) under, upon, or by virtue of any probate or letters of administration, knowing the will, testament, codicil, or testamentary writing on which such probate or letters of administration shall have been obtained to have been forged, or knowing such probate or letters of administration to have been obtained by any false oath, affirmation, or affidavit.

This section replaces 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 53, s. 49; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 2, 38; 26 & 27 Vict. c. 73, s. 13; 29 & 30 Vict. c. 25, s. 15; 33 & 34 Vict. c. 58, s. 3; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 59, s. 21; 8 Edw. 7. c. 69, s. 38. The word "instrument" has been retained from s. 38 of the Forgery Act, 1861, though the word "document" has been substituted for "instrument" in other sections of the Act of 1913. The meaning of "instrument" was discussed in R. v. Riley [1896] 1 Q. B. 309; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 74; 18 Cox, 291; and in R. v. Cade [1914] 2 K. B. 209; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 796; 110 L. T. 624; 24 Cox, 131; 78 J. P. 240; 30 T. L. R. 289; 10 Cr. App. R. 23. It has been held to include a telegram, R. v. Riley (supra); a "cut-out letter," R. v. Howse, 107 L. T. 239; 28 T. L. R. 186; 7 Cr. App. R. 103; and a request for the payment of money, R. v. Cade (supra).

It is essential that the accused should know that the document is a forged document and the question as to his knowledge should be left to the jury. R. v. Smith, 14 Cr. App. R. 101.

POSSESSION OF FORGED BANK NOTES, SEALS, AND DIES.

Sect. 8.—Possession of forged documents, seals, and dies.]—(1) Every person shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof shall be liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years, who, without lawful authority or excuse, the proof whereof shall lie on the accused, purchases or receives from any person, or has in his custody or possession, a forged bank note, knowing the same to be forged. [This sub-section replaces 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 13.]

(2) Every person shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof shall be liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years, who, without lawful authority or excuse, the proof whereof shall lie on the accused, and knowing the same to be forged, has in his custody or possession—(a) any forged die required or authorised by law to be used for the marking of gold or silver plate, or of gold or silver wares, or any ware of gold, silver, or base metal bearing the impression of any such forged die; [This paragraph replaces 13 G. 3, c. 52, s. 14; 23 & 24 G. 3, c. 23 (I.); 5 G. 4. c. lii.; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 22, s. 2.] (b) any forged stamp or die as defined by the Stamp Duties Management Act, 1891; [This paragraph replaces 54 & 55 Vict. c. 38, s. 13 (9).] (c) any forged wrapper or label provided by or under the authority of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue or the Commissioners of Customs and Excise. [This paragraph replaces 16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 116.]

(3) Every person shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof shall be liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years who, without lawful authority or excuse, the proof whereof shall lie on the accused, and knowing the same to be forged, has in his custody or possession :—Any forged stamp or die, resembling or intended to resemble either wholly or in part any stamp or die which at any time whatever has been or may be provided, made, or used by or under the direction of the local authority for the purposes of the Local Stamp Act, 1869. [This sub-section replaces 32 & 33 Vict. c. 49, s. 8.]

As to what constitutes possession, see s. 15 of the Act of 1913 (post, p. 828), and as to the meaning of lawful authority or excuse, see Dickins v. Gill [1896] 2 Q. B. 310; 18 Cox, 384; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 187; R. v. Harvey, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 284; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 63; 11 Cox. 662.

MAKING OR POSSESSING IMPLEMENTS FOR FORGERY.

Sect. 9.—Making or having in possession paper or implements for forgery.]—Every person shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof shall be liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years, who, without lawful authority or excuse, the proof whereof shall lie on the accused :—(a) Makes, uses, or knowingly has in his custody or possession any paper intended to resemble and pass as—(i) Special paper such as is provided and used for making any bank note, Treasury bill, or London county bill; (ii) Revenue paper; (b) makes, uses or knowingly has in his custody or possession, any frame, mould, or instrument for making such paper, or for producing in or on such paper any words, figures, letters, marks, lines, or devices peculiar to and used in or on any such paper; (c) engraves or in anywise makes upon any plate, wood, stone, or other material, any words, figures, letters, marks, lines, or devices, the print whereof resembles in whole or in part any words, figures, letters, marks, lines, or devices peculiar to and used in or on any bank note, or in or on any document entitling or evidencing the title of any person to any share or interest in any public stock, annuity, fund, or debt of any part of His Majesty's dominions or of any foreign state, or in any stock, annuity, fund, or debt of any body corporate, company, or society, whether within or without His Majesty's dominions; (d) uses or knowingly has in his custody or possession any plate, wood, stone, or other material, upon which any such words, figures, letters, marks, lines, or devices have been engraved or in anywise made as aforesaid; (e) uses or knowingly has in his custody or possession any paper upon which any such words, figures, letters, marks, lines, or devices have been printed or in anywise made as aforesaid. [This section replaces 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 16, s. 3; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 121, s. 18; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 9, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19; 26 & 27 Vict. c. 73, s. 15; 29 & 30 Vict. c. 25, s. 20; 33 & 34 Vict. c. 58, s. 5; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 2, s. 10; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 59, s. 21; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 38, s. 14; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 46, s. 12; 8 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 60; 8 Edw. 7, c. 69, s. 38 (2).]

Bank note.]—By s. 18 (1) of the Act of 1913 the expression "bank note" includes any note or bill of exchange of the Bank of England or Bank of Ireland, or of any other person, body corporate, or company carrying on the business of banking in any part of the world, and includes "bank bill," "bank post bill," "blank bank note," "blank bank bill of exchange," and "blank bank post bill."

Revenue paper.]—By s. 18 (1) of the Act of 1913 the expression "revenue paper" means any paper provided by the proper authority for the purpose of being used for stamps, licences, permits, post-office money orders, or postal orders, or for any purpose whatever connected with the public revenue.

Treasury bill.]—By s. 18 (1) of the Act of 1913 "Treasury bill" includes exchequer bill, exchequer bond, exchequer debenture, and war bond.

PURCHASE OR POSSESSION OF PAPER FOR TREASURY BILLS, ETC.

Sect. 10.—Purchasing or having in possession certain paper before it has been duly stamped and issued.]—Every person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years, who, without lawful authority or excuse the proof whereof shall lie on the accused, purchases, receives, or knowingly has in his custody or possession—(a) Any special paper provided and used for making Treasury bills or London county bills or any Revenue paper before such paper has been duly stamped, signed, and issued for public use: (b) any die peculiarly used in the manufacture of any such paper. [This section replaces 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 11; 29 & 30 Vict. c. 25, s. 21; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 2, s. 10; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 38, s. 15; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 46, s. 12; 8 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 60. The provisions of the foregoing statutes are generalised, and the punishments are standardised.]

ACCESSORIES.

Sect. 11.—Accessories and abettors.]—Any person who knowingly and wilfully aids, abets, counsels, causes, procures, or commands the commission of an offence punishable under this Act shall be liable to be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished as a principal offender. [This section reproduces 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, ss. 1-3; and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 49 (see post, tit. "Accessories.")]

PUNISHMENTS.

Sect. 12.—Punishments.]—(1) Where a sentence of penal servitude may be imposed on conviction of an offence against this Act, the court may, instead thereof, impose a sentence of imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for not more than two years.

(2)—(a) On conviction of a misdemeanor punishable under this Act, the court, instead of or in addition to any other punishment which may be lawfully imposed, may fine the offender: (b) on conviction of a felony punishable under this Act, the court, in addition to imposing a sentence of penal servitude or imprisonment, may require the offender to enter into his own recognizances, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour: (c) on conviction of a misdemeanor punishable under this Act, the court, instead of or in addition to any other punishment which may lawfully be imposed for the offence, may require the offender to enter into his own recognizances, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour: (d) no person shall be imprisoned under this section for more than one year for not finding sureties. [This section reproduces 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 51, and 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (2).]

JURISDICTION OF QUARTER SESSIONS.

Sect. 13.—Jurisdiction of quarter sessions in England.]—A court of quarter sessions in England shall not have jurisdiction to try an indictment for any offence against this Act or for an offence which, under any enactment for the time being in force, is declared to be forgery or to be punishable as forgery. [This section reproduces 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).]

VENUE.

Sect. 14.—Venue.]—(1) A person charged—(a) with an offence against this Act; or (b) with an offence indictable at common law or under any Act for the time being in force consisting in the forging or altering of any matter whatsoever, or in offering, uttering, disposing of, or putting off any matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged or altered; may be proceeded against, indicted, tried, and punished in any county or place in which he was apprehended or is in custody as if the offence had been committed in that county or place; and for all purposes incidental to or consequential on the prosecution, trial, or punishment of the offence, it shall be deemed to have been committed in that county or place: Provided that, where the offence charged relates to documents made for the purpose of any Act relating to the suppression of the slave trade, it shall, for the purposes of jurisdiction and trial, be treated as an offence against the Slave Trade Act, 1873.

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect the laws relating to the government of His Majesty's naval or military forces.

CRIMINAL POSSESSION DEFINED.

Sect. 15.—Criminal possession.]—Where the having any document, seal, or die in the custody or possession of any person is in this Act expressed to be an offence, a person shall be deemed to have a document, seal or die in his custody or possession if he—(a) has it in his personal custody or possession; or (b) knowingly and wilfully has it in the actual custody or possession of any other person, or in any building, lodging, apartment, field, or other place, whether open or enclosed, and whether occupied by himself or not. It is immaterial whether the document, matter, or thing is had in such custody, possession, or place for the use of such person or for the use or benefit of another person.

SEARCH WARRANTS.

Sect. 16.—Search warrants.]—(1) If it shall be made to appear by information on oath before a justice of the peace that there is reasonable cause to believe that any person has in his custody or possession without lawful authority or excuse—(a) any bank note; or (b) any implement for making paper or imitation of the paper used for bank notes; or (c) any material having thereon any words, forms, devices, or characters capable of producing or intended to produce the impression of a bank note; or (d) any forged document, seal, or die; or (e) any machinery, implement, utensil, or material used or intended to be used for the forgery of any document; the justice may grant a warrant to search for the same; and if the same shall be found on search, it shall be lawful to seize it and carry it before a justice of the county or place in which the warrant was issued, to be by him disposed of according to law.

(2) Every document, seal, or die lawfully seized under such warrant shall be defaced and destroyed or otherwise disposed of—(a) by order of the court before which the offender is tried; or (b) if there be no trial, by order of a justice of the peace; or (c) if it affects the public revenue, by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue or the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, as the case may require; or (d) if it affects any of the companies of Goldsmiths or Guardians referred to in the Gold and Silver Wares Act, 1844, by the said company or guardians.

INDICTMENT.

Sect. 17.—Form of indictment and proof of intent.]—(1) In an indictment or information for an offence against this Act with reference to any document, seal, or die, it is sufficient to refer to the document, seal, or die by any name or designation by which it is usually known, or by its purport, without setting out any copy or facsimile of the whole or any part of the document, seal, or die. [This sub-section reproduces 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 42.]

(2) Where an intent to defraud or an intent to deceive is one of the constituent elements of an offence punishable under this Act, or under any other Act relating to forgery or any kindred offence for the time being in force, it shall not be necessary to allege in the indictment or to prove an intent to defraud or deceive any particular person; and it shall be sufficient to prove that the defendant did the act charged with intent to defraud or to deceive, as the case may require. [This sub-section reproduces 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 44.]

(3) If any person who is a member of any co-partnership or is one of two or more beneficial owners of any property, forges any document, matter, or thing with intent to defraud the co-partnership or the other beneficial owners, he is liable to be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished as if he had not been or was not a member of the co-partnership, nor one of such beneficial owners. [This sub-section extends to forgery the provisions of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 116, s. 1 (rep.), which formerly applied only to larceny or embezzlement.]

For precedents of indictments under this Act, see post, pp. 831, 832.

INTERPRETATION OF TERMS.

Sect. 18.—Interpretation.]—(1) In this Act unless the context otherwise requires—

The expression "bank note" includes any note or bill of exchange of the Bank of England or Bank of Ireland, or of any other person, body corporate, or company carrying on the business of banking in any part of the world, and includes "bank bill," "bank post bill," "blank bank note," "blank bank bill of exchange," and "blank bank post bill":

The expression "die" includes any plate, type, tool, or implement whatsoever, and also any part of any die plate, type, tool, or implement, and any stamp or impression thereof or any part of such stamp or impression:

The expression "document of title to goods" includes any bill of lading, India warrant, dock warrant, warehouse keeper's certificate, warrant or order for the delivery or transfer of any goods or valuable thing, bought or sold note, or any other document used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods, or authorising or purporting to authorise either by endorsement or by delivery the possessor of such document to transfer or receive any goods thereby represented or therein mentioned or referred to:

The expression "document of title to lands" includes any deed, map, roll, register, or instrument in writing being or containing evidence of the title or any part of the title to any land or to any interest in or arising out of any land, or any authenticated copy thereof:

The expression "revenue paper" means any paper provided by the proper authority for the purpose of being used for stamps, licences, permits, post office money orders, or postal orders, or for any purpose whatever connected with the public revenue:

The expression "seal" includes any stamp or impression of a seal or any stamp or impression made or apparently intended to resemble the stamp or impression of a seal, as well as the seal itself:

The expression "stamp" includes a stamp impressed by means of a die as well as an adhesive stamp:

The expression "Treasury bill," includes Exchequer bill, Exchequer bond, Exchequer debenture, and War bond:

The expression "valuable security" includes any writing entitling or evidencing the title of any person to any share or interest in any public stock, annuity, fund, or debt of any part of His Majesty's dominions or of any foreign state, or in any stock, annuity, fund, or debt of any body corporate, company, or society, whether within or without His Majesty's dominions, or to any deposit in any bank, and also includes any scrip, debenture, bill, note, warrant, order, or other security for the payment of money, or any accountable receipt, release, or discharge, or any receipt or other instrument evidencing the payment of money, or the delivery of any chattel personal.

(2) References in this Act to any Act in force at the commencement of this Act shall be held to include a reference to that Act as amended, extended, or applied by any other Act.

(3) References in this Act to any Government department shall in relation to any functions performed by that department be held to include references to any other Government department by which the same functions were previously performed.

MISCELLANEOUS SECTIONS.

Sect. 19.—Savings.]—(1) Where an offence against this Act also by virtue of some other Act subjects the offender to any forfeiture or disqualification, or to any penalty other than penal servitude or imprisonment or fine, the liability of the offender to punishment under this Act shall be in addition to and not in substitution for his liability under such other Act.

(2) Where an offence against this Act is by any other Act, whether passed before or after the commencement of this Act, made punishable on summary conviction, proceedings may be taken either under such other Act or under this Act: Provided that where such an offence was at the commencement of this Act punishable only on summary conviction, it shall remain only so punishable.

Sect. 20.—Repeals.]—The enactments specified in the schedule to this Act are hereby repealed as to England and Ireland to the extent specified in the third column of that schedule.

Sect. 21.—Extent.]—This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

PRECEDENTS OF INDICTMENTS UNDER THE FORGERY ACT, 1913.

Indictment for Forging and Uttering a Will. (3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, ss. 2 (1) (a) and 6, ante, pp. 807, 822.)

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offences :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count:

Forgery, contrary to section 2 (1) (a) of the Forgery Act, 1913.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with intent to defraud, forged a certain will purporting to be the will of C. D.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count:

Uttering forged document, contrary to section 6 (1) (2) of the Forgery Act, 1913.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, uttered a certain forged will purporting to be the will of C. D., knowing it to be forged, and with intent to defraud.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, ss. 2 (2), 6, 12 (1) (ante, pp. 808, 822, 827). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 12 (2) (b) (ante, p. 827).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 13 (ante, p. 827).

Indictment for Forging and Uttering a Document, Forgery of which is not made Felony. (3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, ss. 4 (2), 6, ante, pp. 820, 822.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count:

Forgery of document, contrary to section 4 (1) of the Forgery Act, 1913.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with intent to defraud, forged a certain document purporting to be [describe the document in ordinary language].

Second Count:

As in last precedent.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment with or without hard labour for not more than two years or fine. 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, ss. 4 (1), 12 (2) (a), ante, pp. 820, 827. As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 12 (2) (c), (d), ante, p. 827.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 13, ante, p. 827.

Indictment for Demanding Money upon a Forged Instrument. (3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 7 (a), ante, p. 824.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Demanding money on forged document, contrary to section 7 of the Forgery Act, 1913.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with intent to defraud, demanded, received, or obtained from C. D. [or caused or procured to be delivered, paid, or transferred from C. D. to ——] [or endeavoured, etc., see the section, supra] the sum of 50*l.* under, upon, or by virtue of a forged bill of exchange knowing the same to be forged.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, ss. 7, 12 (1), ante, pp. 824, 827. As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see s. 12 (2) (b), ante, p. 827.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. S. 13, ante, p. 827.

Evidence.

Intent to defraud or deceive.]—"To deceive is to induce a man to believe that a thing is true which is false, and which the person practising the deceit knows or believes to be false. To defraud is to deprive by deceit; it is by deceit to induce a man to act to his injury. More tersely it may be put, that to deceive is by falsehood to induce a state of mind; to defraud is by deceit to induce a course of action:" Re London and Globe Finance Corporation [1903] 1 Ch. 728, 732, Buckley, J.

It is sufficient to prove generally an intent to defraud or deceive without proving intent to defraud a particular person. 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 17 (2) (ante, p. 829). At common law it is said to be necessary to allege and prove a particular intent, unless the document forged was of a public nature. R. v. Hodgson, Dears. & B. 3; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 78; 7 Cox, 122. But see 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1643 n. It is not necessary to prove that any person was actually defrauded by the forgery (R. v. Crooke, 2 Str. 901: R. v. Goate, 1 Ld. Raym. 737), if from circumstances, the jury can infer that it was the defendant's intention to defraud; for where the intent to defraud exists in the mind of the defendant, it is sufficient, though, from circumstances of which he is not apprised, he could not, in fact, defraud the prosecutor (R. v. Holden, R. & R. 154: R. v. Hoatson, 2 C. & K. 777); or though the party to whom the forged instrument is uttered believes that the defendant did not intend to defraud him (R. v. Sheppard, R. & R. 169; see R. v. Harvey, 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 2 B. & C. 261); nay, even, as it seems, though in fact no person could have been defrauded by the forged instrument. See R. v. Nash, 2 Den. 493, 503; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 147, 149, Maule, J.; but cf. R. v. Marcus, 2 C. & K. 356, where Cresswell, J., held that there must be a possibility of some person being defrauded. Where a forged bill of exchange, payable to the order of the defendant, was given as a pledge only, but to obtain credit, it was held to be a fraudulent intent within the meaning of the statute. R. v. Birkett, R. & R. 86. The jury ought to infer an intent to defraud the person who would have to pay the instrument if it were genuine, although from the manner of executing the forgery, or from that person's ordinary caution, it would not be likely to impose on him, and although the object was general, to defraud whoever might take the instrument, and the intention of defrauding in particular the person who would have to pay the instrument, if genuine, did not enter into the prisoner's contemplation. R. v. Mazagora, R. & R. 291; see R. v. Trenfield, 1 F. & F. 43. A forged cheque drawn on the Worcester Old Bank was presented by the prisoner to Rufford's Bank at Stourbridge, and refused; and upon an indictment for forging and uttering the cheque with the intent to defraud the Messrs. Rufford, it was objected, that, as it was not drawn upon them, it could not defraud them: but Bosanquet, J., held, that as it was presented at their bank for payment, it was evidence of an intent to defraud them. R. v. Crowther, 5 C. & P. 316.

The fact that the prisoner intended to provide for the payment of a bill which he uttered knowing it to be forged does not negative the intent to defraud. R. v. Hill, 2 Mood. 30; 8 C. & P. 274: R. v. Cooke, Id. 582; nor does the fact that he had a legal or bonâ fide claim to the extent of the money obtained by the forged instrument. R. v. Wilson, 1 Den. 284; 2 C. & K. 527. And see R. v. Parker, 74 J. P. 208. The fact that the prisoner has given guarantees to his bankers, to whom he paid a forged note, to a larger amount than the note, does not so completely negative an intent to defraud them as to withdraw the case from the consideration of the jury. R. v. James, 7 C. & P. 553. See R. v. Cooke, 8 C. & P. 582: R. v. Geach, 9 C. & P. 499.

Evidence that the prisoner uttered other forged documents similar to that charged in the indictment may be admissible to prove guilty knowledge. R. v. Whiley, 2 Leach, 983. See ante, pp. 355, 363.

On the trial of an indictment for forgery with intent to defraud A. B., "one of the public officers" of a banking company established under the Country Bankers Act, 1826 (7 G. 4, c. 46), A. B. stated that he was a public officer: and an examined copy of the return forwarded to the stamp-office under that Act, in which also he was stated to be so, was put in: but this copy had not the affidavit at the close of the return, which is directed by schedule (A.) of that statute, and the date was left blank. The judges held that A. B. was sufficiently proved to be the public officer. R. v. Carter, 1 Den. 65; 1 C. & K. 741. See Edwards v. Buchanan, 3 B. & Ad. 788.

Knowledge of falsity.]—This is not capable of direct proof. It is nearly in all cases, therefore, proved by evidence of facts from which the jury may presume it (vide ante, pp. 355, 363, 396). Upon an indictment for disposing of and putting away a forged bank-note, knowing it to be forged, proof that the defendant had passed other forged notes, if proved by legitimate evidence, R. v. Millard, R. & R. 245 (see R. v. Moore, 1 F. & F. 73), raises a probable presumption that he knew the note, for the passing of which he is now indicted, to be forged; R. v. Wyllie, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 92; S. C. sub nom. R. v. Whiley, 2 Leach, 983: R. v. Tattersal, Id. 93 n. (ante, p. 363): and see R. v. Ball, 1 Camp. 324; R. & R. 132: R. v. Hough, R. & R. 120: R. v. Green, 3 C. & K. 209: R. v. Salt, 3 F. & F. 834: R. v. Francis, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 128; 12 Cox, 612: R. v. Colclough, 15 Cox, 92; 10 L. R. (Ir.) 241 (C. C. R. Ir.); and if, in addition to this, it is proved that the defendant, when he passed these notes, gave a false name or address, it amounts to a violent presumption of his guilty knowledge. (See ante, p. 397.) It has been ruled, however, that if a subsequent uttering is made the subject of a distinct indictment, it cannot be given in evidence to show a guilty knowledge in a former uttering. R. v. Smith, 2 C. & P. 633: and R. v. Smith, 4 C. & P. 411, 413 n. But this distinction seems to be now exploded; and in R. v. Lewis, Carnarvon Sum. Ass., 1840, Lord Denman, C.J., said, that "he could not conceive how the relevancy of the fact to this charge could be affected by its being the subject of another charge;" and offered to admit the evidence, although the above cases were cited. And in another case, Alderson, B., admitted such evidence. R. v. Aston, 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1675. See also R. v. Foster, Dears. 456; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 134. In Griffits v. Payne, 11 A. & E. 131, it was said by Tindal, C.J., that such evidence would not be admissible on an indictment for forgery. Evidence may be given of other transactions which have some nexus or connexion with the offence charged, whether the evidence concerns previous or subsequent acts, to show a guilty mind or to rebut a defence of the accused. R. v. Mason, 10 Cr. App. R. 169. On an indictment under 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 19 (rep., but re-enacted in 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 9, ante, p. 825), for engraving or uttering notes of a foreign prince, evidence of a recent engraving or uttering of notes of another foreign prince was held admissible in proof of guilty knowledge. R. v. Balls, 1 Mood. 470; 7 C. & P. 429.

The defendant's statements as to other instruments of the same kind, supposed to have been the subject of a guilty uttering by him, seem not to be admissible in evidence. R. v. Cooke, 8 C. & P. 582; but see the remarks of Crompton, J., on this case in R. v. Brown, 2 F. & F. 599.

Handwriting.]—That the signature or other part of the instrument alleged to be forged is not of the handwriting of the party may be proved by any person acquainted with his handwriting, either from having seen him write, or from being in the habit of corresponding with him. (Ante, p. 446.) It is sufficient, primâ facie, to disprove his handwriting, and he need not be called to disprove an authority to others to use his name; circumstances showing guilty knowledge are enough. R. v. Hurley, 2 M. & Rob. 473. The forgery may be proved by the person whose name is forged: or by other witnesses who are acquainted with his handwriting, without calling him as a witness. His testimony as to the fact of forgery is not deemed the best evidence, and that of other persons merely secondary. R. v. Hughes, 2 East, P. C. 1002: R. v. Macguire, Id.: Bank Prosecutions, R. & R. 378. And by Denman's Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18), s. 8, "comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the judge to be genuine shall be permitted to be made by witnesses; and such writings, and the evidence of witnesses respecting the same, may be submitted to the Court and jury as evidence of the genuineness or otherwise of the writing in dispute." (See R. v. Harvey, 11 Cox, 546, and ante, pp. 446, 447.) "There is no decision which requires that the evidence of a man who is skilled in comparing handwriting, and who has formed a reliable opinion from past experience, should be excluded because his experience has not been gained in the way of his business." R. v. Silverlock [1894] 2 Q. B. at p. 771; 63 L. J. (M. C.) 233, per Russell, C.J., and the admissibility of evidence of professional experts in handwriting, which formerly seems to have been doubtful (Goodtitle v. Braham, 4 T. R. 497: Carey v. Pitt, Peake, Add. Cas. 130: R. v. Cator, 4 Esp. 117: Gurney v. Langlands, 5 B. & Ald. 330: and see ante, p. 447), has been recognized of recent years, the weight of such evidence being for the jury. On an indictment for uttering a forged will, which, it was alleged, had been written over pencil marks that had been rubbed out, it was held that the evidence of engravers, who had examined the paper with a mirror, and traced the pencil-marks, was admissible for the prosecution. R. v. Williams, 8 C. & P. 434.

Identity of person whose writing is forged.]—Evidence must also be given of the identity of the person whose handwriting is alleged to be forged; that is, it must be proved expressly or from circumstances, that the alleged forgery was intended to represent the handwriting of the person whose handwriting it is proved not to be; or that it was attempted to be uttered as the handwriting of a person who never existed. (Ante, p. 804.) See R. v. Sponsonby, 1 Leach, 332; 2 East, P. C. 996, 997: R. v. Downes, Id. 997, 999. Where the defendant uttered a forged note, and said that it was drawn by W. H. of the Bull's Head, it was held to be sufficient to prove that it was not of the handwriting of that W. H., although it appeared that there was another W. H. living in the neighbourhood. R. v. Hampton, 1 Mood. 255. Where the prisoner obtained money from B. for a cheque on Jones, Loyd & Co., purporting to be drawn by G. Andrews in favour of —— Newman, Esq., or bearer, telling him that it was for Mr. Newman, of Soho Square, in whose service he was for three months, and that Mr. Newman had put his name on the back; and it appeared upon an indictment for forging and uttering the cheque, that no person of the name of G. Andrews kept an account with Jones, Loyd & Co., that Mr. Newman of Soho Square did not write his name on the back of the cheque, and that the prisoner was never in that gentleman's service: Parke, J. (after consulting Gaselee, J.), held this to be sufficient primâ facie evidence that G. Andrews was a fictitious person, and told the jury that if G. Andrews really drew the cheque, the prisoner might produce him, or give some evidence upon the subject: the prisoner was convicted. R. v. Backler, 5 C. & P. 118. Upon an indictment for forging and uttering a bill of exchange, purporting to be drawn by T. W. of Nottingham, and to be accepted by T. K., Market Place, Birmingham, which was passed to the prosecutor by the prisoner, who represented his name to be King, of King Square, which he said was chiefly his property: the prosecutor proved that he made inquiry for T. W. of Nottingham, and could not find him: that he had been twice to Birmingham after T. K., but could find no such person, and that he had made inquiries at King Square for the prisoner, but could hear of no such person; but he admitted that he was a stranger at these places, and no person acquainted with them was called: Parke, J., after consulting the judges present, held this sufficient evidence to go to the jury of the bill being a fictitious one, although he told them that it was not very satisfactory, and not the usual evidence upon such occasions. R. v. King, 5 C. & P. 123. In R. v. Ashby, 2 F. & F. 560, on an indictment for forging a cheque dated A. and purporting to be drawn by B. C., evidence that no person named B. C. lived at A. who would be likely to have a banker's account was held evidence to prove that B. C. was a fictitious person. Where the prisoner was indicted for forging and uttering a cheque on Greenwood & Co., army agents and bankers, purporting to be drawn by J. Weston, and a clerk in the army department was called to prove that J. Weston kept no account with his employers; he also admitted that he did not know the names of all the customers, but added that he knew of no customer named J. Weston, and that, upon inquiry of the other clerks, he found that there was no such person: Parke, J., with the concurrence of Patteson, J., and Gurney, B., held this to be primâ facie evidence sufficient to call upon the prisoner to show who J. Weston really was. R. v. Brannan, 6 C. & P. 326.

Description of the forged document, etc.]—The document, seal, die, or instrument need not be set out in facsimile in the indictment. It is sufficient to refer to it by any name or designation by which it is usually known or by its purport. 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 17 (1) (ante, p. 829). And under the Indictments Act, 1915 (5 & 6 G. 5, c. 90), r. 7, it is sufficient to describe any document necessary to be referred to in an indictment by any name or designation by which it is usually known, or by its purport, without setting out any copy of it.

The instrument must appear upon the face of it to have been made to resemble a true instrument of the denomination mentioned in the indictment, and in the statute upon which it is framed: not necessarily an exact resemblance, but such as to be capable of deceiving persons using ordinary observation, according to their means of knowledge (see R. v. Collicott, R. & R. 212, 229; 2 Leach, 1048; 4 Taunt, 300: R. v. Jones, 1 Leach, 204: R. v. Mahoney, 6 Cox, 487), although, not, perhaps, those scientifically acquainted with such instruments. See R. v. Hoost, 2 East, P. C. 950. Even where upon an indictment for forging a bank-note, there appeared to be no water-mark in the forged note, and the word "pounds" was omitted in the body of it, the defendant being convicted, the judges held the conviction to be right. R. v. Elliott, 1 Leach, 175; 2 East, P. C. 951. So a man may be indicted for forging an instrument, which, if genuine, could not be made available, by reason of some circumstance not appearing upon the face of the instrument, but to be made out by extrinsic evidence. See R. v. M'Intosh, 2 Leach, 883; 2 East, P. C. 942. Thus, a man may be indicted for forging a deed, though not made in pursuance of the provisions of particular statutes requiring it to be in a particular form (R. v. Lyon, R. & R. 255: R. v. Froud, Id. 389; 1 B. & B. 300); or for forging a cheque, though it be post-dated. R. v. Taylor, 1 C. & K. 213. And now, by 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 1 (3) (b) (ante, p. 804), forgery of a document may be complete, even if the document when forged is incomplete, or is not or does not purport to be such a document as would be binding or sufficient in law.

The forged document must be produced at the trial if possible (R. v. Hall, 12 Cox, 159); but secondary evidence can be given if it is in the prisoner's possession and is not produced. Notice to produce is expedient, if not essential (see ante, p. 368), 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 2076. R. v. Hunter, 4 C. & P. 128: R. v. Haworth, Id. 254: R. v. Fitzsimons, 18 W. R. 763; Ir. Rep. 4 C. L. 1. See further ante, pp. 368-370, and p. 467, tit. Privilege.

Forgery by several.]—If several combine to forge an instrument, and each separately executes a distinct part of the forgery, and they are not together when the instrument is completed, they are nevertheless all guilty as principals. R. v. Bingly, R. & R. 446. As, if B. makes the paper, C. engraves the plate, and D. fills up the instrument, each without knowing that the others are employed for that purpose, they are all principals. R. v. Dade, 1 Mood. 307: R. v. Robert Kirkwood, Id. 304. So, if several concur in employing an innocent agent to make a forged instrument, of which they know the nature, they are all guilty of the forgery. R. v. Mazeau, 9 C. & P. 676. "I think if a man has an instrument in his possession without an indorsement or other writing the subject of the alleged forgery, and half an hour afterwards is found with the instrument indorsed, there is some evidence of forgery to go to the jury. . . . Although the prisoner might not be able to write himself, yet if he got any one to write the name, he is as much guilty of forgery as if he wrote it himself." R. v. James, 4 Cox, 90, per Erle, J.

GENERAL PROVISIONS IN OTHER STATUTES.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 98 (Forgery Act, 1861), s. 44.—Intent to defraud.]—[It shall be sufficient, in any indictment for forging, altering, uttering, offering, disposing of, or putting off any instrument whatsoever, where it shall be necessary to allege an intent to defraud, to allege that the party accused did the act with intent to defraud, without alleging an intent to defraud any particular person; and] on the trial of any such offence it shall not be necessary to prove an intent to defraud any particular person, but it shall be sufficient to prove that the party accused did the act charged with an intent to defraud. [This section re-enacted 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 8, with the additions italicized. The part within square brackets has now been repealed by the Indictments Act, 1915, see ante, p. 52.]

Sect. 47.—Other punishments substituted for those of 5 Eliz. c. 14, where adopted in other Acts.]—Whosoever shall be convicted of any offence which shall have been subjected by any Act or Acts to the same pains and penalties as are imposed by the Act passed in the fifth year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, intituled "An Act against Forgers of False Deeds and Writings," for any of the offences first enumerated in the said Act, shall be guilty of felony, and shall, in lieu of such pains and penalties, be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years. . . [This section re-enacts 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 23. 5 Eliz. c. 14 was repealed by 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 31. See post, p. 845.]

Sect. 48.—Punishment for forgery in general.]—Where by any Act now in force any person falsely making, forging, counterfeiting, erasing, or altering any matter whatsoever, or uttering, publishing, offering, disposing of, putting away, or making use of any matter whatsoever, knowing the same to have been falsely made, forged, counterfeited, erased or altered, or any person demanding, or endeavouring to receive or have any thing, or to do or cause to be done any act, upon or by virtue of any matter whatsoever, knowing such matter to have been falsely made, forged, counterfeited, erased or altered, would, according to the provisions contained in any such Act, be guilty of felony, and would, before the passing of the Act of the first year of King William the Fourth, chapter sixty-six (which, except s. 21, was rep. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, s. 1), have been liable to suffer death as a felon; or where by any Act now in force any person falsely personating another or falsely acknowledging any thing in the name of another, or falsely representing any other person than the real party to be such real party, or wilfully making a false entry in any book, account, or document, or in any manner wilfully falsifying any part of any book, account, or document, or wilfully making a transfer of any stock, annuity, or fund in the name of any person not being the owner thereof, or knowingly taking any false oath, or knowingly making any false affidavit or false affirmation, or demanding or receiving any money or other thing by virtue of any probate or letters of administration, knowing the will on which such probate shall have been obtained to have been false or forged, or knowing such probate or letters of administration to have been obtained by means of any false oath or false affirmation, would, according to the provisions contained in any such Act, be guilty of felony, and would, before the passing of the said Act of the first year of King William the Fourth, have been liable to suffer death as a felon; or where by any Act now in force any person making or using, or knowingly having in his custody or possession, any frame, mould, or instrument for the making of paper, with certain words visible in the substance thereof, or any person making such paper, or causing certain words to appear visible in the substance of any paper, would, according to the provisions contained in any such Act, be guilty of felony, and would before the passing of the said Act of the first year of King William the Fourth, have been liable to suffer death as a felon; then, and in each of the several cases aforesaid, if any person shall be convicted of any such felony as is hereinbefore in this section mentioned, or of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission thereof, and the same shall not be punishable under any of the other provisions of this Act, every such person shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . [This section re-enacts 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 1. As to the statutes to which it applies, see post, pp. 845 et seq.]

Sect. 49.—Accessories, etc.]—In the case of every felony punishable under this Act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this Act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this Act shall on conviction be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, . . . and every person who shall aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of any misdemeanor punishable under this Act shall be liable to be proceeded against, indicted, and punished as a principal offender. [See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, ss. 1-3. post, tit. "Accessories."]

Sect. 50.—Admiralty jurisdiction.]—All indictable offences mentioned in this Act which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England or Ireland shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature and liable to the same punishments as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried and determined in any county or place in England or Ireland in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if they had been actually committed in that county or place; and in any indictment for any such offence, or for being an accessory to such an offence, the venue in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence shall be averred to have been committed on "the high seas."

Provided that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of his Majesty's land or naval forces (see ante, pp. 31 et seq).

Sect. 51.—Fine and sureties.]—Whenever any person shall be convicted of a misdemeanor under this Act, it shall be lawful for the Court, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any of the punishments by this Act authorized, to fine the offender, and to require him to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour; and in all cases of felonies in this Act mentioned it shall be lawful for the Court, if it shall think fit, to require the offender to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any of the punishments by this Act authorized; provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this clause for not finding sureties for any period exceeding one year (see ante, p. 247).

46 & 47 Vict. c. 55 (Revenue Act, 1883), s. 17.]—Sections 76 to 82, both inclusive, of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 61), shall extend to any document issued by a customer of any banker, and intended to enable any person or body corporate to obtain payment from such banker of the sum mentioned in such document, and shall so extend in like manner as if the said document were a cheque. Provided that nothing in this Act shall be deemed to render any such document a negotiable instrument. For the purpose of this section his Majesty's paymaster-general and the King's and lord treasurer's remembrancer in Scotland shall be deemed to be bankers, and the public officers drawing on them shall be deemed customers.

8 Edw. 7, c. 48 (Post Office Act, 1908), s. 59 (2).—Forgery and stealing of money orders.]—If any person, with intent to defraud, obliterates, adds to, or alters any such lines or words on a money order, as would in the case of a cheque be a crossing of that cheque, or knowingly offers, utters, or disposes of any money order with such fraudulent obliteration, addition, or alteration, he shall be guilty of felony, and be liable to the like punishment as if the order were a cheque. [This section re-enacts 43 & 44 Vict. c. 33, s. 3.]

MAKING FALSE ENTRIES OF STOCK, ETC.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 98 (Forgery Act, 1861), s. 5.]—Whosoever shall wilfully make any false entry in, or wilfully alter any word or figure in, any of the books of account kept by the Bank of England, or the Bank of Ireland, in which books the accounts of the owners of any stock, annuities, or other public funds which now are or hereafter may be transferable at the Bank of England or at the Bank of Ireland shall be entered and kept, or shall in any manner wilfully falsify any of the accounts of any of such owners in any of the said books, with intent, in any of the cases aforesaid, to defraud; or shall wilfully make any transfer of any share or interest of or in any stock, annuity, or other public fund which now is or hereafter may be transferable at the Bank of England or at the Bank of Ireland in the name of any person not being the true and lawful owner of such share or interest with intent to defraud, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 5.]

2 & 3 Geo. 5 c. cv. (London County Council (Finance Consolidation) Act, 1912), s. 39.]—Any person who, with intent to defraud, makes any false entry in, or alters any word or figure in, any of the books required to be kept under this Act, or in any manner falsifies any of the said books, or makes any transfer of any consolidated stock, in the name of any person who is not the true owner thereof, shall be guilty of felony, and on conviction shall be liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years.

Indictment for wilfully altering words and figures within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 5.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Making false entry, contrary to section 5 of the Forgery Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with intent to defraud, made a false entry [or wilfully altered a word or figure] in a book of account kept by the Bank of England, in which the accounts of owners of stock, annuities, and other public funds transferable at the said Bank were entered and kept.

Felony: Penal servitude for life, or for not less than three years, or imprisonment with or without hard labour not exceeding two years. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 5; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (1) (2), ante, pp. 238, 239. As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see s. 51 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ante, p. 840.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions.

Evidence.

Prove the alteration, as stated in the indictment, and the intent, as ante, p. 833.

FALSE DIVIDEND WARRANTS.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 98 (Forgery Act, 1861), s. 6.]—Whosoever, being a clerk, officer, or servant of, or other person employed or intrusted by the Bank of England, or the Bank of Ireland, shall knowingly make out or deliver any dividend warrant, or warrant for payment of any annuity, interest or money, payable at the Bank of England or Ireland, for a greater or less amount than the person on whose behalf such warrant shall be made out is entitled to, with intent to defraud, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . . [This section is taken from 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 9, with the additions in italics.]

2 & 3 Geo. 5. c. c.v. (London County Council (Finance Consolidation) Act, 1912, s. 40.]—Any person employed by the London County Council or the Bank [of England], who, with intent to defraud, makes out or delivers any stock certificate, dividend warrant, or document for the payment of money in relation to any consolidated stock (created by the London County Council), for a greater or less amount than the person on whose behalf such certificate, warrant, or document is made out is entitled to, shall be guilty of felony, and shall be liable, on conviction, to penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years.

Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 6.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Making false dividend warrant, contrary to section 6 of the Forgery Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., being a clerk, officer, or servant employed by the Bank of England, on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with intent to defraud, knowingly made out or delivered to C. D. a dividend warrant payable at the Bank of England for a greater amount than the said C. D. was entitled to.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 6; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 51 (ante, p. 840).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that J. S. was a clerk or servant of the Bank of England (see ante, p. 606); produce the warrant, and prove it to be the prisoner's writing; show the amount of stock to which C. D. was entitled, and prove the intent as directed (ante, p. 833).

INJURY TO REGISTERS OF BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS, ETC.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 92 (Non-parochial Registers Act, 1840), s. 8, as amended by the Forgery Act, 1913.]—Every person who shall wilfully destroy or injure, or cause to be destroyed or injured, any register or record of birth or baptism, naming or dedication, death or burial, or marriage, which shall be deposited with the registrar-general, by virtue of this Act, or any part thereof, or shall wilfully insert, or cause to be inserted, in any of such registers or records, any false entry of any birth or baptism, naming or dedication, death or burial, or marriage, or shall wilfully give any false certificate, or shall certify any writing to be an abstract from any register or record, knowing the same register or record to be false in any part thereof, shall be guilty of felony. [This section was extended by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, to non-parochial registers transferred under that Act to the custody of the registrar-general.]

20 & 21 Vict. c. 81 (Burials Act, 1857), s. 15, as amended by the Forgery Act, 1913.—Destruction or forgery of burial registers.]—Every person who shall wilfully destroy or injure, or cause to be destroyed or injured, any register book of burials kept according to the provisions of this Act, or any part or certified copy of any part of such register, or shall wilfully insert, or cause to be inserted, in any registry book or copy thereof any false entry of any burial, or shall wilfully give any false certificate, or shall certify any writing to be a copy or extract of any such register book, knowing the same to be false in any part thereof, shall be guilty of felony. (For punishment, see ante, pp. 236 et seq.)

24 & 25 Vict. c. 98 (Forgery Act, 1861), s. 36, as amended by the Forgery Act, 1913.—Destruction of registers of births, etc.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully destroy, deface, or injure, or cause or permit to be destroyed, defaced, or injured, any register of births, baptisms, marriages, deaths, or burials which now is or hereafter shall be by law authorized or required to be kept in England or Ireland, or any part of any such register, or any certified copy of any such register, or any part thereof, or shall knowingly and unlawfully (see R. v. Asplin, 12 Cox, 391) insert, or cause or permit to be inserted, in any such register, or in any certified copy thereof, any false entry of any matter relating to any birth, baptism, marriage, death, or burial, or shall knowingly and unlawfully give any false certificate relating to any birth, baptism, marriage, death, or burial, or shall certify any writing to be a copy or extract from any such register, knowing such writing, or the part of such register whereof such copy of extract shall be so given, to be false in any material particular, or shall forge or counterfeit the seal of or belonging to any register office or burial board, or shall offer, utter, dispose of, or put off any such register, entry, certified copy, certificate, or seal, knowing the same to be false, forged, or altered, or shall offer, utter, dispose of, or put off any copy of any entry in any such register, knowing such entry to be false, forged, or altered, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section was framed from 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 20; 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 86, s. 43; and 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, s. 15, with the substitution of "unlawfully" for "wilfully." The proviso in favour of officiating ministers making corrections of accidental errors in registers, which was enacted by 11 G. 4, & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 21, *remains in force. Sect. 37.—Making false entries in copies of registers sent to registrar.] —Whosoever shall knowingly and wilfully insert, or cause or permit to be inserted, in any copy of any register directed or required by law to be transmitted to any registrar or other officer any false entry of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial, or shall knowingly and wilfully sign or verify any copy of any register so directed or required to be transmitted as aforesaid, which copy shall be false in any part thereof, knowing the same to be false, or shall unlawfully destroy, deface, or injure, or shall for any fraudulent purpose take from its place of deposit, or conceal any such copy of any register, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 22, with the addition of the words in italics, made in consequence of R. v. Bowen, 1 Den. 22; 1 C. & K. 501. The section is incorporated in the Registration of Marriages (Ireland) Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 90), s. 23.]

61 & 62 Vict. c. 58 (Marriage Act, 1898), s. 7].—Provision of register books and for celebration of Nonconformist marriages in absence of registrar.

Indictment for making a false entry in a Marriage Register. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 36, ante, p. 843.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Making false entry in marriage register, contrary to section 36 of the Forgery Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, knowingly and unlawfully inserted [or caused or permitted to be inserted] in the register of marriages by law authorized or required to be kept in England a false entry relating to a marriage between C. D. and E. F.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 36; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 51 (ante, p. 840).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

To prove the indictment for making a false entry in a register, produce the register, prove it to be kept as stated in the indictment, and prove the falsity of the entry. Upon an indictment for making a false entry in a marriage register, it is not necessary that the entry should be made with intent to defraud: and it is no defence that the marriage, being bigamous, was void. If a person, knowing his name to be A., signs another name as a witness to a marriage in the register, he is guilty of inserting a false entry in the register, although he so signs as a third witness, and the Marriage Act only requires two witnesses. R. v. Asplin, 12 Cox, 391, Martin, B. The Court will take judicial notice that a parish in the county of Stafford, or any other English county, is in England, and the indictment need not aver that fact. R. v. Sharpe, 8 C. & P. 436.

It is not the less a "destroying, defacing, or injuring" of a register, within the meaning of the statute, because the register, when produced in evidence, has the torn part pasted in, and is as legible as before. R. v. Bowen, 1 Den. 22; 1 Cox, 88. As to the uttering, see R. v. Heywood, 2 C. & K. 352.

Where a false entry had been actually made in a register of births, etc., on the information of the defendant, he was held to be thereby guilty of the felony mentioned in 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 86, s. 43 (re-enacted in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 36), and not merely of the misdemeanor of making a false statement for the same purpose, within the 41st section of that Act. R. v. Mason, 2 C. & K. 622: R. v. Dewitt, Id. 905; 4 Cox, 49.

OTHER OFFENCES AKIN TO FORGERY.

The following is, it is believed, a full list of the statutes relating to indictable offences connected with forgery, which have not been repealed by the Forgery Act, 1913, and do not find a place in other parts of this work. By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 48, ante, p. 838; penal servitude for life is made the maximum punishment for forgery under any statute in force on 1st Nov., 1861, which was punishable by death before the passing of 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66: and by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 47 (ante, p. 838), penal servitude for fourteen years is substituted for the punishments under 5 Eliz. c. 14, where applied to forgeries under any other statute. As to minimum term of penal servitude and substituted term of imprisonment, see 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (1), (2), ante, pp. 238, 239). Where no term of penal servitude is prescribed by the enactment punishing a forgery as felony the term is regulated by 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 8 (ante, p. 236), as modified by 54 & 55 Vict. s. 69.

Army and Navy.]—By 28 & 29 Vict. c. 124, s. 6, any person, in order to sustain any claim to any pay, wages, allotment, prize money, bounty money, grant, or other allowance in the nature thereof, half-pay, pension, or allowance from the compassionate fund of the navy, or other money payable by the Admiralty, or to any effects or money in charge of the Admiralty,—or in order to procure any person to be admitted a pensioner as the widow of an officer in the navy,—doing any of the following things, namely,—offering or uttering to any person in the service of the Crown or of the Admiralty any false affidavit, knowing the same to be false, or making, or subscribing, or offering, or uttering as aforesaid any false written petition, application, statement, answer, certificate, or voucher, or other false writing, knowing the same to be false, is guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable with five years' penal servitude. (These offences are also punishable on summary conviction before a justice by imprisonment for any term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour. Id. Sects. 42 and 50 to 53 of the Forgery Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 98), are incorporated with 28 & 29 Vict. c. 124, by s. 7 of the last-mentioned Act.)

Hackney carriages.]—Forging, etc., licences or tickets for hackney or stage carriages; misdemeanor. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 86, s. 20.

Frauds against the Transfer of Land Act, 1862.—25 & 26 Vict. c. 53.]—This statute contains provisions directed against frauds with reference to the registration of land, treating them as indictable misdemeanors. See ss. 105, 106, 107, 138, and 139. No registration has taken place under this Act since 1875. See 38 & 39 Vict. c. 87, s. 125.

Frauds against the Land Transfer Acts, 1875 and 1897.—38 & 39 Vict. c. 87 (Land Transfer Act, 1875), s. 99.]—If in the course of any proceedings before the registrar or the Court in pursuance of this Act any person concerned in such proceedings as principal or agent, with intent to conceal the title or claim of any person, or to substantiate a false claim, suppresses, or attempts to suppress, or is privy to the suppression of any document or of any fact, the person so suppressing, attempting to suppress, or privy to suppression, will be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction on indictment shall be liable to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or to be fined such sum not exceeding five hundred pounds as the Court before which he is tried may award.

Sect. 100.]—If any person fraudulently procures, attempts to fraudulently procure, or is privy to the fraudulent procurement of any entry on the register, or of any erasure from the register or alteration of the register, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction on indictment be liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or to be fined such sum not exceeding five hundred pounds as the Court before which he is tried may award; and any entry, erasure, or alteration so made by fraud shall be void as between all parties or privies to such fraud.

Sect. 101.]—[Repealed by 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6 (Perjury Act, 1911).]

Sect. 102.]—No proceeding or conviction for any act declared by this Act to be a misdemeanor shall affect any remedy which any person aggrieved by such act may be entitled to, either at law or in equity.

Sect. 103.]—Nothing in this Act contained shall entitle any person to refuse to make a complete discovery by answer in any legal proceeding, or to answer any question or interrogatory in any civil proceeding, in any court of law or equity, or in the courts of bankruptcy; but no answer to any such bill, question, or interrogatory shall be admissible in evidence against such person in any criminal proceeding under this Act. See ante, pp. 382 et seq.

60 & 61 Vict. c. 65 (Land Transfer Act, 1897), s. 20.]—Power to make registration of title compulsory on sale. Exercised as to the whole of the administrative county of London.

Sect. 26.]—This Act . . . shall be construed as one with the Land Transfer Act, 1875.

Medical profession.]—Any registrar wilfully making or causing to be made any falsification in any matter relating to the register of medical practitioners, pharmaceutical chemists, dentists, or veterinary surgeons; misdemeanor, imprisonment not exceeding twelve months. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, s. 38 (medical practitioners): 15 & 16 Vict. c. 56, s. 15; 31 & 32 Vict. c. 121, s. 14 (chemists): 41 & 42 Vict. c. 33, s. 34 (dentists): 44 & 45 Vict. c. 62, s. 12 (veterinary surgeons). Any person so falsifying any roll of midwives—misdemeanor, imprisonment not exceeding twelve months: 2 Edw. 7, c. 17, s. 12; or the register of nurses—misdemeanor, fine not exceeding one hundred pounds. 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 94, s. 8 (2).

Mercantile marine.]—Forging or fraudulently altering, or assisting in forging or fraudulently altering, or procuring to be forged or fraudulently altered, any register book, builder's certificate, surveyor's certificate, certificate of registry, declaration, bill of sale, instrument of mortgage, or any certificate of mortgage or sale, or entry or indorsement under or required by the first part of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, to be made in or on any of the above documents; felony. 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 66. Forging a certificate of discharge or report of character of any seaman, etc.; misdemeanor. Id. s. 130; see R. v. Wilson, Dears. & B. 558; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 230. Forging, etc., certificate of competency; misdemeanor. Id. s. 104. Forging documents to obtain money in seamen's savings bank; penal servitude not more than five years, or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. Id. s. 154. Forging documents for purpose of obtaining property of deceased seaman; same punishment. Id. s. 180. Forging declarations of certificates of survey, or passenger steamer's certificate; misdemeanor. Id. s. 282. Forgery in proceedings as to salvage by King's ships; imprisonment not exceeding two years. Id. s. 564. Forgery of seal, stamp, or signature of documents to which Merchant Shipping Act applies; felony, penal servitude not exceeding seven years, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. Id. s. 695 (4). Falsely certifying documents made evidence under the Act; misdemeanor, imprisonment not exceeding eighteen months. Forging, etc., seal of Board of Trade, misdemeanor. Id. s. 722. Misdemeanors under this Act, unless otherwise specially provided, are punishable under s. 680.

Plate.]—Transposing or removing or uttering knowing the same to be transposed or removed any mark of a die or other instrument from gold, silver, or base metal ware; having possession of ware having thereupon any mark so transposed or removed knowing the same to have been transposed or removed; cutting and severing marks with intent to affix them on other wares; affixing any mark cut from other wares; fraudulently using genuine dies: felony, penal servitude for not more than fourteen years. 13 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 14; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 22, s. 2, as amended by the Forgery Act, 1913. See also 5 Geo. 4, c. lii., s. 22.

As to public trade.]—Forgery of trade marks is dealt with by 50 & 51 Vict. c. 28. There are very many statutes with respect to forgeries upon particular companies, to which it is unnecessary to refer, inasmuch as it will be found that all such forgeries are punishable under some section or sections of the Forgery Act, 1913. Every person who gives or signs any licence, certificate, document or plan granted or required in pursuance of or for the purposes of the Explosives Act, 1875, which is to his knowledge false in any material particular, or wilfully makes use of any such forged, counterfeit, or false licence, etc., shall be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 17, s. 81, as amended by the Forgery Act, 1913. The offence may be prosecuted summarily or on indictment. Every person who commits any of the following offences—that is to say, (1) forges or counterfeits any certificate of competency or other certificate granted under the Coal Mines Act, 1911, or any Act repealed by that Act, or any official copy of any such certificate; or (2) knowingly utters or uses any such certificate or copy which has been forged or counterfeited or contains any false statement: or (3) for the purpose of obtaining, for himself or any other person, employment as a manager or under-manager, or the grant, renewal, or restoration of any certificate as aforesaid, or a copy thereof, either (a) makes or gives any declaration, representation, statement, or evidence which is false in any particular, or (b) knowingly utters, produces, or makes use of any such declaration, representation, statement, or evidence, or any document containing the same; or (4) knowingly makes any false statement in any report or entry required under that Act to be recorded in a book kept at the mine—shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable on conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 28. Every person, whether principal, broker, or agent, who shall wilfully insert in any contract, agreement, or token of sale and purchase made or entered into for the sale or transfer of any share or shares, or of any stock or other interest, in any joint-stock banking company in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, constituted under or regulated by the provisions of any Act of Parliament, royal charter, or letters patent, issuing shares or stock transferable by any deed or written instrument, any false entry of the numbers by which such shares, stock, or other interest are distinguished on the registers or books of such banking company, or any name or names other than that of the person or persons in whose name such shares, stock, or interest shall stand as registered proprietors thereof in the books of such banking company, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punishable accordingly. 30 & 31 Vict. c. 29, s. 1. This enactment does not extend to shares or stock in the Bank of England or the Bank of Ireland. Id. s. 3.

Records and judicial documents.]—By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 11, it is a felony punishable with seven years' penal servitude for any officer of a court to utter a false certificate of an indictment and conviction for a previous felony or for a person other than such officer to sign such certificate as officer or to utter such certificate with a false or counterfeit signature.

By s. 28 of the Forgery Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 98), as amended by the Act of 1913, the clerk of any court or other officer having the custody of the records of any court, or being the deputy of any such clerk or officer, uttering any false copy or certificate of any record, knowing the same to be false; or delivering to any person any paper falsely purporting to be any such process or a copy thereof, or to be any judgment, decree or order of any court of law or equity or a copy thereof, knowing the same to be false; or acting or professing to act under any such false process, knowing the same to be false, is guilty of felony punishable with penal servitude for not more than seven years. An affiliation order is "process" within the meaning of this section. R. v. Powner, 12 Cox, 235, Quain, J. A certificate of letters of ordination is not a record within its meaning. R. v. Etheridge, 19 Cox, 676; 65 J. P. 761, Kennedy, J.

By the County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), s. 180, delivery or causing to be delivered to any person any paper falsely purporting to be a copy of any summons or other process of the county court, knowing the same to be false, or acting or professing to act under any false colour or pretence of the process or authority of that court, is a felony. Mere verbal "professing to act" is insufficient; there must be some instrument. R. v. Myott, 6 Cox, 406. A notice to produce was held not to be process within the corresponding provision in 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 57 (rep.): R. v. Castle, Dears. & B. 363; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 70.

Stamps, etc.]—Every person who does, or causes or procures to be done, or knowingly aids, abets, or assists in doing any of the acts following, that is to say,—3. Fraudulently prints or makes an impression upon any material from a genuine die; 4. Fraudulently cuts, tears, or in any way removes from any material any stamp, with intent that any use should be made of such stamp or of any part thereof (see R. v. Smith, 5 C. & P. 107; 1 Mood. 314:

R. v. Field, 1 Leach, 383: R. v. Allday, 8 C. & P. 136); 5. Fraudulently mutilates any stamp, with intent that any use should be made of any part of such stamp; 6. Fraudulently fixes or places upon any material or upon any stamp, any stamp or part of a stamp which, whether fraudulently or not, has been cut, torn, or in any way removed from any other material, or out of or from any other stamp; 7. Fraudulently erases or otherwise either really or apparently removes from any stamped material any name, sum, date, or other matter or thing whatsoever thereon written, with the intent that any use should be made of the stamp upon such material; 8. Knowingly sells or exposes for sale or utters or uses any stamp which has been fraudulently printed or impressed from a genuine die; [a person who sells a forged stamp commits an offence against this sub-section notwithstanding that the stamp when sold bears a cancellation mark. R. v. Lowden [1914] 1 K. B. 144; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 114; 23 Cox, 643; 78 J. P. 111; 9 Cr. App. R. 195]; 9. Knowingly, and without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the person accused), has in his possession any stamp which has been fraudulently printed or impressed from a genuine die, or any stamp or part of a stamp which has been fraudulently cut, torn, or otherwise removed from any material, or any stamp which has been fraudulently mutilated, or any stamped material out of which any name, sum, date, or other matter or thing has been fraudulently erased or otherwise either really or apparently removed, shall be guilty of felony; fourteen years' penal servitude. 54 & 55 Vict. c. 38, s. 13, as amended by the Forgery Act, 1913. By s. 18, if any forged stamps are found in the possession of any person appointed to sell and distribute stamps, or being or having been licensed to deal in stamps, that person shall be deemed and taken, unless the contrary is satisfactorily proved, to have had the same in his possession knowing them to be forged, and with intent to sell, use, or utter them, and shall be liable to punishment imposed by law upon a person selling, using, uttering, or having in possession forged stamps knowing the same to be forged. The commissioners of inland revenue may, under s. 18 (2), issue search warrants for forged stamps. Sect. 27 defines stamp. Sect. 23 extends the provisions of the above sections as to offences relating to stamps so as to include any label now or hereafter provided by the commissioners of inland revenue for denoting any duty of excise, e.g., the label on chicory and coffee substitutes. Imitation of post-office stamps, envelopes, forms, and marks is prohibited by 8 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 64. The provisions of law respecting the punishment of offences connected with stamp duties (including the provisions relating to paper and implements used in the manufacture of that paper, and to the punishment of fraud) shall apply in like manner as if any poundage or commission chargeable for a postal order were stamp duty, and as if the paper used for postal orders were paper provided by the commissioners of inland revenue for receiving the impression of a die, and in the Isle of Man and Channel Islands as if those provisions extended to those islands. 8 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 60. Money orders are treated as orders for the payment of money within the Forgery Act, 1861. 8 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 59 (1), ante, pp. 582.

The offence of uttering a forged stamp is complete although at the time of uttering parts of it are concealed. R. v. Collicott, R. & R. 212; 2 Leach, 1048.

As to the description of the stamp, see that case. As to making, knowingly uttering, dealing in, selling, or using for any postal purpose fictitious postage stamps of any British possession or foreign country, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 65, and Dickens v. Gill [1896] 2 Q. B. 310; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 187.

Statutes and executive documents.]—Printing any copy of any private Act or of the journals of either House of Parliament, which copy shall falsely purport to have been printed by the printers to the Crown or by the printers to either House of Parliament, or by any or either of them, or tendering in evidence any such copy knowing that the same was not printed by the persons by whom it purports to have been printed. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 4; felony, seven years' penal servitude.

Printing any copy of any proclamation, order, or regulation which falsely purports to have been printed by the Government printer, or to be printed under the authority of the legislature of any British colony or possession, or tendering in evidence any copy of any proclamation, order, or regulation which falsely purports to have been printed as aforesaid, knowing that the same was not so printed. 31 & 32 Vict. c. 37, s. 4 (1); felony, five years' penal servitude.

Printing any copy of any Act, proclamation, order, regulation, royal warrant, circular, list, gazette, or document which falsely purports to have been printed under the superintendence or authority of his Majesty's stationery office, or tendering in evidence any copy which falsely purports to have been printed as aforesaid, knowing that the same was not so printed. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 9, s. 3; felony, seven years' penal servitude.

Printing any copy or pretended copy of any colonial Act, ordinance, statute, order, regulation, or instrument, which falsely purports to have been printed by the Government printer of a British possession, or tendering in evidence any such copy which falsely purports to have been so printed knowing that it was not so printed. 7 Edw. 7, c. 16, s. 1 (2); misdemeanor, imprisonment for not more than twelve months with or without hard labour.

See also ante, p. 849, as to offences in connexion with the printing of stamps.

Telegrams.]—" Every person who forges or wilfully and without due authority alters a telegram or utters a telegram, knowing the same to be forged, or wilfully and without due authority altered, or who transmits by telegraph as a telegram, or utters as a telegram, any message or communication which he knows to be not a telegram, shall, whether he had or had not an intent to defraud, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding ten pounds, and, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a period not exceeding twelve months. . . . For the purposes of this section the expression ' telegram ' means a written or printed message or communication sent to or delivered at a post office, or the office of a telegraph company, for transmission by telegraph, or delivered by the post office or a telegraph company as a message or communication transmitted by telegraph. The expression ' telegraph company ' means any company, corporation, or persons carrying on the business of sending telegrams for the public, under whatever authority or in whatever manner such company, corporation, or persons may act or be constituted. The expression ' telegraph ' has the same meaning as in the Telegraph Act, 1869, and the Acts amending the same." 47 & 48 Vict. c. 76, s. 11, and see 8 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 89, ante, p. 585. On a prosecution under this section it is necessary to prove an intent to deceive but not an intent to defraud. R. v. Horner, 74 J. P. 216. Obtaining money by means of forged telegrams can also be dealt with under 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 27, s. 7 (ante, p. 824). R. v. Riley [1896] 1 Q. B. 309; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 74; 18 Cox, 285: and see Ex parte Wickham, 10 T. L. R. 266.

Forgery of a telegram now also comes within s. 4 of the Forgery Act, 1913 (ante, p. 820), under which the punishment is imprisonment not exceeding two years.

Trade unions.]—With intent to mislead or defraud, giving to any member of a trade union registered under 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31 (Trade Union Act, 1871), or to any person intending or applying to become a member of such trade union, a copy of any rules, or of any alterations or amendments of the same, other than those respectively which exist for the time being, on the pretence that the same are the existing rules of such trade union, or that there are no other rules of such trade union, or with the intent aforesaid, giving a copy of any rules to any person on the pretence that such rules are the rules of a trade union registered under the above-mentioned Act which is not so registered; misdemeanor. 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, s. 18.

FALSE PERSONATION

Common Law.

At common law false personation was indictable only as a cheat, and was punishable as a misdemeanor. 3 Chit. Cr. L. 1080.

It is a common law misdemeanor to personate a juryman, and it is not necessary to prove that the personator had any specific intention to deceive other than that which is involved in his going into the jury box and taking the oath in the name of another. R. v. Clark, 82 J. P. 295 (Avory, J.).

Indictment for personating a Seaman. (28 & 29 Vict. c. 124, s. 8, ante, p. 853.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Personating a seaman, contrary to section 8 of the Admiralty Powers Act, 1865.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, falsely and deceitfully personated C. D., a person entitled, or supposed to be entitled, to receive pay, payable, or supposed to be payable, by the Admiralty to the said C. D., in order that he, the said A. B., should receive the said pay.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 124, s. 8; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

Evidence.

Prove that C. D. was a person entitled to receive pay from the Admiralty. See R. v. Brown, 2 East, P. C. 1007: R. v. Tannet, R. & R. 351. Prove that the defendant personated or assumed the name and character of C. D. The offence will be complete, though the personated seaman be dead; R. v. Martin, R. & R. 324; and even though the wages have been paid. R. v. Cramp, Id. 327. So, upon an indictment on s. 38 of the Chelsea, etc., Hospitals Act, 1826 (7 G. 4, c. 16), for forging the name of a person to a letter of attorney for the receipt of a pension "supposed to be due" to such person; it was held that the defendant was rightly convicted, although it appeared that no such pension was actually existing. R. v. Pringle, 2 Mood. C. C. 127; 9 C. P. 408. It is no defence to an inducement under 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 53, s. 49 (ante, p. 854), for personating a soldier to prove that the prisoner was authorized by the soldier to personate him; R. v. Lake, 11 Cox, 333; or that the prisoner had bought from the soldier personated the prize money to which the latter was entitled. Id.

PERSONATING OWNERS OF STOCK.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 98 (Forgery Act, 1861), s. 3.—Personating owners of stock transferable at the bank or of shares in companies.]—Whosoever shall falsely and deceitfully personate any owner of any share or interest of or in any stock, annuity, or other public fund, which now is or hereafter may be transferable at the Bank of England or at the Bank of Ireland, or any owner of any share or interest of or in the capital stock of any body corporate, company, or society, which now is or hereafter may be established by charter, or by, under, or by virtue of any Act of Parliament, or any owner of any dividend or money payable in respect of any such share or interest as aforesaid, and shall thereby transfer or endeavour to transfer any share or interest belonging to any such owner, or thereby receive or endeavour to receive any money due to any such owner, as if such offender were the true and lawful owner, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [For indictment, see post, p. 857.]

33 & 34 Vict. c. 58 (Forgery Act, 1870), s. 4.—Personation of owners of stock.]—If any person falsely and deceitfully personates any owner of any share or interest of or in any such stock as aforesaid [i.e., any stock as defined in the National Debt Act, 1870, 33 & 34 Vict. c. 71], or of any such stock certificate or coupon as aforesaid [i.e., any stock certificate or coupon issued in pursuance of Part V. of the National Debt Act, 1870, or of any former Act], and thereby obtains or endeavours to obtain any such stock certificate or coupon, or receives or endeavours to receive any money due to any such owner, as if such person were the true and lawful owner,—he shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . .

26 & 27 Vict. c. 73 (India Stock Certificate Act, 1863), s. 14.—Personation of owners of India stock.]—Whosoever shall falsely and deceitfully personate any owner of any share or interest of or in India stock, or of any India stock, certificate, or coupon, issued in pursuance of this Act, and shall thereby obtain or endeavour to obtain any such India stock certificate or coupon, or receive or endeavour to receive any money due to any such owner, as if such offender were the true and lawful owner, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . .

38 & 39 Vict. c. 83 (Local Loans Act, 1875), s. 32.]—For the purposes of the Forgery Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 98), debenture stock under this Act shall be deemed to be capital stock of a body corporate.

40 & 41 Vict. c. 59 (Colonial Stock Act, 1877), s. 21.]—For the purposes of the Forgery Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 98), colonial stock to which this Act applies shall be deemed to be capital stock of a body corporate. . . . The Forgery Act, 1870, shall apply to a stock certificate and a coupon issued in pursuance of this Act, and to colonial stock to which this Act applies, in like manner as if the same were a stock certificate, coupon or stock mentioned in that Act.

8 Edw. 7, c. 69 (Companies Consolidation Act, 1908), s. 38 (1).—Personation of owners of shares.]—(ii.) If any person falsely and deceitfully personates any owner of any share or interest in any company or of any share warrant or coupon, issued in pursuance of this Act, and thereby obtains or endeavours to obtain any such share or interest, or share warrant or coupon, or receives or endeavours to receive any money due to any such owner, as if the offender were the true and lawful owner, he shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life or for any term not less than three years.

Indictment for Personation under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 3.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Personating owner of stock, contrary to section 3 of the Forgery Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, falsely and deceitfully personated C. D., the owner of [state the stock in ordinary language], which was transferable at the Bank of England, and thereby transferred or endeavoured to transfer the interest in the said stock belonging to the said C. D. [or received or endeavoured to receive the sum of 100*l. due to the said* C. D. as if A. B. were the true and lawful owner of the said stock].

Felony: penal servitude for life or not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 3; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 237, 238). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 51 (ante, p. 840).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

PERSONATION TO OBTAIN PROPERTY.

Statute.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 36 (False Personation Act, 1874), s. 1.—Personation in order to obtain property to be felony.]—If any person shall falsely and deceitfully personate any person, or the heir, executor, or administrator, wife, widow, next of kin, or relation of any person, with intent fraudulently to obtain any land, estate, chattel, money, valuable security, or property, he shall be guilty of felony, and upon conviction shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . .

Sect. 2.—Saving.]—Nothing in this Act shall prevent any person from being proceeded against and punished under any other Act, or at common law, in respect of an offence (if any) punishable as well under this Act as under any other Act, or at common law. (Cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33, ante, p. 160.)

Sect. 3.—Offences against this Act not to be tried at general or quarter sessions.]—No offence against this Act shall be prosecuted or tried at any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace. (See ante, p. 106.)

PERSONATING BAIL, ETC.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 98 (Forgery Act, 1861), s. 34.]—Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused), shall, in the name of any other person, acknowledge any recognizance or bail, or any cognovit actionem, or judgment, or any deed, or other instrument, before any court, judge, or other person lawfully authorized in that behalf, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . .

52 & 53 Vict. c. 10 (Commissioners of Oaths Act, 1889), s. 1, sub-s. 2.]—A commissioner of oaths may by virtue of his commission in England or elsewhere take any bail or recognizance of bail in or for the purpose of any civil proceeding in the Supreme Court, including all proceedings on the revenue side of the King's Bench Division.

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Acknowledging bail, contrary to section 34 of the Forgery Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, without lawful authority or excuse acknowledged a recognizance in the name of C. D.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 34; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 51 (ante, p. 840).

NOTE.—Bail is not now taken in civil actions except under the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), s. 6; R. S. C. 1883, O. 69; or by bail bond in admiralty causes. Bail is still required on a capias in revenue causes. See Revenue Rules of 22nd June, 1860; Stat. Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 12, tit. Supreme Court E., pp. 587 et seq.; Robertson, Civil Proceedings by the Crown. As to bail before justices of the peace and in the High Court in criminal cases, see ante, pp. 89, 93 et seq., and Short & Mellor, Cr. Pr. (2nd ed.) 280 et seq. Bail on the Crown side of the K. B. D. is justified before the judge in chambers, or, if he so orders, before the Master of the Crown Office; see ib. p. 287. "Acknowledgments" of deeds by married women are now rare, owing to the changes in the capacity of married women effected by the Married Women's Property Acts. See Re Harkness and Allsopp [1898] 2 Ch. 358; 65 L. J. (Ch.) 726: Re Brooke and Fremlin [1898] 1 Ch. 647; 67 L. J. (Ch.) 272.

Evidence.

Prove the document and that the signature is that of the defendant. Proof of lawful authority or excuse lies upon him. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 34 (supra),

CHAPTER II.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSONS OF INDIVIDUALS.

SECT. 1.

HOMICIDE.

MURDER AND MANSLAUGHTER.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 1.—Punishment of murder.]—Whosoever shall be convicted of murder shall suffer death as a felon. [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 3.]

Sect. 2.—Sentence for murder.]—Upon every conviction for murder the Court shall pronounce sentence of death, and the same may be carried into execution, and all other proceedings upon such sentence and in respect thereof may be had and taken, in the same manner in all respects as sentence of death might have been pronounced and carried into execution, and all other proceedings thereupon and in respect thereof might have been had and taken, before the passing of this Act, upon a conviction for any other felony for which the prisoner might have been sentenced to suffer death as a felon. (As to the change in the law effected by this section, see ante, p. 235.)

8 Edw. 7, c. 67 (Children Act, 1908), s. 103.—Persons under sixteen not to be sentenced to death.]—Sentence of death shall not be pronounced on or recorded against a child or young person, but in lieu thereof the Court shall sentence the child or young person to be detained during his Majesty's pleasure, and, if so sentenced, he shall, notwithstanding anything in the other provisions of this Act, be liable to be detained in such place and under such conditions as the Secretary of State may direct, and whilst so detained shall be deemed to be in legal custody. [Child is a person under fourteen, and young person is a person of fourteen and under sixteen. See ante, p. 248.]

31 & 32 Vict. c. 24 (Capital Punishment Amendment Act, 1868), s. 2.—Judgment of death for murder to be executed within prison walls.]—Judgment of death, to be executed on any prisoner sentenced after the passing of this Act on any indictment or inquisition for murder, shall be carried into effect within the walls of the prison in which the offender is confined at the time of execution.

Sect. 3.—Provision for presence of sheriff and certain prison officials and others at execution.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 3.—Burial of offender executed.]—The body of every person executed for murder shall be buried within the precincts of the prison in which he shall have been last confined after conviction, and the sentence of the Court shall so direct. [This section was framed from 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 75, s. 16, and 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 26, s. 2.]

31 & 32 Vict. c. 24, s. 6.—Burial of offender executed.]—The body of every offender executed shall be buried within the walls of the prison within which judgment of death is executed on him: provided that if one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state is satisfied, on the representation of the visiting justices of a prison, that there is not convenient space within the walls thereof for the burial of offenders executed therein, he may, by writing under his hand, appoint some other fit place for that purpose, and the same shall be used accordingly.

Sect. 7.—Power of Secretary of State to make regulations.]—See Regulations of June 5, 1902. Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 10, tit. Prison E., p. 65.

Sect. 15.—Saving clause as to legality of execution.]—The omission to comply with any provision of this Act shall not make the execution of judgment of death illegal in any case where such execution would otherwise have been legal.

Sect. 16.—General saving.]—Except in so far as is hereby otherwise provided, judgment of death shall be carried into effect in the same manner as if this Act had not passed.

44 & 45 Vict. c. 64 (Central Criminal Court (Prisons) Act, 1881), s. 2 . . . (5).]—Where judgment of death is passed at the Central Criminal Court upon a person convicted of any offence, the judgment may be carried into execution in any prison in the Central Criminal Court district, or in the county, if any, where the offence was committed, or is supposed to have been committed, which the justice or judge of the said Court passing sentence, or any other justice or judge of the Court subsequently may order, and if no order is made, then in the prison in which the convict is for the time being confined; and such sheriff as is ordered by any justice or judge of the said Court, or, if no order is made, the sheriff of the county in which the offence was committed or is supposed to have been committed, or if the offence was committed or is supposed to have been committed on the high seas, or if the county in which the offence was committed does not clearly appear, the sheriff of Middlesex shall be charged with the execution of the judgment; and the sheriff charged with the execution of the judgment shall for that purpose have the same jurisdiction and powers and be subject to the same duties in the prison in which the judgment is to be carried into execution, although such prison is not situate within his county, as he has by law with respect to the common gaol of his county, or would have had if the Prison Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 126), and the Prison Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 21), had not been passed.

The coroner whose duty it is to hold an inquest on the bodies of persons dying in any prison shall hold an inquest in accordance with the Capital Punishment Amendment Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 24) on the body of any convict executed in that prison. See also the Central Criminal Court Act, 1837 (7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 77). [The provisions of the Central Criminal Court Act, 1834 (4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36), and of 44 & 45 Vict. c. 64, as to Newgate prison have lapsed with the demolition of that prison.]

50 & 51 Vict. c. 55 (Sheriffs Act, 1887), s. 13.]—Where judgment of death has been passed upon a convict at any court of assize or any sessions of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery held for any county or riding or division or other part of a county, the sheriff of such county shall be charged with the execution of such judgment, and may carry such judgment into execution in any prison which is the common gaol of his county or in which the convict was confined for the purpose of safe custody prior to his removal to the place where such court was held, and shall, for the purpose of such execution, have the same jurisdiction and powers over and in the prison in which the judgment is to be carried into execution, whether such prison is or is not situate within his county, and over the officers of such prison, as he has by law over and in the common gaol of his county and the officers thereof, or would have had if the Prison Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 126), and the Prison Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 21), had not been passed, and shall be subject to the same responsibility and duties as if the said Acts had not been passed. [For special provision as to sheriff of Cheshire, see 30 & 31 Vict. c. 36, s. 4.]

(2.) This section shall be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any power authorized to be exercised by order in council under the Winter Assizes Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 57), and the Spring Assizes Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 1), or either of them, and of the provisions of the Central Criminal Court (Prisons) Act, 1881 (ante, p. 861).

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 5.—Punishment of manslaughter.]—Whosoever shall be convicted of manslaughter shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life, . . . or to pay such fine as the Court shall award, in addition to or without any such other discretionary punishment as aforesaid. Sect. 8.—Petit treason to be treated as murder.]—Every offence which before the commencement of the Act of the ninth year of King George the Fourth, chapter thirty-one [i.e., 1 July, 1828], would have amounted to petit treason, shall be deemed to be murder only, and no greater offence; and all persons guilty in respect thereof, whether as principals or as accessories, shall be dealt with, indicted, tried and punished as principals and accessories in murder. [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 2. As to petit treason, see 1 Hawk. c. 32; 3 Chit. Cr. L. 742.]

Sect. 9.—Murder or manslaughter abroad.—Venue.]—Where any murder or manslaughter shall be committed on land out of the United Kingdom, whether within the King's dominions, or without, and whether the person killed were a subject of his Majesty or not, every offence committed by any subject of his Majesty in respect of any such case, whether the same shall amount to the offence of murder or of manslaughter, or of being accessory to murder or manslaughter, may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished in any county or place in England or Ireland in which such person shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if such offence had been actually committed in that county or place; provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent any person from being tried in any place out of England or Ireland for any murder or manslaughter committed out of England or Ireland, in the same manner as such person might have been tried before the passing of this Act. Sect. 10.—Death within the realm of a person feloniously stricken outside the realm.—Venue.]—Where any person being feloniously stricken, poisoned, or otherwise hurt upon the sea, or at any place out of England or Ireland, shall die of such stroke, poisoning, or hurt in England or Ireland, or being feloniously stricken, poisoned, or otherwise hurt at any place in England or Ireland, shall die of such stroke, poisoning or hurt upon the sea, or at any place out of England or Ireland, every offence committed in respect of any such case, whether the same shall amount to the offence of murder or of manslaughter, or of being accessory to murder or manslaughter, may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished in the county or place in England or Ireland in which such death, stroke, poisoning, or hurt shall happen, in the same manner in all respects as if such offence had been wholly committed in that county or place. [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 8; see ante, p. 31.

25 & 26 Vict. c. 65.—Jurisdiction in Homicides Act, 1862.]—Provisions for trial of persons subject to military law, for the murder or manslaughter of any person subject to military law, before the Central Criminal Court, where the offence has been committed in England or Wales, but out of the jurisdiction of that court. (See ante, p. 40.)

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 66.—Persons loitering at night and suspected of any felony against this Act, may be apprehended.]—Any constable or peace officer may take into custody, without a warrant, any person whom he shall find lying or loitering in any highway, yard, or other place during the night, and whom he shall have good cause to suspect of having committed or being about to commit any felony in this Act mentioned, and shall take such person as soon as reasonably may be before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law. [This section re-enacts 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, ss. 13, 14, with the additions italicized.]

Sect. 67.—Accessories, etc.]—In the case of every felony punishable under this Act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this Act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this Act (except murder) shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour; and every accessory after the fact to murder shall be liable at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life or for any term not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years with or without hard labour; and whosoever shall counsel, aid, or abet the commission of any indictable misdemeanor punishable under this Act shall be liable to be proceeded against, indicted and punished as a principal offender. [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 31; see post, tit. Accessories, etc.]

Sect. 68.—Offences committed within Admiralty jurisdiction.—Venue.]—All indictable offences mentioned in this Act which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England or Ireland shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature and liable to the same punishments as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried and determined in any county or place in England or Ireland in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if they had been actually committed in that county or place; and in any indictment for any such offence, or for being an accessory to such an offence, the venue in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas"; provided that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of her Majesty's land or naval forces. (See ante, pp. 31-36.)

Sect. 70.—Whipping.— . . .]—Whenever whipping may be awarded for any offence under this Act, the Court may sentence the offender to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted shall be specified by the Court in the sentence. (See ante, p. 244.)

Sect. 71.—Fine and sureties.]—Whenever any person shall be convicted of any indictable misdemeanor punishable under this Act, the Court may, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any punishment by this Act authorized, fine the offender, and require him to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour;

And in case of any felony punishable under this Act otherwise than with death, the Court may, if it shall think fit, require the offender to enter into his own recognizances and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any punishment by this Act authorized; provided that no person shall be imprisoned for not finding sureties under this clause for any period exceeding one year. Indictment for Murder.

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B., is charged with the following offence:—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Murder.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, murdered J. S.

[Upon this indictment, if the evidence so warrants, the jury may acquit of murder, and return a verdict of manslaughter, R. v. Greenwood, 7 Cox, 404: but see R. v. Maloney, 9 Cox, 6, and R. v. French, 14 Cox, 328: cases where the judge directed the jury that there was no evidence on which they could find manslaughter, and see post, p. 885. The jury may also convict of attempt to murder, R. v. White [1910] 2 K. The offence of murder is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s 1 (ante, pp. 106 et seq.).

Indictment for Manslaughter.

Heading as on p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Manslaughter.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, unlawfully killed J. S.

As to the cases in which homicide is manslaughter and not murder, see post, pp. 867 et seq. A summary conviction for assault under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42, is not a bar to a subsequent indictment for manslaughter, upon the death of the man assaulted, consequent upon the same assault. R. v. Morris, L R. 1 C. C. R. 90; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 84 : R. v. Dyson [1908] 2 K. B. 454 (C. C. A.); 77 L. J. (K. B.) 813. (And see ante, p. 161.) On an indictment of a person over sixteen for the manslaughter of a person under sixteen who is in his custody, etc., the jury may convict for an offence against s. 12 of the Children Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 12 (4)), post, p. 980. See R. v. Chalker 4 Cr. App. R. 2 : R. v. Byers, Id. 5.

Felony: punishable in the case of a person of sixteen or over with penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years with or without hard labour, or with fine, in addition to or without such other punishment.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 5; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865). In the case of an offender under sixteen the punishment is regulated by 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 104 (ante, p. 249).

Evidence for the Prosecution.

The evidence on indictments of murder and manslaughter is the same except on the question of "malice aforethought" (post, p. 874). It is said that in manslaughter the prosecution must prove all the circumstances under which the homicide took place, and that in murder it is sufficient to prove the homicide. But in practice this distinction is not now made.

J. S.]—As to the description of persons in an indictment, see the Indictments Act, 1915, r. 7, set out, ante, p. 49. The person killed must be in the King's peace. This includes even persons under sentence of death. See Commonwealth v. Bowen, 13 Mass. 91.

If the deceased were an alien enemy, and killed in the actual heat and exercise of war, this is matter of justification, as the alien is not in the King's peace, which may be proved on the part of the defendant. See 1 Hale, 433; 3 Co. Inst. 50.

But killing even an alien enemy within the kingdom, unless in the actual exercise of war, would be murder. 1 Hale, 433. The same rule applies where an alien enemy is charged with killing a British subject. R. v. Depardo, R. & R. 134; 1 Taunt. 26. And it is no matter either of excuse or justification, that the deceased was an outlaw, or one attainted of præmunire. 1 Hale, 433; and see Commonwealth v. Bowen, supra.

Malice.]—Under the Indictments Act, 1915, ante, p. 44, it is now unnecessary to allege malice in the indictment, but the Act does not "prejudice or diminish in any respect the obligation to establish by evidence according to law any acts, omissions or intentions which are legally necessary to constitute the offence with which the person accused is charged." The law presumes every homicide to be murder until the contrary appears. On charges of murder a distinction is drawn by Coke (3 Inst. 51) and Hale (1 P. C. 451) between "express malice," or "malice in fact," and "implied malice," or "malice in law." See 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 655. For a criticism of this distinction, see post, p. 838, and Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 407; and see 3 Steph. Hist. Cr. Law, p. 18. "In every charge of murder, the fact of killing being first proved, all the circumstances of accident, necessity, or infirmity are to be satisfactorily proved by the prisoner unless they arise out of the evidence produced against him, for the law presumeth the fact to have been founded in malice until the contrary appeareth; " Foster, Cr. L. 255. Cf. R. v. Noon, 6 Cox, 137, Cresswell, J. Therefore the prosecutor is not bound to prove malice, or any facts or circumstances beside the homicide, from which the jury may presume it; and it is for the defendant to give in evidence such facts and circumstances as may prove the homicide to be justifiable or excusable, or that at most it amounted to manslaughter. Id. R. v. Greenacre, 8 C. & P. 35. Thus upon an indictment for manslaughter by negligent driving, on proof being given of the killing, it was held to lie on the accused to show that he had driven with proper skill and care. R. v. Cavendish, Ir. Rep. 8 C. L. 178. (See post, pp. 892 et seq.) But it is said to be proper to call as witnesses for the prosecution all persons present when the killing took place to give all available accounts of the circumstances of the killing. R. v. Holden, 8 C. & P. 606; and see ante, p. 485.

In cases of express malice, homicide is usually committed in secret, and it is rarely practicable to substantiate it by direct and positive testimony; in most cases, therefore, the guilt of the defendant can be established upon circumstantial evidence merely. Upon this subject it is only necessary to refer to what has already been said upon the doctrine of presumptions (ante, p. 396), repeating here merely the caution laid down by Hale, never to convict a man of murder or manslaughter on circumstantial evidence alone, unless the body has been found. 2 Hale, 290; 11 St. Tr. 464 n. This caution need not be followed where very strong circumstantial evidence of death can be given. (a) See R. v. Hindmarsh, 2 Leach, 569 : R. v. Perry, 14 St. Tr. 1312 : and see 3 Chit. Cr. Law, 738; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 822, 823 : R. v. Hopkins, 8 C. & P. 591 : R. v. Cheverton, 2 F. & F. 833, Erle, J. : R. v. Burton, Dears. 282 : R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221 : R. v. Kersey, 21 Cox, 690.

The circumstantial evidence necessary to establish murder or manslaughter ought to lead the jury to " such certainty as they would act on in a matter of great consequence." R. v. Franz, 2 F. & F. 580, Blackburn, J. See also R. v. Hodge, 2 Lew. 227 : R. v. Gardner, 1 F. & F. 669, Bramwell, B. (b).

In cases of implied malice (see post, p. 874), the homicide is usually committed in the presence of others, who may prove it; if not, it must be proved by circumstantial evidence.

It must also be shown that the deceased died of the wound or other injury given him by the defendant, within a year and day after he received it : for if he died after that time, the law would presume that his death had proceeded from some other cause. 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 9; 1 East, P. C. 344; R. v. Dyson [1908] 2 K. B. 454; 77 L. J. (K. B.) 813. In R. v. McIntyre, 2 Cox, 379, Coleridge, J., where a blow was given which in the opinion of the surgeon rendered a restorative necessary, and the injured person being unable to swallow was choked in administering the restorative, it was held that the death was caused by the blow. If a man is suffering from a disease, which in all likelihood would terminate his life in a short time, and another gives him a wound or hurt which hastens his death, this is such a killing as constitutes murder (1 Hale, 427), or at the least manslaughter. R. v. Murton, 3 F. & F. 492, Byles, J. Upon a trial for manslaughter, it appeared that the deceased, at the time of the blow given, was in an infirm state of health, and this circumstance was observed upon on behalf of the prisoner, but Parke, J., in summing up, said, "It is said that the deceased was in a bad state of health, but that is perfectly immaterial, as if the prisoner was so unfortunate as to accelerate her death, he must answer for it." R. v. Martin, 5 C. & P. 128, approved in R. v. Dyson, supra: R. v. Hayward [1908] 21 Cox, 692; and see R. v. Wall, 28 St. Tr. 51, 145, Macdonald, C. B.; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 690.

(a) In Upington v. Solomon [1879] 9 Buchanan, Cape Supreme Court Reports, 240, at p. 276, Sir H. de Villiers, C.J., said: " I never understood the law as to the corpus delicti to go so far as to hold that where witnesses swear that they saw the person shot by means of a gun, and where they saw the deceased actually dying, a jury may be called upon to say that there is no proof of death whatsoever. I have always understood this rule as to corpus delicti to apply to those cases in which death is relied upon from the fact of the disappearance of the deceased." See also R. v. Kenniff [1903] Queensland St. Rep. 17. And see R. v. King, 9 Canada Cr. Cas. 436.

If a man is wounded, and the wound turns to a gangrene or fever for want of proper applications, or from neglect, or leads to septic pneumonia or meningitis, and the man dies of the gangrene, fever, etc.: see R. v. Flynn, 16 W. R. 319 (C. C. R. Ir.); Brintons, Ltd. v. Turvey [1905] A. C. 230, 235: 73 L. J. (K. B.) 158; R. v. Dyson [1908] 2 K. B. 454; 77 L. J. (K. B.) 813; or if it becomes fatal from the refusal of the party to undergo a surgical operation (R. v. Holland, 2 M. & Rob. 351); or if death results from an operation rendered advisable by the act of the accused (R. v. Davis, 15 Cox, 174, Mathew, J.); this is homicide, and murder or not, according to the circumstances under which the wound is given. 1 Hale, 428. But if the man's death was caused by improper applications to the wound, and not by the wound itself, it would be otherwise. Id. Murder may be committed without any stroke or wound; e.g., by neglect or ill-treatment. R. v. Huggins, 17 St. Tr. 309, 374; 2 Ld. Raym. 1574; and see post, pp. 870, 871.

Evidence for the Defendant.

The defendant has to prove, either that the murder was not committed by him, or that the offence actually committed does not amount to murder. This defence may be made out by the examination in chief of the witnesses for the prosecution; but if not, it may be proved from their cross-examination, or by witnesses called for the defence.

We have seen (ante, p. 867) that the prosecutor is not bound to prove that the homicide was committed from malice prepense. If he proves the homicide, the law presumes the malice; but the defendant may rebut the presumption, by proving that the homicide was justifiable, or excusable (see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 7, ante, p. 863), or that at most it amounted to manslaughter only, and not to murder.

Justifiable homicide is of three kinds:—1. Where the proper officer executes a criminal in strict conformity with his sentence. 2. Where an officer of justice, or other person acting in his aid, in the legal exercise of a particular duty, kills a person who resists or prevents him from executing it. 3. Where the homicide is committed in prevention of a forcible and atrocious crime: as for instance, if a man attempts to murder or rob another, and is killed in the attempt, the slayer shall be acquitted and discharged. See Bracton de Coronâ, ff. 120 b, 121; 1 Hale, 487, 488; 1 Hawk. c. 28; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 7, (ante, p. 863).

Excusable homicide is of two kinds:—1. Where a man doing a lawful act, without any intention of hurt, by accident kills another; as, for instance, where a man is working with a hatchet, and the head by accident flies off, and kills a person standing by. This is called homicide per infortunium, or by misadventure: see Stanley v. Powell [1891] 1 Q. B. 86; 62 L. J. (Q. B.) 52; Fost. 264. 2. Where a man kills another upon a sudden encounter, merely in his own defence, or in defence of his wife, child, parent, or servant, and not from any vindictive feeling; which is termed homicide se defendendo. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 7, and note (ante, p. 863).

Definitions of Murder and Manslaughter.

Murder is thus defined or described by Lord Coke (3 Inst. 47): "Where a person of sound memory and discretion—unlawfully killeth—any reasonable creature in being—and under the King's peace (ante, p. 867)—with malice afterthought, either express or implied" (post, p. 874).

Manslaughter is the unlawful and felonious killing of another without any malice either express or implied. R. v. Taylor, 2 Lew. 215; and see Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 409. It is of two kinds:—(a) Involuntary manslaughter; where a man doing an unlawful act not amounting to felony, by accident kills another; or where a man, by culpable neglect of a duty imposed upon him, is the cause of the death of another. And it may be stated, generally, that that which constitutes murder, if done by design and of malice prepense in the eye of the law, constitutes manslaughter when arising from culpable negligence. See R. v. Hughes, Dears. & B. 248; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 202. (b) Voluntary manslaughter; where upon a sudden quarrel, two persons fight, and one of them kills the other; or where a man greatly provokes another, by some personal violence, etc., and the other immediately kills him.

1. Murder and manslaughter can be committed only by a person of sound memory and discretion. They cannot be committed by an idiot, lunatic, or infant, unless, indeed, he show a consciousness of doing wrong, and a discretion or discernment between good and evil. 4 Bl. Com. 195; 1 Hawk. c. 1. (See ante, pp. 10 et seq.) On the trial of a child of thirteen years of age for murder by poisoning, Pollock, C.B., in drawing the distinction between murder and manslaughter, laid it down that no one could commit murder unless he was conscious that the act done was one which would be likely to cause death. R. v. Vamplew, 3 F. & F. 520. But if any person procures a madman, etc., to murder another, the procurer is guilty of the murder; 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 7; even though not present at the time it was committed. (See post, Part IV.) It is no defence on behalf of a foreigner, charged in England with an offence committed here, that he did not know he was doing wrong, the act not being an offence in his own country. R. v. Esop, 7 C. & P. 456.

2. The killing must be unlawful and not excusable or justifiable. It may be by poisoning, striking, starving, drowning, and a thousand other forms of death by which human nature may be overcome. 4 Bl. Com. 193; 1 Hale, 431; 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 4. Taking away a man's life by perjury is not, in law, murder; see R. v. Macdaniel, Fost. 131; 19 St. Tr. 745; 1 Leach, 44; 1 East, P. C. 333; and see 4 Bl. Com. 196 n.; although in foro conscientiæ it is as much so as killing with a sword. If a man, however, does any other act, of which the probable consequence may be and eventually is death, such killing may be murder, although no stroke were struck by himself; as was the case of the gaoler, who caused the death of a prisoner by imprisoning him in unwholesome air; R. v. Huggins, 17 St. Tr. 309, 376; 2 Ld. Raym. 1574, 1585; cf. R. v. Acton, 17 St. Tr. 462, 511, 526, 546: R. v. Bambridge, Id. 383, 397; of the unnatural son, who exposed his sick father to the air against his will, by reason whereof he died; 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 5; of the harlot, who laid her child in an orchard, where a kite struck it and killed it, Crompton, 24; of the mother, who hid her child in a pig-stye, where it was devoured; and of the parish officers, who moved a child from parish to parish till it died from want of care and sustenance. 1 Hale, 431, 433; 4 Bl. Com. 197; 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 6. So, for a mother to throw her child on to a heap of ashes, and leave it there in the open air exposed to the cold, whereby it dies, may amount to murder. R. v. Waters, 1 Den. 356; 2 C. & K. 864; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 53; 3 Cox, 300; and see R. v. Pinhorn, 1 Cox, 70: R. v. Hogan, 2 Den. 277; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 219: R. v. Cooper, 1 Den. 459; 2 C. & K. 876; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 168: R. v. Phillpot, Dears. 179; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 113; R. v. Walters, C. & Mar. 164. So, where an apprentice died from harsh treatment, and want of care upon the part of his master, whilst he was labouring under disease, it was held to be murder in the master. R. v. Squire, 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 668. But where the death of an apprentice results rather from incautious neglect by the master, however culpable, than from actual malice or wilful intention to injure, or obstinate and reckless persistence in doing an act necessarily attended with danger, a verdict of manslaughter may properly be returned. R. v. Self, 1 East, P. C. 226; 1 Leach, 137; and see R. v. Crumpton, C. & Mar. 597. But if the charge is of a nonfeasance, as in neglecting to supply food, the prosecutor must not only show a duty in the defendant to supply food, but also that the apprentice (or child) was of tender years, and unable to provide for himself; R. v. Friend, R. & R. 20: R. v. Marriott, 8 C. & P. 425; and that the defendant was in the actual possession of means to provide for him; R. v. Saunders, 7 C. & P. 277: R. v. Edwards, 8 C. & P. 611: R. v. Chandler, Dears. 453; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 109; 6 Cox, 519; the mere fact that he might have obtained such means by application to the guardians of the poor or to a relieving officer was not sufficient. R. v. Chandler, supra: R. v. Rugg, 12 Cox, 16. In R. v. Jones, 19 Cox, 678, on a charge of manslaughter by neglect, it was held that presumptive evidence of means had been given by proof that the prisoner at a date prior to the offence had such means as, having regard to the circumstances, would presumably not be exhausted by the date of the neglect. Under s. 12 (1) of the Children Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 67), post, p. 980, neglect to provide for the maintenance, etc., of a child is not excused by inability to do so without resort to the poor law. See R. v. Mabbett, 5 Cox, 339. If the death of a destitute person arises from neglect by a relieving officer to provide medical assistance, the officer may be convicted of manslaughter. R. v. Curtis, 15 Cox, 746, Hawkins, J. It has been held, on the authority of R. v. Squire, and R. v. Saunders, supra, that where a husband and wife are living together, the legal obligation to maintain is on the husband, and that the wife cannot be convicted of manslaughter by neglect to supply proper food or medical aid. R. v. Forsyth, Chester Summer Assizes, July 25, 1899, Kennedy, J.: see R. v. Senior [1899] 1 Q. B. 283; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 175; 17 Cox, 602. If a grown-up person chooses to undertake the charge of a human creature, helpless either from infancy, simplicity, lunacy, or other infirmity, he is bound to execute that charge without wicked negligence; and if a person who has chosen to take charge of a helpless creature lets it die by wicked negligence, that person is guilty of manslaughter. Mere negligence will not do; there must be wicked negligence, that is, negligence so great as to satisfy a jury that the prisoner had a wicked mind in the sense that he was reckless and careless whether the creature died or not. R. v. Nicholls, 13 Cox, 75, Brett, J. If a person has the custody of another who is helpless, and leaves that other with insufficient food or medical attendance, and so causes his death, he is criminally responsible. R. v. Marriott, 8 C. & P. 425: R. v. Instan [1893] 1 Q. B. 450 (C. C. R.); 62 L. J. (M. C.) 86; 17 Cox, 602; R. v. Senior [1899] 1 Q. B. 283, 292; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 175. But if a person, having the exercise of freewill, chooses to stay in a place where he receives insufficient food, and his health is injured, and death supervenes, the master is not criminally responsible. R. v. Smith, L. & C. 607, 625; 10 Cox, 82; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 153, 162, Erle, C.J.; and see post, p. 973. As to the facts necessary to support an indictment for killing or misusing a lunatic, see R. v. Pelham, 8 Q. B. 959; 15 L. J. (M. C.) 105. As to the obligation of a husband to supply necessaries for a wife living apart from him, and his liability if she dies for want of them, see R. v. Plummer, 1 C. & K. 600.

So, if one, under a well-grounded apprehension of personal violence, does an act which causes his death, as, for instance, jumps out of a window, or into a river, he who threatened is answerable for the consequences. R. v. Evans, 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 666: R. v. Hickman, 5 C. & P. 151: R. v. Pitts, C. & Mar. 284; and see R. v. Curley, 2 Cr. App. R. 109. R. v. Evans was followed in a colonial case (R. v. Grimes [1894] 15 N. S. W. Rep. (Law), 209), where a Chinaman had been robbed and brutally assaulted in a train, and thinking that his life was in danger, jumped from the train and was thereby killed. The principle of the English cases was approved in R. v. Martin, 8 Q. B. D. 54; 14 Cox, 633; and R. v. Halliday, 61 L. T. 701; 38 W. R. 256 (C. C. R.), in cases of assault. It seems immaterial whether the fear arises from actual violence or threat of it. R. v. Evans, supra. See also R. v. Beech, 23 Cox, 181; 76 J. P. 287; and R. v. Coleman, 84 J. P. 112. And frightening a person to death by an assault or otherwise seems to be manslaughter at the least. R. v. Towers, 12 Cox, 530, Denman, J.: R. v. Hayward, 21 Cox, 692.

3. The person killed must be "a reasonable creature in being and under the King's peace." Therefore, to kill a child in its mother's womb is no murder; but if the child is born alive, and dies by reason of the potion or bruises it received in the womb, it may be murder in the person who administered or gave them. 3 Co. Inst. 50: 1 Hawk. c. 31. s. 16: 1 Hale, 433. Thus, if a person, intending to procure abortion, does an act which causes a child to be born so much earlier than the natural time that it is born in a state much less capable of living, and afterwards dies in consequence of its exposure to the external world; the person who by this misconduct so brings the child into the world, and puts it thereby in a situation in which it cannot live, is guilty of murder; and the mere existence of a possibility that something might have been done to prevent the death will not render it less murder. R. v. West, 2 C. & K. 784; 2 Cox, 500. As to abortion, see post, p. 922. But a woman cannot be convicted even of manslaughter merely on evidence that, knowing she was near the time of delivery, she wilfully abstained from taking the necessary precautions to preserve the life of her child after its birth, in consequence of which it died. R. v. Knights, 2 F. & F. 46, Cockburn, C.J., and Williams, J.; and see R. v. Middleship, 5 Cox, 275, Erle, J. R. v. Knights was followed in R. v. Izod, 20 Cox, 690, by Channell, J., who held that to warrant the conviction of a woman for the manslaughter of her newly-born child, she must be proved to have been guilty of negligence towards the child after it was completely born. In the latter case the correctness of the ruling of Brett, J., in R. v. Handley, 13 Cox, 79, as cited on p. 752 of the 22nd edition of this work (p. 785 of the 23rd edition), was doubted by Channell, J., and it is pointed out in the note to the report of R. v. Izod that the exact words of the direction of Brett, J., to the jury in R. v. Handley (13 Cox, at p. 81) were: "But supposing that the prisoner had not made up her mind that the child should die, yet had determined that none but herself should be present at its birth, without intending final concealment, but only for the purpose of hiding her shame for a time, and had to that intent delivered herself, she would, in the eye of the law, have invested herself with a responsibility from the moment of birth, viz., that of the care and charge of a helpless creature: and if, after having assumed such care and charge, she allowed the child subsequently to die from her wicked negligence, that would make her guilty of manslaughter. . . . If they (the jury) were satisfied that the mother, having made up her mind to be alone at the birth, caused its death by wicked negligence after its birth, they would return a verdict of guilty." In R. v. Pritchard [1901] 17 T. L. R. 310: 36 L. J. Newsp. 119. Wright, J., stated that the third proposition in R. v. Handley was not a full statement of the law. So, if a mortal wound is given to a child whilst in the act of being born, for instance, upon the head as soon as the head appears and before the child has breathed, it may be murder, if the child is afterwards born alive and dies thereof. R. v. Senior, 1 Mood. 346; 1 Lew. 183 n. But it must be proved that the entire child has actually been born into the world in a living state; R. v. Poulton, 5 C. & P. 329; and the fact of its having breathed is not conclusive proof thereof. R. v. Sellis, 7 C. & P. 850 : R. v. Crutchley, 7 C. & P. 814. There must be an independent circulation in the child before it can be accounted alive. R. v. Enoch, 5 C. & P. 539 : R. v. Wright, 9 C. & P. 754. A child is born alive when it exists as a live child, breathing and living by reason of breathing through its own lungs alone, without deriving any of its living or power of living by or through any connection with its mother. R. v. Handley, 13 Cox, 79, Brett, J. But the fact of the child's being still connected with the mother by the umbilical cord will not prevent the killing from being murder. R. v. Crutchley supra: R. v. Reeves, 9 C. & P. 25 : R. v. Trilloe, 2 Mood. 260; C. & Mar. 650 : R. v. Pritchard [1901] 17 T. L. R. 310, Wright, J.

As to killing alien enemies, see ante, p. 867.

4. Malice aforethought. Express malice.]—To amount to murder, the killing must be committed with malice aforethought. " Aforethought " does not necessarily imply premeditation, but it implies intention which must necessarily precede the act intended. R. v. Doherty, 16 Cox, 306, Stephen, J. (See as to proof of malice and intent, ante, pp. 867 et seq.) According to the early writers, malice is express or implied. Express malice is when one, with a sedate and deliberate mind, and formed design, doth kill another; which formed design is evidenced by external circumstances discovering that inward intention; as lying in wait, antecedent menaces, former grudges, and concerted schemes to do him some bodily harm. 1 Hale, 451. Neither shall he be guilty of a less crime, who kills another in consequence of such a wilful act as shows him to be an enemy to mankind in general; as going deliberately with a horse used to strike, or discharging a gun amongst a multitude of people. 1 Hawk. c. 29, s. 12 : c. 31, s. 8. So, if a man resolves to kill the next person he meets, and does kill him, it is murder, although he knew him not, for it is universal malice, 4 Bl. Com. 200. And it may be necessary here to observe, that no provocation, however great, will extenuate or justify homicide, where there is evidence of express malice. See R. v. Mason, Fost. 132. So, where A. and B. having fallen out, A. said he would not strike, but would give B. a pot of ale to strike him; upon which B. did strike, and A. thereupon killed him; this was held to be murder. 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 24. For criticism of these definitions, see Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.) 407. As to the effect of proof that the defendant was drunk when he committed the homicide on the question of his malice see R. v. Doherty, 16 Cox, 306, Stephen, J. : Director of Public Prosecutions v. Beard [1920] A. C. 479, ante, p. 19. As to the effect of proving that the prisoner is insane, see ante, pp. 13-19; 217 (a).

Implied malice.]—In many cases, where no malice is expressed or openly indicated, the law will imply it. Thus, where a man wilfully poisons another—in such a deliberate act the law presumes malice, though no particular enmity can be proved. 1 Hale, 455. So if a man kills another suddenly, without any, or without a considerable provocation; if he kills an officer of justice in the legal execution of his duty; or if, intending to commit another felony (see post, p. 888), he undesignedly kills a man; in all these cases the law implies malice, and the offence is murder. But in all but the last of these cases there seems to be an intent to do bodily harm. Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.) 409; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 656.

If two persons mutually agree to commit suicide together, and accordingly take poison or attempt to drown themselves together, but only one of them dies, the survivor is guilty of murder. R. v. Dyson, R. & R. 523: R. v. Alison, 8 C. & P. 418, Patteson, J.; R. v. Jessop, 16 Cox, 204, Field, J.: R. v. Stormonth, 61 J. P. 729, Ridley, J.: R. v. Abbott, 67, J. P. 151, Kennedy, J. In like manner, where A. procures a drug, and gives it to B. with her assent, in order that she may take it to procure abortion, and B., believing herself (though not being) pregnant, takes it for that purpose, and dies from its effects, this, it seems, is murder in A. In such a case, however, a conviction for manslaughter (for which offence only the grand jury had found a bill) was upheld. R. v. Gaylor, Dears. & B. 288; 7 Cox, 253. So where an indictment charged W. with murdering herself with arsenic, and the prisoner with inciting her to commit the said murder, and it appeared on the trial that W., who was pregnant, was persuaded by the prisoner to take arsenic for the purpose of procuring miscarriage, that she received the arsenic from him and took it, in his absence, with intent to procure miscarriage, it was held that the prisoner was an accessory before the fact to the self-murder of W. R. v. Russell, 1 Mood. 356. But where the prisoner, at the request of a pregnant woman who wished to procure abortion, obtained for her a poisonous drug, knowing the purpose for which she wanted it, but being unwilling that she should use it, but she did use it and died in consequence, it was held that the prisoner was not guilty of murder. R. v. Fretwell, L. & C. 161; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 145; 9 Cox, 152: but see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 58, 59 (post, p. 922); and as to unintentional homicide in consequence of criminal acts, see post, pp. 888 et seq.

Killing by poison, or by surgical instruments.]—Of all the forms of death by which human nature may be overcome, the most detestable is that of poison; because it can of all others be the least prevented either by manhood or forethought. 3 Co. Inst. 48. And therefore, in all cases where a man wilfully administers poison to another, 1 Hale, 455, or lays poison for him, and either he or another takes it, and is killed by it (Id. 431), the law implies malice, although no particular enmity can be proved. 4 Bl. Com. 34. This rule applies where a man is plied with excessive quantities of drink with intent to kill him, or knowledge that it is likely to kill him. R. v. Packard, C. & Mar. 236. And if a person knowingly gives poison to A. to administer as a medicine to B., but A. neglecting to do so, it is accidentally given to B. by a child or other unconscious agent, this is in law a poisoning by the party himself, as much as if he had administered it with his own hands. R. v. Michael, 2 Mood. 120; 9 C. & P. 356. If, however, it were administered by mistake and without gross negligence, or if it were laid with an innocent intention in the place from which the deceased took it, it is merely homicide by misadventure. So, if a physician or surgeon gives his patient a potion or plaister to cure him, which, contrary to expectation, kills him, this also is neither murder nor manslaughter, but misadventure. Mirror, Book IV., c. 16 (Seld. Soc. Publ. Vol. VII., pp. 135-139). But the medical man must, at his peril, use proper skill and caution in administering a poisonous drug. R. v. Macleod, 12 Cox, 534. A distinction, indeed, has been taken between the administering of a potion, etc., by a regular physician, etc., and one who is not so, and the death in the latter case is said to be manslaughter at the least; Britton, c. 5; 4 Co. Inst. 251; but Hale very much questions the soundness of this distinction. 1 Hale, 430; and see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 681 et seq. And it seems that if a person, whether he be a regular practitioner or not, honestly and bonâ fide performs an operation, or uses a dangerous instrument, which causes the patient's death, he is not guilty of manslaughter; R. v. Van Butchell, 3 C. & P. 629; but if he is guilty of criminal misconduct, arising from gross ignorance or criminal inattention, and not from mere error of judgment, then he will be guilty of manslaughter. R. v. Williamson, 3 C. & P. 635: R. v. Spiller, 5 C. & P. 333: R. v. Chamberlain, 10 Cox, 486: R. v. Simpson, 1 Lew, 172: R. v. Ferguson, Id. 181; R. v. Spilling, 2 M. & Rob. 107: R. v. Macleod, 12 Cox, 534. R. v. Spiller, supra, was approved in R. v. Burdee, 25 Cox 598; 12 Cr. App. R. 153, where an ignorant man had accelerated death by his treatment of the deceased. In R. v. Long, 4 C. & P. 398, 423, where the defendant, not a regular physician, killed a woman by an application, and the jury found that he entertained a criminal disregard of human life, he was convicted of and punished for manslaughter. See R. v. Senior, 1 Mood. 346: 1 Lew. 183 n.: R. v. Ellis, 2 C. & K. 470. In R. v. Webb, 1 M. & Rob. 405; 2 Lew. 196: Lord Lyndhurst laid down the following rule: "In these cases there is no difference between a licensed physician or surgeon and a person acting as physician or surgeon without licence. In either case, if a party having a competent degree of skill and knowledge, makes an accidental mistake in his treatment of a patient, through which mistake death ensues, he is not thereby guilty of manslaughter; but if, where proper medical assistance can be had, a person totally ignorant of the science of medicine takes on himself to administer a violent and dangerous remedy to one labouring under disease, and death ensues in consequence of that dangerous remedy having been so administered, then he is guilty of manslaughter. If I entertained the least doubt of this position, I might fortify it by referring to the opinion of Lord Ellenborough in R. v. Williamson (supra). I shall leave it to the jury to say, first, whether death was occasioned or accelerated by the medicines administered; and if they think it was, then I shall tell them, secondly, that the prisoner is guilty of manslaughter, if they think that in so administering the medicine he acted with a criminal intention or from very gross negligence." See also R. v. Crick, 1 F. & F. 519: R. v. Crook, Id. 521: R. v. Bull, 2 F. & F. 201: R. v. Markuss, 4 F. & F. 356: R. v. Chamberlain, 10 Cox, 486: R. v. Macleod, 12 Cox, 534. Upon such a charge, evidence cannot be gone into, on either side, of former cases treated by the prisoner, but experts can be asked their opinion as to the state of the accused, as shown by his treatment of the case in question. R. v. Whitehead, 3 C. & K. 202, Maule, J. Evidence is admissible of the effect on other patients of a drug said to have been used with fatal effects. R. v. Long, 4 C. & P. 398. The prisoner, a druggist, was in the habit of using bottles of a peculiar make and colour in which to send out poisons from his shop. The deceased sent to the prisoner for aconite, to be used as a liniment, and henbane to be taken internally. He sent two bottles, one for the aconite and one for the henbane, both being bottles of the ordinary kind, but the bottle for the henbane being labelled "henbane," and also with the words "30 drops at a time." The prisoner, by mistake, put the aconite in the henbane bottle, deceased took a dose of it, and was poisoned. On the trial of the prisoner for manslaughter, Erle, C.J., put it to the jury that they ought not to call upon the prisoner for his defence, and that they could not convict, unless there was such a degree of complete negligence as the law meant by the word felonious. The prisoner had been put out of his ordinary course by the deceased's sending his own bottles, and although there was no doubt negligence in not observing the label on the bottle, yet the deceased had for years been sending to the shop for aconite, and only rarely for henbane. R. v. Noakes, 4 F. & F. 920. And on an indictment for manslaughter against a medical man by administering poison by mistake for some other drug, it is not sufficient for the prosecution merely to show that the prisoner, who dispensed his own drugs, supplied a mixture which contained a large quantity of poison; they are bound also to show that this happened through the gross negligence of the prisoner. R. v. Spencer, 10 Cox, 525, Willes, J.

Killing by fighting.]—Killing by fighting may be either murder, or manslaughter, or homicide se defendendo, according to circumstances.

1. Quarrels.]—If two persons quarrel and afterwards fight, and one of them kills the other—in such a case, if there intervened, between the quarrel and the fight, a sufficient cooling time for passion to subside and reason to interpose, the killing will be murder: Fost. 296; 1 Hale, 453: Lord Morley's case, 6 St. Tr. 769, 771: R. v. Oneby, 17 St. Tr. 29, 48; 2 Str. 766; but if such time had not intervened—if the parties, in their passion, fought immediately, or even if, immediately upon the quarrel, they went out and fought in a field (for this is deemed a continued act of passion), the killing in such a case would be manslaughter only, 3 Co. Inst. 51; 1 Hale, 453; 1 Hawk. c. 31. s. 29; Fost. 295, whether the party killing struck the first blow or not. Fost. 295: 1 Hale, 456; and see R. v. Snow, 1 Leach, 151; 1 East. P. C. 244: Re Barronet, 1 E. & B. 1; and 1 East. P. C. 241, 270; Lord Byron's case, 19 St. Tr. 1177: R. v. Walters, 12 St. Tr. 113.

Therefore, if two persons deliberately fight a duel, and one of them is killed, the other and his second are guilty of murder, 1 Hale, 443, 453: 1 Hawk. c. 31. s. 31: 1 East, P. C. 225-241; see R. v. Oneby, supra, no matter how grievous the provocation, or by which party it was given. R. v. Rice, 3 East. 581: R. v. Kinnear, 2 B. & Ald. 462. The second of the deceased also is deemed guilty of murder, as being present aiding and abetting; although Lord Hale seems to think the rule of law, as to principals in the second degree, too far strained in that case. 1 Hale, 443, 453. See R. v. Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103: R. v. Young, 8 C. & P. 644; R. v. Cuddy, 1 C. & K. 210.

Chance medley.]—Killing in chance medley was by 22 H. 8, c. 14 and 24 H. 8, c. 5, distinguished from murder by malice prepense. See 1 Hawk. c. 31, ss. 28, 29; 4 Bl. Com. 184; Woodburn's case, 16 St. Tr. 54, 80. But even in the case of a sudden quarrel, where the parties immediately fight, the case may be attended with such circumstances as will indicate malice on the part of the party killing; and the killing then would be murder, and not merely manslaughter. If, for instance, the party killing began the attack under circumstances of undue advantage,—as if A. and B. quarrel, and A. draws his sword and makes a pass at B., and B. therefore draws his sword and they fight and B. is killed; A. would be guilty of murder; for his making the pass before B. had drawn his sword shows that he sought his blood. Fost. 295. So, where A. and B. quarrelled, and A. threw a bottle at B. and then drew his sword, and B. then threw the bottle back at A. and wounded him, upon which A. immediately stabbed him; this was held to be murder. R. v. Mawgridge, 17 St. Tr. 57; Kel. (J.) 119. But if the parties at the commencement attack each other upon equal terms, and afterwards, in the course of the fight, one of them in his passion snatches up a deadly weapon and kills the other with it; this would be manslaughter only. R. v. Snow, 1 Leach, 151; 1 East, P. C. 244: R. v. Taylor, 5 Burr. 2793: R. v. Anderson, 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 715. But if use of a deadly weapon was intended from the first, the killing is murder. R. v. Kessal, 1 C. & P. 437: R. v. Anderson, supra. So, also, use of a deadly weapon used after a feigned reconciliation. R. v. Selten, 11 Cox, 674, Hannen, J. Where a third person interferes to stop a fight or assault, and is killed, the killing is murder, unless the deceased were doing more than was necessary to stop the fight or assault. R. v. Bourne, 5 C. & P. 120.

The proper direction for the jury in such cases seems to be that given in R. v. Smith, 8 C. & P. 160, 162, by Bosanquet, J., with the concurrence of Bolland, B., and Coltman, J:—"Did the prisoner enter into a contest with an unarmed man, intending to avail himself of a deadly weapon? If he did, it will amount to murder. But if he did not enter into the contest with the intention of using it, then the question will be, did he use it in the heat of passion, in consequence of an attack made upon him? If he did, then it will be manslaughter. But there is another question, did he use the weapon in defence of his own life? Before a person can avail himself of that defence he must satisfy the jury that the defence was necessary, that he did all he could to avoid it, and that it was necessary to protect his own life, or to protect himself from such serious bodily harm as would give a reasonable apprehension that his life was in immediate danger. If he used the weapon having no other means of resistance and no means of escape, in such case, if he retreated as far as he could, he would be justified." Where after mutual blows between the defendant and the deceased the defendant knocked the deceased down, and after he was upon the ground, stamped upon his stomach and belly with great force, and thereby killed him; this was held to be only manslaughter. R. v. Ayes, R. & R. 166 : cf. R. v. Rankin, R. & R. 43 : R. v. Brown, 1 Leach, 148. But where two men fought, and one overpowered the other, and put a rope round his neck and strangled him, it was held murder. R. v. Shaw, 6 C. & P. 372 : and see R. v. Thorpe, 1 Lew. 171.

2. Unlawful contests.]—A tilt or tournament, the martial diversion of our ancestors, was nevertheless an unlawful act, unless held under the commandment of the King : see R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534, 549; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 66; and so are boxing and sword-playing, the succeeding amusements of their posterity : see 1 East, P. C. 270 : R. v. Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537 : R. v. Hargrave, 5 C. & P. 170; R. v. Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103; therefore, if a knight in the former case, or a gladiator in the latter, is killed, such killing is manslaughter. 4 Bl. Com. 183. And in cases of this kind, however " fair " the fight may have been, all who are present at it and parties to it are equally guilty of manslaughter. R. v. Turner, 4 F. & F. 339. It is said, however, that if the King commands or permits such diversion, the act being in that case lawful, the killing would be misadventure only. Fost. 259; contra, Hale, 473. And a sparring match with gloves fairly conducted is not unlawful, and therefore death caused by an injury received during such a match, does not amount to manslaughter. R. v. Young, 10 Cox, 371, Bramwell, B. If, however, parties meet, intending to fight till one gives in from exhaustion or injury received, such fighting is unlawful, whether the combatants fight in gloves or not. R. v. Orton, 14 Cox, 226. So also a sparring match with gloves fairly conducted at its commencement may become unlawful if the men fight on until they are so weak that a dangerous fall is likely to be the result of the continuance of the game. R. v. Young, supra. All these cases are fully discussed in R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 66. And if, while engaged in a friendly game, as football, one of the players commits an unlawful act whereby death is caused to another, he is guilty of manslaughter. And the act, although in accordance with the rules of the game, would be unlawful if the person committing it intended to produce serious injury to another, or if, committing an act which he knows may produce serious injury, he is indifferent and reckless as to the consequences. R. v. Bradshaw, 14 Cox 83, Bramwell, L.J. : R. v. Moore, 14 Times L. R. 229. In the latter case Hawkins, J., refused to allow the rules of the game to be put in evidence, and ruled that the only question for the jury was whether the accused was guilty of illegal violence. See 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 785 et seq.

All struggles in anger, whether by fighting, wrestling, or in any other mode, are unlawful, and death occasioned by them is manslaughter at the least. R. v. Canniff, 9 C. & P. 359.

3. Self-defence.]—If two men fight upon a sudden quarrel, and one of them after a while endeavours to avoid any further struggle, and retreats as far as he can, until at length no means of escaping his assailant remain to him, and he then turns round and kills his assailant in order to avoid destruction; this homicide is excusable, as being committed in self-defence; Fost. 277; and, malice apart, it is little matter, in such a case, which struck the first blow at the beginning of the contest. Id.; 1 Hale, 479, 482; but see 1 Hawk. c. 29, s. 17; 63 J. P. 769: R. v. Smith, 8 C. & P. 160. And the same, of course, where one man attacks another, and the latter, without fighting, flies (see note, post, p. 886), and then turns round and kills his assailant, as above mentioned. But, in either of these cases, to show that it was homicide, se defendendo, it must appear that the party killing had retreated either as far as he could, by reason of some wall, ditch, or other impediment, or as far as the fierceness of the assault would permit him; 1 Hale, 481, 483; for the assault may have been so fierce as not to allow him to yield a step, without manifest danger of his life, or enormous bodily harm; and then, in his defence, if there is no other way of saving his own life, he may kill his assailant instantly. The distinction between this kind of homicide and manslaughter, is, that here the slayer could not otherwise escape, although he would; in manslaughter he would not escape if he could. "If," said Lindley, J., in R. v. Knock, 14 Cox, 1, 2, "a man attacks me, I am entitled to defend myself, and the difficulty arises in drawing the line between mere self-defence and fighting. The test is this: a man defending himself does not want to fight, and defends himself solely to avoid fighting. Then, supposing a man attacks me and I defend myself, not intending or desiring to fight, but still fighting—in one sense—to defend myself, and I knock him down, and thereby unintentionally kill him, that killing is accidental." See R. v. Deana, 73 J. P. 255; 25 T. L. R. 399.

And, as the manner of the defence, so is also the time, to be considered; for if the person assaulted does not fall upon the aggressor until the affray is over, or when he is running away, that is revenge and not defence. 4 Bl. Com. 185. Neither, under the cover of self-defence, will the law permit a man to screen himself from the guilt of deliberate murder; for if A. and B. agree to fight a duel, and A. gives the first onset, and B. retreats as far as he safely can, and then kills A., this is murder, because of the previous malice and concerted design. 1 Hale, 479.

Under this excuse of self-defence, the principal civil and natural relations are comprehended; therefore master and servant, parent and child, husband and wife, killing an assailant in the necessary defence of each other respectively, are excused, the act of the relation assisting being construed the same as the act of the party himself. 1 Hale, 484; 4 Bl. Com. 182. And where under circumstances that might reasonably have induced the belief that a man was cutting his wife's throat their son shot at and killed his father, it was held that if the son had reasonable grounds for believing and honestly believed that his act was necessary for the defence of his mother, the homicide was excusable. R. v. Rose, 15 Cox, 540, Lopes, J.

Lord Bacon (Elem. c. 5; see also 1 Hawk. c. 28, s. 26) mentions a case where two persons being shipwrecked got on the same plank, but, finding it not able to save them both, one of them thrust the other from it, and he was drowned, and says that this homicide is excusable through unavoidable necessity, and upon the principle of self-defence. This dictum is, however, unsupported by authority, and if Lord Bacon meant to lay down the broad proposition that a man may save his own life by killing, if necessary, an innocent and unoffending neighbour, it certainly is not now law. R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273, 286; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 32; 15 Cox, 624. Therefore a man who, in order to escape death from hunger, kills another for the purpose of eating his flesh, is guilty of murder; although at the time of the act he is in such circumstances that he believes, and has reasonable ground for believing, that it affords the only chance of preserving his own life. Id. Bishop (American Criminal Law (8th ed.), vol. 1, s. 348 a) suggests that the offence was manslaughter only. On the subject of "choice of evils," see Mayne, Indian Criminal Law (ed. 1896), 364; R. v. Stratton, 21 St. Tr. 1046, 1224; 1 Doug. 239.

If, when two persons are fighting, a third comes up, and takes the part of one of them, and kills the other; this will be manslaughter in the third party; 1 Hawk. c. 31, ss. 35, 36; and murder or manslaughter in the person whom he assisted, according as the fight was deliberate and premeditated, or upon a sudden quarrel. Id. s. 55. If the fighting, however, were deliberate, or otherwise of malice, and the third party, when he interfered, knew it to be so, the killing would be murder, both in the party who thus interfered, and in the person whom he assisted. 1 East, P. C. 291, 292. If, on the other hand, the third party who thus interferes is killed, it is only manslaughter. Id.; and see Anon., 12 Co. Rep. 87; Kel. (J.) 60.

Killing upon provocation.]—No provocation whatever can render homicide justifiable, or even excusable; but provocation may reduce the offence to manslaughter. If a man kills another suddenly, without any, or, indeed, without a considerable provocation, the law implies malice, and the homicide is murder; R. v. Noon, 6 Cox, 137: R. v. Welsh, 11 Cox, 336; but if the provocation were great, and such as must have greatly excited him, the killing is manslaughter only. R. v. Mawgridge, 17 St. Tr. 57; Kel. (J.) 119, 135; 1 Hale, 466; Fost. 290, 296, 299. The test to be applied is whether the provocation was sufficient to deprive a reasonable man of his self-control, not whether it was sufficient to deprive of his self-control the particular person charged; e.g., a person afflicted with want of mental balance or defective self-control. R. v. Lesbini [1914] 3 K. B. 1116; 24 Cox, 516; 11 Cr. App. R. 24. See also R. v. Alexander, 23 Cox, 604; 9 Cr. App. R. 139. In considering, however, whether the killing upon provocation amounts to murder or manslaughter, the nstrument with which the homicide was effected must also be taken into consideration; for if it were effected with a deadly weapon, the provocation must be great indeed to extenuate the offence to manslaughter; if with a weapon or other means not likely or intended to produce death, a less degree of provocation will be sufficient; in fact, the mode of resentment must bear a reasonable proportion to the provocation, to reduce the offence to manslaughter. Where ome provoking words being used by a soldier to a woman, she gave him a ox on the ear, and the soldier immediately gave her a blow with the pommel f his sword on the breast, and then ran after her, and stabbed her in the back, his was at first deemed murder, but it appearing afterwards that the blow given the soldier was with an iron patten, and that it drew a great deal of blood, the offence was held to be manslaughter only. R. v. Stedman, Fost. 292. Where two soldiers demanded to be admitted to a public-house to drink, and the landlord refused, because it was eleven o'clock at night; one of them, however, upon the door being afterwards opened to let out company, rushed in, and whilst the landlord was struggling to get him out, the other soldier struck the landlord on the head with a sharp instrument and killed him: this was held to be murder, notwithstanding the struggle with the other soldier; besides, the landlord had a right to put him out of his house. R. v. Willoughby, 1 East, P. C. 288; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 696, 697. So, where a park-keeper, having found a boy stealing wood, tied him to a horse's tail, and dragged him along the park, and the boy died of the injuries he thereby received: this was held to be murder. R. v. Holloway, Cro. Car. 131; 1 Hale, 454. So, in all other cases where, upon a sudden provocation, one beats another in a cruel and unusual manner, so that he dies, it is murder. 4 Bl. Com. 199; 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 33; and see R. v. Reason and Tranter, 16 St. Tr. 1; 1 Str. 499; Fost. 292. An unwarrantable imprisonment of a man's person, however, has been held sufficient provocation to make a killing, even with a sword, manslaughter only. Protector v. Buckner, Sty. 467: R. v. Withers, 1 East, P. C. 233. Therefore, where a constable arrested a man without a warrant, upon a charge which gave him no authority to do so, and the prisoner ran away, and J. S., who was with the constable all the time, ran after the prisoner, who, to prevent his being retaken, killed J. S.; it was held to be manslaughter only, although, whilst under the charge of the constable, the prisoner struck the man who gave the charge, because a blow under the provocation of the illegal arrest would not justify the constable in detaining him, unless the blow were likely to be followed by dangerous consequences, and formed a new and distinct ground of detainer. R. v. Curvan, 1 Mood. 132. See R. v. Thompson, Id. 80 (post, p. 899). An order by a policeman to move on given to a person playing music in a street, followed by a push to give effect to the remonstrance, is not a provocation excusing use of a dangerous weapon. R. v. Hagan, 8 C. & P. 167. Where A., to prevent B. from fighting with his brother, laid hold of him and held him down, but struck no blow, upon which B. stabbed A.; it was held, that if A. did nothing more than was necessary to prevent B. from beating his brother, and had died of the stab, the offence of B. would have been murder: but that if A. did more than was necessary to prevent the beating of his brother, it would have been manslaughter only. R. v. Bourne, 5 C. & P. 120. If a man pulls another's nose, or offers him any other great personal indignity, and the other thereupon immediately kills him, it is manslaughter only. Kel. (J.) 135; 4 Bl. Com. 191. Or if a man takes another in adultery with his wife, and kills him directly upon the spot, this is manslaughter merely. 1 Hale, 486: R. v. Manning, Sir T. Raym. 212: R. v. Maddy, 1 Ventr. 158: R. v. Pearson, 2 Lew. 216: R. v. Kelly, 2 C. & K. 814. And if a father sees another person in the act of committing an unnatural crime with his son, and instantly kills him, it is manslaughter only: but if, hearing of it, he goes in quest of the party and kills him, it is murder. R. v. Fisher, 8 C. & P. 182. Where a boy, after fighting with another, ran home bleeding to his father, and the father immediately took a small cudgel, and ran three-quarters of a mile to the place where the other boy was, and struck him a single blow of the stick, of which blow the boy afterwards died; this was held to be manslaughter only. Anon., 12 Co. Rep. 87; and see Fost. 294. Where a man was indicted for the murder of his wife, and evidence was given that she assaulted him, to prove the nature of the assault which the accused had reason to apprehend, evidence was admitted of previous assaults and their character and effect. R. v. Hopkins, 10 Cox, 229, Byles, J. And where a father, seeing his daughter violently assaulted by her husband, struck the latter a fatal blow in strong resentment, it was held manslaughter. R. v. Harrington, 10 Cox, 370, Cockburn, C.J. Where a mob threw a pickpocket into a pond for the purpose of ducking him, but he was unfortunately drowned; this was held to be manslaughter. R. v. Fray, 1 East, P. C. 236.

Insufficient provocation.]—As a general rule, no words or gestures, however opprobrious or provoking, will be considered in law to be provocation sufficient to reduce homicide to manslaughter, if the killing is effected with a deadly weapon, or an intention to do the deceased some grievous bodily harm is otherwise manifested; R. v. Welsh, 11 Cox, 336; and see Lord Morley's case, 6 St. Tr. 769, 771: R. v. Mawgridge, 17 St. Tr. 57, 66; Kel. (J.) 119: R. v. Chetwynd, 18 St. Tr. 289, 312; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.) 185; but if effected with a blow of a fist, or with a stick, or other weapon not likely to kill, it is manslaughter only. Fost. 290. 291; 1 Hale, 456. And if there is a provocation by blows, which are not sufficiently violent in themselves to reduce the killing below the crime of murder, yet if they are accompanied by very aggravating words and gestures, this may make it manslaughter only. R. v. Sherwood, 1 C. & K. 556: R. v. Smith, 4 F. & F. 1066. In the case last named the assault was very slight, although of a very offensive nature, spitting in the prisoner's face, but accompanied by words of great provocation. In a similar case the Court of Criminal Appeal said: "Mere words of provocation or abuse could not, but words of provocation coupled with such an act as spitting upon the appellant might (though they need not necessarily) have the effect of reducing the crime from murder to manslaughter." R. v. Mason, 8 Cr. App. R. 121. And under special circumstances there may be such a provocation by words as will reduce a killing which would otherwise be murder to manslaughter; for instance, if a husband suddenly hearing from his wife that she had committed adultery, he having had no idea of such a thing before, were thereupon to kill his wife, it might be manslaughter. R. v. Rothwell, 12 Cox, 145, Blackburn, J.: and see R. v. Jones, 72 J. P. 215, Bucknill, J. But this does not apply in the case of persons engaged to be married. R. v. Palmer [1913] 2 K. B. 29; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 531; 23 Cox, 377; 108 L. T. 814; 77 J. P. 340; 92 T. L. R. 349. Where the prisoner, while under the influence of drink and under an unfounded impression that his wife had committed adultery with his brother, accused his brother of the adultery suspected, and, receiving an answer which he considered evasive, stabbed his brother and killed him, it was held that the circumstances in which the crime was committed did not reduce it from murder to manslaughter. R. v. Birchall, 109 L. T. 478; 29 T. L. R. 711 (C. C. A.). In this case, R. v. Rothwell (supra) was declared to be an extreme case and one which should not be extended. Where the prisoner, upon finding the woman with whom he had been cohabiting for some time drunk in a house of ill-fame, killed her, it was held that the circumstances were not comparable to a man finding his wife in the act of committing adultery, and that the crime was not reduced from murder to manslaughter. R. v. Greening [1913] 3 K. B. 846; 29 T. L. R. 732; 25 Cox, 269. Nor is a statement by a wife that she is about to live with another or to commit adultery sufficient provocation. R. v. Ellor, 85 J. P. 107; 36 T. L. R. 840. Provocation by one person cannot affect the crime of killing another. R. v. Simpson, 114 L. T. 238; 31 T. L. R. 560; 11 Cr. App. R. 218.

But in all cases, to reduce homicide upon provocation to manslaughter, it is essential that the battery, wounding, etc., appear to have been inflicted immediately upon the provocation being given; for if there is a sufficient cooling time for passion to subside and reason to interpose, and the person so provoked afterwards kills the other, this is deliberate revenge, and not heat of blood, and accordingly amounts to murder. Fost. 296: R. v. Thomas, 7 C. & P. 817. The prisoner and the deceased, who were previously on intimate terms, were at a public-house drinking, when a scuffle ensued, and the deceased struck the prisoner in the eye and gave him a black eye; the prisoner called for the police and went away upon the policeman coming up; in about five minutes, however, he returned and stabbed the deceased with a knife which he usually carried about him: Lord Tenterden, C.J., said that it was not every slight provocation, even by a blow, which will, when the party receiving it strikes with a deadly weapon, reduce the offence from murder to manslaughter; and that, if there had been any evidence of an old grudge between the parties, the crime would probably be murder: but he left it to the jury to say, whether in the interval during which the prisoner was absent, there was time for his passion to cool and reason to gain dominion over his mind; if not, they should find him guilty of manslaughter only. R. v. Lynch, 5 C. & P. 324; cf. R. v. Eagle, 2 F. & F. 827, Erle, C.J. Again, where the prisoner was at the house of the deceased's mother, who desired the deceased to turn the prisoner out, and he did so, giving him a kick at the time, upon which the prisoner said he would make him remember it, and went home, about 300 yards, passed through his bedroom to a kitchen adjoining, and into the pantry, where he kept a knife, and having got it, returned hastily, and met the deceased coming towards him with his hat, when a conversation ensued, and they walked together, when the deceased giving the prisoner his hat, the prisoner swore he would have his rights, and stabbed the deceased in two places, saying he had served him right: after this the prisoner ran home, repassed through the rooms to the pantry, and then went to bed, where he was shortly afterwards apprehended, and the knife found on the shelf in the pantry; Tindal, C.J., told the jury, that the principal question was, whether the wounds were given by the prisoner whilst smarting under a provocation so recent, as showing that he might be considered at the moment not master of his understanding, in which case it would be manslaughter only; or whether, after the provocation, there had been time for the blood to cool and reason to resume its sway, before the wound was inflicted, in which case the offence would be murder; the jury found the prisoner guilty of murder. R. v. Hayward, 6 C. & P. 157. If there is evidence of express malice, the killing will be murder, however great the provocation. R. v. Mason, Fost. 132; 1 East, P. C. 239; and see Fost. 296; R. v. Kirkham, 8 C. & P. 115.

Direction of judge.]—Where there is evidence of such provocation as would, if the jury believed it, justify them in finding a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, the judge must leave the question of manslaughter to the jury, even though counsel for the accused has not relied upon that defence or has conducted his defence mainly on lines opposed to provocation. R. v. Hopper [1915] 2 K. B. 431; 25 Cox, 34; 79 J. P. 335; 31 T. L. R. 360; 11 Cr. App. R. 136; cf. R. v. Gorges, 85 L. J. (K. B.) 1049; 114 L. T. 97; 25 Cox, 218; 11 Cr. App. R. 259. But where there is no such evidence the judge may direct the jury that they cannot find a verdict of guilty of manslaughter. R. v. Phillis, 32 T. L. R. 414. See also R. v. Clinton, 12 Cr. App. R. 215.

Killing by correction.]—The right of parents, schoolmasters, etc., to inflict chastisement on children or apprentices, is recognized at common law. Halliwell v. Counsell, 38 L. T. (N. S.) 176 : Cleary v. Booth [1893] 1 Q. B. 465; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 87. The right to chastise servants was also recognized at common law. See R. v. Mawgridge, 17 St. Tr. 57, Kel. (J.) 133; 33 H. 8, c. 12, ss. 6, 12. And shipmasters are said to be entitled to inflict reasonable corporal punishment at sea on seamen for disobeying orders. The Agincourt, 1 Hagg. Adm. 271 : Lamb v. Burnett, 1 Cr. & J. 291; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 767. As to servants who are not apprentices, the right is in desuetude. As to parents, guardians, etc., it is preserved by 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 37 (post, p. 990). Where a parent or person in loco parentis is moderately correcting his child, a master his servant or scholar, or an officer punishing a criminal, and he happens to occasion his death, it is only misadventure; but if he exceeds the bounds of moderation, either in the manner, the instrument, or the quantity of punishment, and death ensues, it is manslaughter at the least, and in some cases (according to the circumstances) murder. 1 Hale, 474 : R. v. Grey, Kel. (J.) 64. And see R. v. Wall, 28 St. Tr. 51, 144, 145, Macdonald, C.B. : R. v. Bird, 5 Cox, 1, 10 : R. v. Drake [1903] 22 N. Z. L. R. 478, and see R. v. Woods, 85 J. P. 276. Where a master corrected his servant with an iron bar, and a schoolmaster stamped on his scholar's belly, so that each of the sufferers died, these were held to be murders; because the correction being excessive, and such as could not proceed but from a bad heart, it was equivalent to a deliberate act of killing. Kel. (J.) 133, 134; Fost. 262; 1 Hawk. c. 29, s. 5. So, in all cases where the correction is inflicted with a deadly weapon, and the party dies of it, it will be murder; if with an instrument not likely to kill, though improper for the purpose of correction, it will be manslaughter. Fost. 262. See R. v. Hopley, 2 F. & F. 201. Beating a child for theft so severely as to cause death has been held manslaughter. Anon., 1 East, P. C. 261; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 769, 770. A mother being angry with one of her children, took up a poker, and on his running to the door of the room, which was open, threw it after him and killed another child who was entering the room at the time; and it was held to be manslaughter, although she did not intend to hit the child she threw the poker at, but merely to frighten him; because it was an improper mode of correction. R. v. Conner, 7 C. & P. 438. In R. v. Cheeseman, 7 C. & P. 455, maltreatment and cruel and excessive correction of a child with fatal results by a person in loco parentis was held manslaughter only where the defendant honestly believed the child to be malingering. Where the father of a child two years and a half old beat it with a strap on the lower part of its back and on its thighs on its committing some childish fault, and the death of the child was accelerated by the beating, this was held to be manslaughter. R. v. Griffin, 11 Cox, 402. For the prisoner it was urged that there was no case to go to the jury, as the father had a right to correct his child; but Martin, B., after consulting Willes, J., ruled that the law as to correction had reference only to a child capable of appreciating correction, and not to an infant two years and a half old, and that although a slight slap might be lawfully given to an infant by her mother, more violent treatment of an infant so young by her father would not be justifiable. Id. Where a master struck his servant with one of his wife's clogs, because he had not cleaned them, and death unfortunately ensued, it was held to be manslaughter only, because the clog was very unlikely to cause death, and the master consequently could not have the intention of taking away the servant's life by hitting him with it. R. v. Turner, Comb. 407, 408, cit.: and see R. v. Wiggs, 1 Leach, 378 n.; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 768, where the defendant threw a stick at his sheep-boy for his negligence, and killed him; R. v. Leggett, 8 C. & P. 191, a case of alleged maltreatment of a seaman by the captain and mate of his ship. As to corporal punishment by order of a court martial, see R. v. Wall, 28 St. Tr. 51, 145.

Killing in defence of person or property.]—If any person attempts to rob or murder another in or near the highway (R. v. Bull, 9 C. & P. 22) or in a dwelling-house, or attempts burglariously to break into a dwelling-house in the night-time, and is killed in the attempt, the slayer is entitled to acquittal, for the homicide is justifiable, and the killing is without felony. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 7 (ante, p. 863), and 1 Hale, 481, 482. The same rule applies where a man is killed in attempting to burn a house; 1 Hale, 488; or where a woman kills a man who attempts to ravish her; Bac. Elem. 34; 1 Hale, 485; 1 Hawk. c. 28, s. 21; or where a man is killed in attempting to break open a house in the daytime, with intent to rob; 1 Hale, 488; or to commit any other forcible and atrocious crime. Bracton, Pl. Cor. 155; Fost. 273; 1 Hale, 484: R. v. Levett, Cro. Car. 538, cit.; Fost. 299: R. v. Cooper, Cro. Car. 544: R. v. Ford, Kel. (J.) 51; Fost. 274: see R. v. Symondson, 60 J. P. 645, Kennedy, J. The killing need not be in self-defence, but may be in defence of another against whose person or property serious felony is threatened. R. v. Rose, 15 Cox, 540, Lopes, J.: and see Handcock v. Baker, 2 B. & B. 260. Thus not only the party whose person or property is thus attacked, but his servants or other members of his family, and even strangers who are present at the time, are equally justified in killing the assailant. 1 Hale, 483; Fost. 274; R. v. Rose, supra. (a) The above rule, however, does not extend to felonies without force,

(a) In a colonial case, R. v. Theriault [1894] 32 New Brunswick, 504, where, on an indictment for murder, there was evidence that the accused acted under a reasonable such as picking pockets, 1 Hale, 488, nor to misdemeanors of any kind: and even in cases within the rule it must be proved that the intent to commit such forcible and atrocious crime was clearly manifested by the felon, 1 Hale, 484, otherwise the homicide will be manslaughter at least, if not murder. Where a servant set to watch in his master's garden at night, shot a person whom he saw going into his master's hen-roost, it was held that he was not justified in so doing, unless he had fair ground to believe his own life to be in actual danger. R. v. Scully, 1 C. & P. 319: and see R. v. Weston, 14 Cox, 346, Cockburn, C.J., as to use of firearms. A constable found a man wrongfully carrying off wood (a misdemeanor); he did not know that the man had been twice before convicted, which made the offence felony. He fired at him and wounded him. Held that he had no justification. R. v. Dadson, 2 Den. 35; 3 C. & K. 148; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 57. In cases within the rule, it may be necessary to observe, that the party whose person or property is attacked is not obliged to retreat, as in other cases of self-defence, but may even pursue the assailant until he find himself or his property out of danger. 1 East, P. C. 27; Fost. 273; and see Aldrich v. Wright, 53 New Hampshire, 398, where the English authorities are collected. But he must not strike blows except in self-defence. See R. v. Knock, 14 Cox, 1 (a): R. v. Deana, 73 J. P. 255.

What we have now said relates to felonies by force. In the case of forcible misdemeanors, such as trespass in taking goods, although the owner may justify beating the trespasser, in order to make him desist, yet, if it kills him, it will be manslaughter. 1 Hale, 485, 486. Where the defendant had kicked a trespasser out of his house and the injuries received caused the death of the trespasser, this was held to be manslaughter. R. v. Wild, 2 Lew. 214. Or if, instead of beating him, he attacks him with a deadly weapon, it would perhaps be murder, particularly if the wound were given after the party had desisted from the trespass. 1 Hale, 473. See R. v. Smith, 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 764, where a man was shot while masquerading as a ghost. But in defence of a man's house, the owner or his family may kill a trespasser who would forcibly dispossess him of it, in the same manner as he might, by law, kill in self-defence a man who attacks him personally; with this distinction, however, that in defending his house he need not retreat, as in other cases of self-defence, for that would be giving up his house to his adversary. 1 Hale, 485, 486.

Personal assaults, where the party assaulted kills his adversary, are considered ante, pp. 877-881. The right of killing another in self-defence does not extend to cases where a man is killed at sea, and eaten to save his comrades apprehension of grievous bodily harm to his wife and family, it was held that this belief was a justification for the homicide on the authority of R. v. Bull (supra), and R. v. Smith, 8 C. & P. 160 (ante, p. 880).

(a) In Beard v. U. S. [1894] 158 U. S. 550, 560, it was held that a man assailed on his own land without provocation by a person armed with a deadly weapon and apparently seeking his life was not bound to retreat, but might stand his ground: and is not guilty of murder or manslaughter if he kills his adversary by a blow given simply with the object of protecting himself.

In Alberty v. U. S., 162 U. S. 499, where the accused had found a man attempting in the night-time to get into his wife's room by a window, it was held that he was right to repel the attempt by force, and was under no obligation to retreat if attacked.

from otherwise inevitable starvation. R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 32; 15 Cox, 624 (ante, p. 880).

Killing without intention whilst doing another act.]—If a person, whilst doing or attempting to do another act, undesignedly kills a man—if the act intended or attempted were a felony, the killing is murder; R. v. Beard, 14 Cr. App. R. 110; Director of Public Prosecutions v. Beard [1920] A. C. 479; if unlawful, but not amounting to felony, the killing is manslaughter (R. v. Hodgson, 1 Leach, 6; S. C. sub nom. R. v. Hubson, 1 East, P. C. 258): if lawful, homicide by misadventure merely. R. v. Woodburn, 16 St. Tr. 54, 80. A distinction appears to have been taken at one time between unlawful acts which are mala in se, and mala prohibita. But it is doubtful whether this distinction is now of any value, and the unlawfulness of the act would now be determined by the law of England, and not by reference to the law of nature, or any moral standard. See R. v. Senior [1899] 1 Q. B. 283; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 175: R. v. Instan [1893] 1 Q. B. 450; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 86. Thus, homicide in consequence of unlawful assembly is manslaughter; R. v. McNaughten, 14 Cox, 576 (Ir.); as is homicide due to an unlawful act in a game of football; R. v. Bradshaw, 14 Cox, 83 (and see ante, p. 879); or by kicking out a trespasser. R. v. Wild, 2 Lew. 214: R. v. Bruce, 2 Cox, 262, Erle, J.; and a person selling unwholesome food is liable for manslaughter of persons dying in consequence of eating it: R. v. Stevenson, 3 F. & F. 106; R. v. Kempson, 28 L. J. Newsp. 477 (and see ante, p. 2.) If a man shoots at another's poultry, with intent to steal them, and by accident kills a man, it has been said to be murder (see R. v. Woodburn, 16 St. Tr. 57, 80); if without such intent, it is manslaughter, the act of shooting at the poultry being unlawful and not felonious; Fost. 258; but in R. v. Keate [1697] Comb. 406, 409, Holt, C.J., says that Coke's dictum on this subject (3 Inst. 56) is "too large. There must be a design of mischief to the person, or to commit a felony or great riot." And considerable doubt was expressed by Stephen, J., whether the rule that if a person whilst committing or attempting to commit a felony undesignedly kills a man—as in the case put above, of a person shooting at poultry with intent to steal them—such killing is murder, is not too broadly stated, and whether it ought not to be limited to cases where a person whilst committing or attempting to commit a felony does an act which is known to be dangerous to life, and likely in itself to cause death —as in the case of a person setting fire to a house with intent to defraud—and thus undesignedly killing a man. R. v. Serné, 16 Cox, 311; and cf. R. v. Horsey, 3 F. & F. 287, Bramwell, B. Where the prisoner was charged with the murder of a woman as the result of a felonious operation performed by him upon her (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58), Bigham, J., told the jury that if they were of opinion that the deceased died as a result of the prisoner's unlawful operation, he was guilty of murder, but added that if they should be of opinion that the prisoner could not as a reasonable man have expected death to result, they might find a verdict of manslaughter. R. v. Whitmarsh, 62 J. P. 711; followed by Lawrence, J., in R. v. Bottomley [1903] Liverpool Assizes, 38 L. J. Newsp. 270; 115 L. T. J. 88. In a similar case Avory, J., directed the jury that if, when the prisoner did the act, he must as a reasonable man have contemplated that death or grievous bodily harm was likely to result, he was guilty of murder; but that if he could not as a reasonable man have contemplated either of those consequences, he was guilty only of manslaughter. R. v. Lumley, 22 Cox, 635; 76 J. P. 208. Cf. R. v. Radyalski, 24 Victoria L. R. 687: R. v. Dowdle, 26 Victoria L. R. 637. In R. v. Greenwood, 7 Cox, 404, Wightman, J., told the jury that they might ignore the doctrine of constructive malice and return a verdict of manslaughter in a case where a child had died in consequence of a felony committed on her by the prisoner. And there appears to be considerable divergence of opinion amongst the judges as to the proper direction to the jury in these cases; see 33 L. J. Newsp. 546, 615.

If a man deliberately shoots at A., and misses him, but kills B., this is murder. Fost, 261; 1 Hale, 438, 441. Or if he intentionally fires at himself for the purpose of killing himself, but kills another person, it is murder. R. v. Hopwood, 8 Cr. App. R. 143. So, if he stabs at A., and by accident strikes and kills B., it is murder. R. v. Hunt, 1 Mood. 93: and see R. v. Latimer, 17 Q. B. D. 359; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 135. But if he fires at A. in such circumstances as would make the killing of A. manslaughter, and by accident hits and kills B. whom he never intended to hit at all, he is guilty of manslaughter. R. v. Gross, 23 Cox, 455; 77 J. P. 352. If a man lays poison for A., and B. (against whom he had no malicious intent) takes it, and it kills him, this is likewise murder. 1 Hale, 436; R. v. Saunders, Plowd. 473: R. v. Gore, 9 Co. Rep. 81. So, if whilst two men are deliberately fighting, a third goes between them to part them, and is killed by one of them, it is murder, 1 Hale, 441, whether he were killed accidentally or designedly. If a man throws a stone at a horse, and it hits the rider and kills him, it is manslaughter. 1 Hale, 39, 475. If, when engaged in an unlawful or dangerous sport, a man kills another by accident, it is manslaughter; Fost. 259, 260, 261; 1 Hale, 472, 473; 1 Hawk. c. 29, s. 6; if the sport were lawful and not dangerous, it would be homicide by misadventure merely. Fost. 260; and see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 785, 786. So, if a man, intending to kill a person attempting to commit a forcible and atrocious crime against his person or property (see ante, pp. 886, 887), by mistake kills one of his own family, it is homicide by misadventure merely. See Cro. Car. 538; Fost. 299. Where a man is at work with a hatchet, and the head of it flies off and kills a bystander, this is homicide by misadventure. 1 Hawk. c. 29, s. 2. So, if a man, shooting at game, by accident kills another, it is homicide by misadventure merely, even although the party be unqualified; Fost. 259; for the use of firearms by an unqualified person was merely a prohibited act, and not malum in se (vide supra).

There are two seeming exceptions, however, to the above rule.

First. If two persons are fighting under such circumstances, that if one were killed it would be manslaughter only in the other; if in such a case an innocent party is unintentionally killed by one of them, it is manslaughter only. Fost. 262: R. v. Brown, 1 Leach, 148; 1 East, P. C. 231, 245, 274. This perhaps is not strictly an exception: for the act in which the parties are engaged, namely, the fighting, is not in itself felonious, although the result of it may be so. See ante, p. 879.

Secondly. Where an act of omission or commission, in itself lawful, is at the same time dangerous, it must appear, in order to render an unintentional homicide from it excusable, that the party whilst doing the act, acted without gross negligence, in that he used such a degree of caution as to make it improbable that any danger or injury should arise from it to others; if not, the homicide will be manslaughter at the least, the doctrine being well established that act or omission arising from culpable neglect of duty and having a fatal result is manslaughter, and if done by design or of malice prepense would be murder. R. v. Hughes, Dears. & B. 248; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 202; 7 Cox, 301. Where a dangerous and unlawful act is done, even in sport, if death results it is manslaughter: e.g., where the prisoners in sport had thrown stones down a coal mine, which broke a scaffolding therein and overturned a corf in which the deceased was, and precipitated him to the bottom of the mine. R. v. Fenton, 1 Lew. 179, Tindal, C.J. If a workman throws stones or rubbish, etc., from a house, and thereby kills a person passing underneath it, it is murder, manslaughter, or homicide by misadventure, according to the degree of precaution taken by him that no person should be injured by them, and to the necessity of such precaution. R. v. Hull, Kel. (J.) 40. If he did it without previously warning the person beneath, and at a time when it was likely that persons were passing, it would be murder; 3 Co. Inst. 57; if at a time when it was not likely that any persons were passing, it would be manslaughter; Fost. 262; if in a retired place, where no persons were in the habit of passing, or likely to pass, it would be misadventure merely. Fost. 262; 1 Hale, 472, 475. But if he previously gave warning to the persons beneath,—then, if it happened in a country village, where few persons pass, it is misadventure only: Fost. 263; 1 Hale, 472, 475: if in London, or other populous towns, Kel. (J.) 40, at a time when the streets are full, Fost. 263, it would be manslaughter.

Where death results in consequence of a negligent act, it would seem that to create criminal responsibility the degree of negligence must be so gross as to amount to recklessness. Mere inadvertence, while it might create civil liability, would not suffice to create criminal liability. See R. v. Noakes, 4 F. & F. 920: R. v. Markuss, Id. 356, Willes, J.: R. v. Finney, 12 Cox, 625, Lush, J.: R. v. Doherty, 16 Cox, 306, Stephen, J.: Hammack v. White, 31 L. J. (C. P.) 131, Willes, J. And it is not sufficient to create criminal liability to show that the act which caused death constituted a tort. R. v. Lowe, 3 C. & K. 123; 4 Cox, 449, Campbell, C.J.: R. v. Franklin, 15 Cox, 163, Field, J.: R. v. Doherty, supra.

In all such cases it must appear that the death was the direct and immediate result of the personal neglect or default of the defendant. For instance, where trustees appointed under a local Act for the purpose of repairing roads within a particular district, with a power to contract for executing such repairs, neglected so to contract, and by reason of such neglect one of such roads became out of repair, and a person using it was accidentally killed in consequence of its so being out of repair, it was held that the trustees were not chargeable with manslaughter. R. v. Pocock, 17 Q. B. 34; 6 Cox, 172. And see R. v. Ledger, 2 F. & F. 857: R. v. Haines, 2 C. & K. 368 (post, p. 893).

Contributory negligence.]—It is no defence to an indictment for manslaughter, where the death of the deceased is shown to have been caused in part by the negligence of the prisoner, that the deceased was also guilty of negligence, and so contributed to his own death. R. v. Swindall, 2 C. & K. 230; 2 Cox, 141. In summing up, Pollock, C.B., said: "The prisoners are charged with contributing to the death of the deceased by their negligence and improper conduct; and if they did so, it matters not whether he was deaf, or drunk, or negligent, or in part contributed to his own death; for in this consists a great distinction beween civil and criminal proceedings. If two coaches run against each other, and the drivers of both are to blame, neither of them has any remedy for damages against the other. But in the case of loss of life, the law takes a totally different view: for there each party is responsible for any blame that may ensue, however large the share may be; and so highly does the law value human life, that it admits of no justification wherever life has been lost, and the carelessness or negligence of any one person has contributed to the death of another person." Id. This ruling was cited by Mellor, J., apparently with approval, in R. v. Dant, L. & C. 567; 10 Cox, 102; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 119; and Byles, J., so laid down the law to the grand jury in directing them in the case of R. v. Hutchinson, 9 Cox, 555, where a major-general was indicted for manslaughter of a man who was killed by a shot from a cannon fired by an artilleryman acting under a superior officer, who was practising under general orders from the major-general. See 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 807, and R. v. Longbottom, 3 Cox, 439: R. v. Walker, 1 C. & P. 320. In R. v. Birchall, 4 F. & F. 1087, however, Willes, J., ruled that where the deceased has contributed to his death by his own negligence, although there may have been negligence on the part of the prisoner, the latter cannot be convicted of manslaughter, observing, that until he saw a decision to the contrary, he should hold that a man was not criminally responsible for negligence for which he would not be responsible in an action. But in R. v. Jones, 11 Cox, 544, the facts of which are set forth post, p. 892, Lush, J., ruled that contributory negligence on the part of the deceased was not allowed as an excuse in a criminal case, and upon the case of R. v. Birchall, supra, being cited, stated that that case was quite at variance with what he had always heard laid down. And in R. v. Kew, 12 Cox, 355, Byles, J., held that contributory negligence on the part of the deceased was no answer to a charge of manslaughter. But it is submitted that evidence which in a civil case might be given to prove contributory negligence, might in a criminal case be relevant to show that the death of the deceased was not due to the culpable negligence of the accused. See R. v. Bunney [1894] 6 Queensland L. J. 80, 82, Griffith, C.J.

Animals.]—If a man owns an animal which is used to do mischief, and he, knowing it, allows it to go abroad, and it kills a man, this is manslaughter in the owner. Thus, if a commoner turns out on a common, across which there are public footpaths, a horse which he knows to be vicious, and the horse kicks and kills a child, the commoner is liable to be convicted of manslaughter, even though the child has strayed on to the common a little off the path. R. v. Dant (supra). But if he had purposely turned it loose, though merely to frighten people, and to make what is called sport, it is as much murder as if he had incited a bear or a dog to worry them. 1 Hale, 431; 4 Bl. Com. 197.

If a man, breaking an unruly or vicious horse, rides him amongst a crowd, and the horse kicks a man and kills him, this is murder, if the rider brought the horse into the crowd with intent to do mischief, or even to divert himself by frightening the crowd; 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 68; manslaughter, if done heedlessly and incautiously only. 1 East, P. C. 231. See 1 Hale, 475; 1 Hawk. c. 29, s. 12.

Carriages.]—If a man, driving a cart or other carriage, drives it over another man and kills him—if he saw or had timely notice of the probable mischief, and yet drove on, it would be murder; 1 Hale, 476; Fost. 263; if he purposely drove it furiously in amongst a crowd, it would probably be murder; and semble, if in a street where persons were much in the habit of passing, it would be manslaughter; Anon., 1 East, P. C. 263, per Holt, C.J.; if in a place where people did not usually pass, misadventure merely, provided he took that care which persons in similar situations are accustomed to do. Id. The degree of care to be used in driving depends on the number of persons or vehicles in the street; R. v. Murray, 5 Cox, 509 (Ir.); and if reasonable care and diligence is used, no criminal liability is incurred. Upon an indictment for manslaughter, it appeared that the deceased was walking in the road drunk, when the prisoner, who was in a cart driving two horses without reins, and going at a furious pace, ran over him and killed him; the prisoner had called out twice to the deceased, who, from the state in which he was, and the pace of the horses, could not get out of the road: Garrow, B., held this to be manslaughter. R. v. Walker, 1 C. & P. 320. Two persons were riding furiously on horseback along the road; one passed the deceased, who was also on horseback, but the other rode against him, and both fell, the deceased being killed by the concussion: Patteson, J., directed an acquittal of the first who passed; and as to the second, told the jury to find him guilty of manslaughter, if they thought that by furious riding he ran against the deceased; but to acquit him if they thought that the deceased's horse was unruly, and ran against the horse of the prisoner. R. v. Maston, 6 C. & P. 396. A foot-passenger was walking along the road by lamplight, when the defendant, who was near-sighted, drove along at the rate of eight or nine miles an hour, sitting at the time at the bottom of his cart, and ran over the foot-passenger and killed him; and it was held to be manslaughter. R. v. Grout, 6 C. & P. 629. The prisoner drove the deceased (a friend of his) in a trap to some races. At the races the former became drunk. This was noticed by the deceased, and before commencing the journey home together, he proposed to drive. This, however, the prisoner declined, and insisted upon driving himself. He did so, setting off at a furious rate, standing up and flogging the horse, and finally the trap was upset and the deceased was thrown out and killed: Lush, J., directed the jury to find the prisoner guilty of manslaughter if they thought that the carriage was overturned by the prisoner's culpably negligent driving, and that that caused the death of the deceased. R. v. Jones, 11 Cox, 544. If the driver of a carriage races with another carriage and urges his horses to so rapid a pace that he cannot control them, it is manslaughter in both drivers if in consequence the carriage upset and a passenger is killed. R. v. Timmins, 7 C. & P. 499 : R. v. Swindall, 2 C. & K. 230; 2 Cox, 141 (ante, p. 891) : R. v. Dalloway, 2 Cox, 273. A lad out of frolic took the trapstick out of the front part of a cart, in consequence of which it upset, and the carman, who was loading sacks therein, was killed; and this was held to be manslaughter. R. v. Sullivan, 7 C. & P. 641. The law as stated applies to bicycles and motor cars as well as to other carriages. R. v. Parker, 59 J. P. 793 : R. v. Thirgood, 63 J. P. 442 : R. v. Gylee, 73 J. P. 72 : R. v. Dalloz, 1 Cr. App. R. 258.

Engines and trains.]—Persons in charge of trains are guilty of manslaughter if a fatal accident results from gross and culpable negligence or recklessly negligent conduct. R. v. Trainer, 4 F. & F. 105 : R. v. Birchall, Id. 1087 : R. v. Gray, Id. 1098 : R. v. Elliott, 16 Cox, 710 (Ir.). Deliberate or gross neglect of the rules of the railway would amount to gross negligence, but honest errors of judgment would not. Id. A man was held not guilty of manslaughter who stopped a steam engine and left it, and in his absence another set it in motion, whereby a man was killed. R. v. Hilton, 2 Lew. 214. But it was held manslaughter where a man in charge of an engine left it in the care of an ignorant boy, by whose lack of skill another was killed. R. v. Lowe, 3 C. & K. 123; 4 Cox, 449, Campbell, C.J. Where a fatal accident was caused by a train running off the line at a place where the rails had been taken up without allowing sufficient time to replace them, and without giving sufficient warning to the engine driver, it was held that the foreman of platelayers was liable if his negligence was a material and substantial cause of the accident, although he was under the general directions of an inspector, and though the engine driver had not kept a good look-out. R. v. Benge, 4 F. & F. 504. Where the prisoner was employed by the owner of a tramway crossing a public road to warn persons when trucks were crossing the road, with strict orders never to be absent from his post, and the deceased was killed by some trucks, which were travelling on the tramway and crossing the road, of the approach of which he had received no notice from the prisoner, who was absent from his duty; it was held, that there being no duty imposed by statute upon the owner of the tramway to place a watchman where the tramway crossed the road, the prisoner was merely the private servant of such owner, and that, consequently, his negligence did not constitute such a breach of duty as to make him guilty of manslaughter. R. v. Smith, 11 Cox, 210, Lush, J. In R. v. Pittwood, 19 T. L. R. 37; 47 Sol. J. 42, 182, Wright, J., the prisoner, a gatekeeper on a railway, forgot to close the gates. A man drove over the line and was killed by a train. A contention that the defendant owed no duty to deceased, but only to the railway company, was overruled, and the prisoner was convicted of manslaughter.

Vessels.]—To make the captain of a vessel liable for manslaughter in causing a person to be drowned by running down a boat in which he was, it was held that it must be shown that the captain did some act which conduced to the death; and that a mere omission to do the whole of his duty was not sufficient.

R. v. Green, 7 C. & P. 156 : R. v. Allen, Id. 153; see R. v. Barrett, 2 C. & K. 343 : R. v. Haines, Id. 368. In the case of navigation of a river, the same care must be taken as on a public highway on land. R. v. Taylor, 9 C. & P. 672. Gross mismanagement of a boat by the person in charge, whereby it is upset and an occupant drowned, is manslaughter. R. v. Williamson, 1 Cox, 97; and cf. R. v. Waters, 6 C. & P. 328.

Explosives.]—The defendant made fireworks contrary to 9 & 10 W. 3, c. 7 (rep.), and kept upon his premises a quantity of combustibles for the purpose of his business as a maker of fireworks. In his absence, by the negligence of one of his servants, a fire broke out amongst such combustibles, and a rocket ignited thereby flew across the street, set fire to the opposite house, and caused the death of a person therein. The defendant was held not to be guilty of manslaughter, because the death did not happen by any personal interference or negligence on his part. R. v. Bennett, Bell, 1; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 27; 8 Cox, 74. 9 & 10 W. 3, c. 7, is repealed, but similar provisions are made by the Explosives Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 17), and the regulations made thereunder.

Mines.]—Where it appeared that the deceased was employed with others in walling the inside shaft of a colliery, and that it was the duty of the defendant to place a stage at the mouth of the shaft, and the death of the deceased was the direct consequence of the negligent omission on the part of the defendant to perform that duty, he was held to have been properly convicted of manslaughter. R. v. Hughes, Dears. & B. 248; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 209; 7 Cox, 301 : see R. v. Gregory, 2 F. & F. 153. Neglect of a duty to ventilate a mine leading to a fatal explosion of fire-damp renders the person on whom the duty lay liable to conviction of manslaughter. R. v. Haines, 2 C. & K. 368.

Neglect of the helpless.]—Premeditated neglect or ill-treatment by persons having custody, charge, or control of helpless persons, whether children, imbeciles, or lunatics, or sick or aged, by deliberate omission to supply them with necessary food, etc., if attended with fatal results, may be murder. R. v. Condé, 10 Cox, 547 : R. v. Bubb, 4 Cox, 455, cited with approval in R. v. Gibbins and Proctor, 82 J. P. 287; 13 Cr. App. R. 134, 138 : R. v. Self, 1 Leach, 137; 1 East, P. C. 226, and if the same result flows from gross neglect in such a case, the offender is guilty of manslaughter. R. v. Instan [1893] 1 Q. B. 450; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 86; and see ante, p. 872. As to the distinction drawn in such cases between misfeasance and mere nonfeasance, see ante, p. 871.

By s. 12 of the Children Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 67), post, p. 980, any person over sixteen who, having the custody, charge, or care of a person under sixteen, wilfully neglects such person in a manner likely to cause injury to the health of the younger person, is guilty of a misdemeanor. In R. v. Senior [1899] 1 Q. B. 283, the prisoner was charged with the manslaughter of his infant child, of which he had the custody. It was proved that he belonged to a sect known as the Peculiar People, who objected on religious grounds to calling in medical aid and to the use of medicine, and that he had wilfully and deliberately abstained from providing medical aid and medicine necessary for the child, though he knew it to be dangerously ill, but that in other respects he had done all he could in the best interests of the child; and that the prisoner had the means to procure medical aid which would have prolonged and probably saved the child's life. Upon these facts, it was held that there was evidence that the prisoner had wilfully neglected the child in a manner likely to cause injury to its health within the meaning of the Act, and that having thereby caused or accelerated the death of the child the prisoner was rightly convicted of manslaughter (a): and Russell, L.C.J., was inclined to the opinion that at common law, and apart from the statute, the result would have been the same. R. v. Senior [1899] 1 Q. B. at p. 292; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 175 (b). Refusal to allow an operation may be, but is not necessarily, such a failure to provide adequate medical aid as to amount to wilful neglect causing injury to health. The question is one of fact to be decided in each case on the evidence. Oakey v. Jackson [1914] 1 K. B. 216; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 712; 110 L. T. 41; 78 J. P. 87; 30 T. L. R. 92. As to evidence of means, see R. v. Jones, 19 Cox, 678. Under s 12 (1) of the Children Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 67, post, p. 980), failure to provide adequate medical aid may be evidence of cruelty under the section, and want of means to obtain the aid without resort to the poor law is no defence.

A young unmarried woman being about to be confined, returned to the house of her stepfather and mother. There she was taken in labour, during her stepfather's absence, and the mother did not take ordinary care to procure the assistance of a midwife, though she could have got one had she wished to do so. In consequence of such want of assistance the daughter died in her confinement. There was no evidence that the mother had any means of paying for the midwife's services. It was held, under these circumstances, that there was no legal duty on the part of the mother to call in a midwife, and consequently no such breach of duty as to render her liable to be convicted of manslaughter. R. v. Shepherd, L. & C. 147; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 102; 9 Cox, 123. A woman living with a man to whom she is not married and receiving money from him for the purpose of supplying food to her children is under a duty to see that they are properly fed and looked after and may be guilty of manslaughter when death results as an effect of her neglect so to do, or even of murder if she deliberately withholds food from them. R. v. Gibbins and Proctor, 82 J. P. 287; 13 Cr. App. R. 134, 139.

Poison.]—Where a man lays poison to kill rats, and another man takes it, and it kills him, if the poison were laid in such a manner or place as to be mistaken for food, it is, perhaps, manslaughter; 1 Hale, 431; if otherwise, misadventure only. Id. If an improper quantity of spirituous liquors is given to a child of tender years heedlessly and for brutal sport, if death ensues it will be manslaughter. R. v. Martin, 3 C. & P. 211: and see R. v. Packard, ante, p. 875. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 119, prohibits the giving of intoxicating liquor to a child under five except on the order of a qualified medical practitioner, or in case of sickness or apprehended sickness, or other urgent cause.

(a) The judgment contains a history of prior legislation and decisions on this subject, and refers particularly to R. v. Wagstaffe, 10 Cox, 530; 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122, s. 37 (rep.): R. v. Downes, 1 Q. B. D. 25; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 8; 13 Cox, 111; and R. v. Morby, 8 Q. B. D. 571; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 65; and definitely dissents from R. v. Hines, 80 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 309, Pigott, B. The decision was on the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1894, but is equally applicable to s. 12 of the Children Act, 1908, post, p. 980.

Weapons.]—If a man knowing that people are passing along the street throws a stone, or shoots an arrow over the house or wall with intent to do hurt to people, and one is thereby slain, this is murder, and if it were without such intent, yet it is manslaughter, and not barely per infortunium, because the act itself was unlawful: 1 Hale, 474; 1 Hawk. c. 29, s. 9; 3 Co. Inst. 57. If he discharges a gun merely for the purpose of unloading it, or the like, and death ensues—then, if it were in a place where persons were likely to pass, it is manslaughter; R. v. Burton, 1 Str. 481; otherwise, misadventure only. As to death occasioned by spring-guns, see Ilott v. Wilks, 3 B. & Ald. 304: Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 628: R. v. Heaton, 60 J. P. 508; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s 31 (post, p. 951). Where a man gave a loaded gun to his servant to protect a corn-field from deer during the night, with instructions to fire when he heard any bustle in the corn by the deer; and the master himself unfortunately rushed into the corn during the night, and the servant imagining it to be deer, fired, and shot his master; this was held to be misadventure. 1 Hale, 476; 1 East, P. C. 266. Where a man, finding a pistol in the street, brought it home, and imagining (from having tried it with a rammer) that it was not loaded, presented it in sport at his wife, drew the trigger and killed her; this was held to be manslaughter; R. v. Rampton, Kel. (J.) 41; but Mr. Justice Foster doubts the propriety of the decision, as the defendant took the usual precaution to ascertain that the pistol was not loaded; see Fost. 263, 264, 265; but clearly, if he took not this or other reasonable precaution, it would be manslaughter. R. v. Campbell, 11 Cox, 323: R. v. Jones, 12 Cox, 628. It has been held that killing by accidental discharge of a gun used without legal excuse, is manslaughter; R. v. Weston, 14 Cox, 346, Cockburn, C.J.: and see R. v. Skeet, 4 F. & F. 931, where the gun of a poacher, who was resisting lawful arrest by a keeper, accidentally went off and killed the keeper. If a man shooting at butts, or a target, by accident kills a bystander, it is misadventure; 1 Hale, 472; but this must be understood of cases where a proper precaution to prevent accidents has been taken; for if the target, etc., is placed near a highway or path, where persons are in the habit of passing, the killing would probably be held to be manslaughter. A., B., and C. went into a field in proximity to certain roads and houses, taking with them a rifle which would be deadly at a mile, and all three practised firing with it at a target which they erected in the field, from a distance of about 100 yards. They took no precautions of any kind to prevent danger from the firing. One of the shots, thus fired by one, though it was not proved by which one, of them, killed a boy in a tree in a garden near the field, at a spot distant 393 yards from the firing-point. It was held that A., B., and C. had been guilty of a breach of duty in firing at the place in question, without taking proper precautions to prevent injury to others, and were guilty of manslaughter. (a) R. v. Salmon, 6 Q. B. D. 79; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 25; 14 Cox, 494; and see R. v. Hutchinson (ante, p. 891) and R. v. Martin, Times, Nov. 7, 1867; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 414 et seq. A cannon which had burst and had been returned to an ironfounder was sent back by him in so imperfect a state that on being fired it burst against and killed a person: and it was held to be manslaughter. R. v. Carr, 8 C. & P. 163. The defendant having a right to the possession of a gun which was in the hands of the deceased, and which he knew to be loaded, attempted to take it away by force, and in the struggle which ensued the gun accidentally went off, and caused the death of the deceased. This was held by Campbell, C.J., to be manslaughter, inasmuch as the discharge of the gun was the result of the defendant's unlawful act in attempting to retake the gun by force. R. v. Archer, 1 F. & F. 351.

Killing officers of justice, and the like.]—If a man kills an officer of justice, either civil or criminal, such as a bailiff, constable, watchman, etc., in the legal execution of his duty, or any person acting in aid of him (whether specially called thereunto or not, 1 Hale, 462), or any private person endeavouring to suppress an affray or apprehend a felon, knowing his authority or the intention with which he interposes, the law will imply malice, and the offender will be guilty of murder. 1 Hale, 457, 460; Fost. 270, 308, et seq.; R. v. Porter, 12 Cox, 444. And the officer and persons acting in aid of him enjoy this protection, eundo, morando, et redeundo: therefore, if an officer, on his way to do his duty, is opposed and killed, or if he arrives at the place, and in consequence of opposition retreats, and on his retreat is killed, it is murder. Fost. 308, 309; 9 Co. Rep. 68 a and b; 1 Hale, 462; R. v. Phelps, C. & Mar. 180. Three things are to be attended to in matters of this kind: the legality of the deceased's authority, the legality of the manner in which he executed it, and the defendant's knowledge of that authority; for if an officer is killed in attempting to execute a writ or warrant invalid on the face of it, or against a wrong person, or out of the district in which alone it could legally be executed or if a private person interferes and acts in a case where he has no authority by law to do so; or if the defendant had no knowledge of the officer's business, or of the intention with which a private person interferes, and the officer or private person is resisted and killed; the killing will be manslaughter only: see Fost. 311, 312.

1. As to the legality of the authority.]—If an officer has a warrant from a proper magistrate to apprehend B. for felony; or if B. has been indicted for felony; or if the hue and cry has been levied against B.; in these cases, if B. or any of his accomplices kill the officer or any person joining in the hue and cry, or lawfully effecting or attempting to effect B.'s arrest, it is murder, whether B. is guilty or innocent of the felony charged against him. Fost. 318:

(a) R. and two others, under trial for burglary, were being reconveyed to gaol, when revolvers were thrown into the conveyance, and a fight ensued between the prisoners and the constables in charge. One of the latter having been killed by a shot fired by one of the prisoners acting in concert, R. was held guilty of murder. R. v. Rice [1902] 5 Canada Cr. Cases, 509; 4 Ont. L. R. 233.

R. v. Porter, 12 Cox, 444. But it is murder only if violence is used to prevent arrest, or to effect rescue or escape. Accidental killing in course of a struggle with the officers of justice seems to be manslaughter only, Id., and see R. v. Tooley, 2 Ld. Raym. 1296, 1300, and for the killing to be murder the accused must know or be told that the person seeking his arrest is acting as an officer of justice. R. v. Gordon, 1 East, P. C. 315; 1 Leach, 515; and see post, p. 903). The killing is not murder, but only manslaughter, where the warrant under which the officer of justice is acting is not sufficient to justify him in arresting or detaining a prisoner, or he has no warrant at all, and the case is one in which he has not at law authority to arrest without warrant. See R. v. Allen, 17 L. T. (N. S.) 222; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 420, Blackburn, J. This rule has been held to apply where the warrant is illegal, and void upon the face of it, see 1 Hale, 457; 1 East, P. C. 310, or issued with a blank in it, and the blank afterwards filled up; R. v. Stockley, 1 East, P. C. 310; and see Housin v. Barrow, 6 T. R. 122; 3 R. R. 135: R. v. Winwick, 8 T. R. 454: R. v. Hood, 1 Mood. 281; or is issued with an insufficient description of the defendant, e.g., if it were to take the son of J. S., Id., or if it is attempted to be executed against C. instead of B. But a mere informality in the warrant is no excuse for killing the officer who attempted to execute it. R. v. Allen, 17 L. T. (N. S.) 222; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 184, 414, where the decisions are considered; and see R. v. Fursey, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 543, and cf. 6 Id. 219 n. If a writ of execution in civil cases is correct upon the face of it, although the judgment be erroneous, or the proceedings irregular, if the officer, in endeavouring to execute it, is resisted and killed, it is murder; 1 Hale, 457; Fost. 311, 312. So in the case of process out of an inferior court, as the county court, the production of a warrant good on the face of it, and appearing to be issued in a case in which the court had jurisdiction, is sufficient to justify an arrest under it, and render the party, if he resists the arrest, liable to an indictment for an assault upon the officer. R. v. Davis, L. & C. 64; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 159. But if the writ were a nullity on the face of it, or if the warrant upon it were attempted to be executed by any other than the officer to whom it was directed (that officer himself not being present, or at least not acting in the arrest, see 1 Cowp. 65), the killing would be manslaughter only. If an innocent person is charged with a felony, and an attempt is made to arrest him for it without warrant, and he resists and kills the party attempting to arrest him; if the party attempting to arrest were a constable, the killing is murder; 1 Hawk. c. 28, s. 12; 2 Hale, 84, 87, 91; if a private person, manslaughter; sec 2 Hale, 83, 92; because the constable has authority by law to arrest in such a case, but a private person has not. And the same in all cases where the arrest is made or attempted to be made upon a reasonable suspicion of felony. See Samuel v. Payne, 1 Doug. 359. Upon an indictment for shooting at and cutting a constable with intent, etc., it appeared that the defendant had been given in charge to the constable for having a forged note in his possession, and upon the constable attempting to handcuff him, had fired a pistol at the constable and wounded him, and afterwards cut him with the cock of the pistol; it was argued that the charge imported no legal offence, for if he did not know the note to be forged, the defendant was no felon, and the arrest was illegal;

but it was held that the defect in the charge was immaterial, and that it was not necessary for the charge to contain the same accurate description of the offence as an indictment, and that the charge must have been considered as importing a guilty knowledge. R. v. Ford, R. & R. 329. But where the defendant took his tools and left his work, saying that "he would do for any constable that offered to stop him," and his master applied to a constable to take the defendant, but made no charge against him, and the master and the constable followed the defendant, and found him in a public privy as if he had occasion there, and the master said, "This is the man, I give you charge of him;" upon which the constable said, "Your master gives me charge of you, you must go with me;" and the defendant immediately stabbed the constable: it was held by a majority of the judges, that, as the actual arrest would have been illegal, the attempt to arrest when the defendant was in such a situation that he could not get away, and when the waiting to give notice might have enabled the constable to complete the arrest, was such a provocation as reduced the offence to manslaughter only. R. v. Thompson, 1 Mood. 80. If a constable arrests a man without warrant, upon a charge which gives him no authority to do so, and the prisoner runs away, and is pursued by J. S., who was with the constable at the time, and charged by him to assist, and the man kills J. S., it is manslaughter only, because the arrest was illegal, and J. S. ought to have known it: and therefore the attempt to take the prisoner was illegal also. R. v. Curvan, 1 Mood. 132. A constable, without warrant, arrested N. on suspicion of having recently stolen potatoes out of the ground, and called O. to assist him; a rescue was attempted, in the course of which one of the party killed O.; and this was held to be manslaughter only; for, without warrant, the constable could only arrest a person found committing such offence, under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 68 (rep.); R. v. Phelps, C. & Mar. 180. But if a constable, having a charge of felony against a defendant, takes him without a warrant, and the defendant, knowing the constable, kills him, it will be murder, even though the constable did not tell him of the charge, and the defendant, in fact, has done nothing for which he is liable to be arrested. R. v. Woolmer, 1 Mood. 334. So, if a man actually commits a felony, and another, in whose presence he committed it, attempts to arrest him for it, and is resisted and killed; 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 1; or if a person present at any affray, interferes for the purpose of restraining the offenders and keeping the peace and is killed; 3 Co. Inst. 52; 1 Hawk. c. 31, ss. 48, 54; Fost. 311, 318; or if a person present when another attempts to commit a treason or felony, lays hold of him in order to prevent him, and is killed; 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 19; the killing in these cases would be murder, whether the person arresting or interfering, etc., is a constable or not; for either has power to arrest or interfere, etc., in such a case. R. v. Hunt, 1 Mood. 93: R. v. Curran, 3 C. & P. 397: R. v. Price, 8 C. & P. 282: R. v. Weir, 1 B. & C. 288. So, where a man seen attempting to commit a felony on fresh pursuit kills his pursuer, it is as much murder as if the party were killed while attempting to take the defendant in the act. R. v. Howarth, 1 Mood. 207: see Beckwith v. Philby, 6 B. & C. 635. But where an affray, which has taken place out of the constable's view, is over, and there is no continued pursuit, the constable has no right to arrest the affrayer, unless there is an immediate danger of the affray being renewed. R. v. Walker, Dears. 358; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 123: see Timothy v. Simpson, 1 Cr. M. & R. 757; 4 L. J. (Ex.) 81; Baynes v. Brewster, 2 Q. B. 375; 11 L. J. (M. C.) 5. The prisoner was engaged in a disturbance in the street, when R., a constable, interfered to prevent it. A struggle ensued between R. and the prisoner. R. retired, and the prisoner went into and fastened up his house. After an interval of an hour, R. returned with W. and two other constables to the house, which was then fastened and all quiet. The prisoner from inside the house refused to admit the constables, who spent about a quarter of an hour in trying to get in, and finally burst open the door. They found the prisoner on the top of the stairs with a bill-hook in his hand, which he used against the constables to resist his apprehension, and with which in so doing he wounded W., one of the constables. Under these circumstances it was held that the apprehension was not lawful, as the first disturbance was at an end, and there was no fear of its renewal; nor was there a fresh pursuit by the constables, and the conviction of the prisoner upon an indictment for wounding W., with intent to resist his lawful apprehension, was therefore quashed. R. v. Marsden, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 131; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 80. Where the constable, standing outside the defendant's house, saw him hold a spade in a threatening attitude over his wife's head, and heard him at the same time say, "If it was not for the policeman outside I would split your head open;" in about twenty minutes afterwards the defendant left his house, after saying he would leave his wife altogether, and after he had proceeded a short distance in the direction of his father's residence, was taken into custody by the constable without warrant; the apprehension was held lawful. R. v. Light, Dears. & B. 332; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 1. If a person is taken before a magistrate for an assault, and whilst the warrant is being made up for his commitment, escapes, a constable may, by verbal directions from the magistrate, pursue and apprehend him; and if in so doing the constable is killed, it is murder. R. v. Williams, 1 Mood. 387. If a seaman is impressed, and the press-gang are resisted, and any of them are killed; if the press-gang at the time were under the direction of a commissioned officer, and such officer were then acting with them, the killing would be murder, otherwise only manslaughter; R. v. Broadfoot, Fost. 154; for the presence of a commissioned officer is necessary to the due execution of an impress warrant. Where two soldiers not belonging to a recruiting party, who were in a public-house, wished to enlist M., and gave him a shilling for that purpose, and M. afterwards wishing to go away, an altercation ensued, and one of the soldiers stood at the door with his drawn sword, and swore he would stab any person who attempted to come in, and the landlord of the house was stabbed in the scuffle; it was argued that the soldiers had authority to enlist M., and that what was done was merely to prevent his rescue; but the judges held that they had no authority, and that the offence amounted to murder. R. v. Longden, R. & R. 228. A constable, who had verbal orders from the magistrate to apprehend all thimbleriggers, attempted to apprehend the defendant and his companions, who were playing at thimblerig in a public fair: he succeeded in apprehending one of the companions, whom the defendant rescued, and afterwards, in the evening, seeing the defendant in a public-house, endeavoured to apprehend him, telling him that he did so for what he had been doing in the fair; the defendant escaped into a privy, and the constable, calling others to his assistance, broke open the privy and attempted to apprehend the defendant, who stabbed one of the party; it was held that the constable had authority to apprehend the defendant. R. v. Gardener, 1 Mood. 390. In R. v. Prebble, 1 F. & F. 325, a constable (out of the limits of the Metropolitan Police Acts) was held not to be acting in the execution of his duty in clearing a public-house, unless there be a breach, or danger of a breach, of the public peace therein; but see R. v. Hems, 7 C. & P. 312: and see now s. 80 of the Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7 & 1 Geo. 5, c. 24). A constable has no right to arrest a person for mere disorderly conduct, unless he be at least on the point of committing a breach of the peace, and the person so attempted to be arrested, and his companions, may use necessary force to prevent such an arrest. If, however, they use unnecessary violence, and kill the constable, they are guilty of manslaughter; and if the constable has given up his intention of making the arrest, and they know it, and still continue their violence, and the constable is killed, they are guilty of murder. R. v. Lockley, 4 F. & F. 155.

A special constable duly appointed under 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 41, is appointed for an indefinite time, and retains all the authority of a constable at common law, until his services are suspended or determined under the 9th section of that statute. R. v. Porter, 9 C. & P. 778.

By the Night Poaching Act, 1828 (9 G. 4, c. 69), s. 2 (post, p. 966), gamekeepers are empowered to apprehend persons "found upon any land committing any such offence as is hereinbefore mentioned," i.e., in s. 1; and though this 2nd section appears only to authorize arrest for the offences mentioned in s. 1, yet they may arrest the offenders, where three or more are out by night armed, etc., for although that offence is punishable by s. 9, it is still an offence under s. 1. R. v. Ball, 1 Mood. 330. To authorize an arrest under this statute, it is not necessary that the gamekeeper should give notice of his purpose; R. v. Payne, 1 Mood. 378; nor that he should have a written authority from his master for so doing, if the poacher is on his master's land or manor; R. v. Price, 7 C. & P. 178: see R. v. Fielding, 2 C. & K. 621; but he could not, under this statute, without authority, arrest him upon the land or manor of another person; R. v. Davis, 7 C. & P. 785; or even on land on which he has the right to preserve game. R. v. Addis, 6 C. & P. 388. If a keeper, attempting lawfully to arrest a poacher, is met with violence, and in opposition to such violence and in self-defence strikes or lays hands on a poacher, and is then killed by him or one of the gang, it will be murder. R. v. Ball, 1 Mood. 330: R. v. Whithorne, 3 C. & P. 394. Even an interference by a gamekeeper with persons found armed in the pursuit of game on the lands of an adjoining proprietor, without any attempt forcibly to apprehend, is not a sufficient provocation to reduce a malicious wounding and killing to manslaughter. R. v. Warner, 1 Mood. 380. A gamekeeper appointed by a person who has only a permission to shoot over land has no authority to apprehend a poacher in pursuit of game on such land, or to take a gun from him; and where such a gamekeeper endeavoured to do so, and in the struggle which ensued the gun went off and killed the poacher, this was held to be manslaughter. R. v. Wesley, 1 F. & F. 528; see R. v. Wood, Id. 470. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 11 (ante, p. 655), under which any person whatsoever may apprehend and convey or deliver over to a constable any person found committing any indictable offence in the night, has been held to apply to persons committing an offence against s. 9 of the Night Poaching Act, 1828 (9 G. 4, c. 69). R. v. Sanderson, 1 F. & F. 598.

2. As to the legality of the manner in which the authority is exercised.]—If the constable of the vill of A. attempts without warrant to suppress a tumult in the vill of B. and is resisted and killed, it is manslaughter only; for he had authority in such a case within the vill of A. alone. 1 Hale, 459. So, if a sheriff's officer attempts to execute a writ out of the proper county, and is resisted and killed, it is manslaughter only; 1 Hale, 458 et seq. A justice's warrant of commitment, directed "To the constable of G.," a parish in the county of L., was read as directed to the parish constable of G., there being such an officer, who must execute it, and its execution by a county policeman was held illegal, and a conviction for wounding a county policeman in the execution of such a warrant, with intent to resist the prisoner's lawful apprehension thereunder, was quashed. R. v. Sanders, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 75; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 87. And where the defendant was convicted of an assault on two police constables of the county police of Worcestershire in the execution of their duty, who were apprehending him in the city of Worcester under a warrant issued by two justices of and for the county of Worcester for his commitment to prison for default in payment of a fine but not backed by any justice of and for the city of Worcester, which city is a borough having a separate commission of the peace with exclusive jurisdiction, and a separate police force, and the defendant was not pursued from the county, but found in the city, it was held that the constables were not acting in the execution of their duty in so executing such warrant, and therefore that the conviction was wrong. R. v. Cumpton, 5 Q. B. D. 341; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 41. But by s. 10 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), constables and other peace officers may execute warrants out of their respective precincts, if the place where the warrant is executed is within the jurisdiction of the magistrate granting or backing the warrant. If an officer were to attempt the arrest of a man on Sunday (unless for treason, felony, or breach of the peace, see 29 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 6), and were resisted and killed, it would be manslaughter only. A constable who had a warrant to apprehend A., gave it to his son, who, in attempting to apprehend A. was stabbed with a knife which he happened to have in his hand, the constable being in sight, but a quarter of a mile off; it was held that the son had no authority to apprehend A. R. v. Patience, 7 C. & P. 775. A justice issued a warrant directed to the constable of N., and all peace officers in and for the county of C., commanding him or them to apprehend G. for disobedience to an order in bastardy. A police officer arrested G., but at the time of doing so the warrant was not actually in his possession. It was held, that the arrest was illegal, as the officer ought to have had the warrant ready to be produced at the time of arrest. Galliard v. Laxton, 2 B. & S. 363; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 123. To justify an arrest by a police officer under a warrant, for a misdemeanor, it is necessary that he should have the warrant with him at the time of the arrest. R. v. Chapman, 12 Cox, 4: Codd v. Cabe, 1 Ex. D. 352; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 101; 13 Cox, 202. So, where the prisoner against whom a warrant had been issued for his apprehension on a charge of threatening to shoot, was apprehended by a constable who at the time had not the warrant in his possession, and the prisoner drew a revolver, and shot the constable, it was held that the apprehension was unlawful, and the killing merely manslaughter. R. v. Carey, 14 Cox, 214, Lindley, J. It seems to have been suggested by the prosecution in that case that the prisoner, who was apprehended early in the morning while passing along a street with something evidently buttoned up in his coat, had been apprehended by the constable not under the warrant, but under the powers of a local Act which authorized constables to stop, search, and detain persons reasonably suspected of knowingly having or conveying anything stolen, and therefore that the apprehension was lawful. It was held, however, that there was no evidence from which the jury could infer that the constable reasonably suspected the prisoner of the possession of stolen goods, and that it lay on the prosecution to give such evidence. Id.

3. As to the defendant's knowledge of the deceased's authority or intention.]—When any officer in the legal execution of his duty, or a private person, is endeavouring to suppress an affray, or apprehend a felon, and is resisted and killed; the killing is murder if it appears that the slayer knew the officer's business or the intent of the private person, either expressly from the deceased, or impliedly from circumstances, R. v. Howarth, 1 Mood, 207; but it is manslaughter only if it appears that he was ignorant in this respect. 1 Hawk. c. 31, ss. 49, 50; Fost. 310, 311; 1 Hale, 458 et seq.: R. v. Gordon, 1 East, P. C. 315; 1 Leach, 515. Where a bailiff rushed into a gentleman's bedroom early in the morning, without giving the slightest intimation of his business, and the gentleman not knowing him, in the impulse of the moment, wounded him with his sword and killed him; this was held to be manslaughter. 1 Hale, 470. But where the bailiff or constable shows the warrant, 1 Hale, 461; or where it appears that he is known to the defendant to be an officer; as, for instance, when the defendant said, "Stand off, I know you well enough, come at your peril;" R. v. Pew, Cro. Car. 183; if after this the officer is killed, it will be murder. If the constable interferes to prevent any affray within his own vill, if he is killed by one of the inhabitants, or other person, who knows him to be the constable, it will be murder; if by a stranger who does not know him, it is manslaughter. So, if one of several knows him to be a constable, it will be murder in him, manslaughter in the rest. 1 Hale, 438. If a constable commands the peace, 1 Hale, 461, or shows his staff of office, Fost. 311, this, it seems, is a sufficient intimation of his authority. And in such a case it is not necessary to prove the deceased's appointment as constable; proof that he was accustomed to act as constable is sufficient. 1 East, P. C. 315. But private persons when they interfere must expressly intimate their intention, otherwise killing them will be manslaughter only. Fost. 310, 311. Where the outer door of a dwelling-house may be broken open, in order to execute process : e.g., in the case of a capias upon an indictment, 2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 3, a warrant to search for stolen goods, 2 Hale, 151, a capias utlagatum, 2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 4, a warrant of a magistrate for levying a penalty, Id. s. 5, a magistrate's warrant to arrest for any specific crime; Fost. 320 : 2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 3 : 1 Hale, 584; or where a person lawfully arrested escapes into a house; 2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 9; where one known to have committed treason or felony, or to have dangerously wounded another escapes into a house; Id. s. 7; where an affray is made in a house, and the constable wants to suppress it, or take the offender; Id. s. 8 : 1 Hale, 589; where there is disorderly drinking or noise in a house at any unseasonable time of night, particularly in inns, taverns, or ale-houses, and the constable or his watch wish to suppress the disorder; 2 Hale, 95; and in the case of forcible entry or detainer; 2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 6 (but not in the execution of writs in civil cases, Fost. 589, excepting writs of habere facias possessionem, Semayne's case, 5 Co. Rep. 91); in all such cases, before the outer door is broken open, there must be a demand of admittance, or something equivalent thereto, and a refusal; Fost. 136, 320; see Launock v. Brown, 2 B. & Ald. 592; otherwise, if the officer is killed, it will be manslaughter only.

In all cases, however, above stated to be manslaughter only, if there is evidence of express malice in the party killing, the homicide will be murder. See R. v. Stockley, 1 East, P. C. 310 : R. v. Curtis, Fost. 135.

Killing by officers and others.]—Where an officer of justice (including prison officers; Prison Act, 1898, 61 & 62 Vict. c. 41, s. 10), in endeavouring to execute his duty, kills a man, this is justifiable homicide, or manslaughter, or murder, according to circumstances.

1. Where an officer of justice is resisted in the legal execution of his duty (see ante, p. 874), he may repel force by force; and if, in doing so, he kill the party resisting him, it is justifiable homicide; and this in civil as well as in criminal cases. 1 Hale, 494; 2 Hale, 118. And the same as to persons acting in aid of such officer. Thus, if a peace officer has a legal warrant against B. for felony, or if B. stands indicted for felony, or if hue and cry is levied against B.; in these cases, if B. resists, and in the struggle is killed by the officer, or any person acting in aid of him, or joining in the hue and cry, the killing is justifiable. Fost. 318. So, if a private person attempts to arrest one who commits a felony in his presence, or interferes to suppress an affray, and is resisted, and kills the person resisting, this is also justifiable homicide. 1 Hale, 481, 484; Fost. 274. And this, not merely on the principle of self-defence (for the officer or private person is not bound to retreat, as in the case of homicide se defendendo, 1 Hale, 479 et seq.; ante, pp. 879), but upon that principle, and the necessity of executing the duty the law has imposed upon him, jointly : see R. v. Forster, 1 Lew. 187 : R. v. Daunt, 1 Crawf. & Dix (Ir. Circ. Rep.), 166. Still, there must be an apparent necessity for the killing; for if the officer were to kill after the resistance had ceased, 1 East, P. C. 297, or if there were no reasonable necessity for the violence used upon the part of the officer, etc., see R. v. Goffe, 1 Vent. 216, the killing would be manslaughter at the least. Also, in order to justify an officer or private person in these cases, it is necessary that they should, at the time, be in the act of legally executing a duty imposed upon them by law, and under such circumstances, that if the officer or private person were killed, it would have been murder (see ante, pp. 897 et seq.); for if the circumstances of the case were such, that it would have been manslaughter only to kill the officer or private person, it will be manslaughter at least in the officer or private person to kill the party resisting. See Fost. 318; 1 Hale, 490.

2. If prisoners in a gaol, or going to a gaol, assault the gaoler or officer, and he, in self-defence, kills any of them, it is justifiable, for the sake of preventing an escape. 1 Hale, 496; cf. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 41, s. 10.

3. Where an officer or private person, having legal authority to apprehend a man, attempts to do so, and the man, instead of resisting, flies, or resists and then flies, and is killed by the officer or private person in the pursuit; if the offence with which the man was charged were a treason or felony, or a dangerous wound given, and he could not otherwise be apprehended, the homicide is justifiable; 1 Hale, 481; 2 Hale, 118, 119; 1 Hawk. c. 28, ss. 11, 12; Fost. 271: R. v. Finnerty [1830] 1 Crawf. & Dix (Ir. Circ. Rep.), 167 n.; but the killing, if intentional, would be murder if the deceased were charged merely with a breach of the peace, or other misdemeanor, Fost. 271; 1 Hale, 481; 2 Hale, 117: R. v. Forster, 1 Lew. 187, Holroyd, J.: and see R. v. Dadson, 2 Den. 35; 3 C. & K. 148; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 57; or if the arrest were intended in a civil suit, 1 Hale, 481; Fost. 271; or if a press-gang kill a seaman or other person flying from them, R. v. Browning, 1 East, P. C. 312; and see R. v. Phillips [1778] Id. 308; 2 Cowp. 830: R. v. Borthwick [1779] 1 Doug. 207. But if homicide were occasioned by means not likely or intended to kill, such as tripping up his heels, giving him a blow of an ordinary cudgel, or other weapon not likely to kill, or the like, it would at most be only manslaughter. See Fost. 271.

4. In case of a riot or rebellious assembly, the officers endeavouring to disperse the mob are justified in killing them, both at common law, 1 Hale, 495; 1 East, P. C. 304, and under the Riot Act, 1 G. 1, st. 2, c. 5, if the riot cannot otherwise be suppressed. 4 Bl. Com. 179, 180: R. v. Pinney, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 11. As to the position of soldiers who fire on a riotous mob and kill rioters, see Report on Featherstone Riots, Parl. Pap. 1893-94, C. 7234.

5. Where a criminal is executed by the proper officer, in pursuance of his sentence, this is justifiable homicide. 4 Bl. Com. 178. But if it is done by any other person, 1 Hale, 501, or not done in strict conformity with the sentence, as, for instance, if an officer beheads one who is adjudged to be hanged, or the contrary, 3 Co. Inst. 52; 1 Hale, 501, it is murder.

6. Where in an attempt to impress a person not subject to impressment he resists and is killed, it is murder by the members of the press-gang. R. v. Dixon, 1 East, P. C. 313; R. v. Rokeby, 1 East, P. C. 312.

CONSPIRACY TO MURDER AND INCITING TO MURDER.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 4.]—All persons who shall conspire, confederate and agree to murder any person, whether he be a subject of his Majesty or not, and whether he be within the King's dominions or not, and whosoever shall solicit, encourage, persuade, or endeavour to persuade, or shall propose to any person, to murder any other person, whether he be a subject of his Majesty or not, and whether he be within the King's dominions or not, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not more than ten . . . years. [This section was new as statute law in England in 1861. Conspiracy to murder was a common law misdemeanor; see Greaves' Crim. Law Cons. Acts (2nd ed.), p. 34: R. v. Bernard, 8 St. Tr. (N. S.) 887; 1 F. & F. 240.]

Indictment for Conspiracy to Murder. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Conspiracy to murder, contrary to section 4 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., C. D., and E. F., on divers days between the —— day of —— and the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, conspired together to murder J. N.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than ten nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, and being of good behaviour, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Indictments for conspiracy to murder are within the Vexatious Indictments Acts. (See ante, p. 67.)

Conspiracy to murder is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove a conspiracy between the defendants, or between them and other persons, as the case may be (see post, tit. "Conspiracy"), and that the object of the conspiracy was to murder J. N. It is immaterial whether J. N. is a subject of the King or not, and whether he is within the King's dominions or not. It seems not to be essential that the conspiracy should have been formed in England or Ireland, Greaves' Crim. Law Cons. Acts (2nd ed.) 34; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 836; provided that some overt act is done within the realm or within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty; but see R. v. Bernard, 8 St. Tr. (N. S.) 887. The publication and circulation of an article in a newspaper may be an encouragement, or endeavour to persuade to murder, within this section, although not addressed to any person in particular. R. v. Most, 7 Q. B. D. 244; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 113; 14 Cox, 583. M. was indicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4. The encouragement and endeavour to persuade to murder proved at the trial, was the publication and circulation by him of an article, written in German in a newspaper published in that language in London, exulting in the recent murder of the Emperor of Russia, and commending it as an example to revolutionists throughout the world. The jury were directed that if they thought that by the publication of the article M. did intend to, and did, encourage or endeavour to persuade any person to murder any other person, whether a subject of her Majesty or not, and whether within the Queen's dominions or not, and that such encouragement and endeavouring to persuade was the natural and reasonable effect of the article, they should find him guilty. It was held that such direction was correct. Id.; cf. R. v. Bourtzeff, 129 Cent. Crim. Court. Sess. Pap. 284: R. v. Antonelli, 70 J. P. 4. As to the evidence necessary to prove solicitation or incitement to murder, see R. v. Fox, 19 W. R. 109 (Ir.): R. v. Ransford, 13 Cox, 9 (C. C. R.).

To constitute an offence against s. 4, it must be shown that there was some actual communication between the accused and the person solicited; but it is not necessary to show that the latter's mind was affected by the communication. R. v. Krause, 66 J. P. 121, Alverstone, L.C.J.; and see R. v. McCarthy [1903] 2 Ir. Rep. 146, 154.

Where A solicited B, who was at the time pregnant, to murder her child at birth and subsequently the child was born alive, it was held that there was a soliciting to murder "a person" within the meaning of this section. R. v. Shepherd [1919] 2 K. B. 125; 88 L. J. (K. B.) 932; 83 J. P. 131; 121 L. T. 393; 14 Cr. App. R. 26.

ATTEMPTS TO MURDER.

ADMINISTERING POISON, WOUNDING, ETC., WITH INTENT TO MURDER.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 11.]—Whosoever shall administer to or cause to be administered to or to be taken by any person any poison or other destructive thing, or shall by any means whatsoever wound or cause any grievous bodily harm to any person, with intent, in any of the cases aforesaid, to commit murder, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 2, modifications to get rid of the decisions in R. v. Jenning, 2 Lew. 130. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19 (Prevention of Offences Act, 1851), s. 5.—Conviction for misdemeanor on trial for felony.]—If, upon the trial of any indictment for any felony, except murder or manslaughter, where the indictment shall allege that the defendant did cut, stab or wound any person, the jury shall be satisfied that the defendant is guilty of the cutting, stabbing or wounding charged in such indictment, but are not satisfied that the defendant is guilty of the felony charged in such indictment, then and in every such case the jury may acquit the defendant of such felony, and find him guilty of unlawfully cutting, stabbing, or wounding; and thereupon such defendant shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for the misdemeanor of cutting, stabbing, or wounding. [See ante, p. 213. This enactment is limited to cases "where the indictment shall allege that the defendant did cut, stab, or wound," and therefore upon an indictment charging a felonious shooting with intent to do grievous bodily harm, and doing grievous bodily harm, with intent to do grievous bodily harm, it is not competent for the jury to convict of unlawful wounding. R. v. Miller, 14 Cox, 356, Bowen, J. The words "cutting or stabbing" are not used in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100.]

Indictment for administering Poison with intent to Murder. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 11, supra.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Administering Poison, contrary to section 11 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, administered to or caused to be administered to or to be taken by C. D. a poison or other destructive thing, with intent to murder the said C. D.

Felony; penal servitude for life, or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict.

c. 100, s. 11; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865). As to offenders under sixteen, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 104 (ante, p. 249).

The offences mentioned in this section are not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the administering of the poison by the defendant to the prosecutor, as stated in the indictment. R. v. Cadman, 1 Mood. 114, has been cited as an authority that it is necessary to prove that something more than delivery, such as swallowing, was essential. The case is differently reported in Car. Supp. 137 (see R. v. Dale, 6 Cox, 16 n.), and was dissented from in R. v. Walford, Essex Assizes [1899] 34 L. J. Newsp. 116, Wills, J. Where a servant, in preparing breakfast for her mistress, put arsenic into the coffee, and afterwards told her mistress that she had prepared the coffee for her, and she (the mistress) drank the coffee, Park, J., held that it was an administering within the meaning of the statute. R. v. Harley, 4 C. & P. 369. So also, where the defendant knowingly gave poison to A. to administer as a medicine to B., but A. neglecting to do so, it was accidentally given to B. by a child, this was held to be an administering by the defendant, as much as if she had given it to B. with her own hands. R. v. Michael, 2 Mood. C. C. 110; 9 C. & P. 356. Where the prisoner, having mixed corrosive sublimate with sugar, put it into a parcel, directing it to "Mrs. Daws, Townhope," and left it on the counter of a tradesman, who sent it to Mrs. Davis, who used some of the sugar, Gurney, B., held it to be an administering: for that, although it was intended for Mrs. Daws, yet as it found its way to Mrs. Davis, it was as much within the Act as if it had been intended for Mrs. Davis. R. v. Lewis, 6 C. & P. 161. In R. v. Ryan, 2 M. & Rob. 213, however, Parke, B., after consulting Alderson, B., expressed an opinion that an indictment for causing poison to be taken by A., with intent to murder A., was not sustained by evidence showing that the poison, though taken by A., was intended for another person; and doubted the propriety of the decision in R. v. Lewis; and accordingly, after the defendant had been convicted, he directed a fresh indictment to be preferred, charging the intent to be generally "to commit murder;" upon which the defendant was again tried, convicted, and sentenced. See however, R. v. Smith, Dears 559; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 29; 7 Cox, 51 (post, p. 914). Prove also the intent to murder, by circumstances from which that intent may be implied. See ante, pp. 352, 357, 400: R. v. Voke, R. & R. 531. Evidence of administering at different times may be given to show the intent. R. v. Mogg, 4 C. & P. 364. The defendant administered to a child two cocculus indicus berries entire in the pod, with intent to murder the child. The kernel is a poison; the pod is not, and will not dissolve in the stomach, and they were therefore harmless. This was held to be an administering of poison, with intent to murder, within this section. R. v. Cluderay, 1 Den. 514; 2 C. & K. 907; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 119; 4 Cox, 84.

Indictment for Wounding with intent to Murder. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 11, ante, p. 908).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Wounding with intent to murder, contrary to section 11 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, wounded or caused grievous bodily harm to C. D., with intent to murder him.

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 11. See the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant wounded C. D. (See post, p. 938). The instrument or means by which the wound was inflicted need not be stated, and if stated, would not confine the prosecutor to prove a wound, etc., by such means. R. v. Briggs, 1 Mood. 318. A wounding by any means whatever, whether by stabbing, cutting, or otherwise, will support the indictment under this statute. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 11. Prove the intent as directed (ante, pp. 352, 357). See R. v. Jones (post, p. 913). It is not necessary that the prosecutor should be in fact wounded in a vital part; for the question is not what the wound is, but what wound was intended. R. v. Hunt, 1 Mood. 93: R. v. Griffith, 1 C. & P. 298.

Power to convict of unlawful wounding.]—If the intent is not proved, the defendant may, by virtue of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 5 (ante, p. 908), be convicted of unlawfully wounding, and thereupon he may be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for the misdemeanor of unlawfully wounding: that is, by penal servitude for any period not less than three years, and not exceeding five years, or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 20 (post p. 936); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 5, is to be read as if the word "maliciously," as well as "unlawfully," had been inserted therein, with reference to the wounding of which the jury may convict the prisoner, and it is therefore essential to a conviction under that section that the act done which caused the wound should be done maliciously. The unlawful wounding of which the jury are at liberty to find the prisoner guilty under that section, is the unlawful and malicious wounding referred to in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 20 (post, p. 936): R. v. Ward, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 356; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 69. As to what constitutes a malicious wounding under the last-mentioned enactment, see R. v. Ward (supra): R. v. Martin, 8 Q. B. D. 54; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 36 (post, p. 942). Prior to the passing of 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58 (Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914) the defendant could not, on an indictment for the felony, plead guilty to the misdemeanor, for the acquittal of the felony had to be the act of the jury; R. v. Calvert, 3 C. & K. 201; but now by s. 39 (1) of that Act (ante, p. 168) he may do so. On an indictment against several for the felony, it seems that some may be convicted of the felony, and another or others of the misdemeanor, under this section (R. v. Cunningham, Bell, 72; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 66; see R. v. Archer, 2 Mood. 283: R. v. Elliott, 1 Cox, 36), on the principle that there may be a joint assault with a felonious intent in some only, R. v. Archer, supra. Where the facts in the opinion of the judge do not justify the jury in reducing the offence to unlawful wounding, he is not bound to inform them of their power to do so. R. v. Naylor, 74 J. P. 460 (C. C. A.).

ATTEMPTING TO POISON, SHOOT, DROWN, ETC., WITH INTENT TO MURDER.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 14.]—Whosoever shall attempt to administer to or shall attempt to cause to be administered to or to be taken by any person any poison or other destructive thing, or shall shoot at any person, or shall, by drawing a trigger or in any other manner, attempt to discharge any kind of loaded arms at any person, or shall attempt to drown, suffocate, or strangle any person, with intent, in any of the cases aforesaid, to commit murder, shall, whether any bodily injury be effected or not, be guilty of felony; and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . [This is taken from 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 3, with modifications.]

Sect. 19.—Loaded arms, defined.]—Any gun, pistol, or other arms which shall be loaded in the barrel with gunpowder or any other explosive substance, and ball, shot, slug, or other destructive material, shall be deemed to be loaded arms within the meaning of this Act, although the attempt to discharge the same may fail from want of proper priming or from any other cause. [This clause was new law in 1861, and was framed to get rid of R. v. Williams, 1 Den. 39; 1 C. & K. 589: R. v. Carr, R. & R. 377: R. v. Harris, 5 C. & P. 159. As to the effect of this definition, see post, p. 914.].

Indictment for attempting to Poison, with Intent, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14, supra.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Attempted murder, contrary to section 14 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, attempted to administer to or attempted to cause to be administered to or to be taken by C. D. a poison or other destructive thing, with intent to murder the said C. D.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865). As to punishment of offenders under sixteen, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 104 (ante, p. 249).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the attempt to administer the poison or other destructive thing, as stated in the indictment. As to what is "administering," see ante, p. 909. Putting poison where it is likely to be found and taken seems to be an attempt to murder within this enactment. R. v. Dale, 6 Cox, 14. Prove the intent, as in the last case. It is immaterial whether bodily injury be or be not effected.

The delivery of poison to an agent, with directions to him to cause it to be administered to another, under such circumstances that if administered the agent would be the sole principal felon, would doubtless come within the words "shall attempt to cause to be administered to or to be taken by," which are for the first time to be found in the present statute. It was held not an attempt to administer within 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 3 (rep.): R. v. Williams, 1 C. & K. 589; 1 Den. 39.

Indictment for attempting to Drown, etc., with intent to Murder.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ante, p. 911.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

As in last precedent.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, attempted to drown [suffocate or strangle, as the case may be] C. D., with intent to murder the said C. D.

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14. See the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the attempt to drown as stated in the indictment, and the intent as directed, ante, pp. 352, 357. It is immaterial whether bodily injury be or be not proved.

Indictment for Shooting with intent to Murder. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14, ante, p. 911.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

as on p. 865.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, shot at C. D. with intent to murder him.

If a wound was caused, add a count for wounding with intent to murder, as on p. 910, and also a count for wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm contrary to the Offences against the Person Act, 1861, s. 18. See post, pp. 936, 937.

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14. See the last precedent but one.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the shooting, as stated in the indictment, and that the gun was loaded in the barrel with gunpowder or some other explosive substance, and with ball, shot, slug, or other destructive material. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 19 (ante, p. 911). See R. v. Kitchen, R. & R. 95 : R. v. Hughes, 5 C. & P. 126 : R. v. Coates, 6 C. & P. 394 : R. v. Oxford, 9 C. & P. 525; 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 497. Prove also the intent as directed, ante, pp. 352, 357. In R. v. Jones, 9 C. & P. 258, Patteson, J., appeared to think it doubtful whether, under 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 3 (rep.) (which was in the same terms as the present statute), it must not appear, in order to make out the intent to murder, that that intent existed in the mind of the defendant at the time of the offence, or whether it would be sufficient if it would have been murder had death ensued; he said, however, that the circumstance that it would have been murder if death had ensued would be a good ground whence the jury might infer the existing intent, as every man must be taken to intend the necessary consequences of his acts. Upon an indictment for shooting at H. with intent to murder H., it appeared that the defendant intended to shoot at and kill L., but shot at H. by mistake, and Littledale, J., left it to the jury to say whether the defendant intended to murder H. : and upon their finding that he shot at H. intending to murder L., directed an acquittal. R. v. Holt, 7 C. & P. 518. That case arose under 9 G 4, c. 31, ss. 11, 12 (rep.) the words of which were " with intent to murder such person." But it would seem, however, from R. v. Ryan, 2 M. & Rob. 213

(ante, p. 909), that the intent must still be proved as laid; and therefore that an allegation of an intent to murder A. would not be satisfied if it appeared that, although A. was struck, the shot was intended for another person. But where the defendant was charged with wounding T. with intent to murder him, and it appeared in evidence that the defendant intended to murder M., and that he shot at and wounded T., supposing him to be M., and the jury found that he intended to murder the man at whom he shot, supposing him to be M., the Court held the conviction right. R. v. Smith, Dears. 559; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 29; 7 Cox, 51 : followed in R. v. Stopford, 11 Cox, 643; see also post, p. 939. To avoid such questions, the indictment should always contain a count charging an intent " to commit murder " generally.

As to what is sufficient evidence of common purpose, and a proper direction to the jury, when two persons are jointly indicted for shooting with intent to murder, when the shot is fired by one, see R. v. Pridmore, 77 J. P. 339; 29 T. L. R. 330; 8 Cr. App. R. 198.

On an indictment for shooting at a police constable with intent to murder, the defence set up was that the accused purposely shot wide in order to frighten. The Judge directed the jury, if they accepted this, to find the accused guilty on a count in the indictment which charged him with resisting or obstructing the policeman in the execution of his duty. R. v. Hufflett, 84 J. P. 24 (Salter, J.).

Indictment for attempting to Shoot, with Intent, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14, ante, p. 911.)

Statement of Offence.

Attempting to shoot with intent to murder, contrary to section 14 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

Particulars of Offence.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, attempted to discharge a loaded gun or pistol at C. D., with intent to murder the said C. D.

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14. See the punishment under precedent, ante, p. 911.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant presented a pistol (or gun) at C. D., and attempted, by pulling the trigger, to discharge it at him. If the weapon is " loaded in the barrel with gunpowder or other explosive material and ball, etc.," the fact that the prisoner fails to discharge it " from want of proper priming or any other cause " is no defence to an indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14, by reason of s. 19 of that statute (ante, p. 911). R. v. Carr, R. & R. 377 and the other decisions on statutes prior to 1861, cited ante, p. 911 (the effect of which was that the weapon must be so loaded as to be capable of being discharged), are no longer law. See Greaves, Cr. Law Cons. Acts (2nd ed.), 53. In R. v. Gamble, 10 Cox, 545, an attempt to fire off an unprimed pistol was held not to be within s. 14; but in that case the attention of the Court was not called to s. 19. An attempt to fire a revolver loaded in some chambers, which fails because the hammer falls on a barrel containing an empty cartridge case, is within s. 14. R. v. Jackson, 17 Cox, 104, Charles, J. So also where the prisoner pulls the trigger of a central-fire revolver loaded with rim-fire cartridges, unless he knows that such cartridges could not be discharged in such a weapon. R. v. Jones, Staff. Autumn Assizes [1901] 36 L. J. Newsp. 650, Kennedy, J. If B. draws a loaded pistol from his pocket for the purpose of murdering S., but before he has time to do anything further in pursuance of his purpose the pistol is snatched out of his hand—semble, that B. commits an offence within s. 14 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100; R. v. Brown, 10 Q. B. D. 381; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 49; 15 Cox, 199; and at all events, if he puts his finger on the trigger and attempts to pull it, and is only prevented from doing so by the forcible interference of bystanders, he commits that offence. R. v. Duckworth [1892] 2 Q. B. 83; 17 Cox, 495; overruling on that point R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483 (post, p. 930) and R. v. Lewis, Id. 523. In those cases, however, the weapon was not in a condition to be discharged. Prove the intent as directed, ante, pp. 352, 357, and see R. v. Lallement, 6 Cox, 204. To do the first of a series of acts intended to result in the murder of another is an attempt to murder. Placing the hand on a loaded revolver and drawing it from the pocket may be an attempt to murder. Not all such acts are attempts; an act may be mere preparation. R. v. Linneker [1906] 2 K. B. 99; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 385; 70 J. P. 293; 94 L. T. 856; 22 T. L. R. 495; 21 Cox, 196. Walton, J. On this case, see R. v. White [1910] 2 K. B. 124; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 854; 102 L. T. 784; 22 Cox, 325; 74 J. P. 318; 26 T. L. R. 466; 4 Cr. App. R. 258; and post, tit. "Attempts."

DESTROYING BUILDINGS BY EXPLOSIVES WITH INTENT TO MURDER.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 12.].—Whosoever, by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance, shall destroy or damage any building with intent to commit murder, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 12.)

Statement of Offence.

Destroying building by gunpowder with intent to murder, contrary to section 12 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

Particulars of Offence.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance, destroyed or damaged the dwelling-house, known as 76, Cromwell Road, with intent to murder C. D.

[The words "with intent to commit murder" generally have been held sufficient. R. v. Ryan, 2 M. & Rob. 213.]

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 12; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s 71 (ante, p. 865). As to punishment of offenders under sixteen, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 104 (ante, p. 249).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

As to the proof of the act charged, and of its having been done maliciously, see ante, pp. 741, 800).

As to the proof of the intent, see ante, pp. 352, 357, 396.

DESTROYING SHIPS WITH INTENT TO MURDER.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 13.]—Whosoever shall set fire to any ship or vessel or any part thereof, or any part of the tackle, apparel, or furniture thereof, or any goods or chattels being therein, or shall cast away or destroy any ship or vessel, with intent in any of such cases to commit murder, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . .

[This section re-enacts 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 4, with the addition of the words in italics and omission of the words "unlawfully and maliciously," and substituting "intent to commit murder" for "intent to murder any person."]

The punishment is the same as under the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

The evidence also will be the same as under the precedents above mentioned, together with proof of the intent, as directed ante, pp. 352, 357, 396.

OTHER ATTEMPTS TO MURDER.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 15.]—Whosoever shall, by any means other than those specified in any of the preceding sections of this Act, attempt to commit murder, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to . . . be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This enactment was new in 1861.]

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Attempt to murder, contrary to section 15 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, attempted to murder C. D. by [describe the act done in ordinary language.]

Felony: punishable by penal servitude for life or not less than three years, or by imprisonment with or without hard labour for not more than two years. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 15; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865). As to punishment of offenders under sixteen, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 104 (ante, p 249).

No offence against this section is triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant committed or procured the commission of the overt act stated in the indictment; and that it was done with intent to murder, which of course may be implied from the nature of the act itself, or may be proved by other evidence, or by threats or declarations of the defendant to that effect (see ante, pp. 357, 396 et seq.).

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 15, includes every attempt to murder not specified in any preceding section of the Act. Where a woman jumped out of a window to avoid the violence of her husband, it was held that he could not be convicted of an attempt to murder unless it were proved that he intended by his conduct to make her jump out. R. v. Donovan, 4 Cox, 399: but see R. v. Halliday, 61 L. T. 701; 38 W. R. 256, and other cases (ante, p. 872). It therefore embraces cases where machinery used in lowering miners into mines has been injured with intent that it may break and precipitate the miners to the bottom of the pit. And cases where steam-engines are injured in order to kill any person, fall within it; and cases of sending or placing infernal machines with intent to murder. R. v. Mountford, 1 Mood. 441; 7 C. & P. 242; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 841, 842 n. This section, however, does not embrace attempts to murder which are ejusdem generis with those mentioned in ss. 11-14 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100. R. v. Brown, 10 Q. B. D. 381; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 49; 15 Cox, 199. Therefore, where the prisoner drew a loaded pistol from his pocket, for the purpose of murdering the prosecutor, but before he had time to do anything further in pursuance of his purpose, the pistol was snatched out of his hand, it was held that the offence was not within s. 15, being ejusdem generis with the offences mentioned in s. 14, even if it did not actually come within s. 14, but semble that it did come within s. 14. Id.: and see now R. v. Duckworth [1892] 2 Q. B. 83 (ante, p. 915).

An attempt to commit suicide is not an attempt to commit murder within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 15, and is therefore triable at quarter sessions. R. v. Burgess, L. & C. 258; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 55. But it is an attempt to commit a felony within 3 G. 4, c. 114 (ante, p. 242), and punishable accordingly with hard labour. R. v. Mann [1914] 2 K. B. 107; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 648; 78 J. P. 200; 30 T. L. R. 310; 10 Cr. App. R. 31.

SECT. 2.

ENDEAVOURING TO CONCEAL THE BIRTH OF CHILDREN.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 60.]—If any woman shall be delivered of a child, every person who shall, by any secret disposition of the dead body of the said child, whether such child died before, at, or after its birth, endeavour to conceal the birth thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour: Provided, that if any person tried for the murder of any child shall be acquitted thereof, it shall be lawful for the jury by whose verdict such person shall be acquitted, to find, in case it shall so appear in evidence, that the child had recently been born, and that such person did, by some secret disposition of the dead body of such child, endeavour to conceal the birth thereof; and thereupon the Court may pass such sentence as if such person had been convicted upon an indictment for the concealment of the birth. [This section was taken from 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 14; and 10 G. 4, c. 34, s. 17 (1), with the alterations printed in italics. Under the former enactments the mother only could be tried for the offence, and the words, "by any secret disposition" have been substituted for "by secret burying or otherwise disposing of the dead body." For the history of the legislation on this subject, see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 773 et seq. As to indictments for murder, see ante, p. 865.]

Indictment against a Mother.

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Endeavouring to conceal birth, contrary to section 60 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of——, in the county of ——, endeavoured to conceal the birth of a child, of which she had been delivered, by secretly disposing of the dead body of the child.

Under the present statute a person assisting the mother in concealing a birth (who was formerly only indictable as an aider and abettor) is indictable as a principal, as the statute extends to every person who endeavours to conceal the birth of a child by a secret disposition of its dead body.

The proviso extends to a trial on a coroner's inquisition as well as on an indictment. R. v. Cole, 2 Leach, 1095; 3 Camp. 371: R. v. Maynard, R. & R. 240: and see 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, s. 8 (3) (ante, p. 61).

Misdemeanor: imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 60. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant was delivered of a child as stated in the indictment; that the child was dead at the time of the secret disposition of its body. R. v. May, 10 Cox, 448 : R. v. Bell, Ir. Rep. 8 C. L. 542 : R. v. Williams, 11 Cox, 684 : and cf. R. v. Bate, Id. 686. It is immaterial whether it die before, at, or after its birth, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 60 (ante, p. 919). And prove the concealment. A fœtus not bigger than a man's finger, but having the shape of a child, has been held to be a child within the statute. R. v. Colmer, 9 Cox, 506, Martin, B.; but see R. v. Hewitt, 4 F. & F. 1101 : R. v. Berriman, 6 Cox, 388, Erle, J.

Concealment—Secret disposition.]—Where a woman was delivered of a child, the dead body of which was found in a bed amongst the feathers, but there was no evidence to show who put it there, and it appeared that the mother had sent for a surgeon at the time of her confinement, and had prepared child's clothes, the judge directed an acquittal of the charge for endeavouring to conceal the birth. R. v. Higley, 4 C. & P. 366. But the fact that the mother had previously allowed the birth to be known to some persons is not conclusive evidence negativing concealment. R. v. Douglas, 1 Mood. 480 : cf. R. v. Cornwall, R. & R. 336. On the other hand, the denial of the birth only is not sufficient to convict her; she must be proved to have done some act of disposal of the body after the child was dead. R. v. Turner, 8 C. & P. 755. The putting of the dead body between a bed and the mattress, or under a bolster on which the defendant laid her head, was held to be a sufficient "disposing of" it to constitute an offence within 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 14 (rep.), though the disposition may have been only temporary. R. v. Perry, Dears. 471; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 137; 6 Cox, 531 : following R. v. Goldthorpe, 2 Mood. 244; C. & Mar. 335, which overruled the earlier cases in which it was held that a final disposing of the body must be shown. See R. v. Farnham, 1 Cox, 349, Patteson, J. Where, however, the prisoner put the dead body of her child upon her bed, and covered it over with a petticoat, where it was subsequently found by a policeman who entered the room, the jury were directed to acquit. R. v. Rosenberg, 70 J. P. 264, Jelf, J. And where a woman had placed the body of her child in an open box in her bedroom, Byles, J., although he left the case to the jury, intimated to them his opinion, that there was no secret disposition of the dead body, and the prisoner was acquitted. R. v. Sleep, 9 Cox, 559. So also where the prisoner put the dead body of her child into a box, and put this box into a larger box (neither of the boxes being locked or fastened, although they were closed), and then placed the boxes in a room much resorted to by the people in the house, and in such a position as to attract attention, Bovill, C.J., directed the jury that there was no secret disposition of the dead body. R. v.

George, 11 Cox, 41. There may, however, be circumstances attending the deposit by the prisoner of the body of a child in an unlocked box, which may warrant the conclusion that such deposit was a secret disposition of the body. R. v. Cook, 11 Cox, 542, Lush, J. Where the prisoner took the body out of the house and placed it in a pin-fold or pound, which was open to the sky, although locked, and surrounded by a wall five feet high, along which there was a public footway, Martin, B., held that there was no secret disposition of the body. R. v. Nixon, 4 F. & F. 1040, note (a). See also R. v. Clarke, Id. 1040. And to take the dead body of a child and leave it exposed in a public street does not constitute a concealment within the statute, but it is indictable as a nuisance. R. v. Clark, 15 Cox, 171, Denman, J. The most open exposure may, however, be a secret disposition, as, for instance, in the middle of Dartmoor, or on the top of a mountain in Scotland in winter. R. v. Brown, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 244; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 94; 11 Cox, 517, Bovill, C.J. In that case the following facts were held to be evidence to go to the jury of a secret disposition of the dead body of the child. The prisoner put the dead body of her child over a wall which was four and a half feet high and divided a yard from a field. The yard was at the back of a public-house, and entered from the street by a narrow passage. The prisoner did not live at the public-house, and must have carried the body from the street up the passage to the yard. The field was grazed by the cattle of a butcher, and the only entrance to it was through a gate leading from the butcher's own yard. There was no path through the field, and a person in the field could only see the body in case he went up to the wall, close against which the body lay. There was nothing on or over the body to conceal it. In R. v. Waterage, 1 Cox, 338, taking the body of a child to the house of a sister of the mother for burial in a churchyard was held not concealment. In R. v. Hughes, 4 Cox, 447, a woman placed a living child in a place of concealment. On her return she found the child dead and left it where it lay, replacing the materials by which the concealment was effected. This was held a concealment within 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 14 (rep.). In R. v. Opie, 8 Cox, 332, the discovery of the dead body of a child three days after birth in a tub covered over, behind the door of the privy of the house in which the mother lived, was held not conclusive evidence of concealment. But in that case Martin, B., expressed his dissent from the decision of the C. C. R. in R. v. Perry (ante, p. 920). Cf. R. v. Goode, 6 Cox, 318.

Identification.]—In order to convict a woman of attempting to conceal the birth of her child, a dead body must be found and identified as that of the child of which she is alleged to have been delivered. R. v. Williams, 11 Cox, 684; and see R. v. Bell, Ir. Rep. 8 C. L. 542. A woman apparently pregnant, while staying at S., received by post, on the 28th August, 1870, an R. newspaper, with the R. postmark upon it. On the same day her appearance and the state of her room indicated that she had been delivered of a child. She left for D. next morning, carrying a parcel. That afternoon a parcel was found in a waiting-room at S. station. It was the dead body of a newly-born child, wrapped in an R. newspaper of 27th August, 1870, bearing the R. postmark. There is a railway from S. to D., but no proof was given of the woman having been at S. station. It was held that this evidence was insufficient to identify the body found as the child of which the woman was said to have been delivered, and would not therefore justify her conviction for endeavouring to conceal the birth of her child. Id., Montague Smith, J. Where the only evidence against a prisoner for endeavouring to conceal the birth of her child was that she had been delivered of a child, the body of which was taken away by two other persons, but the prisoner did not know where it was put; this was held not sufficient to warrant a conviction. R. v. Bate, 11 Cox, 686, Montague Smith, J.

As to cases when a mother indicted for the murder of her newly-born child can be convicted of manslaughter, see R. v. Knights, 2 F. & F. 46 : R. v. Handley, 13 Cox, 79, and R. v. Izod, 20 Cox, 690 (ante, p. 873).

SECT. 3.

ATTEMPTS TO PROCURE ABORTION.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 58.—Use of poison or instruments to cause miscarriage.]—Every woman being with child who, with intent to procure her own miscarriage, shall unlawfully administer to herself any poison or other noxious thing, or shall unlawfully use any instrument or other means whatsoever with the like intent, and whosoever, with intent to procure the miscarriage of any woman, whether she be or be not with child [R. v. Sockett, 72 J. P. 428; 1 Cr. App. R. 101] shall unlawfully administer to her or cause to be taken by her any poison or other noxious thing, or shall unlawfully use any instrument or other means whatsoever with the like intent, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section is framed on 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 6, with the additions and alterations italicized.]

Sect. 59.—Supplying or procuring poison or instruments with like intent.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully supply or procure any poison or other noxious thing, or any instrument or thing whatsoever, knowing that the same is intended to be unlawfully used or employed with intent to procure the miscarriage of any woman, whether she be or be not with child, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude. . . . [This section was new law in 1861. An offence within this section may also fall within s. 58. R. v. Turner, 4 Cr. App. R. 203.]

Indictment for administering Poison to procure Miscarriage.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58, supra.)

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count.

Administering poison, with intent to procure miscarriage, contrary to section 58 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with intent to procure the miscarriage of a woman named C. D., unlawfully administered to, or caused to be taken by her, a poison or other noxious thing [called ——, or the nature of which is unknown, as the case may be].

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

To support this indictment it must be proved :—

1. That the defendant administered to or caused to be taken by C. D., the poison, etc., mentioned in the indictment: or any other substance or thing ejusdem generis. R. v. Phillips, 3 Camp. 73: R. v. Coe, 6 C. & P. 403. In R. v. Cadman, as reported in 1 Mood. 114, where the defendant gave the prosecutrix a cake containing poison, which she merely put into her mouth and spat out again, and did not swallow any part of it, it was held that the mere delivery to the woman did not constitute an administering within the meaning of the statute; although the judges seemed to think that swallowing it was not essential. But in R. v. Walford (Essex Assizes, Feb., 1899), 34 L. J. Newsp. 116, Wills, J., said that R. v. Cadman must be inaccurately reported, and held it unnecessary for proving administration to show that the poison was taken into the stomach (see ante, p. 909): and it is not necessary that there should be an actual delivery by the hand of the defendant. R. v. Harley, 4 C. & P. 309. Where the prisoner gave the prosecutrix the drug for the purpose of procuring abortion, and the prosecutrix took it for that purpose in the prisoner's absence, this was held to be a causing of it to be taken within 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 6 (rep.), of which 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58, is a re-enactment. R. v. Wilson, Dears. & B. 127; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 18; 7 Cox, 190: R. v. Farrow, Dears. & B. 164. It is not sufficient that the defendant merely imagined that the thing administered would have the effect intended; but it must also appear that the substance administered was either a "poison" or a "noxious thing." See R. v. Isaacs, L. & C. 220; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 52; 9 Cox, 228: R. v. Hollis, 12 Cox, 463 (C. C. R.). Where the substance administered is a recognized "poison," then it may be that, although the quantity administered by the defendant is so small as to be incapable of doing harm, that is sufficient to bring him within the statute. R. v. Cramp, 5 Q. B. D. 307; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 44; 14 Cox, 401. Where the substance is not a "poison," then although if when administered in small quantites it may be innocuous and useful, yet if the quantity administered by the defendant is noxious, the quantity of the substance so administered by him is a "noxious thing" within the statute. Id. On the other hand, if the substance, when administered in large quantities, is noxious, yet if in the quantity administered by the defendant it is innocuous, he is not guilty of the administration of a "noxious thing" within the statute. R. v. Hennah, 13 Cox, 547, Cockburn, C.J., and Hawkins, J. As to evidence of similar acts by accused, see R. v. Bond [1906] 2 K. B. 389; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 693; 21 Cox, 252; 70 J. P. 424: R. v. Palm, 4 Cr. App. R. 253.

As to proof of statement in the absence of the accused by the woman to whom the substance was administered, see R. v. Smith, 16 Cox, 170 (ante, p. 375). As to corroboration of her evidence, see R. v. Cramp, 14 Cox, 390, Denman, J. (ante, p. 456). Where a woman in respect of whom offences under ss. 58, 59, are alleged to have been committed is a witness for the Crown, corroboration of her evidence is required, R. v. M——, 72 J. P. 214, unless she has been acting as a police spy to detect the accused. R. v. Bickley, 73 J. P. 239; 2 Cr. App. R. 53.

2. It must be proved that the substance in question was administered with intent to procure the miscarriage of C. D. Whether it were, in fact, a substance likely or calculated to produce that effect, seems to be immaterial, provided the intent be proved, and the substance were a "poison" or "other noxious thing." As to mode of proving intent, see ante, pp. 352, 357, 396.

Although under s. 58, if a woman with intent to procure her own miscarriage does any of the acts mentioned in that section, she only commits a crime under that section if she is with child, yet she may be convicted of conspiring with other persons to procure her own miscarriage, although she may not in fact be with child. R. v. Whitchurch, 24 Q. B. D. 420; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 77; 16 Cox, 743.

If the woman dies in consequence of the felonious act, the person who committed it is indictable for murder: see ante, pp. 888 et seq.

Indictment for using Instruments to Procure Miscarriage.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58, ante, p. 922.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Using an instrument to procure miscarriage, contrary to section 58 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with intent to procure the miscarriage of a woman named C. D., unlawfully used an instrument or some other unknown means.

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58. See the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

The evidence will be the same as in the last case, with this exception, that instead of proving the administration of the poison, etc., it must be proved that the defendant used the instrument mentioned in the indictment, or some other means. Where the instrument alleged to have been used was a quill, which might possibly have been used for an innocent purpose, evidence was allowed to be given, in order to prove the intent, that the prisoner had at other times caused miscarriages by similar means. R. v. Dale, 16 Cox, 703, Charles, J. As to the principle upon which this kind of evidence is admissible, see ante, pp. 357, 359.

As to inciting a person to attempt to commit an offence against this section, see R. v. Brown, 63 J. P. 790, post, "Attempt to commit crime."

Indictment for procuring Poison for the purpose of its being used to cause Miscarriage. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 59, ante, p. 922.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Procuring poison to be used with intent to procure abortion, contrary to section 59 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, supplied or procured a poison or other noxious thing [called ——, or the nature of which is unknown, as the case may be], knowing that it was intended to be unlawfully used or employed with intent to procure the miscarriage of a woman named C. D.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not less than three years and not exceeding five years, or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 59; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, and being of good behaviour, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

In order to constitute the offence of supplying a noxious thing knowing that the same was intended to be used with intent to procure a miscarriage, the substance supplied must be of a noxious character (in the quantity in which it was supplied). R. v. Cramp, and R. v. Hennah (ante, p. 924); and it is not sufficient that, being harmless in itself, it might, if taken under a belief that it would procure miscarriage, produce that result by its mere action on the imagination. R. v. Isaacs, (ante, p. 923). If, however, the drug administered produces miscarriage, although there be no other evidence of its nature, this is sufficient evidence of its being a noxious thing. R. v. Hollis, 12 Cox, 463 (C. C. R.). If the drug supplied by the defendant is noxious, and is supplied with intent to procure miscarriage, the offence is complete, although the woman herself may not have intended to use the drug, and although no other person than the defendant may have intended that it should be used for the purpose of causing a miscarriage : R. v. Hillman, L. & C. 343; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 60; 9 Cox, 386 : and although the woman was not, and never had been, pregnant. R. v. Titley, 14 Cox, 502, Stephen, J. (a)

SECT. 4.

ASSAULT, BATTERY, WOUNDING, ETC.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 43.—Aggravated assaults.]—When any person shall be charged before two justices of the peace with an assault and battery upon a male child whose age shall not, in the opinion of such justices, exceed fourteen years, or on any female, either upon the complaint of the party aggrieved or otherwise, if the assault or battery is of such an aggravated nature that it cannot, in their opinion, be sufficiently punished under the provisions hereinbefore contained (s. 42) as to common

(a) The ratio decidendi of both these cases has been severely criticized in a colonial case upon the enactment in exactly the same terms as 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 59. R. v. Hyland [1898] 24 Victoria L. R. 101. There the police set a trap to catch a supposed abortionist, and wrote him a letter stating that a woman was pregnant and asking for something to cure her. In the mistaken belief that the woman existed, the prisoner sent pills containing a small quantity of a certain drug, and at the trial the question arose and was reserved, whether the prisoner could be convicted as the drug had not been supplied for an existing woman. The Court of six judges was equally divided in opinion, three accepting R. v. Hillman as decisive and as correctly defining the word "knowing" so as to include "believing," the other three holding that the word "knowing" could not be so extended, and that the words "intended to be used" applied to the person supplied, and not to the supplier.

In R. v. Sculley [1903] 23 N. Z. L. R. 380, the Court followed R. v. Hillman, but were of opinion that on a charge of "procuring" there must be evidence that the instrument, etc., was obtained for the forbidden purpose, and not merely that it was possessed and used for such purpose. R. v. Neil [1909] Queensland State Rep. 225, also followed R. v. Hillman in preference to R. v. Hyland. The High Court of Australia declined to entertain the appeal brought to decide between the two cases, holding that on the facts of the case there was no substantial miscarriage of justice. R. v. Neil [1909] 8 Australia C. L. R. 671.

assaults and batteries, they may proceed to hear and determine the same in a summary way; and if the same be proved, may convict the person accused; and every such offender shall be liable to be imprisoned in the common gaol or house of correction, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding six months, or to pay a fine not exceeding (together with costs) the sum of 20*l.*, and in default of payment to be imprisoned in the common gaol or house of correction for any period not exceeding six months, unless such fine and costs be sooner paid, and if the justices shall so think fit in any of the said cases, shall be bound to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for any period not exceeding six months from the expiration of such sentence. Provided also that nothing herein contained shall authorize any justices to hear and determine any case of assault and battery in which any questions shall arise as to the title to any lands, tenements, or hereditaments or any interest therein or accruing therefrom, or as to any bankruptcy or insolvency or any execution under the process of any court of justice. 58 & 59 Vict. c. 39 (Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895), s. 4.—Power to make a separation order in favour of a married woman on conviction of her husband of assaulting her.]—Any married woman whose husband shall have been convicted summarily of an aggravated assault upon her within the meaning of s. 43 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861 (ante, p. 926), or whose husband shall have been convicted upon indictment of an assault upon her, and sentenced to pay a fine of more than £5, or to a term of imprisonment exceeding two months, or whose husband shall have deserted her, or whose husband shall have been guilty of persistent cruelty to her, or wilful neglect to provide reasonable maintenance for her or her infant children whom he is legally liable to maintain, and shall by such cruelty or neglect have caused her to leave and live separately and apart from him, may apply to any court of summary jurisdiction acting within the city, borough, petty sessional or other division or district in which any such conviction has taken place, or in which the cause of complaint shall have wholly or partially arisen, for an order or orders under this Act :

Provided that where a married woman is entitled to apply for an order or orders under this section on the ground of the conviction of her husband upon indictment she may apply to the Court before whom her husband has been convicted, and that court shall, for the purpose of this section, become a court of summary jurisdiction, and shall have the power without a jury to hear an application, and make the order or orders applied for. Sect. 5.—Provisions which may be included in a separation order.]—The Court of summary jurisdiction to which any application under this Act is made may make an order or orders containing all or any of the provisions following, viz. :—

(a) A provision that the applicant be no longer bound to cohabit with her husband (which provision while in force shall have the effect in all respects of a decree of judicial separation on the ground of cruelty):

(b) A provision that the legal custody of any children of the marriage between the applicant and her husband while under the age of sixteen years be committed to the applicant :

(c) A provision that the husband shall pay to the applicant personally, or for her use, to any officer of the Court, or third person on her behalf, such weekly sum not exceeding two pounds as the Court shall, having regard to the means of both the husband and wife, consider reasonable :

(d) A provision for payment by the applicant or the husband, or both of them, of the costs of the Court and such reasonable costs of either of the parties as the Court may think fit. (See note to s. 4, supra).

Indictment for an Assault occasioning actual Bodily Harm. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 47, ante, p. 927.)

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Assault, contrary to section 47 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, assaulted C. D. thereby occasioning to C. D. actual bodily harm.

On this indictment the defendant may be convicted of a common assault. R. v. Oliver, Bell, 287; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 12; 8 Cox, 384: R. v. Yeadon, L. & C. 81; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 70; 9 Cox, 91.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years with or without hard labour.— 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 47; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

As to adjudging payment by the defendant of the costs of the prosecution on conviction, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 6 (1) (ante, p. 284).

The Court will not pass judgment for an assault during the pendency of an action for the same assault. R. v. Mahon, 4 A. & E. 575.

The Court may, with the assent of the prosecutor, if the circumstances appear to be such as to warrant that course, allow the defendant to plead guilty to a charge of assault, and inflict upon him a mere nominal fine, on the understanding that he shall make a compensation to the prosecutor. R. v. Roxburgh, 12 Cox, 8, Cockburn, C.J. But see post, tit. "Compounding Offences."

Indictment for Common Assault (Common Law).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Common assault.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, assaulted C. D.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding one year; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 47; or fine, etc., or order to pay costs, ut supra.

The indictment may be preferred by any person: and the right to prosecute is not restricted to the person aggrieved, even where the indictment is preferred after summary proceedings, in consequence of the decision of the justices, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 46, supra. See R. v. Gaunt, 18 Cox, 210; 60 J. P. 90 (C. C. R.).

Evidence for the Prosecution.

Assault.]—An assault is an attempt to commit a forcible crime against the person of another: such as an attempt to commit a battery, murder, robbery, rape, etc. It includes an attempt to commit a battery, and also a battery actually committed; and in an indictment for a common assault, if the prosecutor proves either, the defendant must be convicted. Striking at another with a cane, stick or fist, although the party striking misses his aim; 2 Roll. Abr. p. 554, pl. 45; drawing a sword or bayonet, or throwing a bottle or glass with intent to wound or strike; presenting a loaded gun at a man who is within the distance to which the gun will carry (see R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483: R. v. Baker, 1 C. & K. 254: Osborn v. Veitch, 1 F. & F. 317: Read v. Coker, 13 C. B. 850); pointing a pitchfork at him, when within reach of it; or any other like act indicating an intention to use violence against the person of another, is an assault. 1 Hawk. c. 62, s. 1. And if a person presents a firearm which he knows to be unloaded at another who does not know that it is unloaded, and so near that it might produce injury if it was loaded and went, off, this is an assault. R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483, per Parke, B.; but see R. v. James, 1 C. & K. 530, contra. In Hunter v. Johnson, 13 Q. B. D. 225; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 182, detention of a child after school hours by the master without lawful authority was held to be an assault. And see R. v. Linsberg (post, p. 1000).

An unlawful imprisonment is also an assault. Where the defendants took a new-born child from the mother, under pretence of taking it to an institution to be nursed, and put it into a bag, and hung the bag with the child in it on some palings by the wayside, this was held to be an assault. R. v. March, 1 C. & K. 496. But in R. v. Renshaw, 2 Cox, 285; 11 Jur. 615, abandoning a child in a dry ditch, where it suffered no harm from exposure, and was soon found, was held by Parke, B., not to be an assault.

Mere words, however, can never amount to an assault. 1 Hawk. c. 62, s. 1. So, if a man strikes at another, but at such a distance that he cannot by possibility touch him, it is no assault. Com. Dig. Battery (C.). But if A. advances in a threatening attitude towards B. to strike him, and is stopped just before he is near enough for his blow to take effect, it is an assault. Stephens v. Myers, 4 C. & P. 349. The causing a deleterious drug to be taken by another was held to be an assault in R. v. Button, 8 C. & P. 660; but that decision is now overruled: see R. v. Dilworth, 2 M. & Rob. 351: R. v. Hanson, 2 C. & K. 912: R. v. Walkden, 1 Cox, 282.

Battery.]—A battery, in the legal acceptation of the word, includes beating and wounding. To beat, also in the legal acceptation of the term, means not merely to strike forcibly with the hand, or a stick, or the like, but includes every touching or laying hold (however trifling) of another's person or clothes, in an angry, revengeful, rude, insolent, or hostile manner; 1 Hawk. c. 62, s. 2; see Rawlings v. Till, 3 M. & W. 28: Coward v. Baddeley, 4 H. & N. 478; 28 L. J. (Ex.) 260; as, for instance, thrusting or pushing him in anger: Cole

v. Turner, 6 Mod. 149, Holt, C.J.; holding him by the arm; spitting in his face; R. v. Cotesworth, 6 Mod. 172; jostling him out of the way; Cole v. Turner, supra; pushing another man against him; Bull (N. P.) 16; throwing a squib at him; Scott v. Shepherd, 2 W. Bl. 892; striking a horse upon which he is riding, whereby he is thrown; Dodwell v. Burford, 1 Mod. 24; Anon., W. Jones, 444; or the like. If a man strikes at another with a cane or fist, or throws a bottle at him, or the like, if he misses him it is an assault; if he hits him it is a battery. A wounding is where the violence is so great as to draw blood, by striking or stabbing with a sword, knife, or other instrument, or by shooting, or by striking with a cudgel or fist, or the like. (See post, p. 938.)

Actual bodily harm.]—"Actual bodily harm includes any hurt or injury calculated to interfere with the health or comfort of the prosecutor: it need not be an injury of a permanent character; nor need it amount to what would be considered to be grievous bodily harm." (See post, p. 940.)

Consent.]—As a general rule, if consent is freely given by a rational and sober person, knowing the nature of the act, it is an answer to the indictment, unless the consent is to bodily injury amounting to mayhem, or to an injury constituting a breach of the public peace. See Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 164-166: R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 66; 15 Cox, 46. A magistrate has no right to order an examination of the person of a prisoner, and therefore an examination by medical men, in pursuance of such an order, of the person of a female, in custody upon the charge of concealing the birth of her illegitimate child, and against her consent, is an assault. Agnew v. Jobson, 13 Cox, 625, Lopes, J. For the American authorities on the physical examination of prisoners, see State of Iowa v. Height [1902] 94 Amer. State Reports, 323, and notes. If a master takes indecent liberties with a female scholar, without her consent, though she does not resist, he may be convicted of a common assault. R. v. Nichol, R. & R. 130: see R. v. Day, 9 C. & P. 722, in which case Coleridge J., drew a distinction between consent and submission. If a medical man unnecessarily strips a female patient naked, under the pretence that he cannot otherwise judge of her illness, it is an assault if he himself takes off her clothes. R. v. Rosinski, 1 Mood. 19.

Where a medical man had connection with a girl fourteen years of age, under the pretence that he was thereby treating her medically for the complaint for which he was attending her, she making no resistance solely from the bonâ fide belief that such was the case, this was held to be certainly an assault and probably a rape. R. v. Case, 1 Den. 580; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 174; 4 Cox, 220. Prior to 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 3, sub-s. 2 (post, p. 1035), there seems to have been no doubt that the prisoner under such circumstances as those in R. v. Case, supra, might be indicted for rape. R. v. Flattery, 2 Q. B. D. 410; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 130. In R. v. O'Shay, 19 Cox, 76, Ridley, J., held that the effect of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (s. 3, sub-s. 2), is to make R. v. Flattery no longer law, and that consent, however obtained, is an answer to an indictment for rape except in the cases within the last paragraph of s. 4 of that Act. But the learned judge appears to have directed the jury that if satisfied that the accused had obtained his purpose by fraud, they might convict of indecent assault. Cf. Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 207. It was laid down by Willes, J., in R. v. Bennett, 4 F. & F. 1105, that assault is within the rule that fraud vitiates consent. Where, therefore, the prisoner, who had venereal disease, induced a girl of thirteen years of age, who was ignorant of his condition, to have connection with him, and he infected her, it was held that he was guilty of an indecent assault. R. v. Bennett, supra. The prisoner might also, under a similar state of facts, be indicted for an assault occasioning actual bodily harm. R. v. Sinclair, 13 Cox, 28, Shee, J.: and see Hegarty v. Shine, 4 L. R. Ir. 288; 14 Cox, 145. The cases of R. v. Bennett and R. v. Sinclair, and the maxim that fraud vitiates consent, at all events in any wide application of that maxim, were the subjects of unfavourable comment by some among the majority of judges who decided R. v. Clarence, 22 Q. B. D. 23; 58 L. J. (M. C.) 10; 16 Cox, 511. The circumstances of that case were, however, very special (see post, p. 942), and R. v. Bennett and R. v. Sinclair were not expressly overruled. Pollock, B., who was one of the majority, stated that although he saw great difficulty in adopting those cases in their integrity, he was not prepared to say that they should be overruled, as in cases of a similar kind, which might well arise, they were undoubtedly important and useful in the administration of the criminal law. But where there is full consent to the intercourse, it is difficult, since R. v. Clarence, to contend that concealment of the physical condition of the accused is such a fraud as to create criminal liability. See per Wills, J., 22 Q. B. D. 32-36.

If parish officers cut off the hair of a pauper in the poorhouse by force and against her will, it is an assault. Forde v. Skinner, 4 C. & P. 239.

In the case of an indecent assault on children of either sex, under the age of thirteen, consent is no defence. 43 & 44 Vict. c. 45, s. 2 (post, p. 1032).

Although, as a general proposition, it is true that there can be no assault unless the act charged as such be done without the consent of the person alleged to have been assaulted, this rule does not extend to cases where the alleged assault is of such a nature or is inflicted under such circumstances, that its infliction is injurious to the public as well as to the person injured, and involves an actual breach of the peace. R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 66; 15 Cox, 46. Therefore, in the case of a prize-fight, each of the fighters, and all persons aiding and abetting therein, are guilty of an assault. Id.

Evidence for the Defendant.

The defendant must prove either that he is not guilty at all, or that the facts of the case do not amount to an assault or battery, or that he was justified or excused in law in what he did; see R. v. Meredith, 8 C. & P. 589; or that the complaint has been already disposed of upon summary application before two justices. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 44, 45 (see ante, p. 161). The first two defences are always given in evidence under the general issue both in civil and criminal cases; matter of justification or excuse is specially pleaded in civil actions, but is always given in evidence under the general issue in criminal cases, except in defamatory libel. The defence of previous acquittal or conviction by justices should be specially pleaded. (See ante, pp. 155, 160).

1. Misadventure.]—It is a good defence to prove that the alleged battery happened by misadventure. If a horse runs away with his rider, and runs against a man, it is no battery. Gibbon v. Pepper, 2 Salk. 637; 1 Ld. Raym. 38: Stanley v. Powell [1891] 1 Q. B. 86, 90; 60 L. J. (Q. B.) 52, Denman, J. If a soldier, in his ranks, discharges his gun, and a man unexpectedly passes before him at the time, and is hurt by it, it is no battery. Weaver v. Ward, Hob. 134; and see R. v. Gill, 1 Str. 190. There are many cases of accidents which cannot be set up as a defence in an action for trespass to the person, that would certainly be a good defence upon an indictment. In civil cases, the accident must have been unintentional, and not due to negligence or any want of caution, if the defendant is to be excused. See Stanley v. Powell, supra, and cases there collected, and 2 Rolle Abr. 548 (G.): Wakeman v. Robinson, 1 Bing. 213. But in criminal cases, it may be deemed a general rule, that the same facts which would make a killing homicide by misadventure (see ante, pp. 870 et seq.) will be good defence upon an indictment for a battery.

2. Consent.]—It is as a general rule a good defence that the person complaining of assault or battery consented to the acts complained of. (See ante, p. 931).

3. Lawful sport.]—It is a good defence to prove that the alleged battery was merely an amicable contest; as, that the defendant wrestled with the prosecutor for a wager. Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 18. So, that it happened by accident whilst the defendant was engaged in some sport or game which was neither unlawful nor dangerous (see ante, p. 879) is a good defence.

4. Lawful correction.]—It is a good defence to prove that the alleged battery was merely the correcting of a child by its parent, the correcting of an apprentice or scholar by his master, or the punishment of the criminal by a proper officer; Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 19; 1 Hawk. c. 60, s. 23; c. 62, s. 2; and see Watson v. Christie, 2 B. & P. 224; provided the correction be moderate in the manner, the instrument, and the quantity of it (see ante, p. 885), or that the criminal is punished in the manner appointed by the law. It has been held that the defendant may justify even a mayhem, if done by him as a military officer, for disobedience of orders. Lane v. Hegberg, Bull. (N. P.) 19, cit. (As to the lawful modes of inflicting corporal punishment on criminals, see ante, pp. 244-6.)

5. Self-defence.]—It is a good defence, in justification even of a wounding or mayhem, to prove that the prosecutor assaulted or beat the defendant first; and that the defendant committed the alleged battery merely in his own defence. Cockcroft v. Smith, 2 Salk. 642; 1 Ld. Raym. 177; and see 1 Sid. 246; 1 Rolle Rep. 19; 3 Salk. 46: R. v. Knock, 14 Cox, 1 (ante, p. 880). If he proves an assault merely, as, for instance, that the prosecutor lifted up his staff and offered to strike him, it is sufficient to justify the defendant's striking him: for he need not in such a case stay till the other has actually struck him. Bull. (N. P.) 18; 2 Rolle Abr. 547, l. 37, approved and adopted in R. v. Deana [1909] 73 J. P. 255 (C. C. A.). So a husband may justify a battery in defence of his wife, a wife in defence of her husband, a parent in defence of his child, a child in defence of his parent, a master in defence of his servant, and a servant in defence of his master. 2 Rolle Abr. 546 (D.); 1 Hawk. c. 60, ss. 23, 24. But in all these cases the battery must be such only as was necessary to the defence of the party or his relation; for if it were excessive, if it were greater than was necessary for mere defence, or if it were after all danger from the assailant was past, and by way of revenge, the prior assault will be no justification. Bull. (N. P.) 18; R. v. Driscoll, C. & Mar. 214: Anon., 2 Law. 48, Farke, B. R. v. Morse, 4 Cr. App. R. 50. It is a sufficient answer to this defence, to prove that the first assault was justifiable. Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 15; 1 Salk. 407; Carth. 280 (see ante, pp. 879, 886 et seq.).

6. Defence of property.]—The defendant may justify a battery by proving that he committed it in defence of his possession; as, for instance, to remove the prosecutor out of the defendant's close or house; or to prevent him from entering it; 2 Rolle Abr. 548, l. 25; to restrain him from taking or destroying his goods, etc.; 2 Rolle Abr. 549, l. 7; from taking or rescuing cattle, etc., in his custody upon a distress; Id. l. 16; 2 Bro. Ent. 253; or the like. In the case of a trespass in law merely, without actual force, the owner of the close, etc., must first request the trespasser to depart, before he can justify laying his hand on him for the purpose of removing him; and, even if he refuses, he can only justify so much force as is necessary to remove him. Weaver v. Bush, 8 T. R. 78. But if the trespasser uses force, then the owner may oppose force to force; Green v. Goddard, 2 Salk. 641; Weaver v. Bush, supra: Tullay v. Reed, 1 C. & P. 6; and in such case, if he is assaulted or beaten, he may justify even a wounding or mayhem in self-defence, as above mentioned. In answer, however, to a justification in defence of his possession, the other party may prove that the battery was excessive; King v. Tebbart, Skin. 387; or justify the alleged trespass on the defendant's possession, by proving that he had a right of way over the close, or the like (see ante, p. 886).

7. Execution of process.]—It is a good defence to prove that the defendant, as an officer of justice, arrested the prosecutor by virtue of a certain writ of process, which is the alleged battery complained of. 2 Rolle Abr. 547 (A.). A sheriff's officer, however, can only justify laying his hand upon a man, in order to arrest him upon a writ of process; Harrison v. Hodgson, 8 L. J. (K. B.) 223; 10 B. & C. 445; 5 Man. & Ry. 392; unless he resist, or an attempt be made to rescue him, or to prevent or hinder the arrest; Williams v. Jones, Cas. (K. B.) temp. Hardw. 298; 2 Str. 1049: Truscott v. Carpenter, 1 Ld. Raym. 229, 232: Levy v. Edwards, 1 C. & P. 40; and even then he can justify no greater degree of force than was necessary in order to secure the prisoner. And the same as to officers of justice, and persons acting in their aid, arresting on suspicion of felony, without warrant; and as to private persons arresting men committing felonies in their presence, see ante, pp. 897 et seq. So a man may justify laying his hand upon another to prevent him from fighting, or committing a breach of the peace; Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 16; or to prevent him from rescuing goods taken in execution; Bridgwater v. Bythway, 3 Lev. 113; or the like. See Glover v. Hynde, 1 Mod. 168; 2 Rolle Abr. 546, l. 40. Yet, even in these cases, he must not use more force than is requisite to restrain the other party, otherwise he cannot avail himself of the threatened breach of the peace, etc., as a justification. A coroner has a discretion to decide on the degree of publicity to be allowed in an inquest before him, and may justify the forcible exclusion of any person from his court. Garnett v. Ferrand, 5 L. J. (K. B.) 221; 6 B. & C. 611. In Cox v. Coleridge, 1 B. & C. 37, it was held that a magistrate, on a preliminary inquiry into a case of felony, might justify a forcible exclusion of a party from the justice-room, even though he was the attorney of the party accused. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 19, provides that such an inquiry is not to be deemed to be held in open court, and that the justices may exclude any person except the counsel or solicitor of the accused. See s. 17. (a) But if the inquiry is final and of a judicial nature, it must be public. Daubney v. Cooper, 8 L. J. (K. B.) 21; 10 B. & C. 237; see also Willis v. Maclachlan, 1 Ex. D. 376; 45 L. J. (Ex.) 689; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 12; 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 20 (1), unless a statute authorizes hearing in camera, e.g., under 8 Edw. 7, c. 45, s. 5, and 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 114 (see ante, p. 199). Serving process by thrusting a document into the fold of a man's coat is not necessarily an assault. Rose v. Kempthorne, 22, Cox, 356; 75 J. P. 71.

8. Previous summary trial.]—It is a good defence to show that the complaint has been disposed of by two justices, either by conviction or dismissal of the case, provided, in the former case, the defendant has paid the penalty, and suffered the imprisonment awarded: and in the latter, the magistrates have dismissed the case, because it was justified, or so trifling as not to merit punishment, or not proved, and this be forthwith certified under their hands. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 44, 45 (ante, p. 161). As to the mode of pleading this defence and its effect, see ante, pp. 155, 160. It is to be observed that these provisions do not prevent the prosecutor from preferring his indictment in the first instance, if he thinks fit.

(a) In 1884 the Home Office adopted the view, on the advice of the law officers, that s. 19 was superseded by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 20 (1). See Douglas, Summary Jurisdiction Procedure (9th ed., 350). But in 1894 the Secretary of State came to the conclusion that s. 19 remained in full force. See 58 J. P. 772. Boulter v. Kent, JJ. [1897] A. C. 556.

SHOOTING, WOUNDING, ETC., WITH INTENT TO MAIM, ETC.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 18.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously by any means whatsoever wound or cause any grievous bodily harm to any person, or shoot at any person, or, by drawing a trigger, or in any other manner attempt to discharge any kind of loaded arms at any person with intent, in any of the cases aforesaid, to maim, disfigure, or disable any person, or to do some other grievous bodily harm to any person, or with intent to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of any person, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 4, with the modifications in italics, and the omission of the words "cut" and "stab." The section extends to three species of the assaults: namely, 1. To "wound or cause any grievous bodily harm to any person;" 2. To "shoot at" any person; 3. To attempt, "by drawing a trigger, or in any other manner," to discharge any kind of loaded arms at any person. And each of these may be done with any one of the following intents: namely, 1. To maim; 2. To disfigure; 3. To disable; 4. To do some other grievous bodily harm; 5. To resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of any person. (a) The offence was held not to be one involving bodily injury to a child under sixteen, within 57 & 58 Vict. c. 41, s. 12, and Sched. R. v. Roberts, 18 Cox, 530. That enactment was repealed and re-enacted by 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, and is now represented by 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 12, post, p. 980. It is submitted that R. v. Roberts was wrongly decided: see post, p. 994.]

Sect. 20.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously wound or inflict any grievous bodily harm upon any other person, either with or without any weapon or instrument, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude. . . . [This section re-enacts 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 4. The maximum punishment is now five years' penal servitude, by virtue of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69 (Penal Servitude Act, 1891), s. 1 (1), ante, p. 238. See R. v. Peters, 1 Cr. App. R. 141. For indictment, see post, p. 937.

(a) Under this section the intent to maim, etc., is an essential element in the offence, and must be charged and found, and the malicious intent must be found. See Slaughenwhite v. R. [1905] 9 Canada Cr. Cas. 173.

Indictment for Wounding, with intent to Maim, etc.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 18.)

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count:

Wounding with intent, contrary to section 18 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, wounded C. D., with intent to do him grievous bodily harm, or to maim, disfigure, or disable him, or to resist the lawful apprehension of the said A. B.

[First Count.—Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 18; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

For punishment of offenders under sixteen, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 104 (ante, p. 249).

The offence of wounding with intent is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).]

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Court.

Unlawful wounding, contrary to section 20 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously wounded C. D.

As to second count, see post, p. 941. Unlawful wounding is triable at quarter sessions.

Evidence.

Malice.]—By 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 12 (rep.), it was necessary that the offence should have been committed under such circumstances that, if death had ensued therefrom, it would have amounted to murder. This proviso was omitted from 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 4 (rep.), and is not contained in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 18, which would seem therefore to include every wounding, etc., done without lawful excuse with any of the intents mentioned in the statute, for from the act itself malice will be inferred. The word " maliciously " in the statute does not mean with malice aforethought; for if it did, the offence would be included under s. 14 (ante, p. 911). The offence is therefore equally within this section, although if death had ensued it would have been manslaughter only. R. v. Griffiths, 8 C. & P. 248 : R. v. Nicholls, 9 C. & P. 267 : Anon., 2 Mood. 40.

Wound.]—Under 43 G. 3, c. 58 (rep.), which used the words " stab, cut, or wound," if the indictment was for cutting, evidence of a stabbing would not support it, the words being in the alternative. R. v. M'Dermot, R. & R. 356. Under the words " stab " or " cut," an incised wound must have been proved; a mere contused or lacerated wound was not within those words. The word " wound " in s. 18 includes incised wounds, punctured wounds, lacerated wounds, contused wounds, and gunshot wounds. See Shea v. R., 3 Cox, 141 (Ir.). But to constitute a wound within the statute, the continuity of the skin must be broken : R. v. Wood, 1 Mood. 278; or, in other words, the outer covering of the body (that is, the whole skin, not the mere cuticle or upper skin) (R. v. M'Loughlin, 8 C. & P. 635) must be divided. R. v. Beckett, 1 M. & Rob. 526. But a division of the internal skin—e.g., within the cheek or lip—is sufficient to constitute a wound within the statute. R. v. Smith, 8 C. & P. 173 : R. v. Warman, 1 Den. 183; 2. C. & K. 195. If the skin is broken, the nature of the instrument with which the injury is inflicted is immaterial. Thus, a wound from a kick with a shoe is within the statute. R. v. Briggs, 1 Mood. 318. And where a hammer was thrown at a person, which struck him on the nose, and broke the skin, it was held to be a wound within the meaning of 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 4 (rep.). R. v. Withers, 1 Mood 294. See R. v. Payne, 4 C. & P. 558. Where the defendant struck the prosecutor on the outside of his hat violently with an air-gun, and the hat wounded the prosecutor, but the air-gun never came in contact with the prosecutor, it was held to be a wounding. R. v. Sheard, 2 Mood. 13; 7 C. & P. 846.

It was held under 9 G. 4, c. 36, ss. 11, 12 (rep.). that the " wound " must be made by an instrument, and not by the hands or teeth, because the word " wound " is there used concurrently with " stab " and " cut." But the present statute extends to wounding, etc., " by any means whatsoever." The wound must be given by the act of the defendant; for if in self-defence the prosecutor forces a part of his body against an instrument in the defendant's hands, and so cut or wound himself, it is not within the statute. R. v. Beckett, 1 M. & Rob. 526. Sed quære. Cf. R v. Day, 1 Cox 207.

With intent, etc.]—In order to convict of the felony, the intent must be proved as laid, and as a general rule can be proved by circumstantial evidence only (ante, pp. 352, 357, 396).

If an indictment alleges that the defendant cut the prosecutor with intent to murder, to disable, and to do some grievous bodily harm, it will not be supported by proof of an intention to prevent a lawful apprehension; R. v. Duffin, R. & R. 365 : R. v. Boyce, 1 Mood. 29; unless, for the purpose of effecting his escape, the defendant also harboured one of the intents stated in the indictment; R. v. Gillow, 1 Mood. 85; for where both intents exist, it is immaterial which is the principal and which the subordinate. Therefore, where, in order to commit a rape, the defendant cut the private parts of an infant, and thereby did her grievous bodily harm, it was held that he was guilty of cutting with intent to do grievous bodily harm, notwithstanding his principal object was to commit the rape. R. v. Cox, R. & R. 362. So, also, if a person wounds another in order to rob him, and thereby inflicts grievous bodily harm, he may be convicted on a count charging him with an intent to do grievous bodily harm. R. v. Bowen, C. & Mar. 149. In the case of R. v. Woodburn and Coke, 16 St. Tr. 53, 69, the defendants had the effrontery to set up as a defence that the assault was committed by them with intent, not to maim or disfigure, but to murder; the Court, however, held, that if a man attacks another with intent to murder him, with an instrument which cannot but cause a risk of disfigurement, and in such attack happens not to kill, but only to disfigure him, it was within Sir John Coventry's Act, 22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 1, s. 7 (rep.), which made it felony to commit any of the offences there mentioned, with intent to maim or disfigure. The defendants were accordingly convicted and executed. 4 Bl. Com. 207 n. (k).

Where the defendant struck at A., but B., interposing, received the blow, and was wounded, it was held that the defendant could not be convicted of wounding B. with intent to do him grievous bodily harm, under 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 4 (rep.). R. v. Hawlett, 1 F. & F. 91; and cf. R. v. Holt, 7 C. & P. 513: R. v. Ryan, 2 M. & Rob. 213 (ante, p. 909). But R. v. Hewlett was doubted by Brett, J., in R. v. Stopford, 11 Cox, 643, on the ground that it was inconsistent with R. v. Hunt, 1 Mood. 93 (ante, p. 889), which was accepted as good law in R. v. Latimer, 17 Q. B. D. 359 (post, p. 942); and under the present statute it is sufficient if it is proved that the defendant wounded, etc., shot at, etc., any person, with intent to maim, etc., any person; therefore, in the case just cited, the defendant might now be convicted of wounding B. with intent to do grievous bodily harm to A. And an indictment charging the prisoner with wounding A. with intent to do him grievous bodily harm, is supported by evidence that the prisoner intended to do grievous bodily harm to the man he wounded, and who in fact was A., although the prisoner did not think that he was A., but somebody else. R. v. Stopford, supra, Brett, J. See also R. v. Smith, Dears. 559; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 29 (ante, p. 909). Where a person at night heard a person in the house, and reasonably believing that he was there for a felonious purpose, shot at him with intent to frighten him, and hit him, it was held that no offence under this section was committed. R. v. Dennis [1905] 69 J. P. 256, Fulton, Recorder. A person who fires a loaded pistol into a group of persons, not aiming at any one in particular, but intending generally to do grievous bodily harm, and who hits one of them, may be convicted on an indictment charging him with shooting at the person he has hit with intent to do grievous bodily harm to that person. R. v. Fretwell, L. & C. 443; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 118; 9 Cox, 471.

If it is doubtful whether the act was done by accident or design, other circumstances may be given in evidence to prove the intent (ante, pp. 352, 357, 396).

With respect to the intents mentioned in the statute; to maim, is to injure any part of a man's body which may render him, in fighting, less able to defend himself, or annoy his enemy. 1 Hawk. c. 55, s. 1; see R. v. Sullivan, C. & Mar. 209. To disfigure, is to do some external injury which may detract from his personal appearance; and to disable, is to do something which creates a permanent disability, and not merely a temporary injury. See R. v. Boyce, 1 Mood. 29. It is not necessary that grievous bodily harm should be either permanent or dangerous; R. v. Ashman, 1 F. & F. 88; if it is such as seriously to interfere with health or comfort, that is sufficient; and therefore when the defendant cut the private parts of an infant, and the wound was not dangerous, and was small, but bled a good deal, and the jury found that it was a grievous bodily harm, it was held that the conviction was right. R. v. Cox, R. & R. 362. Where the intent laid is to prevent a lawful apprehension, it must be shown that the arrest would have been lawful (see ante, pp. 897 et seq.); and where the circumstances are not such that the party must know why he is about to be apprehended (R. v. Howarth, 1 Mood. 207; Car. Supp. 231, ante, p. 903), it must be proved that he was apprised of the intention to apprehend him. R. v. Ricketts, 3 Camp. 68; but see R. v. Bentley, 4 Cox, 406.

Power to convict of unlawful wounding.]—Even where a count for unlawful wounding is not added to the indictment, if the prosecutor fails in proving the intent, the defendant, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 5 (ante, p. 908), may, on an indictment for felonious wounding, be convicted of the misdemeanor of unlawful wounding contained in s. 20 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861. See post, p. 941. See also R. v. Miller, 14 Cox, 356 : R. v. Waudby [1895] 2 Q. B. 482; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 257; 18 Cox 194.

Indictment for Shooting with intent to Maim, etc.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 18, ante, p. 936).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Shooting with intent, contrary to section 18 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, shot at C. D., with intent [as in last example].

Felony [as in last precedent].

Indictment for attempting to Shoot with intent to Maim, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 18, ante, p. 936).

As in last precedent, except " attempted to discharge a loaded pistol or other arms at C. D., with intent [as in last precedent].

Felony [as in last precedent but one].

As to what is evidence of an attempt to shoot, see R. v. Linneker [1906] 2 K. B. 99; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 385 (ante, p. 915).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the attempt to shoot as directed, ante, p. 914; and the intent as under the last two examples. If a person intending to shoot another, puts his finger on the trigger of a loaded firearm, but is prevented from pulling the trigger, this is an attempt to discharge loaded arms within the statute. R. v. Duckworth [1892] 2 Q. B. 83; 17 Cox, 495, which on this point overrules R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483, which had previously been doubted in R. v. Brown, 10 Q. B. D. 381; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 49 (ante, p. 915). In R. v. Jackson, 17 Cox, 104, a revolver loaded with cartridges in some chambers only, was held by Charles, J., to be " loaded" within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14 (ante, p. 911). The ruling seems to apply equally to s. 18. The presenting of a loaded pistol at another is an assault. R. v. St. George, supra: R. v. Baker, 1 C. & K. 254. And semble, though the pistol is not in fact loaded, if it is presented so near the person of another as that it would have endangered him had it been loaded and gone off, and he is ignorant that it is not loaded, that is an assault. Id.: but see R. v. James, 1 C. & K. 330, contra.

Any gun, pistol or other arms, loaded in the barrel with gunpowder or other explosive substance, and ball, shot, slug, or other destructive material, are loaded arms within the meaning of the statute, although the attempt to discharge them may fail from want of proper priming or from any other causes. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 19 (ante, p. 911).

Indictment for unlawful Wounding. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 20, ante, p. 936).

See second count of Indictment under section 18, ante, p. 937. A separate indictment charging wounding or inflicting grievous bodily harm can easily be framed from that example.

The defendant may be convicted of a common assault upon this indictment. R. v. Taylor, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 194; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 106 (ante, p. 212).

Misdemeanor : penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.— 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 20 (ante, p. 936); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2

(ante, pp. 238, 239). R. v. Peters, 1 Cr. App. R. 141. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

The evidence will be the same as on an indictment framed on 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 18 (ante, p. 937), except as to the proof of the intent. It is, however, necessary to show that the wounding was malicious, but it may be malicious although the prisoner had no spite or ill-feeling against the prosecutor, and did not even intend to wound him. The prosecutor was using a punt in a creek of a river for the purpose of shooting wild fowl. When slewing the punt round to return home he suddenly heard the report of a gun, and found himself shot and seriously wounded. The prisoner had fired the shot in the direction of the punt with the intention of frightening the prosecutor from again coming into the creek for the purpose of fowling, but not with the intention of doing him bodily harm. It was held that there was evidence on the above facts of a malicious wounding by the prisoner. R. v. Ward, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 356; 48 L. J. (M. C.) 69; 12 Cox, 123. Shortly before the conclusion of a performance at a theatre, the prisoner with the intention and with the result of causing terror in the minds of persons leaving the theatre, put out the gaslights on a staircase which a large number of such persons had to descend in order to leave the theatre, and he also, with the intention and with the result of obstructing the exit, placed an iron bar across a doorway through which they had to pass in leaving. Upon the lights being thus extinguished a panic seized a large portion of the audience, and they rushed in fright down the staircase, forcing those in front against the iron bar. By reason of the pressure and struggling of the crowd thus created on the staircase, several of the audience were severely injured, and amongst them A. and B. It was held that upon these facts the prisoner was rightly convicted of unlawfully and maliciously inflicting grievous bodily harm upon A. and B. R. v. Martin, 8 Q. B. D. 54; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 36; 14 Cox, 633; 46 J. P. 228. This decision was approved in R. v. Halliday, 61 L. T. Rep. 701; 38 W. R. 256, and it was there held that where a wife to escape from the violence of her husband, who had threatened to take her life, got out of a window, and in so doing fell and broke her leg, the husband was properly convicted under s. 20. This decision seems inconsistent with R. v. Donovan, 4 Cox, 399 (ante, p. 918). For the proper direction to the jury in such a case, see R. v. Beech, 23 Cox, 181; 76 J. P. 287; R. v. Coleman, 84 J. P. 112. R. v. Martin, was also followed in R. v. Chapin, 74 J. P. 71, Grantham, J. In that case a woman, in attempting to damage ballot papers with chemicals, caused injuries to the presiding officer at the polling station. She was held liable to conviction under this section, though she had no personal malice against the officer. The prisoner aimed a blow at one person, but, missing his aim, struck and wounded another. He was indicted and convicted under s. 20 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, for unlawfully and maliciously wounding such other person, and it was held that such conviction was right. R. v. Latimer, 17 Q. B. D. 359; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 135; 16 Cox, 70. The prisoner, a married man, at a time when he knew, but his wife did not know, that he was suffering from gonorrhœa, had connection with her, and the result was that the disease was communicated to her. Had she been aware of his condition, she would not have submitted to the intercourse. Upon these facts it was held that the prisoner could not be convicted of unlawfully and maliciously inflicting grievous bodily harm upon his wife under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 20, nor of an assault occasioning actual bodily harm under s. 47. R. v. Clarence, 22 Q. B. D. 23; 58 L. J. (M. C.) 10; 16 Cox, 511. (Compare R. v. Rakmá, 11 Bombay, 59, decided on ss. 269, 270, of the Indian Penal Code: and see ante, p. 931).

ATTEMPTING TO CHOKE, SUFFOCATE, OR STRANGLE, ETC., WITH INTENT, ETC.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 21.]—Whosoever shall, by any means whatsoever, attempt to choke, suffocate, or strangle any other person, or shall by any means calculated to choke, suffocate, or strangle, attempt to render any other person insensible, unconscious, or incapable of resistance, with intent in any of such cases thereby to enable himself or any other person to commit, or with intent in any of such cases thereby to assist any other person in committing any indictable offence, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This was new law in 1861.]

26 & 27 Vict. c. 44.—Power to award punishment of whipping.]—Ante, p. 245.

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Attempting to choke, contrary to section 21 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, attempted to choke, suffocate, or strangle C. D., with intent to enable himself [or E. F.] to rob [or assist E. F. to rob] the said C. D.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 21; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). The Court before which the prisoner is convicted may also, in addition to the punishment of penal servitude or imprisonment, direct that, if a male, he be once privately whipped, subject to the following provisions: 1. In the case of an offender whose age does not exceed sixteen years, the number of strokes at such whipping shall not exceed twenty-five and the instrument used shall be a birch rod. 2. In the case of any other male offender the number of strokes shall not exceed fifty at such whipping. 3. In each case the Court in its sentence shall specify the number of strokes and the instrument to be used. The whipping is not to take place after the expiration of six months from the passing of the sentence, and in the case of a person sentenced to penal servitude, is to be inflicted before his removal to a convict prison. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 44: 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 36 (ante, pp. 244, 245). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

ADMINISTERING, ETC., CHLOROFORM, ETC., TO COMMIT INDICTABLE OFFENCES.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 22.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully apply or administer to or cause to be taken by, or attempt to apply or administer to, or attempt to cause to be administered to or taken by, any person, any chloroform, laudanum, or other stupefying or overpowering drug, matter, or thing, with intent in any of such cases thereby to enable himself or any other person to commit, or with intent in any of such cases thereby to assist any other person in committing any indictable offence, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 3, with the additions italicized.]

48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885), s. 3 (3).—Administering, etc., drugs to females with a view to unlawful carnal intercourse.]—Post, p. 1035.

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Administering chloroform, contrary to section 22 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, unlawfully applied or administered to or caused to be taken by or attempted to apply or administer to or attempted to cause to be administered to or taken by C. D. chloroform [laudanum or other stupefying or overpowering drug, matter, or thing] with intent to enable himself [or E. F.] to steal the watch from the person of C. D., [or with intent to assist E. F. to steal the watch from the person of the said C. D.]

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 22; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant administered or assisted in administering chloroform (or laudanum, or other stupefying or overpowering drug, etc.), as stated in the indictment. If the drug, etc., is not named in the indictment, evidence must be given to show that it was of a stupefying or overpowering nature, calculated to aid the offender in the commission of a felony. Then prove the intent, as directed, ante, p. 938. In practice the ordinary evidence of the intent will be that the prosecutor was robbed or otherwise injured while under the influence of the drug, etc.

ADMINISTERING, ETC., POISON, ETC., SO AS TO ENDANGER LIFE, ETC., OR WITH INTENT TO INJURE, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 23.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously administer to or cause to be administered to or taken by any other person any poison or other destructive or noxious thing, so as thereby to endanger the life of such person, or so as thereby to inflict upon such person any grievous bodily harm, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding ten years . . . .[This section re-enacts 23 & 24 Vict. c. 8, s. 1. This and the succeeding section appear to override R. v. Hanson, 2 C. & K. 912: R. v. Walkden, 1 Cox, 282: R. v. Dilworth, 2 M. & Rob. 531.]

Sect. 24.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously administer to or cause to be administered to or taken by any other person any poison or other destructive or noxious thing, with intent to injure, aggrieve, or annoy such person, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude. . . . [This section re-enacts 23 & 24 Vict. c. 8, s. 2.]

Sect. 25.]—If, upon the trial of any person for any felony in the last but one preceding section mentioned, the jury shall not be satisfied that such person is guilty thereof, but shall be satisfied that he is guilty of any misdemeanor in the last preceding section mentioned, then and in every such case the jury may acquit the accused of such felony, and find him guilty of such misdemeanor, and thereupon he shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if convicted upon an indictment for such misdemeanor. [This section re-enacts 23 & 24 Vict. c. 8, s. 3.]

Indictment for administering Poison so as to endanger Life, etc. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 23.)

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count:

Administering poison, so as to endanger life, contrary to section 23 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously administered to or caused to be administered to or taken by C. D. a poison or other destructive or noxious thing so as thereby to endanger the life of C. D., or to inflict grievous bodily harm upon him.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count:

Administering poison, contrary to section 24 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

As in count one down to "noxious thing," then "with intent to injure, aggrieve, or annoy C. D."

First Count: Felony: penal servitude for not more than ten and not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 23; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865). Even where the second count is not inserted, the defendant may be convicted of the misdemeanor mentioned in s. 24, if the prosecutor fails in proving the felony. Id. s. 25. If the defendant is convicted of the misdemeanor only, the punishment is penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 24; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances, and sureties for keeping the peace, and being of good behaviour, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

Prove the administering, etc., of the poison, etc., as directed, ante, p. 909. Prove also that by means thereof the prosecutor's life was endangered, or grievous bodily harm was done to him (see ante, p. 938). If the poison, etc., is administered merely with intent "to injure, aggrieve, or annoy," which in itself would only amount to a misdemeanor under s. 24, yet if it does in fact

" inflict grievous bodily harm," this amounts to a felony under s. 23. Tulley v. Corrie, 10 Cox, 640. In order to obtain a conviction of the misdemeanor mentioned in s. 24, it must be proved that the defendant intended the administration of the poison, etc., to " injure, aggrieve, or annoy " the prosecutor. See R. v. Wilkins (infra). Whether the thing administered is a " noxious thing " or not, may depend upon the quantity administered, some drugs being innocuous in small, and noxious in large, quantities. Thus, where the prisoner was indicted under s. 24, and the evidence was that he had administered cantharides to the prosecutrix, that a large dose of cantharides is poisonous, but that the quantity administered by the prisoner was insufficient to produce any effect upon the human system, it was held that the prisoner could not be convicted under s. 24 of administering a " destructive or noxious thing," notwithstanding the prisoner administered it with intent to injure or annoy. R. v. Hennah, 13 Cox, 547, Cockburn, C.J., and Hawkins, J. On the other hand, where the prisoner was indicted under s. 58 (ante, p. 922), for having caused to be taken a certain noxious thing, to wit, half an ounce of oil of juniper, with intent to procure miscarriage, and the evidence was that oil of juniper in considerably less quantities than half an ounce might be taken without ill effects, but that half an ounce produces ill effects, and is to a pregnant woman dangerous, it was held that the half ounce of oil of juniper was a " noxious thing " within the statute. R. v. Cramp, 5 Q. B. D. 307; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 44; 14 Cox, 390. And where the drug administered is a recognized " poison," then it may be that, although the quantity administered by the defendant is so small as to be incapable of doing harm, that is sufficient to bring him within the statute. Id.

Where the defendant administered cantharides to a woman, and the jury found that it was administered with the intent to excite her sexual passion and desire, in order that the defendant might obtain connection with her, this was held to be an administering with intent to " injure, aggrieve, and annoy " her. R. v. Wilkins, L. & C. 89; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 72; 9 Cox, 20.

INJURING OR ATTEMPTING TO INJURE PERSONS BY EXPLOSIVE OR CORROSIVE SUBSTANCES, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 28.—Causing bodily injury by explosives.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously, by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance, burn, maim, disfigure, disable, or do any grievous bodily harm to any person, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section is taken from 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 37.]

Sect. 29.—Using explosives or corrosives with intent to do grievous bodily harm.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cause any gunpowder or other explosive substance to explode, or send or deliver to or cause to be taken or received by any person any explosive substance, or any other dangerous or noxious thing, or put or lay at any place, or cast or throw at or upon or otherwise apply to any person, any corrosive fluid or any destructive or explosive substance, with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to burn, maim, disfigure, or disable any person, or to do some grievous bodily harm to any person, shall, whether any bodily injury be effected or not, be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section is taken from 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 4, and 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 5, with the alterations in italics.]

Sect. 30.—Placing explosives near buildings or ships with intent to do grievous bodily harm.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously place or throw in, into, upon, against, or near any building, ship, or vessel any gunpowder or other explosive substance, with intent to do any bodily injury to any person, shall, whether or not any explosion take place, and whether or not any bodily injury be effected, be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section is taken from 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 6.]

Sect. 64.—Making gunpowder, etc., to commit felonies against the Act.]—Ante, p. 915.

Indictment for causing bodily injury by explosives. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 28, supra.)

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Causing bodily injury by explosives, contrary to section 28 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance, maliciously burned, maimed, disfigured, disabled or did grievous bodily harm to C. D.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 28; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

As to the punishment of whipping, see ante, p. 244, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 70 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant, by means of the explosion of gunpowder, burnt the person of C. D., or maimed, disfigured, or disabled him, or did him some grievous bodily harm. (See ante, p. 938.) Prove that the act was done maliciously. (See ante, pp. 741, 800. And see R. v. Saunders, 14 Cox, 180.)

Indictment for sending an Explosive Substance, with Intent, etc.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 29, ante, p. 947).

Statement of Offence.

Sending explosive substance with intent, contrary to section 29 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

Particulars of Offence.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously sent [or delivered to] or caused to be taken or received by C. D. an explosive substance, or other dangerous or noxious thing called ——, with intent to burn, etc., C. D. [as in last precedent].

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 29. See the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the sending of the explosive substance, and the intent as directed, ante, pp. 352, 357. Under 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 54 (rep.), it was necessary to prove that the prosecutor was actually burnt, etc. But by the present statute the offence is complete by the malicious sending, etc., with intent to burn, etc., any person, whether or not any bodily injury be effected.

Indictment for throwing Corrosive Fluid with Intent. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 29, ante, p. 947).

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Throwing corrosive fluid with intent, contrary to section 29 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, threw at or upon or applied to C. D. a certain corrosive fluid [or other destructive or explosive substance] called vitriol, with intent to burn, etc., C. D. [as in last precedent but one].

Felony : 24 & 25 Vict, c. 100, s. 29. See the last precedent but one.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant wilfully threw vitriol on (or at) the prosecutor; and prove the intent as directed (ante, pp. 352, 357). 6 G. 1, c. 2, s. 11 (rep.), made it felony to assault any person in the public streets, etc., with intent to cut, etc., and cutting the clothes of such person : upon which it was held in a case where the defendant, intending to cut the person of the prosecutrix, struck her with a sharp instrument, and, in doing so, cut her clothes, that the primary intent must be to cut the clothes, and that as the primary intention there was the wounding of the person, the statute did not apply. R. v. Rhenwick Williams, 1 Leach, 529, 533. So here, if it were clearly shown that the intention was only to burn the clothes, it would seem not to be within the statute; but unless the contrary be proved, the intention will be evidenced by the act.

Boiling water was held to be "destructive matter," within the 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 5 (rep.). R. v. Crawford, 1 Den. 100; 2 C. & K. 129.

CAUSING EXPLOSIONS LIKELY TO ENDANGER LIFE.

Statute.

46 & 47 Vict. c. 3 (Explosive Substances Act, 1883).]—Ante, pp. 756 et seq.

SETTING SPRING-GUNS, ETC., WITH INTENT, ETC.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 31.]—Whosoever shall set or place, or cause to be set or placed, any spring-gun, man-trap, or other engine calculated to destroy human life or inflict grievous bodily harm, with intent that the same or whereby the same may destroy or inflict grievous bodily harm upon a trespasser or other person coming in contact therewith, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude . . . ; and whosoever shall knowingly and wilfully permit any such spring-gun, man-trap, or other engine which may have been set or placed in any place then being in or afterwards coming into his possession or occupation by some other person to continue so set or placed, shall be deemed to have set and placed such gun, trap, or engine with such intent as aforesaid.

Provided that nothing in this section contained shall extend to make it illegal to set or place any gin or trap such as may have been or may be usually set or placed with the intent of destroying vermin:

Provided also, that nothing in this section shall be deemed to make it unlawful to set or place or cause to be set or placed, or to be continued set or placed, from sunset to sunrise, any spring-gun, man-trap, or other engine which shall be set or placed, or caused or continued to be set or placed in a dwelling-house for the protection thereof. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 18.]

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Setting spring gun, contrary to section 31 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, set or placed [or caused to be set or placed] a spring-gun [man-trap or other engine calculated to destroy human life or inflict grievous bodily harm], with the intent that it should inflict grievous bodily harm upon any person coming in contact therewith.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100; s. 31; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, and being of good behaviour, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant placed, or continued (see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 31, supra) the spring-gun loaded in a place where persons might come in contact with it; and if any injury was in reality occasioned, state it in the indictment and prove it as laid.

The intent can only be inferred from circumstances (see ante, pp. 352, 357, 396), as the position of the gun, the declarations of the defendant, and so forth, Any injury actually done will, of course, be some evidence of the intent.

This statute applies only to instruments set with an intention to do grievous bodily harm thereby to human beings, or whereby grievous bodily harm may be done to a human being; not, therefore, to dog-spears set by a man in his own land. Jordin v. Crump, 8 M. & W. 782; 11 L. J. (Ex.) 74: cf. Wootton v. Dawkins, 2 C. B. (N. S.). 412. If death was caused by setting a spring-gun, the setter is guilty of manslaughter. R. v. Heaton, 60 J. P. 508, Kennedy, J.: and see ante, p. 896.

The prisoners were indicted under s. 31 for causing to be set or placed in a field a spring-gun or engine calculated, etc. The gun in question was an alarm-gun stuck in the ground and was loaded with a cartridge containing shot, but there was no evidence to show that the prisoners knew that the gun contained shot. It was contended that the evidence disclosed no offence because the engine must be calculated, etc., and the gun was merely intended to give an alarm, and the fact of its being loaded did not alter its character or the object with which it was set. These contentions were overruled: R. v. Smith and York [1902] Northamptonshire Assizes, 37 L. J. Newsp. 89, Bruce, J.

ENDANGERING THE SAFETY OF RAILWAY PASSENGERS.

Sect. 33.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously throw, or cause to fall or strike, at, against, into, or upon any engine, tender, carriage, or truck used upon any railway, any wood, stone, or other matter or thing, with intent to injure or endanger the safety of any person being in or upon such engine, tender, carriage or truck, or in or upon any other engine, tender, carriage, or truck of any train of which such first-mentioned engine, tender, carriage, or truck shall form part, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 7, with the substitution of "unlawfully" for "wilfully," and the addition of the other words italicized, to get rid of R. v. Court, 6 Cox, 202: and see R. v. Rooke, 1 F. & F. 407: R. v. Sanderson, Id. 37.]

Sect. 34.]—Whosoever, by any unlawful act, or by any wilful omission or neglect, shall endanger or cause to be endangered the safety of any person conveyed or being in or upon a railway, or shall aid or assist therein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. Indictment for endangering the Safety of Railway Passengers. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 32.)

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Endangering safety of railway passengers, contrary to section 32 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously put or threw upon or across the Great Western Railway a stone [wood or other matter or thing] with intent to endanger the safety of persons travelling or being upon the said railway.

Felony: penal servitude for life, or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years. If male under sixteen, whipping. As to fine, recognizances, and sureties, see s. 71, ante, p. 865.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant put a stone upon the railway; that he did it maliciously (see ante, pp. 741, 800); and with intent to endanger the safety of railway passengers (see ante, pp. 352, 357, 396).

Throwing a stone at engines or carriages appears to be an offence within section 34 (supra.) R. v. Bowray, 10 Jur. 211, Alderson, B. So is playing with a cart on railway premises with the result of letting it run within a dangerous distance of the track. R. v. Monaghan, 11 Cox, 608. Neglect by an engine driver to keep a good look-out for signals was held not to be within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, s. 15 (rep.): R. v. Pardenton, 6 Cox, 247; but it appears to be within the italicized words of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 34.

An acquittal on an indictment framed under s. 32 is no bar to a subsequent indictment upon the same facts for a misdemeanor under s. 34. R. v. Gilmore, 15 Cox, 85, Huddleston, B. As to cases where death is caused by act or defaults within ss. 33, 34, see ante, p. 893.

INJURIES ARISING FROM THE FURIOUS DRIVING OF CARRIAGES.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 35.]—Whosoever, having the charge of any carriage or vehicle, shall, by wanton or furious driving or racing, or other wilful misconduct, or by wilful neglect, do or cause to be done any bodily harm to any person whatsoever, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. [This section re-enacts 1 G. 4, c. 4, with the additions italicized. It applies to all carriages and vehicles, public or private; also to bicycles. R. v. Parker, 59 J. P. 793, Hawkins, J. A bicycle is a "carriage" within 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 50 (Highway Act, 1835), s. 78: Taylor v. Goodwin, 4 Q. B. D. 228; 48 L. J. (M. C.) 104; cf. Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Causing bodily harm, contrary to section 35 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, having the charge of a public omnibus, by wanton or furious driving or by wilful neglect caused bodily harm to C. D.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 35. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

OBSTRUCTING, ETC., MINISTERS OF RELIGION IN DISCHARGE OF THEIR DUTIES.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 36.]—Whosoever shall, by threats or force, obstruct or prevent, or endeavour to obstruct or prevent, any clergyman or other minister in or from celebrating divine service or otherwise officiating in any church, chapel, meeting-house, or other place of divine worship, or in or from the performance of his duty in the lawful burial of the dead in any churchyard or other burial place, or shall strike or offer any violence to, or shall, upon any civil process, or under the pretence of executing any civil process, arrest any clergyman or other minister who is engaged in, or to the knowledge of the offender is about to engage in, any of the rites, or duties in this section aforesaid, or who to the knowledge of the offender shall be going to perform the same or returning from the performance thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. [This section is based on 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 23, but is framed so as to include ministers, and places of worship and burial, not belonging to the Established Church of England.]

Indictment for obstructing a Clergyman in the Discharge of his Duty.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Obstructing a clergyman, contrary to section 36 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, by threats or force obstructed or prevented, or endeavoured to obstruct or prevent, the Reverend ——, the Vicar of the Parish of ——, from celebrating divine service in the Parish Church.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 36. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

Prove that the person obstructed is a clergyman and vicar of the parish, as stated in the indictment; that the defendant by force obstructed or prevented him from celebrating divine service in the parish church, etc., or assisted in doing so.

ASSAULTS ON OFFICERS, ETC., SAVING WRECK.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 37.]—Whosoever shall assault and strike or wound any magistrate, officer, or other person whatsoever lawfully authorized, in or on account of the exercise of his duty in or concerning the preservation of any vessel in distress, or of any vessel, goods, or effects wrecked, stranded or cast on shore, or lying under water, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . . [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 24, with the addition of the words in italics.]

Indictment for assaulting an officer, etc., on account of the Exercise of his Duty in preserving Wreck.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Assaulting an officer, contrary to section 37 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, assaulted and struck C. D., an officer, in or on account of the exercise of his duty, concerning the preservation of the vessel called the Rattler, cast on the shore.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 37; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

Prove that C. D. was an officer, etc., as stated in the indictment (see ante, p. 401); that a vessel was wrecked, etc.; that C. D. was engaged in endeavouring to preserve the vessel; that A. B. struck [or wounded] him as stated; and that he did so in or on account of C. D. doing his duty in the preservation of the vessel. This may be proved by the declarations or acts of the defendant, or by circumstances from which his motive may be inferred.

IMPEDING PERSONS ENDEAVOURING TO ESCAPE FROM WRECKS.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 17.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously prevent or impede any person, being on board of or having quitted any ship or vessel which shall be in distress, or wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, in his endeavour to save his life, or shall unlawfully and maliciously prevent or impede any person in his endeavour to save the life of any such person as in this section first aforesaid, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 7, with the additions italicized.]

Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 17.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Impeding saving of life, contrary to section 17 of Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously prevented or impeded C. D. in his endeavour to save the life of E. F., who had thrown himself into the sea from the ship called the Rattler, then stranded.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 17; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

FORCING SEAMEN ON SHORE, ETC.

Statute.

6 Edw. 7, c. 48 (Merchant Shipping Act, 1906), s. 43.—Forcing seamen on shore.]—A person belonging to a British ship shall not wrongfully force a seaman on shore and leave him behind, or otherwise cause a seaman to be wrongfully left behind, at any place, either on shore or at sea, in or out of his Majesty's dominions, and if he does so he shall in respect of each offence be guilty of a misdemeanor. [This section takes the place of 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 187.]

Sect. 30.—Discharging seamen abroad.]—(1) The master of a British ship shall not discharge a seaman at any place out of the United Kingdom (except at a port in the country in which he was shipped), unless he previously obtains endorsed on the agreement with the crew the sanction of the proper authority as defined for the purpose in this part of this Act (s. 49, post), but that sanction shall not be refused where the seaman is discharged on the termination of his service. (2) The authority to whom an application is made for sanction under this section may, and, if not a merchant, shall, examine into the grounds on which a seaman is to be discharged at a place out of the United Kingdom, and for that purpose may, if he thinks fit, administer oaths, and may grant or refuse the sanction as he thinks just, but such sanction shall not be unreasonably withheld. (3) If the master of a ship fails to comply with this section, he shall, in respect of each offence, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in any legal proceeding for the offence it shall lie on the master to prove that the sanction was obtained, or was unreasonably withheld. [This section takes the place of part of 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 188.]

Sect. 36.—(1) The master of a British ship shall not leave a seaman behind, at any place out of the United Kingdom, ashore or at sea (except where the seaman is discharged in accordance with the Merchant Shipping Acts), unless he previously obtains endorsed on the agreement with the crew the certificate of the proper authority as defined for the purpose in this part of this Act (s. 49), stating the cause of the seaman being left behind, whether the cause be unfitness or inability to proceed to sea, or desertion, or disappearance, or otherwise.

(2) The authority to whom an application is made for a certificate under this section may, and, if not a merchant, shall, examine into the grounds on which a seaman is to be left behind, and for that purpose may, if he thinks fit, administer oaths, and may grant or refuse a certificate as he thinks fit, but the certificate shall not be unreasonably withheld.

(3) If the master of a ship fails to comply with this section, he shall, without prejudice to his liability under any other provision of the Merchant Shipping Acts, be guilty in respect of each offence of a misdemeanor, and on any legal proceeding for the offence it shall lie on the master to prove that the certificate was obtained, or could not be obtained without unreasonable delay to the ship, or was unreasonably withheld. [This takes the place of part of 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 188.]

57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 680.—Hard labour.]—(1) Subject to the special provisions of this Act and to the provisions hereafter contained with respect to Scotland: (a) An offence under this Act declared to be a misdemeanor shall be punishable by fine or by imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour (see ante, pp. 239, 241); but may, instead of being prosecuted as a misdemeanor, be prosecuted summarily in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, and if so prosecuted, shall be punishable by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour, or by a penalty not exceeding one hundred pounds. (b) An offence under this Act made punishable by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour, or by any penalty not exceeding one hundred pounds, shall be prosecuted summarily in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts. . . . [As to the right of a person proceeded against under sub-s. 2 to elect to be tried on indictment, see 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (ante, p. 7). R. v. Goldberg, 20 Cox, 699.]

Sect. 684.—Jurisdiction.—Venue.]—For the purpose of giving jurisdiction under this Act, every offence shall be deemed to have been committed, and every cause of complaint to have arisen, either in the place in which the same actually was committed or arose, or in any place in which the offender or person complained against may be. [This section has been explained in a colonial case (R. v. Hinde [1902] 22 N. Z. L. R. 436) as meaning that when an offence against the Act is committed in any part of the King's dominions, it may be tried in any other part of those dominions in which the offender is. In the particular case the colonial Court asserted its jurisdiction to try an offence committed in London against s. 130 of the Act.]

Sects. 686, 687.—Venue.]—Ante, pp. 31 et seq.

Sect. 742.]—"Seaman" includes every person (except master, pilots, and apprentices duly indentured and registered) employed or engaged in any capacity, on board any ship.

* * * * * * *

"Superintendent" shall, so far as respects a British possession, include any shipping master or other officer discharging in that possession the duties of a superintendent.

* * * * * * *

6 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 49.—For the purposes of this part of this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,

(1) The expression "proper authority" means—

(a) as respects a place out of his Majesty's dominions the British consular officer, or if there is no such officer in the place, any two British merchants resident at or near the place, or if there is only one British merchant so resident, that British merchant; and

(b) as respects a place in a British possession,

(i.) in relation to the discharge or leaving behind of seamen, or the payment of fines, the superintendent, or, in the absence of any such superintendent, the chief officer of customs at or near the place.

* * * * * * *

(2) The expression "seamen" includes not only seamen as defined by the principal Act (s. 742, supra), but also apprentices to the sea service.

Indictment for wrongfully forcing on Shore and leaving behind a Seaman. (6 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 43, ante, p. 957.)

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Forcing seaman on shore, contrary to section 43 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1906.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, then being the captain of a British ship called the Rattler, wrongfully forced C. D., one of the crew of the said ship, on shore at San Francisco, in the United States of America, and left him behind.

The allegation that it is a British ship is material. See R. v. Dunnett, 1 C. & K. 425.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, or fine, or both. 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 680; 6 Edw. 7, c. 48, ss. 43, 84, 86. For examination of witnesses abroad, see 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, ss. 689, 691 (ante, pp. 440, 481). As to costs of prosecution and defence, see ante, pp. 267 et seq.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant belonged to and acted as master of the vessel, and that it was, at the time of the commission of the offence, a British ship; see R. v. Dunnett, 1 C. & K. 425: R. v. Bjornsen, 34 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 180; L. & C. 545 (ante, p. 33): R. v. Seberg, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 264; 39 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 133 (ante, p. 33); prove that C. D. was then "seaman" as defined; it is immaterial whether he was one of the original crew of the ship or not; prove that the voyage for which he was engaged was not then completed; and that the defendant forced him on shore, and left him behind at the place mentioned in the indictment.

ASSAULTS WITH INTENT TO COMMIT FELONY, OR ON PEACE OFFICERS, POOR LAW OFFICERS, ETC.

Statutes.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 19, s. 7.]—Assaults on bailiffs of inferior civil courts in execution of duty, punishable on summary conviction.

13 & 14 Vict. c. 101 (Poor Law Amendment Act, 1850), s. 9.—Assaults on poor law officers.]—Where any person shall be charged with and convicted of any assault upon any officer of a workhouse or relieving officer in the due execution of his duty, or upon any person acting in aid of such officer, the Court may sentence the offender to the same punishment as is provided by law for an assault upon a peace officer or revenue officer in the due execution of his duty. . . . 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 38.—Assaults with intent to commit felony or on a peace officer.]—Whosoever shall assault any person with intent to commit felony, or shall assault, resist or wilfully obstruct any peace officer in the due execution of his duty, or any person acting in aid of such officer, or shall assault any person with intent to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of himself or of any other person for any offence, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 75, with the addition of the words italicized, and the omission of revenue officers, as to whom, see s. 11 of the Inland Revenue Regulation Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 21). For indictment, see infra.]

34 & 35 Vict. c. 112 (Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871), s. 12.—Assaults on peace officers.]—Where any person is convicted of an assault on any constable when in the execution of his duty, such person shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall, in the discretion of the Court, be liable either to pay a penalty not exceeding 20*l.*, and in default of payment to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding six months; or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding six, or in case such person has been convicted of a similar assault within two years, nine months, with or without hard labour. [The prisoner cannot elect to be tried on indictment. See 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (1) (ante, p. 7). The section is not affected by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 188. See 46 & 47 Vict. c. 44.]

48 & 49 Vict. c. 75 (Prevention of Crimes Amendment Act, 1885), s. 1.]—This Act shall be construed as one with the "Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871." . . .

Sect. 2.—Assaulting or obstructing peace officer.]—The provisions of the 12th section of the said recited Act shall apply to all cases of resisting or wilfully obstructing any constable or peace officer when in the execution of his duty. Provided that in cases to which the said Act is extended by this Act the person convicted shall not be liable to a greater penalty than 5*l.*, or in default of payment to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for a greater term than two months.

50 & 51 Vict. c. 55 (Sheriffs Act, 1889), s. 8 (2).]—Resistance to execution of writ by sheriff a misdemeanor.

51 & 52 Vict. c. 43 (County Courts Act, 1888), s. 48.]—Assaults on county court officer in execution of his duty, summarily punishable. See Lewis v. Owen [1894] 1 Q. B. 102; 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 233: Broughton v. Wilkerson, 44 J. P. 781.

Indictment for assault with intent to commit felony, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 38 (ante, p. 961).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Assault with intent to commit felony, contrary to section 38 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, assaulted C. D., with intent to ravish her.

Misdemeanor punishable under the above section by imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for not more than two years.

Evidence.

To constitute the offence there must be, in addition to evidence of an assault, the evidence of the intention to have carnal knowledge of the woman notwithstanding her resistance. R. v. Lloyd, 7 C. & P. 318. Evidence of liberties taken on former occasions with the prosecutrix by the accused has been held not to be admissible to show the intent. Id.

The accused on this indictment may be convicted of a common assault. Russell on Crimes (7th ed.), p. 942. If the indictment contain a second count for common assault and consent is established on the first count, the accused cannot be convicted on the second. R. v. Meredith, 8 C. & P. 589.

An acquittal upon an indictment for an assault with intent to ravish is no bar to a subsequent indictment on the same facts for a common assault. R. v. Dungey, 4 F. & F. 99.

A boy under fourteen cannot be convicted of this offence. R. v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396: R. v. Waite [1892] 2 Q. B. 600; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 187: R. v. Williams [1893] 1 Q. B. 320; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 29.

As to rape generally, see post, p. 1016.

Indictment, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 38 (supra).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Assaulting with intent, contrary to section 38 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, assaulted C. D., with intent to steal from the person of C. D.

As to adding a count for a common assault, see note to next precedent.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 38. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

Every attempt to commit a felony against the person of an individual without his consent involves an assault. Prove an attempt to commit such a felony, and prove it to have been done under such circumstances that, had the attempt succeeded, the defendant might have been convicted of the felony. If you fail in proving the intent, but prove the assault, the defendant may be convicted of the common assault.

Indictment for assaulting a Peace Officer in the Execution of his Duty. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 38, ante, p. 961).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Assault on police officer, contrary to section 38 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, assaulted, resisted, or wilfully obstructed C. D., a police constable, in the due execution of his duty.

Misdemeanor: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 38. See the last precedent. It is submitted that on this indictment a conviction for a common assault can be sustained, and that it is unnecessary to add a count for a common assault. See ante, pp. 929 et seq.

Summary punishment is provided for assaults on special constables, 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 41, s. 11: R. v. Porter, 9 C. & P. 778: on metropolitan constables. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 18; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 51, s. 3: on county police. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 93, s. 8: on borough police, 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 188; 46 & 47 Vict. c. 44, s. 2: and on urban police. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89, s. 20; 46 & 47 Vict. c. 44, s. 2.

Evidence.

Prove that C. D. was a peace officer, etc., as stated in the indictment, by showing that he had acted as such (see ante, p. 407); or if the indictment is for assaulting C. D., acting in aid of an officer, prove that the officer acted as such, and that C. D. was acting in his aid. The officer's appointment need not be proved; Berryman v. Wyse, 4 T. R. 366. Prove that C. D. was in the due execution of his duty (see ante, p. 902), and prove the assault as directed (ante, pp. 930 et seq). The fact that the defendant did not know that the person assaulted was a peace officer, or that he was acting in the execution of his duty, furnishes no defence. R. v. Forbes, 10 Cox, 362, approved in R. v. Maxwell, 73 J. P. 176 (C. C. A.).

Parish constables are not now appointed except under resolution of quarter sessions. As to the mode of appointment and their present duties, see 5 & 6 Vict. c. 109; 35 & 36 Vict. c. 92. They have for most purposes been superseded in the metropolitan police district by the metropolitan police; 10 G. 4, c. 44; 2 & 3 Vict. cc. 47, 71; and in counties and boroughs, by the county and borough police: 2 & 3 Vict. c. 93; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 88; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 69. The metropolitan police have all the powers, authorities, privileges, advantages, duties, and responsibilities which a constable has at common law or by statute, within the counties of London, Middlesex, Surrey, Hertford, Essex, Kent, Berks, Bucks, and on the Thames adjoining all but the last two counties, and adjoining the city of London, and on creeks, docks, etc. 10 G. 4, c. 44, s. 4; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 5. County police have the like duties, etc., in their county, and also the duties, etc., of special constables. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 93, s. 8. So have borough police within, or within seven miles of, their borough. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 191. The result of these Acts is to bring all these officers within the protection of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 38. Prison officers while acting as such have by virtue of their appointment all the powers, authorities, and protection and privileges of a constable. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 41, s. 10. In R. v. Sanders, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 75; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 87; 10 Cox, 445, it was held that a justice's warrant of commitment upon a conviction for a penalty directed "To the constable of G.," a parish in the county of L., must be read as directed to the parish constable of G., there being such an officer, who must execute it, and its execution by a county policeman was illegal, and a conviction for wounding a county policeman in the execution of such a warrant, with intent to resist the prisoner's lawful apprehension thereunder, was quashed. But, as already stated, few parish constables are now appointed, and a warrant to the constable of a parish would be taken to be to the ordinary police. C. was convicted of an assault on two police constables in the county police of Worcester in the execution of their duty, who were apprehending him in the city of Worcester under a warrant issued by two justices of and for the county of Worcester for his commitment to prison in default in payment of a fine, but which warrant was not backed by any justice of and for the city of Worcester. Worcester is a borough having a separate commission of the peace with exclusive jurisdiction and a separate police force. C. was not pursued from the county, but found in the city. It was held that the constables were not acting in the execution of their duty in so executing the warrant, and therefore that the conviction was wrong. R. v. Cumpton, 5 Q. B. D. 341; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 41. When a warrant has been issued to apprehend a person for an offence less than felony for which there is no statutory authority to arrest without warrant, the police officer who executes it must have the warrant in his possession at the time of attempting the arrest; and if he has it not, and is assaulted by the person whom he is endeavouring to arrest, such person cannot be convicted of an assault upon the police officer in the execution of his duty, nor of a common assault, unless he used more force than was necessary to prevent his apprehension. Codd v. Cabe, 1 Ex. D. 352; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 101; 13 Cox, 202. See also Galliard v. Laxton, 2 B. & S. 363; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 123 (ante, p. 902): R. v. Phelps, C. & Mar. 180 (ante, p. 899): R. v. Chapman, 12 Cox, 4 (ante, p. 902): R. v. Carey, 14 Cox, 214 (ante. p. 903). Although a police constable may not be bound, in the execution of his duty, to assist the occupier of a house in putting out an intruder, yet he may lawfully do so, and if he is assaulted by the intruder while so doing, the latter, though he may not be indictable for assaulting a peace officer in the execution of his duty, will be liable to a conviction for an assault, as he cannot justify resistance to the force lawfully used to eject him. R. v. Roxburgh, 12 Cox, 8. If the police are exceeding their authority, resistance is not an assault within this section. R. v. Marsden, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 131; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 80; 11 Cox, 90: R. v. Mabel, 9 C. & P. 474, though it may be a common assault; and see Broughton v. Wilkerson, 44 J. P. 781, as to justifiable resistance to a county court bailiff.

Duty to aid constables.]—Refusing to aid and assist a constable in the execution of his duty, in order to preserve the peace, is an indictable misdemeanor at common law. In order to support such indictment, it must be proved that the constable saw a breach of the peace committed; that there was a reasonable necessity for calling upon the defendant for his assistance; and that when duly called on to do so, the defendant, without any physical impossibility or lawful excuse, refused to do so. And it is no defence that the single aid of the defendant could have been of no avail. R. v. Brown, C. & Mar. 314; 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1369. An indictment for refusing to assist a constable in the execution of his duty, and prevent an assault made upon him by persons in his custody on a charge of felony, with intent to resist their lawful apprehension, is sufficient without stating how the apprehension became lawful; and if it states a refusal to assist, without the further allegation that the defendant did not, in fact, assist. R. v. Sherlock, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 20; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 92; 10 Cox, 170.

Obstruction.]—It would seem that the words in the statutes as to wilful obstruction do not necessarily imply assault, and that they extend to acts done to interfere with constables who, in the execution of their duty under statute or lawful orders, are seeking to obtain evidence as to offences. See Betts v. Stevens [1910] 1 K. B. 1; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 17: Bastable v. Little [1907] 1 K. B. 59; 76 L. J. (K. B.) 77; 21 Cox, 384.

ASSAULTS BY POACHERS ON GAMEKEEPERS.

Statutes.

9 G. 4, c. 69 (Night Poaching Act, 1828), s. 2.]—Where any person shall be found upon any land committing any such offence as is hereinbefore mentioned, it shall be lawful for the owner or occupier of such land, or for any person having a right or reputed right of free warren or free chase thereon, or for the lord of the manor or reputed manor wherein such land may be situate, and also for any gamekeeper or servant of any of the persons herein mentioned, or any person assisting such gamekeeper or servant, to seize and apprehend such offender upon such land, or in case of pursuit being made, in any other place to which he may have escaped therefrom, and to deliver him, as soon as may be, into the custody of a peace officer, in order to his being conveyed before two justices of the peace; and in case such offender shall assault or offer any violence with any gun, cross-bow, fire-arms, bludgeon, stick, club, or any other offensive weapon whatsoever, towards any person hereby authorized to seize and apprehend him, he shall, whether it be his first, second, or any other offence, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond seas for seven years (now penal servitude, ante, p. 236), or to be imprisoned or kept to hard labour in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding two years; and in Scotland, whenever any person shall so offend, he shall be liable to be punished in like manner. (For the rest of the Act, see post, tit. Poaching.)

7 & 8 Vict. c. 29, s. 1.]—Post, tit. Poaching.

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Assault on gamekeeper, contrary to section 2 of the Night Poaching Act, 1828.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, at 11 o'clock in the night-time, in the county of ——, then being found unlawfully on certain land in the occupation of C. D. armed with a gun for the purpose of taking game, assaulted or offered violence with the said gun towards E. F., a gamekeeper in the employment of the said C. D., being a person authorized to seize and apprehend him, the said A. B.

This count may be joined with one framed under the 9th section, post, tit. Poaching, and with one for common assault. R. v. Finacane, 5 C. & P. 551.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 2, supra; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant entered certain land belonging to or in the occupation of C. D. (See ante, pp. 51, 350). It is not necessary to state the name of the close; but it has been held that if stated, it must be proved. R. v. Owen, 1 Mood. 118. Prove that the defendant entered the land in the night-time, that is, sometime between the expiration of the first hour after sunset, and the beginning of the last hour before sunrise. 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 12, post, tit. Poaching : see R. v. Tomlinson, 7 C. & P. 183. It is not necessary to state the hour (ante, pp. 51, 350); nor, if stated, need it be proved, provided that it be within the period above mentioned. Prove that the defendant was armed with a gun, etc., and that he was on the land for the purpose of destroying game there. See R. v. Barham, 1 Mood. 151; R. v. Davis, 8 C. & P. 759. Prove also that the defendant was found on the land in the commission of the offence. The words of the statute are " found upon any land." Under 57 G. 3, c. 90, s. 3 (rep.), the words of which were " enter into or be found in any forest," etc., where the defendant was not found in the close, but was seen in an adjoining close, and, shortly before he was seen, shots were heard in the close, and the jury found that he had been firing in the close, it being reserved for the judges whether it was necessary to prove that the defendant was seen in the close where the indictment stated him to have been found, they held that, as the jury were satisfied that the defendant had been in the close armed, it was sufficient. R. v. Worker, 1 Mood. 165. (See post, tit. Poaching). Prove that E. F. was servant to C. D., the owner or occupier of the land (or, if the offence was committed on any public road, highway, or path, or the sides thereof, or at any gate, outlet, or opening from any land to such road, etc., the owner or occupier of land adjoining either side of that part of the road, etc., where the offender was (7 & 8 Vict. c. 29, s. 1), and prove the assault as directed (ante, pp. 930 et seq.). Proof of a common intent of several prisoners to poach is not evidence of a common intent to wound. R. v. Doddridge, 8 Cox, 335, Martin, B. See also R. v. Pridmore, 77 J. P. 339; 29 T. L. R. 330; 8 Cr. App. R. 198. If A. B. escaped and was pursued, it must be stated; and if stated, it must be proved. Lastly, it must be proved that the offence was committed within twelve calendar months next before the prosecution. 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 4, post, tit. Poaching.

A gamekeeper, or other person lawfully authorized, may apprehend poachers without giving notice of his purpose. R. v. Payne, 1 Mood. 378 : R. v. Fielding, 2 C. & K. 621; and without a written authority so to do; R. v. Price, 7 C. & P. 178; provided they are upon the land or manor of his master, or other place mentioned in 7 & 8 Vict. c. 29; but without authority he may not apprehend them upon the lands of others. R. v. Davis, 7 C. & P. 785. A person who has only the right of shooting over the land of another has no authority to authorize a gamekeeper to apprehend persons trespassing on such land in pursuit of game; consequently, resistance to such apprehension, if not excessive, is lawful. R. v. Wood, 1 F. & F. 470. Although s. 2 is confined to offences mentioned in s. 1, still an offender under s. 9 may be apprehended under the powers given by s. 2; for though a greater punishment is inflicted by s. 9 where several are out armed together, it is still an offence within s. 1. R. v. Ball, 1 Mood. 330: see R. v. Lines [1902] 1 K. B. 199, 203; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 125; 20 Cox, 142. And under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 11 (ante, p. 655), any person may apprehend persons committing offences against s. 9 of this Act in the night-time. R. v. Sanderson, 1 F. & F. 598. As to homicide by poachers, see ante, p. 901.

SHOOTING AT OFFICERS OF THE CUSTOMS, OR KING'S SHIPS.

Statute.

39 & 40 Vict. c. 36 (Customs Consolidation Act, 1876), s. 193.—Shooting at customs officers, or King's ships.]—If any person shall maliciously shoot at any vessel or boat belonging to his Majesty's navy, or in the service of the revenue, or shall maliciously shoot at, maim, or wound any officer of the army, navy, marines, or coastguard, being duly employed in the prevention of smuggling, and on full pay, or any officer of customs or excise, or any person acting in his aid or assistance, or duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, in the execution of his office or duty, every person so offending, and every person aiding, abetting, or assisting therein, shall, upon conviction, be adjudged guilty of felony; and shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to penal servitude for any term not less than five years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years. (See post, p. 970).

Sect. 229.—Offences on the water.]—Where any offence shall be committed in any place upon the water, not being within any county of the United Kingdom, or where the officers have any doubt whether such place is within the boundaries or limits of any such county, such offence shall for the purposes of the Customs Acts, be deemed, and taken to be, an offence committed on the high seas, and for the purpose of giving jurisdiction under such Acts every such offence shall be deemed to have been committed, and every cause of complaint to have arisen, either in the place in which the same was actually committed or arose, or in any place on land where the offender or person complained against may be or be brought (see ante, pp. 31-37, 41).

Sect. 255.—In whose name indictments to be preferred.]—All indictments or suits for any offences or the recovery of any penalties or forfeitures under the Customs Acts shall, except in the cases where summary jurisdiction is given to justices, be preferred or commenced in the name of his Majesty's Attorney-General for England or Ireland, or of the Lord Advocate of Scotland, or of some officer of customs or inland revenue.

Sect. 257.—Limitation of proceedings.]—All suits, indictments, or informations brought or exhibited for any offence against the Customs Acts in any court, or before any justice, shall be brought or exhibited within three years next after the date of the offence committed. (See ante, p. 64).

Sect. 258.—Venue.]—Any indictment, prosecution, or information which may be instituted or brought under the direction of the Commissioners of Customs for offences against the Customs Acts shall and may be inquired of, examined, tried, and determined in any county of England when the offence is committed in England, and in any county of Scotland when the offence is committed in Scotland, and in any county in Ireland when the offence is committed in Ireland, in such manner and form as if the offence had been committed in the said county where the said indictment or information shall be tried. (See ante, p. 41).

Sect. 260.—Averments in smuggling cases.]—The averment that the Commissioners of Customs or Inland Revenue have directed or elected that any information or proceedings under the Customs Acts shall be instituted, or that any ship or boat is foreign or belonging wholly or in part to his Majesty's subjects, or that any person detained or found on board any ship or boat liable to seizure is or is not a subject of his Majesty, or that any goods thrown overboard, staved, or destroyed were so thrown overboard, staved, or destroyed to prevent seizure, or that any goods thrown overboard, staved, or destroyed during chase by any ship or boat in his Majesty's service or in the service of the Revenue were so thrown overboard, staved, or destroyed to prevent seizure, or that any person is an officer of Customs or Excise, or that any person was employed for the prevention of smuggling, or that the offence was committed within the limits of any port, or where the offence is committed in any port of the United Kingdom, the naming of such port in the information or proceedings shall be deemed to be sufficient, unless the defendant in any such case shall prove to the contrary. (See ante, p. 401).

Sect. 261.—Proof of commission, and competency of witnesses.]—If upon any trial, a question shall arise whether any person is an officer of the army, navy, marines, or coastguard, duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, or an officer of customs or excise, his own evidence thereof, or other evidence of his having acted as such, shall be deemed sufficient without production of his commission or deputation; and every such officer and any person acting in his aid or assistance shall be deemed a competent witness upon the trial of any suit or information on account of any seizure or penalty as aforesaid, notwithstanding such officer or other person may be entitled to the whole or any part of such seizure or penalty, or to any reward upon the conviction of the party charged in such suit or information. (As to this section, see ante, pp. 401, 455).

Indictment for shooting at an Officer of the Customs. (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 193, ante, p. 968).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Shooting at customs officer, contrary to section 193 of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously shot at, maimed or wounded C. D., a coastguard on full pay, employed in the prevention of smuggling and then being in the execution of his duty.

As to the venue, see ante, pp. 41, 968.

Felony. It would seem that the effect of 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 293, was to impose penal servitude for life or not less than five years. The latter is altered to three years by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (1) (ante, p. 238). But the point is not quite clear. The maximum term of imprisonment, three years, specified in 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 193, seems to be reduced to two years by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-s. 2 (ante, p. 239).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that C. D. was a coastguard, etc., in the due exercise of his office. His own evidence thereof, or other evidence of his acting as such, will be sufficient, without producing his commission or appointment (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, ss. 260, 261, ante, p. 969, and see ante, p. 401). The statute only applies to such officers of the army, navy, marines, or coastguard, as are on full pay, and employed for the prevention of smuggling. Prove that the defendant wilfully fired at C. D. If he fired wilfully, it will be sufficient evidence of his doing so maliciously, see ante, pp. 741, 800.

Indictment for shooting at Vessels belonging to the Navy, etc.
(39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 193, ante, p. 968).

Statement of Offence.

Shooting at a vessel, contrary to section 193 of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876.

Particulars of Offence.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, on the high seas, maliciously shot at a vessel belonging to his Majesty's navy, called the Hawk.

As to venue, see s. 229 (ante, p. 968).

Felony: 30 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 193. See the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant wilfully shot at the vessel, etc., mentioned in the indictment; the malice will be presumed until the contrary be shown upon the part of the defendant (see ante, p. 800). Where a custom-house vessel chased a smuggler and fired into her without hoisting such a pendant as required (56 G. 3, c. 104, s. 8 (rep.)), the returning the fire was considered not to be malicious. R. v. Reynolds, R. & R. 465. Prove, also, that the vessel in question belonged at the time to his Majesty's navy, or was in the service of the revenue, as stated in the indictment; which may be done, it should seem, by parol testimony without any documentary evidence.

The pendants and ensigns to be worn by ships in the preventive service and merchant vessels are regulated by proclamation of January 1, 1801, and February 1, 1817 (Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. i. tit. Arms, etc., p. 6), and by s. 73 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60).

NEGLECTING TO PROVIDE FOOD, ETC., FOR, AND ASSAULTING, ETC., APPRENTICES OR SERVANTS.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 26.]—Whosoever, being legally liable, either as a master or mistress, to provide for any apprentice or servant necessary food, clothing or lodging, shall wilfully and without lawful excuse refuse or neglect to provide the same, or shall unlawfully and maliciously do or cause to be done any bodily harm to any such apprentice or servant, so that the life of such apprentice or servant shall be endangered, or the health of such apprentice or servant shall have been or shall be likely to be permanently injured, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude. . . .

Sect. 73.—Prosecutions by guardians of poor.—Costs.]—Where any complaint shall be made of any offence against s. 26 of this Act, or of any bodily injury inflicted upon any person under the age of sixteen years, for which the party committing it is liable to be indicted, and the circumstances of which offence amount, in point of law, to a felony, or an attempt to commit a felony, or an assault with intent to commit a felony, and two justices of the peace before whom such complaint is heard shall certify under their hands that it is necessary for the purposes of public justice that the prosecution should be conducted by the guardians of the union or place, or, where there are no guardians, by the overseers of the poor of the place, in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, such guardians or overseers, as the case may be, upon personal service of such certificate or a duplicate thereof upon the clerk of such guardians or upon any one of such overseers, shall conduct the prosecution, and shall pay the costs reasonably and properly incurred by them therein (so far as the same shall not be allowed to them under any order of any court) out of the common fund of the union, or out of the funds in the hands of the guardians or overseers, as the case may be; and, where there is a board of guardians, the clerk or some other officer of the union or place, and, where there is no board of guardians, one of the overseers of the poor, may, if such justices think it necessary for the purposes of public justice, be bound over to prosecute. (This section re-enacts 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, ss. 6, 7. See also ante, p. 287), and 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 34 (post, p. 990)).

38 & 39 Vict. c. 86 (Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875), s. 6.—Neglect to supply apprentice or servant with food or medical aid.]—Where a master, being legally liable to provide for his servant or apprentice necessary food, clothing, medical aid, or lodging, wilfully and without lawful excuse, refuses or neglects to provide the same, whereby the health of the servant or apprentice is or is likely to be seriously or permanently injured, he shall on summary conviction be liable either to pay a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, or to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour. [The defendant can elect to be tried on indictment. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 86, s. 9; 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (ante, p. 7).]

8 Edw. 7, c. 67 (Children Act, 1908), s. 12.]—Assaults, etc., by persons over sixteen on persons under sixteen.]—See post, p. 980.

Indictment for not providing a Servant with necessary Food.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 26, ante, p. 971).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Failing to provide food for a servant, contrary to section 26 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, and on other days between the —— —— —— ——, then being the master of C. D., a domestic servant and legally liable to provide necessary food for the said C. D., wilfully and without lawful excuse neglected to provide the same, [and thereby endangered the life of the said C. D. or permanently injured her health or made it likely that her health should be permanently injured.]

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not less than three years and not exceeding five years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 26; 54 & 55 Vict. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances, and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

In the case of an apprentice, to prove the apprenticeship, if it was by deed, produce and prove the execution of the deed, or, in case it be in the possession of the defendant, and there be no counterpart, by secondary evidence of its contents, after due notice given to the defendant to produce it (see ante, pp. 368-370).

Legally liable.]—The legal liability of a master to provide his apprentice with necessary food, clothing or lodging will be inferred, even if it is not expressly stipulated for, from the apprenticeship itself. But in the case of neglect of a servant, an indictment against a master at common law for neglecting to provide sufficient food for his servant (see ante, p. 2; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 668, 907) must allege that the servant was of tender years and under the dominion and control of the defendant. R. v. Ridley, 2 Camp. 650. There is a distinction between the cases of children, apprentices of tender years, and lunatics under the care of persons bound to provide for their wants and the case of a mistress and a servant of full age able to take care of herself and to withdraw herself from the service of her mistress; R. v. Jane Charlotte Smith, L. & C. 607, 620; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 153, per Montague Smith, J.; and when a person, having free control of her actions and able to take care of herself, remains in a service where she is starved and badly lodged, the mistress is not criminally responsible for any consequences that may ensue. Id., L. & C. 625, per Erle, C.J.

Prove the wilful refusal or neglect of the defendant to provide the prosecutor with necessary food, etc., as stated in the indictment. Whether it be necessary to prove that by such refusal or neglect the prosecutor's life was endangered, or that his health was or was likely to be permanently injured, depends upon the construction which is to be put upon the statute. If the words " so that the life of such person shall be endangered," etc., apply to all the preceding matter, such proof will be necessary; if only to the branch of the section which relates to the actual doing of bodily harm to the apprentice or servant, such proof will be unnecessary. Until there has been some decision on the subject, it will be safer to introduce the allegation between square brackets (ante, p. 972), and to be prepared with evidence to sustain it. It would seem, indeed, to be the better opinion, that the words " so that the life of such person shall be endangered, etc.," override all the preceding matter, otherwise a mere single wilful refusal to provide a dinner would be within the clause. Upon an indictment for unlawfully and maliciously assaulting an apprentice or servant, it is clear that such allegation and proof are necessary.

Medical aid.]—" By the general law a master was not bound to provide medical advice for his servant; yet the case was different with respect to an apprentice." R. v. Smith, 8 C. & P. 153, Patteson, J.; and see Sellen v. Norman, 4 C. & P. 80: Wennall v. Adney, 3 B. & P. 247: Eversley, Dom. Rel. (2nd ed.) 868. Cruelty to servants or apprentices under sixteen (including failure to provide adequate medical aid) can be dealt with under 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 12 (post, p. 980).

ILL-TREATMENT OF LUNATICS IN ASYLUMS, ETC.

Statutes.

23 & 24 Vict. c. 75 (Criminal Lunatic Asylums Act, 1860), s. 13.]—Any superintendent, officer, nurse, attendant, servant, or other person employed in any asylum for criminal lunatics, who strikes, wounds, ill-treats or wilfully neglects any person confined therein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be subject to indictment for every such offence, and on conviction under the indictment to fine or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, or to both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the Court, or to forfeit for every such offence on summary conviction thereof before two justices any sum not exceeding twenty pounds, nor less than two pounds.

53 & 54 Vict. c. 5 (Lunacy Act, 1890), s. 322.]—If any manager, officer, nurse, attendant, servant, or other person employed in an institution for lunatics [which by s. 341 means an asylum, hospital, or licensed house], or any person having charge of a lunatic, whether by reason of any contract, or of any tie of relationship, or marriage, or otherwise, ill-treats or wilfully neglects a patient, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction on indictment, shall be liable to fine or imprisonment, or to both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the Court, or be liable on summary conviction for every offence to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, nor less than two pounds. [This section was framed on 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 56; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, s. 5; and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 123. As to its effect, see Wood Renton on Lunacy, 680. It was applied with modifications to Ireland by 1 Edw. 7, c. 17, s. 2.

Sects. 207-229.]—Define what are licensed houses and prescribe rules for their conduct.

Sect. 324.—Abuse of female lunatic.]—Post, p. 1017.

Sect. 325.]—Prosecution only by consent of the attorney-general, or order of the commissioners of lunacy, or visitors of the asylum, etc.

Sect. 341.—Definitions.]—In this Act, if not inconsistent with the context:

"Asylum" means an asylum for lunatics, provided by a county or borough, or by a union of counties or boroughs.

"Hospital" means any hospital or part of a hospital, or other house or institution (not being an asylum) wherein lunatics are received and supported wholly or partly by voluntary contributions, or by any charitable bequest or gift, or by applying the excess of payments of some patients for or towards the maintenance, provision, or benefit of other patients.

"Institution for lunatics" means "asylum," "hospital," or "licensed house."

"Lunatic" means an idiot, or person of unsound mind (ante, p. 13).

Indictment. (53 & 54 Vict. c. 5, s. 322, supra.)

An indictment for this offence can be framed on the precedents (ante, p. 972, post, p. 976).

Evidence.

As to the evidence necessary to support an indictment for misusing a lunatic, see R. v. Pelham, 8 Q. B. 959; 15 L. J. (M. C.) 105. As to what may constitute wilful neglect, see Dent's case [1874], cited Wood Renton on Lunacy, 682: R. v. Hill, 50 J. P. 137. In R. v. Rundle, Dears. 482; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 129; 6 Cox, 549, it was held under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, s. 9 (rep.), that a husband having the care and charge of his wife, a lunatic, was not "a person having the care or charge" of a lunatic within the meaning of that enactment, which it was held did not apply to persons whose care or charge was purely of a domestic character. This case was distinguished in R. v. Porter, 33 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 126; L. & C. 394; 9 Cox, 449; and was questioned in Buchanan v. Hardy, 18 Q. B. D. 486; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 42, and seems to be no longer an authority under the wider language of 53 & 54 Vict. c. 5, s. 322. On a charge under s. 322, the lunatic is admissible as a witness if the judge considers him competent. R. v. Hill, 2 Den. 254; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 222 (see ante, p. 452; Wood Renton on Lunacy, 683 n.). Imbecility and loss of mental power, whether arising from natural decay or paralysis, softening of the brain, or other natural cause, although unaccompanied by frenzy or delusion of any kind, was held to constitute unsoundness of mind amounting to lunacy, within 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100 (rep.). R. v. Shaw, L. R 1 C. C. R. 145; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 112; 11 Cox, 109.

OFFENCES WITH RESPECT TO DEFECTIVES.

Statute.

3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 28 (Mental Deficiency Act, 1913), s. 1.—Definition of defectives.]—The following classes of persons who are mentally defective shall be deemed to be defectives within the meaning of this Act:—(a) Idiots; that is to say, persons so deeply defective in mind from birth or from an early age as to be unable to guard themselves against common physical dangers; (b) imbeciles; that is to say, persons in whose case there exists from birth or from an early age mental defectiveness not amounting to idiocy, yet so pronounced that they are incapable of managing themselves or their affairs, or, in the case of children, of being taught to do so; (c) feeble-minded persons; that is to say, persons in whose case there exists from birth or from an early age mental defectiveness not amounting to imbecility, yet so pronounced that they require care, supervision, and control for their own protection or for the protection of others, or, in the case of children, that they by reason of such defectiveness appear to be permanently incapable of receiving proper benefit from the instruction in ordinary schools; (d) moral imbeciles; that is to say, persons who from an early age display some permanent mental defect coupled with strong vicious or criminal propensities on which punishment has had little or no deterrent effect.

Sect. 51.—Offences with respect to the reception and detention of defectives.]—(1) It shall not be lawful for a person without the consent of the Board to undertake the care and control of more than one person who is a defective, or who is placed under his care as being a defective elsewhere than in an institution, a certified house, or an approved home, and, if any person contravenes this provision, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(3) If any manager of any institution for defectives, or the owner of a certified house, or the guardian of a defective, detains a patient or exercises any of the powers conferred upon him by this Act after he has knowledge that those powers have expired, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(4) Nothing in this section shall apply to or affect any person who under the Lunacy Acts, 1890 to 1911, or the Elementary Education (Defective and Epileptic Children) Act, 1899, as amended by any subsequent enactment, receives or detains any person in accordance with those Acts, notwithstanding that the person so received and detained is a defective within the meaning of this Act.

Sect. 54.—Obstruction.]—(1) Any person who obstructs any Commissioner or inspector or visitor or any officer or other person appointed or employed by a local authority in the exercise of the powers conferred by or under this Act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sect. 55.—Ill-treatment.]—If any manager, officer, nurse, attendant, servant, or other person employed in an institution or certified house, or approved home, or any person having charge of a defective, whether by reason of any contract, or of any tie of relationship, or marriage, or otherwise, ill-treats or wilfully neglects the defective, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sect. 60.—Punishment for offences.]—(1) An offence under this Act declared to be a misdemeanor shall be punishable by fine or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, but may, except where otherwise expressly provided, instead of being prosecuted on indictment, be prosecuted summarily, and, if so prosecuted, shall be punishable only with imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour, or with a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, or both.

Sect. 71.—Interpretation.]—

The expressions " institution " and " institution for defectives " mean a State institution or certified institution :

The expression " State institution " means an institution for defectives of dangerous or violent propensities established by the Board under this Act :

The expression " certified institution " means an institution in respect of which a certificate has been granted under this Act to the managers to receive defectives therein, and includes, subject to the provisions of this Act, any premises provided by a board of guardians and approved under this Act :

The expression " certified house " means a house in which defectives are received by the owner thereof for his private profit, and in respect of which a certificate has been granted under this Act :

The expression " approved home " means any premises in which defectives are received and supported wholly or partly by voluntary contributions, or by applying the excess of payment of some patients for or towards the support of other patients, or a house in which defectives are received by the owner thereof for his private profit, and which has been approved by the Board under this Act :

For other offences under this Act, see post, p. 1038.

ABANDONING OR EXPOSING CHILDREN UNDER TWO YEARS OF AGE WHEREBY LIFE IS ENDANGERED.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 27.—Abandoning, etc., child under two years.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully abandon or expose any child, being under the age of two years, whereby the life of such child shall be endangered, or the health of such child shall have been or shall be likely to be permanently injured, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude. . . . [This section was new law in 1861. In practice it is superseded by the Children Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 67), s. 12, post, p. 980.]

8 Edw. 7, c. 67, ss. 27-32.—Procedure and evidence.]—See post, pp. 987-9.

Indictment.

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Abandoning a child, contrary to section 27 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, unlawfully abandoned or exposed a child under the age of two years, whereby its life was endangered or its health permanently injured or was likely to be permanently injured.

Add counts under 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 12 (post, p. 980).

If the offence is continuous it is not necessary to specify the date of the acts alleged to constitute the offence. (8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 32 (4) post, p. 990).

" Abandoning " seems to be a continuous offence. See R. v. White, (post, p. 978).

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 27; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

In order to sustain an indictment under this section it is only necessary to prove that the defendant wilfully abandoned or exposed the child mentioned in the indictment; that the child was then under two years of age (as to presumption of age, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123 (post, p. 992)); and that its life was thereby endangered, or its health had been or then was likely to be permanently injured. The following facts were held to warrant a conviction on an indictment framed on this section charging the prisoner with abandoning and exposing a child under the age of two years, whereby its life was endangered. One of the prisoners was the mother of a weakly bastard child. When it was about five weeks old, both the prisoners put the child in a hamper at S., wrapped up in a shawl and packed with shavings and cotton wool, and the mother took the hamper from S. to the booking-office of the railway station at M. (a distance of about four miles) and there left it, having paid the carriage of the hamper to G. The hamper was addressed to the lodgings of the child's father at G., and he had told the mother, previous to the child's birth, that if she sent it to him he would keep it. The mother told the clerk at the station to be very careful of the hamper, and to send it by the next train, which was done in ten mintes from the time of its delivery at the station. Upon the address were the words "With care; to be delivered immediately." The hamper was, as above mentioned, duly sent by train, and was delivered at its address in G. in little less than an hour from the time of its being despatched from M. On its being opened the child was alive and lived for three weeks afterwards, when it died from causes not attributable to the conduct of the prisoners or either of them. R. v. Falkingham, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 222; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 47; 11 Cox, 475.

A woman who was living apart from her husband, and who had the actual custody of their child, under two years of age, brought the child on the 19th October, and left it outside the father's door, telling him she had done so. He knowingly allowed it to remain lying outside his door from 7 p.m. till 1 a.m., when it was removed by a constable, being then cold and stiff. Upon this state of facts, it was held, that although the father had not the actual custody and possession of the child, yet, as he was by law bound to provide for it, his allowing it to remain where he did was an abandonment and exposure of the child by him, whereby its life was endangered, within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 27. R. v. White, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 311; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 134; 12 Cox, 83.

As to the cases in which an indictment for murder or manslaughter will lie, where death ensued from the abandonment or exposure, see ante, pp. 871, 894.

As to criminal liability at common law for neglect of children of tender years, see ante, p. 2, and 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 907.

ACTUAL BODILY HARM TO CHILD OR YOUNG PERSON ENGAGED IN DANGEROUS PERFORMANCE.

Statutes.

42 & 43 Vict. c. 34 (Children's Dangerous Performances Act, 1879), s. 3.—Offence punishable on summary conviction.]—Any person who shall cause any child under the age of fourteen years to take part in any public exhibition or performance whereby, in the opinion of a court of summary jurisdiction, the life or limbs of such child shall be endangered, and the parent or guardian, or any person having the custody of such child, who shall aid or abet the same, shall severally be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall on summary conviction be liable for each offence to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds.

Indictable misdemeanor.]—And where in the course of a public exhibition or performance which in its nature is dangerous to the life or limb of a child under such age as aforesaid taking part therein, any accident causing actual bodily harm occurs to any such child, the employer of such child shall be liable to be indicted as having committed an assault; and the Court before whom such employer is convicted on an indictment shall have the power of awarding compensation not exceeding twenty pounds, to be paid by such employer to the child, or to some person named by the Court on behalf of the child, for the bodily harm so occasioned: Provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

Sect. 4.—Evidence of age of child.]—Whenever any person is charged with an offence against this Act in respect of a child who in the opinion of the Court trying the case is apparently of the age alleged by the informant, it shall lie on the person charged to prove that the child is not of that age. See 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123, post, p. 992.

60 & 61 Vict. c. 52 (Dangerous Performances Act, 1897), s. 1.—Extension of the Act of 1879.]—The Children's Dangerous Performances Act, 1879, shall apply in the case of any male young person under the age of sixteen years, and any female young person under the age of eighteen years, in like manner as it applies in the case of a child under the age of fourteen years.

Sect. 2.—Limitation on prosecution.]—(1) Except where an accident causing actual bodily harm occurs to any child or young person, no prosecution or other proceeding shall be instituted for an offence against the Children's Dangerous Performances Act, 1879, as amended by this Act, without the consent in writing of the chief officer of the police area in which the offence is committed. (2) For the purposes of this section the expression "chief officer of police," (a) with respect to any place in England other than the City of London, has the meaning assigned by the Police Act, 1890; (b) with respect to the City of London means the Commissioner of City Police.

[Apparently the consent must be given before any proceedings are taken (see Thorpe v. Priestnall [1897] 1 Q. B. 159; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 248) and by the chief officer himself, not by a subordinate acting in his absence.]

ASSAULT, ILL-TREATMENT, NEGLECT, ABANDONMENT, OR EXPOSURE OF CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS BY PERSONS OVER SIXTEEN.

Statute.

8 Edw. 7, c. 67 (Children Act, 1908), Part II., s. 12.—Punishment for cruelty to children.]—(1) If any person over the age of sixteen years, who has the custody, charge, or care of any child or young person, wilfully assaults, ill-treats, neglects, abandons, or exposes such child or young person, or causes or procures such child or young person to be assaulted, ill-treated, neglected, abandoned, or exposed in a manner likely to cause such child or young person unnecessary suffering or injury to his health (including injury to or loss of sight, or hearing, or limb, or organ of the body, and any mental derangement), that person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable—

(a) on conviction on indictment to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds, or alternatively, or in default of payment of such fine, or in addition thereto, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years; and

(b) on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding twenty-five pounds, or alternatively, or in default of payment of such fine, or in addition thereto, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months;

and for the purposes of this section a parent or other person legally liable to maintain a child or young person shall be deemed to have neglected him in a manner likely to cause injury to his health if he fails to provide adequate food, clothing, medical aid, or lodging for the child or young person, or if, being unable otherwise to provide such food, clothing, medical aid, or lodging, he fails to take steps to procure the same to be provided under the Acts relating to the relief of the poor. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 1 (1), and s. 23 (2). See s. 38 (2) for definitions (post, p. 991).]

(2) A person may be convicted of an offence under this section, either on indictment or by a court of summary jurisdiction, notwithstanding that actual suffering or injury to health, or the likelihood of such suffering or injury to health, was obviated by the action of another person. [This provision was new in 1908.]

(3) A person may be convicted of an offence under this section, either on indictment or by a court of summary jurisdiction, notwithstanding the death of the child or young person in respect of whom the offence is committed. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 1 (2), with the addition of the words in italics.]

(4) Upon the trial of any person over the age of sixteen indicted for the manslaughter of a child or young person of whom he had the custody, charge, or care, it shall be lawful for the jury, if they are satisfied that the accused is guilty of an offence under this section in respect of such child or young person, to find the accused guilty of such offence. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 1 (3). It does not mean that the jury can convict the accused of one of the lesser offences mentioned in the section although they think him guilty of manslaughter; it means that they can convict him of the lesser offences if that is what they think the verdict ought to be upon the facts, although he is charged with manslaughter. R. v. Tonks [1916] 1 K. B. 443; 85 L. J. (K. B.) 396; 114 L. T. 81; 80 J. P. 165; 25 Cox, 228; 32 T. L. R. 137; 11 Cr. App. R. 284.]

(5) If it is proved that a person convicted under this section was directly or indirectly interested in any sum of money accruable or payable in the event of the death of the child or young person, and had knowledge that such sum of money was accruing or becoming payable, then—

(a) in the case of a conviction on indictment, the Court may in its discretion either increase the amount of the fine under this section so that the fine does not exceed two hundred pounds; or, in lieu of awarding any other penalty under this section, sentence the person to penal servitude for any term not exceeding five years; and

(b) in the case of a summary conviction, the Court in determining the sentence to be awarded shall take into consideration the fact that the person was so interested and had such knowledge. [As to convictions on indictment this sub-section is in substance taken from 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 1 (4); as to summary convictions, it was new in 1908.]

(6) A person shall be deemed to be directly or indirectly interested in a sum of money under this section, if he has any share in or any benefit from the payment of that money, though he is not a person to whom it is legally payable. This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 1 (5).]

(7) A copy of a policy of insurance, certified by an officer or agent of the insurance company granting the policy to be a true copy shall in any proceedings under this section be primâ facie evidence that the child or young person therein stated to be insured has been in fact so insured, and that the person in whose favour the policy has been granted is the person to whom the money thereby insured is legally payable. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 1 (6).]

Sect. 13.—8 Edw. 7, c. 67 (Children Act, 1908).—Suffocation of infants.]—Where it is proved that the death of an infant under three years of age was caused by suffocation (not being suffocation caused by disease or the presence of any foreign body in the throat or air-passages of the infant) whilst the infant was in bed with some other person over sixteen years of age, and that that other person was at the time of going to bed under the influence of drink, that other person shall be deemed to have neglected the infant in a manner likely to cause injury to its health within the meaning of this part of this Act. [This section was new law in 1908.]

Sect. 14.—Allowing child to be in streets, for purpose of begging, etc.]—(1) If any person causes or procures any child or young person, or, having the custody, charge, or care of a child or young person, allows that child or young person, to be in any street, premises, or place for the purpose of begging or receiving alms, or of inducing the giving of alms, whether or not there is any pretence of singing, playing, performing, offering anything for sale, or otherwise, that person shall, on summary conviction, be liable to a fine not exceeding 25*l.* or, alternatively, or in default of payment of such fine, or in addition thereto, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding three months.

(2) If a person having the custody, charge, or care of a child or young person is charged with an offence under this section, and it is proved that the child or young person was in any street, premises, or place for any such purpose as aforesaid, and that the person charged allowed the child or young person to be in the street, premises, or place, he shall be presumed to have allowed him to be in the street, premises, or place for that purpose unless the contrary is proved. [This section was new law in 1908.]

Sect. 15.—Allowing child to be in a room containing an open fire grate.]—If any person over the age of sixteen years who has the custody, charge, or care of any child under the age of seven years allows that child to be in any room containing an open fire grate not sufficiently protected to guard against the risk of the child being burnt or scalded, without taking reasonable precautions against that risk, and by reason thereof the child is killed or suffers serious injury, he shall on summary conviction be liable to a fine not exceeding 10*l.*

Provided that this section shall not, nor shall any proceedings taken thereunder, affect any liability of any such person to be proceeded against by indictment for any indictable offence. [This section was new law in 1908.]

Sect. 16.—Allowing child to frequent brothel.]—See post, p. 1026.

Sect. 17, 18.—Causing or encouraging prostitution of girl under sixteen.]—See post, p. 1027.

Sect. 19.—Power to take offenders into custody.]—(1) Any constable may take into custody, without warrant, any person—

(a) who within view of the constable commits an offence under this part of this Act, or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, where the name and residence of such person are unknown to the constable and cannot be ascertained by the constable; or

(b) who has committed, or who the constable has reason to believe has committed, an offence of cruelty or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, if he has reasonable ground for believing that such person will abscond, or if the name and address of such person are unknown to and cannot be ascertained by the constable.

(2) Where a constable arrests any person without warrant in pursuance of this section, the superintendent or inspector of police or an officer of police of equal or superior rank, or the officer in charge of the police station to which such person is brought, shall, unless in his belief the release of such person on bail would tend to defeat the ends of justice, or to cause injury or danger to the child or young person against whom the offence is alleged to have been committed, release the person arrested on his entering into such a recognizance, with or without sureties, as may in the judgment of the officer of police be required to secure the attendance of such person upon the hearing of the charge. [This section is based upon 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 4.]

Sect. 20.—Detention of child in place of safety.]—(1) A constable, or any person authorized by a justice, may take to a place of safety any child or young person in respect of whom an offence under this part of this Act, or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, has been, or there is reason to believe has been, committed.

(2) A child or young person so taken to a place of safety, and also any child or young person who seeks refuge in a place of safety, may there be detained until he can be brought before a court of summary jurisdiction, and that court may make such order as is mentioned in the next following sub-section, or may cause the child or young person to be dealt with as circumstances may admit and require, until the charge made against any person in respect of any offence as aforesaid with regard to the child or young person has been determined by the conviction or discharge of such person.

(3) Where it appears to a court of summary jurisdiction or any justice that an offence under this part of this Act, or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, has been committed in respect of any child or young person who is brought before the Court or justice, and that it is expedient in the interests of the child or young person that an order should be made under this sub-section, the Court or justice may, without prejudice to any other power under this Act, make such order as circumstances require for the care and detention of the child or young person until a reasonable time has elapsed for a charge to be made against some person for having committed the offence, and, if a charge is made against any person within that time, until the charge has been determined by the conviction or discharge of that person, and in case of conviction for such further time not exceeding twenty-one days as the Court which convicted may direct, and any such order may be carried out notwithstanding that any person claims the custody of the child or young person. [This section was new law in 1908.]

Sect. 21.—Disposal of child by order of Court.]—(1) Where a person having the custody, charge, or care of a child or young person has been—

(a) convicted of committing in respect of such child or young person an offence under this part of this Act or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act; or

(b) committed for trial for any such offence; or

(c) bound over to keep the peace towards such child or young person, by any court, that court, either at the time when the person is so convicted, committed for trial, or bound over, and without requiring any new proceedings to be instituted for the purpose, or at any other time, and also any petty sessional court before which any person may bring the case, may, if satisfied on inquiry that it is expedient so to deal with the child or young person, order that the child or young person be taken out of the custody, charge, or care of the person so convicted, committed for trial, or bound over, and be committed to the care of a relative of the child or young person, or some other fit person, named by the Court (such relative or other person being willing to undertake such care), until he attains the age of sixteen years, or for any shorter period, and that court or any court of like jurisdiction may of its own motion, or on the application of any person, from time to time by order renew, vary, and revoke any such order. [This sub-section, with sub-s. 2, re-enacts 4 Edw. 7,

c. 15, s. 6 (1). Apparently no costs can be given on varying an order. Re O'Halloran, 70 J. P. 8.]

(2) If the child or young person has a parent or legal guardian no order shall be made under this section unless the parent or legal guardian has been convicted of or committed for trial for the offence, or is under committal for trial for having been, or has been proved to the satisfaction of the Court making the order to have been, party or privy to the offence, or has been bound over to keep the peace towards the child or young person, or cannot be found. (See note to sub-s. 1.)

(3) Every order under this section shall be in writing, and any such order may be made by the Court in the absence of the child or young person; and the consent of any person to undertake the care of a child or young person in pursuance of any such order shall be proved in such manner as the Court may think sufficient to bind him. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 6 (2).]

(4) Where an order is made under this section in respect of a person who has been committed for trial, then, if that person is acquitted of the charge, or if the charge is dismissed for want of prosecution, the order shall forthwith be void, except with regard to anything that may have been lawfully done under it. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 6 (3).]

(5) The Secretary of State may at any time in his discretion discharge a child or young person from the care of any person to whose care he is committed in pursuance of this section, either absolutely or on such conditions as the Secretary of State approves, and may, if he thinks fit, make rules in relation to children or young persons so committed to the care of any person, and to the duties of such persons with respect to such children or young persons. [This sub-section is based upon 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 6 (4).]

(6) The Secretary of State, in any case where it appears to him to be for the benefit of a child or young person who has been committed to the care of any person in pursuance of this section, may empower such person to procure the emigation of the child or young person, but, except with such authority, no person to whose care a child or young person is so committed shall procure his emigation. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 6 (5).]

(7) Nothing in this section shall be construed as preventing the Court, instead of making an order as respects a child under this section, from ordering the child to be sent to an industrial school in any case in which the Court is authorized to do so under Part IV. of this Act. [This sub-section was new law in 1908.]

Sect. 22.—Maintenance of child when committed to care of any person under order of court.]—(1) Any person to whose care a child or young person is committed under this part of this Act shall, whilst the order is in force, have the like control over the child or young person as if he were his parent, and shall be responsible for his maintenance, and the child or young person shall continue in the care of such person, notwithstanding that he is claimed by his parent or any other person, and if any person—

(a) knowingly assists or induces, directly or indirectly, a child or young person to escape from the person to whose care he is so committed; or

(b) knowingly harbours, conceals, or prevents from returning to such person, a child or young person who has so escaped, or knowingly assists in so doing;

he shall on summary conviction be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two months.

(2) Any court having power so to commit a child or young person shall have power to make the like orders on the parent of or other person liable to maintain the child or young person to contribute to his maintenance during such period as aforesaid, and such orders shall be enforceable in like manner as if the child or young person were ordered to be sent to a certified school under Part IV. of this Act, but the limit on the amount of the weekly sum which the parent or such other person may be required under this section to contribute shall be one pound a week instead of the limit fixed under Part IV.

(3) Any such order may be made on the complaint or application of the person to whose care the child or young person is for the time being committed, and either at the time when the order for the committal of the child or young person to his care is made, or subsequently, and the sums contributed by the parent or such other person shall be paid to such person as the Court may name, and be applied for the maintenance of the child or young person.

(4) Where an order under this part of this Act to commit a child or young person to the care of some relative or other person is made in respect of a person who has been committed for trial for an offence, the Court shall not have power to make an order under this section on the parent or other person liable to maintain the child or young person prior to the trial of the person so committed.

(5) Any court making an order under this section for contribution by a parent or such other person may in any case where there is any pension or income payable to such parent or other person and capable of being attached, after giving the person by whom the pension or income is payable an opportunity of being heard, further order that such part as the Court may see fit of the pension or income be attached and be paid to the person named by the Court. Such further order shall be an authority to the person by whom such pension or other income is payable to make the payment so ordered, and the receipt of the person to whom the payment is ordered to be made shall be a good discharge to such first-mentioned person.

(6) An order under this section may be made by any court before which a person is charged with an offence under this part of this Act, and without regard to the place in which the person to whom the payment is ordered to be made may reside. [Sect. 22 re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 7.]

Sect. 23.—Religious persuasion of person to whom child or young person is committed.]—(1) In determining on the person to whose care the child or young person shall be committed under this part of this Act, the Court shall endeavour to ascertain the religious persuasion to which the child or young person belongs, and shall, if possible, select a person of the same religious persuasion, or a person who gives such undertaking as seems to the Court sufficient that the child or young person shall be brought up in accordance with its own religious persuasion, and such religious persuasion shall be specified in the order.

(2) In any case where the child or young person has been placed pursuant to any such order with a person who is not of the same religious persuasion as that to which the child or young person belongs, or who has not given such undertaking as aforesaid, the Court which made the order, or any court of like jurisdiction, shall, on the application of any person in that behalf, and on its appearing that a fit person, who is of the same religious persuasion, or who will give such undertaking as aforesaid, is willing to undertake the care of the child or young person, make an order to secure his being placed with a person who either is of the same religious persuasion or gives such undertaking as aforesaid.

(3) Where a child or young person has been placed with a person who gives such undertaking as aforesaid, and the undertaking is not observed, the child or young person shall be deemed to have been placed with a person not of the same religious persuasion as that to which the child belongs, as if no such undertaking had been given. [Sect. 23 re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 8.]

Sect. 24.—Warrant to search for or remove a child.]—(1) If it appears to a justice on information on oath laid by any person who, in the opinion of the justice, is acting in the interests of a child or young person, that there is reasonable cause to suspect—

(a) that the child or young person has been or is being assaulted, ill-treated, or neglected in any place within the jurisdiction of the justice, in a manner likely to cause the child or young person unnecessary suffering, or to be injurious to his health; or

(b) that an offence under this part of this Act, or any offence mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, has been or is being committed in respect of the child or young person, the justice may issue a warrant authorizing any constable named therein to search for such child or young person, and, if it is found that he has been or is being assaulted, ill-treated, or neglected in manner aforesaid, or that any such offence as aforesaid has been or is being committed in respect of the child or young person, to take him to and detain him in a place of safety, until he can be brought before a court of summary jurisdiction, or authorizing any constable to remove the child or young person with or without search to a place of safety and detain him there until he can be brought before a court of summary jurisdiction; and the Court before whom the child or young person is brought may commit him to the care of a relative or other fit person in like manner as if the person in whose care he was had been committed for trial for an offence under this part of this Act.

(2) A justice issuing a warrant under this section may by the same warrant cause any person accused of any offence in respect of the child or young person to be apprehended and brought before a court of summary jurisdiction, and proceedings to be taken against such person according to law.

(3) Any constable authorized by warrant under this section to search for any child or young person, or to remove any child or young person with or without search, may enter (if need be by force) any house, building, or other place specified in the warrant, and may remove the child or young person therefrom.

(4) Every warrant issued under this section shall be addressed to and executed by a constable, who shall be accompanied by the person laying the information, if such person so desire, unless the justice by whom the warrant is issued otherwise directs, and may also, if the justice by whom the warrant is issued so directs, be accompanied by a duly qualified medical practitioner.

(5) It shall not be necessary in any information or warrant under this section to name the child or young person. [Sect. 24 re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10.]

Sect. 25.—Visitation of homes.]—(1) The Secretary of State may cause any institution for the reception of poor children or young persons supported wholly or partly by voluntary contributions, and not liable to be inspected by or under the authority of any Government department, to be visited and inspected from time to time by persons appointed by him for the purpose.

(2) Any person so appointed shall have power to enter the institution, and any person who obstructs him in the execution of his duties shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding five pounds, and a refusal to allow any person so appointed to enter the institution shall, for the purposes of the provisions of this part of this Act relating to search warrants, be deemed to be a reasonable cause to suspect that an offence under this part of this Act is being committed in respect of a child or young person in the institution.

(3) Where any such institution is carried on in accordance with the principles of any particular religious denomination, the Secretary of State shall, if so desired by the managers of the institution, appoint, where practicable, a person of that denomination to visit and inspect the institution.

(4) Where any such institution is for the reception of girls only, the Secretary of State shall, if so desired by the managers of the institution, appoint, where practicable, a woman to visit and inspect the institution.

(5) Any appointment made under this section may at any time be revoked by the Secretary of State. [Sect. 25 was new law in 1908.]

Sect. 26.—Power as to habitual drunkards.]—See post, tit. Offences by Habitual Drunkards.

Sect. 27.—Evidence of accused person.]—As respects proceedings against any person for an offence under this part of this Act, or for any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, shall apply as if in the schedule to that Act (ante, p. 466), a reference to this part of this Act and to the First Schedule to this Act were substituted for the reference to the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1894. [A person jointly indicted and tried together with another for an offence against 53 & 54 Vict. c. 44 (rep.), but against whom no case was made out, was held not entitled to be discharged at the close of the case for the prosecution, if the other person charged elected to give evidence under this section, but was required to remain in the dock and take his chance of his fellow-prisoner's evidence making against him. R. v. Martin [1889] 17 Cox, 36, Wills, J.]

Sect. 28.—Extension of power to take deposition of child.]—(1) Where a justice is satisfied by the evidence of a duly qualified medical practitioner that the attendance before a court of any child or young person, in respect of whom an offence under this part of this Act, or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, is alleged to have been committed, would involve serious danger to the life or health of the child or young person, the justice may take in writing the deposition of the child or young person on oath, and shall thereupon subscribe the deposition and add thereto a statement of his reason for taking the deposition, and of the day when and place where the deposition was taken, and of the names of the persons (if any) present at the taking thereof.

(2) The person taking any such deposition shall transmit it with his statement—

(a) if the deposition relates to an offence for which any accused person is already committed for trial, to the proper officer of the Court for trial at which the accused person has been committed; and

(b) in any other case, to the clerk of the peace of the county or borough in which the deposition has been taken;

and the clerk of the peace to whom any such deposition is transmitted shall preserve, file, and record the deposition. [This section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 13.]

Sect. 29.—Admission of deposition of child in evidence.]—Where, on the trial of any person on indictment for an offence of cruelty, or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, the Court is satisfied by the evidence of a duly qualified medical practitioner that the attendance before the Court of any child or young person in respect of whom the offence is alleged to have been committed would involve serious danger to the life or health of the child or young person, any deposition of the child or young person taken under the Indictable Offences Act, 1848, or this part of this Act, shall be admissible in evidence either for or against the accused person without further proof thereof—

(a) if it purports to be signed by the justice by or before whom it purports to be taken; and

(b) if it is proved that reasonable notice of the intention to take the deposition has been served upon the person against whom it is proposed to use it as evidence, and that that person or his counsel or solicitor had, or might have had if he had chosen to be present, an opportunity of cross-examining the child or young person making the deposition. [This section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 14. Semble, the notice must be in writing; see R. v. Shurmer, 17 Q. B. D. 323: R. v. Katz, 64 J. P. 807, Darling, J.]

Sect. 30.—Evidence of child of tender years.]—Where, in any proceeding against any person for an offence [under this part of this Act, or for any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, the child in respect of whom the offence is charged to have been committed, or] any [other] child of tender years who is tendered as a witness, does not in the opinion of the Court understand the nature of an oath, the evidence of that child may be received, though not given upon oath, if, in the opinion of the Court, the child is possessed of sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence, and understands the duty of speaking the truth; and the evidence of the child, though not given on oath, but otherwise taken and reduced into writing in accordance with the provisions of s. 17 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848, or of this part of this Act, shall be deemed to be a deposition within the meaning of that section and that part respectively. [This part gets rid of the difficulties raised by R. v. Pruntey, 16 Cox, 344. The words italicized between square brackets have been repealed by 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58 (see ante, p. 453).]

Provided that—

(a) A person shall not be liable to be convicted of the offence unless the testimony admitted by virtue of this section and given on behalf of the prosecution is corroborated by some other material evidence in support thereof implicating the accused [Refusal by the prisoner to be medically examined is not corroboration under this section; R. v. Gray, 68 J. P. 327. Where there was sufficient corroborative evidence, but an unsatisfactory direction to the jury, the Court of Criminal Appeal declined to quash a conviction. R. v. Murray, 9 Cr. App. R. 248. But where there is not such evidence the conviction will be quashed. R. v. Davies, 85 L. J. (K. B.) 208; 114 L. T. 80; 25 Cox, 225; 11 Cr. App. 272.] and

(b) Any child, whose evidence is received as aforesaid and who wilfully gives false evidence under such circumstances that, if the evidence had been given on oath, he would have been guilty of perjury, shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be liable on summary conviction to be adjudged such punishment as might have been awarded had he been charged with perjury and the case dealt with summarily under s. 10 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. [Sect. 30 re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 15, and the repealed portion of 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 4.]

Sect. 31.—Power to proceed with case in absence of child.]—Where in any proceedings with relation to an offence under this part of this Act, or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, the Court is satisfied that the attendance before the Court of any child or young person in respect of whom the offence is alleged to have been committed is not essential to the just hearing of the case, the case may be proceeded with and determined in the absence of the child or young person. [This section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 16.]

Sect. 32.—Mode of charging offences and limitation of time.]—(1) Where a person is charged with committing an offence under this part of this Act, or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, in respect of two or more children or young persons, the same information or summons may charge the offence in respect of all or any of them, but the person charged shall not be liable to a separate penalty for each child or young person except upon separate informations.

(2) The same information or summons may also charge any person as having the custody, charge, or care, alternatively or together, and may charge him with the offences of assault, ill-treatment, neglect, abandonment, or exposure, together or separately, and may charge him with committing all or any of these offences in a manner likely to cause unnecessary suffering or injury to health, alternatively or together, but when those offences are charged together the person charged shall not be liable to a separate penalty for each. [As to charging neglect of, and assault on, an imbecile son, see R. v. Watson, 30 Ir. L. T. R. 135.]

(3) A person shall not be summarily convicted of an offence under this part of this Act, or of an offence mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, unless the offence was wholly or partly committed within six months before the information was laid; but, subject as aforesaid, evidence may be taken of acts constituting, or contributing to constitute, the offence, and committed at any previous time. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 27.]

(4) When an offence under this part of this Act, or any offence mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, charged against any person is a continuous offence, it shall not be necessary to specify in the information, summons, or indictment, the date of the acts constituting the offence. [Sect. 32 re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 18. In R. v. Miller, 65 J. P. 313, where dates were specified, Phillimore, J., refused to admit evidence of acts on other dates.]

Sect. 33.—Appeal from summary conviction to quarter sessions.]—When, in pursuance of this part of this Act, any person is convicted by a court of summary jurisdiction of an offence, or when in the case of any application to a court of summary jurisdiction under this part of this Act for an order committing a child or young person to the care of any person, or for an order for contribution to the maintenance of a child or young person, any party thereto thinks himself aggrieved by any order or decision of the Court, he may appeal against such a conviction, order, or decision to quarter sessions. [This section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 19.]

Sect. 34.—Institution of proceedings by guardians, etc.]—(1) A board of guardians may institute any proceedings under this part of this Act for any offence in relation to a child or young person, and may, out of their common fund, pay the reasonable costs and expenses of any proceedings so instituted by them. [As to costs of prosecution and defence, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 15 (ante, pp. 267 et seq.).]

(2) The like powers of instituting proceedings may, in London, be also exercised by a local authority for the purposes of Part I. of this Act, and the expenses of such proceedings shall be defrayed as expenses of the authority under Part I. [Sect. 34 re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 21.]

Sect. 35.—Application of Vexatious Indictments Act, 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17.]—Every misdemeanor under this part of this Act shall be deemed to be an offence within, and subject to, the provisions of the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, and any Act amending that Act. [This section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 25.]

Sect. 36.—Extension of s. 10 of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 54.]—Sect. 10 of the Poor Law Act, 1879, shall be amended so as to include in it as one of the associations or societies to which a board of guardians may, with the consent of the Local Government Board, subscribe, any society or body corporate for the prevention of cruelty to children. [This section was new law in 1908.]

Sect. 37.—Right of parent, etc., to administer punishment.]—Nothing in this part of this Act shall be construed to take away or affect the right of any parent, teacher, or other person having the lawful control or charge of a child or young person to administer punishment to such child or young person. [This section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 28. See Cleary v. Booth [1893] 1 Q. B. 465; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 87.]

Sect. 38.—Interpretation.]—(1) In this part of this Act, unless the context otherwise requires, the expression "fit person," in relation to the care of any child or young person, includes any society or body corporate established for the reception or protection of poor children or the prevention of cruelty to children.

(2) For the purposes of this part of this Act—

Any person who is the parent or legal guardian of a child or young person or who is legally liable to maintain a child or young person shall be presumed to have the custody of the child or young person, and as between father and mother the father shall not be deemed to have ceased to have the custody of the child or young person by reason only that he has deserted, or otherwise does not reside with, the mother and child or young person [Poole v. Stokes, 78 J. P. 231; 30 T. L. R. 371]; and

Any person to whose charge a child or young person is committed by any person who has the custody of the child or young person shall be presumed to have charge of the child or young person; and

Any other person having actual possession or control of a child or young person shall be presumed to have the care of the child or young person. [See R. v. Dyson [1908] 2 K. B. 454; 77 L. J. (K. B.) 813. As to the liability of a father for his illegitimate children while cohabiting with the mother, see Liverpool Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children v. Jones, 30 T. L. R. 584; and as to the liability of a wife living with her husband, see R. v. Forsyth, Chester Summer Assizes, July 25, 1899, Kennedy, J. (ante, p. 872).]

(3) This part of this Act shall apply in the case of a child or young person who has before the commencement of this Act been committed to the care of a relative or other fit person by an order made under the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904, as if the order had been made under this part of this Act.

Sect. 114.—Power to clear court.]—In addition and without prejudice to any powers which a court may possess to hear proceedings in camerâ the Court may, where a person who, in the opinion of the Court, is a child or young person, is called as a witness in any proceedings in relation to an offence against, or any conduct contrary to, decency or morality, direct that all or any persons, not being members or officers of the Court or parties to the case, their counsel or solicitors, or persons otherwise directly concerned in the case, be excluded from the Court during the taking of the evidence of the child or young person: Provided that nothing in this section shall authorize the exclusion of bonâ fide representatives of a newspaper or news agency. [This section was new law in 1908.]

Sect. 115.—Prohibition on children being present in court during the trial of other persons.]—No child (other than an infant in arms) shall be permitted to be present in court during the trial of any person charged with an offence, or during any proceedings preliminary thereto, and if so present he shall be ordered to be removed, unless he is the person charged with the alleged offence, or during such time as his presence is required as a witness or otherwise for the purposes of justice.

Provided that this section shall not apply to messengers, clerks, and other persons required to attend at any court for purposes connected with their employment. [This section was new law in 1908.]

Sect. 123.—Presumption and determination of age.]—(1) Where a person, whether charged with an offence or not, is brought before any court otherwise than for the purpose of giving evidence, and it appears to the Court that he is a child or young person, the Court shall make due inquiry as to the age of that person, and for that purpose shall take such evidence as may be forthcoming at the hearing of the case, but an order or judgment of the Court shall not be invalidated by any subsequent proof that the age of that person has not been correctly stated to the Court, and the age presumed or declared by the Court to be the age of the person so brought before it shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be the true age of that person, and, where it appears to the Court that the person so brought before it is of the age of sixteen years or upwards, that person shall for the purposes of this Act be deemed not to be a child or young person.

(2) Where in a charge or indictment for an offence under this Act, or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act, except an offence under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, it is alleged that the person by or in respect of whom the offence was committed was a child or young person or was under or above any specified age, and he appears to the Court to have been at the date of the commission of the alleged offence a child or young person, or to have been under or above the specified age, as the case may be, he shall for the purposes of this Act be presumed at that date to have been a child or young person or to have been under or above that age, as the case may be, unless the contrary is proved. [This sub-section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 17. See R. v. Hale [1905] 1 K. B. 126; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 65; 69 J. P. 83.]

(3) Where in any charge or indictment for an offence under this Act or any of the offences mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act it is alleged that the person in respect of whom the offence was committed was a child or was a young person, it shall not be a defence to prove that the person alleged to have been a child was a young person or the person alleged to have been a young person was a child in any case where the acts constituting the alleged offence would equally have been an offence if committed in respect of a young person or child respectively.

(4) Where a person is charged with an offence under this Act in respect of a person apparently under a specified age it shall be a defence to prove that the person was actually of or over that age.

Sect. 124.—Evidence of wages of defendant.]—In any proceedings under this Act a copy of an entry in the wages book of any employer of labour, or, if no wages book be kept, a written statement signed by the employer, or by any responsible person in his employ, shall be primâ facie evidence that the wages therein entered, or stated as having been paid to any person, have in fact been so paid. [This section re-enacts 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 24.]

Sect. 126.—Reception and maintenance of children in workhouses.]—Boards of guardians shall provide for the reception of children and young persons brought to a workhouse in pursuance of this Act, and, where the place to which under this Act a child or young person is authorized to be taken is a workhouse, the master shall receive the child or young person into the workhouse if there is suitable accommodation therein, and any expenses incurred in respect of the child or young person shall be paid out of the common fund.

Sect. 127.—Variation of trusts for maintenance of child.]—(1) Where a child or young person is by an order of any court made under this Act removed from the care of any person, and that person is entitled under any trust to receive any sum of money in respect of the maintenance of the child or young person, the Court may order the whole or any part of the sums so payable under the trust to be paid to the person to whose care the child or young person is committed, to be applied by that person for the benefit of the child or young person in such manner as, having regard to the terms of the trust, the Court may direct.

(2) An appeal shall lie from an order of a court of summary jurisdiction under this section to quarter sessions.

Sect. 131.—General definitions.]—For the purposes of this Act unless the context otherwise requires—

The expression " child " means a person under the age of fourteen years [by s. 128 (1) " fourteen " is substituted for " twelve " in the definition of child and young person in the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), and the First Schedule of that Act is amended];

The expression " young person " means a person who is fourteen years of age or upwards and under the age of sixteen years;

The expression " guardian," in relation to a child, young person, or youthful offender, includes any person who, in the opinion of the Court having cognizance of any case in relation to the child, young person, or youthful offender, or in which the child, young person, or youthful offender is concerned, has for the time being the charge of or control over the child, young person, or youthful offender;

The expression " legal guardian," in relation to an infant, child, young person, or youthful offender, means a person appointed, according to law, to be his guardian by deed or will, or by order of a court of competent jurisdiction;

The expression " place of safety " means any workhouse or police station, or any hospital, surgery, or any other suitable place, the occupier of which is willing temporarily to receive an infant, child, or young person.

Sect. 134.—Short title, commencement, and repeal.]—(1) This Act may be cited as the Children Act, 1908.

(2) Save as otherwise expressly provided, this Act shall come into operation on the first day of April, 1909.

(3) The enactments mentioned in the Third Schedule to this Act are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the third column of that schedule: Provided that nothing in this repeal shall affect any notice or certificate given or any appointment or rules made under any enactment hereby repealed, and every such notice, certificate, appointment, and rules shall have effect as if given or made under this Act.

[By s. 38 (1) of the Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63), " where . . . any Act passed after the commencement of this Act repeals and re-enacts with or without modification any provisions of a former Act, references in any other Act to the provisions so repealed shall unless the contrary intention appears, be construed as references to the provisions so re-enacted." By virtue of s. 38 (2) of the same Act (ante, p. 8), proceedings for offences committed before April 1, 1909, against the repealed enactments may be instituted or continued notwithstanding their repeal. See R. v. Parsons [1904] Lewes Autumn Assizes, Bigham, J. : cf. R. v. Webb, 140 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 627, Walton, J.]

FIRST SCHEDULE.

Any offence under ss. 27 (ante, p. 977), 55 (post, p. 1008), or 56 (post, p. 1014), of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100), and any offence against a child or young person under ss. 5 (ante, p. 862), 42, 43 (ante, p. 926), 52 (post, p. 1032), or 62 (post, p. 1048) of that Act, or under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69) (post, p. 1024).

Any offence under the Dangerous Performances Acts, 1879 and 1897 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 34; 60 & 61 Vict. c. 52) (ante, pp. 978, 979).

Any other offence involving bodily injury to a child or young person.

[This schedule is a re-enactment of the schedule to 4 Edw. 7, c. 15. The inclusion in this schedule of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 62, overrides R. v. Beer, 62 J. P. 120. It is submitted that the words "any other offence involving bodily injury to a child or young person" are perfectly general (see Lord Advocate v. Fraser, 3 Fraser, Just. 67), and that R. v. Roberts, 18 Cox, 530, was wrongly decided.]

Indictment for ill-treating a Child or Young Person. (8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 12 (1), ante, p. 980).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Cruelty to children, contrary to section 12 (1) of the Children Act, 1908.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., being a person over the age of 16, having the custody or charge or care of C. B., E. B., G. B., aged 3, 6, and 10 years respectively, on the —— day of ——, and on divers days between that day and ——, in the county of ——, assaulted, ill-treated or neglected them, or caused or procured them to be assaulted, ill-treated or neglected, in a manner likely to cause them unnecessary suffering or injury to their health.

The provisions of s. 32 (1), (2), (3), ante, p. 989, permitting the inclusion in one information or summons of charges for more than one offence under s. 12, do not apply to indictments. If assault can be proved, it would seem that a specific date should be given for each assault except such as are parts of the same transaction. When the offence charged is continuous, it is not necessary to specify in the indictment the date of the acts alleged to constitute the offence (s. 32 (4), ante, p. 990). As to charging neglect and assault of an imbecile son, see R. v. Watson, 30 Ir. L. T. R. 135.

Misdemeanor: punishable by fine not exceeding 100*l.*, or alternatively or in default of payment of such fine or in addition thereto imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 12 (1) (a) (ante, p. 980).

The Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (ante, p. 67), applies to this offence. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 35 (ante, p. 990).

Indictment for Ill-treatment of a Child under Sixteen by a Person interested in Money payable on the Death of a Child. (8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 12, sub-ss. (1), (5), ante, pp. 981.)

Add to the description of A. B. in the last example, " and being directly or indirectly interested in a sum of money payable in the event of the death of the said ——, and knowing that the said sum of money was accruing or becoming payable."

In 52 & 53 Vict. c. 44, s. 2 (rep.), it was provided that " such interest as aforesaid in any sum of money accruable or payable in the event of the death of the child shall be charged in the indictment and put to the jury in the same way, as far as may be, as a previous conviction is now charged and put." This provision prevented the interest of the accused in the death of the child being given in evidence before he had been convicted of the offence, although the proof of such interest would be strong evidence on the hearing of the charge to show that the ill-treatment, etc., was " wilful," which is an express element of the offence.

It is submitted that it is necessary, in order to justify the increased punishment provided for by 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 12 (5) (a), to aver specifically in the indictment the existence of such interest as is mentioned in that sub-section. If this were not done, the increased punishment might be open to question on appeal (ante, p. 300) on the ground that there did not appear in the indictment the averments necessary to warrant the punishment imposed. See however 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, s. 3 and r. 4 (ante, p. 44).

Misdemeanor: punishable as under the last precedent: but the Court may increase the fine to an amount not exceeding 200*l.*, or in lieu of awarding any other penalty, may sentence the person indicted to penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 12 (1), (5) (a) (ante, pp. 980, 981); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

Evidence.

Over the age of sixteen.]—Sect. 123 (2) of the Act does not apply to the age of the accused, which should be proved to exceed sixteen where the appearance of the accused is such as to leave a possibility of doubt; and the jury may decide from the appearance of the accused whether he is over sixteen. R. v. Cox, 18 Cox, 672, 674 (C. C. R.).

Having the custody, charge or care.]—The term "custody" applies to the parent, or legal guardian, and to any person who is by law liable to maintain the child. But a putative father who has not been adjudged so is not a parent within the Act. Butler v. Gregory, 18 T. L. R. 370; 37 L. J. Newsp. 131. Where evidence is given that a person is a parent, he is presumed to have custody of the child (s. 38 (2)). A parent cannot by leaving his wife and living apart from her divest himself of the custody of his child so as to free himself from liability to conviction for an offence under s. 12 (1) (ante, p. 980). The father of illegitimate children, living with them and their mother, may be a person having the custody, charge, or care of the children, though the mother is in law their natural guardian. Liverpool Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children v. Jones, 79 J. P. 20.

Where evidence is given that the child was committed to the charge of the defendant, he is presumed to have charge of the child (s. 38 (2)). And where evidence is given that the defendant had actual possession or control of the child, he is presumed to have "care" of the child. The word "actual" appears to be used to include cases of constructive possession and questions of the legality of the possession.

Any child or young person.]—The effect of s. 123 (2) (ante, p. 992) is that where the child appears to the Court to be under sixteen, it is for the defence to prove that the child is older. Notwithstanding the section, the prosecutor should be prepared to prove the age of the child in all cases in which it is not absolutely clear on the view that it is under sixteen. A certificate of birth, coupled with evidence of identity, is legal evidence of the age of the child mentioned in the certificate; but the age may be proved by any other lawful evidence, such as that of persons who have seen the child, or that it attended a public elementary school. R. v. Cox [1898] 1 Q. B. 179; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 293; 18 Cox, 672; and see ante, p. 413.

Wilfully.]—The term "wilfully" "means that the act is done deliberately and intentionally, not by accident or inadvertence, but so that the mind of the person who does the act goes with it." R. v. Senior [1899] 1 Q. B. 283, 290; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 175; 19 Cox, 219, Russell, L.C.J. And it includes deliberate omission on religious grounds to provide medical attendance for a child. Id. Omission on the part of the father to pay any part of his earnings towards the support of his child may constitute wilful neglect, whether he be living with his wife and child (Cole v. Pendleton, 60 J. P. 359) or apart from them (R. v. O'Connor [1908] 2 K. B. 26; 77 L. J. (K. B.) 527).

Assault.]—As to evidence of assault, see ante, pp. 930 et seq.

Ill-treat.]—It seems not to be necessary to prove actual assault or battery (as to which, see ante, p. 930), and that bullying and frightening will suffice, or any course of conduct calculated to cause unnecessary suffering or injury to health.

Neglect.]—"Neglect is the want of reasonable care—that is, the omission of such steps as a reasonable parent would take, such as are usually taken in the ordinary experience of mankind." R. v. Senior, p. 996, Russell, L.C.J. This includes failure by a parent to resort to the poor law authorities for the means of maintaining his child where he cannot do so out of his own means. See s. 12 (1), ante, p. 980. Refusal to allow an operation may be, but is not necessarily, such a failure to provide adequate medical aid as to amount to wilful neglect causing injury to health. The question is one of fact to be decided in each case on the evidence. Oakey v. Jackson [1914] 1 K. B. 216; 23 Cox, 734; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 712; 110 L. T. 41; 78 J. P. 87; 30 T. L. R. 92. Where a father who earned a sufficient wage did not pay over to his wife enough to clothe and feed the children properly, it was held no answer to a prosecution of the father for neglect to say that by resort to the poor law the mother might have obviated the effect of the father's neglect. Cole v. Pendleton, 60 J. P. 359. Evidence of the possession by the prisoner of such means at a date prior to the neglect as would presumably not be exhausted at the date of the neglect, is some evidence of the possession of means at the date of such neglect. R. v. Jones, 19 Cox, 678, Kennedy, J. As to manslaughter, see ante, p. 894.

"Expose or abandon."]—As to the evidence necessary to prove exposing, see R. v. Williams, 26 T. L. R. 290; 4 Cr. App. R. 89, ante, p. 871. and as to the evidence necessary to prove abandonment, see ante, p. 977.

"In a manner likely to cause unnecessary suffering or injury to health."]—Deliberate omission to supply medical or surgical aid to a child is within these words. R. v. Senior [1899] 1 Q. B. 283; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 175 (see ante, p. 897). See also Oakey v. Jackson [1914] 1 K. B. 216, cited under "Neglect," supra. Direct proof does not seem to be required that the neglect caused, or was likely to cause, unnecessary suffering, and the jury may determine the question on the circumstances proved. R. v. Brenton, 111 Cent. Cr. Ct. Sess. Pap. 309, Day, J. But a registered medical practitioner should be called to prove the condition of the child.

"Evidence of child and parent."]—The unsworn evidence of any child of tender years may be given. See 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 30 (ante, p. 988), and ante, pp. 429, 453. Where a justice is satisfied by the evidence of a registered medical practitioner that the attendance at court of the injured child would involve serious danger to its life or health, the justice may take its deposition (8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 28 (1)), which is admissible in evidence at the trial if reasonable notice (in writing, see note to s. 29, ante, p. 988) was served on the person against whom it was taken, and that person has had an opportunity of cross-examining the child. The Court may dispense with the attendance of the child at the trial if satisfied that such attendance is not essential to the just hearing of the case (s. 31). The defendant is a competent but not a compellable witness; 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 27 (ante, p. 987); and the husband or wife of the defendant may be required to attend to give evidence as an ordinary witness in the case, and is competent but not compellable to give evidence. Id.

It is a defence that the alleged ill-treatment consisted in reasonable correction by parent, teacher, or other person having lawful control of the child (s. 37, ante, p. 990).

As to the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36), see ante, pp. 458-468; and see also Charnock v. Merchant [1900] 1 K. B. 474; 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 221, and s. 38 (1) of the Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, ante, p. 993).

TAKING CHILD OR YOUNG PERSON ABROAD FOR PURPOSE OF PERFORMING FOR PROFIT.

Statute.

3 & 4 G. 5, c. 7 (Children (Employment Abroad) Act, 1913), s. 1.—Restrictions on children and young persons going abroad for the purpose of performing for profit.]—(1) If any person causes or procures any child or young person, or, having the custody, charge, or care of any child or young person, allows such child or young person, to go out of the United Kingdom for the purpose of singing, playing, performing, or being exhibited, for profit, that person shall, unless, in the case of a young person, such a licence as is hereinafter mentioned has been granted, be guilty of an offence against this Act.

(2) A constable or any person authorised by a justice may take to a place of safety any child or young person in respect of whom there is reason to believe that an offence under this section has been or is about to be committed, and the provisions of section twenty of the Children Act, 1908, shall apply as if such an offence were an offence mentioned in the First Schedule to that Act.

(3) This section shall not apply in any case where it is proved that the child or young person was only temporarily resident in the United Kingdom.

Sect. 2.—Grant of licences by police magistrates.]

Sect. 3.—Penalties and proceedings.]—(1) A person guilty of an offence against this Act shall, on summary conviction, be liable, at the discretion of the court, to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds, or alternatively or in default of payment of such fine, or in addition thereto, to imprisonment with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding three months:

Provided that, where the offender, by means of any false pretence or false representation, procures the child or young person to go out of the United Kingdom for any such purpose as aforesaid, he shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years.

(2) Where proceedings are taken against any person under this Act in respect of any child or young person, and it is proved that the defendant caused or procured or allowed the child or young person to go out of the United Kingdom, and that the child or young person has, out of the United Kingdom, been singing, playing, performing, or been exhibited, for profit, the defendant shall be presumed to have caused or procured or allowed such child or young person to go out of the United Kingdom for that purpose unless the contrary is proved :

Provided that, where the contrary is proved, the court may order the defendant to take such steps as the court directs to secure the return of the child or young person to the United Kingdom, or to enter into a recognizance to make such provision as the court may direct to secure the health, kind treatment, and adequate supervision of the child or young person whilst abroad, and his return to the United Kingdom at the expiration of such period as the court may think fit.

(3) Proceedings in respect of an offence or for enforcing a recognizance under this Act may be instituted at any time within three months from the first discovery by the person taking the proceedings of the commission of the offence or (as the case may be) the non-observance of the restrictions and conditions contained in the licence.

(4) The wife or husband of a person charged with an offence under this Act may be called as a witness either for the prosecution or defence and without the consent of the person charged.

Sect. 4.—Interpretation.]

Sect. 5.—Short title, construction, and commencement.]—(1) This Act may be cited as the Children (Employment Abroad) Act, 1913, and shall be construed as one with the Children Act, 1908; and that Act, the Children Act (1908) Amendment Act, 1910, and this Act may be cited together as the Children Acts, 1908 to 1913.

(2) This Act shall come into operation on the expiration of one month from the passing thereof [15*th August*, 1913].

SECT. 5.

FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

Indictment for Assault and False Imprisonment (Common Law).

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

False imprisonment.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, assaulted C. D., and then unlawfully and injuriously imprisoned C. D. and detained him for an hour against the will of the said C. D.

A count for a common assault (see ante, p. 929), may be added, but is unnecessary, as the jury can convict of common assault on the first count. See ante, pp. 211 et seq.

False imprisonment is a misdemeanor at common law, punishable by fine or imprisonment with or without hard labour, or both (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246).

Kidnapping.]—There is a form of false imprisonment known as kidnapping, consisting in the stealing or carrying away any person from his own country into another. 1 East, P. C. 429. It is indictable at common law (see R. v. Lesley, Bell, 220; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 97; 8 Cox, 269: Phillips v. Eyre, L. R. 4 Q. B. 225, 240; 38 L. J. (Q. B.) 113); and where the person kidnapped is taken abroad, is specially punishable under the Habeas Corpus Act (31 Car. 2, c. 2), s. 11. Designy's case, Sir T. Raym. 474: and see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 902 et seq. As to kidnapping Pacific Islanders, see 35 & 36 Vict. c. 19; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 85; 2 Steph. Hist. Cr. L. 58; and for an instance of a trial under the Act and the mode of proving jurisdiction, see R. v. Vos [1895] 6 Queensland L. J. 215.

Evidence for the Prosecution.

All the prosecutor has to prove is the imprisonment: it is for the defendant to show that he was justified in what he did, and that the imprisonment was lawful.

Every confinement of the person is an imprisonment whether it be in a common prison or in a private house, or in the stocks, or even by forcibly detaining one in the public streets. 2 Co. Inst. 482, 589; Cro. Car. 209; Com. Dig. Imprisonment (G.); 2 Selw. (N. P.) 915 (11th ed.). But merely preventing a man from proceeding along a particular way, when he may go where he desires to go without going along it, is not an imprisonment. Bird v. Jones, 7 Q. B. 742. When a person sends for a constable and gives another person in charge for felony and the constable tells the party charged that he must go with him, on which the other, without further compulsion, actually does go to a police-office, this is an imprisonment. Pocock v. Moore, Ry. & M. 321. But where the warrant is used merely as a summons, and no arrest is made thereon, and the party voluntarily goes before the magistrate, this, it seems, is not an imprisonment. Arrowsmith v. Le Mesurier, 2 B. & P. (N. R.) 211: Berry v. Adamson, 5 L. J. (K. B.) 218; 6 B. & C. 528. Where a man who had an idiot brother bedridden in his house kept him in a dark room without sufficient warmth or clothing, it was held not to be an imprisonment. R. v. Smith, 2 C. & P. 449. Detention of a prisoner after expiry of his sentence is false imprisonment. Migotti v. Colvill, 4 C. P. D. 233; 48 L. J. (C. P.) 695; and see Moone v. Rose, L. R. 4 Q. B. 486; 38 L. J. (Q. B.) 226. So is detention of a prisoner after acquittal. Mee v. Cruikshank, 20 Cox, 210, Wills, J.; and see ante, p. 227. But detention in obedience to a specific order of court is not actionable if the exigency of the order or warrant is obeyed (Greaves v. Keene, 4 Ex. D. 73) and the order is valid on the face of it. Henderson v. Preston, 21 Q. B. D. 362; 57 L. J. (Q. B.) 607. The offence would seem to be committed by mere detention without violence:

see R. v. Linsberg [1905] 69 J. P. 107 : Hunter v. Johnson, 13 Q. B. D. 225; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 182.

If the prosecutor fail in proving the imprisonment, he may still prove the assault and battery, as directed ante, pp. 930 et seq.

Evidence for the Defendant.

The defendant must either prove that he did not imprison C. D. at all, or justify the imprisonment. The grounds upon which an imprisonment can be justified may be considered under the following heads :—

1. Arrest under civil process.]—Arrest under civil process is now abolished, except (1) under the circumstances and subject to the restrictions set forth in the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), ss. 4-10, and the Debtors Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 76); (2) for contempt of court of a civil nature. The following rules were established under the former law :—

An imprisonment in a civil case cannot be justified except under a writ or order of a court.

An arrest upon a capias ad satisfaciendum, out of a superior court, if regular and regularly executed, may be justified by the officer who executed it, whether there be a judgment to warrant it or not (1 Lev. 95; 3 Lev. 20; 1 Salk. (409); but if the plaintiff or his attorney would justify under it, he must show such a judgment as would warrant it (per Holt, C.J., Carth. 443 : Barker v. Braham, 3 Wils. 368; 2 W. Bl. 866 : Smith v. Sydney, L. R. 5 Q. B. 203; 39 L. J. (Q. B.) 144); and therefore, where a ca. sa. was sued out on a judgment against an administratrix, without suggesting a devastavit, it was held, that false imprisonment would lie against the plaintiff and his attorney. Barker v. Braham, supra. But it is not necessary that a ca. sa. should be returned in order to justify under it. Rowland v. Veale, 1 Cowp. 18.

Process out of an inferior court to justify imprisonment must show that the Court had jurisdiction of the cause of action (10 Co. Rep. 76 a, 68 b : cf. 3 Lev. 141, 243; T. Jones, 165), and that the process was executed within the jurisdiction. 3 Lev. 243. See ante, pp. 897 et seq.

But if a writ or warrant is void upon the face of it, as if the officer's name be inserted in the warrant after it is sealed (2 Wils. 47), or if the writ is executed after the day on which it expires (2 Esp. 585), or on a Sunday (29 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 6), it will be no justification to the person arresting under it. But neither the officer nor the party is subject to an indictment for false imprisonment for arresting a person privileged from arrest, whether the privilege be permanent (Tarlton v. Fisher, 2 Doug. 671), or temporary. Cameron v. Lightfoot, 2 W. Bl. 1190, 1195 n.

2. Arrest under criminal process: (A) By warrant.]—A warrant from a magistrate having general cognizance of the matter of it will justify the officer in executing it, whether there be any grounds in fact for granting it or not (Shergold v. Holloway, 2 Str. 1002); but on the contrary, if the magistrate had not cognizance of the matter of the warrant; if, for instance, he granted a warrant to take up C. D., to answer in a plea of debt, the constable would not be justified in arresting him. Id.; and see Com. Dig. Imprisonment (H.)

8, 9. A conviction by a magistrate having competent jurisdiction over the subject-matter of it, upon which the party has been arrested, is, until reversed or quashed, conclusive evidence in favour even of the magistrate, in a prosecution against him for false imprisonment. 7 T. R. 633 n. See 11 & 12 Vict. cc. 42, 43, 44. As to gaolers, see Greaves v. Keene, 4 Ex. D. 73 : Henderson v. Preston, 21 Q. B. D. 362; 57 L. J. (Q. B.) 607. As to judges of the superior courts, see Taaffe v. Downes, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1317. The warrant must be executed within the proper jurisdiction. In the ordinary cases of indictable offences, this is in the county or borough for which the justice granting it acted, or in case of fresh pursuit, within seven miles therefrom. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 10; 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 223; 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 24. As to execution of warrants by metropolitan police, see 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 17. As to execution of English warrants over the Scottish border, see 20 & 21 Vict. c. 72, s. 11. Arrest on Sunday is legal. 29 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 6. The death of the issuing magistrate does not affect the warrant. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 37. By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 11 (ante, p. 82), warrants issued in one county, etc., may be executed in another county, etc., if backed by a justice of the latter jurisdiction. In a case of misdemeanor the officer cannot lawfully arrest unless he has the warrant with him. Codd v. Cabe, 1 Ex. D. 352; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 101. As to felony, see Creagh v. Gamble, 24 L. R. Ir. 458.

(B) Without warrant. 1. Common law powers.]—A justice of the peace may apprehend, or cause to be apprehended by a verbal order merely, any person committing a felony or breach of the peace in his presence. 2 Hale, 86. And the sheriff or coroner also may apprehend any felon within the county, without warrant. 4 Bl. Com. 289; and see 50 & 51 Vict. c. 55, ss. 8, 29.

By constables.]—A constable may arrest any one for a breach of the peace in his presence, and keep him in his house, or the stocks, until he can bring him before a magistrate. 1 Hale, 587. See Cook v. Nethercote, 6 C. & P. 741. So a constable may justify arresting a man within his constablewick upon a reasonable charge of felony, although it afterwards appear that the man is innocent, or even that no felony was, in fact, committed. Samuel v. Paine, 1 Doug. 359 : Cowles v. Dunbar, 2 C. & P. 565. See R. v. Ford, R. & R. 329 : R. v. Thompson, 1 Mood. 80. (See ante, p. 898). So, where a felony has been actually committed, a constable may arrest a man upon a reasonable suspicion of his having committed it; 2 Co. Inst. 52; 2 Hale, 90, 91, 92 : Ledwith v. Catchpole, Cald. 291. The question of reasonable suspicion is matter of law, and should not be left to the jury. Hill v. Yates, 2 Moore, (C. P.) 80; and see Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 34.

A constable may arrest and detain in custody for examination any person whom he finds in the streets at night, and whom there is reasonable ground to suspect of felony, although there be no proof of a felony actually committed. Lawrence v. Hedger, 3 Taunt. 14; and see 2 Hale, 98; 2 Co. Inst. 52.

By private persons.]—A private person, and à fortiori a peace officer, if a felony is committed, or a dangerous wound given in his presence, is not only justified in arresting, but is bound by law to arrest, the felon. 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 1. So, he is justified in arresting or giving in charge persons engaged in an affray while it is continuing, or if there is reasonable ground for believing that they mean to renew it; Price v. Seeley, 10 Cl. & F. 28; 8 Eng. Rep. 651; but he cannot arrest any person concerned in it after the affray is over, for in that case a warrant is necessary. 2 Co. Inst. 52: Timothy v. Simpson, 1 Cr. M. & R. 757; 4 L. J. (Ex.) 81 (approved in the case last cited). Under the Riot Act he is bound to arrest persons not dispersing after proclamation. 1 G. 1, stat. 2, c. 5, s. 3: R. v. Pinney, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 11. So, he may arrest any man about to commit a felony or treason, or any act which would manifestly endanger another's life, and detain him until the intent be presumed to have ceased. 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 19; Rolle Abr. 559 (E.): Handcock v. Baker, 2 B & P. 260. At common law, apart from any statute, a private person is entitled to arrest and give into custody another person for having committed a felony, provided that there has been a felony actually committed, and such private person has reasonable ground to believe that the person whom he has given into custody has committed that felony. The reason for his having such power is that, where a felony has been committed, in many cases the accused person would escape unless a private person, who has reasonable grounds for suspecting him, were authorized to seize and take him into custody. But that power ought not to be exercised except when there is reason to believe that the man would not be forthcoming. Allen v. London and South Western Rail. Co., L. R. 6 Q. B. 66; 40 L. J. (Q. B.) 55, Blackburn, J. See Beckwith v. Philby, 5 L. J. (M. C.) 132; 6 B. & C. 635: R. v. Hunt, 1 Mood, 93; Stonehouse v. Elliott, 6 T. R. 315. And it must be shown that the particular felony for which the arrest was made was in fact committed. Walters v. W. H. Smith & Son, Ltd., [1914] 1 K. B. 595; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 335; 110 L. T. 345: 78 J. P. 118; 30 T. L. R. 158; 58 S. J. 186.

2. Statutory powers.]—Persons found committing any offence against the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), may be apprenhended without warrant by any peace officer, or by the owner of the property, his servant, or person authorized by him (s. 61, ante, p. 739). Offenders against s. 1 of the Night Poaching Act, 1828, may be arrested by the owner of the land, warren or chase, or manor, and his servants. 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 2 (ante, p. 966). See R. v. Fraser, 1 Mood. 419. Any person may arrest without warrant a person found committing any offence against the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96) (except angling in the daytime), s. 103: or any offence against the Larceny Act, 1916 (6 & 7 G. 5, c. 50) (except an offence against s. 31), s. 41 (1) ante, p. 504): or any indictable offence against the Coinage Offences Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99), s. 31 (post, p. 1089). And by the Customs Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), s. 190, persons making signals to smuggling vessels may be apprehended by any person. By the Vagrancy Act, 1824 (5 G. 4, c. 83), s. 6, persons offending against that Act may be apprehended by any person without warrant.

By 1 & 2 G. 5, c. 27 (Protection of Animals Act, 1911), s. 12 (1), a police constable may apprehend without warrant any person whom he has reason to believe is guilty of an offence under that Act which is punishable by imprisonment without the option of a fine, whether upon his own view thereof or upon the complaint and information of any other person, who shall declare his name and place of abode to such constable. See ante, p. 791.

By 2 & 3 G. 5, c. 20 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1912), s. 1, a constable may take into custody without a warrant any person whom he shall have good cause to suspect of having committed, or of attempting to commit, any offence against s. 2 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (which relates to procuration and attempted procuration). See post, p. 1034.

By 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 43 (Firearms Act, 1920), s. 11 (3), a constable making a search of premises under a search warrant may arrest without warrant any person found on the premises whom he has reason to believe to be guilty of an offence against that Act. See ante, p. 759).

By 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 46 (Dangerous Drugs Act, 1920), s. 14, any constable may arrest without warrant any person who has committed, or attempted to commit, or is reasonably suspected by the constable of having committed or attempted to commit, an offence against that Act, if he has reasonable ground for believing that that person will abscond unless arrested, or if the name and address of that person are unknown to and cannot be ascertained by him.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 11, any person whatsoever may apprehend any person found committing any indictable offence in the night (i.e., between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m.), and convey or deliver him to a peace officer. (See ante, p 655). And under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 57 (ante, p. 738); c. 100, s. 66 (ante, p. 864); and 6 & 7 G. 5, c. 50, s. 41 (3) (ante, p. 504), any constable or peace officer may take into custody, without warrant, any person whom he shall find loitering or lying in any highway, yard, or other place, during the night, or whom he shall have good cause to suspect of having committed or being about to commit any felony against those Acts respectively, and shall take him as soon as reasonably may be before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law. The power given by sect. 12 of the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94) of apprehending persons committing the offences therein specified authorizes the apprehension of persons honestly and upon reasonable grounds believed to be committing the offence at the time of the arrest. Trebeck v. Crondall [1918] 1 K. B. 158, C. A. Like provisions are contained in other general and local Acts, with respect to particular offences.

3. Arrest for a contempt.]—If a contempt is committed in the face of a court of record (as, by rude and contumelious behaviour; by obstinacy, perverseness, prevarication, or refusal to answer any lawful question; by breach of the peace, or any wilful disturbance whatever), the judge may by parol order the offender to be instantly apprehended and imprisoned, at his (the judge's) discretion, without any further proof or examination. 2 Hale, 86; 2 Hawk. c. 22: 4 Bl. Com. 282, 283: Spilsbury v. Micklethwaite, 1 Taunt, 146. See Cropper v. Horton, 8 D. & R. 166: R. v. Charlesworth, 2 F. & F. 326: Ex parte Fernandez, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 3; 39 L. J. (C. P.) 321.

4. Arrest after an escape.]—In civil cases, where a person who has been taken into custody in execution escapes, if it be a negligent escape, the gaoler or officer may retake him; if a voluntary escape, a retaking would be a false imprisonment. Jones v. Pope, 1 Saund. 34, and notes: Allanson v. Butler, 1 Sid. 330: Buxton v. Home, 1 Show. (K. B.) 174: Atkinson v. Jameson, 5 T. R. 25. Where a person in custody upon mesne process escapes, if the escape is negligent, the gaoler or officer may retake him; if voluntary, he may not. (See post tit. Escape).

In criminal cases, where a prisoner escapes, if the escape is negligent merely, the gaoler or officer may retake him, at any time, without warrant (Dalt. c. 159); if voluntary, he cannot afterwards be retaken by virtue of the same warrant under which he was at first arrested (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 12); but he may be retaken on a fresh warrant, or without warrant in cases where he might have been arrested without warrant originally. Prison officers have now all the powers, duties, etc., of constables. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 41, s. 10.

5. Arrest under other authority.]—Where a feme covert appeared before a justice of the peace as a material witness in a case of felony, it was held that he was justified in committing her until the sessions, upon her refusing to appear at the sessions to give evidence or to find sureties for her appearance. Bennet v. Watson, 3 M. & Sel. 1. Under s. 20 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), the examining justice can commit a witness to prison until after the trial of the accused, or until the witness enter into a proper recognizance, if after making a deposition he refuses to enter into a recognizance to attend the trial. Under former statutes it was held that a magistrate might commit an accused person for re-examination; but if the committal were for an unreasonable time, the warrant of commitment was virtually void, and the commitment is an imprisonment. Davis v. Capper, 7 L. J. (M. C.) 90; 5 Man. & Ryl. 53; 10 B. & C. 28. Remand of the accused in custody on an inquiry as to an indictable offence may not be for over eight days (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 21); unless for the purpose of dealing summarily with the case. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 24. Where the accused is not remanded in custody the adjournment may be for a longer period than eight days. Ex parte Lebern, 21 Cox, 431; 71 J. P. 332; and see R. v. Garrett, ex parte De Dryver [1918] 1 K. B. 6 at p. 10, per Avory, J.

Courts having bankruptcy jurisdiction have power to issue warrants for the arrest of a bankrupt, 4 & 5 Geo. 5 c. 59, ss. 23 (1), 123 (1), and where a prosecution for misdemeanor is ordered, may commit the offender for trial. Ed s. 163. The courts having jurisdiction in bankruptcy are now the High Court of Justice and the county courts (ed. s. 96 (1), and a county court, for the purposes of its bankruptcy jurisdiction, in addition to the ordinary powers of the court, has all the powers and jurisdiction of the High Court. Id. s. 103.

Officers in the army and navy have, in many instances, authority to imprison soldiers and seamen under their command, see Manual of Military Law; and as to the effect of being under military law, Marks v. Frogley [1898] 1 Q. B. 396, 888; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 605. But false imprisonment has been held to lie against a superior officer, where the imprisonment at first was legal, but was afterwards aggravated with many circumstances of cruelty and continued beyond all necessary bounds. Wall v. Macnamara, 1 T. R. 536, cit. So, where a seaman was confined by his captain for three days, for a supposed breach of duty, and was then liberated by him, without being brought to a court-martial, it was held that false imprisonment would lie. Swinton v. Molloy, 1 T. R. 537, cit.

An arrest and detention under an impress warrant may be lawful, but the party executing it does so at his peril; for if he takes a man not liable to be impressed, as, for instance, a person who has never served at sea, he is guilty of false imprisonment. Flewster v. Royle, 1 Camp. 187.

Where the master of an English merchant ship contracted with the Chilian Government to take from Valparaiso to England certain persons whom that Government had ordered to be banished to England, this was held to be a false imprisonment as soon as the ship was out of the Chilian territory. R. v. Lesley, Bell, 220; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 97; 8 Cox, 269.

SECT. 6.

ABDUCTION.

Statutes.

13 Edw. 1, c. 34.—(a) Abduction of married women.]—And of women carried away with the goods of their husbands the King shall have the suit for the goods so taken away. . . . (See ante, p. 538; 1 Hale, 637).

(b). Abduction of nuns.]—He that carrieth a nun from her house although she consent shall be punished by three years' imprisonment, and shall make convenient satisfaction to the house from which she was taken, and nevertheless shall make fine at the King's will.

c. 35.—Abduction of wards.]—Concerning children, males or females, whose marriage belongeth to another, taken or carried away, if the ravisher have no right in the marriage, though after he restore the child unmarried, or else pay for the marriage, he shall nevertheless be punished for his offence by two years' imprisonment, and if he do not restore or do marry the child after the years of consent, and be not able to satisfy for the marriage, he shall abjure the realm or have perpetual imprisonment. . . .

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 53.—Abduction of a woman on account of her fortune.]—Where any woman of any age shall have any interest, whether legal or equitable, present or future, absolute, conditional, or contingent, in any real or personal estate, or shall be a presumptive heiress or co-heiress, or presumptive next of kin, or one of the presumptive next of kin, to any one having such interest, whosoever shall, from motives of lucre, take away, or detain such woman against her will, with intent to marry or carnally know her, or to cause her to be married or carnally known by any other person, and whosoever shall fraudulently allure, take away, or detain such woman, being under the age of twenty-one years, out of the possession and against the will of her father or mother, or of any other person having the lawful care or charge of her, with intent to marry or carnally know her, or to cause her to be married or carnally known by any other person, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal serviture for any term not exceeding fourteen years . . . ; and whosoever shall be convicted of any offence against this section shall be incapable of taking any estate or interest, legal or equitable, in any real or personal property of such woman, or in which she shall have any such interest, or which shall come to her as such heiress, co-heiress, or next of kin as aforesaid; and if any such marriage as aforesaid shall have taken place, such property shall, upon such conviction, be settled in such manner as the Court of Chancery in England or Ireland shall upon any information at the suit of the attorney-general appoint. [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 19, with the additions italicized.]

Sect. 54.—Abduction by force with intent to marry, etc.]—Whosoever shall, by force, take away or detain against her will any woman of any age, with intent to marry or carnally know her, or to cause her to be married or carnally known by any other person, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years. . . . Indictment under first part of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 53 (ante, p. 1006).

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Abduction, contrary to section 53 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, from motives of lucre, took away or detained C. D., the possessor of 10,000*l.* invested in the 5 per cent. War Loan, 1929-1947, against her will, with intent to marry her.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 53; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant took away and detained C. D. against her will. If she is taken away in the first instance with her own consent, but afterwards refuses to continue with the offender, and is forcibly detained by him, the offence is within the statute. See 1 Hawk. c. 41 (forcible marriage), s. 7. Prove also that C. D. had the interest stated in the indictment, from which the motives of lucre may be presumed. Prove the intent stated in the indictment by the declarations or acts of the defendant, or by circumstances from which the intent may be inferred. See R. v. Barratt, 9 C. & P. 387. Under the old law the woman must have been married or defiled: Fulwood's case, Cro. Car. 488: R. v. Swendsen, 14 St. Tr. 559; 1 Hale, 660, 661; cf. 4 Bl. Com. 209: Brown's case, Ventr. 243; 3 Keb. 193; and see ante, p. 467; but this is no longer necessary, the intent to marry or carnally know being sufficient. R. v. Perry (2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 2281), cited in R. v. Sergeant, Ry. & M. 352, 354, Abbott, C.J.; 1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 13, forcible marriage; 1 East, P. C. 454. By virtue of s. 4 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36), ante, p. 465, the husband or wife can be called for the prosecution or for the defence, without the consent of the accused spouse, but appears not to be compellable. See 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 20 (post, p. 1017).

The offender is incapable of taking any interest, legal or equitable, in any real or personal property belonging to the woman, or in which she has any such interest, or which shall come to her as any such heiress, etc. And if a marriage shall have taken place, the property shall, on conviction of the offender, be settled in such manner as the High Court (Chancery Division), at the suit of the attorney-general, shall appoint. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 53. R. v. Burrell, L. & C. 354; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 54; 9 Cox, 368, is a decision on that part of s. 53 which relates to the fraudulent taking away of women under the age of twenty-one. The facts proved in that case, which were complicated, were held not sufficient to sustain a conviction.

OF A GIRL UNDER SIXTEEN YEARS OF AGE.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act), s. 55.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully take or cause to be taken any unmarried girl, being under the age of sixteen years, out of the possession and against the will of her father or mother, or of any other person having the lawful care or charge of her, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 20.]

8 Edw. 7, c. 67 (Children Act, 1908), ss. 27-32 and sched.—Procedure and evidence.]—See ante, pp. 987-990, 994.

Sect. 123 (2).—Presumption as to age of girl.]—Ante, p. 992.

Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 55.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Abduction of a girl, contrary to section 55 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, unlawfully took or caused to be taken C. D., an unmarried girl aged fourteen, out of the possession and against the will of her father [or mother or of E. F. then having the lawful care or charge of her.]

If the offence is continuous it is not necessary to specify the date of the acts alleged to constitute the offence. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 32 (4) and sched. 1 (ante, pp. 990, 994).

Misdemeanor: imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years.—24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 55. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant took C. D. out of the charge of her father or mother, or of some person having the lawful care or charge of her. Cf. s. 7 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69), and the cases thereon, post, pp. 1012, 1013.

Take.]—The taking need not be by force, actual or constructive, and it is immaterial whether the girl consents or not. R. v. Mankletow, Dears. 159; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 115; 6 Cox, 143; see R. v. Kipps, 4 Cox, 167; R. v. Booth, 12 Cox, 231. Where the defendant went in the night to her father's house, and placed a ladder against her window, and held it for her to descend, which she did, and eloped with him, this was held to be a "taking of her out of the possession of her father" within the statute; although she herself proposed the plan to the defendant. R. v. Robins, 1 C. & K. 456. So, where the girl was persuaded by the defendant to leave her father's house and go away with him, without the father's consent, and accordingly left her home alone by a preconcerted arrangement between them, and went to a place appointed, where she was met by the defendant, and they then went away together, without the intention of returning: this was held to be a taking of the girl out of her father's possession within the statute, since up to the moment of her meeting with the defendant, she had not absolutely renounced her father's protection. R. v. Mankletow (ante, p. 1009). So, where the defendant, by concert with the girl, met her and stayed with her away from her father's house for several nights, sleeping with her; and the jury found that the father did not consent, and that the defendant knew he did not; and that he took the girl away with him in order to gratify his passions and then to let her return home, and not with the intention of keeping her away from her home permanently; the conviction was held right. R. v. Timmins, Bell, 276; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 45; 8 Cox, 401. Where a man induces a girl, by promises of what he will do for her, to leave her father's house and live with him, he may be convicted under this statute, although he is not actually present or assisting her at the time she leaves her father's roof. R. v. Robb, 4 F. & F. 59. If the girl leaves her father, without any persuasion, inducement or blandishment held out to her by the defendant, so that she has got fairly away from home, and then goes to him, although it may be his moral duty to return her to her father's custody, yet his not doing so is no infringement of this statute, for the statute does not say he shall restore her, but only that he shall not take her away. R. v. Olifier, 10 Cox, 402, Bramwell, B.; R. v. Kauffman, 68 J. P. 189 (post, p. 1013). And see R. v. Alexander, 107 L. T. 240; 76 J. P. 215; 28 T. L. R. 200; 7 Cr. App. R. 110. If the suggestion to go away with the prisoner comes from the girl only, and he takes merely the passive part of yielding to her suggestion, he is entitled to an acquittal. R. v. Jarvis, 20 Cox, 249, Jelf, J. It is submitted that the ruling to the contrary in R. v. Biswell, 2 Cox, 279, is not law. See discussion of the authorities, R. v. Mackney, 29 Vict. L. R. 22. And where a young woman persuaded a girl under sixteen to go away with her from her father's house to London, telling her that her (the defendant's) mother wanted a little girl as a servant, and would give her 5*l.* wages, and the girl left her father's house voluntarily for that purpose, this was held not to be a taking within 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 20, of which 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 55, is a re-enactment. R. v. Meadows, 1 C. & P. 399: see R. v. Handley, 1 F. & F. 648: sed quære. If, however, the girl while living with her father, leaves his house for a mere temporary purpose, intending to return to it, she is still in his possession within the meaning of the statute; and if when so out of the house the defendant induces her to run away with him, he is guilty of the misdemeanor created by this statute. R. v. Mycock, 12 Cox, 28, Willes, J.; and see R. v. Baillie, 8 Cox, 238. Where a servant girl, under sixteen years of age, had permission from her master to visit her parents from Sunday to Monday night, and went to see them on Sunday for a few hours only, and then told them (by previous arrangement with the prisoner) that she was going back to her service, instead of which she remained with the prisoner all night, and did not return to her service until some days afterwards, it was held (1) that the girl was not in the possession of her father at the time of the alleged offence, but under the lawful charge of her master, and (2) that the above facts would not warrant a conviction for abduction from the master. R. v. Miller, 13 Cox, 179, Lush, J.

If the defendant, at the time he took the girl away, did not know, and had no reason to know, that she was under the lawful care or charge of her father, mother, or some other person, he is not guilty of this offence. R. v. Hibbert, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 184; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 61; 11 Cox, 246. The defendant met a girl in the street, and induced her to go with him to a neighbouring town, where he seduced her. They returned together, and he left her where he had met her. The girl then went to her home, where she lived with her father. The defendant made no inquiry, and did not know who the girl was, or whether she had a father living or not, but he had no reason to, and did not, believe that she was a girl of the town. Upon these facts it was held that the defendant could not be found guilty of an offence against s. 55 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100. Id. See also R. v. Green, 3 F. & F. 274.

It was held to be an offence against 4 & 5 Ph. & M. c. 8, s. 3 (of which 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 55, is in substance a re-enactment), to take away a natural daughter under sixteen from the custody of her putative father. 1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 14 (seduction): R. v. Cornforth, 2 Str. 1162: R. v. Sweeting, 1 East, P. C. 457. Upon the death of the lawful father, the mother retains her authority, though she marry again, unless the father has disposed of the custody of his child to others; the assent of the second husband is not material. Ratcliff's case, 3 Co. Rep. 38.

Against the will, etc.]—Prove also that she was taken away against the will of the person who had the care or charge of her. If the defendant induced the parents, by false and fraudulent representations, to allow him to take the child away, this is an abduction within the statute. R. v. Hopkins, C. & Mar. 254. It seems to be doubtful whether, if the parent once consent, but afterwards dissent, a subsequent taking away can be said to be against the will of the parent. Calthrop v. Axtel, 1 East, P. C. 457; 3 Mod. 168. It was held not to be clear under 4 & 5 Ph. & M. c. 8 (rep.), whether it would be an offence to take away a girl against the will of her parent, but by the consent of one who has the temporary care of her. 1 East, P. C. 457. Where the girl's mother had encouraged her in a lax course of life, by permitting her to go out alone at night and dance at public-houses, from one of which she went away with the defendant, Cockburn, C.J., ruled that she could not be said to be taken away against the mother's will within the meaning of 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 20 (of which the present section is a re-enactment). R. v. Primelt, 1 F. & F. 50.

Under sixteen, etc.]—Prove that she was under the age of sixteen years and unmarried. As to power of Court to presume her age from her appearance, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123 (2) and sched. 1. It is no defence that the defendant did not know her to be under sixteen, or might suppose from her appearance that she was older; R. v. Robins, 1 C. & K. 456: R. v. Olifier, 10 Cox, 402. R. v. Mycock, 12 Cox, 28: R. v. Booth, 12 Cox, 231; or even that the defendant bonâ fide believed and had reasonable ground for believing that she was over sixteen. R. v. Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 154; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 122, 13 Cox, 138. If she was under the age of fourteen years, and taken away by force or fraud, the defendant must be indicted as in the next precedent but one.

The husband or wife of the defendant may be called for the prosecution or defence without the consent of the defendant; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 4 (ante, p. 465); but appears not to be a compellable witness. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 20, post, p. 1017; 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 27, ante, p. 987; and see ante, pp. 458-486.

The act is positively prohibited, and therefore the absence of a corrupt motive is no answer to the charge. See R. v. Booth, 12 Cox, 231. So, it was held to be no legal excuse that the defendant made use of no other means than the common blandishments of a lover, to induce the girl to elope with and marry him. R. v. Twistleton, 1 Lev. 257; 1 Sid. 387; 2 Keb. 432; 1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 10, tit. Seduction.

OF GIRL UNDER EIGHTEEN YEARS OF AGE, WITH INTENT THAT SHE SHOULD BE CARNALLY KNOWN.

Statute

48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885), s. 7.—Abduction of a girl under eighteen with intent that she should be carnally known.]—Any person who—with intent that any unmarried girl under the age of eighteen years should be unlawfully and carnally known by any man, whether such carnal knowledge is intended to be with any particular man, or generally—takes or causes to be taken such girl out of the possession and against the will of her father or mother, or any other person having the lawful care or charge of her, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable at the discretion of the Court to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. Provided that it shall be a sufficient defence to any charge under this section if it shall be made to appear to the Court or jury that the person so charged had reasonable cause to believe that the girl was of or above the age of eighteen years.

Sect. 17.—Misdemeanors under this Act to be within Vexatious Indictments Act.—Indictment under this Act not triable at quarter sessions.]—Every misdemeanor under this Act shall, in England and Ireland, be deemed to be an offence within, and subject to, the provisions of the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17), and any Act amending the same (see ante, pp. 69, 70), and no indictment under the provisions of this Act shall in England be tried by any court of quarter sessions. (See ante, pp. 106 et seq.)

Sect. 18.—Costs.]—Repealed as to England 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10. (See ante, pp. 267 et seq.)

Sect. 20.—Evidence of accused and husband or wife of accused.]—See post, p. 1017.

61 & 62 Vict. c. 36 (Criminal Evidence Act, 1898), ss. 1, 4, sched.—Evidence of accused and husband and wife of accused.]—See ante, pp. 458-466.

Indictment under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 7 (ante, p. 1012.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Abduction of girl, contrary to section 7 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

As in last precedent except that the girl may be under eighteen, and charging " with an intent unlawfully to have carnal knowledge of the girl " [or " that she should be carnally known by E. F. or generally."]

Misdemeanor: punishable by imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 7 (supra).

Evidence.

For the evidence necessary to support this indictment, see ante, pp. 1009-1011, mutatis mutandis.

In order to support an indictment under this section it is necessary to prove that the girl was taken out of the possession of her father or mother or other person having lawful care or charge or her, against the will of such person, and for this purpose the parent or guardian must be called (R. v. Nash, Times, July 2, 1903, Wright, J.), or that she left her father, etc., in consequence of some persuasion, inducement or blandishment held out to her by the defendant. R. v. Henkers, 16 Cox, 257, Common Serjeant, after consulting Wills, J., following R. v. Olifier, 10 Cox, 402 (ante, p. 1010). Where the girl has left her home without any inducement from the defendant, he is not guilty of abduction, even though it be proved that before she so left he had taken her about to places of entertainment, and had had connection with her. R. v. Kauffman, 68 J. P. 189, Bosanquet, Common Serjeant; and cf. R. v. Mackney, 29 Victoria L. R. 22, where the English cases are considered. Whether the girl was in possession of her father is a question for the jury. R. v. Mace, 50 J. P. 776. Upon an indictment under this section for taking a girl out of the possession of her father, the proof was that at the time of the commission of the alleged offence she was employed by another person as barmaid at a distance from her father's home. It was held that she was under the lawful charge of her employer and not in the possession of her father, and that therefore the defendant could not be convicted of the offence with which he was charged. R. v. Henkers, supra. On an indictment under this section the age of the girl must be proved by the prosecution, as ante, p. 413. The presumption of 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123 (2) (ante, p. 992), does not apply to this offence.

It is a defence if the prisoner, at the time of taking the girl from lawful custody, had reasonable cause to believe that she was eighteen, though he did not inquire till after the taking. R. v. Packer, 16 Cox, 57, Pollock, B.

STEALING CHILDREN UNDER THE AGE OF FOURTEEN YEARS.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 56].—Whosoever shall unlawfully, either by force or fraud, lead or take away, or decoy or entice away, or detain, any child under the age of fourteen years, with intent to deprive any parent, guardian, or other person having the lawful care or charge of such child, of the possession of such child, or with intent to steal any article upon or about the person of such child, to whomsoever such article may belong; and whosoever shall, with any such intent, receive or harbour any such child, knowing the same to have been by force or fraud led, taken, decoyed, enticed away, or detained, as in this section before mentioned, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years, . . . or to be imprisoned, . . . and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping: Provided that no person who shall have claimed any right to the possession of such child, or shall be the mother or shall have claimed to be the father of an illegitimate child, shall be liable to be prosecuted by virtue hereof, on account of the getting possession of such child, or taking such child out of the possession of any person having the lawful charge thereof. [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 21, with increase in the age from ten to fourteen and inserting " guardian."]

8 Edw. 7, c. 67 (Children Act, 1908), ss. 27-32, sched. 1.—Procedure and evidence.]—See ante, pp. 987-990, 994.

Sect. 123.—Presumption as to age.]—See ante, p. 992.

Indictment under the first part of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 56 (supra).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Child-stealing, contrary to section 56 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, by force or fraud took away, or decoyed, or enticed away [or detained] C. D., a child of the age of ten years, with intent to deprive E. F., the father of the said C. D. [guardian or other person having the lawful care or charge], of the possession of the said C. D.

A second count may be added charging the intent as being " with intent to steal the necklace of the said C. D."

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen years of age, with or without whipping. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 56; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant took and enticed the child away: that the child was under the age of fourteen years. As to presumption of age, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123 (2), sched. 1, (ante, pp. 992, 994). As to unsworn evidence by child of tender years and mode of taking evidence of children, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, ss. 30, 31 (ante, pp. 988, 989). Prove the intent from circumstances from which the jury may infer it, i.e., proof that E. F. was the father of the child will prove the intent stated in the first count, because the natural consequence of taking the child must be to deprive the father of its possession. It is not necessary to show that the accused intended to deprive the parent permanently of the possession of the child. R. v. Powell, 79 J. P. 272; 24 Cox, 229; correcting R. v. Jones, 22 Cox, 212; 76 J. P. 272; Bosanquet, Common Serjeant. The defendant may prove that he claimed to have a right to the possession of the child, for such persons are specially exempted from the operation of this section of the Act. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 56. The prisoner being indicted under this section for that she did feloniously and unlawfully, by fraud, detain a child, under the age of fourteen, with intent to deprive the mother of its possession, it was held that she was rightly convicted upon evidence that the child had been in the service of the prisoner, and was missing and could not be discovered; and that she gave different accounts of what had become of the child, but implying that she had given it up to some third person, although there was no evidence that the child was still in her actual custody, nor indeed, any evidence where it was. R. v. Johnson, 15 Cox, 481 (C. C. R.). An indictment under this section is supported by evidence of force or fraud exercised upon the guardian of the child, or upon the child so taken or detained, or any other person. R. v. Bellis, 62 L. J. (M. C.) 155 (C. C. R.), overruling R. v. Barrett, 15 Cox, 658. As to evidence by the husband or wife of the defendant, see 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 4 (ante, p. 465), and 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 27 (ante, p. 987).

SECT. 7.

RAPE, ETC.

RAVISHING WOMEN.

Common Law.

RAPE is the unlawful carnal knowledge of a woman by force and against her will. 1 East, P. C. 434. It was anciently a felony at common law, and after being made a misdemeanor by 3 Edw. 1, c. 13, it was again made felony by 13 Edw. 1, st. 1, c. 34, and punishable with death without benefit of clergy by 18 Eliz. c. 7 (rep.); and see 1 Hale, 627 et seq.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 48.]—Whosoever shall be convicted of the crime of rape shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 16.]

Sect. 63.—Carnal knowledge defined.—Whenever, upon the trial for any offence punishable under this Act, it may be necessary to prove carnal knowledge, it shall not be necessary to prove the actual emission of seed in order to constitute a carnal knowledge, but the carnal knowledge shall be deemed complete upon proof of penetration only. [Irrespective of this statute, the law remains the same as it has been since 9 G. 4, c. 31, namely, that where carnal knowledge constitutes a crime, that crime is complete without emission, upon proof of penetration. R. v. Marsden [1891] 2 Q. B. 149; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 171. As to earlier law, see 1 East, P. C. 436-440.]

48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885), s. 4 (last paragraph).]—Whereas doubts have been entertained whether a man who induces a married woman to permit him to have connection with her by personating her husband is or is not guilty of rape, it is hereby enacted and declared that every such offender shall be guilty of rape. [This gets rid of the decision in R. v. Barrow, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 156; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 20, which was rejected in Ireland. R. v. Dee, 14 L. R. Ir. 468; 15 Cox, 579.]

Sect. 5, sub-s. 2.—Carnally knowing imbecile women under circumstances not amounting to rape.]—Any person who . . . (2) unlawfully and carnally knows or attempts to have unlawful carnal knowledge of any female idiot or imbecile woman or girl, under circumstances which do not amount to rape, but which prove that the offender knew at the time of the commission of the offence that the woman or girl was an idiot or imbecile, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable at the discretion of the Court to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. . . .

53 & 54 Vict. c. 5 (Lunacy Act, 1890), s. 324.—Abuse of female lunatics.]—If any manager, officer, nurse, attendant, or other person employed in any institution for lunatics (including an asylum for criminal lunatics), or workhouse, or any person having the care or charge of any single patient, carnally knows or attempts to have carnal knowledge of any female under care or treatment as a lunatic in the institution or workhouse, or as a single patient, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction on indictment shall be liable to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years, and no consent or alleged consent of such female thereto shall be any defence to any indictment or prosecution for such offence. [This section was extended to Ireland by 1 Edw. 7, c. 17, s. 2.]

Sect. 325, sub-s. 2.—Prosecution in England only by consent of attorney-general or order of commissioners in lunacy, or visitors. [Now, by 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 28 (Mental Deficiency Act, 1913), s. 65 (1), all the powers and duties of the commissioners in lunacy have been transferred to the Board of Control.]

48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 9.—Power, on indictment for rape or for felony under s. 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, to convict of certain misdemeanors.]—If upon the trial of any indictment for rape, or any offence made felony by s. 4 of this Act (post, p. 1024), the jury shall be satisfied that the defendant is guilty of an offence under ss. 3 (post, p. 1035), 4 (post, p. 1024), or 5 (ante, p. 1016, and post, p. 1024), of this Act, or of an indecent assault, but are not satisfied that the defendant is guilty of the felony charged in such indictment, or of an attempt to commit the same (see ante, p. 215), then and in every such case the jury may acquit the defendant of such felony, and find him guilty of such offence as aforesaid, or of an indecent assault, and thereupon such defendant shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted for such offence as aforesaid, or for the misdemeanor of indecent assault.

Indictment for Rape. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 48, ante, p. 1016).

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Rape.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, had carnal knowledge of C. D., without her consent.

The offence is a felony at common law, but the punishment is statutory. An indictment is good which charges that A. committed a rape, and that B. was present aiding and abetting him in the commission of the felony; for the party aiding may be charged either as, as he was in law, a principal in the first degree or, as he was in fact, a principal in the second degree. R. v. Crisham, C. & Mar. 187. A general conviction of a defendant charged both as principal in the first degree, and as an aider and abettor of other men in rape, is valid on the count charging him as principal. And on such an indictment, evidence may be given of several rapes on the same woman, at the same time, by the defendant and other men, each assisting the other in turn, without putting the prosecutor to elect on which count to proceed. R. v. Folkes, 1 Mood. 354 : R. v. Gray, 7 C. & P. 164. Under the Indictments Act, 1915, ante, p. 57, in such a case the rapes can now be included in the same indictment.

As to the conviction of the defendant upon this indictment of other offences than that charged against him in the indictment, see 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 9 (ante, p. 1017).

Felony : penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for not more than two years. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 48; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Who may be convicted.]—If it is proved that the defendant is under the age of fourteen years, he must be acquitted, whatever may be the nature of the evidence against him; for a boy under the age of fourteen years is presumed by law incapable of being a principal in the first degree in rape; 1 Hale, 630; and this presumption was not affected by 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 18 (rep.) of which 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 63, is a re-enactment. R. v. Groombridge, 7 C. & P. 582. Nor is evidence admissible against him to show that in fact he has attained the full state of puberty, and was capable of committing the crime. R. v. Philips, 8 C. & P. 736; R. v. Jordan, 9 C. & P. 118. But in R. v. Brimilow, 2 Mood. 122; 9 C. & P. 366, a boy under fourteen indicted for rape was held properly convicted of assault under 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11 (rep.). Quære, however, whether he might not be convicted on this indictment of an indecent assault, under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 9 (ante, p. 1017). A woman may be convicted as principal in the second degree in rape. R. v. Ram, 17 Cox, 609, 610 n., Bowen, L.J. It is a general proposition that a husband cannot be guilty of a rape upon his wife. 1 Hale, 629; but it would seem that the proposition does not necessarily extend to every possible case: see the remarks of the judges in R. v. Clarence, 22 Q. B. D. 23. But both a husband and a boy under fourteen may be principals in the second degree. 1 Hale, 630. See R. v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396: R. v. Waite [1892] 2 Q. B. 600; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 187: R. v. Williams [1893] 1 Q. B. 320; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 29.

Evidence of husband or wife.]—Under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 20 (ante, p. 1017), the defendant and his wife, and, in the case of a female accessory, her husband, are competent but not compellable witnesses on the trial of the indictment, but not before the grand jury. This enactment appears to be superseded as to the defendant by 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1, (ante, p. 458), and the husband or wife of the defendant appears now to be a competent witness for the prosecution or defence without the consent of the defendant, but not to be a compellable witness. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 4 (ante, p. 465).

Consent.]—It must be proved that the rape was committed on C. D. by force and without her consent. See R. v. Bradley, 74 J. P. 247; 4 Cr. App. R. 225. If, however, she yielded through fear of death or through duress, it is rape. 1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 6: R. v. Jones, 4 L. T. (O. S.) 154: cf. R. v. Hallett, 9 C. & P. 748: R. v. Rudland, 4 F. & F. 495. If the connection took place when she was in a state of insensibility from liquor, having been made drunk by the prisoner (though the liquor was given only for the purpose of exciting her), it is a rape. R. v. Camplin, 1 Den. 89; 1 C. & K. 746; 1 Cox, 220. So, also, if a man gets into bed with a woman while she is asleep, and he knows she is asleep, and he has connection with her while in that state, he is guilty of rape. R. v. Mayers, 12 Cox, 311: R. v. Young, 14 Cox, 114, Lush, J. It is no excuse that the woman consented at first, if the offence was afterwards committed by force or against her will; nor is it any excuse that she consented after the fact. 1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 7. Even that the woman was a common strumpet, or the concubine of the ravisher, is no excuse; Id.; 1 Hale, 628, 629; although such circumstances should certainly operate strongly with the jury as to the probability of the fact that connection was had with the woman against her consent. An indictment for rape will lie against one who ravishes a girl of or above the age of thirteen years and under the age of sixteen years, although 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 5, sub-s. 1 (post, p. 1024), makes the mere unlawful carnal knowledge of such a girl a misdemeanor. Under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 94, s. 4 (rep.), which enacted that whosoever should unlawfully and carnally know and abuse any girl being above the age of twelve and under the age of thirteen years, whether with or without her consent, should be guilty of a misdemeanor, it was held that an indictment for rape would still lie against one who ravished a girl between the ages of twelve and thirteen. R. v. Ratcliffe, 10 Q. B. D. 74; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 40. The words "without her consent," which alone gave rise to the doubt in that case, are not contained in 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 4 (post, p. 1024).

Connection with women of weak intellect.]—If the connection was with a woman of weak intellect, incapable of distinguishing right from wrong, and the jury found that she was incapable of giving consent, or of exercising any judgment upon the matter, and that (though she made no resistance) the defendant had carnal knowledge of her by force, and without her consent, that is a rape. R. v. Fletcher [1859] Bell, 63; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 85; 8 Cox, 131; see R. v. Ryan, 2 Cox, 115. It was, however, afterwards held that the mere fact of connection with an idiot girl who was capable of recognizing and describing the prisoner, and who was a fully developed woman, who, notwithstanding her imbecile condition, might have strong animal instincts, is not sufficient evidence of rape to be left to a jury. R. v. Fletcher [1866] L. R. 1 C. C. R. 39; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 172; 10 Cox, 248. These cases agree on the principle, and only differ as to the amount of evidence of consent adduced. The prisoner was convicted of attempting to rape a girl of fourteen years of age, who had been blind from six weeks old, and wrong in her mind, hardly capable of understanding anything that was said to her, but could go up and down stairs by herself. She passively obeyed all directions given to her, but was obliged to be dressed and undressed. She was unable to do any work. There were no marks of violence on her person, but the surgeon thought that there had been recent connection, and that she had been in the habit of having connection. She was unable to give evidence in court. The prisoner had known the girl and her family for upwards of two years. It was held that there was sufficient evidence of the girl's incapacity to consent to support the finding of the jury that the prisoner attempted to have connection with her without her consent, and the conviction was affirmed. R. v. Barratt, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 81; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 7; 12 Cox, 498. Where the prosecutrix, an apparent idiot, proved that the prisoner had had connection with her, but it appeared from her examination that although she knew he was doing wrong, she made no resistance, and the prisoner on being apprehended and charged with committing rape upon the prosecutrix "against her will," said "Yes, I did; and I am very sorry for it," it was held that there was evidence to go to the jury of a rape. R. v. Pressy, 10 Cox, 635 (C. C. R.).

By 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 5, sub-s. 2 (ante, p. 1016), connection, or an attempt to have connection, with "any female idiot or imbecile woman or girl, under circumstances which do not amount to rape, but which prove that the offender knew at the time of the commission of the offence that the woman or girl was an idiot or imbecile," is a misdemeanor punishable with two years' imprisonment. The word "imbecile," as used in this section, was defined by Wills, J., as follows: "A person to answer that description under this Act must be either incapable of appreciating the nature and quality of the act in question, or incapable of exercising an act of her own will in giving or withholding her consent, and this incapacity must arise from want of understanding." R. v Turner, C. C. C. Sess. Papers, September 17th, 1886. In R. v. F—— 74 J. P. 384, Grantham, J., held that an idiot is a person who from birth has had no mind, and that an imbecile woman is a woman who, having once had a mind of some kind, owing to decay or to other mental or physical causes ceases to have a mind.

Connection by personating husband.]—It is rape for a man to have carnal knowledge of a woman by a fraud which induces her to suppose he is her husband. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 4 (ante, p. 1016). This enactment gets rid of decisions to the contrary in R. v. Barrow, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 156; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 20; 11 Cox, 191: R. v. Clarke, Dears. 397; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 25; 6 Cox, 412, and see 413 n.: R. v. Sweenie, 8 Cox, 223 (Sc.). R. v. Barrow had been disapproved by some English judges in R. v. Flattery, 2 Q. B. D. 410; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 630; and by the Irish judges in R. v. Dee, 15 Cox, 579; 14 L. R. (Ir.) 468. Though not rape before 48 & 49 Vict. 69, s. 4, the offence seems to have been an assault; R. v. Williams, 8 C. & P. 286: R. v. Saunders, 8 C. & P. 265; and if the woman was asleep the offence was always held rape (ante, p. 1019).

Connection by false pretences.]—Where a medical man had connection with a girl of fourteen years of age, under the pretence that he was thereby treating her medically for the complaint for which he was attending her, and she made no resistance, owing solely to the bonâ fide belief that such was the case, this was held to be certainly an assault, and, it was suggested, a rape. R. v. Case, 1 Den. 580; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 174; 4 Cox, 220. Where the prosecutrix, a girl of nineteen, consulted the prisoner, a quack doctor, with respect to illness from which she suffered, and he advised a surgical operation, and under pretence of performing it, had connection with her, she submitting to what was done, not with any intention that he should have connection with her, but under the belief that he was merely performing a surgical operation, that belief being wilfully and fraudulently induced by the prisoner, it was held that the prisoner was guilty of rape. R. v. Flattery, 2 Q. B. D. 410; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 130; 13 Cox, 388. By 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 3 (2) (post, p. 1035), any person who by false pretences or false representations procures any woman or girl, not being a common prostitute or of known immoral character, to have any unlawful carnal connection shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; and it has been held (R. v. O'Shay, 19 Cox, 76, Ridley, J.; c.f. Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) p. 207) that the effect of this section is to render R. v. Flattery, supra, no longer law. But in the later case the attention of the judge does not seem to have been called to 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 16, which enacts "that this Act shall not exempt any person from any proceeding for an offence which is punishable at common law or under any Act of Parliament other than this Act, so that a person be not punished twice for the same offence" (and see ante, p. 160).

Evidence of woman ravished.]—The party ravished is a competent witness and corroboration of her testimony is not in law essential; see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 941, 943; but is in practice required. (a) For instance, if the witness is of good fame; if she presently discovered the offence, and made search for the offender; if the party accused fled for it; these and the like are concurring circumstances which give greater probability to her evidence. But, on the other hand, if she is of evil fame, and stands unsupported by the testimony of others; if she concealed the injury for any considerable time after she had opportunity to complain; if the place where the act was alleged to have been committed were such that it was possible she might have been heard, and she made no outcry; these and the like circumstances carry a strong but not conclusive presumption that her testimony is false or feigned. 4 Bl. Com. 213. And the prisoner may give evidence of the woman's notoriously bad character for want of chastity or common decency, or that she is a common prostitute, per Stephen J., in R. v. Riley, infra; or that she has had connection before with the prisoner himself; R. v. Riley, 18 Q. B. D. 481; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 52; but R. v. Hodgson, R. & R. 211 : R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 241 : R. v. Barker, 3 C. & P. 589 : R. v. Martin, 6 C. & P. 562. The prosecutrix may on cross-examination be asked whether she has had connection with men, named to her, other than the prisoner, but if she denies having done so, those men cannot be called to contradict her, and the cross-examining party is bound by her answer. R. v. Holmes, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 334; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 12 : R. v. Cockcroft, 11 Cox, 410 : R. v. Hodgson, R. & R. 211. A ruling to the contrary in R. v. Robins, 2 M. & Rob. 512, was noticed and overruled in R. v. Holmes, supra. See also R. v. Cargill [1913] 2 K. B. 271; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 655; 23 Cox, 382; 108 L. T. 816; 77 J. P. 347; 29 T. L. R. 382. It has been held that the prosecutrix is not bound to answer such a question. R. v. Hodgson (supra); but this is open to doubt. See Cundell v. Pratt, M. & M. 108, and other cases cited ante, p. 474. It has been held that if the prosecutrix is cross-examined with a view to show that she consented or was of unchaste life, under 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (f) (ante, p. 458), the prisoner, if called, may be cross-examined as to previous convictions. See R. v. Fisher, 34 L. J. Newsp. 100; Jelf on Criminal Evidence, p. 70; but this is doubtful. See R. v. Sheean, 72 J. P. 232; 24 T. L. R. 459; and R. v. Preston [1909] 1 K. B. 568, 577; and see generally on this subject ante, p. 462.

Evidence of complaint.]—In the case of rape or kindred offences against women or girls, the fact that a complaint was made by the prosecutrix shortly after the alleged offence, and the particulars of such complaint, may be given in evidence so far as they relate to the prisoner, not as evidence of the facts complained of, but as evidence of the consistency of the conduct of the prosecutrix with her evidence, given at the trial. R. v. Lillyman [1896] 2 Q. B. 167; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 195, where the prior rulings were considered; and it was held that the prevalent practice had been wrong in limiting the questions to whether the prosecutrix made a complaint or mentioned a name. As to the present state of the law on this subject, see R. v. Osborne [1905] 1 K. B. 551; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 311; 69 J. P. 189; 92 L. T. 393; 53 W. R. 494 : R. v. Hedges, Id. 262, and ante, pp. 372, 373.

Carnal knowledge.]—To constitute the offence of rape, there must be a penetration. R. v. Hill, 1 East, P. C. 439. But any, the slightest, penetration will be sufficient. Where a penetration was proved, but not of such a depth as to injure the hymen, still it was held to be sufficient to constitute the crime of rape. R. v. Russen, 1 East, P. C. 438, 439; see R. v. M'Rue, 8 C. & P. 641; R. v. Allen, 9 C. & P. 31. Proof of the rupture of the hymen is unnecessary. R. v. Hughes, 2 Mood. 190; 9 C. & P. 752: and see R. v. Lines, 1 C. & K. 393, overruling R. v. Gammon, 5 C. & P. 321.

Until the passing of 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 18 (re-enacted in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 63, ante, p. 1016), it was also necessary to prove emission, which might be proved either positively, by the evidence of the woman that she felt it; or it might be presumed from circumstances, as, for instance, that the defendant, after having connection with the prosecutrix, arose from her voluntarily, without being interrupted in the act. R. v. Harmwood, 1 East P. C. 440: R. v. Sheridan, Id. 438: R. v. Burrows, R. & R. 519. It is under the statutes cited now unnecessary to prove the actual emission of seed, in order to constitute a carnal knowledge; carnal knowledge is deemed complete upon proof of penetration only. See R. v. Marsden [1891] 2 Q. B. 149; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 171; 17 Cox, 297. And it has been held that even though the jury negative the emission, or the circumstances be proved to have been such that no emission did or could take place, the offence is complete if the penetration is proved R. v. Jennings, 4 C. & P. 249; 1 Lew. 93: R. v. Cox, 1 Mood. 337; 5 C. & P. 297: R. v. Allen, 9 C. & P. 31.

Conviction of another offence.]—If actual penetration is not proved, the defendant may, nevertheless, on this indictment, be convicted of an attempt to commit a rape. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (ante, p. 215). As to the evidence necessary to prove the attempt, see R. v. Lloyd, 7 C. & P. 318: R. v. Wright, 4 F. & F. 967. And where an indictment charged H. with rape, and W. as an aider and abettor, and the jury found H. guilty of attempting to commit a rape and W. of aiding H. in the attempt, and it was contended that this finding amounted to an acquittal of W., as the case was not within 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, the objection was overruled and the conviction of W. for misdemeanor was affirmed. R. v. Hapgood, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 221; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 83; S. C. as R. v. Wyatt, 39 L. J. (M. C.) 83. A boy under fourteen cannot be convicted of an assault with intent to commit a rape. R. v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396; R. v. Waite [1892] 2 Q. B. 600; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 187: R. v. Williams [1893] 1 Q. B. 320; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 29. An acquittal upon an indictment for rape is no bar to a subsequent indictment on the same facts for a common assault. R. v. Dungey, 4 F. & F. 99. And if upon the trial of an indictment for rape, the jury are satisfied that the defendant is guilty of an offence under ss. 3 (post, p. 1035), 4 (post, p. 1024), or 5 (ante, p. 1016, and post, p. 1024) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. 1885, or of an indecent assault, but are not satisfied that the defendant is guilty of rape, or of an attempt to commit the same, the jury may acquit the defendant of the rape, and find him guilty of such offence as aforesaid, or of an indecent assault, and thereupon such defendant shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for such offence as aforesaid, or for an indecent assault. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 9 (ante, p. 1017); see R. v. West, 4 Cr. App. R. 179. As to conviction of incest on a charge of rape, etc., see post, p. 1043. As to whether on acquittal for rape the defendant can be prosecuted for assault with intent to commit rape, see R. v. Gisson, 2 C. & K. 781, doubted in 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1988 n.

CARNAL KNOWLEDGE OF GIRLS UNDER THIRTEEN, AND GIRLS OF OR OVER THIRTEEN AND UNDER SIXTEEN YEARS OF AGE, AND ALLOWING CHILDREN UNDER SIXTEEN TO RESIDE IN BROTHELS, AND CAUSING THE SEDUCTION, ETC., OF GIRLS UNDER SIXTEEN.

Statute.

48 & 49 Vict c. 69 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885), s. 4.—Defilement of girl under thirteen years of age.]—Any person who unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of thirteen years shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . [For indictment, see post, p. 1027.]

Any person who attempts to have unlawful carnal knowledge of any girl under the age of thirteen years shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable at the discretion of the Court to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. [This clause gets rid of the decision in R. v. Cockburn, 3 Cox, 543 (see post, p. 1027).]

Whipping.]—Provided that in the case of an offender whose age does not exceed sixteen years, the Court may, instead of sentencing him to any term of imprisonment, order him to be whipped, as prescribed by the Whipping Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 18), and the said Act shall apply, so far as circumstances admit, as if the offender had been convicted in manner in that Act mentioned. . . . [The rest of s. 4 is repealed and in substance re-enacted by 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 30, and sched. 3, except the last paragraph, which is set out ante, p. 1016. An offender whose age exceeds sixteen years at the date of conviction, though he was under sixteen when he committed the offence, cannot be sentenced to be whipped. R. v. Cawthorn [1913] 3 K. Sect. 5, sub-s. 1.—Defilement of girl between thirteen and sixteen years of age.—Defence.—Limitation of prosecution.]—Any person who unlawfully and carnally knows or attempts to have unlawful carnal knowledge of any girl being of or above the age of thirteen years and under the age of sixteen years shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable at the discretion of the Court to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. [Sub-s. 2 is printed ante, p. 1016.]

Provided that it shall be a sufficient defence to any charge under sub-s. 1 of this section if it shall be made to appear to the Court or jury before whom the charge shall be brought that the person so charged had reasonable cause to believe that the girl was of or above the age of sixteen years. [for minimum term of penal servitude and alternative punishment, see 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, ante, pp. 238, 239]; and (2) if such girl is of or above the age of thirteen and under the age of sixteen years, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable at the discretion of the Court to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

Provided that it shall be a sufficient defence to any charge under this section if it shall be made to appear to the Court or jury before whom the charge shall

Sect. 17.—Punishment of person causing, etc., prostitution of young girl.]—(1) If any person having the custody, charge, or care of a girl under the age of sixteen years causes or encourages the seduction or prostitution [or unlawful carnal knowledge] of that girl, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years.

(2) For the purposes of this section a person shall be deemed to have caused or encouraged the seduction or prostitution [or unlawful carnal knowledge] (as the case may be) of a girl who has been seduced or become a prostitute [or been unlawfully carnally known] if he has knowingly allowed the girl to consort with, or to enter or continue in the employment of, any prostitute or person of known immoral character. Indictment for carnally knowing a Girl under Thirteen Years.
(48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 4, ante, p. 1024).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Carnal knowledge of girl under thirteen, contrary to section 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, had carnal knowledge of C. D., a girl of the age of ten years.

By s. 9 of 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 (ante, p. 1017), the defendant may on this indictment be convicted of an indecent assault or of a misdemeanor under ss. 3, 4, or 5 of the Act.

Felony : penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour.—48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 4; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 237-239). As to the sentence in the case of an offender whose age does not exceed sixteen years, see 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 4 (ante, p. 1024).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106; 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 17 (ante, p. 984).

Evidence.

The evidence is the same as in rape, with this exception, that it is immaterial whether the act was done with or without the consent of the female. If it was in fact without her consent, an indictment for rape will lie, notwithstanding the age of the child. R. v. Dicken, 14 Cox, 8, Mellor, J. So, where the prisoner was indicted for an attempt to commit the felony, and the evidence was that he had attempted to have carnal knowledge of the girl, but that she had consented to the attempt, it was held that the fact of her consent was immaterial, and that the prisoner was properly convicted. R. v. Beale, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 10; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 60; 10 Cox, 157. In order to prove carnal knowledge under s. 4, it is not necessary to prove emission. R. v. Marsden [1891] 2 Q. B. 149; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 171; 17 Cox, 297. As to the admissibility of statements made by the girl immediately after the commission of the alleged offence, see R. v. Lillyman (ante, p. 1022) : R. v. Osborne [1905] 1 K. B. 551; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 311; 92 L. T. 393; 69 J. P. 189, 53; W. R. 494 (ante, pp. 372, 373). As to the admissibility of statements made in the prisoner's presence, and of his behaviour when they are made, see R. v. Christie [1914] A. C. 545; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 1097; 24 Cox, 249; 30 T. L. R. 471; 10 Cr. App. R. 141; explaining and in part overruling R. v. Norton [1910] 2 K. B. 496; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 756; 102 L. T. 926; 74 J. P. 375; 26 T. L. R. 550 (ante, p. 393).

Upon the trial of an indictment charging a felony under s. 4 the prisoner cannot be found guilty of a misdemeanor except by statute; a prisoner, therefore, who is indicted for a felony under s. 4 of 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 cannot be convicted of a common assault merely, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 9 of that Act (ante, p. 1017), whereby it is enacted that if on the trial of an indictment for rape or for an offence made felony by s. 4 the jury are satisfied that the defendant is guilty of an offence under ss. 3, 4, or 5 of that Act, or of an indecent assault, but are not satisfied that the defendant is guilty of the felony charged in the indictment or of an attempt to commit the same, the jury may acquit the defendant of the felony, and find him guilty of such offence as aforesaid, or of an indecent assault. See R. v. Catherall, 13 Cox, 109, Amphlett, B. (decided before 1885).

Evidence of children of tender years.]—Where the evidence of a child is given unsworn, the provisions of the Children Act, 1908, s. 30, as amended by the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914 (ante, p. 988), apply. Evidence not upon oath given before the committing magistrate under the provisions of 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 30, and reduced into writing, signed and returned by him with the depositions of the other witnesses in the case, can, when the circumstances so warrant, be read against the prisoner on his trial, as the provisions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, have been extended to such evidence by 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 30, overruling R. v. Pruntey, 16 Cox, 344.

Proof of age.]—The provisions of s. 123 of the Children Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 67), ante, p. 992, as to presumption or determination of age, do not apply to offences under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (see s. 123 (2)), but do apply to offences under ss. 16, 17, 18 of the Act of 1908 (ante, pp. 1026, 1027). The girl must be proved to have been under thirteen years of age when the offence was committed. The safer way of doing this is to produce a duly certified copy of the certificate of birth, coupled with evidence of identity; but the age may be proved by any other legal means. See R. v. Cox [1898] 1 Q. B. 179; 18 Cox, 672; and the other cases collected (ante, p. 414). Where a certificate of birth is put in there must be evidence of identity as well. R. v. Rogers, 79 J. P. 16. Where the offence was committed on the 5th of February, 1842, and the child's father proved that on his return home, after an absence of a few days, on the 9th of February, 1832, he found the child had been born, and was told by the grandmother that she had been born the day before, and the register of baptism showed that the child had been baptized on the 9th of February, 1832: this evidence was held not sufficient to prove the age of the child, it being under the then state of the law necessary to prove that the child was under the age of ten years at the time of the alleged offence. R. v. Wedge, 5 C. & P. 298. See R. v. Nicholls, 10 Cox, 476: R. v. Weaver, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 85; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 13: R. v. Bellis, 6 Cr. App. R. 283: R. v. Rogers, 10 Cr. App. R. 276 (post, p. 1031). As to evidence by the defendant and his wife, see ante, pp. 458-468.

The presumption of law that a male under the age of fourteen cannot be guilty of the felony of carnal knowledge of a female (ante, pp. 11, 402), is not rebutted by 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 4. R. v. Waite [1892] 2 Q. B. 600; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 187; 17 Cox, 554. But although a boy under fourteen, who is tried on an indictment under s. 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, charging him with having had carnal knowledge of a girl under thirteen, is entitled to be acquitted of that offence, he may be convicted of an indecent assault under s. 9 of that Act. R. v. Williams [1893] 1 Q. B. 320; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 29.

Indictment for carnally knowing and abusing a Girl of or above Thirteen and under Sixteen Years. (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 5, sub-s. 1, ante, p. 1024).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count:

Carnal knowledge of girl, contrary to section 5 (1) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, had carnal knowledge of C. D., a girl of the age of fourteen years.

Add a count charging an indecent assault, for the form of which see post, p. 1033.

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to an indictment for this offence. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 17 (ante, p. 1026).

A girl of thirteen and under sixteen cannot be indicted for "abetting" or "inciting" to the commission of this offence on herself. R. v. Tyrrell [1894] 1 Q. B. 710; 63 L. J. (M. C.) 58; 17 Cox, 716.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 5.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 17 (ante, p. 1026).

Evidence.

The evidence is the same as in rape, with this exception, that it will be no defence that the girl consented. If she did not consent, it will be a rape, and the defendant may be indicted accordingly. R. v. Ratcliffe, 10 Q. B. D. 74; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 40 (ante, p. 1020). As to the admissibility of statements made by the girl immediately after the commission of the alleged offence, see R. v. Lillyman (ante, p. 1022): R. v. Osborne [1905] 1 K. B. 551; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 311; 92 L. T. 393; 69 J. P. 189; 53 W. R. 494 (ante, pp. 372, 373). In R. v. Neale, 1 Den. 36; 1 C. & K. 591, on an indictment under 7 G. 4, c. 31, s. 17 (rep.), for carnally knowing a girl over ten and under fourteen, it was held that proof that the girl did not consent did not take the case out of the statute, nor afford any defence to the indictment, though such facts would have justified indictment and conviction for rape. See also 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12 (ante, p. 215). In order to prove carnal knowledge under s. 5, it is not necessary to prove emission. R. v. Marsden [1891] 2 Q. B. 149; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 171; 17 Cox, 297.

Age.]—The child must be proved to be of or above the age of thirteen years, and under the age of sixteen years. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123, ante, p. 992, does not apply to this offence. Where on an indictment under 7 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 17, for carnally knowing a girl over ten and under fourteen, the mother of the child stated that she was ten years of age last March, although on cross-examination it appeared that the witness knew neither the year nor the month of the child's birth, and she also gave confused and inconsistent answers as to the ages of her children, it was held that there was evidence to go to the jury of the age of the child. R. v. Nicholls, 10 Cox, 476. The age of the child may be proved by the production of a certified copy of the entry of its birth in the register of births kept under 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 86 (R. v. Weaver, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 85; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 13), coupled with identification of the child with that named in the certificate. See ante, p. 414, and R. v. Wedge, 5 C. & P. 298: R. v. Bellis, 6 Cr. App. R. 283: R. v. Rogers, 10 Cr. App. R. 276 (ante, p. 1029). But this mode of proof does not exclude evidence of age by persons who know the child. R. v. Cox [1898] 1 Q. B. 179; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 293; 18 Cox, 672.

Defence.]—It is a sufficient defence to this charge if it is made to appear to the Court or jury before whom the charge shall be brought, that the defendant had reasonable cause to believe that the girl was of or about sixteen years of age. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 5, sub-s. 1 (ante, p. 1024).

Limitation of time.]—No prosecution can be commenced for this offence more than six months after its commission. 4 Edw. 7. c. 15, s. 27 (ante, p. 1025); as to what is a commencement of the prosecution, see R. v. West [1898] 1 Q. B. 174; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 62; R. v. Wakeley [1920] 1 K. B. 688; 89 L. J. (K. B.) 97; 84 J. P. 31; 14 Cr. App. R. 121; and ante, p. 65. Evidence of prior offences by the accused against the same girl outside the six months' limit may be given for the prosecution. R. v. Shellaker [1914] 1 K. B. 414; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 413; overruling R. v. Beighton, 18 Cox, 535.

Evidence of wife or husband.]—The defendant's wife is a competent witness for the prosecution or the defence, even without his consent (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 20, ante, p. 1017, and 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 27, and sched. 1, ante, pp. 987, 994); but she is not a compellable witness. R. v. Leach [1912] A. C. 305; 81 L. J. (K. B.) 616; 22 Cox, 721; 106 L. T. 281; 76 J. P. 201; 28 T. L. R. 289 (ante, p. 468).

Conviction of other offences.]—On an indictment for either of the offences mentioned in these two sections (4, 5) the defendant may, whether the girl consented or not (R. v. Beale, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 10; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 60: R. v. Ryland, 11 Cox, 101), be convicted of an attempt to commit the felony or misdemeanor charged, if the facts proved warrant such a finding; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (ante, p. 215); and may have sentence of imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, such sentence being authorized where the girl is under thirteen by 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69. s. 4, and where the girl is thirteen or over, but under sixteen, by s. 5 of the same statute. It is said that on an indictment for the statutory misdemeanor under s. 5, sub-s. 1 (ante, p. 1024) the defendant cannot, if the girl's age is proved to be under thirteen years, be convicted; for 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12 (ante, p. 213), has been held to apply only where an indictment for misdemeanor is proved by facts amounting to a felony. R. v. Shott, 3 C. & K. 206.

If upon the trial of an indictment under s. 5, the offence of carnally knowing is disproved, the defendant may nevertheless be found guilty of a common assault, if the facts proved warrant such a verdict. R. v. Bostock, 17 Cox, 700, Charles, J.: R. v. Guthrie, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 241; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 95; unless the girl is over thirteen and consented. See R. v. Meredith, 8 C. & P. 589, and other cases (ante, p. 931).

Corroboration.]—Corroboration is not necessarily required; but it is proper to caution the jury that it is dangerous to act on the evidence of the girl alone against that of the man. R. v. Graham, 74 J. P. 246; 4 Cr. App. R. 218, 220: R. v. Brown, 6 Cr. App. R. 24; R. v. Pitts, 8 Cr. App. R. 126; R. v. Dossi, 13 Cr. App. R. 158. If counsel does so, the judge is not obliged, in every case, to repeat the warning. See R. v. Quinn, 6 Cr. App. R. 269.

Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 52, supra.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Indecent assault, contrary to section 52 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, indecently assaulted C. D.

Where the assault is on a girl under thirteen, the fact that she is so should be stated in the indictment, because of 43 & 44 Vict. c. 45. s. 2, supra; and because of the provisions as to presuming age in 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123 (2), and sched. 1 (ante, pp. 992, 994). But an indictment is not bad for want of such averment. R. v. Stephenson [1912] 3 K. B. 341; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 287; 23 Cox, 214; 107 L. T. 656; 76 J. P. 408; 56 S. J. 764; and see now Indictments Act, 1915, ante, p. 26.

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to indecent assault.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 52. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

Prove an assault, accompanied with circumstances of indecency on the part of the defendant.

Consent.]—If the person assaulted is under thirteen, his or her consent is no defence. 43 & 44 Vict. c. 45. s. 2. In R. v. Osborne [1905] 1 K. B. 551; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 311; 92 L. T. 393; 69 J. P. 189; 53 W. R. 494 (ante. pp 372, 373), it was held that R. v. Lillyman (ante, p. 1022) applied to a charge of indecent assault on a girl under thirteen, although consent is not a material element in such an offence, and that a statement by the girl in answer to a question made immediately after the alleged offence was admissible, if the question was neither leading, suggestive, nor of an intimidating character. This decision overrules R. v. Kingham, 66 J. P. 393, and R. v. Merry, 19 Cox, 442. See also R. v. Norcott [1917] 1 K. B. 347; 86 L. J. (K. B.) 78; 25 Cox, 698; 12 Cr. App. R. 166, ante, p. 373, and R. v. Wilbourne, 12 Cr. App. R. 280. It has been held that, if on an indictment for an indecent assault it appears that the woman consented to the assault, but that her consent was procured by fraud, e.g., under the pretence of a medical operation, such consent constitutes no defence. R. v. Case, 1 Den. 580; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 174: and see ante, p. 931. If the facts of the case are such that the jury may reasonably infer consent, there ought to be a direction on the point; otherwise, and particularly if in the conduct of the case the issue of consent has been made secondary to the main defence, such a direction is unnecessary. R. v. May [1912] 3 K. B. 572; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 1; 23 Cox, 327; 108 L. T. 351; 77 J. P. 31; 29 T. L. R. 24. See also R. v. Horn, 76 J. P. 271; 28 T. L. R. 336; 7 Cr. App. R. 200.

Cross-examination of prosecutrix.]—Where, on the trial of such an indictment, the prosecutrix denies, on cross-examination, having had intercourse with a third person named to her, such person cannot be called to contradict her upon this answer; R. v. Holmes, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 334; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 12; 12 Cox, 137 (ante, p. 1022); but if on cross-examination she denies having had previous intercourse with the prisoner, evidence may be given to contradict her. R. v. Riley, 18 Q. B. D. 481; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 52; 16 Cox, 191; and see R. v. Cargill [1913] 2 K. B. 271.

If the child assaulted is of tender years, the Court may take unsworn evidence from her or any other child witness, subject to corroboration. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 30 (ante, p. 988). As to effect of non-resistance by a girl over thirteen to indecent acts by her schoolmaster, see R. v. McGavaran, 6 Cox, 64. As to proof of the age of the child, see ante, pp. 414, 1029; 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123 (2), and sched. 1 (ante, pp. 992, 994). As to evidence by the defendant or the husband or wife of the defendant, see ante, pp. 458-468.

PROCURATION OF WOMEN AND GIRLS.

Statute.

48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885), s. 2.—Procuration.]—Any person who—

(1) Procures or attempts to procure any girl or woman under twenty-one years of age, not being a common prostitute, or of known immoral character, to have unlawful carnal connection, either within or without the King's dominions (a), with any other person or persons; or

(2) procures or attempts to procure any woman or girl to become, either within or without the King's dominions, a common prostitute; or

(3) procures or attempts to procure any woman or girl to leave the United Kingdom, with intent that she may become an inmate of [or frequent] a brothel elsewhere; or

(a) As to procuration, etc., without the King's dominions, see R. v. Blythe [1895] 1 Canada Cr. Cas. 263; Re Gertie Johnson [1904] 8 Canada Cr. Cas. 243.

(4) procures or attempts to procure any woman or girl to leave her usual place of abode in the United Kingdom (such place not being a brothel), with intent that she may, for the purposes of prostitution, become an inmate of [or frequent] a brothel within or without the King's dominions, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour [and, if a male person, may, at the discretion of the court, and in addition to any term of imprisonment awarded in respect of the said offence, be sentenced to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted shall be specified by the court in the sentence].

Provided that no person shall be convicted of any offence under this section upon the evidence of one witness, unless such witness be corroborated in some material particular by evidence implicating the accused. [The words between square brackets in sub-ss. 3 and 4 express the effect of amendments enacted by 2 & 3 G. 5, c. 20, ss. 2, 3, post, p. 1037.]

Sect. 3.—Procuring defilement of woman or girl by threats, fraud, or administering stupefying drug.—Evidence.]—Any person who—

(1) by threats or intimidation procures or attempts to procure any woman or girl to have any unlawful carnal connection, either within or without the King's dominions; or

(2) by false pretences or false representations procures any woman or girl, not being a common prostitute or of known immoral character, to have any unlawful carnal connection, either within or without the King's dominions; or

(3) applies, administers to, or causes to be taken by any woman or girl any drug, matter, or thing, with intent to stupefy or overpower so as thereby to enable any person to have unlawful carnal connection with such woman or girl, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

Provided that no person shall be convicted of an offence under this section upon the evidence of one witness only, unless such witness be corroborated in some material particular by evidence implicating the accused.

Sect. 6.—Owner, occupier, etc., of premises, permitting defilement of girls under thirteen and between thirteen and sixteen years of age on his premises.]—Ante, p. 1025.

Sect. 7.—Abduction of girl under eighteen years of age with intent that she should be carnally known.]—Ante, p. 1012.

Sect. 8.—Unlawful detention of woman or girl with intent that she should be carnally known or in any brothel.]—Any person who detains any woman or girl against her will—

(1) in or upon any premises with intent that she may be unlawfully and carnally known by any man, whether any particular man, or generally, or shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable at the discretion of the Court to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

Where a woman or girl is in or upon any premises for the purpose of having any unlawful carnal connection, or is in any brothel, a person shall be deemed to detain such woman or girl in or upon such premises or in such brothel, if, with intent to compel or induce her to remain in or upon such premises or in such brothel, such person withholds from such woman or girl any wearing apparel or other property belonging to her, or, where wearing apparel has been lent or otherwise supplied to such woman or girl by or by the direction of such person, such person threatens such woman or girl with legal proceedings if she takes away with her the wearing apparel so lent or supplied.

No legal proceedings, whether civil or criminal, shall be taken against any such woman or girl for taking away or being found in possession of any such wearing apparel as was necessary to enable her to leave such premises or brothel.

Indictment for an Offence under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 3, sub-s. 2 (ante, p. 1035).

Commencement as ante, p. 865.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Procuration, contrary to section 3 (2) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, procured C. D., a woman not being a common prostitute or of known immoral character, to have unlawful carnal connection with himself [or with E. F., as the case may be] by falsely pretending or representing to her that [state in ordinary language the false pretence or representation].

It is immaterial whether the intercourse is procured with the accused or with another. R. v. Williams, 62 J. P. 310; 33 L. J. Newsp. 253: and see R. v. Jones [1896] 1 Q. B. 4; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 28. It has been ruled that the false pretences must be set out, R. v. Field, C. C. C. Sess. Pap. 1891-1892, p. 757, Grantham, J., but that they need not be expressly negatived. R. v. Clarke, 59 J. P. 248, Collins, J. See now forms under the Indictments Act, ante, p. 693.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 3, sub-s. 2.

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to this offence.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 17, ante, p. 1017.

Evidence.

Prove the pretences or representations made by the defendant to C. D., and their falsehood (see ante, pp. 709, 711 et seq.). Seduction by a married man of a woman under promise of marriage by false representation has been held to be within the section. R. v. Williams, 62 J. P. 310; 33 L. J. Newsp. 253. Prove, also, that by means of these false pretences or representations the defendant induced C. D. to have carnal connection with the man named in the indictment; and that she was then not a common prostitute, nor a known immoral character. It may be that under the general rule that the defendant should prove a negative proviso (ante, pp. 46, 352) it is not necessary for the prosecution in the first instance to prove that the woman was not a common prostitute nor of known immoral character, but that it will lie upon the defendant to prove that she was a prostitute or of known immoral character. No person can be convicted of an offence under this section upon the evidence of one witness only, unless such witness be corroborated in some material particular by evidence implicating the accused. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 3. And see R. v. Staub, 2 Cr. App. R. 6: R. v. Cohen, 3 Cr. App. R. 234. Where there is no such evidence the Court of Criminal Appeal may quash the conviction on appeal. R. v. Goldstein, 11 Cr. App. R. 27. As to evidence by the defendant and the wife or husband of the defendant, see ante, pp. 458-466.

OFFENCES AGAINST MENTAL DEFECTIVES.

Statute.

3 & 4 G. 5, c. 28 (Mental Deficiency Act, 1913), s. 56.—Protection of defectives from acts of sexual immorality, procuration, etc.]—(1) Any person—(a) who unlawfully and carnally knows, or attempts to have unlawful carnal knowledge of, any woman or girl under care or treatment in an institution or certified house or approved home, or whilst placed out on licence therefrom or under guardianship under this Act; or (b) who procures, or attempts to procure, any woman or girl who is a defective to have unlawful carnal connection, whether within or without the King's dominions, with any person or persons; or (c) who causes or encourages the prostitution, whether within or without the King's dominions, of any woman or girl who is a defective; or (d) who, being the owner or occupier of any premises, or having or acting or assisting in the management or control thereof, induces or knowingly suffers any woman or girl who is a defective to resort to or be in or upon such premises for the purpose of being unlawfully and carnally known by any man, whether such carnal knowledge is intended to be with any particular man or generally; or (e) who, with intent that any woman or girl who is a defective should be unlawfully and carnally known by any man, whether such carnal knowledge is intended to be with any particular man or generally, takes or causes to be taken such woman or girl out of the possession and against the will of her parent or any other person having the lawful care or charge of her; shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be liable upon conviction on indictment to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years unless he proves that he did not know, and had no reason to suspect, that the woman or girl was a defective.

(2) Section ten of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, shall apply in the case of a woman or girl who is a defective in the same manner as it applies in the case of a girl who is under the age of sixteen years. [See ante, p. 1036.]

(3) Without prejudice and in addition to the provisions of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1880, no consent shall be any defence in any proceedings for an indecent assault upon any defective, if the accused knew or had reason to suspect that the person in respect of whom the offence was committed was a defective. [See ante, p. 1034.]

(4) No indictment under this section shall be tried at quarter sessions.

(5) If on the trial of an indictment for rape the jury are satisfied that the accused is guilty of an offence under paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section, but are not satisfied that he is guilty of rape, the jury may acquit him of rape and find him guilty of such offence as aforesaid, and in that event he shall be liable to be punished as if he had been convicted on an indictment for such offence as aforesaid. [See ante, p. 1017.]

(6) Section four of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, shall have effect as if this section of this Act were included in the Schedule to that Act. [See ante, p. 465.]

Sect. 1.—Definition of defectives.]—See ante, p. 975.

Sect. 71.—Interpretation.]—See ante, p. 976.

TRADING IN PROSTITUTION.

Statutes.

61 & 62 Vict. c. 39 (Vagrancy Act, 1898), s. 1.—Persons trading in prostitution.]—(1.) Every male person who—(a) knowingly lives wholly or in part on the earnings of prostitution; or (b) in any public place persistently solicits (see Horton v. Mead [1913] 1 K. B. 154; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 200; 23 Cox, 279) or importunes for immoral purposes, shall be deemed a rogue and vagabond within the meaning of the Vagrancy Act, 1824, and may be dealt with accordingly [provided that the period of imprisonment with hard labour which may be awarded to a person deemed to be a rogue and vagabond under this Act shall be increased to six months, but such person shall not be liable to be dealt with as an incorrigible rogue within the meaning of the Vagrancy Act, 1824; and such person may, instead of being proceeded against in England as a rogue and vagabond or in Ireland summarily, be proceeded against on indictment, and on conviction on indictment shall be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, and, in the case of a second or subsequent conviction, such second or subsequent conviction being a conviction on indictment, the court may in addition to any term of imprisonment awarded, sentence him to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted shall be specified by the court in the sentence].

(2.) If it is made to appear to a court of summary jurisdiction by information on oath that there is reason to suspect that any house or any part of a house is used by a female for purposes of prostitution, and that any male person residing in or frequenting the house is living wholly or in part on the earnings of the prostitute, the court may issue a warrant authorising any constable to enter and search the house and to arrest that male person.

(3.) Where a male person is proved to live with or to be habitually in the company of a prostitute [or is proved to have exercised control, direction, or influence over the movements of a prostitute in such a manner as to show that he is aiding, abetting, or compelling her prostitution with any other person or generally] he shall, unless he can satisfy the court to the contrary, be deemed to be knowingly living on the earnings of prostitution. [The words between square brackets express the amendments enacted by 2 & 3 G. 5, c. 20, s. 7 (1), (2), (5), infra.]

2 & 3 G. 5, c. 20 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1912), s. 7.—Amendments of 61 & 62 Vict. c. 39.]—(1) In section one of the Vagrancy Act, 1898, . . . in sub-section (3) (which deals with the evidence of living on the earnings of prostitution) there shall be substituted for the words "and has no visible means of subsistence" the words "or is proved to have exercised control, direction, or influence over the movements of a prostitute in such a manner as to show that he is aiding, abetting, or compelling her prostitution with any other person or generally."

(2) The period of imprisonment with hard labour which may be awarded to a person deemed to be a rogue and vagabond under the Vagrancy Act, 1898, . . . shall be increased to six months, but such person shall not be liable to be dealt with as an incorrigible rogue within the meaning of the Vagrancy Act, 1824. [This gets rid of the decision in R. v. Herion [1913] 1 K. B. 284; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 82; 23 Cox, 387. A person charged before a court of summary jurisdiction as a rogue and vagabond under s. 1 of the Vagrancy Act, 1898 (ante, p. 996), has no right to claim to be tried by a jury under s. 17 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (ante, p. 7), on account of the increased punishment to which he is liable under this sub-section. R. v. Dickinson, ex parte Grandioli [1917] 2 K. B. 393; 81 J. P. 209; 25 Cox, 765.] Save as aforesaid, nothing in this sub-section shall affect the powers of a court of summary jurisdiction to deal with a person deemed to be a rogue and vagabond under the Vagrancy Act, 1898, anything in any other Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

(3) The Vagrancy Act, 1898, as amended by this section, shall extend to Ireland with this modification, that for the words "be deemed a rogue and vagabond within the meaning of the Vagrancy Act, 1824, and be liable to be dealt with accordingly," there shall be substituted the words "be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months with hard labour."

(4) Every female who is proved to have, for the purposes of gain, exercised control, direction, or influence over the movements of a prostitute in such a manner as to show that she is aiding, abetting, or compelling her prostitution with any person, or generally, shall be guilty of an offence under the Vagrancy Act, 1898, . . . and [that Act] as amended and extended by this section shall apply accordingly.

(5) A person charged with an offence under the Vagrancy Act, 1898, . . . may, instead of being proceeded against in England as a rogue and vagabond, or in . . . Ireland summarily, be proceeded against on indictment, and on conviction on indictment shall be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, and, in the case of a second or subsequent conviction being a conviction on indictment, the court may, in addition to any term of imprisonment awarded, sentence the offender if a male to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted shall be specified by the court in the sentence.

(6) The wife or husband of a person charged with an offence under [this Act] may be called as a witness either for the prosecution or defence and without the consent of the person charged, but nothing in this provision shall affect a case where the wife or husband of a person charged with an offence may at common law be called as a witness without the consent of that person. [This gets rid of the decision in Director of Public Prosecutions v. Blady [1912] 2 K. B. 89; 81 L. J. (K. B.) 613; 22 Cox, 715.]

Indictment for an Offence under 61 & 62 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, sub-s. 1 (a) (ante, p. 1039).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Living on prostitution, contrary to section 1 of the Vagrancy Act, 1898.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, and on other days between that date and the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, knowingly lived wholly or in part on the earnings of the prostitution of C. D.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and in the case of a second or subsequent conviction, such second or subsequent conviction being a conviction on indictment, the court may, in addition to any term of imprisonment awarded, sentence the offender to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted shall be specified by the court in the sentence.—2 & 3 Geo. 5, c. 20, s. 7 (5). The preceding conviction need not be a conviction on indictment. R. v. Austin [1913] 1 K. B. 551; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 387; 23 Cox, 346; 108 L. T. 574; 77 J. P. 271; 29 T. L. R. 245.

This offence is triable at quarter sessions. R. v. Hill [1914] 2 K. B. 386; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 820; 78 J. P. 303; 10 Cr. App. R. 56.

Evidence.

Prove that C. D., at the time of the commission of the offence, was a prostitute, and that the defendant knowingly lived wholly or in part on the earnings of her prostitution. This is usually proved by evidence that the prostitute paid the rent of rooms where both were living together, or paid for the defendant's food, or supplied him with money, or paid for drink consumed by him in public-houses, or the like. A woman is not necessarily the accomplice of a man who lives upon her immoral earnings; but it is proper to warn the jury to be cautious in accepting her evidence without corroboration. R. v. King, 30 T. L. R. 476; 10 Cr. App. R. 117.

Under s. 1 (3) the onus of proving that he was not knowingly living on the earnings of prostitution is usually shifted on to the defendant.

The defendant's wife is a competent but not compellable witness for the prosecution. R. v. Leach [1912] A. C. 305; 81 L. J. (K. B.) 616; 22 Cox, 721; 106 L. T. 281; 76 J. P. 201; 28 T. L. R. 289.

In an indictment for this offence a person may be charged with having committed the offence on one specified day only. R. v. Hill [1914] 2 K. B. 386. Evidence is admissible to show what the defendant's relations with the woman in question had been either before or after the day specified in the indictment. Id.

Sect. 8.

INCEST.

Statute.

8 Edw. 7, c. 45 (Punishment of Incest Act, 1908), s. 1.—Incest by males.]—(1) Any male person who has carnal knowledge of a female person, who is to his knowledge his grand-daughter, daughter, sister, or mother, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not less than three years, and not exceeding seven years, or to be imprisoned for any time not exceeding two years with or without hard labour: Provided that if, on an indictment for any such offence, it is alleged in the indictment and proved that the female person is under the age of thirteen years, the same punishment may be imposed as may be imposed under s. 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (which deals with the defilement of girls under thirteen years of age).

(2) It is immaterial that the carnal knowledge was had with the consent of the female person.

(3) If any male person attempts to commit any such offence as aforesaid, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be liable at the discretion of the Court to be imprisoned for any time not exceeding two years with or without hard labour.

(4) On the conviction before any court of any male person of an offence under this section, or of an attempt to commit the same, against any female under twenty-one years of age, it shall be in the power of the Court to divest the offender of all authority over such female, and, if the offender is the guardian of such female, to remove the offender from such guardianship, and in any such case to appoint any person or persons to be the guardian or guardians of such female during her minority or any less period :

Provided that the High Court may at any time vary or rescind the order by the appointment of any other person as such guardian, or in any other respect.

Sect. 2.—Incest by females of or over sixteen.]—Any female person of or above the age of sixteen years who with consent permits her grandfather, father, brother, or son to have carnal knowledge of her (knowing him to be her grandfather, father, brother, or son, as the case may be) shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not less than three years, and not exceeding seven years, or to be imprisoned with or without hard labour for any term not exceeding two years.

Sect. 3.—Test of relationship.]—In this Act the expressions " brother " and " sister " respectively, include half-brother and half-sister, and the provisions of this Act shall apply whether the relationship between the person charged with an offence under this Act and the person with whom the offence is alleged to have been committed, is or is not traced through lawful wedlock.

Sect. 4.—Prosecution of offences.]—(1) An offence under this Act shall be deemed to be an offence within, and subject to, the provisions of the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, and any Act amending the same (ante, pp. 67 et seq.).

(2) A court of quarter sessions shall not have jurisdiction to inquire of, hear. or determine any indictment for an offence against this Act, or for an attempt to commit any such offence.

(3) If, on the trial of any indictment for rape (ante, p. 1018), the jury are satisfied that the defendant is guilty of an offence under this Act, but are not satisfied that the defendant is guilty of rape, the jury may acquit the defendant of rape and find him guilty of an offence under this Act, and he shall be liable to be punished accordingly.

If, on the trial of any indictment for an offence under this Act, the jury are satisfied that the defendant is guilty of any offence under ss. 4 or 5 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (ante, pp. 1016, 1024), but are not satisfied that the defendant is guilty of an offence under this Act, the jury may acquit the defendant of an offence under this Act and find him guilty of an offence under ss. 4 or 5 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, and he shall be liable to be punished accordingly. [This means that on an indictment for incest where the jury find the accused not guilty of incest, they may find him guilty of any offence of which he could have been found guilty had he been indicted under ss. 4 or 5 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885; e.g., indecent assault, by virtue of s. 9 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. R. v. Simmonite [1916] 2 K. B. 821; 86 L. J. (K. B.) 15; 25 Cox, 544; 12 Cr. App. R. 142.]

(4) Sect. 4 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (ante, p. 465), shall have effect as if this Act were included in the schedule to that Act.

Sect. 5.—Proceedings to be held in camerâ.]—All proceedings under this Act are to be held in camerâ (see ante, p. 199).

Sect. 6.—Sanction of attorney-general, etc.]—No prosecution for any offence under this Act shall be commenced without the sanction of his Majesty's attorney-general, but this section shall not apply to any prosecution commenced by or on behalf of the Director of Public Prosecutions (see ante, p. 122).

Sect. 7.—Extent.]—This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

Sect. 8.—Short title and commencement.]—This Act may be cited as the Punishment of Incest Act, 1908, and shall come into operation on the first day of January, 1909.

Indictments for Incest.

(a) By a male person.

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Incest, contrary to section 1 of the Punishment of Incest Act, 1908.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., being a male person, on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, had carnal knowledge of C. D., who is and was to his knowledge his daughter [if under thirteen add her age.]

[An indictment which charged the offence as having been committed "on divers days" between January, 1909, and October, 1910, and in another count between October, 1910, and February, 1913, was held to be bad for duplicity; but an appeal on this ground was dismissed under s. 4 (1) of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, the Court finding that there had been "no substantial miscarriage of justice." R. v. Thompson [1914] 2 K. B. 99; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 643; 110 L. T. 272; 78 J. P. 212; 30 T. L. R. 223.]

Count 1.—Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years or imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. 8 Edw. 7, c. 45, s. 1 (1). If the female is proved to be under thirteen, penal servitude for life or any term not less than three years may be imposed. 8 Edw. 7, c. 45, s. 1 (1); 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 4 (ante, p. 1024). As to power to convict of incest on an indictment for rape, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 45, s. 4 (3). As to power on an indictment for incest to convict of offences under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, ss. 4, 5 (ante. p. 1024), see 8 Edw. 7, c. 45, s. 4 (3). The jury may convict of an attempt to commit incest, which is punishable under 8 Edw. 7, c. 45, s. 1 (3) (see ante, p. 1043).

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to incest. 8 Edw. 7, c. 45, s. 4 (1).

Incest is not triable at quarter sessions. Id. s. 4 (2), and see ante, p. 106.

(b) By a female person.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Incest, contrary to section 2 of the Punishment of Incest Act, 1908.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., being a female person of the age of eighteen, on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with her consent permitted C. D., who is and was to her knowledge her father, to have carnal knowledge of her.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years with or without hard labour. 8 Edw. 7, c. 45, s. 2.

Evidence.

The consent of the other party is no defence to an indictment under the Act (8 Edw. 7, c. 45, ss. 1 (2), 2); but if one of the parties to the incriminated act is called for the Crown, the evidence of such party needs corroboration if she be an accomplice (see ante, p. 455). Mere submission, as distinguished from permission, is insufficient to constitute the female an accomplice. R. v. Dimes, 76 J. P. 47; 7 Cr. App. R. 43. If there is evidence to go to the jury that the female was a consenting party, they must be cautioned that if they find her to have consented she then becomes an accomplice and her evidence requires corroboration. R. v. Stone, 6 Cr. App. R. 89.

The relationship of the parties may be proved by oral evidence or by certificates of marriage and birth, coupled with identification. (a)

The commission of the offence may be inferred from all the circumstances. Evidence tending to show pre-existent sexual passion between the parties is admissible. R. v. Ball [1911] A. C. 47; 80 L. SECT. 9.

SODOMY, BESTIALITY, AND INDECENCY WITH MALE PERSONS.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 61.—Punishment.]—Whosoever shall be convicted of the abominable crime of buggery, committed either with mankind or with any animal, shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 15, except as to punishment. The minimum punishment, which used to be ten years' penal servitude, was reduced by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to threats to accuse another of this offence, see ante, pp. 681, 682.]

Sect. 63.—Carnal knowledge.]—Ante, p. 1016.

Indictment for Sodomy.

Commencement as ante, p. 1044.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Buggery, contrary to section 61 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, committed buggery with C. D.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 61, as modified by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

The offence consists in penetration per anum. R. v. Jacobs, R. & R. 331. Where the defendant forced open a child's mouth, and put in his private parts, and proceeded to the completion of his lust, the judges were of opinion that this did not constitute the offence of sodomy. R. v. Jacobs, R. & R. 331 (see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 976; and 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 11, post, p. 1048). It was first made punishable in the common law courts by 25 H. 8, c. 6 (rep). 1 Hawk. c. 4; 1 Hale, 669; 12 Co. Rep. 37. The evidence for the most part is the same as in rape (see ante, pp. 1018 et seq.), and as in that case, penetration alone is now sufficient to constitute the offence. R. v. Reekspear, 1 Mood. 342. As to medical evidence of the commission of the offence, see Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence (7th ed.), Vol. II., p. 299. Prior to 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 18 (now re-enacted as 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 63, ante, p. 1016), emission must have been proved. R. v. Russell, 1 M. & Rob. 122: R. v. Jacobs, R. & R. 331: R. v. Reekspear, supra.

It is not necessary to prove the offence to have been committed against the consent of the person upon whom it was perpetrated; and both agent and patient (if consenting) are equally guilty.

In R. v. Wiseman, Fortesc. (K. B.) 91, where the defendant was indicted for having committed this offence with a woman, a majority of the judges held that this was within the statute, but two or three of them held that it was not: no opinion was publicly given. But it seems to be settled that the offence can be committed with a woman. Swinburne on Wills, 97; Fost. 91; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 976, 977. In R. v. Jellyman, 8 C. & P. 604, it was held that a married woman who consented to her husband committing an unnatural offence with her was an accomplice in the felony, and, as such, her evidence required confirmation, although her consent or non-consent was quite immaterial to the offence.

With respect to offences of this kind corroboration of evidence by an accomplice is particularly required. R. v. Tate [1908] 2 K. B. 680; 77 L. J. (K. B.) 1043.

It is generally desirable, apart from any rule of law, and whether the witnesses are accomplices or not, that a warning should be given to the jury as to acting on the evidence of young boys. R. v. Cratchley, 9 Cr. App. R. 232. If the offence is committed on a boy under fourteen years of age, it is felony in the agent only, on the ground that the boy is under the age of discretion. 1 Hale, 670; 3 Co. Inst. 59; 1 East P. C. 480 (and the same, it would seem, as to a girl under twelve, the age by which at common law a girl is marriageable). If by a boy under fourteen, it is felony in the patient, if the patient is an adult. R. v. Allen, 1 Den. 364; 2 C. & K. 869; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 72; 3 Cox, 270. It would seem that the presumption applicable to boys under fourteen applies to this offence as well as to rape where the boy is the agent (see ante, p. 402). As to cases where a boy under fourteen is the patient, see 1 Hale, 670.

If the evidence fails to make out the entire charge against the defendant, he may nevertheless be convicted of the attempt to commit the felony charged. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (ante, p. 215).

Evidence is not admissible to prove that the defendant has a general disposition to commit the offence. R. v. Cole, 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 977; and see R. v. Barron (No. 1), 110 L. T. 350; 78 J. P. 184; 30 T. L. R. 187; 9 Cr. App. R. 236; and ante, pp. 363 et seq.

Indictment for Bestiality.

As in last precedent, except alleging the offence with a cow [or as the case may be].

The offence may be committed by a woman. 3 Co. Inst. 59: 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 976.

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100. s. 61. For punishment, see notes to the last precedent. The defendant may upon this indictment be convicted of an attempt to commit the felony charged, if the evidence warrants such finding. 14 &

15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (ante, p. 215). An indictment for an attempt to commit this offence may readily be framed from this and the next precedent. It is punishable in the same manner as the attempt to commit sodomy. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 62, infra. There is no statutory time for prosecuting the offence, but delay in prosecution has been made a ground for directing acquittal. R. v. Robins, 1 Cox, 114.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the carnal knowledge as in rape or sodomy, ante, pp. 1022, 1046.

Indictment for Attempt to commit Sodomy. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 62.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count:

Attempted buggery, contrary to section 62 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, attempted to commit buggery with C. D.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count:

Assault with intent to commit buggery, contrary to section 62 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, assaulted C. D. with intent to commit buggery with the said C. D.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Third Count:

Indecent assault on male person, contrary to section 62 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——. in the county of ——, indecently assaulted C. D., a male person [where the person assaulted is under thirteen add the age].

[Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than ten nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 62; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

Prove an attempt to commit sodomy, the offence under s. 62 being complete without evidence of penetration (ante, p. 1048). If the complete evidence of sodomy is proved, it seems that the defendant will not be entitled to be acquitted; but the judge may, if he thinks fit, discharge the jury, and direct the defendant to be indicted for the felony. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12 (ante, p. 213). Where the defendant was indicted under this section (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 62), for an indecent assault upon a male person, and it appeared that the person alleged to have been assaulted consented to what was done to him by the defendant, it was held that the indictment could not be sustained. R. v. Wollaston, 12 Cox, 180 (C. C. R.). Mere submission, however, is not consent, and therefore, where before 1880 two boys of eight years of age submitted to indecent acts on the part of a man, in ignorance of the nature of the acts done, the man was held to be rightly convicted of an indecent assault, on the ground that the boys, being thus ignorant, could not be held to have consented in the true meaning of that word. R. v. Lock, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 10; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 5. And consent is now no defence to an indictment for an indecent assault, where the person assaulted is under the age of thirteen years. 43 & 44 Vict. c. 45, s. 2 (ante, p. 1032). It is therefore now unnecessary in such cases to consider the distinction between mere submission and consent drawn in R. v. Wollaston and R. v. Lock, supra.

The unsworn evidence of a child too young to understand the nature of an oath is rendered admissible on a charge for this offence by 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 30, and sched. 1. Such evidence must be corroborated by some other material evidence in support thereof implicating the accused (ante, p. 453). Apart from this, it is generally desirable that the jury should be directed to receive the evidence of witnesses of tender age with caution. R. v. Cratchley, 9 Cr. App. R. 232. As to presumption of age of victim, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123 (2), ante, p. 992.

As to attempts to commit bestiality, which are within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 62, see ante, p. 1048. As to conspiracy or incitement to commit sodomy, etc., see R. v. Boulton, 12 Cox, 87. As to threats to accuse of these offences, see ante, pp. 681 et seq.

Indictment for Misdemeanor under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 11 (ante, p. 1048).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Gross indecency, contrary to section 11 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, being a male person, committed, or was a party to the commission of, or procured or attempted to procure the commission of, an act of gross indecency with C. D., a male person.

Counts for an indecent assault or an attempt to commit sodomy may be joined.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 11 (ante, p. 1048).

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to this offence (ante, p. 68).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 17 (ante, pp. 106, 1026).

Evidence.

It is an offence within 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 11, for a male person to procure the commission with himself of an act of gross indecency by another male person. R. v. Jones [1896] 1 Q. B. 4; 18 Cox, 207.

The evidence of the other male person, if a consenting party, will, it would seem, need corroboration, see R. v. Tate (ante, p. 1047), and ante, p. 455.

The unsworn evidence of a child of tender years is admissible on a charge under this section, but must be corroborated. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 30, as amended by the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914 ,(ante, pp. 453, 989). Sect. 123 (2) of that Act (ante, p. 992) does not apply to this offence.

The rule as to admissibility of fresh complaints (ante, p. 372) has been held not to apply to this offence on the ground that consent of the other male person is immaterial. R. v. Hoodless, 64 J. P. 282. But in proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Act against a clergyman for an unnatural offence with a choir boy, evidence of a complaint by the boy to his mother in answer to questions was admitted by Sir Lewis Dibdin. Chesney v. Newsholme [1908] Prob. 301. It is submitted that the last case was rightly decided, because the principle on which fresh complaints are admitted in offences against women and girls does not depend on the materiality or otherwise of consent, but simply on the opportunity thereby afforded to the jury to judge of the consistency of the conduct of the prosecutrix with her evidence given at the trial. R. v. Lillyman [1896] 2 Q. B. 167; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 195: R. v. Osborne [1905] 1 K. B. 551; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 311. In neither of those cases was consent material. See ante, p. 372.

Evidence of the possession of articles commonly found in the possession of persons who commit the crime of gross indecency may be admissible as evidence of the identity of the accused. Where T. was accused of committing acts of gross indecency with two boys on March 16th and was arrested after having spoken and given money to the same boys on March 19th, and the case for the prosecution was that an appointment had been made by the person who committed the offence on the earlier date to meet on the later date, and the defence was an alibi, it was held on appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal and on further appeal to the House of Lords that evidence given at the trial of the finding of powder-puffs upon the person of the accused on arrest and of indecent photographs of boys in his room was admissible on the issue of identity. Thompson v. Director of Public Prosecutions [1918] A. C. 221; 87 L. J. (K. B.) 478; 82 J. P. 145; 13 Cr. App. R. 61. Such evidence is, semble, not however admissible, if it merely tends to show the bad character of the accused. Id. But see R. v. Twiss [1918] 2 K. B. 853, 13 Cr. App. R. 177, where it was held that evidence of the possession of indecent photographs by the accused was admissible to show what his practice was.

OFFENCES OF A PUBLIC NATURE.

CHAPTER I.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE CROWN AND GOVERNMENT.

SECT. 1.

HIGH TREASON.

Statutes.

25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2 (Treason Act, 1351).—Declaration of Treasons (as printed in Revised Statutes, 2nd edition).]—Item, whereas divers opinions have been before this time in what case treason shall be said, and in what not; the King, at the request of the lords and of the commons, hath made a declaration in the manner as hereafter followeth, that is to say; when a man doth compass or imagine the death of our lord the King, or of our lady his Queen, or of their eldest son and heir; or if a man do violate the King's companion, or the King's eldest daughter unmarried, or the wife of the King's eldest son and heir; or if a man do levy war against our lord the King in his realm, or be adherent to the King's enemies in his realm, giving to them aid and comfort in the realm, or elsewhere, and thereof be probably ("provablement") attainted of open deed by the people of their condition . . . (as to counterfeiting the King's seals or coin (rep.), 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66; 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 1); and if a man slea (sic) the chancellor, treasurer, or the King's justices of the one bench, or the other (see Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 45 n.), justices in eyre or justices of assise, and all other justices assigned to hear and determine, being in their places doing their offices: and it is to be understood that in the cases above rehearsed, that ought to be judged treason which extends to our lord the King and his royal majesty: and of such treason the forfeiture of the escheats pertaineth to our sovereign lord as well of the lands and tenements holden of other as of himself. (As to forfeitures, see 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 1, post, p. 1062: as to petty treason, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 8, ante, p. 863). And because that many other like cases of treason may happen in time to come, which a man cannot think nor declare at this present time; it is accorded that if any other case, supposed treason, which is not above specified, doth happen before any justices, the justices shall tarry without any going to judgment of the treason, till the cause be showed and declared before the King and his parliament, whether it ought to be judged treason or other felony. And if per-case any man of the realm ride armed overtly (see 2 Steph. Hist. Cr. L. 269) or secretly with men of arms against any other, to slay him, or rob him, or take him, or retain him till he hath made fine or ransom for to have his deliverance, it is not in the mind of the King nor his council that in such case it shall be judged treason, but shall be judged felony or trespass according to the laws of the land of old time used, and according as the case requireth. . .[Rest rep. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 53, s. 3 (Stat. Law Revision). This statute was passed after petition by the Commons to the King representing that certain justices had lately given judgment in their courts for treason and accroachment of royal power, and praying that it might be declared in parliament to what cases this accroachment of royal power extended (2 Rot. (a) In 1775 the law officers (Thurlow, A.-G., and Wedderburn, S.-G.) had been informed—

(1) That in 13 Anne an Act against high treason had been passed in the province of New Hampshire.

(2) That the said Act was disallowed by Order in Council in 1718.

(3) That it was conceived that there was no law of that province at present existing for the trial and punishment of that offence.

They were asked in what manner it was proper to proceed against persons for high treason committed in New Hampshire.

They replied: "We are humbly of opinion that it requires no Act of a provincial legislature to constitute the offence of high treason in any of his Majesty's plantations. The crime may be prosecuted in the Superior Court of New Hampshire (which by 11 W. 3 hath the full criminal jurisdiction within that government which his Majesty's Court of King's Bench exercises here), or in this country under the statutes of 35 H. 8 as the occasion may require" (14 Ap. 1775).

5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 11, s. 4.—Treasons abroad.]— . . . If any of the King's subjects, denizens, or other, do commit or practise out of the limits of this realm in any outward part any the offences which by this Act are made or heretofore now standing in force (sic) have been made treason, that then such treasons, whatsoever they be or wheresoever they shall happen so to be done or committed, shall be inquired and presented by the oaths of twelve good and lawful men, upon good and probable evidence and witness, in such shire and county of this realm and before such persons as it shall please the King, his said heirs and successors, to appoint by commission under his great seal; in like manner and form as treasons committed within this realm have been used to be inquired and presented; and that upon every indictment and presentment found and made of any such treasons and certified into the King's Bench, like process and other circumstance shall be there made and had against the offenders as if the said treason so presented had been lawfully found to be done and committed within the limits of this realm. . . . [This enactment provides for inquiry and presentment before commissioners by a body whose functions are to be similar to those of a grand jury, but gives no power to the commissioners to hear and determine. It has not been specifically repealed, but there is no trace in the text books or in reported cases or in those of which the record is preserved in the Record Office, of the trial of any foreign treason by any other procedure than that provided by 35 H. 8, c. 2, s. 1, supra.]

Sect. 8.—Misprision of treason.]—Provided always . . . that concealment or keeping secret of any high treason be deemed and taken only misprision of treason, and the offenders therein to forfeit and suffer as in cases of misprision of treason hath heretofore been used, anything above mentioned to be the contrary notwithstanding.

7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3 (Treason Act, 1695), s. 1.—Indictment and defence by counsel.]— . . . (From and after 25th March, 1696.) All and every person and persons whatsoever that shall be accused and indicted for high treason whereby any corruption of blood may or shall be made to any such offender or offenders or to any the heir or heirs of [any] such offender or offenders or for misprision of such treason shall have a true copy of the whole indictment (as to the caption, see post, p. 1068), delivered unto them or any of them "five days" (now ten days: 7 Anne, c. 21, s. 14 (post, p. 1058); 6 G. 4. c. 50, s. 21, post, p. 1061) "at the least" before he or they shall be arraigned for the same whereby to enable them or any of them respectively to advise with counsel thereupon to plead and make their defence his or their attorney or attorneys agent or agents of any of them requiring the same and paying the officer his reasonable fees for writing thereof not exceeding five shillings for the copy of every such indictment. And that every such person so accused and indicted arraigned or tried for any such treason as aforesaid or for misprision of such treason from and after the said time shall be received and admitted to make his and their full defence by counsel learned in the law and to make any proof that he or they can produce by lawful witness or witnesses who shall then be upon oath for his and their just defence in that behalf. And in case any person or persons so accused or indicted shall desire counsel the Court before whom such person or persons shall be tried or some judge of that court shall and is hereby authorized and required immediately upon his or their request to assign to such person and persons such and so many counsel not exceeding two as the person or persons shall desire to whom such counsel shall have free access at all seasonable hours any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding. [In R. v. Casement [1917] 1 K. B. 98, 114, a third counsel not assigned to the prisoner was heard as amicus curiæ].

Sect. 2.—Corroboration.—Challenge of jurors.]—And (from and after 25th March, 1696) no person or persons whatsoever shall be indicted tried or attainted of high treason whereby any corruption of blood may or shall be made to any such offender or offenders or to any of the heir or heirs of any such offender or offenders or of misprision of such treason but by and upon the oaths and testimony of two lawful witnesses either both of them to the same overt act or one of them to one and another of them to another overt act of the same treason unless the party indicted and arraigned or tried shall willingly without violence in open court confess the same or shall stand mute or refuse to plead or in cases of high treason shall peremptorily challenge above the number of thirty-five of the jury any law statute or usage to the contrary notwithstanding. Sect. 3.—Proviso as to outlawry.]—See ante, p. 85; post, p. 1062.

Sect. 4.—Corroboration as to overt acts.]—And . . . if two or more distinct treasons of diverse heads or kinds shall be alleged in one bill of indictment one witness produced to prove one of the said treasons and another witness produced to prove another of the said treasons shall not be deemed or taken to be two witnesses to the same treason within the meaning of this Act.

Sect. 5.—Limitation of prosecution.]—And to the intent that the terror and dread of such criminal accusations may in some reasonable time be removed be it further enacted [by the authority aforesaid] that from and after the said five and twentieth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and ninety-six no person or persons whatsoever shall be indicted tried or prosecuted for any such treason as aforesaid or for misprision of such treason that shall be committed or done within the kingdom of England dominion of Wales or town of Berwick upon Tweed after the said five and twentieth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and ninety-six unless the same indictment be found by a grand jury within three years next after the treason or offence done and committed. . . . (See ante, p. 63).

Sect. 6.—Exceptions to s. 5.]—Always provided and excepted that if any person or persons whatsoever shall be guilty of designing endeavouring or attempting any assassination on the body of the King by poison or otherwise such person or persons may be prosecuted at any time notwithstanding the aforesaid limitation. (See post, 36 G. 3, c. 7; 39 & 40 G. 3, c. 93; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 1.)

Sect. 7.—Jury panel.]—And that all and every person and persons who shall be accused indicted [or] tried for such treason as aforesaid or for misprision of such treason after the said five and twentieth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and ninety-six shall have copies of the panel of the jurors who are to try them duly returned by the sheriff and delivered unto them and every of them so accused and indicted respectively two days at the least before he or they shall be tried for the same. And that all persons so accused and indicted for any such treason as aforesaid shall have the like process of the Court where they shall be tried to compel their witnesses to appear for them at any such trial or trials as is usually granted to compel witnesses to appear against them. (See 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 21, post, p. 1061.)

Sect. 8.—No evidence of overt acts not pleaded.]—And . . . no evidence shall be admitted or given of any overt act that is not expressly laid in the indictment against any person or persons whatsoever.

Sect. 9.—Defects in indictments.]—Provided also . . . that no indictment for any of the offences aforesaid nor any process or return thereupon shall be quashed on the motion of the prisoner or his counsel for miswriting misspelling false or improper Latin unless exception concerning the same be taken and made in the respective Court where such trial shall be by the prisoner or his counsel assigned before any evidence given in open court upon such indictment. Nor shall any such miswriting misspelling false or improper Latin after conviction on such indictment be any cause to stay or arrest judgment thereupon. Indictment for compassing the King's Death. (25 Edw. 3, st. 5. c. 2. ante, p. 1053.)

Commencement as post, p. 1071, or at Assizes.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

High treason by compassing the King's death, contrary to the Treason Act, 1351.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, and on other days, between that date and the —— day of ——, in the county of——, being on the said days a British subject, compassed or imagined the death of our Lord the King.

OVERT ACTS OF THE SAID TREASON.

[State them in ordinary language—see post, p. 1071.]

Any number of overt acts may be laid in the same count, but proof of any one sufficient overt act will maintain the count. Kel. (J.) 8; 1 Hale, 122; Fost. 294.

The punishment of high treason is death by hanging, unless the King by warrant under the sign manual, countersigned by a secretary of state, substitutes death by decapitation. 30 G. 3, c. 48, s. 1 (ante, p. 1059); 54 G. 4, c. 146 (ante, p. 1060); 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 31 (ante, p. 1062).

High treason, misprision of treason, offences against the King's title, prerogative, person, or government, or against either house of parliament, are not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Venue.]—As to the venue in cases of compassing the King's death out of the realm, see 35 H. 8, c. 2, s. 1 (ante, p. 1055). Most of the cases cited post, p. 1073, from the State Trials (a) as containing counts for adhering to the King's enemies, contain also counts for compassing the King's death in this country; in the following cases the offence of "compassing, etc.," is charged as having been committed "in parts beyond the seas." viz., R. v. Hesketh. K. B. Roll, 1592: R. v. Assheton, Id.: R. v. Skinner, Id.: R. v. Smith. Baga de Secretis, 1713.

Allegiance.]—"High treason, being an offence committed against the duty of allegiance, it may be proper . . . to consider from whom and to whom allegiance is due. With regard to natural born subjects, there can be no doubt. They owe allegiance to the Crown at all times and in all places. This is what we call natural allegiance in contradistinction to that which is local. . . . Natural allegiance is founded on the relation every man standeth in to the Crown considered as the head of that society whereof he is born a member: and on the peculiar privileges he deriveth from that relation which are with great propriety called his birthright; this birthright nothing but his own demerit can deprive him of; it is indefeasible and perpetual; and consequently the duty of allegiance which ariseth out of it and is inseparably connected with it, is in consideration of law likewise unalienable and perpetual." Fost., C. L. 183, quoted with approval in R. v. Casement [1917] 1 K. B. 98, 130; 86 L. J. (K. B.) 467. "The subjects of the King owe him allegiance and the allegiance follows the person of the subject. He is the King's liege wherever he may be and he may violate his allegiance in a foreign country just as well as he may violate it in this country." R. v. Casement [1917] 1 K. B. 98, 137.

Liability of aliens.]—Alien friends may be convicted of high treason (R. v. De la Motte, 21 St. Tr. 687, 814), but alien enemies cannot (Calvin's case, 7 Co. Rep. 1, 6 b; and see 4 St. Tr. 1182; Forsyth, Cas. Const. Law, 200), unless they accept British protection during the war (Fost. 185). A British subject is not exempt from the penalties of treason because he holds a commission in the enemy's forces, Napper Tandy's case, 27 St. Tr. 1191: Macdonald's case, Fost. 59, 183; 18 St. Tr. 857: Townley's case, Fost. 7; 18 St. Tr. 1329: R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K. B. 444; and see post, p. 1075. An alien resident within British territory owes allegiance to the Crown, and if he assists invaders while his Majesty's forces, for strategical or other reasons, are temporarily withdrawn, he is liable to conviction of high treason. De Jager v. Att.-Gen. of Natal [1907] A. C. 326; and see 3 Co. Inst. 4; 1 Hale, 94; Fost. 185.

Overt acts.]—The following acts have been decided or have been deemed by writers upon the subject to be sufficient overt acts of compassing the death of the sovereign within the Treason Act, 1351 (ante, p. 1053). That statute is declaratory of the common law (ante, p. 1054); but all the law of treason now rests on statute, and the doctrine of constructive treason is discouraged, if not exploded. See 1 Mary, st. 1, c. 1, s. 1 (ante, p. 1056); and 3 St. Tr. 368, 1466, 1472; 6 St. Tr. 902 n.; 15 St. Tr. 522, and note; 24 St. Tr. 877; 32 St. Tr. 431.

Everything wilfully or deliberately done or attempted, whereby the King's life may be endangered, is an overt act of compassing his death. Fost. 195. Killing the King is an overt act of compassing his death, and was so laid in the case of the regicides. Kel. (J.) 8. So, going armed for the purpose of killing the King; R. v. Somerville, 1 Anderson, 104; providing arms, ammunition, poison, or the like, for the purpose of killing the King; 1 Hale, 108; 3 Co. Inst. 12; conspirators meeting and consulting on the means of killing the King; Fost. 195: R. v. Sir H. Vane, Kel. (J.) 15; 6 St. Tr. 119: R. v. Tonge, Kel. (J.) 17; 6 St. Tr. 225; and see Kel. (J.) 81; or of deposing him, or of usurping the powers of government; R. v. Hardy, 1 East, P. C. 60; 24 St. Tr. 199; or resolving to do it; R. v. Rookwood, 13 St. Tr. 139: R. v. Charnock, 12 St. Tr. 1377; 2 Salk. 631; acting as counsel against the King, in order to take away his life; R. v. Cook, Kel. (J.) 12; 2 St. Tr. 1077; and see R. v. Harrison, 5 St. Tr. 1008; 2 Steph. Hist. Cr. L. 241: all these, and the like, are sufficient overt acts of compassing the King's death.

So, other species of high treason, which are distinct heads of treason in themselves, may be laid as overt acts of compassing the King's death (see 39 & 40 G. 3, c. 93, ante, p. 1060). Thus, the following have been held to be sufficient overt acts of compassing the King's death: levying war directly against the King; Fost. 197, 210, 211; 1 Hale, 122, 123, 151; Kel. (J.) 21; 3 Co. Inst. 12; 13 St. Tr. 110, 113: R. v. Hensey, 19 St. Tr. 1341 (but not a mere constructive levying of war, such as pulling down all inclosures, or the like, 1 Hale, 123; see post, p. 1070); or even a conspiracy to levy war directly against the King, for the purpose of dethroning him, or of obliging him to change his measures, or the like; Fost. 197, 211; 1 Hale, 119, 121: R. v. Freind, 13 St. Tr. 1: R. v. Darrel, 10 Mod. 321; R. v. Layer, 16 St. Tr. 93: R. v. Campion, Sav. 3: R. v. Lord Russell, 9 St. Tr. 577: R. v. Sidney, 9 St. Tr. 817: R. v. Cook, 13 St. Tr. 311 (but not a conspiracy to effect a rising for the purpose of throwing down all inclosures, or any other species of constructive levying of war; Fost. 213; per Holt, C.J., Holt 682; per cur., 10 Mod. 322); adhering to the King's enemies: Fost. 196, 197: H. v. Harding, 2 Vent. 315: R. v. Lord Preston, 12 St. Tr. 645: R. v. Stone, 25 St. Tr. 1155: 6 T. R. 527; inciting foreigners to invade the realm; Fost. 196; 1 Hale, 120: 3 Co. Inst. 14: R. v. Dr. Story, 3 Dyer, 298A, 300B; 1 St. Tr. 1087 (where the indictment is incorrectly set out (see K. B. Rolls, 1571)): R. v. Parkyns, 13 St. Tr. 63.

Writings which import a compassing of the King's death are sufficient overt acts of this species of treason, if published; 1 Hale, 118; 3 Co. Inst. 14; Fost. 198; 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 31; as, for instance, writings inciting persons to kill the King; R. v. Twyn, Kel. (J.) 22; 6 St. Tr. 513 n.; or the like. See the cases collected in Pyne's case, Cro. Car. 117. So, words of advice or persuasion are sufficient overt acts of this species of treason, if they advise or persuade to an act which would of itself (if committed) be a sufficient overt act. Fost. 195, 200: R. v. Charnock, 12 St. Tr. 1377; 2 Salk 631. So, words may be laid in the indictment to explain an act; as, for instance, an act seemingly innocent in itself may be shown to be an overt act of treason, by its connection with words spoken by the party at the time. 1 Hale, 115; and see R. v. Parkyns, 13 St. Tr. 63: R. v. Crohagan, Cro. Car. 332: R. v. Lee, 1 St. Tr. 1403. But loose words which have no reference to any act or design, or which are not words of persuasion or advice, cannot be deemed overt acts of treason. Fost. 200-207: R. v. Theving, 3 Harg. St. Tr. 79-90.

Where words or writings are laid as overt acts, it is sufficient to set forth the substance of them: R. v. Francia, 15 St. Tr. 897: R. v. Lord Preston, 12 St. Tr. 645: R. v. Watson, 2 Stark (N. P.) 137; 32 St. Tr. 1; for in no case is it necessary that the whole detail of the evidence should be set forth: it is sufficient that the charge be reduced to a reasonable certainty, so that the defendant may be apprised of its nature, and may be prepared to answer it. Fost. 194.

Evidence.

The evidence must be applied to the proof of the overt acts, and not to the proof of the principal treason: for the overt act is the charge to which the prisoner must apply his defence. And whether the overt act proved be a sufficient overt act of the principal treason laid in the indictment, is a matter of law to be determined by the Court. No evidence may be admitted of any overt act not laid in the indictment: 7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, s. 8 (ante, p. 1056); that is to say, no overt act amounting to a distinct independent charge, although it be an overt act of the species of treason charged, shall be admitted in evidence, unless it be expressly laid in the indictment; but if an overt act not laid amounts to a direct proof of any other overt act which is laid, it may be given in evidence to prove such overt act. R. v. Rookwood, 13 St. Tr. 139, 661: R. v. Deacon, 18 St. Tr. 365, 369; Fost. 9: R. v. Lowicke, 13 St. Tr. 267: R. v. Layer, 16 St. Tr. 93. Words spoken or written and published may constitute an overt act if relating to a treasonable act or design. 5 St. Tr 983; 10 St. Tr. 277, 295; 22 St. Tr. 480 n.: R. v. Wedderburne, 18 St. Tr. 425; Fost. 22: and see 1 St. Tr. xxvi., xxxviii.

Although unpublished writings cannot be laid as an overt act, yet, if they tend to prove an overt act laid, they may be admitted in evidence for that purpose. R. v. Lord Preston, 12 St. Tr. 645: R. v. Layer, 16 St. Tr. 93, 280: Anderton's case, 12 St. Tr. 1245: R. v. Twyn, 6 St. Tr. 513 n.; and R. v. Hensey, 1 Burr. 642, 644; 19 St. Tr. 1344. In R. v. Algernon Sidney (Fost. 198; 9 St. Tr. 817), if the papers found in his closet had been plainly referable to the other treasonable practices charged in the indictment, they might indisputably have been read in evidence against him, although not published. And it is no objection that the writings, or any other articles, were not found until after the apprehension of the defendant R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 137; 32 St. Tr. 1.

Where words of incitement have reference to an act, after giving evidence of the words, you may give evidence of the act, in order fully to explain them. R. v. Lord G. Gordon, Doug. 590, 593; 21 St. Tr. 485.

Where a conspiracy is laid as an overt act, the acts of any of the conspirators in furtherance of the common design may be given in evidence against all. R. v. Horne Tooke, 1 East, P. C. 98: R. v. Hardy, 1 East, P. C. 99; 24 St. Tr. 199: R. v. Stone, 25 St. Tr. 1155; 6 T. R. 527: R. v. M'Cafferty, 10 Cox, 603; Ir. Rep. 1 C. L. 363: and see Kel. (J.) 19, 20 (and see ante, p. 354). In such a case, the first thing to be proved is the conspiracy; secondly, evidence must be given to connect the defendant with it; and lastly, if it is intended to give in evidence against the defendant the acts of any other person, you must show that such person was also a member of the same conspiracy, and that the act done was in furtherance of the common design. See R. v. Sidney, 9 St. Tr. 817, etc.: R. v. Lord Lovat, 18 St. Tr. 529; and ante, p. 354.

Time.]—The time at which the overt acts are alleged to have been committed need not be proved as laid; it is sufficient if they are proved to have been committed at any time within three years before the finding of the indictment. R. v. Charnock, 1 Salk. 288; 12 St. Tr. 1377: Sir H. Vane's case, 6 St. Tr. 123, Kel. (J.) 16 : R. v. Lord Balmerino, 18 St. Tr. 441 : R. v. Townley, 18 St. Tr. 1329; Fost. 7, 8.

Place.]—7 G. 4, c. 64, ss. 12, 13 (ante, p. 37), do not apply to treason. An overt act must be proved to have been committed in the proper county. See R. v. Lord Preston, 12 St. Tr. 377 : R. v. Hensey, 19 St. Tr. 1341, 1345 : Sir H. Vane's case, 6 St. Tr. 123, 129 n. : R. v. Hardie, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.), 609, and ante, p. 37. But if any one overt act is proved against the defendant in the proper county, acts of treason tending to prove such overt act laid, though done in a foreign country, may be given in evidence; and this was done in nearly all the trials of the rebels in the year 1746. R. v. Deacon, Fost. 9, 10 : R. v. Wedderburne, Id. 22.

Place in foreign treasons.]—As to laying and proving place in cases of treason where all the overt acts are proved to have taken place out of the realm, see post, pp. 1071, 1072.

Where several overt acts are laid, proof of any one of them will maintain the count, provided the overt act so proved is a sufficient overt act of the species of treason charged in the indictment. 1 Hale, 122; Fost. 194.

The prisoner is not bound to show what was the object or meaning of the acts done by him; it is for the Crown to make out that they amount to the treason charged in the indictment. R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 85; 9 C. & P. 129.

Corroboration.]—There must be two witnesses to prove the treason, both of them to the same overt act, or one of them to one, and the other of them to another overt act of the same treason; unless the defendant shall willingly, without violence, confess the same; 7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, ss. 2, 4 (ante, p. 1057), and see 5 St. Tr. 977 n. But this rule does not apply in cases of high treason in compassing or imagining the death or destruction, maiming or wounding of the King, and of misprision of such treason, where the overt acts alleged in the indictment shall be any attempt upon his person; in which cases the prisoner is triable in the same manner and upon the like evidence as if charged with murder : 39 & 40 G. 3, c. 93 (ante, p. 1060); 57 G. 3, c. 6, s. 4 (ante, p. 1061); 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 1 (ante, p. 1062). If the jury do not give credit to both the witnesses, the defendant shall be acquitted. R. v. Palmer, 7 St. Tr. 1067, 1112. But where the overt act is composite, made up of several circumstances and passing through several stages, it is not necessary that there should be two witnesses to each circumstance and at each stage. It is enough if the joint testimony of two or more witnesses prove the act as a whole. R. v. M'Cafferty, Ir. Rep. 1 C. L. 363; 10 Cox, 603. And one witness is sufficient to prove a collateral fact; Fost. 242; as, that the defendant is a natural-born subject; R. v. Vaughan, 13 St. Tr. 485; or a matter of inducement, or the like, 13 St. Tr. 535. As to proof of confessions by the accused, R. v. Deacon, 18 St. Tr. 369 : Tonge's case, 6 St. Tr. 227, 228 : R. v. Crossfield, 26 St. Tr. 57, and ante, p. 379. As to evidence of accomplices, see ante, pp. 455, 456.

Copy of indictment and list of witnesses.]—On all prosecutions for treason or misprision of treason, except those triable as if the charge were murder.

39 & 40 G. 3, c. 93; 57 G. 3, c. 6, s. 1; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 1 (ante, pp. 1060, 1061, 1062); a copy of the indictment and a list of the witnesses for the prosecution must be delivered to the accused ten days before the trial. 7 Anne, c. 21, s. 14 (ante, p. 1058). At one time it was deemed safer to deliver a copy of the caption with that of the indictment; Bacon, Abr. Treason (C. c.); but see R. v. O'Connell, 5 St. Tr. (N. S.) 28: R. v. Burke, 10 Cox, 519. A copy of the caption was given in R. v. Casement [1917] 1 K. B. 98. A bill of indictment for treason was found on the 11th December, on the 12th copies of the indictment and of the jury panel were delivered to the prisoner; and on the 17th a copy of the list of witnesses was delivered to him. The prisoner was arraigned on the 31st December, and pleaded: and upon the first witness being called for the Crown, it was objected that the list of witnesses had not been delivered according to the statute. Upon a case reserved, it was held, by nine judges to six, that the delivery of the list was not a good delivery in point of law: but it was also held, by a like majority, that the objection was too late after plea pleaded. And it was agreed by all the judges, that if the objection had been taken in due time, the only effect of it would have been a postponement of the trial, to give time for a proper delivery of the list. R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 35; 2 Mood. 140; 9 C. & P. 129 And so the fact that a true copy of the indictment has not been furnished to the prisoner is not matter for a plea, but is only a ground for postponing the trial. R. v. Burke, 10 Cox, 519.

List of jury.]—7 Anne, c. 21, s. 14 (s. 11 in Ruffhead), also contained provisions as to a list of the petty jurors which were repealed as to England by 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 62, and replaced by s. 21 of that Act, under which the list of the petty jurors, with names, professions, and places of abode, must be delivered in the presence of two credible witnesses ten days before the day of trial, if the trial is in the King's Bench Division, and ten days before the day of arraignment if the trial is in any other court. This obligation does not apply where the particular treason is triable in the same way as murder. See 39 & 40 G. 3, c 93 (ante, p. 1060); 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 21 (ante, p. 1061); 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 1 (ante, p. 1062).

Form of a Count for levying War. (25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2, ante, pp. 1053, 1054.)

Commencement as post, p. 1071, or at Assizes.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

High Treason by levying war, contrary to the Treason Act, 1351.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, and on other days between that date and the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, being on the said days a British subject, levied war against our Lord the King in his realm.

Overt acts of the said Treason.

[State them in ordinary language—see post, p. 1071.]

Evidence.

In order to maintain this count, it is necessary to prove that which in law amounts to a levying of war, directly or constructively, against the King in his realm; and to prove that the defendant was either actually engaged in it, or present aiding and abetting. Levying war in Ireland is treason, by force of Poyning's Act (10 H. 7, c. 22, Ir.). Smith O'Brien v. R., 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 2 H. L. C. 465. As to the meaning of "realm," see ante, p. 1054.

In order to constitute a levying of war, the number of persons assembled is not material; three or four will constitute it as fully as a thousand. 3 Co. Inst. 9. Nor is it necessary that they should be more guerrino arraiati, armed with military weapons, with colours flying, etc., although it is usually so stated in the indictment. Fost. 208: and see R. v. Dammaree and Purchase, Fost. 208; 15 St. Tr. 521, 606, 645. Nor is actual fighting necessary to constitute a levying of war: Fost. 218; 1 Hale, 144; for, as the Court held in R. v. Vaughan (13 St. Tr. 485; 2 Salk. 634), enlisting and marching are sufficient, without coming to battle. But there must be force accompanying that insurrection, and it must be for an object of a general nature, R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 85; 9 C. & P. 129. As to levying war by use of dangerous explosives, see R. v. Gallagher, 16 Cox, 291 (Ir.): R. v. Deasy, 15 Cox, 334. After an action has taken place, it is termed bellum percussum; before it, bellum levatum. See 15 St. Tr. 525 n.

War levied against the King is of two kinds—direct and constructive. It is said to be direct, when the war is levied directly against the King or his forces, with intent to do some injury to his person, to imprison him, or the like: 1 Hale, 131, 132; such, for instance, as open rebellion, for the purpose of deposing or imprisoning the King, or of getting him into the power of the rebels, or of forcing him to put away his ministers, or the like; 1 Hale, 152; Fost. 210; and see R. v. Earls of Essex and Southampton, Moore, 621; 1 St. Tr. 1333; holding or defending any of the King's castles, forts, or ships against the King or his forces, or delivering them up to rebels, through treachery; 2 Co. Inst. 10; Fost. 219; 1 Hale, 525, 526. To constitute levying war it is not necessary that great numbers should assemble or military arms or array should be displayed or actual force be used. R. v. Hardie, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 609: R. v. Gallagher, 16 Cox, 291 (Ir.). Levying war is said to be indirect or constructive when levied for the purpose of effecting innovations of a public and general nature by an armed force; Fost. 211; as, for the purposes of attempting by force to obtain the repeal of a statute, to alter the religion established by law, or to obtain the redress of any other public grievance, real or pretended; 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 26; 1 Hale, 153; Fost. 211; 3 Co. Inst. 9, 10: R. v. Lord G. Gordon, 21 St. Tr. 485; 2 Dougl. 590; and see 13 St. Tr. 61; 15 St. Tr. 527 n., 606 n.; 21 St. Tr. 644: R. v. Thistlewood, 33 St. Tr. 681, 955; or an insurrection for the purpose of throwing down all inclosures, pulling down all bawdy houses, opening all prisons, etc., expelling all strangers, enhancing the price of wages generally, or the like. R. v. Dammaree and Purchase, Fost. 213; 1 Hale, 132: R. v. Bradshaw, Poph. 122: R. v. Messenger, Kel. (J.) 70-79; 6 St. Tr. 879. Therefore, where a mob assembled for the purpose of destroying all the Protestant dissenting meeting-houses, and actually pulled down two, it was held to be treason. R. v. Dammaree, 15 St. Tr. 521, 605: R. v. Purchase, Id. 645. A mere rising or tumult is not treasonable, unless for a purpose of a public or general nature. R. v. Hardie, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 609: R. v. Munroe, Id. 1356. Thus an insurrection for the purpose of throwing down the inclosures of a particular manor, park, common, etc., or upon a mere quarrel between private persons, Fost. 210; 1 Hale, 131, 133, 149, or to deliver one or more particular persons out of a prison (they not being imprisoned for treason), 1 Hale, 134, or holding a house by force against a sheriff and posse comitatus, 1 Hale, 146, is not treason. So, if an armed body of men enter a town, their object being not to take it, or to attack the military force there, but merely to make a demonstration of their strength to the magistracy, in order to procure the liberation or mitigate the punishment of prisoners convicted of some political offence, this, though an aggravated misdemeanor, is not high treason. R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 85; 9 C. & P. 129.

It is said also, in order to maintain this count, proof must be given of a war actually levied, and not merely of a conspiracy to levy it. 1 Hale, 141-148; 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 27. But, according to Foster, the conspiracy may be dealt with as an overt act in compassing the King's death. Fost. 195.

In the case of war levied directly against the King, all persons assembled and marching with the rebels are guilty of treason, whether they are aware of the purpose of the assembly, or aid and assist in committing acts of violence, or not; R. v. Earls of Essex and Southampton, 1 St. Tr. 1333; Moore (K. B.) 621; unless compelled to join and continue with them pro timore mortis; Fost. 216, 217; 3 Co. Inst. 10; 1 Hale, 49, 51, 139; and actual compulsion is an excuse for adhering to rebels, but mere apprehension of loss of property or injury not endangering the person is not an excuse. R. v. M'Growther, 18 St. Tr. 391; Fost. 13, 217; 1 East, P. C. 71: R. v. Gordon, 1 East, P. C. 71; and see ante, p. 20. (a) But in the case of a constructive levying of war, those only of the rabble who actually aid and assist in doing those acts of violence which form the constructive treason, are traitors; the rest are merely rioters. See R. v. Messenger, Kel. (J.) 70-79; 1 Sid. 358; 6 St. Tr. 879.

(a) As to plea that the act done was under military orders of the enemy, see R. v. Louw [1904] 21 Cape S. C. 36.

Form of Indictment framed against Sir Roger Casement for adhering to the King's Enemies abroad (when tried in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice). (23 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2, ante, p. 1053; 35 H. 8, c. 2, s. 1, ante, p. 1055.)

REX v. SIR ROGER DAVID CASEMENT.

Court of Trial.—The High Court of Justice, King's Bench Division, sitting at the Royal Courts of Justice, Strand, in the County of the County of London and the County of Middlesex.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

Sir Roger David Casement is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

High Treason by adhering to the King's enemies elsewhere than in the King's realm—to wit, in the Empire of Germany—contrary to the Treason Act, 1351 (25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2).

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

Sir Roger David Casement, otherwise known as Sir Roger Casement, knight, on the 1st day of December, 1914, and on divers other days thereafter, and between that day and the 21st April, 1916, being then—to wit, on the said several days—a British subject, and whilst on the said several days an open and public war was being prosecuted and carried on by the German Emperor and his subjects against our Lord the King and his subjects, then and on the said several days traitorously contriving and intending to aid and assist the said enemies of our Lord the King against our Lord the King and his subjects, did traitorously adhere to and aid and comfort the said enemies in parts beyond the seas without this realm of England—to wit, in the Empire of Germany.

OVERT ACTS OF THE SAID TREASON.

1. On or about the 31st December 1914, soliciting and inciting and endeavouring to persuade certain persons, being British subjects and members of the military forces of our Lord the King, and being prisoners of war then imprisoned at Limburg Lahn Camp in the Empire of Germany—to wit, Michael O'Connor and others whose names are unknown—to forsake their duty and allegiance to our Lord the King and to join the armed forces of his said enemies and to fight against our Lord the King and his subjects in the said war.

2. On or about the 6th day of January 1915, soliciting and inciting and endeavouring to persuade certain persons, being British subjects and members of the military forces of our Lord the King, and being prisoners of war then imprisoned at Limburg Lahn Camp in the Empire of Germany—to wit, John Robinson and John Cronin, and others whose names are unknown—to forsake their duty and allegiance to our Lord the King and to join the armed forces of his said enemies and to fight against our Lord the King and his subjects in the said war.

3. On or about the 19th February 1915, soliciting and inciting and endeavouring to persuade certain persons, being British subjects and members of the military forces of our Lord the King, and being prisoners of war then imprisoned at Limburg Lahn Camp in the Empire of Germany—to wit, John Robinson, William Egan, Daniel O'Brien, and James Wilson, and others whose names are unknown—to forsake their duty and allegiance to our Lord the King, and to join the armed forces of his said enemies and to fight against our Lord the King and his subjects in the said war.

4. In or about the months of January and February 1915, at Limburg Lahn in the Empire of Germany, circulating and distributing and causing and procuring to be circulated and distributed to and amongst certain persons being British subjects and members of the military forces of our Lord the King, and being prisoners of war imprisoned at Limburg Lahn Camp aforesaid—to wit, Michael O'Connor, John Robinson, John Cronin, William Egan, Daniel O'Brien, James Wilson, and divers others, whose names are unknown—a certain leaflet to the tenor and effect following, that is to say, "Irishmen, here is a chance for you to fight for Ireland! You have fought for England, your country's hereditary enemy. You have fought for Belgium in England's interest, though it was no more to you than the Fiji Islands! Are you willing to fight for your own country with a view to securing the national freedom of Ireland? With the moral and material assistance of the German Government an Irish Brigade is being formed. The object of the Irish Brigade shall be to fight solely the cause of Ireland, and under no circumstances shall it be directed to any German end. The Irish Brigade shall be formed, and shall fight under the Irish flag alone; the men shall wear a special distinctively Irish uniform and have Irish officers. The Irish Brigade shall be clothed, fed, and efficiently equipped with arms and ammunition by the German Government. It will be stationed near Berlin and be treated as guests of the German Government. At the end of the war the German Government undertakes to send each member of the brigade who may so desire it to the United States of America with necessary means to land. The Irishmen in America are collecting money for the brigade. Those men who do not join the Irish Brigade will be removed from Limburg and distributed among other camps. If interested, see your company commanders. Join the Irish Brigade and win Ireland's independence! Remember Bachelor's Walk! God save Ireland!" with intent to solicit, incite, and persuade the said last mentioned British subjects, being Irishmen, to forsake their duty and allegiance to our Lord the King, and to aid and assist his enemies in the prosecution of the said war against our Lord the King and his subjects.

5. On or about the 31st December 1914, and on divers days thereafter in the months of January and February 1915, persuading and procuring certain persons being members of the Military Forces of our Lord the King—to wit, Daniel Julian Bailey, one Quinlisk, one O'Callaghan, one Keogh, one Cavanagh, one Greer, and one Scanlon, and divers others, whose names are unknown, to the number of about 50; the said persons being Prisoners of War then imprisoned in Limburg Lahn Camp in the Empire of Germany, to forsake their allegiance to our Lord the King, and to join the armed forces of his said enemies, with a view to fight against our Lord the King and his subjects in the said War.

6. On or about the 12th day of April 1916, setting forth from the Empire of Germany as a member of a warlike and hostile expedition undertaken and equipped by the said enemies of our Lord the King, having for its object the introduction into and landing on the Coast of Ireland of arms and ammunition intended for use in the prosecution of the said War by the said Enemies against our Lord the King and his subjects.

The special acts of adherence must be set forth in the indictment as overt acts; but it is not necessary in this or in any other case of treason, that in laying the overt acts the details of the evidence intended to be given at the trial should be stated; it is sufficient if the charge be reduced to a reasonable certainty, so that the defendant may be apprised of the nature of the offence with which he is charged. Fost. 194, 220.

Venue: Where the King's Bench "shall sit and be kept" (35 H. 8, c. 2, s. 1, ante, p. 1055). This is now "the county of the county of London and the county of Middlesex." By 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 89, sub-s. 3, "the county of London and the county of Middlesex shall be deemed to be one county for the purpose of all legal proceedings civil or criminal" . . . in any court except the Court of Quarter Sessions, and power was given for the making of rules of the Supreme Court for the purpose of carrying this section into effect. See the rule, ante, p. 185. This offence may also be tried by special commission. See 35 H. 8, c. 2, s. 1 (ante, p. 1055). Punishment, see ante, p. 1064.

Evidence.

The count is proved in the same manner as the count for compassing the King's death (see ante, pp. 1066 et seq.), namely, by proving one or more of the overt acts laid. The fact of the persons adhered to being enemies may be proved by the production of the Gazette containing the proclamation, if war were formally proclaimed, or public notoriety is sufficient evidence of it. Y. B. 19 E. 4, f. 5; Fost. 219; 1 Hale, 164. And whether they are enemies or not is a matter of fact to be determined by the jury. Id.

An actual adherence must be proved. A mere conspiracy or intention to adhere is not treason within this branch of the statute, although probably such a conspiracy might be laid as an overt act of compassing the King's death. But if you can prove such a conspiracy, and connect the defendant with it by evidence, and can prove an act done by any one of the conspirators in furtherance of the common design, you may give it in evidence against the defendant, if it tends to prove any of the overt acts laid in the indictment; for the act of one, in such a case, is the act of all. R. v. Stone, 25 St. Tr. 1155; 6 T. R. 527 (see ante, p. 1066).

Overt acts.]—The words in the Treason Act, 1351 (ante, p. 1053), are "or be adherent to the enemies of our Lord the King in his realm, giving to them aid or comfort in the realm or elsewhere." As to the words in the Parliament Roll and Statute Roll, see R. v. Casement [1917] 1 K. B. 98, 134. The offence defined by these words is "adhering to the King's enemies within the land or without, and declaring the same by some overt act;" 3 Co. Inst. 10, 11, 63; Co. Litt. 261 b; the offences being complete though both the adherence and the enemies adhered to are without the realm. See Fitzh. Abr. Trial, 54. As to the common law before the statute and as to the statute, see 1 Hale, 91. 159, 165, 166, 169; 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 28; 1 East, P. C. 60, 78; Alexander Luders on High Treason, pp. 12, 13; Holbourne's Readings, 12, 13; Bacon, Law Tracts, 164; 18 G. 2, c. 30 (preamble): R. v. Maclane, 26 St. Tr. 722. 725, Osgoode, C.J. (Quebec): Mulcahy v. R., L. R. 3 H. L. 306, 317, Willes, J.: R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K. B. 444; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 107. The words "giving aid and comfort to the King's enemies" are words in apposition; they are words to explain what is meant by being adherent to, so that a man may be adherent to the King's enemies in his realm by giving to them aid and comfort in his realm or he may be adherent to the King's enemies elsewhere by giving them aid and comfort elsewhere. In either case he is equally adherent to the King's enemies, and so commits this treason. R. v. Casement [1917] 1 K. B. 98, 136. Records are preserved in the Record Office of the following cases, all of which contain indictments under 35 H. 8, c. 2, for adhering to, aiding, and assisting the King's enemies abroad, viz.: R. v. Lord Wentworth (referred to 4 St. Tr. 314): R. v. Grymston: R. v. Chamberlayn (1559: for the surrender of Calais, Baga de Secretis, pouches 38, 39; but as to this case, see R. v. Casement [1917] 1 K. B. 98, 128): R. v. Lord Middleton and John Stafford (K. B. Rolls, 1713: for assisting the King of France in fighting against the British in France): R. v. Duke of Wharton (1728: for assisting the King of Spain in the siege of Gibraltar, Baga de Secretis, pouch 67): R. v. Cundell (1812: for assisting "the French Government and the men of France under the said Government" in fighting against the British in the Isle of France, Baga de Secretis, pouch 89; 4 Newgate Calendar, 62; followed in R. v. Casement, [1917] 1 K. B. 98). Every assistance given by the King's subjects to his enemies, unless given from a well-grounded apprehension of immediate death in case of a refusal, is high treason within this branch of the statute. 1 Hale, 159. Any act done by a British subject which strengthens or tends to strengthen the enemies of the King in the conduct of a war against the King, or which weakens or tends to weaken the power of the King and of the country to resist or attack the enemies of the King and country, constitutes giving aid and comfort to the King's enemies within the meaning of this part of the Act of Edward III. R. v. Casement, supra. Therefore, if a British subject joins the King's enemies in acts of hostility against this country; Fost. 216; 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 28; or even against the King's allies; Fost. 220: R. v. Vaughan, 2 Salk. 634; 13 St. Tr. 485; or raises troops for the enemy; R. v. Harding, 2 Vent. 315 (where, after a special verdict, it was held that the indictment did not sufficiently charge an adherence to the King's enemies, as it did not state who those enemies were; but the prisoner was convicted of compassing the King's death); or while a state of war exists endeavours in an enemy country to persuade British prisoners of war in that enemy country to join the armed forces of the enemy; R. v. Casement, supra, or takes part in an attempt to land arms and ammunition in any part of the United Kingdom for the use of the enemy; R. v. Casement, supra; or delivers up the King's castles, forts, or ships of war to the King's enemies through treachery or in combination with them; Fost. 219; 3 Co. Inst. 10; 1 Hale, 168; or even detains the King's castles, etc., from him, if it is done in confederacy with the enemy; Fost. 219; 1 Hale, 326; or sends money, arms, intelligence, or the like to the King's enemies; Fost. 217; although such money, intelligence, etc., be intercepted and never reach them; R. v. Gregg, 14 St. Tr. 1371, 1376 n.; Fost. 217, 218: R. v. Hensey, 19 St. Tr. 1341; 1 Burr. 642: R. v. De la Motte, 21 St. Tr. 808: R. v. Lord Preston, 12 St. Tr. 645: R. v. Tyrie, 21 St. Tr. 815: he is guilty of treason. See also the following Irish cases: R. v. Jackson, 25 St. Tr. 783: R. v. Sheares, 27 St. Tr. 255: R. v. McCann, Id. 399: R. v. Byrne, Id. 455: R. v. Bond, Id. 523. Where the accused, who was a British subject acting as German Consul at Sunderland, continued to assist German subjects of military age to return from England to Germany after a state of war existed between this country and Germany, and was convicted of high treason on an indictment charging him with adhering to, aiding, and comforting the King's enemies, it was held on appeal that the conviction must be quashed, because the judge had directed the jury that it was no defence for the accused to say that he believed he was lawfully entitled to act as he did, whereas they should have been told that they must consider whether the acts of the appellant were done by him with the intention of assisting the King's enemies or whether he acted without any evil intention and in the belief that it was his duty to assist German subjects to return to Germany, in which case he would not be guilty. R. v. Ahlers [1915] 1 K. B. 616; 24 Cox, 623; 79 J. P. 255; 31 T. L. R. 141; 11 Cr. App. R. 63. Where letters, etc., have been thus intercepted, it is much better to charge them to have been sent from the place where the venue was laid, to be delivered in parts beyond the seas, to the enemy, according to the fact, than to state them to have been sent in partes transmarinas, to be delivered to the enemy. Fost. 218. In R. v. Stone, 25 St. Tr. 1155; 6 T. R. 527, it was objected that the intelligence transmitted by the defendant to the enemy was calculated to dissuade them from invading this country, and was sent with that intent; but Lord Kenyon, C.J., said that whether the intelligence were calculated to dissuade or invite the enemy was immaterial; if it were such as was likely to prove useful to them, in enabling them to annoy us, defend themselves, or shape their attacks, sending such intelligence with a view of its reaching the enemy was undoubtedly high treason. If a British subject incites foreigners to invade this country, it is treason, whether the foreigners be enemies or not; if enemies, it is treason within this branch of the statute; if not enemies, still it is an overt act of compassing the King's death. Fost. 196, 197; 1 Hale, 167. But if a British subject is in a foreign country when war breaks out between that country and this, and continues to reside there, or if during a truce he goes to a foreign country, and returns before the truce expires, this is no treason, unless he actually conspire with the enemy, or aid him in forwarding his measures for hostility. 1 Hale, 165, 166. Serving in war the King de facto is not treason. 11 H. 7, c. 1 (ante, p. 1055). This statute appears not to apply to South Africa. R. v. Botha, 1 Searle, Cape Supreme Ct. 149.

Swearing fealty to a hostile power.]—If an Englishman during war between the King of England and France is taken by the French, and there swears fealty to France, if it is done voluntarily, it is an adhering to the King's enemies; but if it is done for fear of his life, and he returns, as soon as he might, to the allegiance of the crown of England, this is not an adherence to the King's enemies within the Act. 1 Hale, 167. In R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K. B. 444; 20 Cox, 468, the prisoner, a British subject, during the war between Great Britain and the South African Republic, subscribed a declaration of willingness to take up arms on behalf of and took an oath of allegiance to the South African Republic. He then obtained letters of naturalization from the South African Republic, and afterwards engaged in various acts of warfare against the British forces. He was indicted in the King's Bench Division of the High Court for high treason, viz., for adhering to the enemies of the late Queen, and the making of the aforesaid declaration and the taking of the aforesaid oath of allegiance were charged as overt acts, as were his various acts of warfare against the British forces in which he subsequently engaged. It was contended for the defence that the prisoner had by reason of the provisions of the Naturalization Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 14), ss. 4, 6, been guilty of no offence; but the Court (Alverstone, C.J., Wills and Channell, JJ.) held that the last-mentioned statute does not empower a British subject to become naturalized as a subject of a hostile state in time of war, and that the act of becoming naturalized under such circumstances is itself an act of treason.

Enemies.]—As to the King's enemies within the meaning of this statute;—the subjects of all states against which his Majesty may have proclaimed or declared war are his enemies; so are the subjects of states in actual hostility with us, whether war have been solemnly proclaimed or not. Fost. 219; 1 Hale, 162. But merely issuing letters of marque does not create a state of hostility between two states, although nearly equal to a state of war in its consequences. 1 Hale, 162. Nor is inciting the subjects of a state in amity with us to invade this country treason within this branch of the statute, although it certainly would be an overt act of compassing the King's death. 1 Hale, 167. But if the subjects of a state in amity with us were to invade the country in a hostile manner, or otherwise commit hostilities against us, they would be enemies within the meaning of this statute, and adhering to them would be treason. Fost. 219; 1 Hale, 164; 3 Co. Inst. 11; 4 Co. Inst. 162: R. v. Vaughan, 2 Salk. 634; 13 St. Tr. 485. British subjects, however, can never be deemed the King's enemies within the meaning of this Act, and therefore to give relief or assistance to a rebel would not be treason within this branch of the statute. 3 Co. Inst. 11; 1 Hale, 159; 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 28.

It must appear upon the face of the indictment that the persons adhered to were enemies.

SECT. 2.

TREASON FELONY.

Statutes

11 & 12 Vict. c. 12 (Treason Felony Act, 1848), s. 3.]—If any person whatsoever after the passing of this Act (April 22, 1848) shall, within the United Kingdom or without, compass, imagine, invent, devise, or intend to deprive or depose our most gracious lord the King, his heirs or successors, from the style, honour, or royal name, of the imperial crown of the United Kingdom, or of any other of his Majesty's dominions and countries, or to levy war against his Majesty, his heirs or successors, within any part of the United Kingdom, in order by force or constraint to compel him or them to change his or their measures or counsels, or in order to put any force or constraint upon, or in order to intimidate or overawe both houses or either house of parliament, or to move or stir any foreigner or stranger with force to invade the United Kingdom, or any other his Majesty's dominions or countries under the obeisance of his Majesty, his heirs or successors, and such compassings, imaginations, inventions, devices or intentions, or any of them, shall express, utter, or declare by publishing any printing or writing, or by open and advised speaking, or by any overt act or deed, every person so offending shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be transported beyond the seas for the term of his or her natural life. . . .

Sect. 6.—Not to affect 25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2.]—Provided always that nothing herein contained shall lessen the force of or in any manner affect anything enacted by the Treason Act, 1351 (25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2), ante, p. 1053.

Sect. 7.—Indictment, etc., valid, though facts amount to treason.]—Provided also that if the facts or matters alleged in an indictment for any felony under this Act shall amount in law to treason, such indictment shall not by reason thereof be deemed void, erroneous, or defective: and if the facts or matters proved on the trial of any person indicted for any felony under this Act shall amount in law to treason, such person shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such felony; but no person tried for such felony shall be afterwards prosecuted for treason upon the same facts.

Sect. 8.—Punishment of accessories.]—In the case of every felony punishable under this Act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this Act punishable: and every accessory after the fact to any such felony shall on conviction be liable to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years.

Sect. 10.—Costs.]—Rep. as to England by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10, and replaced by other provisions of that Act, ante. pp. 267 et seq.

Indictment. (11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, s. 3, ante, p. 1077).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Treason felony, contrary to section 3 of the Treason Felony Act, 1848.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., between the —— day of ——, and —— day of ——, in the county of ——, compassed or intended to levy war against our Lord the King in Ireland in order to put force or constraint upon the Houses of Parliament, and expressed or uttered or declared such compassing or intention in a public speech delivered by him at ——, on the —— day of —— [or as the case may be].

Overt Acts of the Offence.

[State them in ordinary language—see ante, p. 1071.]

In R. v. Meany, 10 Cox, 506; Ir. Rep. 1 C. L. 500 C. C. R. Ir., tried at Dublin, where the indictment was under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, and some of the overt acts charged in each count were conspiracies to effect the treasonable intent charged, it was held that overt acts done by some of the conspirators within the venue in furtherance of the conspiracies were acts for which the defendant, a fellow-conspirator, was responsible, though at the time the acts were done he was in America, and that therefore his offence was committed within the venue. The following seem to be all the other reported cases on this statute:— R. v. Mitchel, 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 599; 3 Cox, 1: R. v. O'Doherty, 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 831: R. v. Dowling, 7 St. Tr. (N. Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, s. 3; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to the evidence, see ante, pp. 1066 et seq. It is no objection that the facts proved amount in law to high treason. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, s. 7 (ante, p. 1077).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p 106).

As to costs, see ante, pp. 267 et seq.

SECT. 3.

ATTEMPTS TO INJURE OR ALARM THE SOVEREIGN.

Statute.

5 & 6 Vict. c. 51 (Treason Act, 1842), s. 2.]—If any person shall wilfully discharge or attempt to discharge, or point, aim, or present at or near to the person of the King, any gun, pistol, or any other description of firearms, or of other arms whatsoever, whether the same shall or shall not contain any explosive or destructive material, or shall discharge or cause to be discharged, or attempt to discharge or cause to be discharged, any explosive substance or material near to the person of the King, or if any person shall wilfully strike or strike at, or attempt to strike or to strike at, the person of the King, with any offensive weapon or in any other manner whatsoever, or if any person shall wilfully throw or attempt to throw any substance, matter or thing whatsoever, at or upon the person of the King, with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to injure the person of the King, or with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to break the public peace, or whereby the public peace may be endangered, or with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to alarm his Majesty; or if any person shall, near to the person of the King, wilfully produce or have any gun, pistol, or any other description of firearms, or other arms whatsoever, or any explosive, destructive, or dangerous matter or thing whatsoever, with intent to use the same to injure the person of the King, or to alarm his Majesty, every such person so offending shall be guilty of a high misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof in due course of law shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court before which the said person shall be so convicted, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned, . . . and during the period of such imprisonment to be publicly or privately whipped, in such manner and form as the said Court shall order and direct. (As to whipping, see ante, pp. 244-246). [It is submitted that the references in this Act to "the Queen" should be read as references to the sovereign for the time being. Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 30, ante, p. 1077).]

For indictments and trials under this Act, see R. v. Bean, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1382 : R. v. Hamilton, 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1130 : R. v. Pate, 8 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1 : R. v. O'Connor [1872] 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 3 n.

Sect. 3.]—Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to alter in any respect the punishment which by law may now be inflicted, upon persons guilty of high treason or misprision of treason. (See ante, pp. 1063, 1065; post, tit. "Misprision of Treason."

Indictment for presenting a Pistol at the King. (5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 2.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Aiming pistol at the King, contrary to section 2 of the Treason Act, 1842.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, wilfully pointed or aimed at our Lord the King a pistol, with intent to injure or alarm him.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, with whipping during such imprisonment, as often and in such manner as the Court shall order, not exceeding thrice. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 2: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant presented the pistol at or near to the person of the King, as the case may be; and the intent as directed ante, pp. 352, 357, 396. It is immaterial whether the weapon was loaded or not.

SECT. 4.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE FOREIGN ENLISTMENT ACT, 1870.

Statute.

33 & 34 Vict. c. 90, s. 1.]—This Act may be cited for all purposes as the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870." [The Act took the place of 59 G. 3, c. 69 (rep.). As to its history, see 1 Steph. Sect. 2.—Application of Act.]—This Act shall extend to all the dominions of his Majesty, including the adjacent territorial waters.

Sect. 3.—Commencement of Act.]—This Act shall be proclaimed in every British possession by the governor thereof as soon as may be after he receives notice of this Act, and shall come into operation in that British possession on the day of such proclamation, and the time at which this Act comes into operation in any place is, as respects such place, referred to as the commencement of this Act. (See R. v. Jameson [1896] 2 Q. B. 425, and as to proof of proclamation, ante, pp. 407, 411).

Sect. 4.—Penalty on enlistment in service of foreign state.]—If any person, without the licence of his Majesty, being a British subject, within or without his Majesty's dominions, accepts or agrees to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any foreign state at peace with his Majesty, and in this Act referred to as a friendly state, or whether a British subject or not, within his Majesty's dominions, induces any other person to accept or agree to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any such foreign state as aforesaid, he shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the Court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour. [See R. v. Granatelli, 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 979: Burton v. Pinkerton, L. R. 2 Ex. 340.]

Sect. 5.—Penalty on leaving his Majesty's dominions with intent to serve a foreign state.]—If any person, without the licence of his Majesty, being a British subject, quits or goes on board any ship with a view of quitting his Majesty's dominions, with intent to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state, or, whether a British subject or not, within his Majesty's dominions, induces any other person to quit or to go on board any ship with a view of quitting his Majesty's dominions with the like intent, he shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the Court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour.

Sect. 6.—Penalty on embarking persons under false representations as to service.]—If any person induces any other person to quit his Majesty's dominions or to embark on any ship within his Majesty's dominions under a misrepresentation or false representation of the service in which such person is to be engaged, with the intent or in order that such person may accept or agree to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state, he shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the Court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour.

Sect. 7.—Penalty on taking illegally enlisted persons on board ship.]—If the master or owner of any ship, without the licence of his Majesty, knowingly either takes on board, or engages to take on board, or has on board such ship within his Majesty's dominions any of the following persons, in this Act referred to as illegally enlisted persons; that is to say,

(1) Any person who, being a British subject within or without the dominions of his Majesty, has, without the licence of his Majesty, accepted or agreed to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state;

(2) Any person, being a British subject, who, without the licence of his Majesty, is about to quit his Majesty's dominions with intent to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state;

(3) Any person who has been induced to embark under a misrepresentation or false representation of the service in which such person is to be engaged, with the intent or in order that such person may accept or agree to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state;

Such master or owner shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and the following consequences shall ensue; that is to say,

(1) The offender shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the Court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour; and

(2) Such ship shall be detained until the trial and conviction or acquittal of the master or owner, and until all penalties inflicted on the master or owner have been paid, or the master or owner has given security for the payment of such penalties to the satisfaction of two justices of the peace, or other magistrate or magistrates having the authority of two justices of the peace; and

(3) All illegally enlisted persons shall immediately on the discovery of the offence be taken on shore, and shall not be allowed to return to the ship.

Sect. 8.—Penalty on illegal ship-building and illegal expeditions.]—If any person within his Majesty's dominions, without the licence of his Majesty, does any of the following acts; that is to say,

(1) Builds or agrees to build, or causes to be built any ship with intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe that the same shall or will be employed in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state; or

(2) Issues or delivers any commission for any ship with intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe that the same shall or will be employed in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state; or

(3) Equips any ship with intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe that the same shall or will be employed in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state; or

(4) Despatches, or causes or allows to be despatched, any ship with intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe that the same shall or will be employed in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state;

Such person shall be deemed to have committed an offence against this Act and the following consequences shall ensue:

(1) The offender shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments at the discretion of the Court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour.

(2) The ship in respect of which any such offence is committed, and her equipment, shall be forfeited to his Majesty:

Provided that a person building, causing to be built, or equipping a ship in any of the cases aforesaid, in pursuance of a contract made before the commencement of such war as aforesaid, shall not be liable to any of the penalties imposed by this section in respect of such building or equipping if he satisfies the conditions following: (that is to say):

(1) If forthwith upon a proclamation of neutrality being issued by his Majesty he gives notice to the secretary of state that he is so building, causing to be built, or equipping such ship, and furnishes such particulars of the contract and of any matters relating to, or done, or to be done under the contract as may be required by the secretary of state;

(2) If he gives such security, and takes and permits to be taken such other measures, if any, as the secretary of state may prescribe for ensuring that such ship shall not be despatched, delivered, or removed without the licence of his Majesty until the termination of such war as aforesaid. (See The Gauntlet, L. R. 4 P. C. 184: The International, L. R. 3 A. & E. 321.)

Sect. 9.—Presumption as to evidence in case of illegal ship.]—Where any ship is built by order of or on behalf of any foreign state when at war with a friendly state, or is delivered to or to the order of such foreign state, or any person who to the knowledge of the person building is an agent of such foreign state, or is paid for by such foreign state, or such agent, and is employed in the military or naval service of such foreign state, such ship shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to have been built with a view to being so employed, and the burden shall lie on the builder of such ship of proving that he did not know that the ship was intended to be so employed in the military or naval service of such foreign state.

Sect. 10.—Penalty on aiding the warlike equipment of foreign ships.]—If any person within the dominions of his Majesty, and without the licence of his Majesty—by adding to the number of the guns, or by changing those on board for other guns, or by the addition of any equipment for war, increases or augments, or procures to be increased or augmented, or is knowingly concerned in increasing or augmenting the warlike force of any ship which at the time of her being within the dominions of his Majesty was a ship in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state,—such person shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the Court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour.

Sect. 11.—Penalty on fitting out naval or military expeditions without licence.]—If any person within the limits of his Majesty's dominions, and without the licence of his Majesty, prepares or fits out any naval or military expedition to proceed against the dominions of any friendly state, the following consequences shall ensue:

(1) Every person engaged in such preparation or fitting out, or assisting therein, or employed in any capacity in such expedition, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the Court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour;

(2) All ships, and their equipments, and all arms and munitions of war, used in or forming part of such expedition, shall be forfeited to his Majesty.

[It is not necessary to constitute an offence under this section that the expedition should be completely fitted out in this country. Any act of preparation of the expedition in this country is within the section. R. v. Sandoval, 16 Cox, 206; 3 T. L. R. 411, 436, 498; 56 L. T. 526; 51 J. P. 709. Therefore where the defendant had purchased guns and ammunition in this country, and had shipped them on a general ship here for the purpose of being put on board another ship in a foreign port, with the knowledge that they were to be used in a hostile demonstration against a friendly state, it was held that he was guilty of having prepared a naval expedition within the meaning of this section. Id.

If an expedition is unlawfully prepared within the King's dominions, a British subject who assists therein, even without such dominions, is liable under this section. R. v. Jameson [1896] 2 Q. B. 425; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 218; and see The Salvador, L. R. 3 P. C. 218: Att.-Gen. v. Sillem, 2 H. & C. 431; 32 L. J. (Ex.) 92, decided on 59 G. 3, c. 69, s. 7 (rep.).]

Sect. 12.—Punishment of accessories.]—Any person who aids, abets, counsels, or procures the commission of any offence against this Act shall be liable to be tried and punished as a principal offender.

Sect. 13.—Limitation of term of imprisonment.]—The term of imprisonment to be awarded in respect of any offence against this Act shall not exceed two years.

Sect. 14 relates to the restoration of prize brought into British waters in breach of the neutrality of the realm, or by vessels equipped in breach of the Act.

Sect. 15.—Licence by his Majesty, how granted.]—For the purposes of this Act, a licence by his Majesty shall be under the sign manual of his Majesty, or be signified by order in council or by proclamation of his Majesty.

Sect. 16.—Jurisdiction in respect of offences by persons against Act.]—Any offence against this Act shall, for all purposes of and incidental to the trial and punishment of any person guilty of any such offence, be deemed to have been committed either in the place in which the offence was wholly or partly committed, or in any place within his Majesty's dominions in which the person who committed such offence may be.

Sect. 17.—Venue in respect of offences.]—Any offence against this Act may be described in any indictment or other document relating to such offence, in cases where the mode of trial requires such a description, as having been committed at the place where it was wholly or partly committed, or it may be averred generally to have been committed within his Majesty's dominions, and the venue or local description in the margin may be that of the county, city, or place in which the trial is held. (As to the necessary statements in the indictment, see R. v. Jameson [1896] 2 Q. B. 425; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 218; 18 Cox, 392.)

Sect. 18.—Power to remove offenders for trial.]—The following authorities, that is to say, in the United Kingdom any judge of a superior court, in any other place within the jurisdiction of any British court of justice, such court, or, if there are more courts than one, the Court having the highest criminal jurisdiction in that place, may, by warrant, or instrument in the nature of a warrant in this section included in the term "warrant," direct that any offender charged with an offence against this Act shall be removed to some other place in his Majesty's dominions for trial in cases where it appears to the authority granting the warrant that the removal of such offender would be conducive to the interests of justice, and any prisoner so removed shall be triable at the place to which he is removed, in the same manner as if his offence had been committed at such place. Any warrant for the purposes of this section may be addressed to the master of any ship or to any other person or persons, and the person or persons to whom such warrant is addressed shall have power to convey the prisoner therein named to any place or places named in such warrant, and to deliver him, when arrived at such place or places, into the custody of any authority designated by such warrant. Every prisoner shall, during the time of his removal under any such warrant as aforesaid, be deemed to be in the legal custody of the person or persons empowered to remove him.

Sect. 19. Jurisdiction in respect of forfeiture of ships for offences against Act.]—All proceedings for the condemnation and forfeiture of a ship, or ship and equipment, or arms and munitions of war, in pursuance of this Act shall require the sanction of the secretary of state or such chief executive authority as is in this Act mentioned, and shall be had in the Court of Admiralty, and not in any other court; and the Court of Admiralty shall, in addition to any power given to the Court by this Act, have in respect of any ship or other matter brought before it in pursuance of this Act all powers which it has in the case of a ship or matter brought before it in the exercise of its ordinary jurisdiction.

Sect. 20.—Regulations as to proceedings against the offender and against the ship.]—Where any offence against this Act has been committed by any person by reason whereof a ship, or ship and equipment, or arms and munitions of war, has or have become liable to forfeiture, proceedings may be instituted contemporaneously or not, as may be thought fit, against the offender in any court having jurisdiction of the offence, and against the ship, or ship and equipment, or arms and munitions of war, for the forfeiture in the Court of Admiralty; but it shall not be necessary to take proceedings against the offender because proceedings are instituted for the forfeiture, or to take proceedings for the forfeiture because proceedings are taken against the offender.

Sects. 21-26 relate to seizure of ships and search of ships and dockyards; s. 27, to appeals from decisions of Admiralty Court; ss. 28, 29, to protection of officers and secretary of state. The secretary of state for foreign affairs at present exercises the power of issuing warrants given by s. 23.

Sect. 30.—Interpretation of terms.]—In this Act, if not inconsistent with the context, the following terms have the meanings hereinafter respectively assigned to them; that is to say,

"Foreign state" includes any foreign prince, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, colony, province, or part of any province or people:

"Military service" shall include military telegraphy (see The International L. R. 3 A. & E. 321) and any other employment whatever, in or in connection with any military operation:

"Naval service" shall, as respects a person, include service as a marine, employment as a pilot in piloting or directing the course of a ship of war or other ship when such ship of war or other ship is being used in any military or naval operation, and any employment whatever on board a ship of war, transport, store ship, privateer or ship under letters of marque; and as respects a ship, include any user of a ship as a transport, store ship, privateer or ship under letters of marque:

"United Kingdom" includes the Isle of Man, the Channel Islands, and other adjacent islands:

"British possession" means any territory, colony, or place being part of his Majesty's dominions, and not part of the United Kingdom, as defined by this Act:

"The secretary of state" shall mean any one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state:

"The governor" shall as respects India mean the governor-general or the governor of any presidency, and where a British possession consists of several constituent colonies, mean the governor-general of the whole possession or the governor of any of the constituent colonies, and as respects any other British possession it shall mean the officer for the time being administering the government of such possession; also any person acting for or in the capacity of a governor shall be included under the term "governor:"

"Court of Admiralty" shall mean the High Court of Admiralty of England or Ireland, the Court of Session of Scotland, or any vice-admiralty court within his Majesty's dominions:

"Ship" shall include any description of boat, vessel, floating battery, or floating craft; also any description of boat, vessel, or other craft or battery, made to move either on the surface of or under water, or sometimes on the surface of and sometimes under water:

"Building" in relation to a ship shall include the doing any act towards or incidental to the construction of a ship, and all words having relation to building shall be construed accordingly:

"Equipping" in relation to a ship shall include the furnishing a ship with any tackle, apparel, furniture, provisions, arms, munitions, or stores, or any other thing which is used in or about a ship for the purpose of fitting or adapting her for the sea or for naval service, and all words relating to equipping shall be construed accordingly :

" Ship and equipment " shall include a ship and everything in or belonging to a ship :

" Master " shall include any person having the charge or command of a ship.

[These definitions are not restrictive, but inclusive. The Gauntlet, L. R. 4 P. C. 184.]

Sect. 31.—Repeals Foreign Enlistment Act, 1819 (59 G 3, c. 69).

Sect. 32.]—Saving as to commissioned ships of foreign states.

Sect. 33.—Penalties not to extend to persons entering into military service in Asia.]—Nothing in this Act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to subject to any penalty any person who enters into the military service of any prince, state, or potentate in Asia, with such leave or licence as is for the time being required by law in the case of subjects of his Majesty entering into the military service of princes, states, or potentates in Asia.

SECT. 5.

COINAGE OFFENCES.

General Provisions.

Statute.

Until 1832 (2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34), counterfeiting the King's gold or silver money was high treason under 25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2 (ante, p. 1053). 1 Hale, 211; 1 East, P. C. 159; 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 57; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 103 n. The only relics of the old law are the unrepealed provisions of 6 G. 3, c. 53, s. 3, and 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 21, which enact that the procedure on the trial of high treason is not to apply to treason by counterfeiting coin.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99 (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 1.—Interpretation of terms.]—In the interpretation of and for the purposes of this Act,

Current gold and silver coin]—the expression " the King's current gold or silver coin " shall include any gold or silver coin coined in any of his Majesty's mints or lawfully current, by virtue of any proclamation or otherwise, in any part of his Majesty's dominions, whether within the United Kingdom or otherwise;

Current copper coin]—and the expression "the King's copper coin" shall include any copper coin and any coin of bronze or mixed metal coined in any of his Majesty's mints, or lawfully current, by virtue of any proclamation or otherwise, in any part of his Majesty's said dominions;

False or counterfeit coin]—and the expression "false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin" shall include any of the current coin which shall have been gilt, silvered, washed, coloured, or cased over, or in any manner altered so as to resemble, or be apparently intended to resemble, or pass for, any of the King's current coin of a higher denomination;

Current coin]—and the expression "the King's current coin" shall include any coin coined in any of his Majesty's mints, or lawfully current, by virtue of any proclamation or otherwise, in any part of his Majesty's said dominions, and whether made of gold, silver, copper, bronze, or mixed metal. [This definition of "current coin" was new in 1861. It includes colonial coin. It does not include token coinage (see 33 & 34 Vict. c. 10, s. 5), but does include foreign coin lawfully current. See Chalmers, Colonial Currency; and for the proclamations at present in force, making certain coin current in different parts of the King's dominions, see Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 2, tits. Coin, and Coin, Colonies, and subsequent annual volumes of the Statutory Rules and Orders. Those since issued are to be found in the subsequent annual volumes of the Statutory Rules and Orders. These works being published "by authority" can be put in evidence in the manner provided ante, p. 406. As to offences in colonies, see 16 & 17 Vict. c. 48.]

Criminal possession]—and where the having any matter in the custody or possession of any person is mentioned in this Act, it shall include not only the having of it by himself in his personal custody or possession, but also the knowingly and wilful having it in the actual custody or possession of any other person, and also the knowingly and wilfully having it in any dwelling-house or other building, lodging, apartment, field, or other place, open or inclosed, whether belonging to or occupied by himself or not, and whether such matter shall be so had for his own use or benefit or for that of any other person. [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 21, and 22 & 23 Vict. c. 30, with the additions italicized. The definition of "possession" was altered to get rid of doubts expressed in R. v. Rogers, 2 Mood. 85: R. v. Gerrish, 2 M. & Rob. 219: and R. v. Williams, C. & Mar. 259.]

Sect. 27.]—Provision for discovery and seizure of counterfeit coin and coining tools.

Sect. 28.—Venue for uttering.]—Where any person shall tender, utter, or put off any false or counterfeit coin in one county or jurisdiction, and shall also tender, utter, or put off any other false or counterfeit coin in any other county or jurisdiction, either on the day of such first-mentioned tendering, uttering, or putting off, or within the space of ten days next ensuing, or where two or more persons, acting in concert in different counties or jurisdictions, shall commit any offence against this Act, every such offender may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished, and the offence laid and charged to have been committed, in any one of the said counties or jurisdictions, in the same manner in all respects as if the offence had been actually and wholly committed within such one county or jurisdiction. (See ante, pp. 37, 41.) [The latter part of this section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 15. The italicized part was new in 1861.]

Sect. 29. Proof of coin being counterfeit.]—Where, upon the trial of any person charged with any offence against this Act, it shall be necessary to prove that any coin produced in evidence against such person is false or counterfeit, it shall not be necessary to prove the same to be false and counterfeit by the evidence of any moneyer or other officer of his Majesty's Mint, but it shall be sufficient to prove the same to be false or counterfeit by the evidence of any other credible witness. [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 17.]

Sect. 30.—When the counterfeiting, etc., shall be complete.]—Every offence of falsely making or counterfeiting any coin, or of buying, selling, receiving, paying, tendering, uttering, or putting off, or of offering to buy, sell, receive, pay, utter, or put off, any false or counterfeit coin, against the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed to be complete, although the coin so made or counterfeited, or bought, sold, received, paid, tendered, uttered, or put off, or offered to be bought, sold, received, paid, uttered, or put off, shall not be in a fit state to be uttered, or the counterfeiting thereof shall not be finished or perfected. [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 3, with the additions in italics, inserted to overrule R. v. Bradford, 2 Cr. & Dix. (Ir. Circ. Rep.) 41.]

Sect. 31.—Apprehension of offenders.]—It shall be lawful for any person whatsoever to apprehend any person who shall be found committing any indictable offence, or any high crime and offence, or crime and offence, against this Act, and to convey or deliver him to some peace officer, constable, or officer of police, in order to his being conveyed as soon as reasonably may be before a justice of the peace or some other proper officer, to be dealt with according to law. [This was new law in 1861.]

Sect. 35.—Accessories, etc.]—In the case of every felony punishable under the Act, every principal in the second degree and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this Act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this Act shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 18: and see post, "Accessories."]

Sect. 36.—Admiralty Offences.]—All indictable offences mentioned in this Act which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England or Ireland shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature and liable to the same punishments as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried and determined in any county or place in England or Ireland in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if the same had been actually committed in that county or place; and in any indictment for any such offence, or for being accessory to any such offence, the venue in the margin shall be the same as if such offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence itself shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas;" and where any of the crimes and offences, or high crimes and offences, mentioned in this Act, shall be committed at sea, and the vessel in which the same shall be committed shall be registered in Scotland, or touch at any part thereof, the courts of criminal law in Scotland may inquire, try, and determine the same in the same manner as if such crime and offence, or high crime and offence, had been committed in Scotland; provided that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of his Majesty's land or naval forces. [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 20; and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 2, with the addition of the provisions as to Scotland.]

Sect. 37, as amended by the Indictments Act, 1915 (5 & 6 G. 5, c. 90), Sched. II.—Proof of former convictions.]—Where any person shall have been convicted of any offence against this Act, or any former Act relating to the coin, and shall afterwards be indicted for any offence against this Act committed subsequent to such conviction, a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for the previous offence, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the Court or other officer having or purporting to have the custody of the records of the Court where the offender was first convicted, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer, shall, upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender, be sufficient evidence of the previous conviction, without proof of the signature or official character or authority of the person appearing to have signed the same, or of his custody or right to the custody of the records of the Court; and for every such certificate a fee of six shillings and eightpence, and no more, shall be demanded or taken; and the proceedings upon any indictment for committing any offence after a previous conviction or convictions shall be as follows; (that is to say), the offender shall, in the first instance, be arraigned upon so much only of the indictment, as charges the subsequent offence, and if he plead not guilty, or if the Court order a plea of not guilty to be entered on his behalf, the jury shall be charged, in the first instance, to inquire concerning such subsequent offence only; and if they find him guilty, or if on arraignment he plead guilty, he shall then, and not before, be asked whether he had been previously convicted as alleged in the indictment, and if he answer that he had been so previously convicted the Court may proceed to sentence him accordingly; but if he deny that he had been so previously convicted, or stand mute of malice, or will not answer directly to such question, the jury shall then be charged to inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions, and in such case it shall not be necessary to swear the jury again, but the oath already taken by them shall for all purposes be deemed to extend to such last-mentioned inquiry; Provided that if upon the trial of any person for any such subsequent offence such person shall give evidence of his good character, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor in answer thereto to give evidence of the conviction of such person for the previous offence or offences, before such verdict of guilty shall be returned, and the jury shall inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions at the same time that they inquire concerning such subsequent offence. [This section was new law in 1861. As to alternative modes of proving previous convictions, see ante, p. 421. For a peculiar case of breach of the statute, see R. v. Russell, 6 Cr. App. R. 78.]

Sect. 38.—Fine and sureties.]—Whenever any person shall be convicted of any indictable misdemeanor punishable under this Act, the Court may, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any of the punishments by this Act authorised, fine the offender, and require him to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour; and in case of any felony punishable under this Act, the Court may, if it shall think fit, require the offender to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any punishment by this Act authorized; Provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this clause for not finding sureties for any period exceeding one year. [This clause was new law in 1861.]

Sect. 42.—Costs of prosecutions in England.]—Rep. 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10. See ante, pp. 267 et seq.

COUNTERFEITING BRITISH OR FOREIGN COIN.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99 (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 2.—The King's gold or silver coin.]—Whosoever shall falsely make or counterfeit any coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 3.]

Sect. 14.—The King's copper coin.]—Whosoever shall falsely make or counterfeit any coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current copper coin . . . shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . . [This provision re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 12. For the rest of the section, see post, p. 1098.]

Sect. 18.—Foreign gold and silver coin.]—Whosoever shall make or counterfeit any kind of coin not being the King's current gold or silver coin, but resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . . [This section re-enacts 37 G. 3, c. 126, s. 2.]

Sect. 22.—Other foreign coin.]—Whosoever shall falsely make or counterfeit any kind of coin not being the King's current coin, but resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any copper coin, or any other coin made of any metal or mixed metals of less value than the silver coin, of any foreign prince, state, or country, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . for the first offence to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one year, and for the second offence to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . . Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 69, s. 2, ante, p. 1091.)

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Making counterfeit coin, contrary to section 2 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, falsely made or counterfeited ten sovereigns and twenty florins, resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for the King's current coin.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 2; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

An indictment for counterfeiting foreign coin, or the King's copper coin, can be framed from the above form, with the necessary changes.

Felonies: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, ss. 14, 18; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

These offences are not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

It is rarely the case that the counterfeiting can be proved directly by positive evidence; it is usually made out by circumstantial evidence, such as finding the necessary coining tools in the defendant's house, together with some pieces of the counterfeit money in a finished, some in an unfinished state, or such other circumstances as may fairly warrant the jury in presuming that the defendant either counterfeited, or caused to be counterfeited, or was present aiding and abetting in counterfeiting the coin in question. Under the present statutes only the party who actually counterfeits would be the principal felon, and the others accessories before the fact, although triable as principals; see ante, p. 1089, post, tit. Accessories. Before the modern statutes which reduced the offence of coining from treason to felony, if several conspired to counterfeit the King's coin, and one of them actually did so in pursuance of the conspiracy, it was treason in all, and they might have all been indicted for counterfeiting the King's coin generally. 1 Hale, 214.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 30 (ante, p. 1089), the offence of counterfeiting is to be deemed complete, although the coin made or counterfeited is not in a fit state to be uttered, or the counterfeiting thereof is not finished or perfected. See R. v. Hermann, 4 Q. B. D. 284; 48 L. J. (M. C.) 106; 14 Cox, 279 (post, p. 1103), from which it would appear that the addition of a new milling to a genuine sovereign, which has been fraudulently filed at the edges so as to reduce its weight and destroy the original milling, is the counterfeiting of a sovereign, and within s. 2 (ante, p. 1091).

Any credible witness may prove the coin to be counterfeit, and it is not necessary for this purpose to produce any moneyer or other officer from the Mint. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 29 (ante, p. 1089).

If it becomes a question whether the coin which the counterfeit money was intended to imitate is the King's coin, it is not necessary to produce the proclamation to prove its legitimation; it is a mere question of fact to be left to the jury upon evidence of usage, reputation, etc. 1 Hale, 196, 212, 213. As to the proclamations and their proof, see ante, pp. 407, 411.

It is not necessary to prove that the counterfeit coin was uttered or attempted to be uttered. 1 Hale, 215, 229; 3 Co. Inst. 16; 1 East. P. C. 165.

But on a charge of counterfeiting coin evidence of uttering counterfeit coin is admissible to prove the scienter. R. v. Rowlands, 3 Cr. App. R. 224.

COLOURING, ETC., COIN TO RESEMBLE, ETC., BRITISH COIN.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99. (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 3.]—Whosoever shall gild or silver, or shall with any wash or materials capable of producing the colour or appearance of gold or of silver, or by any means whatsoever wash, case over, or colour any coin whatsoever resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin; or shall gild or silver, or shall, with any wash or materials capable of producing the colour or appearance of gold or of silver, or by any means whatsoever wash, case over, or colour any piece of silver or copper, or of coarse gold or coarse silver, or of any metal or mixture of metals respectively, being of a fit size and figure to be coined, and with intent that the same shall be coined into false and counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin; or shall gild, or shall, with any wash or materials capable of producing the colour or appearance of gold, or by any means whatsoever wash, case over, or colour any of the King's current silver coin, or file or in any manner alter such coin, with intent to make the same resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold coin; or shall gild or silver, or shall, with any wash or materials capable of producing the colour or appearance of gold or silver, or by any means whatsoever wash, case over, or colour any of the King's current copper coin, or file or in any manner alter such coin, with intent to make the same resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . .

[This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 4, with the additions italicized. The introduction of the words " capable of producing " and " by any means whatsoever " appears to remove the doubts expressed on 8 & 9 W. 3, c. 26, s. 4 (rep.), and 12 G. 2, c. 28 (rep.), as to whether the word " colouring " was confined to superficial application. See R. v. Lavey, 1 Leach, 153; 1 East, P. C. 166.]

Indictment for colouring the King's Coin. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 3.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1092.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Colouring coin, contrary to section 3 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, gilded [or washed, cased over or coloured] ten coins resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for the King's current half-sovereigns.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 3; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091). As to venue, see ante, pp. 37, 41.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the gilding, etc., or colouring, as stated in the indictment. In R. v. Case, 1 Leach, 154 n.; 1 East. P. C. 165, the defendant was apprehended in the act of making counterfeit shillings, by steeping round blanks, composed of brass and silver, in aqua fortis, none of which were finished, but exhibited the appearance of lead, though by rubbing they readily acquired the appearance of silver, and would pass current; a conviction under 12 G. 2, c. 28 (rep.), was held to be right. Under 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34 (rep.), it was held that where a wash or material was alleged to have been used by the defendant, it must be shown either from the application by the defendant, or from an examination of its properties, that it was capable of producing the colour of gold or silver. But an indictment, charging the use of such material, will be supported by proof of a colouring with gold itself. R. v. Turner, 2 Mood. 42.

IMPAIRING, ETC., BRITISH GOLD AND SILVER COIN.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99 (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 4.]—Whosoever shall impair, diminish, or lighten any of the King's current gold or silver coin, with intent that the coin so impaired, diminished, or lightened, may pass for the King's current gold or silver coin, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years. . . . [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 5, with the alterations italicized.]

Sect. 5.—Unlawful possession of filings and clippings of gold or silver coin.]—Whosoever shall unlawfully have in his custody or possession any filings or clippings, or any gold or silver bullion, or any gold or silver in dust, solution, or otherwise, which shall have been produced or obtained by impairing, diminishing, or lightening any of the King's current gold or silver coin, knowing the same to have been so produced or obtained, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . . [This section was new law in 1861.]

Indictment. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 4.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Impairing coin, contrary to section 4 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, impaired, diminished, or lightened ten pieces of the King's current sovereigns with intent that the coins so impaired, diminished, or lightened should pass for the King's current sovereigns.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 4; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

Evidence.

Prove the impairing, etc., by direct or presumptive evidence, as that the defendant was in possession of filings of impaired coin, or of the instruments for filing. Prove, also, the intent, by evidence from which it may be inferred by the jury; as, for instance, that the defendant attempted to pass the coin, or had passed other coin so impaired, or that he carried it about with him mixed with other money, particularly if it was not so impaired as apparently to affect its currency.

DEFACING BRITISH COIN.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99 (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 16.]—Whosoever shall deface any of the King's current gold, silver, or copper coin, by stamping thereon any names or words, whether such coin shall or shall not be thereby diminished or lightened, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one year, with or without hard labour. [This section re-enacts 16 & 17 Vict. c. 102, s. 1, with certain omissions.]

Sect. 17.—Defaced coin not legal tender.—Prosecution.]—No tender of payment in money made in any gold, silver, or copper coin so defaced by stamping, as in the last preceding section mentioned, shall be allowed to be a legal tender; and whosoever shall tender, utter, or put off any coin so defaced, shall, on conviction thereof, before two justices, be liable to forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding forty shillings: provided that it shall not be lawful for any person to proceed for any such last-mentioned penalty, without the consent, in England or Ireland, of his Majesty's attorney-general for England or Ireland respectively, or in Scotland of the lord advocate. [This section re-enacts 16 & 17 Vict. c. 102, s. 2.]

Indictment for defacing British Coin. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99. s. 16.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Defacing coin, contrary to section 16 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, defaced ten pieces of the King's current sovereigns by stamping thereon the words ——.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than one year, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 16. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant defaced the coin in question, by stamping on it any names or words, or both. Although the word "wilfully" is not in the present statute, it is submitted that the defacing to be punishable must be not merely accidental. It is not necessary to prove that the coin was thereby diminished or lightened. The defaced coin is no longer a legal tender, and any person uttering it is liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings, which, however, cannot be proceeded for without the consent of the attorney-general or lord advocate. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 17 (supra).

BUYING OR SELLING, ETC., COUNTERFEIT BRITISH COIN AT A LOWER VALUE.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99 (Coinage Offences Act. 1861). s. 6.—King's gold or silver coin.]—Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused), shall buy, sell, receive, pay, or put off, or offer to buy, sell, receive, pay, or put off, any false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, at or for a lower rate or value than the same imports or was apparently intended to import, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life: . . . and in any indictment for any such offence as in this section aforesaid it shall be sufficient to allege that the party accused did buy, sell, receive, pay, or put off, or did offer to buy, sell, receive, pay, or put off, the false or counterfeit coin at or for a lower rate or value than the same imports or was apparently intended to import, without alleging at or for what rate, price, or value the same was bought, sold, received, paid, or put off, or offered to be bought, sold, received, paid, or put off.

[The first part of this section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 6, with the addition of the words in italics to protect officers engaged in detecting offences against the coin. The latter part of the section was new in 1861, and was framed to get rid of the decisions in R. v. Joyce, Car. Supp. 184; 3 C. & P. 411 n.; R. v. Hedges, 3 C. & P. 410; and R. v. Wooldridge, 1 Leach, 307; 1 East, P. C. 179.

Sect. 14.—Copper coin.]—Whosoever . . . shall buy, sell, receive, pay, or put off, or offer to buy, sell, receive, pay, or put off, any false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current copper coin, at or for a lower rate of value than the same imports or was apparently intended to import, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . .

For other offences created by the section, see ante, p. 1092, post, p. 1109. [The section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 12, with the additions italicized.]

Indictment for buying or selling Counterfeit Gold or Silver British Coin at a Lower Rate than by its Denomination it imports. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 6.)

Statement of Offence.

Buying counterfeit coin, contrary to section 6 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861.

Particulars of Offence.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, without lawful authority or excuse, bought [or received or offered to buy or receive] ten counterfeit coins resembling, or apparently intended to resemble or pass for, the King's current florins, for a lower value than at the rate of two shillings for each coin.

As to the venue, see ante, pp. 37, 41, 1089. The indictment need not state at what rate the coin was bought, sold, etc.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 6; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

The indictment for an offence against 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 14, may be framed from the above form, with the substitution of copper for gold or silver, and change of the denomination. It seems also necessary to state the rate at which copper coin was sold. See R. v. Joyce, Car. Supp. 184.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 15; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant bought, etc., the counterfeit coin, as mentioned in the indictment. The proof of lawful authority or excuse for the act lies on the defendant.

It must also be proved that the coin was sold at a lower rate than it imports, but the precise rate at which it was sold need not now be stated in the indictment in the case of gold or silver coin. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 6 (supra).

IMPORTING OR EXPORTING COUNTERFEIT COIN.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99 (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 7.—Importing counterfeit of British gold or silver coin.]—Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused), shall import or receive into the United Kingdom from beyond the seas any false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 6, with additions italicized.

Sect. 8.—Exporting counterfeit British coin.]—Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused), shall export, or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat for the purpose of being exported from the United Kingdom, any false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. . . . [This section was new law in 1861. It appears to apply to counterfeit colonial coin. Greaves, Crim. Law Cons. Acts (2nd ed.), p. 324.]

Sect. 19.—Importing foreign counterfeit gold or silver coin.]—Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused), shall bring or receive into the United Kingdom any such false or counterfeit coin (i.e., any kind of coin not being the King's current gold or silver coin, s. 18) resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . . [This section re-enacts 37 G. 3, c. 126, s. 3, with the additions italicized.]

39 & 40 Vict. c. 36 (Customs Consolidation Act, 1876), s. 150.—Importation of base coin into certain colonies prohibited.]—Base or counterfeit coin is hereby absolutely prohibited to be imported or brought, either by sea or inland carriage or navigation, into the British possessions in America or the Mauritius.

Sect. 151.]—Act to extend to British possessions abroad.

Indictment for importing Counterfeit Gold or Silver Coin. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 7, ante, p. 1099.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Importing counterfeit coin, contrary to section 7 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, without lawful authority or excuse, imported or received into the United Kingdom from beyond the seas ten counterfeit coins resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for ten of the King's current gold coins called sovereigns, knowing the said coins to be counterfeit.

Felony 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 7. See the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant imported the counterfeit coin. The terms of s. 7 appear to include importation from any place beyond the seas, whether within or without the King's dominions; but see 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 87; 1 East, P. C. 175. Prove also the defendant's guilty knowledge: for unless that be averred in the indictment, and proved, it is no offence. 1 Hale, 228; 1 East, P. C. 175. The proof of lawful authority or excuse (if any) lies on the defendant. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 7 (ante, p. 1099).

UTTERING COUNTERFEIT COIN.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99 (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 9.—Uttering counterfeit British gold or silver coin.]—Whosoever shall tender, utter or put off any false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one year, with or without hard labour. . . . [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 7.]

Sect. 10.—Uttering counterfeit British gold or silver coin accompanied by possession of other counterfeit coin, or followed by a second uttering.]—Whosoever shall tender, utter, or put off any false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, and shall, at the time of such tendering, uttering, or putting off, have in his custody or possession, besides the false or counterfeit coin so tendered, uttered, or put off, any other piece of false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, or shall, either on the day of such tendering, uttering, or putting off, or within the space of ten days then next ensuing, tender, utter or put off any false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. . . . [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 7, with minor alterations.] Sect. 11.]—See post, p. 1107.

Sect. 12.—Uttering after former conviction.]—Whosoever having been convicted, either before or after the passing of this Act, of any such misdemeanor or crime and offence as in any of the last three preceding sections mentioned, or of any felony or high crime and offence against this or any former Act relating to the coin, shall afterwards commit any of the misdemeanors or crimes and offences in any of the said sections mentioned, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, ss. 7, 8, with the alterations italicized.]

Sect. 13.—Uttering spurious coin, medals, etc., as current coin.]—Whosoever shall, with intent to defraud, tender, utter or put off as or for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, any coin not being such current gold or silver coin, or any medal or piece of metal or mixed metals, resembling in size, figure and colour the current coin as for which the same shall be so tendered, uttered, or put off, such coin, medal, or piece of metal or mixed metals so tendered, uttered, or put off being of less value than the current coin as for which the same shall be so tendered, uttered or put off, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one year, with or without hard labour. . . . [This section was new law in 1861. The defendant knowingly passed as and for a half-sovereign a medal of about the same size and colour as a half-sovereign. On the obverse side was Queen Victoria's head, as on a half-sovereign, but with a different inscription. The coin itself was not produced to the jury, and there was no evidence as to the appearance of the reverse side. It was held that there was some evidence that the medal was one, in size, figure and colour, resembling a half-sovereign. R. v. Robinson, L. & C. 604; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 176.]

Sect. 14.]—See ante, pp. 1091, 1098, post, p. 1109.

Sect. 15.—Uttering counterfeit British copper coin.]—Whosoever shall tender, utter or put off any false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current copper coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, . . . (as to possession, see post, p. 1107), shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one year, with or without hard labour. . . . [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 12.]

Sect. 20.—Uttering foreign counterfeit gold or silver coin.]—Whosoever shall tender, utter or put off any such false or counterfeit coin (as mentioned in s. 19, ante, p. 1100) resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour. [This section re-enacts 37 G. 3, c. 126, s. 4.]

Sect. 21.—Uttering foreign counterfeit gold or silver coin after former conviction.]—Whosoever, having been so convicted as in the last preceding section mentioned, shall afterwards commit the like offence of tendering, uttering or putting off any such false or counterfeit coin as aforesaid, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement (see ante, p. 243); and whosoever, having been so convicted of a second offence, shall afterwards commit the like offence of tendering, uttering or putting off any such false or counterfeit coin as aforesaid, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 37 G. 3, c. 126, s. 4.]

Indictment for uttering Counterfeit British Gold or Silver Coin.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 9, ante, p. 1101.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Uttering counterfeit coin, contrary to section 9 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, at a public-house called the Red Lion, in the county of ——, uttered a counterfeit sovereign, knowing the same to be counterfeit.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than one year, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 9. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

Evidence.

1. Prove the tendering, uttering or putting off the sovereign in question, and prove it to be a base and counterfeit sovereign. R. v. Wooldridge, 1 Leach, 307. Where a good shilling was given to a boy for fruit, and he put it into his mouth, under pretence of trying whether it was good, and then taking a bad shilling out of his mouth instead of it, returned it to the prosecutor, saying it was not good; this (which is called ringing the changes) was held to be an uttering within the meaning of 16 G. 2, c. 28 (rep.). R. v. Franks, 2 Leach, 644.

It is submitted that to be within the statute the uttering must at least amount to a holding forth of the thing uttered as current coin for the purpose of currency, and that it would not include use of a false coin as a means of cheating at play. See R. v. McMahon [1894] 13 N. S. W. Rep. Law, at p. 137, Foster, J.; and cf. R. v. Shukard, R. & R. 200.

The giving of a piece of counterfeit coin in charity was held not to be an uttering within 2 W. 4. c. 34, s. 7 (rep.), although the party knew it to be counterfeit; for that there must be some intention to defraud. R. v. Page, 8 C. & P. 122; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 362 n. But this case was doubted by Mr. Greaves; see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 363 n; and appears to have been treated as erroneous. See R. v. Ion, 2 Den. 475, 484, Alderson, B., and Anon., 1 Cox, 250, where the giving of a counterfeit coin to a woman, as the price of connection with her, was held to be "uttering."

It is an "uttering and putting off," as well as a "tendering," if the counterfeit coin is offered in payment, though it is refused by the person to whom it is offered. R. v. Welch, 2 Den. 78; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 101: see R. v. Radford, 1 Den. 59: R. v. Ion, 2 Den. 475; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 166.

As there are no accessories in misdemeanors, all persons who are engaged in the common purpose of uttering counterfeit coin, although the uttering in pursuance of that common purpose be by one only of such persons in the absence of the others, may be jointly convicted, or any of such persons may be separately convicted, of that offence of uttering. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 8 (post, tit. "Accessories"): R. v. Greenwood, 2 Den. 453; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 127: see R. v. Hurse, 2 M. & Rob. 360. These decisions overrule a series of cases in which it had been held that persons not present at the actual uttering could not be convicted of it, unless they were within such a distance as to be able to render assistance to the actual utterer, and which appear to have been decided without consideration of the distinction between felonies and misdemeanors as to principals and accessories, see post, tit. "Accessories."

A genuine sovereign, which has been fraudulently filed at the edges to such an extent as to reduce the weight by one twenty-fourth part, and to remove the milling entirely, or almost entirely, and to which a new milling has been added in order to restore the appearance of the coin, is a false and counterfeit coin within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 9. R. v. Hermann, 4 Q. B. D. 284; 48 L. J. (M. C.) 106.

A coin made by splitting two genuine coins, and joining the heads together so as to make a double-headed coin, has been held counterfeit. R. v. McMahon [1894] 15 N. S. W. Rep. Law, 131, 136.

2. Prove that the defendant knew it to be a counterfeit sovereign at the time he uttered it. This, of course, must be done by circumstantial evidence. (See ante, pp. 360, 396). If, for instance, it is proved that he uttered, either on the same day or at other times, whether before or after the uttering charged, base money, either of the same or a different denomination, to the same or to a different person, or had other pieces of base money about him when he uttered the counterfeit money in question: this will be evidence from which the jury may presume a guilty knowledge. R. v. Whiley, 2 Leach, 983: R. v. Foster, Dears. 456; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 134. (See ante, p. 360.)

The mere fact that the defendant ran away when followed by a constable after the uttering is not enough per se to warrant a conviction. R. v. Lee, 72 J. P. 253; 1 Cr. App. R. 5. Nor is the admission of a previous conviction. Id.

Indictment for uttering Counterfeit British Coin, having at the same time Counterfeit Coin in Possession. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 10, ante, p. 1101.)

As in the last precedent, adding "and having in his custody or possession at the time of such uttering, ten other counterfeit half-crowns."

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 10. As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, Id. s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

Evidence.

Prove the offence of uttering as directed ante, p. 1103, and prove that the defendant at the same time had about him one or more pieces of the counterfeit money specified in the indictment. The guilty knowledge may reasonably be implied from the possession of the other counterfeit coin. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99,

s. 1 (ante, p. 1088), enacts that "where the having any matter in the custody or possession of any person is mentioned in this Act, it shall include not only the having of it by himself in his personal custody or possession, but also the knowingly and wilfully having it in the actual custody or possession of any other person." Even prior to this enactment it had been held that where two persons went to a shop, and one of them went in and uttered a bad piece of money, having no more in her possession, and the other stayed outside the shop, having other bad money, both might be convicted, the uttering and the possession being joint; R. v. Skerrit, 2 C. & P. 427; and that where one of two persons in company (or, as it seems, apart from each other) utters counterfeit coin, and other counterfeit coin is found on the other, both are guilty of the aggravated offence of acting in concert, and both knowing of the possession. R. v. Gerrish, 2 M. & Rob. 219. See R. v. Rogers, 2 Mood. 85: R. v. Williams, C. & Mar. 259 (post, p. 1108): R. v. Greenwood, R. v. Hurse (ante, p. 1104).

Indictment for uttering twice within Ten days. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 10, ante, p. 1101.)

As in the last example but one, adding "and having on the said day [or on the —— day of —— (within ten days of the first uttering charged)] at a public-house called the Nag's Head, in the county of ——, uttered a counterfeit florin."

The double uttering must be charged in one count of the indictment. R. v. Tandy, 2 Leach, 833: see R. v. Martin, 2 Leach, 923.

Misdemeanor: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 10. See the last precedent.

On a conviction for two separate offences of uttering, in two counts, one judgment for two years imprisonment, under s. 10, would be bad. R. v. Robinson, 1 Mood. 413. But a sentence of one year's imprisonment, under s. 9, may in such a case be passed for each offence, and the commencement of the second year's imprisonment may be postponed until the termination of the first. Id.

Evidence.

Prove the two offences as directed ante, p. 1103, and prove them to have been committed on the same day, or within the space of ten days according as it is alleged in the indictment.

Indictment for a Subsequent Uttering, after a Previous Conviction, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, ss. 9, 10, 11, for Uttering. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 12, ante, p. 1101.)

As in the precedent on p. 1103, then adding "A. B. has been previously convicted of a misdemeanor under section 9 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861, on the —— day of ——, at ——."

A similar provision is made by s. 21 (ante, p. 1102) as to uttering foreign gold or silver coin. An indictment for the latter offence can be framed from the above precedent.

To commit any of the misdemeanors mentioned in ss. 9, 10 (ante, p. 1101), or s. 11 (post, p. 1107), after a conviction for any one of those offences respectively, is felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 12; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106.)

Evidence.

Prove the subsequent offence, as directed under the last three precedents. Before the prisoner has pleaded guilty or is found guilty of the subsequent offence, the previous conviction cannot be given in evidence, except under the provisions of s. 1 (f) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (ante, pp. 458, 466), or under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 37 (ante, p. 1090). R. v. Martin, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 214; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 31 (overruling on this point R. v. Goodwin, 10 Cox, 534). It is not necessary that any judgment should have been pronounced against the prisoner on the first conviction. R. v. Blaby [1894] 2 Q. B. 170; 18 Cox, 5. If the prisoner pleads guilty, or is found guilty of the subsequent offence, prove the former conviction in manner directed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 37 (ante, p. 1090), and the identity of the prisoner with the person described in the former conviction. The course of proceedings at the trial as to arraignment, etc., is also regulated by that section. R. v. Martin, supra.

If the prisoner is found guilty of the subsequent offence, and then upon being asked whether he has been previously convicted, denies that he has, and the jury after inquiry find that he has not been so previously convicted, he is entitled to be acquitted of the whole charge laid against him in the indictment and cannot be convicted, under s. 9, of the misdemeanor of uttering counterfeit coin. R. v. Thomas, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 141; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 42. He may, however, after such acquittal be indicted for the misdemeanor alone, and cannot to such indictment plead *autrefois acquit. POSSESSING COUNTERFEIT COIN.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99 (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 11.—Having in possession three or more pieces of counterfeit British gold or silver coin.]—Whosoever shall have in his custody or possession three or more pieces of false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current gold or silver coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, and with intent to utter or put off the same or any of them, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude. . . . [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 8, with the additions italicized.]

Sect. 15.—Having in possession three or more pieces of counterfeit British copper coin.]—Whosoever . . . shall have in his custody or possession three or more pieces of false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the King's current copper coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, and with intent to utter or put off the same or any of them, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime or offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding one year, with or without hard labour. . . . [For rest of section, see ante, p. 1102. The above provision re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 12, with the additions italicized.]

Sect. 23.—Having in possession more than five pieces of counterfeit foreign coin.]—Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereas shall lie on the party accused), shall have in his custody or possession any greater number of pieces than five pieces of false or counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, or any such copper or other coin as in the last preceding section (s. 22, ante, p. 1091) mentioned, shall, on conviction thereof before any justice of the peace, forfeit and lose all such false and counterfeit coin, which shall be cut in pieces and destroyed by order of such justice, and shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum of money not exceeding forty shillings nor less than ten shillings for every such piece of false and counterfeit coin which shall be found in the custody or possession of such person, one moiety to the informer, and the other moiety to the poor of the parish where such offence shall be committed; and in case any such penalty shall not be forthwith paid, it shall be lawful for any such justice to commit the person who shall have been adjudged to pay the same to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for the space of three months, or until such penalty shall be paid.

[This section was framed from 37 G. 3, c. 126, s. 6, and 43 G. 3, c. 139, s. 6, with the alterations italicized.]

Indictment for Possession of Counterfeit British Gold or Silver Coin.
(24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 11, ante, p. 1107.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Possessing counterfeit coin, contrary to section 11 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, had in his custody or possession three [" three or more "] pieces of counterfeit coin resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for the King's current half-crowns, knowing them to be counterfeit and with intent to utter them or any of them.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than five nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 11; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to fine, recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091). This offence, after a previous conviction for the like offence, or for any of the misdemeanors mentioned in ss. 9 and 10, or for any felony against 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, or any former Act relating to the coin, is felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 12; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239). An indictment for that offence may be easily framed from this and the last precedent (ante, p. 1106).

An indictment for possessing counterfeit British copper coin may be in the same form, with substitution of the word " copper," and the denomination, for the words " gold " or " silver."

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than one year, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 15 (ante, p. 1107). As to fine and recognizances, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant had in his custody or possession three or more pieces of counterfeit gold or silver coin. They will be deemed to be in his custody or possession if he has them in his personal custody or possession, or knowingly and wilfully has them in the actual custody or possession of any other person, or knowingly and wilfully has them in any dwelling-house or other building, lodging, apartment, field, or other place, open or inclosed, whether belonging to or occupied by himself or not, and whether they be had for his own use or benefit, or for that of another. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 1 (ante, p. 1088). So, also, when pieces of counterfeit coin are found on one of two persons acting in guilty concert, and both knowing of the possession, both are guilty under this section. R. v. Rogers, 2 Mood. 85; R. v. Williams, C. & Mar. 259 (see ante, p. 1105). Prove also the defendant's knowledge that the coin was counterfeit, and his intent to utter it. These, of course, can only be proved by circumstances; as, for instance, by evidence of former utterings, or by the fact of the defendant's having in his possession a large quantity of counterfeit coin of like date, and made in the same mould, wrapped up in separate papers, and distributed in different pockets of his dress. R. v. Jarvis, Dears. 552; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 30. See R. v. Fuller, R. & R. 308.

At common law, it was no offence to have possession of counterfeit coin with intent to utter it; R. v. Stewart, R. & R. 288: R. v. Heath, Id. 184; but to procure it with that intent was a misdemeanor. R. v. Fuller, R. & R. 308: see R. v. Roberts, Dears. 539; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 17 (post, p. 1111): cf. Dugdale v. Reg., Dears. 64. And proof that the defendant was the coiner was an answer to an indictment for the common law misdemeanor of procuring (see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 358); but this would not be so under the present statute.

MAKING, ETC., COINING TOOLS.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99. (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 14.—Tools for counterfeiting British copper coin.]—. . . Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused), shall knowingly make or mend, or begin or proceed to make or mend, or buy or sell, or have in his custody or possession, any instrument, tool, or engine adapted and intended for the counterfeiting any of the King's current copper coin . . . shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . . [For other offences created by this section, see ante, pp. 1093, 1098. The section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 12.]

Sect. 24.—Tools for counterfeiting British gold or silver coin, or any foreign coin.]—Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused), shall knowingly make or mend, or begin or proceed to make or mend, or buy or sell, or have in his custody or possession, any puncheon, counter-puncheon, matrix, stamp, die, pattern or mould, in or upon which there shall be made or impressed, or which will make or impress, or shall be adapted and intended to make or impress the figure, stamp, or apparent resemblance of both or either of the sides of any of the King's current gold or silver coin, or of any coin of any foreign prince, state or country (see post, p. 1112), or any part or parts of both or either of such sides; or shall make or mend, or begin or proceed to make or mend, or shall buy or sell, or have in his custody or possession, any edger, edging or other tool, collar, instrument or engine adapted and intended for the marking of coin round the edges with letters, grainings or other marks or figures apparently resembling those on the edges of any such coin as in this section aforesaid, knowing the same to be so adapted and intended as aforesaid; or shall make or mend, or begin or proceed to make or mend, or shall buy or sell, or have in his custody or possession, any press for coinage, or any cutting engine for cutting by force of a screw, or of any other contrivance, round blanks out of gold, silver, or other metal or mixture of metals, or any other machine, knowing such press to be a press for coinage or knowing such engine or machine to have been used, or to be intended to be used, for or in order to the false making or counterfeiting of any such coin as in this section aforesaid, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section re-enacts 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 10, with the additions italicized. A galvanic battery is a machine within this section. R. v. Gover, 9 Cox, 282.]

Indictment for making, etc., a Puncheon, etc., for coining Gold and Silver Coin. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 24.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Making a puncheon, contrary to section 24 of the Coinage Offences Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, without lawful authority or excuse, knowingly made or began to make, or had in his custody or possession, a puncheon, in and upon which there was then impressed the apparent resemblance of one of the sides, or a part of one of the sides, of the King's current half-sovereigns.

As to the words "without lawful authority or excuse" in the precedent, see R. v. Harvey, (post, p. 1112).

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, if the offence relates to British current gold or silver coin or any foreign coin, and penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, if it relates to British current copper coin; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, ss. 14, 24; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, p. 238); or in either case, imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, p. 238). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 38 (ante, p. 1091).

These offences are not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant made, etc., a puncheon, etc., as stated in the indictment; and prove that the instrument in question is a puncheon or other instrument described in the indictment, and included in the statute. The words in the statute "upon which there shall be made or impressed," etc., apply to the puncheon, which, being convex, bears upon it the figure of the coin; and the words "which will make and impress," etc., apply to the counter-puncheon, etc., which, being concave, will make and impress. Although it is more accurate to describe the instruments according to their actual use, even under earlier statutes they might be described either way. R. v. Lennard, 1 Leach, 85, 90; 1 East, P. C. 170; 2 W. Bl. 807. It is not necessary that the instrument should be capable of making an impression of the whole of one side of the coin; for the words "or any part or parts," etc., are introduced into this statute, and consequently the difficulty in R. v. Sutton, 2 Str. 1074, where the instrument was capable of making the sceptre only, cannot now occur. And on an indictment for making a mould "intended to make and impress the figure and apparent resemblance of the obverse side" of a shilling, it is sufficient to prove that the prisoner made the mould, and a part of the impression, though he had not completed the entire impression. R. v. Foster, 7 C. & P. 495. It is not necessary to prove, under this branch of the statute, the intent of the defendant; the mere similitude is treated by the legislature as evidence of the intent; neither is it essential to show that money was actually made with the instrument in question. R. v. Ridgeley, 1 East, P. C. 171, 172. The proof of lawful authority or excuse (if any) for the act lies on the defendant. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 24. See Dickins v. Gill [1896] 2 Q. B. 310; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 187.

Where the defendant employed a die-sinker to make, for a pretended innocent purpose, a die calculated to make shillings: and the die-sinker, suspecting fraud, informed the authorities at the Mint, and under their directions made the die for the purpose of detecting the prisoner; it was held that the die-sinker was an innocent agent, and the defendant was rightly convicted as a principal under 2 W. 4, c. 34, s. 10 (rep.). R. v. Bannen, 2 Mood. 309; 1 C. & K. 295.

The making and procuring dies and other materials, with intent to use them in coining Peruvian half-dollars in England, not in order to utter them here, but by way of trying whether the apparatus would answer before sending it out to Peru, to be there used in making the counterfeit coin for circulation in that country, was held to be an indictable misdemeanor at common law. R. v. Roberts, Dears. 539; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 17 (see ante, p. 1109). As to the liability of a wife for implements found in a room occupied by her husband, see R. v. Boober, 4 Cox, 272.

Indictment for having a Puncheon, etc., in Possession. (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 24, ante, p. 1109.)

The charge of having the tool in his custody or possession may be included in an indictment for making, as in the last example. In that example the prisoner's possession is averred to have been "without lawful authority or excuse"; it is sufficient, however, if the possession is averred to have been "without lawful excuse," on the ground that there can be no authority which would not also be an excuse, and therefore to negative excuse is to negative authority. R. v. Harvey, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 284; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 63. As to the venue, see ante, pp. 37, 41, 1091.

Felony: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 24. See the last precedent.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106.

Possessing coining tools with intent to use them seems not to be an offence at common law. R. v. Heath, R. & R. 184.

Evidence.

Prove the custody or possession, that is, that the defendant had the instrument either in his personal custody or possession, or in the actual custody or possession of any other person, or in some dwelling-house or building, lodging, apartment, field or other place, open or inclosed, whether belonging to or occupied by himself or not, and whether the instrument was had for his own use or benefit, or for that of another. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 1 (ante, p. 1088); see R. v. Rogers, 2 Mood. 85 (ante, p. 1108). To prove the guilty knowledge, evidence may be given of the defendant's having previously uttered counterfeit money. R. v. Weeks, L. & C. 18; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 141. The guilty knowledge required is the being knowingly in possession of the instrument contrary to the provisions of the statute, i.e., without lawful authority or excuse. A guilty intention in reference to the use or possession of the instrument is not necessary under the statute. R. v. Harvey, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 284; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 63; 11 Cox, 662. Where the prisoner ordered of a die-sinker two dies having an apparent resemblance to the sides of a sovereign, whereupon the die-sinker communicated with the police, who in consequence of orders from the Mint told him to furnish the dies to the prisoner, which he accordingly did; it was held that these facts constituted no lawful authority or excuse for the prisoner's possession of the dies. Id. The police, entering prisoner's house in his absence, took from some persons inside a plaster-of-Paris mould of a half-crown, part of which was still wet, after resistance on their part, and an attempt by them to destroy the mould. Materials suitable for melting lead and making plaster-of-Paris moulds were found in various parts of the house. Shortly afterwards the prisoner came in. He had passed a bad half-crown thirteen days before, but there was no evidence to show that it was made in the mould seized. It was held, that this evidence warranted the conviction of the prisoner for knowingly and without lawful excuse feloniously having in his custody and possession a mould on which was impressed the figure and apparent resemblance of the obverse side of a half-crown. R. v. Weeks (supra).

CONVEYING COINING TOOLS OR COINS OUT OF THE MINT.

Statute.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 99 (Coinage Offences Act, 1861), s. 25.]—Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused), shall knowingly convey out of any of his Majesty's Mints any puncheon, counter-puncheon, matrix, stamp, die, pattern, mould, edger, edging or other tool, collar, instrument, press, or engine used or employed in or about the coining of coin, or any useful part of any of the several matters aforesaid, or any coin, bullion, metal, or mixture of metals, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of felony, and in Scotland of a high crime and offence, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life. . . . [This section is taken from 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 34, s. 11, with alterations italicized.]

MAKING, ETC., MEDALS RESEMBLING CURRENT COIN.

Statute.

46 & 47 Vict. c. 45 (Counterfeit Medal Act, 1883), s. 2.—Punishment for making, etc., medals resembling current gold or silver coin.]—If any person without due authority or excuse (see R. v. Harvey, ante, p. 1112) (the proof whereof shall lie on the person accused), makes or has in his possession for sale, or offers for sale, or sells, any medal, cast, coin, or any other like thing made wholly or partially of metal or any metallic combination and resembling in size, figure, and colour any of the King's current gold or silver coin, or having thereon a device resembling any device on any of the King's current gold or silver coin, or being so formed that it can by gilding, silvering, colouring, washing, or other like process, be so dealt with as to resemble any of the King's current gold or silver coin, he shall be guilty, in England and Ireland, of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland of a crime and offence, and on being convicted thereof shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one year, with or without hard labour. (See also 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 13 (ante, p. 1101).)

Sect. 3.—Interpretation.]—"The King's current gold or silver coin" includes any gold or silver coin in or for any of His Majesty's Mints, or lawfully current by virtue of any proclamation or otherwise in any part of his Majesty's dominions, whether within the United Kingdom or otherwise. (See ante, p. 1088.)

60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 8 (Criminal Libel Act, 1819), s. 1.—Search for and seizure after verdict of blasphemous and certain kinds of seditious libel.]—In every case in which any verdict or judgment by default shall be had against any person for composing, printing, or publishing any blasphemous libel, or any seditious libel tending to bring into hatred or contempt the person of his Majesty or the government and constitution of the United Kingdom as by law established, or either house of parliament, or to excite his Majesty's subjects to attempt the alteration of any matter in Church or State as by law established, otherwise than by lawful means, it shall be lawful for the judge or the Court before whom or in which such verdict shall have been given, or the Court in which such judgment by default shall be had, to make an order for the seizure and carrying away and detaining in safe custody, in such manner as shall be directed in such order, all copies of the libel which shall be in the possession of the person against whom such verdict or judgment shall have been had, or in the possession of any other person named in the order for his use, evidence upon oath having been previously given to the satisfaction of such court or judge, that a copy or copies of the said libel is or are in the possession of such other person for the use of the person against whom such verdict or judgment shall have been had as aforesaid; and in every such case it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, or for any constable or other peace officer, acting under any such order, or for any person or persons acting with or in aid of any such justice of the peace, constable, or other peace officer, to search for any copies of such libel in any house, building, or other place whatsoever belonging to the person against whom any such verdict or judgment shall have been had, or to any other person so named, in whose possession any copies of any such libel, belonging to the person against whom any such verdict or judgment shall have been had, shall be; and in case admission shall be refused or not obtained within a reasonable time after it shall have been first demanded, to enter by force by day into any such house, building, or place whatsoever, and to carry away all copies of the libel there found, and to detain the same in safe custody until the same shall be restored under the provisions of this Act, or disposed of according to any further order made in relation thereto.

Sect. 2.—Disposal of copies seized.]—If in any such case as aforesaid judgment shall be arrested, or if, after judgment shall have been entered, the same shall be reversed upon any writ of error, all copies so seized shall be forthwith returned to the person or persons from whom the same shall have been so taken as aforesaid, free of all charge and expense, and without the payment of any fees whatever; and in every case in which final judgment shall be entered upon the verdict so found against the person or persons charged with having composed, printed, or published such libel, then all copies so seized shall be disposed of as the Court in which such judgment shall be given shall order and direct.

Sect. 4.—Punishment.]—If any person shall be legally convicted of having composed, printed, or published any blasphemous libel or any such seditious libel as aforesaid, and shall after being so convicted offend a second time, and be thereof legally convicted before any commissioner of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or in his Majesty's Court of King's Bench, such person may, on such second conviction, be adjudged, at the discretion of the Court, to suffer such punishment as may now by law be inflicted in cases of high misdemeanors. . . . [So much of this section as inflicted banishment on a second conviction was repealed by 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 73, s. 1.]

Sect. 7.—Certificate of conviction.]—The clerk of assize, clerk of the peace, or other clerk or officer of the Court having the custody of the records where any offender shall have been convicted of having composed, printed, or published any blasphemous or seditious libel, shall, upon request of the prosecutor on his Majesty's behalf, make out and give a certificate in writing, signed by him, containing the effect and substance only (omitting the formal part) of every indictment and conviction of such offender, to the justices of assize, oyer and terminer, great sessions, or gaol delivery, where such offender or offenders shall be indicted for any second offence of composing, printing, or publishing any blasphemous or seditious libel; for which certificate six shillings and eightpence and no more shall be paid, and which certificate shall be sufficient proof of the conviction of such offender.

Indictment for a Seditious Libel (Common Law).

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Seditious Libel.

Commencement as ante, p. 1092.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, seditiously wrote and published or caused or procured to be written and published a seditious libel concerning his Majesty's Government, containing the following seditious matters:

[Set out the matter alleged to be seditious.]

It has been held in R. v. McHugh [1901] 2 Ir. Rep. 369, that the words "seditious" and "seditiously" are not essential.

Misdemeanor: fine and imprisonment. 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 8, s. 4 (ante, p. 1114). As to the treatment of persons sentenced to imprisonment for seditious libel, see 40 & 41 Vict. c. 21, s. 40; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 41, s. 6 (ante, p. 1116). The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) seems to apply to seditious libel.

It seems that no prosecution of persons concerned in the publication of a seditious libel ("any libel") appearing in a newspaper, as defined by 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 1 (post, p. 1240) and 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 1 (post, p. 1241), may be instituted without the order of a judge of the High Court in chambers. See 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 8 (post, p. 1242).

The offence of composing, printing, or publishing blasphemous, or seditious, or defamatory libels, is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Sedition defined.]—Sedition, whether by words spoken or written, or by conduct, is a misdemeanor indictable at common law, punishable by fine and imprisonment. See Stroud's case, 3 St. Tr. 235; and cf. 22 St. Tr. 477 n. It embraces all those practices, whether by word, deed, or writing, which fall short of high treason (1 Hale, 77), but directly tend or have for their object to excite discontent or dissatisfaction: to excite ill-will between different classes of the King's subjects; to create public disturbance, or to lead to civil war; to bring into hatred or contempt the sovereign or the government, the laws or constitution of the realm, and generally all endeavours to promote public disorder; R. v. Fussell, 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 723; 3 Cox, 291: R. v. Lovett, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1177, Littledale, J.: R. v. O'Brien, 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 571, 591 n., Crampton, J.: R. v. Sullivan, R. v. Pigott, 11 Cox, 44, 45, 51, 60, Fitzgerald, J.: and see 33 St. Tr. 342, 394; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 751; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) p. 70; or to incite people to unlawful associations, or assemblies, insurrections, breaches of the peace, or forcible obstruction of the execution of the law, or to use any form of physical force in any public matter connected with the state. R. v. Jones, 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 783, Wilde, C.J.: R. v. O'Donnell, 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 637, Erle, J.: R. v. Feargus O'Connor, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1352, 1364: R. v. Bronterre O'Brien, Id. 1341, 1343, Coleridge, J.: R. v. Aldred, 22 Cox, 1; 74 J. P. 55, Coleridge, J. But it would seem that a document published in this country, which is calculated to disturb the government of some foreign country, is not a seditious libel, nor punishable as a libel at all. R. v. Antonelli, 70 J. P. 4. And the definition does not prevent candid, full, and free discussion of any public matter, which is the right of every citizen, unless the discussion takes place under circumstances calculated or intended to incite tumult; R. v. Collins, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1149; 9 C. & P. 456; or the statements made are an appeal to the passions of the hearers and an incitement to violence or outrage. R. v. Burdett, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 3 B. & Ald. 717. Thus a publication to Indian students in England, advocating the principle that political assassination is no murder and glorifying as a martyr in the cause of Indian independence an Indian student who murdered Sir Curzon Wyllie at a conversazione, was held a seditious libel, R. v. Aldred, supra. But a writer may criticize or censure the conduct of the servants of the Crown or the acts of the government,—he can do it freely and liberally, but it must be without malignity, and not imputing corrupt or malicious motives, and avoiding defamation, obscenity or blasphemy; he may also freely criticize the proceedings of courts of justice and of individual judges. The law does not seek to put any narrow construction on the expressions used, and only interferes when plainly and deliberately the limits are passed of frank and candid and honest discussion. R. v. Sullivan, R. v. Pigott, supra. These cases were followed and approved in R. v. Burns, 16 Cox, 355, Cave, J. Exciting ill-will between different classes of his Majesty's subjects may amount to sedition; whether it does so or not in any particular case is a question for the jury after taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case. R. v. Burns, supra: and see R. v. Aldred, supra. Political writings and words may be classed under three heads: those which are overt acts of treason; those which are seditious; and those which are allowable and justifiable. We have seen what political writings and words constitute overt acts of high treason (ante, p. 1065). On the other hand, a man may lawfully discuss and criticize the measures adopted by the King and his ministers for the government of the country, provided he does it fairly, temperately, with decency and respect, and without imputing to them any corrupt or improper motive. See R. v. Lambert & Perry, 2 Camp. 398: R. v. Aldred, supra. All political writings and words between these extremes may be deemed seditious. As, for instance, if a man curses the King, wishes him ill, gives out scandalous stories concerning him (see R. v. Harvey (a), 2 L. J. (K. B.) 4; 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 2 B. & C. 257), or does anything that may lessen him in the esteem of his subjects, may weaken his government, or may raise jealousies between him and his people; or if he denies the King's right to the throne, in common and unadvised discourse (for if it is by advisedly speaking, it amounts to præmunire, 6 Anne, c. 41, s. 2, ante, p. 1114); all these are sedition. 4 Bl. Com. 423. In R. v. Tutchin (14 St. Tr. 1095; Holt, 424), Lord Holt said, that "if men shall not be called to account for possessing the people with an ill opinion of the government, no government can subsist; nothing can be worse to any government than to endeavour to procure animosities as to the management of it; this has always been looked upon as a crime, and no government can be safe unless it be punished." And Lord Ellenborough, in R. v. Cobbett, 29 St. Tr. 1, 49; Holt on Libel (2nd ed.), 114; Starkie on Libel (6th ed.) 653, said that if a publication is calculated to alienate the affections of the people, by bringing the government into disesteem, whether the expedient resorted to be ridicule or obloquy, the writer, publisher, etc., are punishable. And whether the defendant really intended by his publication to alienate the affections of the people from the government, or not, is not material; if the publication is calculated to have that effect, it is a seditious libel. R. v. Burdett, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 4 B. & Ald. 95: R. v. Aldred, 22 Cox, 1; 74 J. P. 55. It is also a seditious libel if published with an intention (or if calculated, cf. R. v. Grant, 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 507: R. v. Hicklin, L. R. 3 Q. B. 360) to inflame the minds of the labourers and working people, and to incite them to acts of violence, riot, and disorder, and to the burning and destruction of corn, machines, and other property. R. v. Cobbett, 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 789, 899, Tenterden, C.J. Liability depends not on the truth of the words used nor on the motive of the publisher, but on the question whether the words used, having regard to the audience addressed, were calculated to promote public disorder, physical force or violence in a matter of state. R. v. Aldred, supra. Coleridge, J. To impute corruption to judges has been said to be seditious. R. v. Lord George Gordon, 22 St. Tr. 177. But it would seem to be properly punishable as contempt of court or defamatory libel. (See post, pp. 1215, 1238). So also as to a libel on the clergy of a diocese. See R. v. Williams, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1291; 5 B. & Ald. 595: R. v. Harvey, 2 L. J. (K. B.) 4; 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 2 B. & C. 257, where the indictment is framed without the word "seditious." But statements about the King which if published of subjects would be defamatory appear to be regarded as seditious and incapable of justification. Ex parte William O'Brien. 12 L. R. Ir. 29; 15 Cox, 180: R. v. Duffy [1846] 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 303; 19 Ir. L. R. 329.

Form of indictment.]—1. The indictment should charge a publication; but there are indications of judicial opinion that merely composing or writing a seditious libel is an offence, even if the libel is not afterwards published. See R. v. Burdett, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1, 122, 138; 4 B. & Ald. 95. But the publisher is equally liable with the writer of the libel. R. v. Aldred, supra. As to venue, see post, p. 1120.

2. The seditious parts of the publication relied on should be set out correctly. If the libel is in a foreign language, it should be set out in such language verbatim, together with a correct translation. Zenobio v. Axtell, 6 T. R. 162: R. v. Peltier, 28 St. Tr. 529. See, however, 5 & 6 G. 5, c. 90, s. 3 (ante, p. 43).

3. Besides setting out the seditious passages of the publication, the indictment should also contain such averments and innuendoes as may be necessary to render it intelligible, and its application to the King or his government, etc., evident. See R. v. Yates, 12 Cox, 233. When the statement of an intrinsic fact is necessary in order to render the libel intelligible, or to show its seditious quality, such intrinsic fact should be averred in the introductory part of the indictment; but where it is necessary merely to explain a word by reference to something which has preceded it, this is done by an innuendo. And an innuendo can explain only in cases where something already appears upon the record to ground the explanation; it cannot, of itself, change, add to, or enlarge the sense of expressions beyond their usual acceptation and meaning. R. v. Horne, 20, St. Tr. 651; 2 Cowp. 652: R. v. Burdett. 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1. See further on this subject, "Defamatory Libel" (post, pp. 1238 et seq.). In R. v. Tutchin, 14 St. Tr. 1095, one part of the libel ran thus: "The mismanagements of the navy have been a greater tax upon the merchants than the duties raised by parliament." In order to explain what was meant by the navy, the introductory part of the information charged the libel to have been written "of and concerning the royal navy of this kingdom, and the government of the said navy;" and when, in stating the libel, it came to the word "navy," it explained it by an innuendo, thus: meaning "the royal navy of this kingdom:" which, being coupled with the averment in the introductory part of it, made the sense and the charge complete. In R. v. Matthews, 15 St. Tr. 1323, the words of the libel were: "From the solemnity of the Chevalier's birth, and if hereditary right be any recommendation, he has that to plead in his favour." It was there objected—What Chevalier? who is he? what recommendation? and to what? But in the introductory part of the information the libel was charged to have been written "of and concerning the Pretender, and of and concerning his right to the crown of Great Britain:" and it was held that the innuendoes in the middle of the libel, explaining the words, "Chevalier, etc.," to mean the Pretender, and his hereditary right to the crown of Great Britain, when connected with the averment in the introductory part, of its being written "of and concerning the Pretender, and his right to the crown of Great Britain," were a sufficient explanation to make good the charge.

Evidence for the Prosecution.

Date.]—The day on which the libel is alleged to have been written and published is not material, and need not be proved as laid; but a variance between the indictment and evidence, in any dates alleged and mentioned in the libel, would be fatal unless amended. (See ante, pp. 51, 54, 349.)

Venue.]—Subject to the provisions of 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 12 (ante. p. 37), the offence must be proved to have been committed in the county named, and in which the trial is had. If a letter containing the libel reaches the party to whom it is directed in the proper county, see R. v. Johnson, 7 East, 65; 29 St. Tr. 81: even though addressed to him at a place out of the county, R. v. Watson, 1 Camp. 215, or even if a sealed letter, containing the libel, is put into the post office in the proper county, R. v. Burdett, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 4 B. & Ald. 95, by three judges, Bayley, J., dub., it is a sufficient publication of the libel in that county: and in the last case the three judges held, that if a man writes and composes a libel in L., with intent to publish it, and afterwards publishes it in M., he may be indicted for a misdemeanor in either county; and see R. v. Williams, 2 Camp. 506. As to these decisions, see R. v. Ellis [1899] 1 Q. B. 230 (ante, p. 38; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 54). In R. v. Watson, 1 Camp 215, Lord Ellenborough held that the post-mark of a particular place within the county, upon a letter containing the libel, was no evidence of a publication in that county; for the post-mark might be forged. But this case is not now followed (see Stocken v. Collin, 7 M. & W. 529; 10 L. J. (Ex.) 227), and it would seem that post-marks are evidence that the letters on which they are were in the office to which the post-mark belongs, at the date thereby specified. See R. v. Plumer, R. & R. 264: R. v. Johnson, 7 East, 65; 29 St. Tr. 103, 458: R. v. Canning, 19 St. Tr. 370: Warren v. Warren, 1 Cr. M. & R. 250; 4 Tyrw. 850.

Seditiously.]—The seditious intent may be inferred from the libel itself, without any extrinsic evidence of it. R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & Sel. 273, 282: R. v. Lord Abingdon, 1 Esp. 226: Stockdale v. Hansard, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 723, 882. 896: Bromage v. Prosser, 3 L. J. (K. B.) 203; 4 B. & C. 247, 255

(ante, p. 400). And so, in order to prove it, evidence is admissible of the defendant's having published other copies of the same libel, Plunkett v. Cobbett, 5 Esp. 136, or other libels, R. v. Pearce, Peake, (3rd. ed.), 106, provided that they expressly refer to the subject of the libel set out in the indictment. Finnerty v. Tipper, 2 Camp. 72 : see Chubb v. Westley, 6 C. & P. 436.

Wrote and published.]—A publication must be proved. Upon a count charging the defendant with having composed, printed, and published a libel, proof that he composed and published it, R. v. Williams, 2 Camp. 646, or even that he only published it, R. v. Hunt, 2 Camp. 583; 31 St. Tr. 367, 408, will be sufficient to maintain the count.

The publication may be by selling the libel, distributing it gratis, reading it to others (if he knew the tendency of it before), or by sending it and having it delivered to another person, or even to the party libelled by it. See Bac. Abr. Libel (B. 2); 1 Hawk. c. 73, s. 11. So, evidence of the defendant's procuring another person to publish the libel, is sufficient to maintain a count charging the defendant with having published it : and therefore evidence of the libel's being purchased in a bookseller's shop, or at a newspaper office, or the office of a newsvendor, from a servant there, in the course of business, will support a count charging the master with having published it (4 Bac. Abr. Libel (B. 2) : R. v. Almon, 20 St. Tr. 803, 839; 5 Burr. 2686), even although it be proved that the master was not privy to it. R. v. Walter, 3 Esp. 21 : R. v. Gutch, M. & M. 433 : Att.-Gen. v. Siddon, 1 Cr. & J. 220. But the presumption created by such evidence can now be rebutted by evidence under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 7 (ante, p. 1115). As to publication through an innocent agent, see post, p. 1249). As to what may amount to evidence against the editor of a newspaper of conspiring to pervert the course of justice with the author of certain articles appearing therein, see R. v. Tibbits & Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 4; 20 Cox, 60.

The delivery of a newspaper to the officer of a stamp office was held to be sufficient publication to sustain an indictment for a libel in that paper, inasmuch as the officer would at all events have an opportunity of reading the libel himself. R. v. Amphlit, 4 B. & C. 35; 6 D. & R. 125. And if the manuscript of a libel is proved to be in the handwriting of the defendant, and it is also proved to have been printed and published, this is evidence to go to the jury that it was published by the defendant, though there is no express evidence that he authorized the printing or publishing. R. v. Beare, 1 Ld. Raym. 414; Lamb's case, 9 Co. Rep. 59 : R. v. Lovett, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1117; 9 C. & P. 462.

Where the libel is contained in a newspaper, and the defendant is indicted for having published it, the fact that the defendant is the proprietor of the newspaper may now be proved in the manner provided by s. 15 (post, p. 1241) of the Newspaper Libel and Registration Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 60). The provisions of 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 76, ss. 8, 13, as to proving the defendant to have printed and published the paper, were repealed by 33 & 34 Vict. c. 99. Under 39 G. 3, c. 79, s. 28 (now incorporated in the second schedule to the Newspaper, etc., Repeal Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 24)), the printer of a newspaper is liable to penalties for printing and publishing without the name of the printer, and required to keep copies with the name and address of the person for whom he printed.

A certain seditious libel.]—The libel itself must be produced in evidence, and must correspond in substance with the indictment. (See ante, pp. 351, 1119.) If the libel is in a foreign language, and is set out in that language, together with a translation (see ante, p. 1119), the translation must be proved to be correct. R. v. Peltier, 28 St. Tr. 529; 2 Sel. (N. P.) 1048. A seditious libel does not necessarily consist of written or printed matter, but it may be evidenced by a woodcut or engraving. R. v. Sullivan, R. v. Pigott, 11 Cox, 44, 51.

It is not necessary to prove the libel to be false. See post, p. 1126.

Innuendo.]—In strictness all the innuendoes must be proved by some persons acquainted with the nature of the libel, and who can swear that they understood such and such words to mean so and so, or to have reference to such and such persons, things, or facts, as described by the innuendo. In many cases, however, the truth of the innuendo appears so evident from the context of the libel itself, that further proof is deemed unnecessary, and it is left to the jury upon a consideration of the libel alone. In an action for libel it is the judge's duty to determine, upon the evidence adduced at the trial, whether the words complained of are reasonably capable of the meaning ascribed to them by the innuendoes, and if they are not, he is bound to withdraw the case from the jury and to direct either a non-suit or a verdict for the defendant. Hunt v. Goodlake, 43 L. J. (C. P.) 54: Mulligan v. Cole, L. R. 10 Q. B. 549; 44 L. J. (Q. B.) 153.

Evidence for the Defence.

The defendant may prove that he did not write or publish the libel at all; or he may contend that the publication is not seditious, or that he was privileged in publishing it.

1. He may prove that he was not concerned in the writing or publishing of the libel in question; and in the case of a newspaper, he may prove that he is neither printer, publisher, nor proprietor of it, nor otherwise interested or concerned in it. He may also prove that he was a mere innocent agent in the publication; as, for instance, that he carried and delivered the letter containing the libel, without knowing its contents, or delivered one paper by mistake for another (R. v. Topham, 4 T. R. 126, 128), or the like. He may also, where a presumptive case of publication, by the act of any other person by his authority, has been established, prove that such publication was made without his authority, consent, or knowledge, and that it did not arise from want of due care or caution on his part; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 7 (ante, p. 1115); but the Act does not say expressly whether such evidence shall be a complete defence or go in mitigation of punishment only. On the trial of a criminal information against the defendants for a libel published in their newspaper, it appeared that the duty of editing the paper was left entirely by them to an editor, whom they had appointed. The libel was inserted in the paper by the editor without the actual authority, consent, or knowledge of the defendants. The judge on these facts having directed a verdict of guilty against the defendants, it was held by Cockburn, C.J., and Lush, J., (Mellor, J., diss.), that there must be a new trial, on the ground that upon the true construction of the Libel Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 96), s. 7 (ante, p. 1115), the libel was published without the defendants' authority, consent, or knowledge, and it was a question for the jury whether the publication arose from any want of due care or caution on their part. R. v. Holbrook, 3 Q. B. D. 60; 47 L. J. (Q. B.) 85. Upon the second trial, the same facts having been proved as on the first trial, the judge summed up in terms which might have led the jury to suppose that the general authority given to the editor to manage the editorial department of the paper, was per se evidence that the defendants had authorised the publication of the libel within the meaning of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 7, and the jury having returned a verdict of guilty, a new trial was granted on the ground of misdirection, Cockburn, C.J. and Lush, J. (Mellor, J., diss.), being of opinion that a general authority to an editor to conduct the business of a newspaper, in the absence of anything to give it a different character, must be taken to mean an authority to conduct it according to law, and therefore not to authorize the publication of a libel. R. v. Holbrook, 4 Q. B. D. 42; 48 L. J. (Q. B.) 113. It is not competent to the defendant to prove that a paper similar to that for the publication of which he is prosecuted was published on a former occasion by other persons who have never been prosecuted for it. R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436: R. v. Newman, 1 E. & B. 268; 22 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 156.

2. He may prove that the words alleged to be seditious, whether spoken or written, are not seditious; and for that purpose a defendant has been allowed to give in evidence other passages in the same speech, newspaper or publication, plainly referring to the subject of the libel in question, or fairly connected with it, though disjoined from it by other matter, and in a different type, in order to prove that his intention was not such as was imputed to him by the prosecution, or that the passage in question would not fairly bear the construction attempted to be given to it. R. v. Lambert & Perry, 2 Camp. 398, 400; 31 St. Tr. 335.

3. He may show that he was privileged in publishing the matter alleged to be seditious. As, for instance, that it formed part of a speech delivered by him as a member of parliament (1 W. & M. sess. 2, c. 2); but this privilege extends only to his speaking in the house; for if he afterwards publishes his speech, he is amenable for it in the same manner as any other person. R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & Sel. 273, 282: R. v. Lord Abingdon, 1 Esp. 226: Stockdale v. Hansard, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 723, 882, 896; 9 A. & E. 1; 2 P. & D. 1. The publication in a public newspaper of a faithful report of a debate in either house of parliament is privileged, so that the publisher is not responsible for statements made in the course of the debate so reported and published (Wason v. Walter, L. R. 4 Q. B. 73; 38 L. J. (Q. B.) 34); and the publication of articles fairly commenting upon debates so reported and published is equally privileged. Id. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 9, passed in consequence of Stockdale v. Hansard, supra, provided for staying proceedings in respect of documents laid before either house and published by their authority. This enactment mainly affects defamatory libels, but appears to extend not only to defamatory, but to seditious, obscene, or blasphemous matter contained in such documents.

So, he may prove that the matter alleged to be seditious was contained in a petition to parliament, and published to its members only, or contained in articles of the peace, or in some other regular proceeding in a court of justice (1 Hawk. c. 73, s. 8), or the like. See Fairman v. Ives, 5 B. & Ald. 642: M'Gregor v. Thwaites, 2 L. J. (K. B.) 217; 3 B. & C. 24; 5 Dowl. & Ry. 447.

With regard to reports of judicial proceedings in newspapers, it is enacted by s. 3 (post, p. 1241) of the Law of Libel Amendment Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 64), that a fair and accurate report in any newspaper of proceedings publicly heard before any court exercising judicial authority, shall, if published contemporaneously with such proceedings, be privileged. As to what is a newspaper, see 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 1, and 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 1 (post, pp. 1240, 1241).

At common law, and irrespective of 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 3 (post, p. 1241), he may prove that it is a fair report of proceedings in a court of justice. See R. v. Wright, 8 T. R. 293: Lewis v. Walter, 4 B. & Ald. 605: Chalmers v. Payne, 2 Cr. M. & R. 156: Lewis v. Levy, 27 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 282; E. B. & E. 537: Ryalls v. Leader, L. R. 1 Ex. 296; 35 L. J. (Ex.) 185: Milissich v. Lloyds, 13 Cox, 575; 46 L. J. (C. P.) 404. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 3, excepts from protection blasphemous and obscene libel, but does not name seditious libel. The privilege at common law and by statute appears to attach whether the report published contains seditious or defamatory or even treasonable matter, if the publication is a fair and bonâ fide report. R. v. Gray, 10 Cox, 184 (Ir.). The publication of the history of a trial, consisting of the facts of the case, and of the law of the case as applied to those facts, is lawful. But the privilege is qualified only, and not absolute, and the fact that the publication incriminated is a fair report of proceedings in a court of justice must not be considered a justification or excuse in all cases. For instance, in the course of a trial it may become necessary for the purposes of justice to hear or read matter of a scandalous, blasphemous, or indecent nature; yet it is not lawful, under the pretence of publishing that trial, to circulate such matter. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 3: R. v. Mary Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 167: R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & Sel. 273, 281; per Bayley, J.: Steele v. Brannan, L. R. 7 C. P. 261; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 85: Macdougall v. Knight, 14 App. Cas. 194; 58 L. J. (Q. B.) 537. And a fair and an accurate report of the proceedings in a court of justice sent to a newspaper by a person who is not a reporter on the staff of the newspaper, is not privileged absolutely; and if it is sent from a malicious motive, an action will lie against the sender. Stevens v. Sampson, 5 Ex. D. 53; 49 L. J. Ex. 120. Until the passing of the Law of Libel Amendment Act, 1888, the publication of reports of ex parte proceedings was discouraged if not held illegal, and the publication of proceedings before justices prior to committal was at least of doubtful legality. See R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432, 438; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 839, Wills, J. But a fair and accurate report of an ex parte application made to a magistrate in open court is now privileged (Kimber v. Press Association [1893] 1 Q. B. 65; 62 L. J.

(Q. B.) 152 : R. v. Gray, 10 Cox, 184), and this rule appears to apply in all cases where the magistrate has jurisdiction in point of law, although there is what may be called want of jurisdiction, because the facts do not make out the charge. Usill v. Hales, 3 C. P. D. 319; 47 L. J. (C. P.) 323; 14 Cox, 61 : Usill v. Brearley, 3 C. P. D. 206; 47 L. J. (C. P.) 380 : Lewis v. Levy, E. B. & E. 537; 27 L. J. (Q. B.) 282 : and Wason v. Walter, L. R. 4 Q. B. 73, 94; 38 L. J. (Q. B.) 34, 44; where Cockburn, C.J., said, "Even in quite recent days judges, in holding the publication of the proceedings of courts of justice lawful, have thought it necessary to distinguish what are called ex parte proceedings as a probable exception from the operation of the rule. Yet ex parte proceedings before magistrates, and even before this court, as, for instance, on application for criminal informations, are published every day; but such a thing as an action or indictment founded on a report of such an ex parte proceeding is unheard of, and if any such action or indictment should be brought, it would probably be held that the true criterion of the privilege is not whether the report was or was not ex parte, but whether it was a fair and honest report of what had taken place, published simply with a view to the information of the public, and innocent of all intention to do injury to the reputation of the party affected."

These decisions appear to overrule the opinions at one time expressed that the reports of proceedings (particularly ex parte proceedings) before magistrates were not privileged. See R. v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563 : R. v. Lee, 5 Esp. 123 : R. v. Fleet, 1 B. & Ald. 379 : Duncan v. Thwaites, 3 L. J. (K. B.) 3; 3 B. & C. 556, 583 : R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432, 438; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 839.

As to the publication of matters prejudicial to accused persons whose trial is pending, see R. v. Tibbits & Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 4; 20 Cox, 70, and post, p. 1217.

A fair and accurate report published in any newspaper of the proceedings of a public meeting and of certain bodies and persons specifically mentioned, and the publication of certain notices or reports issued by certain public officers, have a modified and limited protection afforded by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 4 (post, p. 1242). It was formerly no defence to an action or indictment for publishing a libel in a newspaper, that it was a true report of proceedings at a public meeting held under a local improvement Act, or the like. Davison v. Duncan, 7 E. & B. 229; 26 L. J. (Q. B.) 104 : Popham v. Pickburn, 7 H. & N. 891; 31 L. J. (Ex.) 133.

The defendant is in no case allowed to prove the truth of a seditious libel, in justification of his having published it. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 6 (post, p. 1239), permitting a plea that a libel is true, and its publication in the public interest, applies only to defamatory libels, and not to seditious or blasphemous libels. R. v. Duffy, 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 303; 2 Cox, 45; 9 Ir. L. R. 329 : Ex parte O'Brien, 12 L. R. Ir. 29; 15 Cox, 180 : R. v. McHugh [1901] 2 Ir. Rep. 569 : R. v. Aldred, 74 J. P. 55. In R. v. Burdett, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 4 B. & Ald. 95, it was held that on an indictment for a seditious libel containing statements involving criminal charges, the defendant could not at the trial or in mitigation prove their truth; but that he could after verdict in mitigation prove that he had read them in newspapers. But the publication in a newspaper of matter which is in itself a seditious libel will not be excused merely on the ground that it is copied from a foreign newspaper as an item of news, although this is a matter for the jury in considering the intention of the defendant; but they must also consider the circumstances under which the matter was copied, the state of the country at the time, the class of persons to whom the newspaper is addressed, and the general tone of the other writings in the newspaper. R. v. Sullivan, 11 Cox, 44 (Ir.). It was held in R. v. McHugh, supra, that the defence of fair comment and absence of malice under 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 4 (post, p. 1242), is not open on a trial for seditious libel.

The jury may give a general verdict on the whole matter put in issue, and shall not be required by the Court to find the defendant guilty merely on proof of the publication, and of the sense ascribed to it in the indictment or information. 32 G. 3, c. 60, s. 1 (post, p. 1238). This is without prejudice to their power to return a special verdict (s. 3), and does not affect the right of the judge to give his opinion and direction to the jury (s. 2), nor the right of the defendant on conviction to move in arrest of judgment (s. 4), as in other criminal cases.

Indictment for Seditious Words (Common Law).

Commencement as ante, p. 1092.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Sedition.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, in the hearing of liege subjects of our lord the King, uttered a seditious speech, the purport of which was [state in ordinary language].

Fine or imprisonment without hard labour, as a misdemeanant of the first division, or both. 40 & 41 Vict. c. 21, s. 40; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 41, s. 6 (ante, p. 1116).

Offences against the King's title, prerogative, person, or government, are not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Where seditious words are spoken at a meeting, those who do anything, as by expressions of approval, to help the speaker to produce upon the hearers the natural effect of the words spoken, are guilty of uttering seditious words, just as if they spoke them themselves. R. v. Burns, 16 Cox, 355, 366, Cave, J., but the merely standing by and saying nothing when the seditious words are spoken does not make the stander-by guilty of uttering seditious words. Id.

SECT. 7.

UNLAWFUL OATHS.

Statutes.

37 G. 3, c. 123 (Unlawful Oaths Act, 1797), s. 1.]—Whereas divers wicked and evil-disposed persons have of late attempted to seduce persons serving in his Majesty's forces by sea and land, and others of his Majesty's subjects, from their duty and allegiance to his Majesty, and to incite them to acts of mutiny and sedition (see 37 G. 3, c. 70, post, p. 1132), and have endeavoured to give effect to their wicked and traitorous proceedings, by imposing upon the persons whom they have attempted to seduce the pretended obligation of oaths unlawfully administered; be it enacted, etc., that any person or persons who shall, in any manner or form whatsoever, administer or cause to be administered, or be aiding or assisting at, or present at and consenting to, the administering or taking of any oath or engagement purporting or intended to bind the person taking the same to engage in any mutinous or seditious purpose, or to disturb the public peace, or to be of any association, society, or confederacy formed for any such purpose, or to obey the orders or commands of any committee or body of men not lawfully constituted, or of any leader or commander or other person not having authority by law for that purpose, or not to inform or give evidence against any associate, confederate, or other person, or not to reveal or discover any unlawful combination or confederacy, or not to reveal or discover any illegal act done or to be done, or not to reveal or discover any illegal oath or engagement which may have been administered or tendered to or taken by such person or persons, or to or by any other person or persons, or the import of any such oath or engagement, shall, on conviction thereof by due course of law, be adjudged guilty of felony, and may be transported for any term of years not exceeding seven years; and every person who shall take any such oath or engagement, not being compelled (see s. 2, infra) thereto, shall, on conviction thereof by due course of law, be adjudged guilty of felony, and may be transported for any term of years not exceeding seven years. [Penal servitude was substituted for transportation by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, ante, p. 237.]

Sect. 2.]—Persons compelled to take such oath not justified or excused unless within four days they declare the same.

Sect. 3.—Aiders and abettors.]—Persons aiding and assisting at, or present at, and consenting to, the administering or taking of any such oath or engagement as aforesaid, and persons causing any such oath or engagement to be administered or taken, though not present at the administering or taking thereof, shall be deemed principal offenders, and shall be tried as such, although the persons or person (sic) who actually administered such oath or engagement, if any such there shall be, shall not have been tried or convicted. (See post, tit. "Accessories."

Sect. 4.—Form of indictment.]—It shall not be necessary in any indictment against any person or persons administering or causing to be administered or taken, or taking, any such oath or engagement as aforesaid, or aiding or assisting at, or present at and consenting to, the administering or taking thereof, to set forth the words of such oath or engagement; and it shall be sufficient to set forth the purport of such oath or engagement, or some material part thereof.

Sect. 5.—Form of oath.]—Provided always . . . that any engagement or obligation whatsoever, in the nature of an oath, shall be deemed an oath within the intent and meaning of this Act, in whatever form or manner the same shall be administered or taken; and whether the same shall be actually administered by any person or persons to any other person or persons, or taken by any person or persons without any administration thereof by any other person or persons.

Sect. 6.—Venue.]—Provided also . . . that any offence committed against this Act on the high seas or out of this realm, or within that part of Great Britain called England, shall and may be prosecuted, tried, and determined, before any court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery for any county in that part of Great Britain called England, in such manner and form as if such offence had been therein committed; and, if committed in that part of Great Britain called Scotland, shall and may be prosecuted, tried, and determined, either before the Justiciary Court at Edinburgh, or in any of the circuit courts in that part of the United Kingdom. [This Act applies only to Great Britain. 50 G. 3 c. 102, makes similar provisions as to Ireland.]

Sect. 7.]—Persons tried under the Act not to be tried again for treason on the same facts. (Cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33 (ante, p. 160).)

By the Unlawful Societies Act, 1799 (39 G. 3, c. 79), certain societies were prohibited as unlawful confederacies, and societies which require or use an oath or engagement unlawful within 37 G. 3, c. 123, are guilty of unlawful combination or confederacy. By the Seditious Meetings Act, 1817 (57 G. 3, c. 19, s. 25, partially repealed by 53 & 54 Vict. c. 33), all societies the members whereof are required to take any oath or engagement which is unlawful within 37 G. 3, c. 123 (ante, p. 1127), or 52 G. 3, c. 104 (post, p. 1130), or to take any oath not required or authorized by law, etc., are to be deemed guilty of an unlawful combination within 39 G. 3, c. 79, s. 2. On these Acts see R. v. Dixon, 6 C. & P. 601; 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1281; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law. (6th ed.), p. 66; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 332. Exceptions are made in favour of declarations in a form approved and registered at petty sessions, and confirmed at quarter sessions (39 G. 3, c. 79, s. 3); of regular lodges of Freemasons, subject to conditions (ss. 4, 5); and of registered friendly societies, subject to conditions. 59 & 60 Vict. c. 25, s. 32.

Proceedings in England under 39 G. 3, c. 79, and 57 G. 3, c. 19, can only be taken in the name of a law officer of the Crown. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 33, s. 1.

Indictment for administering an Unlawful Oath. (37 G. 3, c. 123, s. 1, ante, p. 1127.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Administering unlawful oath, contrary to section 1 of the Unlawful Oaths Act, 1797.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, administered or caused to be administered to C. D., or aided the administration to C. D., of an oath or engagement purporting or intended to bind the said C. D. to engage in a mutinous or seditious purpose or to disturb the public peace.

If the offence has been committed on the high seas, or out of the realm, or in England, the venue may be laid in any county in England. 37 G. 3, c. 123, s. 6.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 37 G. 3, c. 123, s. 1; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, pp. 1127, 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

The offence of administering or taking unlawful oaths is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

It is not necessary to set out the words of the oath; stating the purport, or some material part of it, is all that is required. 37 G. 3, c. 123, s. 4. The oath described by the statute must purport or be intended to bind the party taking it to one or other of the following things:—viz. 1. To engage in some mutinous or seditious purpose; 2. To disturb the public peace; 3. To be of some association, society or confederacy formed for any such purpose; 4. To obey the orders or commands of a committee or body of men not lawfully constituted, or of a leader or commander or other person not having authority by law for that purpose; 5. Not to inform or give evidence against any associate, confederate, or other person; 6. Not to reveal or discover any unlawful combination or confederacy; 7. Not to reveal or discover any illegal act done, or to be done; 8. Not to reveal or discover any illegal oath or engagement which may have been administered or tendered to or taken by such person or persons, or to or by any other person or persons, or the import of any such oath or engagement. If the purport of the oath is doubtful, it can be set out in different ways in several counts, taking care to bring it within some of the descriptions above mentioned. See R. v. Moors, 6 East, 419 n. (b).

Evidence.

Prove that A. B. administered to C. D. an oath or engagement (it is no matter in what form, 37 G. 3, c. 123, s. 5: see R. v. Lovelass, 6 C. & P. 596; 1 M. & Rob. 349; 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1280) of the purport stated in some one count in the indictment. If read from a paper at the time it was administered, still it is not necessary to produce such paper, or give the defendant notice to produce it; but parol evidence of its purport, without such notice, will be sufficient. R. v. Moors, 6 East, 419 n. (b). So, parol evidence of any declarations made by the defendant at the time he administered the oath will be received in proof of the nature of the oath, if that does not sufficiently appear from the words of the oath itself. Id. And where it appeared that an oath was unlawfuly administered by an associated body of men, purporting to bind the party not to reveal such unlawful combination or conspiracy, or any illegal act done by them, the judges seemed to have no doubt of its being a felony within this Act, although it appeared that the object of the association was a conspiracy to raise wages and make regulations in a particular trade, and not to stir up mutiny or sedition. R. v. Marks, 3 East, 157; see R. v. Ball, 6 C. & P. 563: R. v. Brodribb, Id. 571.

An association, the members of which are bound by oath not to disclose its secrets, is an unlawful combination and confederacy (unless expressly declared by some statute to be legal), for whatever purpose or object it may be formed: and the administering an oath not to reveal anything done in such association is an offence within the statute 37 G. 3, c. 123, s. 1. R. v. Lovelass, 6 C. & P. 596; 1 M. & Rob. 349; 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1280. As to the common law with reference to unlawful oaths, see R. v. Edgar, 33 St. Tr. 145, 151 n.; R. v. Eadon, 31 St. Tr. 1064.

In an indictment for taking an unlawful oath it is not necessary to prove that any person administered the oath. 37 G. 3, c. 123, s. 5. Nor is it necessary for the prosecutor to prove that the defendant was not compelled to take the oath; compulsion is matter of excuse, to be established by evidence for the defence. And in order to make it a legal excuse, the defendant must prove that he disclosed the whole affair upon oath to a magistrate (or, if a soldier or seaman, to his commanding officer) within four days after taking the oath unless prevented by actual force or sickness, and then within four days after such force or sickness ceased. Id. s. 2.

(2) If any alien promotes or attempts to promote industrial unrest in any industry in which he has not been bonâ fide engaged for at least two years immediately preceding in the United Kingdom, he shall be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months.

Indictment for endeavouring to seduce a Soldier from his Allegiance.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Attempting to seduce soldiers, contrary to section 1 of the Incitement to Mutiny Act, 1797.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously endeavoured to seduce soldiers serving in His Majesty's Army from their duty and allegiance to His Majesty.

The venue may be laid in any county. 37 G. 3, c. 70, s. 2.

Felony: penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 91, s. 1, supra; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). The offence described in the statute is an endeavour to seduce any person serving in his Majesty's forces by sea or land, from his duty or allegiance to his Majesty: or to incite or stir him up to commit any act of mutiny, or to make or endeavour to make any mutinous assembly, or to commit any traitorous or mutinous practice whatsoever. It is not necessary to allege the means by which the defendant endeavoured to seduce him. R. v. Fuller, 2 Leach, 790; 1 East, P. C. 92; 1 B. & P. 180. Where the incitement is in the form of a publication addressed to British soldiers in general, it is not necessary to specify in the indictment any particular person or persons who have been incited. R. v. Bowman, 22 Cox, 729; 76 J. P. 271, Horridge, J. As to the punishment of persons subject to military law who persuade or assist soldiers, etc., to desert, see Army Act (44 & 45 Vict. c. 58), ss. 12, 14; 45 & 46 Vict. c. 48, s. 15. Civilians guilty of these acts may be punished by a court of summary jurisdiction under 44 & 45 Vict. c. 58, s. 153. And see 45 & 46 Vict. c. 48, s. 17 (Army Reserve); 7 Edw. 7, c. 9, s. 20 (Territorial Forces).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Although in the indictment it is not necessary to state the means by which the defendant endeavoured to seduce a soldier or sailor from his duty and allegiance, they must be detailed in evidence. Where an endeavour to seduce a particular person (J. N.) is alleged in the indictment, it must be proved, also, that J. N. was at the time serving in his Majesty's land forces; and that A. B. was aware of that fact. Where the incitement is published in a newspaper, the jury must consider whether the publication was addressed to persons serving in His Majesty's forces, and, if so, whether it amounted to an endeavour to seduce such persons from their allegiance. R. v. Bowman, 22 Cox, 729; 76 J. P. 271, Horridge, J. A sailor who has been in the sick hospital for thirty days, and therefore is not entitled to pay, nor liable to answer before a court-martial for what he does, is nevertheless a person serving in his Majesty's navy, within this Act. R. v. Tierney, R. & R. 74.

SECT. 9.

ILLEGAL TRAINING AND DRILLING.

Statutes.

60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 1 (Unlawful Drilling Act, 1819), s. 1.]—Recites, that in some parts of the United Kingdom, men clandestinely and unlawfully assembled have practised military training and exercise, to the great terror and alarm of his Majesty's peaceable and loyal subjects, and the imminent danger of the public peace; and enacts that all meetings and assemblies of persons for the purpose of training or drilling themselves, or of being trained or drilled, to the use of arms, or for the purpose of practising military exercise, movements, or evolutions, without any lawful authority from his Majesty, or a Secretary of State, or any officer deputed by him for the purpose, by commission or otherwise, for so doing, shall be and the same are, hereby prohibited, as dangerous to the peace and security of his Majesty's liege subjects and of his government; and every person who shall be present at or attend any such meeting or assembly, for the purpose of training and drilling any other person or persons to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements, or evolutions, or who shall train or drill any other person or persons to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements, or evolutions, or who shall aid or assist therein, being legally convicted thereof, shall be liable to be transported for any term not exceeding seven years, or to be punished by imprisonment not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the Court in which such conviction shall be had; and every person who shall attend or be present at any such meeting or assembly as aforesaid, for the purpose of being, or who shall at any such meeting or assembly be trained or drilled to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements, or evolutions, being legally convicted thereof, shall be liable to be punished by fine and imprisonment not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the Court in which such conviction shall be had. [The words italicised represent the amendment effected by 10 & 11 Geo. 5 c. 43. s. 16. As to present punishment, see post, p. 1136).]

Sect. 2.—Dispersion of meetings, etc.]—It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, or for any constable or peace officer, or for any other person acting in their aid or assistance, to disperse any such unlawful meeting or assembly as aforesaid, and to arrest and detain any person present at, or aiding, assisting, or abetting any such assembly or meeting as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the justice of the peace who shall arrest any such person, or before whom any person so arrested shall be brought, to commit such person for trial for such offence, under the provisions of this Act, unless such person can and shall give sufficient bail for his appearance at the next assizes or general or quarter sessions of the peace, to answer to any indictment which may be preferred against him for any such offence against this Act, in England and Ireland; and in Scotland every such person shall be arrested and dealt with according to the law and practice of that part of the United Kingdom in the case of a bailable offence.

Sect. 4.—Provisions of Act alternative to those of former law: provision against double prosecution. (Cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33, ante, p. 160).

Sect. 7.—Limitation of prosecutions.]—Provided always that no person shall be prosecuted by virtue of this Act for anything done or committed contrary to the provisions hereinbefore contained, unless such prosecution shall be commenced within six calendar months after the offence committed. (See ante, pp. 63, 64.)

Indictment for Unlawful Drilling. (60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 1, s. 1, ante, p. 1135.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Unlawful drilling, contrary to section 1 of the Unlawful Drilling Act, 1819.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, was present at an unlawful meeting of persons assembled together for the purpose of being trained or drilled to the use of arms, and drilled some of the persons so assembled in the use of arms.

It may be charged generally that the defendant trained and drilled to the use of arms, etc., without stating any meeting or assembly. An indictment for being present at such meeting for the purpose of being trained or drilled, or for being there trained or drilled, may easily be framed from the above. The indictment must show that the meeting was held for the purpose of training or drilling, etc., as described in the statute: it is not sufficient to allege that it was a meeting dangerous to the public peace, and that the defendant attended it for the purpose of training and drilling, etc. Gogarty v. R., 3 Cox, 306 (Ir.); 1 Ir. Jur. (O. S.) 203.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 1, s. 1; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the meeting was held as stated in the indictment, under circumstances tending to show that it was unauthorized and unlawful; that it was held for the purpose of training and drilling to the use of arms, etc.; and that the defendant attended it for the purpose of training and drilling others, or of being himself trained and drilled, or drilled some members of the assembly, as the case may be. The jury will, of course, have to infer the intent from the circumstances (see ante, p. 396).

Drilling for the purpose of going to a lawful meeting in good order is lawful: if for the purpose of securing attention to seditious speeches, and to give confidence to seditious persons, it is a misdemeanor: if for overawing the government, it is certainly unlawful, and seems to be treason. R. v. Hunt, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 171 : Redford v. Birley, Id. 1071. See post, "Unlawful Assembly," p. 1218. As to unlawful making and selling of arms, see R. v. Knowles, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 497 : R. v. Morris, Id. 521.

SECT. 10.

OFFENCES RELATING TO PUBLIC STORES.

Statutes.

12 G. 3, c. 24.—Setting fire to public stores.]—Ante, p. 748.

28 & 29 Vict. c. 89 (Greenwich Hospital Act, 1865), s. 45.]—The following mark may be applied in or on stores used or intended to be used for the purposes of Greenwich Hospital, to denote his Majesty's property in stores so marked, namely, an anchor surmounted with a naval crown, with two flags over the crown, and the letter G. on one side, and the letter H. on the other side : and stores intended to be used as aforesaid shall be deemed naval stores within the meaning of the Public Stores Act, 1875, and that Act shall apply thereto as if the mark in the present section were described in the schedule to that Act, and that Act shall apply to all stores so marked before the commencement of this Act (1st Sept., 1865) becoming by virtue of this Act the property of his Majesty. [The words in italics were substituted by 38 & 39 Vict. c. 25, s. 17 (post, p. 1139), for the words "Naval and Victualling Stores Act, 1864," repealed by the later Act.]

38 & 39 Vict. c. 25 (Public Stores Act, 1875), s. 2.—Interpretation of terms.]—In this Act the term "secretary of state" means one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state; the term " the admiralty " means the Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom, or the commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral : the term " stores " includes all goods and chattels, and any single store or article. . . .

Sect. 3.—Stores to which the Act applies.]—This Act shall apply to all stores under the care, superintendence, or control of a secretary of state or the admiralty, or any public department or office, or of any person in the service of his Majesty, and such stores are in this Act referred to as his Majesty's stores. The secretary of state, admiralty, public department, office, or person having the care, superintendence, or control of such stores, are hereinafter in this Act included in the expression public department.

Sect. 4.—Marks in schedule appropriated for public stores.—Misapplication of them a misdemeanor.]—The marks described in the first schedule to this Act may be applied in or on stores therein described in order to denote his Majesty's property in stores so marked; and it shall be lawful for any public department, and the contractors, officers, and workmen of such department, to apply those marks, or any of them, in or on any such stores; and if any person without lawful authority (proof of which authority shall lie on the party accused) applies any of those marks in or on any such stores, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction thereof be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

Sect. 5.—Obliteration, etc., of marks with intent to conceal the King's property in stores.]—If any person, with intent to conceal his Majesty's property in any stores, takes out, destroys, or obliterates, wholly or in part, any such mark as aforesaid, or any mark whatsoever denoting the property of his Majesty in any stores, he shall be guilty of felony, and shall on conviction thereof be liable, in the discretion of the Court before which he is convicted, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years. . . .

Sect. 7.—Unlawful possession of his Majesty's stores.]—If any person is brought before a court of summary jurisdiction charged with conveying or with having in his possession or keeping any of his Majesty's stores reasonably suspected of being stolen or unlawfully obtained, and does not give an account to the satisfaction of the Court how he came by the same, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, or in the discretion of the Court to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two months, with or without hard labour.

Sect. 9.—Penalty on dealer, etc., found in possession of his Majesty's stores and not accounting for them.]—If stores are found in the possession or keeping of a person being in his Majesty's service, or in the service of a public department, or being a dealer in marine stores or in old metals, or being a pawnbroker (within the meaning of the enactments for the time being in force relating to such dealers or pawnbrokers), and he is taken or summoned before a court of summary jurisdiction, and the Court sees reasonable ground for believing the stores found to be or to have been his Majesty's property, then, if such person does not satisfy the Court that he came lawfully by the stores so found, he shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.* (As to dealers in old metals, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 110, s. 4; 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 13 (ante, p. 723); 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 116. As to marine store dealers, see 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, ss. 538-542; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 26; 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 116. As to pawnbrokers, see 35 & 36 Vict. c. 93, s. 38 (ante, p. 723).)

Sect. 10.—Criminal possession explained.]—For the purposes of this Act stores shall be deemed to be in the possession or keeping of any person if he knowingly has them in the actual possession or keeping of any other person or in any house, building, lodging, apartment, field, or place, open or inclosed, whether occupied by himself or not, and whether the same are so had (sic) for his own use or benefit or for the use or benefit of another.

Sect. 12.—Parts of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, incorporated.]—The following sections of the Larceny Act, 1861, are hereby incorporated with this Act, and shall for the purposes of this Act be read as if they were here re-enacted, namely, sections 98 to 100, 103, 107 to 113, and 115 to 121, all inclusive, and for this purpose the expression "this Act," where used in those sections, shall be taken to include the present Act. [Section 100 of the Larceny Act, 1861, has now been replaced by s. 45 of the Larceny Act, 1916.]

Sect. 13.—Provision for regimental necessaries, etc.]—The provisions of this Act relative to the taking out, destroying, or obliterating of marks, or to the having in possession or keeping his Majesty's stores, shall not apply to stores issued as regimental necessaries or otherwise for any soldier, militiaman, or volunteer; but nothing herein shall relieve any person from any obligation or liability to which he may be subject under any other Act in respect of any such stores. (See 44 & 45 Vict. c. 58, s. 156 (1), (7), post, p. 1140).

Sect. 16.—Penalties of Act alternative to those of other Acts and common law.]—Nothing in this Act shall prevent any person from being indicted under this Act or otherwise for any indictable offence made punishable by summary conviction under this Act or prevent any person from being liable under any other Act or otherwise to any higher or other penalty or punishment than is provided for any offence under this Act, so that no person be punished twice for the same offence. (Cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33, ante, p. 160).

Sect. 17.]—Sect. 45 of the Greenwich Hospital Act, 1865 (ante, p. 1137), shall be read and have effect as if this Act, instead of the Naval and Victualling Stores Act, 1864, were referred to in that section.

Sect. 18.]—Act to apply to stores marked before its passing (June 29, 1875).

FIRST SCHEDULE.

Marks appropriated for Use in or on his Majesty's Stores.

Stores.	Marks.
Hempen cordage and wire rope .	White, black or coloured worsted threads laid up with the yarns and the wire respectively.
Canvas, fearnought, hammocks, and seamen's bags.	A blue line in a serpentine form.
Bunting	A double tape in the warp.
Candles	Blue or red cotton threads in each wick or wicks of red cotton.
Timber or metal	The name of his Majesty, his predecessors, his heirs or successors, or of any public department, or any branch thereof, or the broad arrow, or a crown, or his Majesty's arms, whether such broad arrow, crown, or arms be alone or be in combination with any such name as aforesaid, or with any letters denoting any such name.
Any stores not before enumerated, whether similar to the above or not.

44 & 45 Vict. c. 58 (Army Act), s. 156.]—(1) Penalty on purchase from soldiers of regimental necessaries, etc.

* * * * * * *

(7) Articles which are public stores within the meaning of the Public Stores Act, 1875, (supra), and are not included in the foregoing description, shall not be deemed to be stores issued as regimental necessaries or otherwise within the meaning of s. 13 of that Act.

Indictment for wrongfully applying Marks on Stores. (38 & 39 Vict. c. 25, s. 4, ante, p. 1137.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Wrongfully applying marks, contrary to section 4 of the Public Stores Act, 1875.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, without lawful authority, applied a certain mark [see the Schedule, supra] in and on [see the Schedule, supra] being His Majesty's stores.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 33 & 39 Vict. c. 25, s. 4.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant applied the mark to the stores mentioned in the indictment. It is not necessary to show that he did so without lawful authority. If the defendant had such authority he must prove it. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 25, s. 4. See the following decisions on the former law as to offences relating to public stores:—R. v. Banks, 1 Esp. 144: R. v. Wilmett, 3 Cox, 281: R. v. Cohen, 8 Cox, 41: R. v. Sleep, Id. 472, and see 477 n.; L. & C. 44.

Indictment for obliterating Marks on Stores. (38 & 39 Vict. c. 25, s. 5, ante, p. 1138.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Obliterating marks, contrary to section 5 of the Public Stores Act, 1875.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, obliterated wholly or in part from [state the articles], being the King's stores, a certain mark [stating it], which denoted the King's property therein, with intent to conceal the King's property therein.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 25, s. 5; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant took out the mark from the stores, and circumstances from which it may be inferred that his intent in so doing was to conceal his Majesty's property therein. As, however, a man is presumed to intend the necessary and reasonable consequences of his own acts (R. v. Dixon, 3 M. & Sel. 11, 15; 4 Camp. 12: R. v. Farrington, R. & R. 207, ante, p. 400), the mere fact of the defendant's having taken out the mark will be sufficient evidence to go to the jury that in so doing he intended to conceal his Majesty's property in the stores.

SECT. 11.

DISCLOSURE, ETC., OF GOVERNMENT SECRETS.

Statutes (a).

1 & 2 G. 5, c. 28 (Official Secrets Act, 1911), s. 1.—Penalties for spying.]—(1) If any person for any purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State—(a) approaches, inspects, passes over, or is in the neighbourhood of, or enters any prohibited place within the meaning of this Act; or (b) makes any sketch, plan, model, or note which is calculated to be or might be or is intended to be directly or indirectly useful to an enemy; or (c) obtains, collects, records, or publishes, or communicates to any other person any secret official code word, or pass word, or any sketch, plan, model, article, or note, or other document or information which is calculated to be or might be or is intended to be directly or indirectly useful to an enemy; he shall be guilty of felony. . . [Provisions as to punishment repealed by 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 75, and replaced by s. 8 (1) thereof, post, p. 1150.]

(2) On a prosecution under this section, it shall not be necessary to show that the accused person was guilty of any particular act tending to show a purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State, and, notwithstanding that no such act is proved against him, he may be convicted if, from the circumstances of the case, or his conduct, or his known character as proved, it appears that his purpose was a purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State; and if any sketch, plan, model, article, note, document, or information relating to or used in any prohibited place within the meaning of this Act, or anything in such a place, or any secret official code word or pass word, is made, obtained, collected, recorded, published, or communicated by any person other than a person acting under lawful authority, it shall be deemed to have been made, obtained, collected, recorded, published, or communicated for a purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State unless the contrary is proved. [The word "enemy" in this section does not mean necessarily some one with whom this country is at war, but a potential enemy with whom we might some day be at war. R. v. Parrott, 8 Cr. App. R. 186.]

Sect. 2.—Wrongful communication, etc., of information.]—(1) If any person having in his possession or control any secret official code word, or pass word, or any sketch, plan, model, article, note, document, or information which relates to or is used in a prohibited place or anything in such a place, or which has been made or obtained in contravention of this Act, or which has been entrusted in confidence to him by any person holding office under His Majesty or which he has obtained or to which he has had access owing to his position as a person who holds or has held office under His Majesty, or as a person who holds or has held a contract made on behalf of His Majesty, or as a person who is or has been employed under a person who holds or has held such an office or contract,—(a) communicates the code word, pass word, sketch, plan, model, article, note, document, or information to any person, other than a person to whom he is authorised to communicate it, or a person to whom it is in the interest of the State his duty to communicate it; (aa) uses the information in his possession for the benefit of any foreign power or in any other manner prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State; (or) (b) retains the sketch, plan, model, article, note, or document in his possession or control when he has no right to retain it or when it is contrary to his duty to retain it, or fails to comply with all directions issued by lawful authority with regard to the return or disposal thereof; or (c) fails to take reasonable care of, or so conducts himself as to endanger the safety of the sketch, plan, model, article, note, document, secret official code, or pass word or information : that person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [On the construction of s. 2 (1) (b) see R. v. Simington [1921] 1 K. B. 451. Where there is evidence that a person having in his possession information which he has obtained owing to his position as a person who held office under His Majesty has communicated it to a person other than a person to whom he was authorized to communicate it the case is within the words of this section and it is not necessary to show that the information was entrusted specially in confidence to him. R. v. Crisp and Homewood, 83 J. P. 121 (Avory, J.). The section applies to any document or information of an official character. Id.]

(1A) If any person having in his possession or control any sketch, plan, model, article, note, document, or information which relates to munitions of war, communicates it directly or indirectly to any foreign power, or in any other manner prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State, that person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(2) If any person receives any sketch, secret official code word, or pass word, or plan, model, article, note, document, or information knowing, or having reasonable ground to believe, at the time when he receives it, that the sketch, code word, pass word, plan, model, article, note, document, or information is communicated to him in contravention of this Act, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, unless he proves that the communication to him of the sketch, code word, pass word, plan, model, article, note, document, or information was contrary to his desire.

(3) [Provisions as to punishment repealed by 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 75, and replaced by s. 8 (2) thereof, post, p. 1150.]

Sect. 3.—Definition of prohibited place.]—For the purposes of this Act, the expression "prohibited place" means—(a) any work of defence, arsenal, naval or air force establishment or station, factory, dockyard, mine, minefield, camp, ship, or aircraft belonging to or occupied by or on behalf of His Majesty, or any telegraph, telephone, wireless or signal station, or office so belonging or occupied, and any place belonging to or occupied by or on behalf of His Majesty and used for the purpose of building, repairing, making, or storing any munitions of war, or any sketches, plans, models, or documents relating thereto, or for the purpose of getting any metals, oil, or minerals of use in time of war; and (b) any place not belonging to His Majesty where any munitions of war, or any sketches, models, plans or documents relating thereto, are being made, repaired, gotten or stored under contract with, or with any person on behalf of, His Majesty, or otherwise on behalf of His Majesty; and (c) any place belonging to or used for the purposes of His Majesty which is for the time being declared by order of a Secretary of State to be a prohibited place for the purposes of this section on the ground that information with respect thereto, or damage thereto, would be useful to an enemy; and (d) any railway, road, way, or channel, or other means of communication by land or water (including any works or structures being part thereof or connected therewith), or any place used for gas, water, or electricity works or other works for purposes of a public character, or any place where any munitions of war or any sketches, models, plans, or documents relating thereto, are being made, repaired, or stored otherwise than on behalf of His Majesty, which is for the time being declared by order of a Secretary of State to be a prohibited place for the purposes of this section, on the ground that information with respect thereto, or the destruction or obstruction thereof, or interference therewith, would be useful to an enemy.

Sect. 4.—Repealed by 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 75, and replaced by s. 7 thereof.]

Sect. 5.—Person charged with felony under Act, may be convicted of misdemeanor under Act.]—Any person charged with an offence which is a felony under this Act may, if the circumstances warrant such a finding, be found guilty of an offence which is a misdemeanor under this Act.

Sect. 6.—Power to arrest.]—Any person who is found committing an offence under this Act, whether that offence is a felony or not, or who is reasonably suspected of having committed, or having attempted to commit, or being about to commit, such an offence, may be apprehended and detained in the same manner as a person who is found committing a felony.

Sect. 7—Penalty for harbouring spies.]—If any person knowingly harbours any person whom he knows, or has reasonable grounds for supposing, to be a person who is about to commit or who has committed an offence under this Act, or knowingly permits to meet or assemble in any premises in his occupation or under his control any such persons, or if any person having harboured any such person, or permitted to meet or assemble in any premises in his occupation or under his control any such persons, wilfully omits or refuses to disclose to a superintendent of police any information which it is in his power to give in relation to any such person he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour . . . . [Provisions as to punishment repealed by 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 75 and replaced by s. 8 (2) thereof, post, p. 1150.]

Sect. 8.—Restriction on prosecution.]—A prosecution for an offence under this Act shall not be instituted except by or with the consent of the Attorney-General :

Provided that a person charged with such an offence may be arrested, or a warrant for his arrest may be issued and executed, and any such person may be remanded in custody or on bail, notwithstanding that the consent of the Attorney-General to the institution of a prosecution for the offence has not been obtained, but no further or other proceedings shall be taken until that consent has been obtained.

Sect. 9.—Search warrants.]—(1) If a justice of the peace is satisfied by information on oath that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence under this Act has been or is about to be committed, he may grant a search warrant authorising any constable named therein to enter at any time any premises or place named in the warrant, if necessary, by force, and to search the premises or place and every person found therein, and to seize any sketch, plan, model, article, note, or document, or anything of a like nature or anything which is evidence of an offence under this Act having been or being about to be committed, which he may find on the premises or place or on any such person, and with regard to or in connexion with which he has reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence under this Act has been or is about to be committed.

(2) Where it appears to a superintendent of police that the case is one of great emergency and that in the interest of the State immediate action is necessary, he may by a written order under his hand give to any constable the like authority as may be given by the warrant of a justice under this section.

Sect. 10.—Extent of Act and place of trial of offence.]—(1) This Act shall apply to all acts which are offences under this Act when committed in any part of His Majesty's dominions, or when committed by British officers or subjects elsewhere.

(2) An offence under this Act, if alleged to have been committed out of the United Kingdom, may be inquired of, heard, and determined, in any competent British court in the place where the offence was committed, or in the High Court in England or the Central Criminal Court, and the Criminal Jurisdiction Act, 1802, shall apply in like manner as if the offence were mentioned in that Act, and the Central Criminal Court as well as the High Court possessed the jurisdiction given by that Act to the Court of King's Bench.

(3) An offence under this Act shall not be tried by any court of general or quarter sessions, nor by the sheriff court in Scotland, nor by any court out of the United Kingdom which has not jurisdiction to try crimes which involve the greatest punishment allowed by law.

(4) The provisions of the Criminal Law and Procedure (Ireland) Act, 1887, shall not apply to any trial under the provisions of this Act.

Sect. 11.—Saving for laws of British possessions.]—If by any law made before or after the passing of this Act by the legislature of any British possession provisions are made which appear to His Majesty to be of the like effect as those contained in this Act, His Majesty may, by Order in Council, suspend the operation within that British possession of this Act, or of any part thereof, so long as that law continues in force there, and no longer, and the Order shall have effect as if it were enacted in this Act:

Provided that the suspension of this Act, or of any part thereof, in any British possession shall not extend to the holder of an office under His Majesty who is not appointed to that office by the Government of that possession.

Sect. 12.—Interpretation.]—In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,—

Any reference to a place belonging to His Majesty includes a place belonging to any department of the Government of the United Kingdom or of any British possessions, whether the place is or is not actually vested in His Majesty;

The expression "Attorney-General" means the Attorney or Solicitor-General for England; and as respects Scotland, means the Lord Advocate; and as respects Ireland, means the Attorney or Solicitor-General for Ireland; and, if the prosecution is instituted in any court out of the United Kingdom, means the person who in that court is Attorney-General, or exercises the like functions as the Attorney-General in England;

Expressions referring to communicating or receiving include any communicating or receiving, whether in whole or in part, and whether the sketch, plan, model, article, note, document, or information itself or the substance, effect, or description thereof only be communicated or received; expressions referring to obtaining or retaining any sketch, plan, model, article, note, or document, include the copying or causing to be copied the whole or any part of any sketch, plan, model, article, note, or document; and expressions referring to the communication of any sketch, plan, model, article, note or document include the transfer or transmission of the sketch, plan, model, article, note or document;

The expression "document" includes part of a document;

The expression "model" includes design, pattern, and specimen;

The expression "sketch" includes any photograph or other mode of representing any place or thing;

The expression "munitions of war" includes the whole or any part of any ship, submarine, aircraft, tank or similar engine, arms and ammunition, torpedo or mine, intended or adapted for use in war, and any other article, material, or device, whether actual or proposed, intended for such use;

The expression "superintendent of police" includes any police officer of a like or superior rank, and any person upon whom the powers of a superin- tendent of police are for the purpose of this Act conferred by a Secretary of State.

The expression " office under His Majesty " includes any office or employment in or under any department of the Government of the United Kingdom, or of any British possession;

The expression "offence under this Act" includes any act, omission, or other thing which is punishable under this Act.

Sect. 13.—Short title and repeal.]—(1) This act may be cited as the Official Secrets Act, 1911.

(2) The Official Secrets Act, 1889, is hereby repealed.

10 & 11 G. 5, c. 75 (Official Secrets Act, 1920), s. 1.—Unauthorised use of uniforms; falsification of reports, forgery, personation, and false documents.]—If any person for the purpose of gaining admission, or of assisting any other person to gain admission, to a prohibited place, within the meaning of the Official Secrets Act, 1911 (hereinafter referred to as "the principal Act"), or for any other purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State within the meaning of the said Act—

(a) uses or wears, without lawful authority, any naval, military, air-force, police, or other official uniform, or any uniform so nearly resembling the same as to be calculated to deceive, or falsely represents himself to be a person who is or has been entitled to use or wear any such uniform; or

(b) orally, or in writing in any declaration or application, or in any document signed by him or on his behalf, knowingly makes or connives at the making of any false statement or any omission; or

(c) forges, alters, or tampers with any passport or any naval, military, air-force, police, or official pass, permit, certificate, licence, or other document of a similar character (hereinafter in this section referred to as an official document), or uses or has in his possession any such forged, altered, or irregular official document; or

(d) personates, or falsely represents himself to be a person holding, or in the employment of a person holding office under His Majesty, or to be or not to be a person to whom an official document or secret official code word or pass word has been duly issued or communicated, or with intent to obtain an official document, secret official code word or pass word, whether for himself or any other person, knowingly makes any false statement; or

(e) uses, or has in his possession or under his control, without the authority of the Government Department or the authority concerned, any die, seal, or stamp of or belonging to, or used, made or provided by any Government Department, or by any diplomatic, naval, military, or air force authority appointed by or acting under the authority of His Majesty, or any die, seal or stamp so nearly resembling any such die, seal or stamp as to be calculated to deceive, or counterfeits any such die, seal or stamp, or uses, or has in his possession, or under his control, any such counterfeited die, seal or stamp;

he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

(2) If any person—

(a) retains for any purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State any official document, whether or not completed or issued for use, when he has no right to retain it, or when it is contrary to his duty to retain it, or fails to comply with any directions issued by any Government Department or any person authorised by such department with regard to the return or disposal thereof; or

(b) allows any other person to have possession of any official document issued for his use alone, or communicates any secret official code word or pass word so issued, or, without lawful authority or excuse, has in his possession any official document or secret official code word or pass word issued for the use of some person other than himself, or on obtaining possession of any official document by finding or otherwise, neglects or fails to restore it to the person or authority by whom or for whose use it was issued, or to a police constable; or

(c) without lawful authority or excuse, manufactures or sells, or has in his possession for sale any such die, seal or stamp as aforesaid;

he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

(3) In the case of any prosecution under this section involving the proof of a purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State, subsection (2) of section one of the principal Act shall apply in like manner as it applies to prosecutions under that section.

Sect. 2.—Communications with foreign agents to be evidence of commission of certain offences.]—(1) In any proceedings against a person for an offence under section one of the principal Act, the fact that he has been in communication with, or attempted to communicate with, a foreign agent, whether within or without the United Kingdom, shall be evidence that he has, for a purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State, obtained or attempted to obtain information which is calculated to be or might be or is intended to be directly or indirectly useful to an enemy.

(2) For the purpose of this section, but without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing provision—

(a) A person shall, unless he proves the contrary, be deemed to have been in communication with a foreign agent if—

(i) He has, either within or without the United Kingdom, visited the address of a foreign agent or consorted or associated with a foreign agent; or

(ii) Either, within or without the United Kingdom, the name or address of, or any other information regarding a foreign agent has been found in his possession, or has been supplied by him to any other person, or has been obtained by him from any other person:

(b) The expression "foreign agent" includes any person who is or has been or is reasonably suspected of being or having been employed by a foreign power either directly or indirectly for the purpose of committing an act, either within or without the United Kingdom, prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State, or who has or is reasonably suspected of having, either within or without the United Kingdom, committed, or attempted to commit, such an act in the interests of a foreign power :

(c) Any address, whether within or without the United Kingdom, reasonably suspected of being an address used for the receipt of communications intended for a foreign agent, or any address at which a foreign agent resides, or to which he resorts for the purpose of giving or receiving communications, or at which he carries on any business, shall be deemed to be the address of a foreign agent, and communications addressed to such an address to be communications with a foreign agent.

Sect. 3.—Interfering with officers of the police or members of His Majesty's forces.]—No person in the vicinity of any prohibited place shall obstruct, knowingly mislead or otherwise interfere with or impede, the chief officer or a superintendent or other officer of police, or any member of His Majesty's forces engaged on guard, sentry, patrol, or other similar duty in relation to the prohibited place, and, if any person acts in contravention of, or fails to comply with, this provision, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

Sect. 4.—Power to require the production of telegrams.]—(1) Where it appears to a Secretary of State that such a course is expedient in the public interest, he may, by warrant under his hand, require any person who owns or controls any telegraphic cable or wire, or any apparatus for wireless telegraphy, used for the sending or receipt of telegrams to or from any place out of the United Kingdom, to produce to him, or to any person named in the warrant, the originals and transcripts, either of all telegrams, or of telegrams of any specified class or description, or of telegrams sent from or addressed to any specified person or place, sent or received to or from any place out of the United Kingdom by means of any such cable, wire, or apparatus, and all other papers relating to any such telegram as aforesaid.

(2) Any person who, on being required to produce any such original or transcript or paper as aforesaid, refuses or neglects to do so shall be guilty of an offence under this Act, and shall, for each offence, be liable on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, or to both such imprisonment and fine.

(3) In this section the expression " telegram " shall have the same meaning as in the Telegraph Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 73), and the expression " wireless telegraphy " shall have the same meaning as in the Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 24).

Sect. 5.—Registration and regulation of persons carrying on the business of receiving postal packets.]—(1) Every person who carries on, whether alone or in conjunction with any other business, the business of receiving for reward letters, telegrams, or other postal packets for delivery or forwarding to the persons for whom they are intended, shall as soon as may be send to the chief officer of police for the district, for registration by him, notice of the fact together with the address or addresses where the business is carried on, and the chief officer of police shall keep a register of the names and addresses of such persons, and shall, if required by any person who sends such a notice, furnish him on payment of a fee of one shilling with a certificate of registration, and every person so registered shall from time to time furnish to the chief officer of police notice of any change of address or new address at which the business is carried on, and such other information as may be necessary for maintaining the correctness of the particulars entered in the register.

(2) Every person who carries on such a business as aforesaid shall cause to be entered in a book kept for the purpose the following particulars—

(a) the name and address of every person for whom any postal packet is received, or who has requested that postal packets received may be delivered or forwarded to him;

(b) any instructions that may have been received as to the delivery or forwarding of postal packets;

(c) in the case of every postal packet received, the place from which the postal packet comes, and the date of posting (as shown by the post-mark) and the date of receipt, and the name and address of the sender if shown on the outside of the packet, and, in the case of a registered packet, the date and office of registration and the number of the registered packet;

(d) in the case of every postal packet delivered, the date of delivery and the name and address of the person to whom it is delivered;

(e) in the case of every postal packet forwarded, the name and address to which and the date on which it is forwarded;

and shall not deliver a letter to any person until that person has signed a receipt for the same in such book as aforesaid, nor, if that person is not the person to whom the postal packet is addressed, unless there is left with him instructions signed by the last-mentioned person as to the delivery thereof, and shall not forward any postal packet to another address unless there is left with him written instructions to that effect signed by the addressee.

(3) The books so kept and all postal packets received by a person carrying on any such business, and any instruction as to the delivery or forwarding of postal packets received by any such person, shall be kept at all reasonable times open to inspection by any police constable.

(4) If any person contravenes or fails to comply with any of the provisions of this section, or furnishes any false information or makes any false entry, he shall be guilty of an offence under this Act, and shall, for each offence, be liable on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding one month or to a fine not exceeding ten pounds, or to both such imprisonment and fine.

(5) Nothing in this section shall apply to postal packets addressed to any office where any newspaper or periodical is published, being postal packets in reply to advertisements appearing in such newspaper or periodical.

(6) Nothing in this section shall be construed as rendering legal anything which would be in contravention of the exclusive privilege of the Postmaster General under the Post Office Acts, 1908 to 1920, or the Telegraph Acts, 1863 to 1920.

Sect. 6.—Duty of giving information as to commission of offences.]—It shall be the duty of every person to give on demand to a chief officer of police, or to a superintendent or other officer of police not below the rank of inspector appointed by a chief officer for the purpose, or to any member of His Majesty's forces engaged on guard, sentry, patrol, or other similar duty, any information in his power relating to an offence or suspected offence under the principal Act or this Act, and, if so required, and upon tender of his reasonable expenses, to attend at such reasonable time and place as may be specified for the purpose of furnishing such information, and, if any person fails to give any such information or to attend as aforesaid, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

Sect. 7.—Attempts, incitements, &c.]—Any person who attempts to commit any offence under the principal Act or this Act, or solicits or incites or endeavours to persuade another person to commit an offence or aids or abets and does any act preparatory to the commission of an offence under the principal Act or this Act, shall be guilty of a felony or a misdemeanour or a summary offence according as the offence in question is a felony, a misdemeanor or a summary offence, and on conviction shall be liable to the same punishment, and to be proceeded against in the same manner, as if he had committed the offence.

Sect. 8.—Provisions as to trial and punishment of offences.]—(1) Any person who is a guilty of a felony under the principal Act or this Act shall be liable to penal servitude for a term of not less than three years and not exceeding fourteen years.

(2) Any person who is guilty of a misdemeanour under the principal Act or this Act shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or, on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding three months or to a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, or both such imprisonment and fine :

Provided that no misdemeanour under the principal Act or this Act shall be dealt with summarily except with the consent of the Attorney General.

(3) For the purposes of the trial of a person for an offence under the principal Act or this Act, the offence shall be deemed to have been committed either at the place in which the same actually was committed, or at any place in the United Kingdom in which the offender may be found.

(4) In addition and without prejudice to any powers which a court may possess to order the exclusion of the public from any proceedings if, in the course of proceedings before a court against any person for an offence under the principal Act or this Act or the proceedings on appeal, or in the course of the trial of a person for felony or misdemeanour under the principal Act or this Act, application is made by the prosecution, on the ground that the publication of any evidence to be given or of any statement to be made in the course of the proceedings would be prejudicial to the national safety, that all or any portion of the public shall be excluded during any part of the hearing, the court may make an order to that effect, but the passing of sentence shall in any case take place in public.

(5) Where the person guilty of an offence under the principal Act or this Act is a company or corporation, every director and officer of the company or corporation shall be guilty of the like offence unless he proves that the act or omission constituting the offence took place without his knowledge or consent.

Sect. 9.—Amendments of principal Act in relation to munitions of war.]—The principal Act shall have effect as though—

(1) After paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of section two the following paragraph were inserted :

"(aa) Uses the information in his possession for the benefit of any foreign power or in any other manner prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State;"

and after the said subsection (1) the following subsection were inserted :

(1A) If any person having in his possession or control any sketch, plan, model, article, note, document, or information which relates to munitions of war, communicates it directly or indirectly to any foreign power, or in any other manner prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State, that person shall be guilty of a misdemeanour;" and

(2) In section twelve, after the definition of "sketch," the following definition were inserted :

" The expression ' munitions of war ' includes the whole or any part of any ship, submarine, aircraft, tank or similar engine, arms and ammunition, torpedo, or mine, intended or adapted for use in war, and any other article, material, or device, whether actual or proposed, intended for such use. [The above amendments have been embodied in the text of the principal Act in italics.]

Sect. 10.—Minor amendments of principal Act.]—The amendments specified in the second column of the First Schedule to this Act (which relate to minor details) shall be made in the provisions of the principal Act specified in the first column of that schedule. [These amendments have been embodied in the text of the principal Act in italics.]

Sect. 11.—Short title, construction, and repeal.]—(1) This Act may be cited as the Official Secrets Act, 1920, and shall be construed as one with the principal Act, and the principal Act and this Act may be cited together as the Official Secrets Acts, 1911 and 1920.

Provided that—

(a) this Act shall not apply to any of the following Dominions, that is to say, the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia (which for this purpose shall be deemed to include Papua and Norfolk Island), the Dominion of New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, Newfoundland, and India; and

(b) nothing in the principal Act shall be construed as preventing an offence under this Act which is to be tried summarily being tried in Scotland by the sheriff.

(2) The provisions of the principal Act mentioned in the Second Schedule to this Act are hereby repealed.

(3) For the purposes of this Act, the expression "chief officer of police,"—

(a) with respect to any place in England other than the city of London, has the meaning assigned to it by the Police Act, 1890; (53 & 54 Vict. c. 45).

(b) with respect to the city of London, means the Commissioner of the City Police;

(c) with respect to Scotland, has the meaning assigned to it by the Police (Scotland) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 67); and cates that information to any other person; he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction be liable to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine, or to both such imprisonment and fine.

(d) with respect to Ireland, means, in the police district of Dublin metropolis, either of the Commissioners of Police for that district, and elsewhere the district inspector of the Royal Irish Constabulary.

SECT. 12.

MISCONDUCT BY EXECUTIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICIALS OF THE CROWN.

It has already been stated (ante, pp. 132, 133) that neglect by public officers of duties imposed on them at common law or by statute is indictable. Misconduct and extortion by, and bribery of, judicial officers and ministerial officers of justice are dealt with post, pp. 1205, 1206. Misconduct, fraud, and oppression by officers of the Crown are indictable at common law, whether the officer is appointed under the common law or statute. See 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 601.

In R. v. Bembridge, 22 St. Tr. 1; 6 East, 136, cit., it was held indictable to enable persons in the pay office to pass their accounts in such a way as to defraud the government. Cf. R. v. Baxter, 5 Cox, 302, and the charge of Russell, C.J., to the grand jury of Middlesex in R. v. Hodgkinson (Times Newsp., 26th June, 1900), where a British vice-consul (at Bremerhaven) was indicted for misconduct in failing to account for certain moneys received by him by virtue of his office. In R. v. Davison, 31 St. Tr. 99, the defendant was convicted on criminal information for defrauding the Crown in the purchase of military stores by means of false vouchers. In R. v. Hedges, 28 St. Tr. 1315, clerks in the Woolwich Dockyard were convicted of fraud in their office; and in R. v. Jones, 31 St. Tr. 251; 8 East, 31, a commissary-general to the forces in the West Indies was convicted of frauds practised by him in his office.

As to the trial and punishment of Indian officials in England for offences in India, see Ilbert, Govt. of India (2nd ed.), 255, 258: R. v. Douglas, 13 Q. B. 42: R. v. Hollond, 5 T. R. 607.

As to the trial and punishment of British officials for oppressions, crimes and offences under the degree of felony committed outside Great Britain, see 11 W. 3, c. 12; 42 G. 3, c. 85 (ante, pp. 31, 440); 49 G. 3, c. 126, s. 14; and cf. R. v. Hodgkinson, supra.

Prior to the passing of the last two of these Acts, in R. v. Munton, 1 Esp. 62, an information was laid against a principal storekeeper in the West Indies for misdemeanors in colluding with contractors to defraud the government. It was objected that the evidence showed that the alleged frauds were committed in the West Indies outside the jurisdiction of the Court. Lord Kenyon, C.J., said that where the matter arose wholly abroad, the Court could have no jurisdiction except by statute; but held that as some of the offences consisted in making false returns which had been sent from Antigua to England, there was an offence in London, where the returns were received and the offence made complete.

It is an indictable misdemeanor to buy or sell or pay any money or reward for any public office, within 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 16, or 49 G. 3, c. 126: i.e., any office in the gift of the Crown, and any military or naval commission or place under the control of any public department, whether it be in the United Kingdom or in a British possession abroad. 49 G. 3, c. 126, ss. 1, 3. The punishment is fine and imprisonment, forfeiture of the office, and absolute disqualification for holding it again. See Earl of Macclesfield's case, 16 St. Tr. 767; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), 104; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 619, 627.

Purchase of the offices of clerk of the peace or under-sheriff is punishable under 1 & 2 W. & M. c. 21, s. 8; 50 & 51 Vict. c. 55, s. 27.

SECT 13.

CONCEALMENT OF TREASURE TROVE.

For the evidence required to establish this rare offence, which is a misdemeanor at common law, punishable by fine and imprisonment, see 3 Co. Inst. 133: R. v. Thomas, L. & C. 313; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 22: R. v. Toole, Ir. Rep. 2 C. L. 36; 11 Cox, 75; Att.-Gen. v. British Museum (Trustees) [1903] 2 Ch. 598: 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 339. As to inquisitions re treasure trove. see Coroners Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 71), s. 36; and Att.-Gen. v. Moore [1893] 1 Ch. 676; 62 L. J. (Ch.) 607: Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 107.

SECT 14.

SMUGGLING.

MAKING SIGNALS TO SMUGGLING VESSELS.

Statute.

30 & 40 Vict. c. 36 (Customs Consolidation Act, 1876), s. 190.—Making signals.]—No person shall, after sunset and before sunrise between the twenty-first day of September and the first day of April, or after the hour of eight in the evening and before the hour of six in the morning at any other time of the year, make, aid, or assist in making any signal in or on board or from any ship or boat, or from any part of the coast or shore of the United Kingdom, or within six miles of any part of such coast or shore, for the purpose of giving notice to any person on board any smuggling ship or boat, whether any person so on board of such ship or boat be or be not within distance to notice any such signal; and if any person contrary to the Customs Acts, shall make or cause to be made, or aid or assist in making, any such signal, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and may be stopped arrested detained and conveyed before any justice, who, if he sees cause, shall commit the offender to the next county gaol, there to remain until delivered by due course of law; and it shall not be necessary to prove on any indictment or information in such case that any ship or boat was actually on the coast; and the offender, being duly convicted, shall, by order of the Court before whom he shall be convicted, either forfeit the penalty of one hundred pounds, or, at the discretion of such court, be committed to a gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any term not exceeding one year.

Sect. 191.—Onus of proof.]—If any person be charged with having made or caused to be made, or for aiding or assisting in making, any such signal as aforesaid, the burden of proof that such signal so charged as having been made with intent and for the purpose of giving such notice as aforesaid was not made with such intent and for such purpose shall be upon the defendant against whom such charge is made.

Sect. 255.—In whose name indictments to be preferred.]—Ante, p. 968.

Sect. 257.—Limitation of prosecution.]—Ante, p. 968.

Sect. 258.—Venue. Ante, p. 968.

Indictment. (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 190, ante, p. 1155.)

Statement of Offence.

Signalling, contrary to section 190 of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876.

Particulars of Offence.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, at 10 o'clock in the evening, in the county of ——, made or assisted in making a signal from the shore for the purpose of giving notice to the master of a smuggling ship called the Fly-by-night, then on board the said ship.

Misdemeanor: either forfeiture of penalty of 100*l.*, or, at discretion of Court, imprisonment with hard labour for any term not exceeding one year. 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 190.

This offence is triable at quarter sessions. R. v. Cock, 4 M. & Sel. 71.

Evidence.

All the prosecutor has to prove is, that the defendant made a signal by firing a gun or otherwise, or was aiding and assisting in so doing on the sea-shore, etc., as stated in the indictment. It is not necessary for him to prove that any smuggling vessel was in fact within sight or actually on the coast at the time; 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 190; and it is for the defendant to prove (if he can) that the fire, etc., was not lighted with the intent charged in the indictment. Id. s. 191. The offence must be committed after sunset and before sunrise between 21st September and 1st April, and after eight in the evening and before six in the morning in any other part of the year. Id. s. 190. See R. v. Brown, M. & M. 163.

The indictment for this and all other offences against this statute must be exhibited within three years next after the date of the offence committed. 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 257 (ante, p. 968). See R. v. Thompson, 16 Q. B. 832; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 183 (ante, p. 64).

BEING ARMED AND ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF ASSISTING IN RUNNING UNCUSTOMED GOODS, ETC.

Statute.

42 & 43 Vict. c. 21 (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1879), s. 10.—Penalty for assembling to run goods.]—All persons to the number of three or more who shall assemble for the purpose of unshipping landing running carrying concealing or having so assembled shall unship land run carry convey or conceal any spirits tobacco or any prohibited restricted or uncustomed goods shall each forfeit a penalty not exceeding five hundred pounds nor less than one hundred pounds. [This section is to be read as part of 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, and as if it occupied the place formerly occupied in that statute by s. 188, now repealed. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 21, s. 14.]

39 & 40 Vict. c. 36 (Customs Consolidation Act, 1876). s. 189.—Procuring persons to assemble to run goods.—Persons armed or disguised with goods within five miles of coast.]—Every person who shall by any means procure or hire or shall depute or authorize any other person to procure or hire, any person or persons to assemble for the purpose of being concerned in the landing or unshipping or carrying, conveying, or concealing any goods which are prohibited to be imported, or the duties for which have not been paid or secured, shall be imprisoned for any term not exceeding twelve months; and if any person engaged in the commission of any of the above offences be armed with firearms or other offensive weapons, or whether so armed or not be disguised in any way, or being so armed or disguised shall be found with any goods liable to forfeiture under the Customs Acts within five miles of the sea-coast or of any tidal river, he shall be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding three years. (See note to indictment, infra.)

Sect. 257.—Limitation of time for prosecution.]—See ante, p. 968.

Sect. 258.—Venue.]—See ante, p. 968.

Indictment for being assembled armed to the Number of Three or more for the purpose of landing Uncustomed Goods. (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 189.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Running goods, contrary to section 189 of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1879.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., C. D., and E. F., together with other persons unknown, on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, unlawfully assembled together, armed with firearms or other offensive weapons, for the purpose of unshipping prohibited, restricted or uncustomed goods.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than three years, with or without hard labour. 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 189. This term of imprisonment appears not to be altered by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, 238, 239).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendants, or some of them, together with other persons unknown, to the number of three at least, were assembled and armed, as stated in the indictment. It is not necessary that all should be armed; if some are armed, and the others are present aiding and assisting, it will be sufficient. R. v. Smith, R. & R. 368. In R. v. Cosans, 1 Leach, 342, 343 n. (a), the Court held, that not only guns, pistols, daggers, and other instruments of war, but also bludgeons (properly so called), clubs, and such other things as are not in common use for any other purpose but as weapons, are within the meaning of the Act. See R. v. Hutchinson, 1 Leach, 339. A common whip has been held not to be an offensive weapon (R. v. Fletcher, 1 Leach, 23, 342 n.), and bats, which are long poles used by smugglers to carry tubs, were also held not to be offensive weapons within 6 G. 4, c. 108, s. 56 (rep.). R. v. Noakes, 5 C. & P. 326. If, in the heat of an affray, a man catches up a hatchet accidentally, this is not within the meaning of the statute. R. v. Rose, 1 Leach, 342 n. Also, to bring the case within the statute, it must appear that the parties had deliberately assembled for the purpose charged in the indictment.

The purpose for which the defendants assembled is proved, either expressly, by the evidence of an accomplice, or the like; or impliedly, by evidence of circumstances from which the jury may fairly presume it.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Blasphemous Libel.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, unlawfully and wickedly composed or printed or published, or caused to be composed or printed or published, a blasphemous libel concerning the Holy Scriptures and the Christian religion, the tenor of which is as follows: [Set out in ordinary language the substance of the blasphemous parts relied upon.]

Misdemeanor: fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (ante, p. 246). See 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 8, ss. 4, 7, ante, pp. 1114, 1115, as to second convictions.

Blasphemy and offences against religion, and composing, printing or publishing blasphemous libels, are not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) seems to apply to blasphemous libel: 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 6 (post, p. 1241). No criminal prosecution may be commenced against any proprietor, publisher, editor, or any person responsible for the publication of a newspaper as defined by 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 1, and 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 1 (post, pp. 1240, 1241), for any libel published therein, without the order of a judge at chambers, the application for which must be made on notice to the person accused, who must have an opportunity of being heard against it. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 8 (post, p. 1242). The judge's decision is final. Ex parte Pulbrook [1892] 1 Q. B. 86; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 91.

Definition.]—The gist of the offence of blasphemy is the use of language having a tendency to vilify the Christian religion or the Bible. 1 Hawk. c. 5, ss. 1, 2: R. v. Mary Carlile, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1033, and authorities collected at 1039 n., and in R. v. Hetherington, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 563, 590 n. It is immaterial whether the words used are spoken or written. 2 Starkie on Slander (6th ed.) 622: Odgers on Libel (5th ed.), 477; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 393; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 125: and see R. v. Richard Carlile, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1423, Abbott, C.J.; R. v. Richard Carlile, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1387, Abbott, C.J. It has been held blasphemous to speak of Christ as an impostor and murderer: R. v. Waddington, 1 L. J. (K. B.) 37; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1339; 1 B. & C. 26: and see Cowan v. Milbourn, L. R. 2 Ex. 230; 35 L. J. (Ex.) 124; to speak of the Old Testament as the work of a random idiot. R. v. Hetherington, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 563; 5 Jur. 529; and cf. R. v. Moxon, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 693 (the case of Shelley's Queen Mab), and the comments on that case in R. v. Hicklin, L. R. 3 Q. B. 360, 372; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 89. In R. v. Petcherine, 8 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1086; 7 Cox, 79 (Ir.), it was held that it was blasphemous to burn any version of the Holy Scriptures.

It is not blasphemy to vilify the Jewish or any non-Christian religion. R. v. Gathercole, 2 Lew. 237: and the disputes of learned men upon particular controverted points of religion are not punishable as blasphemy. R. v. Woolston, 2 Str. 834. Publications discussing with decency and gravity questions as to Christian doctrine or statements in the Hebrew Scriptures, and even questioning their truth, are not punishable as blasphemy; but publications which in an indecent and malicious spirit assail and asperse the truth of Christianity, or of the Scriptures, in language calculated and intended to shock the feelings and outrage the belief of mankind, are punishable as blasphemous libels. R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, 217, Coleridge, C.J.: R. v. Hetherington, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 563, 590, Denman, C.J. If the decencies of controversy are observed, even the fundamentals of religion may be attacked without the writer being guilty of blasphemy. R. v. Ramsay and Foote, 15 Cox, 231, 238; 1 Cab. & Ell. 126, Coleridge, C.J. The cases upon this subject are: R. v. Atwood, Cro. Jac. 421: R. v. Taylor, 3 Keb. 621; Tremayne, 226; 1 Vent. 293; Starkie, Slander (6th ed.), 615: R. v. Clendon, 2 Str. 790, cit.: R. v. Hall, 1 Str. 416: R. v. Curl, 2 Str. 789; 17 St. Tr. 153: R. v. Annet, 1 W. Bl. 395; 3 Burn. Eccl. Law (9th ed.), 386: R. v. Williams, 26 St. Tr. 653: R. v. Eaton, 31 St. Tr. 927: R. v. Richard Carlile, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1387; 3 B. & Ald. 161; R. v. Waddington, 1 L. J. (K. B.) 37; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1339; 1 B. & C. 26: R. v. Holyoake, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1381: R. v. Pooley, 8 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1089: R. v. Taylor, supra: R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, 217: R. v. Ramsay and Foote, 15 Cox, 231: R. v. Boulter, 72 J. P.

188; R. v. Gott, 16 Cr. App. R. 87. Phillimore, J., refused to state a case on the point as to whether the direction of Coleridge, C.J., in R. v. Foote (supra) was the test as to whether or not the words charged constituted in law blasphemous libel. R. v. Boulter, ante, p. 1162. A number of other cases not fully reported are collected in Starkie on Slander (6th ed.), 615-620, and Odgers on Libel (5th ed.), 479-484. The provision in 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 73 (ante, p. 1115), as to allowing exculpatory evidence in answer to a primâ facie case of liability for publication, applies to a prosecution for the publication of a blasphemous libel. R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, 217, Coleridge, C.J.

51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 3 (post, p. 1241), which gives a qualified protection to newspaper reports of judicial proceedings, and s. 4 (post, p. 1242), which gives a modified protection to newspaper reports of public meetings, both contain provisoes that nothing in those sections shall authorize the publication of any blasphemous matter. These provisions merely save the law as it previously stood. R. v. Mary Carlile, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1033: Steele v. Brannan L. R. 7 C. P. 261; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 85. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 6 (post, p. 1239), does not apply to blasphemous libel. R. v. Duffy, 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 303; 9 Ir. L. R. 329; 2 Cox, 45; and a justification of a blasphemy cannot be pleaded, nor is argument as to its truth permitted; R. v. Tunbridge, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1368. Cooke v. Hughes, Ry. & M. 112, 114; for the gist of the offence is vilification of the tenets of the Christian religion with intent to bring religion into contempt, corrupt public morals, and shock or insult believers. See Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), 125; 2 Steph. Hist. Cr. Law, 298. There is no copyright in a blasphemous libel. Lawrence v. Smith, Jacob, 471; Murray v. Benbow, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1409.

Evidence.

The evidence of publication is the same as in the case of seditious libel (ante, p. 1120); or defamatory libel (post, pp. 1248 et seq.). And see R. v. Hetherington, 4 St. Tr. (N S.) 563.

SECT. 2.

DISTURBING PUBLIC WORSHIP, ETC.

Common Law.

It is an indictable misdemeanor at common law to strike any person in a church or churchyard. Wilson v. Greaves, 1 Burr. 240, 243, Lord Mansfield: and see Star Chamber Reports (ed. Baildon), p. 336; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 21. Ecclesiastical jurisdiction over such offences, except when committed by a person in holy orders, was abolished in 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 32, s. 1). As to contemptuous words with reference to the book of common prayer. etc., see "Blasphemy" (ante, p. 1106).

Statutes.

1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 3.]—Punishment for disturbing licensed preachers in their sermons or priests saying mass, and for defacing crucifixes, etc.

1 Eliz. c. 2 (Act of Uniformity), s. 3.]—Punishment for unlawfully interrupting ministers of the Established Church.

1 W. & M. c. 18 (Toleration Act), s. 15.]—Punishment for unlawful disturbance of worship of Established Church or Nonconformist congregation. (See R. v. Wroughton), 3 Burr. 1683.)

52 G. 3, c. 155 (Places of Religious Worship Act, 1812), s. 12.]—And . . . if any person or persons, at any time after the passing of this Act (29th July, 1812), do and shall wilfully and maliciously or contemptuously disquiet or disturb any meeting, assembly, or congregation of persons assembled for religious worship, permitted or authorized by this Act, or any former Act or Acts of Parliament, or shall in any way disturb, molest, or misuse any preacher, teacher, or person officiating at such meeting, assembly, or congregation, or any person or persons there assembled, such person or persons so offending, upon proof thereof before any justice of the peace by two or more credible witnesses, shall find two sureties, to be bound by recognizances in the penal sum of fifty pounds, to answer for such offence, and in default of such sureties shall be committed to prison, there to remain till the next general or quarter sessions, and upon conviction of the said offence at the said general or quarter sessions, shall suffer the pain and penalty of forty pounds. [This Act did not extend to Quakers' meeting-houses (s. 14), nor does it extend to the meetings for religious worship mentioned in 18 & 19 Vict. c. 86, s. 1; but see 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, s. 4, infra.]

2 & 3 W. 4, c. 115 (Roman Catholic Churches Act, 1832), s. 1.]—His Majesty's subjects professing the Roman Catholic religion, in respect to their schools, places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes, in Great Britain, and the property held therewith, and the persons employed in or about the same, shall in respect thereof be subject to the same laws as the Protestant dissenters are subject to in England in respect to their schools and places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes, and not further nor otherwise.

9 & 10 Vict. c. 59 (Religious Disabilities Act, 1846), s. 2.]—Persons professing the Jewish religion to be subject to the same laws as Protestant dissenters as to their schools, places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes.

Sect. 4.]—All laws now (18th Aug., 1846) in force against the wilfully and maliciously or contemptuously disquieting or disturbing any meeting, assembly, or congregation of persons assembled for religious worship, permitted or authorized by any former Act or Acts of Parliament, or the disturbing, molesting, or misusing any preacher, teacher, or person officiating at such meeting, assembly, or congregation, shall apply respectively to all meetings, assemblies, or congregations whatsoever of persons lawfully assembled for religious worship, and the preachers, teachers, or persons officiating at such last-mentioned meetings, assemblies, or congregations, and the persons there assembled.

18 & 19 Vict. c. 81 (Places of Public Worship Registration Act, 1855), s. 2.]—Places of public worship of Protestant dissenters and of persons professing the Roman Catholic religion to be certified to the Registrar-General.

Indictment for disturbing a Congregation of Baptists during Divine Service. (52 G. 3, c. 155, s. 12, ante, p. 1164.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Disturbing religious worship, contrary to section 12 of the Places of Religious Worship Act, 1812.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of Middlesex, wilfully and maliciously disturbed a congregation of persons assembled for religious worship, permitted by law, at the Baptist Chapel in the parish of Hornsey, in the said county.

Fine: 40*l.* for each defendant (52 G. 3, c. 155, s. 12). R. v. Hube, 5 T. R. 542; Peake (3rd ed.), 180. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 32 (ante, p. 1165). See also Williams v. Glenister, 2 B. & C. 699.

This offence may be tried at quarter sessions; 52 G. 3, c. 155, s. 12; or in the High Court of Justice (K. B. D.): R. v. Wroughton, 3 Burr. 1683; or at the assizes, if removed from the sessions by certiorari; R. v. Hube, supra.

Evidence.

1. Prove that the chapel or meeting-house was certified and registered; which may be done by the clerk of the peace producing the book, etc., in which the same was registered, or by an examined or certified copy of the entry, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14 (ante, p. 443). Where the chapel or meeting-house has been registered under the Places of Worship Registration Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 81), the registration may be proved by the certificate mentioned in s. 11 of that Act (ante, p. 1165). 1 W. & M. c. 18, has been held to extend to a registered congregation of foreign Lutherans. R. v. Hube, supra. It is immaterial whether the officiating clergyman has qualified according to the statute or not. Id.

2. Prove the disturbance. Where, in a contest for the situation of a clerk to a meeting-house, one clerk pulled the other from the desk, it was held to be a disturbance within the statute, R. v. Hube, supra, although the statute was certainly intended principally to apply to persons who with violence oppose a form of worship inconsistent with their own ideas and tenets.

3. On an indictment under this section (as extended by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59) for disturbing a meeting of the Catholic Apostolic Church, it appeared that the defendant was a deacon of the church, and he raised at the trial a contention that as such deacon he was entitled to make the objection to the service for which he was charged, viz., putting on his hat and using violent language in the presence of the assembly. Held, that, on the defence thus raised, the jury ought to have been directed to find whether he had acted wilfully, contemptuously, and maliciously. R. v. Dinnick, 74 J. P. 32; 26 T. L. R. 74 (C. C. A.).

CHAPTER III.

OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE.

SECT. 1.

ESCAPE.

Common Law.

"Escape" proper is where a person having a prisoner lawfully in his custody voluntarily or negligently suffers him to go at large. 1 Hale, 570; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 115; Halsbury's Laws of England, vol. ix., p. 508. The custodian is said to be guilty of treason who "voluntarily" suffers the escape of a man in custody for treason; 1 Hale, 234; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), 115; and to be liable as an accessory after the fact to the prisoner's crime if he is guilty of felony, 1 Hale, 235; and to be guilty of a misdemeanor if the prisoner was in custody for misdemeanor; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 115. A custodian who "negligently" allows his prisoner to escape from lawful custody is guilty of a misdemeanor. 1 Hale, 600; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), 115; and see indictment, post, p. 1173.

It is also an indictable misdemeanor at common law, punishable by fine and imprisonment (with or without hard labour: 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 29, ante, p. 246), for a prisoner whether innocent or guilty to escape without the use of force from lawful custody on a criminal charge, whether the escape is effected by artifice, or in consequence of neglect in the custodian, and whether it is made from gaol or in transit thereto. 2 Hawk. c. 19; 1 Hale, 590; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 159: R. v. Allan, C. & Mar. 295; Halsbury's Laws of England, vol. ix., p. 508.

Persons who aid a prisoner to escape are at common law guilty as principals, or may be indicted for rescue (post, p. 1177); and see R. v. Allan, supra.

Statutes.

31 Edw. 3, st. 1, c. 14.]—Item, it is accorded that the escapes of thieves and felons and the chattels of felons and of fugitives, and also escapes of clerks convict out of their ordinaries' prison, from henceforth to be judged before any of the King's justices shall be levied from time to time as they shall fall, as well of the time past as of the time to come.

16 G. 2, c. 31 (Prison Escape Act, 1742), s. 1.—Aiding escapes.]—For the further punishment of persons who shall aid or assist prisoners to attempt to escape out of lawful custody (be it enacted, etc., that), if any person shall, from and after the 24th day of June, 1743, by any means whatsoever, be aiding or assisting to (sic) any prisoner to attempt to make his or her escape from any gaol, although no escape be actually made, in case such prisoner then was attainted or convicted of treason, or any felony, except petty larceny, or lawfully committed to or detained in any gaol for treason, or any felony, except petty larceny, expressed in the warrant of commitment or detainer, every person so offending, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony, and shall be transported to one of his Majesty's colonies or plantations in America, for the term of seven years [now penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; see 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, ante, pp. 238, 239]; and in case such prisoner then was convicted of, committed to, or detained in any gaol for petty larceny, or any other crime not being treason or felony, expressed in the warrant of his or her commitment or detainer as aforesaid, or then was in gaol upon any process whatsoever for any debt, damages, costs, sum or sums of money amounting in the whole to the sum of one hundred pounds, every person so offending as aforesaid, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be deemed and adjudged to be guilty of a misdemeanor, for which he or she shall be liable to a fine and imprisonment. (As to common law liability in such cases, see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 555 et seq.)

It is difficult to say how far 16 G. 2, c. 31, ss. 1, 2, are still in force. See 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 569n. They were repealed by 4 G. 4, c. 64, s. 1, so far "as relates to the escape of any prisoner from any gaol or prison to which" 4 G. 4, c. 64, extended. The prisons to which 4 G. 4, c. 64, extended are stated in 2 Statutes Revised (2nd ed.), p. 160. That Act specially excepted Bethlehem, Bridewell, the King's Bench, and Fleet Prisons, the prison of the Marshalsea and Palace Courts, the Millbank Penitentiary and Gloucester Penitentiary, and vessels provided for the reception and employment of convicts sentenced to transportation: and this exception was not affected by the subsequent repeal of 4 G. 4, c. 64, by 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 73. The Millbank and Gloucester Penitentiaries and the hulks have been abolished, and convict prisons have been substituted for the hulks. As to escapes from such prisons, see post, p. 1176. The Fleet Prison and the prison of the Marshalsea and Palace Courts were abolished, and "the Queen's Prison" was substituted by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 22. That prison was discontinued and Whitecross Street Prison substituted (25 & 26 Vict. c. 104). The latter prison was discontinued in 1870 under s. 12 of the Act last mentioned, and the City Prison at Holloway was substituted as "the Queen's Prison." It had been made a valid prison by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 70, and is a local prison within 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126 (see Home Office Orders, 19th May, 1886; Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 10, tit. Prison E., p. 72). Brixton Prison, appointed by order of 16*th October,* 1901, is now used for male prisoners committed by the High Court, and Holloway only for female prisoners. The result seems to be that 16 G. 2, c. 31, ss. 1, 2, can apply now only to the City Bridewell (used only for recalcitrant apprentices), and to Bethlehem Hospital, which is now an asylum for criminal lunatics within 23 & 24 Vict. c. 75, s. 12, and is not on the site of the old hospital.]

Sect. 2.—Conveying into prison the means of escape.]—And . . . if any person shall, from and after the said 24th day of June, 1743, convey or cause to be conveyed into any gaol or prison any vizor, or other disguise, or any instrument or arms proper to facilitate the escape of the prisoners, and the same shall deliver or cause to be delivered to any prisoner in any such gaol, or to any other person there for the use of any such prisoner, without the consent or privity of the keeper or under-keeper of any gaol or prison, every such person although no escape or attempt to escape be actually made, shall be deemed to have delivered such vizor, or other disguise, or instrument, or arms, with an intent to aid and assist such prisoner to escape or attempt to escape; and in case such prisoner then was attainted or convicted of treason, or any felony, except petty larceny, or lawfully committed to or detained in any such gaol for treason, or any felony, except petty larceny, expressed in the warrant of commitment or detainer (i.e., clearly and expressly stated; R. v. Walker, 1 Leach, 97: R. v. Greenlif, Id. 98 n., 363); every person so offending and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall in like manner be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony, and shall be transported to one of his Majesty's colonies or plantations in America for the term of seven years [now penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment with or without hard labour, for not more than two years (54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, ante, pp. 238, 239]; but in case the prisoner to whom, or for whose use, such vizor or disguise, instrument, or arms shall be so delivered, then was convicted, committed, or detained for petty larceny, or any other crime not being treason or felony, expressed in the warrant of commitment or detainer, or upon any process whatsoever for any debt, damages, costs, sum or sums of money, amounting in the whole to the sum of one hundred pounds, every such person so offending, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be deemed and adjudged to be guilty of a misdemeanor, for which he or she shall be in like manner liable to a fine and imprisonment. [As to how far s. 2 is in force, see note to s. 1, supra. The fact that the prisoner had already been pardoned, or that the accused did not know of what specific offence the prisoner had been convicted, is no defence to an indictment under this section. R. v. Shaw, R. & R. 526. The statute does not apply where an actual escape has been effected. R. v. Tilley, 2 Leach. 662.]

Sect. 3.—Aiding escape from constable.]—And . . . if any person shall from and after the 24th day of June, 1743, aid or assist any prisoner to attempt to make his or her escape from the custody of any constable, headborough, tithingman, or other officer or person who shall then have the lawful charge of such prisoner, in order to carry him or her to gaol, by virtue of a warrant of commitment for treason or any felony except petty larceny expressed in such warrant; or if any person shall be aiding or assisting to (sic) any felon to attempt to make his escape from on board any boat, ship, or vessel carrying felons for transportation, or from the contractor for the transportation of such felons, his assigns or agents, or any other person to whom such felon shall have been lawfully delivered in order for transportation, then every person so offending, and being lawfully convicted thereof, shall be deemed and adjudged to be guilty of felony, and shall be transported to one of his Majesty's colonies or plantations in America, for the term of seven years [now penal servitude or imprisonment. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239].

Indictment against a Constable for negligently permitting an Escape. (Common Law.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Permitting an escape.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., being a police constable of the Metropolitan Police and having C. D., a person arrested under a lawful warrant for stealing, lawfully in his custody, on the —— day of ——, in the county of London, negligently permitted the said C. D. to escape out of his custody.

Where the escape is negligently permitted by an officer, the punishment is said to be fine only. 2 Hawk. c. 19; 1 Hale, 600; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 561. This appears to be erroneous, and to arise from a misconception of the nature of a fine. See 2 Pollock & Maitland, Hist. Eng. Law, 512. Officers of county, borough, or metropolitan police are in the same position as a parish constable at common law. See 10 G. 4, c. 44, s. 4; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 93, s. 8; 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 191.

Where a private person is guilty of negligently permitting an escape, the punishment is fine and (or) imprisonment. 2 Hawk. c. 20, s. 6 (ante, p. 246). The offender must be restrained of his liberty for some criminal matter, otherwise the escape is not indictable at common law; but it is punishable under 16 G. 2, c. 31, s. 1 (ante, p. 1169). It is actionable under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 98, s. 31; and where the escape is due to the negligence of sheriffs or other officers, may be dealt with under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 55, s. 29, or by attachment. In case of negligent escape, the custodian may, it seems, retake his prisoner by force. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 13: R. v. Forster, 1 Lew. 187: R. v. Dadson, 20 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 57; 2 Den. 35.

Evidence.

Prove that A. B. is a police constable and that he had C. D. in actual custody under a lawful warrant. See 2 Hawk. c. 19, ss. 1, 4. And, lastly, prove the escape. It is not necessary to prove negligence in the defendant; the law implies it; see 1 Hale, 600; but if the escape were not in fact negligent, if C. D. by force rescued himself, or were rescued by others, and the constable made fresh pursuit after him, but without effect, all this must be proved upon the part of the defendant. Also, it is immaterial whether C. D. were guilty of the larceny or not, provided that the warrant were such as would justify A. B. in detaining him. (See ante, pp. 897 et seq.)

Indictment against a Gaoler for a Voluntary Escape.

(Common Law.)

Statement of Offence.

Permitting escape.

Particulars of Offence.

A. B., then being the Governor of his Majesty's Prison at ——, in the county of London, and having the lawful custody of C. D., a prisoner undergoing a sentence of imprisonment in the said prison, on the —— day of ——, unlawfully permitted the said C. D. to escape.

A voluntary escape amounts to the same offence, and is punishable in the same degree as the offence of which the prisoner was guilty, and for which he was in custody, whether treason, felony, or misdemeanor (trespass). The officer, however, cannot be thus punished until after the original delinquent has been convicted; but before such conviction he may be fined and imprisoned as for a misdemeanor. 4 Bl. Com. 130; 1 Hale, 235; 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 22; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 115.

Evidence.

Prove the conviction of C. D., and that, upon his conviction, he was remanded or committed to the custody of the defendant. The conviction may be proved in the manner pointed out by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 13 (ante, p. 421), or 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, p. 422). Prove him afterwards to have been in the custody of the defendant, in pursuance of his sentence. And, lastly, prove the escape. An escape is voluntary where the keeper gives the prisoner his liberty with the object of saving him from trial and punishment. See 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 10; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed., 557). It does not seem to be necessary to prove that the escape was voluntary; the law, it would seem, will presume that, until the contrary appear.

On the transfer of local prisons to the Crown, orders were made constituting particular prisons, whether within or without a county, as the common gaol for such county. For list of these orders, see Index to Statutory Rules and Orders (ed. 1919), p. 767, tit. Prison E.; and see 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, ss. 57, 58; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 21, s. 30. Removal of prisoners from one prison to another under lawful authority is not an escape. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, ss. 63-65; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 21, s. 28.

Indictment for aiding Escape. (16 G. 2, c. 31, s. 1, ante, p. 1169.)

For precedent, see R. v. Shaw, R. & R. 526.

Indictment for conveying Files into a Local Prison, with intent to facilitate Escape of Prisoner. (28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 37, ante, p. 1172.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Assisting a prisoner to escape, contrary to the Prison Act, 1865, s. 37.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with intent to facilitate the escape of C. D., a prisoner in his Majesty's Prison at ——, conveyed or caused to be conveyed unto the said prisoner two steel files.

Felony: 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 37 (ante, p. 1172), imprisonment with hard labour for not more than two years. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, applies to all local prisons in England and Wales, but not to "convict" prisons (which include Aylesbury (females), Borstal, Dartmoor, Parkhurst, and Portland Prisons); nor to any military or naval prison (28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, ss. 3, 4). (See ante, p. 1172.)

Evidence.

Prove that C. D. was in custody, and a prisoner in the gaol mentioned in the indictment. The words of the statute are, "any prisoner." Prove that whilst C. D. was so in custody, the defendant conveyed to him one or more files; and prove that such files were calculated to facilitate his escape by filing his irons, or the window bars, or the like. The mere delivery of such instruments to the prisoner is a fact from which the jury may well infer the intent, and it is immaterial, upon this statute, whether an escape be actually made or not. A crowbar is an "article or thing" within the meaning of this section. R. v. Payne, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 27; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 170.

SECT. 2.

BREACH OF PRISON.

Common Law.

Breach of prison consists in the escape from lawful custody by the use of any force. It is immaterial whether the custody is criminal or civil and whether the prisoner is actually within a gaol, or is only in the constable's house or a lock-up or the stocks, etc., provided that he is lawfully imprisoned or restrained of his liberty. 2 Hawk. c. 18, s. 21.

Breaking prison and escaping seem to have been felony at common law, if the prisoner was detained on a charge of treason or felony, and whether he had been convicted or not; conspiracy or unsuccessful attempt to break prison seems to be only a misdemeanor. 2 Chit. Cr. L. 150 n.; 1 Hale, 607; 2 Hawk. c. 18; Halsbury's Laws of England, vol. ix., p. 507.

Statute

23 Edw. 1, Stat. de frang. pris. (1 Edw. 2, st. 2, c. 1, Ruffhead).—Punishment.]—Concerning prisoners which break prison, our lord the King willeth and commandeth, that none from henceforth that breaketh prison shall have judgment of life or member for breaking of prison only; except the cause for which he was taken and imprisoned did require such judgment, if he had been convicted thereupon according to the law and custom of the realm, albeit in times past it hath been used otherwise.

Indictment for breaking Prison (Common Law.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Breaking prison.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, then being a prisoner in his Majesty's prison at Wormwood Scrubs, in the county of London, serving a sentence of twelve months' imprisonment with hard labour passed on him at the Central Criminal Court on the —— day of —— upon a conviction for stealing, broke the said prison by cutting two iron bars of the prison by means whereof he escaped.

Felony, if the defendant was in custody for treason or felony (23 Edw. 1, supra; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 158; 1 Hale, 612): penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 8 (ante, p. 236); 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

Misdemeanor, if the defendant was in custody for any other offence: fine and (or) imprisonment, without hard labour. 2 Hawk. c. 18, s. 1; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 119.

Evidence.

Prove that the accused was in prison as alleged; and prove that, while in custody there, he broke the prison and escaped.

The escape must be proved, if the breaking is charged as a felony; 2 Hawk. c. 18, s. 12; but not, it would seem, if the breaking is charged as a misdemeanor only. The breaking proved must be an actual breaking; merely getting over the walls, or passing out through a door, or the like, is an escape only, and not a breach of prison; 1 Hale, 611; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 150 n.; and see R. v. Burridge, 3 P. Wms. 439. For this reason, it would seem that the manner of the breaking should be stated in the indictment, as in the above precedent, in order that the Court may see that it was such as is necessary in law to constitute a breach of prison. But the breaking need not be intentional; and therefore where a prisoner, in effecting his escape, by accident threw down some loose bricks at the top of the prison wall, placed there to impede escape and give alarm, it was held to be a prison breach. R. v. Haswell, R. & R. 458.

Although it is not material, on this indictment, whether the defendant was guilty of the offence for which he was imprisoned or not, 2 Hawk. c. 18, s. 16, yet if he can prove that no such offence was ever actually committed, or that he was arrested and detained without any reasonable cause of suspicion against him, 1 Hale, 610, 611, or if he has been subsequently indicted for the offence and acquitted, this will be a sufficient defence to the indictment for breach of prison. The mere dismissal, however, by a justice, on the preliminary examination before him, of the charge on which the defendant was imprisoned, is no defence to an indictment for the breach of prison by the defendant while in custody on the charge which was afterwards so dismissed. R. v. Waters, 12 Cox, 390, Martin, B.

SECT. 3.

RESCUE.

Common Law.

Rescue at common law is forcibly liberating a prisoner from lawful custody, 1 Co. Inst. 160; 1 Hale, 606, 611; 2 Hawk. c. 21; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 182; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 567; Steph Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.). p. 116. If the prisoner is in private custody, the rescuer is not liable criminally unless he knew that the prisoner was in custody on a criminal charge. Id. The offence is treason, felony, or misdemeanor, according to the quality of the offence of the person rescued; but if the latter is not convicted of the offence for which he was in custody, the rescue is only a misdemeanor. Id. (See post, p. 1179.)

Statutes.

25 G. 2, c. 37 (Murder Act, 1751), s. 9.—Rescuing murderers while proceeding to execution.]—. . . If any person or persons whatsoever shall by force set at liberty, or rescue, or attempt to rescue or set at liberty, any person out of prison, who shall be committed for or found guilty of murder, or rescue, or attempt to rescue any person convicted of murder, going to execution, or during execution, every person so offending shall be deemed, taken, and adjudged to be guilty of felony. . . .

1 & 2 G. 4, c. 88 (Rescue Act, 1821), s. 1.]—Whereas divers daring attempts have of late been made to effect the rescue or prevent the detention of persons charged with or committed for or on suspicion of felony; and whereas it might tend more effectually to prevent the commission of such offences, if such further provisions were made for the punishment of persons who may hereafter be convicted thereof, as are hereinafter enacted; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this Act, if any person shall rescue, or aid and assist in rescuing, from the lawful custody of any constable, officer, headborough, or other person whomsoever, any person charged with or suspected of or committed for any felony or on suspicion thereof, then, if the person or persons so offending shall be convicted of felony and be entitled to benefit of clergy, and be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one year, it shall be lawful for the Court, by or before whom any such person or persons shall be convicted, to order and direct, in case it shall think fit, that such person or persons, instead of being so fined and imprisoned as aforesaid, shall be transported beyond the seas for seven years, or be imprisoned only, or be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol, house of correction, or penitentiary house, for any term not less than one and not exceeding three years. [Preamble rep., 53 & 54 Vict. c. 51 (Stat. Law. Rev.). As to present punishment, see note to precedent, infra.]

5 G. 4, c. 84, s. 22.—Rescue of prisoners during conveyance for transportation.]—See post, p. 1180.

7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 91 (Punishment of Offences Act, 1837), s. 1.—Punishment for rescuing murderers.]—Recites 25 G. 2, c. 37, s. 9 (supra), and enacts that, "if any person shall after the commencement of this Act (1st Oct., 1837), be convicted of the offence thereinbefore mentioned, such person shall not suffer death, or have sentence of death awarded against him or her for the same, but shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas for the term of the natural life of such person. . . ." [Now penal servitude for life, or such less punishment as is provided by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, p. 238). Rest rep., 55 & 56 Vict. c. 19 (Stat. Law Rev.).]

14 & 15 Vict. c. 100. s. 29.—Imprisonment with hard labour.]—Ante, p. 242.

Indictment for the Rescue of a Felon from a Constable. (Common Law.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Rescuing a prisoner in custody.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, forcibly rescued C. D., then in the lawful custody of E. F., a police constable in the Metropolitan Police.

Fine and imprisonment as for a misdemeanor (ante, pp. 239, 242, 246) if the party rescued has not been convicted of the offence for which he was in custody; 2 Hawk. c. 21, s. 8. Hard labour may be imposed; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 29 (ante, p. 242). If he has been convicted for high treason, the rescue is high treason; if for felony, felony; if for a misdemeanor, a misdemeanor. 1 Hale, 607; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), 117. If the rescuers are convicted of felony, the Court may sentence them to penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or to imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 1 & 2 G. 4. c. 88, s. 1; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

Evidence.

Prove that C. D. was in the lawful custody of E. F., a police constable. If the party was convicted, the conviction may be proved by a certificate of the proper officer. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 13 (ante, p. 421); 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, p. 422). And prove that whilst so in custody the defendant forcibly rescued him, as stated in the indictment. A warrant of a justice of the peace to apprehend any person founded on a certificate of the clerk of the peace, that an indictment for a misdemeanor had been found against such person, is good (see 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 3), and therefore, if upon such warrant the person is arrested, and afterwards rescued, those who are guilty of the rescue may be convicted of a misdemeanor. R. v. Stokes, 5 C. & P. 148.

As to evidence for the defendant, it may be observed, that any circumstances that will excuse a breach of prison will excuse a rescue. See ante, p. 1177 2 Hawk. c. 21, ss. 1, 2.

SECT. 4.

BEING AT LARGE DURING A SENTENCE OF PENAL SERVITUDE.

Statutes.

5 G. 4, c. 84 (Transportation Act, 1824), s. 22.—Punishment.—Venue.]—If any offender who shall have been or shall be so sentenced or ordered to be transported or banished, or who shall have agreed or shall agree to transport or banish himself or herself, on certain conditions, either for life or any number of years, under the provisions of this or any former Act (e.g., 2 G. 2. c. 25, s. 2 (rep.)), shall be afterwards at large, within any part of his Majesty's dominions without some lawful cause, before the expiration of the term for which such offender shall have been sentenced or ordered to be transported or banished, or shall have so agreed to transport or banish himself or herself [every such offender so being at large, being thereof lawfully convicted, shall suffer death as in cases of felony, without the benefit of clergy, rep. 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 67, post, p. 1181], and such offender may be tried either in the county or place where he or she shall be apprehended, or in that from whence he or she was ordered to be transported or banished;

And if any person shall rescue or attempt to rescue, or assist in rescuing or attempting to rescue, any such offender from the custody of such superintendent or overseer, or of any sheriff or gaoler or other person conveying, removing, transporting, or reconveying him or her, or shall convey or cause to be conveyed any disguise, instrument for effecting escape, or arms, to such offender, every such offence shall be punishable in the same manner as if such offender had been confined in a gaol or prison in the custody of the sheriff or gaoler, for the crime of which such offender shall have been convicted;

And whosoever shall discover and prosecute to conviction any such offender so being at large within this kingdom, shall be entitled to a reward of twenty pounds for every such offender so convicted. (See post, p. 1182.) [This enactment is applied to penal servitude by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 3, ante, p. 238.]

Sect. 24.—Evidence of conviction.]—The clerk of the Court or other officer having the custody of the records of the Court where such sentence or order of transportation or banishment shall have been passed or made, shall, at the request of any person on his Majesty's behalf, make out and give a certificate in writing, signed by him, containing the effect and substance only (omitting the formal part) of every indictment and conviction of such offender, and of the sentence or order for his or her transportation or banishment (not taking for the same more than six shillings and eightpence), which certificate shall be sufficient evidence of the conviction, or sentence or order for the transportation or banishment of such offender: and every such certificate, if made by the clerk or officer of any court in Great Britain, shall be received in evidence, upon proof of the signature and official character of the person signing the same; and every such certificate, if made by the clerk or officer of any court out of Great Britain, shall be received in evidence, if verified by the seal of the Court, or by the signature of the judge, or one of the judges of the Court, without further proof. See 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 1 (ante, p. 442); 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 13 (ante, p. 421); 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, p. 422).

4 & 5 W. 4, c. 67 (Transportation Act, 1834).]—Recites 5 G. 4, c. 84, s. 22, supra, and enacts, that any person convicted of any offence above specified in the said Transportation Act, 1824, or of aiding or abetting, counselling or procuring the commission thereof, shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas for his or her natural life. (For present punishment, see infra.)

A. B., being a person undergoing a sentence of seven years' penal servitude passed upon him on the —— day of ——, at the Central Criminal Court, while such sentence remained in force and had not expired, on the —— day of —— was unlawfully at large in the county of ——.

Venue: the county where the defendant was apprehended, or the county whence he was ordered to be transported or kept in penal servitude. 5 G. 4. c. 84, s. 22.

Felony: 5 G. 4, c. 84, s. 22 : penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 67, supra; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante. p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106.)

Evidence.

The Penal Servitude Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, ante, p. 237), which abolished sentences of transportation and substituted penal servitude, provides (s. 3) that all Acts and provisions then (26th June, 1857) applicable to the punishment of offenders under sentence or orders of transportation, if at large without lawful cause before the expiration of their sentence, and all provisions then applicable to and in the case of persons under sentence or order of transportation, are to apply to and in the case of persons under sentence or order of penal servitude, as if they were persons under sentence or order of transportation. There is no express provision as to escape of penal servitude prisoners from a convict prison in England (see ante, p. 1172).

Prove the sentence of penal servitude by a certificate in writing, which must be given on application by the clerk of the Court, or other officer having the custody of the records of the Court where such order was made (see R. v. Jones, 2 C. & K. 524 : R. v. Parsons, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 24; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 167; 5 G. 4, c. 22, s. 24), and is made evidence if it purports to be signed by the person having the custody of the records of the Court, without any proof of the signature or official character of such person (8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 1, ante, p. 442); see also 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 13 (ante, p. 421); 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, p. 422). The certificate must contain the effect and substance of the indictment and conviction of such offender, and of the sentence of penal servitude. Merely stating that the prisoner was convicted of felony, without stating the nature of the felony, is insufficient. See R. v. Watson, R. & R. 468, decided on 56 G. 3, c. 27, s. 8 (rep.), which is in substance the same as 5 G. 4, c. 84, s. 22. Prove also the prisoner's identity.

Prove also that the defendant was at large before the expiration of the term for which he was ordered to be kept in penal servitude. The fact of the sentence being in force when the defendant was found at large is sufficiently proved by the certificate of the conviction and sentence—the judgment remaining unreversed; although it appear on the face of the certificate that the sentence was one which could not legally have been inflicted on the defendant for the offence of which, according to the certificate, he had been convicted. R. v. Finney, 2 C. & K. 774. For the defence, it may be proved that the prisoner is at large conditionally under a licence of ticket-of-leave or otherwise, and that the conditions have been observed. See 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, ss. 4, 5, 8; 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, ss. 4, 5; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, ss. 2-5; 3 Geo. 5, c. 4; or that he has been pardoned. R. v. Miller, 2 W. Bl. 797; 1 Leach, 74. Where the terms of a conditional pardon are not observed the sentence revives. R. v. Madan, 1 Leach, 223 : Aickles' case, Id. 390.

The judge at the trial has power to order the county treasurer to pay the prosecutor the reward under 5 G. 4, c. 84, s. 22. R. v. Emmons, 2 M. & Rob. 279 : R. v. Ambury, 6 Cox, 79. (See ante, p. 289.)

SECT 5.

PERJURY, SUBORNATION AND ATTEMPTED SUBORNATION OF PERJURY, FABRICATION OF EVIDENCE, AND FALSE STATEMENTS AND DECLARATIONS.

PERJURY.

The Perjury Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6), has consolidated and simplified the law relating to perjury and kindred offences and rendered it unnecessary to set out much of the matter which appeared in former editions of this work under this head. Such cases as are retained are included as illustrative of the law before the statute and now embodied in it.

Statutes.

1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6 (Perjury Act, 1911), s. 1.—Perjury.]—(1) If any person lawfully sworn as a witness or as an interpreter in a judicial proceeding wilfully makes a statement material in that proceeding, which he knows to be false or does not believe to be true, he shall be guilty of perjury, and shall, on conviction thereof on indictment, be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven years, or to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine or to both such penal servitude or imprisonment and fine.

(2) The expression "judicial proceeding" includes a proceeding before any court, tribunal, or person having by law power to hear, receive, and examine evidence on oath.

(3) Where a statement made for the purposes of a judicial proceeding is not made before the tribunal itself, but is made on oath before a person authorized by law to administer an oath to the person who makes the statement, and to record or authenticate the statement, it shall, for the purposes of this section, be treated as having been made in a judicial proceeding.

(4) A statement made by a person lawfully sworn in England for the purposes of a judicial proceeding—

(a) in another part of his Majesty's dominions; or

(b) in a British tribunal lawfully constituted in any place by sea or land outside his Majesty's dominions; or

(c) in a tribunal of any foreign state, shall, for the purposes of this section, be treated as a statement made in a judicial proceeding in England.

(5) Where, for the purposes of a judicial proceeding in England, a person is lawfully sworn under the authority of an Act of Parliament—

(a) in any other part of his Majesty's dominions; or

(b) before a British tribunal or a British officer in a foreign country, or within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England;

a statement made by such person so sworn as aforesaid (unless the Act of Parliament under which it was made otherwise specifically provides) shall be treated for the purposes of this section as having been made in the judicial proceeding in England for the purposes whereof it was made.

(6) The question whether a statement on which perjury is assigned was material is a question of law to be determined by the court of trial.

"Lawfully sworn."]—By s. 15 (1), post, p. 1193, for the purposes of this Act, the forms and ceremonies used in administering the oath are immaterial if the court or person before whom the oath is taken has power to administer an oath for the purpose of verifying the statement in question, and if the oath has been administered in a form and with ceremonies which the person taking the oath has accepted without objection or has declared to be binding on him. By s. 15 (2) oath includes affirmation and declaration. For other statutes, see post, pp. 1199, 1200. As to summary punishment of children of tender years giving false evidence without oath, see the Children Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 67), s. 30 (b), ante, p. 989.

Judicial proceeding.]—Before this Act there were many decisions as to whether the proceeding in which the statement, the subject of the indictment, was made was a judicial proceeding or not, but having regard to the wide terms of sub-ss. (2) (5) of this section it does not seem necessary to include them now. An action brought against a non-existent person has been held to be a judicial proceeding. R. v. Castiglione, 23 Cox, 46; 106 L. T. 1023; 76 J. P. 351; 28 T. L. R. 403; 7 Cr. App. R. 233.

Competent jurisdiction.]—At common law it was necessary to prove that the false statement was made before a court of competent jurisdiction, and if it was made before a person who had no jurisdiction of the cause (3 Co. Inst. 16; Paine's case, Yelv. 111) the prosecution failed. See 1 Hawk. c. 69, ss. 3, 4; Bac. Abr. Perjury (A.): R. v. Crossley, 7 L. R. 315; Dunn v. R. 12 Q. B. 1026; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 41; R. v. Dunn, 1 D. & R. 10; R. v. Hanks, 3 C. & P. 419; R. v. Stone, Dears. 251; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 14; R. v. Townsend, 10 Cox, 356; 4 F. & F. 1089. The Perjury Act, 1911, does not contain the expression "competent jurisdiction," and having regard to the definition of "judicial proceeding" in s. 1 (2) it would seem that perjury may be committed though the court had no jurisdiction in the particular cause in which the statement was made.

"Material in that proceeding."]—The statute requires that the statement in question shall be material in the judicial proceeding. At common law it was also necessary to prove that that part of the oath upon which the perjury was assigned was material to the matter then under the consideration of the Court. 3 Co. Inst. 167; R. v. Griepe, 1 Ld. Raym. 256; 2 Salk. 513: R. v. Nicholl, 1 B. & Ald. 21; 8 L. J. (O. S.) M. C. 112: R. v. Townsend, 10 Cox, 356; 4 F. & F. 1089: R. v. Hadfield, 16 Cox, 148 (C. C. R.). For instance, if a witness were asked whether goods were paid for on a particular day, and he answered in the affirmative—if the goods were really paid for, though not on that particular day, it would not be perjury, 2 Rolle Rep. 41, 42, unless the day was material. So, if a man swore that J. S. beat another with a sword, and it turned out that he beat him with a stick, this was not perjury; for all that was material was the battery. Allen v. Westley, Hetley, 97. See 1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 8. It has been held that denial of an agreement void under the Statute of Frauds is not material, and that perjury cannot be assigned on it. R. v. Benesech, Peake, Add. Cas. 93: sed quære. See R. v. Dunston, Ry. & M. 109. On an indictment for perjury committed on the hearing of a charge of assault by a husband on his wife, an assignment of perjury on a statement by the defendant, as a witness for the husband, that he had seen the wife committing adultery, of which he had told the husband just before the assault, was held bad for immateriality, as the supposed statement could not be legally relevant to the charge of assault as affording no ground of legal justification, although it might afford some ground for mitigation of punishment. R. v. Tate, 12 Cox, 7, Cockburn, C.J. This decision was doubted in R. v. Hewitt, 9 Cr. App. R. 192, and it has since been decided that evidence given by the accused after conviction in mitigation of sentence is evidence given in "a stage of the proceeding" within the meaning of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, s. 2, and if false may be made the subject of an indictment for perjury within the Perjury Act, 1911, s. 1 (1). R. v. Wheeler [1917] 1 K. B. 283; 86 L. J. (K. B.) 40; 81 J. P. 75; 25 Cox 603; 12 Cr. App. R. 159; 33 T. L. R. 21. Perjury may be assigned upon a man's testimony as to the credit of a witness. R. v. Griepe, supra. And every question in cross-examination which goes to a witness's credit (as, whether he has before been convicted of felony) is material for this purpose. R. v. Lavey, 3 C. & K. 26: R. v. Overton, C. & Mar. 655; 2 Mood. 263: R. v. Baker [1895] 1 Q. B. 797; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 177. The last of these cases must be treated as disposing of the doubts expressed on this point by Kelly, C.B., and Byles and Lush, J.J., in R. v. Tyson, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 107: 37 L. J. (M. C.) 7; 11 Cox, 1; and by Martin, B., in R. v. Gibbon, L. & C. 109; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 98. In R. v. Baker (supra), the accused had been prosecuted before a magistrate under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 3 (rep.), for selling beer without a licence. On that charge he was a competent witness under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 51 (4) (rep.), and gave evidence in which he denied that he had authorized his solicitor to put in a plea of guilty for him to a previous charge for the same offence. This evidence was held to be material to the question under trial before the magistrate, although the accused had admitted the existence of the previous conviction. In R. v. Overton (supra), the date of a receipt given for the price of a greyhound was held material. Cf. R. v. Altass, 1 Cox, 17. On the hearing of an application for an affiliation order against H., in respect of a full-grown bastard child born in March, the mother, in answer to questions put to her in cross-examination, denied having had connection with G. in the September previous to the birth. G. was called to contradict her, and he wilfully and falsely swore that he had had connection with her at the time specified. It was held, that although the evidence of G. ought not to have been admitted to contradict the mother on a matter which went only to her credit, still, as it was admitted, it was evidence material to her credit; and, consequently, so far material in the inquiry before the justices as to be capable of being made the subject of an indictment against G. for perjury. R. v. Gibbon, ante, p. 1185. Upon an indictment for robbery committed on the night of the 13th April, a witness swore, not only (1) that the prisoner was at home on that night, but (2) that the prisoner had lived in the same house for two years previous, and (3) that during the whole of that time he had not been absent from home for more than three nights. The last two statements were proved to be false, and it was held that they were material, and proper subjects of assignments of perjury, inasmuch as they tended to render more probable the statement that the prisoner was at home on the night of the 13th April. R. v. Tyson, ante, p. 1185. Evidence of the payment of money by the putative father of a bastard child, within twelve months before the issuing of an affiliation summons against him, is material on the hearing of such summons. R. v. Berry, Bell, 46; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 86; 8 Cox, 121. Where a prisoner charged with robbery before a magistrate, having cross-examined the prosecutor whether he had not, the day before that of the alleged robbery, met him (the prisoner) in company with M., and proposed to him to commit a burglary, and the prosecutor having denied this, the prisoner called M. to prove it, it was held that M.'s evidence was not material to the issue, so that it could be made the subject of an indictment for perjury. R. v. Murray, 1 F. & F. 80; cf. R. v. Holden, 12 Cox, 166. On the trial of A. for perjury, in an affidavit made by him, and used on the taxation of costs, the signature to the affidavit was proved to be in A.'s handwriting, but the commissioner who had administered the oath was unable to identify A. as the person who made the affidavit. B was thereupon called as a witness, and swore that the affidavit was used before the taxing-master, when A. was present, and that it was then publicly said that it was A.'s affidavit. B. was afterwards indicted for perjury on A.'s trial, and it was held that the above evidence given by him on that trial was material as corroborative evidence of the affidavit having been made by A. R. v. Alsop, 11 Cox, 264; 17 W. R. 621 (C. C. R.). On the trial of an action of trover, the plaintiff's case was that the defendant had tricked him out of the goods, the subject of the action, while the plaintiff was drunk. The defendant's case was that he had fairly bought the goods from the plaintiff, who had sent for the goods from a railway station where they were lying, had signed a delivery note for them, and had then sold them to the defendant. The defendant, who was called as a witness in support of his own case, swore that the plaintiff's name on the delivery note was plaintiff's writing, and that he saw him write it. It was held that this was evidence material to the issue, upon which perjury might be assigned, the question in the action being whether the plaintiff had been imposed on by a fraud while drunk, and that it therefore became essential to ascertain whether the handwriting on the delivery note was his, as a step in ascertaining whether or not he was drunk at the time of the transaction. R. v. Naylor, 11 Cox, 13; 16 W. R. 374 (C. C. R.).

On a trial of a plaint in the county court, the judge having decided that a debt was due from the defendant, while considering how it was to be paid, asked defendant what was his christian name. Defendant wilfully and falsely swore that his name was "Edward," and not "Bernard," he being called in the summons "Bernard Edward Mullany," and the judge thereupon struck out the cause. It was held that the answer was relevant to the inquiry, and that defendant was liable to be indicted for perjury. R. v. Mullany, L. & C. 593; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 111.

Where an action and all matters in difference are referred to arbitration, and perjury is assigned on evidence given before the arbitrator, the indictment ought to state, and the evidence must show, whether the evidence alleged to be false was material in respect of the matters in issue in the action, or to the other matters in difference. R. v. Ball, 6 Cox, 360 : cf. R. v. Newman, 2 Den. 390; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 75.

It is perjury to give false evidence, whereby the judge is induced to admit other material evidence—even though the latter evidence is afterwards withdrawn by counsel, or was not legally receivable. R. v. Phillpotts, 2 Den. 302; 3 C. & K. 135; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 18. See R. v. Pepys, Peake (3rd ed.), 187 : R. v. Benesech, Peake, Add. Cas. 93 : R. v. Dunston, Ry. & M. 109 : R. v. Meek, 9 C. & P. 513 : R. v. Yates, C. & Mar. 132 : Ryalls v. R., 11 Q. B. 781; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 92.

Before the Act of 1911 there had been some difference of opinion as to whether on an indictment for perjury, the materiality of the matter in which the false swearing is proved was a question of fact for the jury, or a question of law for the judge. The Act has now by sub-s. (6) of s. 1 settled the matter in favour of the latter view.

Falsity.]—By the statute the defendant must know the statement to be false or not believe it to be true. So also at common law the matter sworn must either have been false in fact, or if true the defendant must not have known it or not have believed it to be so. 1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 6; 3 Co. Inst. 166 : R. v. Ockley, Palmer, 294. So it was held that where a man swears to a particular fact, without knowing at the time whether the fact is true or false, it is as much perjury as if he knew the fact to be false, and equally indictable. R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619, 637, Lawrence, J., and that if a man swears that J. N. revoked his will in his presence—if he really had revoked it, but it was unknown to the witness that he had done so, it is perjury. Allen v. Westley, Hetley, 97. And a man might be indicted for perjury in swearing that he believed a fact to be true which he must know to be false. R. v. Pedley, 1 Leach, 325, per Lord Mansfield : R. v. Schlesinger, 10 Q. B. 670; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 29. Sed contra, see 1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 7; 3 Co. Inst. 166; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.), 476, and authorities there mentioned. But it would seem that perjury cannot be assigned on evidence stating the opinion of the witness as to the construction of a deed. R. v. Crespigny, 1 Esp. 280, Kenyon, C.J.

The false oath must be taken deliberately and intentionally; for if taken from inadvertence or mistake, it cannot amount to wilful and corrupt perjury. 1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 2; and see R. v. Mawbey, supra, and post, p. 1189. Therefore where perjury is assigned on an answer in equity, or an affidavit, etc., the part on which the perjury is assigned may be explained by another part, or even by a subsequent answer, etc. 1 Sid. 419; Com. Dig., Just. of Peace

(B.), 102. On the trial of a cause a witness was asked three or four times by the advocate and judge whether at any time he had any coals on credit from F., to which the witness always answered "I did not." It was held that the witness's attention had been sufficiently called to the subject to found a charge of perjury against him upon the answer, although no distinct transactions on credit were suggested to him during his examination. R. v. London, 12 Cox, 50 (C. C. R.) : cf. R. v. Stolady, 1 F. & F. 518.

Sect. 2.—False statements on oath made otherwise than in a judicial proceeding.]—If any person—

(1) being required or authorised by law to make any statement on oath for any purpose, and being lawfully sworn (otherwise than in a judicial proceeding) wilfully makes a statement which is material for that purpose and which he knows to be false or does not believe to be true; or

(2) wilfully uses any false affidavit for the purposes of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, as amended by any subsequent enactment, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof on indictment, shall be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven years or to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine or to both such penal servitude or imprisonment and fine.

Sect. 3.—False statements, etc., with reference to marriage.]—(1) If any person—

(a) for the purpose of procuring a marriage, or a certificate or licence for marriage, knowingly and wilfully makes a false oath, or makes or signs a false declaration, notice or certificate required under any Act of Parliament for the time being in force relating to marriage; or

(b) knowingly and wilfully makes, or knowingly and wilfully causes to be made, for the purpose of being inserted in any register of marriage, a false statement as to any particular required by law to be known and registered relating to any marriage; or

(c) forbids the issue of any certificate or licence for marriage by falsely representing himself to be a person whose consent to the marriage is required by law knowing such representation to be false,

he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof on indictment, shall be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven years or to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine or to both such penal servitude or imprisonment and fine.

(2) No prosecution for knowingly and wilfully making a false declaration for the purpose of procuring any marriage out of the district in which the parties or one of them dwell shall take place after the expiration of eighteen months from the solemnization of the marriage to which the declaration refers.

Sect. 4.—False statements, etc., as to births or deaths.]—(1) If any person—

(a) wilfully makes any false answer to any question put to him by any registrar of births or deaths relating to the particulars required to be registered concerning any birth or death, or, wilfully gives to any such registrar any false information concerning any birth or death or the cause of any death; or

(b) wilfully makes any false certificate or declaration under or for the purposes of any Act relating to the registration of births or deaths, or, knowing any such certificate or declaration to be false, uses the same as true or gives or sends the same as true to any person; or

(c) wilfully makes, gives or uses any false statement or declaration as to a child born alive as having been still-born, or as to the body of a deceased person or a still-born child in any coffin, or falsely pretends that any child born alive was still-born; or

(d) makes any false statement with intent to have the same inserted in any register of births or deaths:

he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be liable—

(i) on conviction thereof on indictment, to penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven years, or to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine instead of either of the said punishments; and

(ii) on summary conviction thereof, to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds.

(2) A prosecution on indictment for an offence against this section shall not be commenced more than three years after the commission of the offence.

Wilfully.]—"Wilfully" means "intentionally," that is, as applied to s. 4 (b), knowing at the time of making the certificate that he was making false statements in relation to documents which purported to be made under the Act for the registration of births or deaths, and could be used under the Act. R. v. Ryan, 24 Cox, 135; 10 Cr. App. R. 4.

Sect. 5.—False statutory declarations and other false statements without oath.]—If any person knowingly and wilfully makes (otherwise than on oath) a statement false in a material particular, and the statement is made—

(a) in a statutory declaration; or

(b) in an abstract, account, balance sheet, book, certificate, declaration, entry, estimate, inventory, notice, report, return, or other document which he is authorised or required to make, attest, or verify, by any public general Act of Parliament for the time being in force; or

(c) in any oral declaration or oral answer which he is required to make by, under, or in pursuance of any public general Act of Parliament for the time being in force;

he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be liable on conviction thereof on indictment to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years, or to a fine or to both such imprisonment and fine.

Sect. 6.—False declarations, etc., to obtain registration, etc., for carrying on a vocation.]—If any person—

(a) procures or attempts to procure himself to be registered on any register or roll kept under or in pursuance of any public general Act of Parliament for the time being in force of persons qualified by law to practise any vocation or calling; or

(b) procures or attempts to procure a certificate of the registration of any person on any such register or roll as aforesaid, by wilfully making or producing or causing to be made or produced either verbally or in writing, any declaration, certificate, or representation which he knows to be false or fraudulent, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be liable on conviction thereof on indictment to imprisonment for any term not exceeding twelve months, or to a fine, or to both such imprisonment and fine.

Sect. 7.—Aiders, abettors, suborners, etc.]—(1) Every person who aids, abets, counsels, procures, or suborns another person to commit an offence against this Act shall be liable to be proceeded against, indicted, tried and punished as if he were a principal offender.

(2) Every person who incites or attempts to procure or suborn another person to commit an offence against this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof on indictment, shall be liable to imprisonment, or to a fine, or to both such imprisonment and fine.

Subornation of perjury.]—Subornation of perjury by the common law is the procuring of a man to take a false oath amounting to perjury, who actually takes such false oath. 1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 10; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.), p. 109; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 317.

Sect. 8.—Venue.]—Where an offence against this Act or any offence punishable as perjury or as subornation of perjury under any other Act of Parliament is committed in any place either on sea or land outside the United Kingdom, the offender may be proceeded against, indicted, tried, and punished in any county or place in England where he was apprehended or is in custody as if the offence had been committed in that county or place; and, for all purposes incidental to or consequential on the trial or punishment of the offence, it shall be deemed to have been committed in that county or place.

Sect. 9.—Power to direct a prosecution for perjury.]—(1) Where any of the following authorities, namely, a judge of, or person presiding in, a court of record, or a petty sessional court, or any justice of the peace sitting in special sessions, or any sheriff or his lawful deputy before whom a writ of inquiry or a writ of trial is executed, is of opinion that any person has, in the course of a proceeding before that authority, been guilty of perjury, the authority may order the prosecution of that person for such perjury, in case there shall appear to be reasonable cause for such prosecution, and may commit him, or admit him to bail, to take his trial at the proper court, and may require any person to enter into a recognizance to prosecute or give evidence against the person whose prosecution is so ordered, and may give the person so bound to prosecute a certificate of the making of the order for the prosecution, for which certificate no charge shall be made.

(2) An order made or a certificate given under this section shall not be given in evidence for the purpose or in the course of any trial of a prosecution resulting therefrom.

Sect. 13.—Corroboration.]—A person shall not be liable to be convicted of any offence against this Act, or of any offence declared by any other Act to be perjury or subornation of perjury, or to be punishable as perjury or subornation of perjury solely upon the evidence of one witness as to the falsity of any statement alleged to be false.

Corroboration.]—So also before the Act one or more of the assignments of perjury were required to be proved either by two witnesses, or by one witness with proof of other material and revelant facts substantially confirming his testimony. R. v. Champney, 2 Lew. 258 : R. v. Lee, 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 508 : R. v. Boulter, 2 Den. 396; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 57; 3 C. & K. 236 : R. v. Gardiner, 8 C. & P. 737; 2 Mood. 95 : R. v. Yates, C. & Mar. 132 : R. v. Parker, C. & Mar 639 : R. v. Roberts, 2 C. & K. 607 : R. v. Webster, 8 Cox, 187; 1 F. & F. 515 : R. v. Braithwaite, Id. 638; 8 Cox, 254. This now applies under the Act. See R. v. Threlfall, 10 Cr. App. R. 112, at p. 114; 24 Cox, 230. A letter or account written by defendant contradicting his sworn evidence is corroboration. R. v. Mayhew, 6 C. & P 315. And see R. v. Threlfall, supra. And the assignment so proved must be upon a part of the matter sworn which was material to the matter before the Court at the time the oath was taken. Where the indictment was for perjury alleged to have been committed on the trial of A. for perjury, who was convicted, it was held to be no defence that the judgment against A. was afterwards reversed on error. R. v. Meek, 9 C. & P. 513. Upon an indictment for perjury in giving evidence before the quarter sessions, the prosecutor produced the examination of the defendant before a magistrate, in which he deposed in the direct negative to everything he had sworn before the Court, but Gurney, B., held this not sufficient per se without other evidence to show that the statement before the Court was false, and that before the magistrate true. R. v. Wheatland, 8 C. & P. 238. See R. v. Knill, 5 B. & Ald. 929 n. : R. v. Hook, Dears. & B. 606; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 222. (a) On an indictment for perjury, in deposing in an affidavit that A. B., a defendant in a suit in which the party indicted was plaintiff, owed him 50*l.*, the assignment is not proved by evidence that the cause, after the making of the affidavit, was referred to an arbitrator, who made an award that A. B. owed the defendant nothing. R. v. Fontaine-Moreau, 11 Q. B. 1028; 17 L. J. (Q. B.) 187. Also, it must not only be proved that the matter sworn, or part of it, is false, but it must appear, either directly or from circumstances, that the defendant knew it to be so, and that he swore to it deliberately. (See ante, p. 1187.) Where the assignment of perjury was that the prisoner swore that she had not had connection with a "man," it was held by Manisty, J., that the evidence of connection with one man only could be received, but by Lindley, J., and Thesiger, L.J., that the evidence of several men that they had had connection with the prisoner, was admissible. R. v. Adams, 14 Cox, 215. In R. v. Saldanha, 85 J. P. 47, a general direction as to the need of corroboration, without any specific mention of the statutory requirement concerning it, was held to be a sufficient compliance with the law. As to corroboration generally, see ante, p. 455.

Sect. 10.—Jurisdiction of quarter sessions.]—A court of quarter sessions shall not have jurisdiction to try an indictment for any offence against this Act, or for an offence which under any enactment for the time being in force is declared to be perjury or to be punishable as perjury, or as subornation of perjury.

Sect. 11.—Application of Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859.]—The provisions of the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, and the Acts amending the same, shall apply in the case of any offence punishable under this Act, and in the case of any offence which under any other enactment for the time being in force, is declared to be perjury or subornation of perjury or is made punishable as perjury or as subornation of perjury, in like manner as if all the said offences were enumerated in section one of the said Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859: Provided that in that section a reference to this Act shall be substituted for the reference therein to the Criminal Procedure Act, 1851. [See ante, pp. 67 et seq.]

Sect. 12.—Form of indictment.]—(1) In an indictment—

(a) for making any false statement or false representation punishable under this Act; or

(b) for unlawfully, wilfully, falsely, fraudulently, deceitfully, maliciously, or corruptly taking, making, signing, or subscribing any oath, affirmation, solemn declaration, statutory declaration, affidavit, deposition, notice, certificate, or other writing, it is sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence charged, and before which court or person (if any) the offence was committed without setting forth the proceedings or any part of the proceedings in the course of which the offence was committed, and without setting forth the authority of any court or person before whom the offence was committed.

(2) In an indictment for aiding, abetting, counselling, suborning, or procuring any other person to commit any offence herein-before in this section mentioned, or for conspiring with any other person, or with attempting to suborn or procure any other person, to commit any such offence, it is sufficient—

(a) where such offence has been committed, to allege that offence, and then to allege that the defendant procured the commission of that offence; and

(b) where such offence has not been committed, to set forth the substance of the offence charged against the defendant without setting forth any matter or thing which it is unnecessary to aver in the case of an indictment for a false statement or false representation punishable under this Act.

Sect. 14.—Proof of certain proceedings on which perjury is assigned.]—On a prosecution—

(a) for perjury alleged to have been committed on the trial of an indictment for felony or misdemeanor; or

(b) for procuring or suborning the commission of perjury on any such trial, the fact of the former trial shall be sufficiently proved by the production of a certificate containing the substance and effect (omitting the formal parts) of the indictment and trial purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court, or other person having the custody of the records of the court where the indictment was tried, or by the deputy of that clerk or other person, without proof of the signature or official character of the clerk or person appearing to have signed the certificate.

Sect. 15.—Interpretation, etc.]—(1) For the purposes of this Act, the forms and ceremonies used in administering an oath are immaterial, if the court or person before whom the oath is taken has power to administer an oath for the purpose of verifying the statement in question, and if the oath has been administered in a form and with ceremonies which the person taking the oath has accepted without objection, or has declared to be binding on him.

[Oath in this sub-section includes affirmation and it appears to override R. v. Moore, 61 L. J. (M. C.) 80.]

(2) In this Act—

The expression "oath" in the case of persons for the time being allowed by law to affirm or declare instead of swearing, includes "affirmation" and "declaration," and the expression "swear" in the like case includes "affirm" and "declare"; and

The expression "statutory declaration" means a declaration made by virtue of the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835, or of any Act, Order in Council, rule or regulation applying or extending the provisions thereof; and

The expression "indictment" includes "criminal information."

Form of oath.]—By the Oaths Act, 1838 (1 & 2 Vict. c. 105), as amended by the Perjury Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6), in all cases in which an oath may lawfully be and shall have been administered to any person as a juryman in any proceeding, civil or criminal, in any court of law or equity in the United Kingdom, or on appointment to any office or employment, or on any occasion whatever, such person is bound by the oath administered, provided the same shall have been administered in such form and with such ceremonies as such person may declare to be binding. See ante, pp. 476, 1184. "Oath" in this Act does not include affirmation or declaration in lieu of an oath.

Substitution of affirmation for oath in certain cases.]—By the Oaths Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 46), s. 1, as amended by the Perjury Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6), every person upon objecting to be sworn, and stating as the ground of such objection, either that he has no religious belief, or that the taking of an oath is contrary to his religious belief, shall be permitted to make his solemn affirmation instead of taking an oath in all places and for all purposes where an oath is or shall be required by law, which affirmation shall be of the same force and effect as if he had taken the oath. See ante, p. 478.

Power to administer oaths.]—By the Evidence Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99), s. 16, every court, judge, justice, officer, commissioner, arbitrator or other person, now or hereafter having by law or by consent of parties authority to hear, receive, and examine evidence, is hereby empowered to administer an oath to all such witnesses as are legally called before them respectively. The section does not apply to commissioners for oaths, and the like, who have no power to examine evidence.

Sect. 16.—Savings.]—(1) Where the making of a false statement is not only an offence under this Act, but also by virtue of some other Act is a corrupt practice or subjects the offender to any forfeiture or disqualification or to any penalty other than penal servitude, or imprisonment, or fine, the liability of the offender under this Act shall be in addition to and not in substitution for his liability under such other Act.

(2) Nothing in this Act shall apply to a statement made without oath by a child under the provisions of the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904, and the Children Act, 1908.

(3) Where the making of a false statement is by any other Act, whether passed before or after the commencement of this Act, made punishable on summary conviction, proceedings may be taken either under such other Act or under this Act: Provided that where such an offence is by any Act passed before the commencement of this Act, as originally enacted, made punishable only on summary conviction, it shall remain only so punishable.

[An offence is not "punishable only" on summary conviction where an offender under the provisions of s. 17 (1) of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (ante, p. 7) may elect to be tried on indictment. R. v. Bradbury & Edlin [1921] 1 K. B. 562; 85 J. P. 128; 15 Cr. App. R. 76.]

Indictment for Perjury in an Action in the High Court.
(1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6, s. 1 (1), ante, p. 1183.)

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence:—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Perjury, contrary to section 1 (1) of the Perjury Act, 1911.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, being a witness upon the trial of an action in the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice in which one —— was plaintiff and one —— was defendant, knowingly falsely swore that he saw one M. N. in the street called the Strand, London, on the —— day of ——.

Two or more persons cannot be jointly indicted for perjury. R. v. Philips, 2 Str. 921.

Punishment: penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven years, or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or a fine or both penal servitude or imprisonment and fine. 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6, s. 1 (1) (ante, p. 1183). At common law the judge might also require the offender to find sureties to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for a further period. R. v. Hart, 30 St. Tr. at 1344 : R. v. Dunn, 12 Q. B. 1026; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 41. The Perjury Act, 1911, however, contains no provision to this effect.

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to perjury. 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6, s. 11 (ante, p. 1192).

Perjury is not triable at quarter sessions. 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6, s. 10 (ante, p. 1192). Justices of the peace had not cognizance of the offence of perjury at common law, so as to apprehend or commit a person charged with it, until 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 1, gave them power to grant a warrant for any indictable offence. See 2 Hawk. c. 8, s. 64 : R. v. Bartlett, 1 Dowl. & L. 95; 12 L. J. (M. C.) 127.

Evidence.

Let an officer from the Central Office of the Royal Courts of Justice (see R. S. C. 1883, Order 61) produce the record (i.e., the writ, pleadings, etc.) of the trial at which the perjury is alleged to have taken place; or produce a copy thereof and prove it to be an examined copy, or produce a copy thereof purporting to be signed and certified as a true copy by the officer to whose custody the original record is entrusted. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14 (ante, p. 442); and see ante, pp. 402, 420 et seq. Production of the originals cannot be obtained by subpœna, but only by order of a judge or master. R. S. C. 1883, O. 61, rr. 28, 29. As to production of impounded documents, see R. S. C. 1883, O. 42, r. 33 A. Upon an indictment for perjury before 1883, charged as having been committed on the trial of an action in the High Court of Justice, in order to prove that the action mentioned in the indictment was pending and was tried as alleged, the following documents were tendered in evidence :—1. The copy (filed under R. S. C. 1875, O. 5, r. 7) of the original writ of summons. 2. The copy of the pleadings in the action filed under R. S. C. 1875, O. 41, r. 1. 3 The original order to dismiss the action. Nos. 1 and 2 were produced by an officer from the Record and Writ Clerks' Office, and No. 3 was produced by the solicitor for the defendant in the action. It was held that these documents were properly received in evidence, and that they sufficiently proved the existence and trial of the action. R. v. Scott, 2 Q. B. D. 415; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 259.

Then prove the evidence the defendant gave upon the trial by the testimony of some person who was present at the trial. It is sufficient for this purpose if the witness states from recollection the evidence the defendant gave, though he did not take it down in writing, and cannot say with certainty that it was all the evidence given by the defendant, if he can say with certainty that it was all he gave on that point, and that he said nothing to qualify it. R. v. Rowley, 1 Mood. 111 : R. v. Munton, 3 C. & P. 498 : R. v. Browne, 3 C. & P. 572; M. & M. 315. It is said that all evidence admissible on the trial of the indictment in which the perjury is alleged to have been committed is admissible on the trial for the perjury. R. v. Harrison, 9 Cox, 503, Bramwell, B.

Statements made by the judges, etc., before whom the perjury is alleged to have been committed are not admissible on the trial for the offence. R. v. Britton, 17 Cox, 627, Hall, Recorder. It is not necessary to produce the judge's notes, which are not the best evidence of what took place at the trial, and are not admissible except to refresh the memory of the judge if called as a witness. R. v. Child, 5 Cox, 197 : R. v. Morgan, 6 Cox, 107. The judges of superior courts should not be called. R. v. Gazard, 8 C. & P. 595, Patteson, J.; but there seems to be no reason why the judges of inferior courts should not be called to prove their notes; R. v. Harvey, 8 Cox, 99, Byles, J. The notes or minutes of the clerk of the Court are in the same position as those of the judge; R. v. Newall, 6 Cox, 21; and of no greater authority than those of a shorthand writer or other person who took a note of the evidence. Id. Grand jurors cannot be called to prove perjury before them. R. v. Hughes, 1 C. & K. 519, Tindal, C.J. And the conviction or judgment in the prior case is not evidence on an indictment for committing perjury in the prior case. R. v. Goodfellow, C. & Mar. 569.

It is necessary to prove in substance the whole of what is set out in the indictment as having been sworn by the defendant, and of the evidence connected with it and necessary to explain it; proving a part only, it seems, is not sufficient. R. v. Jones, Peake (3rd ed.), 51 : R. v. Dowlin, Peake (3rd ed.), 227; 5 T. R. 317. And it must be proved literally or substantially as set out. R. v. Leefe, 2 Camp. 134. And the evidence must be clear and precise, and not ambiguous. R. v. Bird, 17 Cox, 387.

Evidence on an indictment for Perjury in an Affidavit in Answer to Interrogatories. (1 & 2 G. 5, c. 6, s. 1 (1), (3).)

1. Where the perjury is alleged to have taken place on a judicial inquiry, it must be proved what the charge was, on the hearing of which the false evidence was given, as otherwise it would be impossible to ascertain whether it was material to the issue. R. v. Carr, 10 Cox, 564 (C. C. R.). And this must be proved by the best evidence (see ante, p. 367); therefore, where perjury is alleged as having been committed before justices at petty sessions on the hearing of a charge contained in a written information, that information must be produced, or its loss or destruction must be proved so as to let in secondary evidence of its contents. R. v. Dillon, 14 Cox, 4, Lopes, J. As to proof of records, judgments, etc., see ante, pp. 420 et seq.: R. v. Scott, 2 Q. B. D. 415; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 259 (ante, p. 1195). As to proof of proceedings on an appeal to quarter sessions, see R. v. Ward, 6 C. & P. 366.

(2) The matter sworn must be proved. If in writing, and in existence, it must be produced. On an indictment for perjury in an affidavit, get the officer in whose custody the affidavit is to produce it at the trial; and prove, either directly or circumstantially, that it was sworn to and signed by the defendant (see R. v. Barnes, 10 Cox, 539), as, for instance, that the name subscribed to it is of the defendant's handwriting, and that an action between C. D. and E. F. was pending, or the like. Where the deponent was illiterate, it is necessary to show that he knew that the affidavit contained the statements on which the perjury is assigned, i.e., that he gave instructions for their insertion, or had the affidavit read over to him. R. v. Hailey, 1 C. & P. 258; Ry. & M. 94: R. v. Petricus, 67 J. P. 378. It does not seem essential that the jurat should comply with R. S. C. 1883, O. 38, r. 13. See R. v. Hailey, supra. Where perjury was assigned on an affidavit of service of notice of application for leave to issue execution against a shareholder in a joint-stock company, the production of the affidavit alone without the notice annexed (to which the affidavit referred as being annexed) was held insufficient. R. v. Hudson, 1 F. & F. 56. Upon proof that the affidavit had been lost or destroyed, secondary evidence may be given of its contents, and of the defendant's signature to it. R. v. Milnes, 2 F. & F. 10. Upon an indictment for perjury in falsely swearing that there was no draft of a statutory declaration which had been prepared by the defendant, the materiality of the existence of such draft turned upon its contents, and the fact of certain alterations having been made in it. Parol evidence of the contents of the draft and of the alterations made in it was held inadmissible, no notice to produce such draft having been given to the defendant. R. v. Elworthy, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 103; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 3.

On an indictment for perjury in bastardy proceedings, evidence must be given of the complaint, by producing the original of the order made, or secondary evidence. R. v. Newall, 6 Cox, 21, Wightman, J. Production of the summons is not essential. R. v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 110; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 6, which apparently overrules on this point R. v. Newall, supra, and R. v. Whybrow, 8 Cox, 438.

Indictment for making a False Statutory Declaration. (1 & 2 G. 5, c. 6, s. 5 (a), ante, p. 1189.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1194.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Making a false statutory declaration, contrary to section 5 (a) of the Perjury Act, 1911.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, wilfully made a statement false in a material particular in a declaration made under [quote the statute, etc., by virtue of which it was made].

Misdemeanor: punishable by imprisonment with or without hard labour, for not more than two years and (or) fine. 1 & 2 G. 5, c. 6, s. 5, ante, p. 1189.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 1 & 2 G. 5, c. 6, s. 10 (ante, p. 1192).

Evidence.

By s. 15 (2) of the Perjury Act, 1911 (ante, p. 1193), the expression "statutory declaration" means a declaration made by virtue of the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835 (5 & 6 W. 4, c. 62), or of any Act, Order in Council, rule, or regulation applying or extending the provisions thereof. See also the Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63), s. 21.

Prove that the declaration was taken under the statute alleged, and the materiality and falsity of the statement impugned in the same manner as on a charge of perjury. Corroboration is necessary (ante, pp. 455, 1191).

Where the declaration confirms any writing, the latter must be produced or secondary evidence of it, given after proof of proper notices to produce. R. v. Cox, 9 Cox, 301; 4 F. & F. 42. On an indictment for a false declaration as to the occurrence of a fire in the defendant's house, it was held that to prove the declaration to be wilfully false, evidence might be given that certificates sent to the insurers with the declaration were forged; R. v. Boynes, 1 C. & K. 65.

FABRICATION OF FALSE EVIDENCE.

It is an indictable misdemeanor to fabricate evidence with intent to mislead a judicial tribunal, even if the tribunal never sits and the evidence is not used. R. v. Vreones [1891] 1 Q. B. 360; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 62; 17 Cox, 267. For form of indictment, see that case. The offence is punishable by fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (see ante, pp. 239, 241, 246). In R. v. Eddols, Bristol Assizes, 15 Feb., 1910, the defendant was indicted and convicted for attempting to pervert justice by tampering with the contents of churns of milk. When he did this act a summons was pending against him for adulteration of milk, and he had given notice of a defence that the milk had been sold to him with a warranty by the farmer with whose churns of milk he subsequently tampered while they were still on the farm awaiting despatch. The making use of a false instrument in order to pervert the course of justice is a misdemeanor. O'Mealy v. Newell, 8 East, 364, Ellenborough, C.J.

MISSTATEMENTS, ETC., UNDER LUNACY ACT AND MENTAL DEFICIENCY ACT.

53 & 54 Vict. c. 5 (Lunacy Act, 1890) s. 317.—Misstatements.]—(1) Any person who makes a wilful misstatement of any material fact in any petition, statement of particulars, or reception order under this Act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (2) Any person who makes a wilful misstatement of any material fact in any medical or other certificate, or in any statement or report of bodily or mental condition under this Act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (3) A prosecution for a misdemeanor under this section shall not take place except by order of the Commissioners [now the Board of Control under the Mental Deficiency Act, 1913], or by the direction of the Attorney-General or the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Sect. 318.—False entries.]—Any person who in any book, statement, or return, knowingly makes any false entry as to any matter as to which he is by this Act or any rules made under this Act required to make any entry, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

3 & 4 G. 5, c. 28 (Mental Deficiency Act, 1913), s. 57.—False entries.]—Any person who in any book, statement, or return knowingly makes any false entry as to any matter as to which he is by this Act or any rules made under this Act required to make an entry shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sect. 58.—Untrue statement for purpose of obtaining certificate or approval.]—If any person, for the purpose of obtaining any certificate or approval under this Act or the renewal of any such certificate or approval, wilfully supplies to the Board any untrue or incorrect information, plan, description, or notice he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sect. 60.—Punishment for Offences.]—(1) An offence under this Act declared to be a misdemeanor shall be punishable by fine or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, but may, except where otherwise expressly provided, instead of being prosecuted on indictment, be prosecuted summarily, and, if so prosecuted, shall be punishable only with imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour, or with a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, or both.

FRAUDS AGAINST THE DECLARATION OF TITLE ACT, 1862.

By s. 44 of the Declaration of Title Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 67), as amended by the Perjury Act, 1911 (1 & 2 G. 5, c. 6), the suppression of material documents in proceedings before the court is a misdemeanor punishable with imprisonment with or without hard labour for three years or with fine.

SECT. 6.

ADMINISTERING, ETC., VOLUNTARY OATHS, ETC.

Statute.

5 & 6 W. 4, c. 62 (Statutory Declarations Act, 1835), s. 13.]—. . . It shall not be lawful for any justice of the peace or other person to administer, or cause or allow to be administered, or to receive, or cause or allow to be received, any oath, affidavit, or solemn affirmation touching any matter or thing whereof such justice or other person hath no jurisdiction or cognizance by some statute in force at the time being; provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to any oath, affidavit, or solemn affirmation before any justice in any matter or thing touching the preservation of the peace, or the prosecution, trial or punishment of offences, or touching any proceedings before either of the houses of parliament, or any committee thereof respectively, nor to any oath, affidavit, or affirmation which may be required by the laws of any foreign country to give validity to instruments in writing designed to be used in such foreign countries respectively.

Sect. 6.—Act not to apply to oath of allegiance.]—Provided always, that nothing in this Act contained shall extend or apply to the oath of allegiance in any case in which the same now is or may be required to be taken by any person who may be appointed to any office, but that such oath of allegiance shall continue to be required, and shall be administered and taken, as well and in the same manner as if this Act had not been passed. (See Promissory Oaths Acts, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 72), and 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 48).)

Sect. 7.—Not to apply to oaths in courts of justice, etc.]—Provided also, that nothing in this Act contained shall extend or apply to any oath, solemn affirmation, or affidavit, which now is or hereafter may be made or taken, or be required to be made or taken, in any judicial proceeding in any court of justice, or in any proceeding for or by way of summary conviction before any justice or justices of the peace, but all such oaths, affirmations and affidavits shall continue to be required, and to be administered, taken and made, as well and in the same manner as if this Act had not been passed.

Indictment.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Administering an unlawful oath, contrary to section 13 of the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., being a justice of the peace for the county of ——, on the —— day of ——, in the said county, unlawfully administered an oath to C. D. in a matter in which he the said A. B. had no jurisdiction, namely [state the matter in ordinary language].

Misdemeanor, as being a breach of the positive directions of the statute 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 62, s. 13 (see ante, p. 1200). Fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (see ante, pp. 239, 241, 246). This offence seems not to be triable at quarter sessions (5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant is a justice of the peace for the county mentioned in the indictment; evidence of his acting as such will, primâ facie, be sufficient. Prove that he administered to C. D. an oath of the nature and touching the subject-matter mentioned in the indictment. It is not necessary to show that he acted wilfully in contravention of the statute; the doing so, even inadvertently, is punishable. (a) R. v. Nott, 4 Q. B. D. 768.

SECT. 7.

EMBRACERY.

Common Law.

Embracery is a misdemeanor indictable at common law, punishable by fine and imprisonment, and consists in attempting by bribes or any corrupt means whatsoever, other than evidence and argument in open court, to influence or instruct jurors, or to incline them to favour one party to a judicial proceeding (b). 1 Hawk. c. 85; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 598: R. v. Young, 2 East, 14, cit. It is referred to as a crime in 34 Edw. 3, c. 8, and 38 Edw. 3, st. 1, c. 12 (both repealed), and an alternative remedy against persons embracing free-

(a) Where the defendant pleaded guilty, it was held that the Court could not consider a point reserved as to whether it was necessary to prove mens rea. R. v. Martin [1904] 4 N. S. W. St. R. 720.

(b) The English authorities are fully discussed in Re Dunn [1906] Vict. L. R. 493.

holders or jurors is given by 32 H. 8, c. 9, s. 3. But the criminal remedy continues (see 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 61). In R. v. Baker, 113 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 374, an indictment for embracery was quashed as insufficient. On a second indictment for the same offence preferred at a subsequent session, the prisoner was convicted. Id. p. 589.

SECT. 8.

INTERFERENCE WITH WITNESSES.

Common Law.

At common law interference with witnesses in courts of justice, by threats or persuasion to induce them not to give evidence, is a misdemeanor, punishable on indictment or information. 2 Chit. Cr. L. 220, 235: Taylor, Evid. (11th ed.), s. 1341A.: R. v. Lawley, 2 Str. 904: R. v. Steventon, 2 East, 362: R. v. Loughran, 1 Crawf. & Dix. (Ir.) 79: R. v. Tally [1875] 82 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 518; also noted in Stone's Justice's Manual (54th ed.), p. 314; and see R. v. Gray [1903] 22 N. Z. L. R. 52, and R. v. Silverman [1908] 12 Canada Cr. Cas. 79, where the defendant was indicted for dissuading a witness from giving evidence. The offence seems to be committed whether defendant dissuades him from giving evidence at all or dissuades him from giving certain evidence. R. v. Silverman, supra. There is no distinction between the offence of endeavouring to persuade a witness to alter evidence already given, and the offence of attempting to dissuade a witness from giving evidence of a certain character. R. v. Greenberg, 121 L. T. 288; 83 J. P. 167. The offence is also summarily punishable as a contempt of court (see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 541: Shaw v. Shaw, 2 Sw. & Tr. 517; and see R. v. Steventon, supra, and Onslow's and Whalley's cases, L. R. 9 Q. B. 219; 12 Cox, 358.) To prevent a witness duly summoned from attending court is punishable as a contempt; R. v. Hall, 2 W. Bl. 1110: Commonwealth v. Feeley, 2 Virg. Cas. 1; or, in the event of combination, is indictable as a conspiracy to pervert the court of justice. 3 Chit. Cr. L. 1151: R. v. Hamp, 6 Cox, 167; and post, tit. Conspiracy.

Statute.

55 & 56 Vict. c. 64 (Witnesses Public Inquiries Protection Act, 1892), s. 1.]—In this Act the word "inquiry" shall mean any inquiry held under the authority of any royal commission, or by any committee of either house of parliament, or pursuant to any statutory authority, whether the evidence at such inquiry is or is not given on oath, but shall not include any inquiry by a court of justice.

Sect. 2.]—Every person who commits any of the following acts, that is to say, who threatens or in any way punishes, damnifies or injures, or attempts to punish, damnify, or injure any person for having given evidence upon any inquiry, or upon account of the evidence which he has given upon any such inquiry shall, unless such evidence was given in bad faith, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable on conviction thereof to a maximum penalty of one hundred pounds, or to a maximum imprisonment of three months.

Sect. 3.]—A prosecution for any offence under this Act may be heard and determined by a court of summary jurisdiction, under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts; provided that should either the complainant (qu. informant) or the party charged object to the case being dealt with summarily, the Court shall send such case for trial to the quarter sessions or assizes, or, in cases arising within the metropolitan area, to the Central Criminal Court.

Sects. 4, 5.]—Power to order the offender to pay compensation to parties aggrieved, and costs of prosecution; mode of enforcing the order.—As to costs generally, see ante, p. 267 et seq.

Sect. 7.]—Saving as to privilege of parliament, and powers under other statutes.

Sect. 9.

BARRATRY, CHAMPERTY, AND MAINTENANCE.

Common Law.

Barratry.]—It is an indictable misdemeanor to be a common barrator, i.e., "habitually to move, excite or maintain suits and quarrels." 8 Co. Rep. 36. The offence is rarely prosecuted. See the old authorities collected 1 Hawk. c. 81, and Encyclopædia of English Law (2nd ed.), s.v. Barratry, Vol. II., p. 124. Jurisdiction over the offence was given to sessions of the peace by 34 Edw. 3, c. 1. By 12 G. 1, c. 29, s. 4, persons practising as solicitors after conviction of common barratry are liable on summary conviction in the High Court to transportation (penal servitude) for seven years. See Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.), p. 113.

Champerty and maintenance.]—Champerty and maintenance are indictable misdemeanors, possibly at common law, but more probably under the statutes named below. See Metropolitan Bank v. Pooley, 10 App. Cas. 210; 54 L. J. (Q. B.) 449, Lord Selborne: contra, Pechell v. Watson, 11 L. J. (N. S.) (Ex.) 225; 8 M. & W. 691. "Champertors be they that move pleas or suits or cause to be moved either by their own procurement or by others, and sue them at their proper costs for to have part of the land in variance, or part of the gains." 33 Edw. 1 (Ordinacio de Conepiratoribus). Champerty is punishable at the King's pleasure, or by fine and imprisonment, if committed by the King's officers. See 3 Edw. 1, c. 25; 13 Edw. 1 (Stat. West. Sec.), c. 49; 28 Edw. 1, c. 11, and the Statutum de Conspiratoribus, 1 Rev. Stat. (2nd ed.)

77. As to what is champertous, see Re Thomas [1894] 1 Q. B. 747; 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 572: Rees v. De Bernardy [1896] 2 Ch. 437; 65 L. J. (Ch.) 656; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 594. As to venue, see 31 Eliz. c. 5. Maintenance is said to consist in the unlawful taking in hand or upholding of or assisting in civil suits, or quarrels of others, to the disturbance of common right, and from other than charitable motives. See Bradlaugh v. Newdegate, 11 Q. B. D. 1; 52 L. J. (Q. B.) 454: Harris v. Brisco, 17 Q. B. D. 504; 55 L. J. (Q. B.) 423: Alabaster v. Harness [1895] 1 Q. B. 339 (A.); 64 L. J. (Q. B.) 76: Holden v. Thompson [1907] 2 K. Misdemeanors: punishable by fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246).

SECT. 10.

BRIBERY OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS.

Common Law.

It has been held to be a misdemeanor at common law to bribe a privy councillor (R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494, 2500), or to bribe a juryman, R. v. Young, 2 East, 14, 16, cit. (and see "Embracery," ante, p. 1201). The offer of a bribe is an attempt to bribe, and is also a misdemeanor. 3 Co. Inst. 147: R. v. Vaughan, supra. So is the taking of a bribe by an officer judicial or ministerial. Id., and see 3 Edw. 1 (Stat. West. Prim.), c. 26 (post, p. 1206); 20 Edw. 3, c. 1 (rep.); Com. Dig. Officer (1); 1 Hawk. c. 67; 3 Chit. Cr. L. 683. A ministerial officer is simply an officer who is not a judicial officer. A colonel of a regiment is both a public and a ministerial officer. R. v. Whitaker [1914] 3 K. B. 1283; 84 L. J. (K. B.) 225; 24 Cox, 272; 30 T. L. R. 627; 79 J. P. 28; 10 Cr. App. R. 245. Some of the text-books confine the offence of bribery to bribery of officers of justice (see 3 Steph. Hist. Cr. L. 250; 3 Co. Inst. 145; Lord Macclesfield's case, 16 St. Tr. 767: Re Cannon [1908] 14 Canada Cr. Cas. 186), but this definition of the offence is too narrow and confined. See R. v. Beale, 1 East, 183, cit.: R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494. It is a common law misdemeanor for an officer who has a duty to do something in which the public are interested to receive a bribe either to act in a manner contrary to his duty or to show favour in the discharge of his functions. To bribe the colonel of a regiment to show favour in the matter of a canteen contract for the regiment is a misdemeanor at common law; similarly, for the colonel to receive such a bribe is a misdemeanor. R. v. Whitaker (supra). Payment, or the promise of payment, for votes at the election of an assistant overseer of a parish, is bribery, and as such has been held to be an indictable common law misdemeanor. R. v. Lancaster and Worrall, 16 Cox, 737, where Wills, J., held that the nature of the office of the person bribed was immaterial so long as it was public. See R. v. Bowler, C. & Mar. 559: R. v. Boyes, 2 F. & F. 157. On this subject see also ante, p. 129, and 1 Russ. Cr. 7th ed.) 627.

The offence is punishable by fine and imprisonment with or without hard labour (Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914, s. 16, ante, p. 240), whether the bribe is accepted or not. 3 Co. Inst. 147.

It is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1, ante, p. 106.

For examples of attempting to bribe a constable, see R. v. Richardson, 111 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 612; and R. v. Lehwess, 140 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 731: to bribe a justice of the peace, see R. v. Gurney, 10 Cox, 550.

Statutes.

The purchase or sale of public offices is punishable under 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 16, and 49 G. 3, c. 126. See 3 Chit. Cr. L. 681 (c); 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 619. It is said to be regarded at common law as a form of bribery. See R. v.

Pollman, 2 Camp. 229 n. The taking of bribes by Indian officials is punishable in England under 33 G. 3, c. 52, s. 62. See Ilbert, Government of India (2nd ed.) 255 : R. v. Douglas, 13 Q. B. 42.

As to bribery at parliamentary and municipal elections, see post, p. 1396. As to bribery, etc., of or by members of public bodies, see post, p. 1408. As to corruption of and by agents, see post, p. 1411.

Bribery of customs officers and their acceptance of bribes is punishable by fine under 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 217, and like provisions are made as to officers of inland revenue, by 53 & 54 Vict. c. 21, s. 10. But the offences created by those statutes are not indictable.

Indictment against a Constable for Extortion. (Common Law.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1194.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Extortion.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of London, being a constable in the Metropolitan Police Force, corruptly and under colour of his office extorted from C. D. the sum of —— by alleging to C. D. that the said sum was due as a fee from C. D. to him.

Misdemeanor: fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246); and amotion from office. 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 5.

Extortion is triable at quarter sessions. R. v. Loggen, 1 Str. 73, 75; 3 Co. Inst. 149; and see 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant exacted money as a fee due as stated in the indictment.

The gist of the offence lies in taking under colour of office from any person any money or valuable thing which is not due from him; if the act is done otherwise than in good faith. Beawfage's case, 10 Co. Rep. 102 a; and see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 613. And it is equally extortion where a greater fee is exacted than what is legally due, as where money is exacted as a fee, where none whatever is payable. See 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 1: R. v. Baines, 2 Ld. Raym. 1265; 2 Salk. 680. The offence may be committed by judicial or executive officers. See cases collected, 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 613. For a gaoler to detain the corpse of a prisoner for a debt due to him is a misdemeanor. R. v. Fox, 2 Q. B. 246: R. v. Scott, Id. 248 n.; Jones v. Ashburnham, 4 East, 455, 460. For other offences akin to extortion, see Official Index to Statutes (ed. 1922), tit. Extortion, 1. As to trial in England of Indian officials for extortion, see ante, p. 1206), and Ilbert, Government of India (2nd ed.), 255.

SECT. 12.

MISCONDUCT OF OFFICERS OF JUSTICE.

Common Law.

Every malfeasance or culpable non-feasance of an officer of justice with relation to his office is a misdemeanor. See R. v. Wyatt, 1 Salk. 380 (neglect by a constable to levy a penalty under a justice's warrant directed to him); Crouther's case, Cro. Eliz. 654 (refusal by a constable on notice to pursue a felon); and 2 Chit. Cr. L. 267; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 601 et seq. As to misconduct by sheriffs and their officers, see 50 & 51 Vict. c. 55, s. 29 (ante, p. 1206). As to misconduct by coroners, see 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 8 (2), (ante, p. 1207), and R. v. Whitcomb, 1 C. & P. 124.

SECT. 13.

DISOBEYING JUDICIAL ORDERS.

Disobedience to orders of courts of record is punishable on indictment or information as a misdemeanor, but is usually dealt with summarily as for contempt. See 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 542.

Disobedience to a lawful order of justices, whether made at quarter or petty sessions or out of sessions, is a misdemeanor at common law. See 2 Chit. Cr. L. 279; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 543.

SECT. 14.

COMPOUNDING OFFENCES.

Common Law.

Compounding felony.]—The offence of theft-bote at common law is committed "where the owner not only knows of the felony, but taketh of the thief his goods again, or amends for the same to favour or maintain him, that is, not to prosecute him to the intent that he may escape." 3 Co. Inst. 134.

The punishment of theft-bote is ransom (i.e., fine) and imprisonment, without hard labour. Id. 134; 1 Hale, 619; 2 Hale, 400; 1 Hawk. c. 59, ss. 5, 6; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 220. The offence may be committed by a person not the owner of the goods. R. v. Burgess, 16 Q. B. D. 141, 147. It is now usually described as compounding a felony. It differs from misprision of felony, which can be committed without taking any active steps to protect the felon from justice. See 3 Co. Inst. 140; 1 Hale, 373; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 232; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 579. The offence of compounding is complete when the agreement not to prosecute is made, whether it is performed or not (R. v. Burgess, supra); and the agreement not to prosecute for felony is no defence to an indictment for the felony preferred in breach of the agreement. R. v. Daly, 9 C. & P. 342: cf. Re Bryant, 27 J. P. 277, 289. It is said that except where the attorney-general enters a nolle prosequi (ante, p. 122), it is necessary to obtain the leave of the Court to abandon a prosecution after the indictment is found, whether the prosecution desire to effect this purpose by offering no evidence, or otherwise. R. v. Nicholson, Cent. Crim. Ct., June 28, 1899, Darling, J. In R. v. Roxburgh, 12 Cox, 8, where, on a trial for felony, the jury disagreed, Cockburn, C.J., directed their discharge, that the accused might plead guilty to a common assault, and make compensation for the injuries caused. In the 21st edition of this work, at p. 186, it was stated that "it has not been infrequent on trials at the Central Criminal Court, and probably in other criminal courts, for the prosecutor to abandon the prosecution, the person accused agreeing to bring no action for false imprisonment or malicious prosecution." An instance of this practice will be found in Jones v. German [1896] 2 Q. B. 418, 422; [1897] 1 Q. B. 374; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 212. But it does not appear that such arrangements are made with the sanction or approval of the Court. (a)

Withdrawing from or stifling prosecutions for misdemeanor.]—Except in cases within 18 Eliz. c. 5 (post, p. 1211), there seems to be no precedent of an indictment for compounding a misdemeanor, or stifling a prosecution for misdemeanor, unless it is done under circumstances constituting a conspiracy to pervert or defeat justice (see 1 Steph. Hist. Cr. L. 502; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 580; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 3), or amounting to interferences with witnesses (see ante, p. 1202). The illegality of such a transaction from the point of view of enforcing any contract made for such a purpose is well established (a), and it is the

(a) Contracts to stifle or withdraw from a prosecution for any offence, even if made with the sanction of a court, are illegal and unenforceable, either at law or in equity. Windhill Local Board v. Vint, 45 Ch. D. 351; 59 L. J. Ch. 608: In re Campbell, 14 Q. B. D. 32: Kaufmann v. Gerson [1904] 1 K. B. 591 (C. A.); 73 L. J. K. B. 320; Johnson v. Ogilby, 3 P. Wms. 277; 24 Eng. Rep. 1064: Collins v. Blantern, 2 Wils. (K. B.) 341; 1 Smith, L. C. (12th ed.): Edgcombe v. Rodd, 5 East, 294, 302: Rawlings v. Coal Consumers' Association, 43 L. J. (M. C.) 111. They do not affect the jurisdiction to proceed with the trial of the offence in question, Re Bryant, 27 J. P. 277, 289; and even in civil proceedings, though the illegality is not pleaded, the Court may intervene and dismiss the action. Scott v. Brown [1892] 2 Q. B. 724; 61 L. J. Q. B. 738: Whitmore v. Farley, 45 L. T. 99; 14 Cox, 617; 29 W. R. 825.

In Windhill Local Board v. Vint, supra, the plaintiffs, a local board, had indicted the defendants for obstructing a highway. At the trial of the indictment, a compromise was made by the parties and sanctioned by the judge, and afterwards confirmed by deed. By this deed the defendants covenanted to restore the road within seven years, and the plaintiffs covenanted that when that had been done they would consent to a verdict of "not guilty" on the indictment. The defendants failed to restore the road, and the plaintiffs then brought an action on their covenant. It was held by the Court of Appeal, affirming the judgment of Stirling, J., that as the indictment was for a public injury, undoubted right of the Crown to proceed with a prosecution for a misdemeanor notwithstanding any such transaction. (a) Moreover, by s. 5 of the Prosecution of Offences Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 22), it is the duty of every clerk to a justice or to a police court to transmit, in accordance with the regulations under the Act (printed in Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 4, tit.

the agreement to consent to a verdict of "not guilty" was illegal, and that the plaintiffs could not maintain an action on the defendants' covenant.

The following cases have been held to fall within the rule: a contract to stop an election petition (Coppock v. Bower, 4 M. & W. 361; 8 L. J. (Ex.) 9); securities given to stop a prosecution for cheating at cards (Osbaldiston v. Simpson, 13 Sim. 513); a promissory note given on condition that the plaintiff would not prosecute the defendant for obtaining money by false pretences (Clubb v. Hutson, 18 C. B. (N. S.) 414; cf. Pool v. Bousfield, 1 Camp. 55); a bill accepted by a person accused of embezzlement in consideration of refraining from prosecution, unless it is in the hands of a bonâ fide holder for value without notice (Fivaz v. Nicholls, 15 L. J. (N. S.) C. P. 125; 2 C. B. 501: cf. Wallace v. Hardacre, 1 Camp. 45); a bond given to secure abstention from prosecution (Cannon v. Rands, 11 Cox, 631). As to substituting a genuine for a forged bill, see Wallace v. Hardacre, supra. As to lending money to take up a forged bill, see Re Mapleback, 4 Q. B. D. 150, 156; 46 L. J. Bnkr. 14; 13 Cox, 374.

Where a third person acting under undue influence enters into a contract for the express purpose of securing another from criminal prosecution, the contract is invalid. Williams v. Bayley, L. R. 1 H. L. 200; 35 L. J. (Ch.) 717: Jones v. Merionethshire Permanent Benefit Building Society [1892] 1 Ch. 173; 65 L. J. (Ch.) 138; 17 Cox, 389: McClatchie v. Haslam, 17 Cox, 402 (C. A.): and see Kaufmann v. Gerson [1904] 1 K. B. 591; 73 L. J. (K. B.) 320. But to invalidate a contract of this kind there must be pressure and more than mere inducement (Flower v. Sadler, 9 Q. B. D. 83; 10 Q. B. D. 572: and McClatchie v. Haslam, supra), and the discontinuance of the proceedings must be part of the consideration. See Harding v. Cooper, 1 Stark. (N. P.) 467.

For the rule to apply it would seem that the prosecution must have been instituted, or that there are reasonable grounds, not necessarily amounting to complete proof, for commencing it. Kirwan v. Goodman, 9 Dowl. 330; 5 Jur. (O. S.) 293: and Rourke v. Mealy, 4 L. R. Ir. 166, Palles, C.B.: S. C. sub nom. Bourke v. Mealy, 14 Cox, 329: Davies v. London, etc., Marine Ins. Co., 8 Ch. D. 469; 47 L. J. (Ch.) 511.

The following cases have been held not to fall within the rule: Where a man gave a warrant of attorney to secure a debt, the mere fact that he believed he would not be prosecuted for his conduct when incurring the debt was held not to invalidate the warrant. Ward v. Lloyd, 6 M. & G. 785; 7 Scott (N. R.) 499: cf. Ex parte Critchley, 15 L. J. (Q. B.) 124; 3 D. & L. 527. A payment of money to postpone a trial for perjury has been held not to be illegal. Harvey v. Morgan, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 17; Ellenborough, C.J., sed quære. An agreement after conviction to pay part of the expenses of a prosecution for misdemeanor has been held legal (Beeley v. Wingfield, 11 East, 46); but arrangements of this kind are seldom approved by the Court. See Re Parkinson, 76 L. T. (N. S.) 715.

It is suggested in Keir v. Leeman, 6 Q. B. 308; 9 Q. B. 371; 13 L. J. (Q. B.) 359; 15 L. J. (Q. B.) 360, that a compromise may be legally made of an offence which might be made the subject of a civil action, such as common assault or libel; and in Fisher v. Apollinaris Co., L. R. 10 Ch. App. 297; 44 L. J. (N. S.) Ch. 500, it was held that as the prosecutor had the choice in a trade-mark case between civil and criminal remedies, he could legally compromise as to the criminal remedy. But some of the dicta in this case (at p. 302) are inconsistent with the conclusion of the Court of Appeal in Windhill Local Board v. Vint (ante, p. 1209 n.), which appears also to be inconsistent with Fallows v. Taylor, 7 T. R. 475: Crooke v. Lord Powerscourt, 16 W. R. 969: Drage v. Ibberson, 2 Esp. 643: and Elworthy v. Bird, 2 Bing. 258; and it is settled that where the assault is coupled with riot, a compromise is illegal (Keir v. Leeman, supra), and no bar to an action for malicious prosecution.

(a) This question is discussed and the English authorities considered in Kerridge v. Simmonds [1906] 4 Aust. C. L. R. 253, and Morgan v. McFee [1908] 14 Canada Cr. Cas. 308.

Criminal Procedure, E., p. 7), to the Director of Public Prosecutions a copy of the information and of all depositions and other documents relating to any case in which a prosecution for an offence instituted before such justice or court is withdrawn or is not proceeded with within reasonable time. In the draft Criminal Code of 1878 it was provided (art. 127) that 'every one shall be guilty of an indictable offence, and shall be liable on conviction to two years' imprisonment with hard labour, who wilfully attempts in any way, though not otherwise criminal, to obstruct, prevent, pervert, or defeat the course of justice or the administration of the law." (Cf. Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.), p. 122.) This clause appears to have been considered by the judges who reported on the code to state the existing law. (See their report, p. 21.) As will be seen, it is not confined to cases of conspiracy (post, p. 1415), or interference with witnesses (ante, p. 1202), or fabrication of evidence (ante, p. 1198), or incitement to give false evidence (ante, p. 1190). And the clause is wide enough to cover cases of assisting a misdemeanant to escape arrest, or compounding or stifling a prosecution for misdemeanor. The old distinction between felony and misdemeanor has to a great extent disappeared during the present century, and the considerations of public policy stated in Windhill Local Board v. Vint (45 Ch. D. 351; 59 L. J. (Ch.) 608), and by Palles, C. B., in Dillon v. O'Brien (20 L. R. Ir. 316; 16 Cox. 245), point to the conclusion that with respect to criminal responsibility for compounding a misdemeanor, there is no ground for a different rule from that in force as to compounding a felony, except perhaps in the case of common assault (Keir v. Leeman, 6 Q. B. 308; 9 Q. B. 371; 13 L. J. (Q. B.) 359; 15 L. J. (Q. B.) 360), or where the prosecution is one merely to try a civil right, e.g. in cases which fall within the Evidence Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 14): and even in such cases, compromise of the prosecution has been held illegal. Windhill Local Board v. Vint (ante, p. 1209 n.). Another rule of law points in the same direction, viz. that any indemnity given to bail, whether by the prisoner or by a third person, is illegal and unenforceable. Consolidated Exploration and Finance Co. v. Musgrave [1900] 1 Ch. 37; 69 L. J. (Ch.) 11.

An agreement between an accused person and his bail whereby the latter is to be indemnified is unlawful and indictable as a conspiracy, even if there is no evidence that it was intended to defeat justice. R. v. Porter [1910] 1 K. B. 369; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 241; 26 T. L. R. 200; 3 Cr. App. R. 237. (a)

Statutes.

18 Eliz. c. 5, ss. 4, 5.]—Compounding informations on penal statutes without leave of the Court; misdemeanor. [This statute is said not to apply to offences punishable on summary conviction. See Paley on Convictions (8th ed.), 56:

(a) In R. v. Broome, 18 L. T. (O. S.) 19, Martin, R., said that it was no objection to bail for a prisoner that they had been indemnified by or on behalf of the prisoner. This dictum was followed by Fulton, Recorder, in R. v. Stockwell, 66 J. P. 376, where he held an agreement to indemnify bail was not indictable unless a deliberate intention to pervert justice was proved. In the 23rd edition of this work it was submitted that these rulings were both erroneous, and they are now definitely overruled by R. v. Porter, supra.

but independently of the statute, such informations cannot legally be compromised. Edgcombe v. Rodd, 5 East, 294 : R. v. Wiltshire Justices, 8 L. T. 242 : Ex parte Bryant, 27 J. P. 277 : White v. Spettigue, 14 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 99; 13 M. & W. 603.]

6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50 (Larceny Act, 1916), s. 5 (3).]—Every person who corruptly takes any money or reward, directly or indirectly, under pretence or upon account of aiding any person to recover any stolen dog or any dog which is in the possession of any person not being the owner thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding eighteen months, with or without hard labour. [This repeals but re-enacts s. 20 of the Larceny Act, 1861.]

For decisions as to what is within the statute, see R. v. Southerton, 6 East, 126; R. v. Gotley, R. & R. 84 : R. v. Crisp, 1 B. & Ald. 282. A person may be convicted under it for taking money as a reward for forbearing to prosecute, although in fact no offence liable to a penalty has been committed. R. v. Best 2 Mood. 125; 9 C. & P. 368.

Sect. 34.—Taking money for restoring property stolen, etc.]—Every person who corruptly takes any money or reward, directly or indirectly, under pretence or upon account of helping any person to recover any property which has, under circumstances which amount to felony or misdemeanor, been stolen, or obtained in any way whatsoever, or received, shall (unless he has used all due diligence to cause the offender to be brought to trial for the same) be guilty of felony, and on conviction thereof liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years, and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, to be once privately whipped in addition to any other punishment to which he may by law be liable. [This substantially re-enacts section 101 of the Larceny Act, 1861.]

24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (The Larceny Act, 1861), s. 102.—Advertising reward for the return of stolen property.]—Whosoever shall publicly advertise a reward for the return of any property whatsoever which shall have been stolen or lost, and shall in such advertisement use any words purporting that no questions will be asked, or shall make use of any words in any public advertisement purporting that a reward will be given or paid for any property which shall have been stolen or lost, without seizing or making any inquiry after the person producing such property, or shall promise or offer in any such public advertisement to return to any pawnbroker or other person who may have bought or advanced money by way of loan upon any property stolen or lost the money so paid or advanced, or any other sum of money or reward for the return of such property, or shall print or publish any such advertisement, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds for every such offence to any person who will sue for the same by action of debt, to be recovered with full costs of suit. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 59. It has been held to apply to the offer of a reward for a stolen dog, "No questions will be asked." Mirams v. Our Dogs Publishing Co., Ltd. [1901] 2 K. B. 564; 70 L. J. (K. B.) 879.]

33 & 34 Vict. c. 65 (Larceny (Advertisements) Act, 1870), s. 3.—Limitation of actions for advertisements of reward for return of stolen property.]—Every action against the printer or publisher of a newspaper to recover a forfeiture under s. 102 of the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), shall be brought within six months after the forfeiture is incurred, and no such action against the printer or publisher of a newspaper shall be brought unless the assent in writing of his Majesty's attorney-general or solicitor-general for England, if the action is brought in England, or for Ireland, if the action is brought in Ireland, has been first obtained to the bringing of such action. [See Wilkins v. Gill, 20 T. L. R. 3.]

Sect. 2.—Definition of "newspaper."]—In this Act the term "newspaper" means a newspaper as defined for the purpose of the Acts for the time being in force relating to the carriage of newspapers by post. (See 8 Edw. 7, c. 48, ss. 2, 20, 21, 22.)

Indictment for compounding a Felony. (Common Law.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Compounding a felony.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, received from C. D. the sum of 10*l.* as a reward for desisting from prosecuting the said C. D. for stealing the ring of the said A. B.

The indictment for compounding a felony need not allege that the defendant desisted from prosecuting the felon. R. v. Burgess, 16 Q. B. D. 141; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 97.

Misdemeanor at common law: punishable by fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246). See 1 Hawk. c. 59, s. 6, etc.; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.), p. 122.

Evidence.

Prove the felony to have been committed by C. D., as directed ante, p. 511; and prove that A. B. received the money, or some part thereof, from C. D. upon an understanding that A. B. would not further prosecute C. D. for the felony. A person commits this offence of "compounding" a felony as soon as he enters into the agreement not to prosecute, although he may in fact afterwards prosecute (R. v. Burgess, 16 Q. B. D. 141; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 97; 15 Cox, 779); and although he may not be the owner of the stolen property, nor a material witness for the prosecution. Id. This decision overrules R. v. Stone, 4 C. & P. 379.

Indictment for taking a Reward for the Recovery of Stolen Property.
(Larceny Act, 1916, s. 34, ante, p. 1212.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Corruptly taking a reward, contrary to section 34 of the Larceny Act, 1916.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, corruptly took the sum of 10*l.* from C. D. under pretence of helping him to recover his watch which had been stolen.

Felony : penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, if a male under the age of eighteen years, with or without whipping. As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 37 (5) (b) (ante, p. 501).

Evidence.

Prove that the goods, etc., were stolen or obtained in the mode stated in the indictment : and prove that the defendant received the money from C. D. or some person on his behalf, upon the pretence or account stated in the indictment. It was decided to be an offence within 4 G. 1, c. 11, s. 4 (rep.), which was similar to the present section, to take money under pretence of helping a man to recover goods stolen from him, although the defendant had no acquaintance with the felon, and did not pretend that he had; and though he had no power to apprehend the felon, and though the goods were never restored, and the defendant had no power to restore them. R. v. Ledbitter, 1 Mood. 76. And where A. had her goods stolen, and B., who knew the thieves, received money from A. to endeavour to purchase the stolen property from the thieves for A., but not meaning to bring the thieves to justice; it was held that B. was guilty of the felony of taking money on account of helping A. to the return of stolen goods within 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 58 (rep.), which was similar to the present enactment. R. v. Pascoe, 1 Den. 456; 2 C. & K. 927; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 186.

Indictment for compounding Information on a Penal Statute without Leave of the Court. (18 Eliz. c. 5, ante, p. 1211.)

For precedents, see 2 Chit. Cr. L. 222, and R. v. Southerton, 6 East, 126.

Misdemeanor (18 Eliz. c. 5, ss. 4, 5; 56 G. 3, c. 138, s. 2 (ante, p. 242) : fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246).

As to procedure for compounding penal actions, see R. S. C. 1883, O. 50, rr. 13-15.

Evidence.

For decisions as to what is within the statute, see R. v. Southerton, supra : R. v. Gotley, R. & R. 84 : R. v. Crisp, 1 B. & Ald. 282. A person may be convicted under the statute for taking money as a reward for forbearing to prosecute, although in fact no offence liable to a penalty has been committed by the person from whom money is taken. R. v. Best, 2 Mood. 125; 9 C. & P. 368.

SECT. 15.

LIBELS REFLECTING ON THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE, AND CONTEMPT OF COURT.

There are three different kinds of contempt (a); one kind of contempt is scandalizing the Court itself; another, abusing parties who are concerned in causes; another, prejudicing mankind against persons before the cause is heard. R. v. Read and Huggonson, 2 Atk. 469, 471, Lord Hardwicke, L.C.

Scandalizing the Court itself.]—"Committals for contempt of court are ordinarily in cases where some contempt ex facie of the Court has been committed, or for comments upon cases pending in the courts. However, there can be no doubt that there is a third head of contempt of court by the publication of scandalous matter of the Court itself." McLeod v. St. Aubyn [1899] A. C. 549, 561; 68 L. J. (P. C.) 137. In that case it was said that summary proceedings for this offence are obsolete in England; but in R. v. Gray [1900] 2 Q. B. 36; 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 502; 64 J. P. 484, the publication of the scurrilous personal attack upon a judge, with reference to observations made by him in the course of a case which had been concluded, was held to be summarily punishable as a contempt of court, and the law as laid down in R. v. Almon, Wilmot's Opinions, 243; 5 Burr. 2685, was followed. The defendant in a criminal case may be committed for contempt if he insults the Court, even in his address to the jury. R. v. Davison, 4 B. & Ald. 329; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1366 : and see R. v. Giles, ante, p. 173.

The offence of "scandalizing the Court" is also a misdemeanor punishable on information or indictment. It may be committed by words either spoken or written; but for spoken words to be indictable, they must be used of the judge or magistrate in his office and with intent to defame him in that capacity. R. v. Weltje, 2 Camp. 142, Ellenborough, C.J. : cf. R. v. Pocock, 2 Str. 1157 : R. v. Read and Huggonson, supra; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 916; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 537.

(a) "The essence of contempt of court is action or inaction amounting to interference with or obstruction to, or having a tendency to interfere with or to obstruct, the due administration of justice." Re Dunn [1906] Vict. L. R. 493, where the English authorities are reviewed.

It is an aggravated misdemeanor to publish an invective against judges and juries with a view to bring into suspicion and contempt the administration of justice. R. v. White, 30 St. Tr. 1131; 1 Camp. 359 n.: Re McDermott, L. R. 1 P. C. 260; 2 P. C. 341: Macleod v. St. Aubyn [1899] A. C. 549; 68 L. J. (P. C.) 137, where the authorities are collected at pp. 550, 551. But it is lawful with candour and decency to discuss the merits of the verdict of a jury, or the decision of a judge, which are matters of public interest and concern, and the defence of fair comment, if proved, negatives the presumed malice of the publication, Id.; and see R. v. Sullivan, 11 Cox, 50 (Ir.).

Libels on a judge or jury may, in certain events, be seditious; in which case it would seem that justification cannot be pleaded under s. 6 of Lord Campbell's Act (6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, post, p. 1239), nor fair comment and absence of malice under s. 4 of the Law of Libel Amendment Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, post, p. 1242). R. v. M'Hugh, [1901] 2 Ir. Rep. 569; and see ante, pp. 1124, 1125.

The misdemeanor is punishable by fine and (or) imprisonment with or without hard labour. See R. v. Hart and White, 30 St. Tr. 1131; 1 Camp. 359 n.: R. v. Watson, 2 T. R. 199.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106. The Vexatious Indictments Act, (ante, p. 67) applies to libel. 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 6 (post, p. 1241). A criminal prosecution may not be commenced against any proprietor, publisher, editor, or any person responsible for the publication of a newspaper for any libel published therein without the order of a judge at chambers, the application for which shall be made on notice to the person accused, who shall have an opportunity of being heard against it. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 8 (post, p. 1242). It would seem from R. v. M'Hugh. [1901] 2 Ir. Rep. 569, that defence of justification could not be pleaded to an indictment of this kind, on the ground that the offence is in substance a seditious libel. But see R. v. Gray, 10 Cox, 184 (Ir.), ante, p. 1124. As to evidence, see post, pp. 1248 et seq.

For examples of indictments for slanderous words spoken to a magistrate in the execution of his office, see R. v. Revel, 1 Str. 421: R. v. Pocock, 2 Str. 1157: R. v. Weltje, 2 Camp. 142: Ex parte Duke of Marlborough, 5 Q. B. 955; 13 L. J. (N. S.) (M. C.) 105: R. v. Rea, 17 Ir. C. L. Rep. 584: 2 Chit. Cr. L. 916; and cases collected in Odgers on Libel (5th ed.), 530-533. It is not clear whether this offence is to be regarded as sedition, or contempt of court, or a distinct form of crime. If there is any doubt as to the words, lay them differently in different counts. Justices out of general or quarter sessions have no power to commit for contempt, even if committed in their presence. Judges of inferior courts of record have no jurisdiction to commit for contempt unless committed in facie curiæ. R. v. Lefroy, L. R. 8 Q. B. 134; 42 L. J. (N. S.) (Q. B.) 121: R. v. Judge of Brompton County Court [1893] 2 Q. B. 195; 62 L. J. (Q. B.) 604.

It is sufficient to prove that the magistrate was acting as such. Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366: R. v. Gordon, 1 Leach, 515. As to the proof of the words, see ante, pp. 1121, 1126, post, p. 1249.

It appears not to be sufficient to prove that slanderous words were spoken of a magistrate in his absence; R. v. Weltje, 2 Camp. 142; nor to a magistrate out of court to his face, unless there was an intent to provoke to a breach of the peace. Ex parte Chapman, 4 A. & E. 773; and see ante, p. 1216.

Prejudicing the fair trial of cases pending.]—It is a misdemeanor punishable on information or indictment to publish, either verbally or by writing, comments, whether defamatory or not, or even to give theatrical representations, relating to pending cases, which are calculated to prejudice the fair trial of those cases, and so interfere with the course of justice. See R. v. Tibbits and Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 4; 20 Cox, 70, in which case the defendants were convicted on an indictment charging them with the publication in a newspaper of articles affecting the character and conduct of persons under remand before justices for an indictable offence, there being a count charging each article as (1) an attempt to pervert the course of justice, and (2) an act calculated to have that result. The facts in that case were also held to support counts for conspiracy to pervert the course of justice: following R. v. Jolliffe, 4 T. R. 285: R. v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563: R. v. Williams, 2 L. J. (O. S.) K. B. 30: Onslow's and Whalley's cases, L. R. 9 Q. B. 219, 227; Skipworth's case, Id. 230; and see Re Pollard, L. R. 2 P. C. 106: Re a special reference from the Bahama Islands [1893] A. C. 138.

This kind of interference with the course of justice is also punishable summarily as a contempt of court. Where the case is pending in any branch of the High Court, including courts of assize and the Central Criminal Court, or where a case is pending before justices which may ultimately be tried before a court of assize, the High Court can summarily punish for any publication calculated to interfere with a fair trial, and it is not necessary to proceed by indictment or information, nor to wait till application can be made to the Court of trial. R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 839, where the prior and conflicting decisions on the subjects are collected and reviewed. The offence is committed if the publication is calculated to interfere with a fair trial. R. v. Davies [1906] 1 K. B. 32; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 104. The power may be exercised against a corporate body (R. v. Freeman's Journal [1902] 2 Ir. Rep. 82), and even after the disagreement of the jury on the first trial if further proceedings were contemplated or naturally to be anticipated. Id.; and see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 540. The procedure is by motion to the King's Bench Division for a rule calling upon the party whose conduct is complained of to show cause why a writ of attachment should not issue against him for his contempt. See Short and Mellor, Cr. Pr. (2nd ed.) 342 et seq.

CHAPTER IV.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC PEACE.

SECT. 1.

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLY.

Common Law.

An unlawful assembly at common law is an assembly of three or more persons (a) for purposes forbidden by law, such as that of committing a crime by open force; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), 55; or (b) with intent to carry out any common purpose, lawful or unlawful, in such a manner as to endanger the public peace, or to give firm and courageous persons in the neighbourhood of such assembly reasonable grounds to apprehend a breach of the peace in consequence of it. Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 55; 1 Hawk. c. 65, s. 9: R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 566; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 171: R. v. Brodribb, 6 C. & P. 571: R. v. Dewhurst, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 529: R. v. Stephens, 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1189: Redford v. Birley, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1071: R. v. Vincent, 3 St. Tr. (N. In R. v. Clarkson, 17 Cox, 483, a march of a Salvation Army band through the streets of a town in which street music was prohibited, was held not to be an unlawful assembly, on the ground that the men did not know that their acts were calculated to cause a breach of the peace. See also Beatty v. Gillbanks, 9 Q. B. D. 308; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 117; 15 Cox, 138 : Beaty v. Glenister, 51 L. T. (N. S.) 304. "There is no authority for the proposition that a man may be convicted for doing a lawful act if he knows that his doing it may cause another to do an unlawful act," per Field, J., in Beatty v. Gillbanks, supra : and see R. v. Clarkson, 17 Cox, 483 (C. C. R.). As to meetings for illegal drilling or training, see ante, p. 1135.

It appears to be immaterial whether the common purpose of the assembly is unlawful or lawful if the manner of the meeting endangers the public peace or causes general alarm. Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), 55. An assembly of persons to witness a prize-fight is an unlawful assembly, and every one present and countenancing the fight is guilty of an offence. R. v. Billingham, 2 C. & P. 234 : R. v. Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537 : and see R. v. Hunt, 1 Cox, 177 : R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 66. As to the difference between a mere sparring match and an unlawful fight, see R. v. Young, 10 Cox, 371; and R. v. Orton, 14 Cox, 226 (C. C. R.) (ante, p. 879). Persons assembling for a lawful purpose, and with no intention of carrying it out unlawfully, but with the knowledge that their assembly will be opposed, and with good reason to suppose that a breach of the peace will be committed by those who oppose it, are not guilty of an unlawful assembly. Beatty v. Gillbanks, supra. If at a meeting lawfully convened seditious words are spoken, of such a nature as to be likely to produce a breach of the peace, that meeting may become unlawful. R. v. Burns, 16 Cox, 355.

It is said that the distinction between a riot, rout, and unlawful assembly is that the first is a tumultuous meeting of persons who are guilty of actual violence; the second where they endeavour to commit an act which would make them rioters; and the last where they meet with an intention to make a riot, but neither carry their purpose into effect, nor make any endeavour towards it. 3 Co. Inst. 176; 2 Hawk. c. 65, ss. 1, 8, 9; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 488 : R. v. Birt, 5 C. & P. 154 : R. v. Woolcock, 5 C. & P. 516. This seems too narrow; see 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1350, Alderson, B.; 9 C. & P. 93 n.; because even if the purpose were treasonable the assembly would still be unlawful, and in most of the modern cases of unlawful assembly the object of unlawful meetings has been treasonable or seditious : see R. v. Rankin, 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 711 : and not merely in support of some private enterprise, which is the case in an unlawful assembly leading to riot (see post, p. 1221).

Persons who attend or speak at such a meeting, in pursuance of previous agreement or in approval of its object, are guilty of the offence or of conspiracy : but those persons are not liable who merely attend out of curiosity. R. v.

Rankin, 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 711, 789, Alderson, B. : cf. R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 66 : R. v. Atkinson, 11 Cox, 330. It is the right and duty of magistrates and the police to disperse an assembly which is in fact unlawful. 2 H. 5, st. 1, c. 8 : Radford v. Birley, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1071, 1239, Abbott, C.J. : R. v. Neale, 9 C. & P. 431; 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1312, Littledale, J. : O'Kelly v. Harvey, 15 Cox, 435; 14 L. R. Ir. 165. The meeting need not first be proclaimed nor the proclamation under the Riot Act read; R. v. Fursey, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 543; 6 C. & P. 81; and force may be used after refusal to disperse; R. v. Jones, 6 St. Tr. (N. SECT. 2.

ROUT.

Rout is a disturbance of the peace by persons who assemble together with an intention to do something which if executed will amount to riot, and who actually make a move towards the execution of their common purpose, but do not complete it. Redford v. Birley, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1071, 1211, 1214, Holroyd, J.: 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 422; 1 Hawk. c. 65, s. 8; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 56.

Indictments for the offence are not now drawn, as the jury can convict of rout on an indictment for riot if the complete riot is not proved. See ante, pp. 211 et seq.

SECT. 3.

RIOT.

Common Law.

Riot is a tumultuous disturbance of the peace by three or more persons who assemble together of their own authority, with an intent mutually to assist one another against any who oppose them in the execution of an enterprise of a private nature, and afterwards actually execute the same in a violent and turbulent manner to the terror of the people. See 1 Hawk. c. 65; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 487.

In order to constitute a riot five elements are necessary—(1) the presence of not less than three persons; (2) a common purpose; (3) execution or inception of the common purpose; (4) an intent to help one another, by force if necessary, against any one who may oppose them in the execution of the common purpose; (5) force or violence displayed in such a manner as to alarm at least one person of reasonable firmness. Field v. Receiver of Metropolitan Police [1907] 2 K. B. 853; 76 L. J. (K. B.) 1015; 23 T. L. R. 736; 71 J. P. 494; Ford v. Receiver for Metropolitan Police District [1921] 2 K. B. 344. The common purpose must be of a private nature, i.e., not directed against the Crown or State, for a riot is distinct from treason, in that the acts done need not involve a resistance to the authority or prerogative of the Crown. R. v. Lord George Gordon, 21 St. Tr. 486, 644: R. v. Hardie, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 623, 765: R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 85: R. v. Forbes, 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 939. And riot is distinct from sedition (see ante, p. 1117). As to rout and unlawful assembly, see ante, p. 1218 and supra. As to the powers and duties of sheriffs, justices, soldiers, and private citizens in suppressing riot and resisting or arresting rioters, see R. v. Pinney, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 11: R. v. Kennett, 5 C. & P. 282 n.: Featherstone Riot Report, Parl. Pap. 1893-

1894, C. 7234, and the report Parl. Pap. 1908, C. 236; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 431 et seq., where the employment, powers, and duties of the military forces of the Crown for suppressing riots are dealt with. Peace officers may use force to suppress a riot. R. v. Fursey, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 543. Assault on peace officers engaged in dispersing an unlawful assembly may be a riot. R. v. Williams, 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 775. And it is an indictable misdemeanor to refuse to assist a peace officer in quelling a riot. R. v. Brown, C. & Mar. 314: R. v. Sherlock, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 20; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 92; 10 Cox, 170, ante, p. 965.

Indictment for Riot and Assault.

THE KING v. A. B., C. D., AND E. F.

Hants Quarter Sessions held at Winchester.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B., C. D., and E. F. are charged with the following offence:—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Riot and Assault.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., C. D., and E. F., and other persons unknown, on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, riotously assembled together and assaulted G. H.

On this indictment the jury may acquit of riot, and convict of rout, unlawful assembly, or assault. R. v. O'Brien, 22 Cox, 374; 75 J. P. 192; 27 T. L. R. 204; and see ante, p. 211. On an indictment for riotous demolition of a house, it is said that the jury may negative the felony, and convict of simple riot: 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (ante, p. 215). Casey v. R., Ir. Rep. 8 C. L. 408 (C. C. R.).

Misdemeanor: fine and (or) imprisonment (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246). Hard labour may be imposed. 3 G. 4, c. 114 (ante, p. 242).

This offence is triable at quarter sessions. 34 Edw. 3, c. 1; 15 Ric. 2, c. 2; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106). Restrictions are imposed by 21 Jac. 1, c. 8, s. 4, on removal of indictments for riot from quarter sessions.

Evidence.

Number of persons.]—It must be proved that three persons at least were present and engaged in this unlawful assembly and assault, otherwise the defendants must be acquitted; for unless committed by three or more, it is no riot. 2 Hawk. c. 47, s. 8: R. v. Scott, 3 Burr. 1262; 1 W. Bl. 291, 350: R. v.

Sadbury, 1 Ld. Raym. 484 : R. v. Ingram, 2 Salk. 593. The death of one or more of four persons indicted for riot does not defeat proceedings against the survivors. R. v. Scott, supra.

Assembly. —It must be proved that these three or more persons assembled together; and that their assembling was accompanied with some such circumstances, either of actual force or violence, or at least of an apparent tendency thereto, as were calculated to inspire people with terror; R. v. Hughes, 4 C. & P. 373 : R. v. Graham, 16 Cox, 420 : such as being armed, using threatening speeches, turbulent gestures, or the like. 1 Hawk. c. 65, s. 5.. If an assembly of persons is not accompanied with such circumstances as these, it can never be deemed a riot, however unlawful their intent, or however unlawful the acts which they actually commit. Id.; Lambarde, 178; Dalt. c. 137. It is a sufficient terror and alarm, however, to sustain the indictment, if any one of the King's subjects be in fact terrified. R. v. Phillips, 2 Mood. 252; S. C. as R. v. Langford, C. & Mar. 602. If persons meet at a fair or wake, or on any other lawful and innocent occasion, and on a sudden quarrel they fight together, this is no riot, but an affray merely; but if upon a dispute arising, they form themselves into parties, with promises of mutual assistance, and then fight, it is a riot; for, in this latter case, the design to break the peace is as premeditated as if they had originally met for that purpose. 1 Hawk. c. 65, s. 3, Where a riot ensues on a meeting and in consequence of speeches there which incite to violence, the speakers may be convicted as rioters, though absent when it occurs. R. v. Sharpe, 3 Cox, 288, Wilde, C.J. Where a riot is proved to have taken place, the mere presence of a person among the rioters, even although he possessed the power, and refused to exercise it, of stopping the riot, does not render him liable as one of the rioters. R. v. Atkinson, 11 Cox, 330, Kelly, C.B. In order to render him so liable, it must be shown that he did something by word or act to take part in, help, or incite to the riotous proceedings. Id.

The acts of the rioters may be proved severally, before evidence is given to connect their fellow-rioters, as in conspiracy. See R. v. Cooper, 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 431, where earlier cases to the contrary are collected.

It is not necessary, to constitute a riot, that the Riot Act should be read. Before the proclamation can be read, a riot must exist; and the effect of the proclamation will not change the character of the meeting, but will make those guilty of a felony who do not disperse within one hour after the proclamation is read. R. v. Fursey, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 543; 6 C. & P. 81.

Assault.]—Prove the assault as directed ante, pp. 930 et seq. And this must be proved, otherwise the defendants must be acquitted of the riot, although it would seem that they may still be found guilty of the rout or of the unlawful assembly. For, where persons assemble together for the purpose of doing an act, and the assembly is such as is above described, if they do not proceed to execute their purpose, it is but an unlawful assembly, not a riot; if, after so assembling, they proceed to execute the act for which they assembled, but do not execute it, it is termed a rout; but if they not only so assemble, but proceed to execute their design, and actually execute it, it is then a riot. 1 Hawk. c. 65, s. 1; Dalt. c. 136: R. v. Birt, 5 C. & P. 154: R. v. Vincent, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1037; 9 C. & P. 91.

It is immaterial, however, whether the act done be unlawful or not; doing it in a manner calculated to inspire people with terror is equally punishable, whether it be lawful or otherwise. 1 Hawk. c. 65, s. 7. Yet, where the object of the assembly is lawful, it in general requires stronger evidence of the terror of the means, to induce a jury to return a verdict of guilty, than if the object were unlawful; and it has even been held, that, if a number of persons assemble for the purpose of abating a public nuisance, and appear with spades, iron crows, and other tools for that purpose, and abate it accordingly, without doing more, it is no riot, Dalt. c. 137, unless threatening language or other misbehaviour, in apparent disturbance of the peace, be at the same time used. Id.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Riot.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., C. D., and E. F., and other persons unknown, on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, riotously assembled together.

Misdemeanor: final and (or) imprisonment (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246). Hard labour may be imposed: 3 G. 4, c. 114 (ante, p. 242). As to the evidence, see ante, p. 1222.

Statutes.

1 G. 1, st. 2, c. 5 (Riot Act), s. 1.—Twelve or more rioters remaining one hour after proclamation.]—Whereas of late many rebellious riots and tumults have been in divers parts of this kingdom, to the disturbance of the public peace, and the endangering of his Majesty's person and government, and the same are yet continued and fomented by persons disaffected to his Majesty, presuming so to do, for that the punishments provided by the laws now in being are not adequate to such heinous offences; and by such rioters, his Majesty and his administration have been most maliciously and falsely traduced, with an intent to raise divisions, and to alienate the affections of the people from his Majesty; Therefore, for the preventing and suppressing of such riots and tumults, and for the more speedy and effectual punishing the offenders therein, be it enacted, etc., that if any persons, to the number of twelve or more, being unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled together, to the disturbance of the public peace at any time after the last day of July, in the year of our Lord 1715, and being required or commanded by any one or more justice or justices of the peace, or by the sheriff of the county, or his under-sheriff, or by the mayor, bailiff or bailiffs, or other head officer, or justice of the peace of any city or town corporate, where such assembly shall be, by proclamation to be made in the King's name, in the form hereinafter directed, to disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations, or to their lawful business, shall, to the number of twelve or more (notwithstanding such proclamation made), unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously remain or continue together by the space of one hour after such command or request made by proclamation, that then such continuing together, to the number of twelve or more, after such command or request made by proclamation, shall be adjudged felony. . . .

Sect. 2. Form of proclamation.]—And . . . the order and form of the proclamations that shall be made by the authority of this Act shall be as hereafter followeth, (that is to say) the justice of the peace, or other person authorized by this Act to make the said proclamation, shall, among the said rioters, or as near to them as he can safely come, with a loud voice command, or cause to be commanded silence to be while proclamation is making, and after that, shall openly and with a loud voice make or cause to be made, proclamation in these words, or like in effect:

"Our sovereign lord the King chargeth and commandeth all persons, being assembled, immediately to disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations or to their lawful business, upon the pains contained in the Act made in the first year of King George, for preventing tumults and riotous assemblies.

"God Save the King."

And every such justice and justices of the peace, sheriff, under-sheriff, mayor, bailiff, and other head officer aforesaid, within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, are hereby authorized, empowered, and required, on notice or knowledge of any such unlawful, riotous and tumultuous assembly, to resort to the place where such unlawful, riotous, and tumultuous assembly shall be, of persons to the number of twelve or more, and there to make or cause to be made proclamation in manner aforesaid.

Sect. 5.—Opposing proclamation.]—Provided always . . . that if any person or persons do or shall, with force and arms, wilfully and knowingly oppose, obstruct, or in any other manner wilfully or knowingly let, hinder, or hurt any person or persons that shall begin to proclaim, or go to proclaim, according to the proclamation hereby directed to be made, whereby such proclamation shall not be made, that then every such opposing, obstructing, letting, hindering or hurting such person or persons so beginning or going to make such proclamation as aforesaid, shall be adjudged felony; . . . and that also, every such person or persons so being unlawfully, riotously and tumultuously assembled to the number of twelve, as aforesaid, or more, to whom proclamation should or ought to have been made if the same had not been hindered as aforesaid, shall likewise, in case they or any of them, to the number of twelve or more, shall continue together, and not disperse themselves within one hour after such let or hindrance so made, having knowledge of such let or hindrance so made, shall be adjudged felons. . . .

Sect. 8.—Limitation of proceedings.]—Provided always, that no person or persons shall be prosecuted by virtue of this Act, for any offence or offences committed contrary to the same, unless such prosecution be commenced within twelve months after the offence committed. (See ante, p. 63.)

Indictment of Rioters remaining one hour together after Proclamation.

(1 G. 1, st. 2, c. 5, s. 1, ante, p. 1224.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Riot, contrary to the Riot Act, 1715.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., C. D., and E. F., and other persons unknown, to the number of twelve or more, on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, riotously assembled together, and remained and continued together for an hour after being lawfully required or commanded to disperse.

Felony: 1 G. 1, st. 2, c. 5, s. 1 : penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 91, s. 1 (ante, p. 1226); 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). Opposing the making of the proclamation is also felony. 1 G. 1, st. 2, c. 5, s. 5 (ante, p. 1224), and subject to the same punishment.

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

1. Prove that the defendants, together with others, to the number of twelve at least, were "unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously" assembled together, "to the disturbance of the public peace." It does not seem from the words of the statute that it is necessary that a riot should have actually been committed; it seems to be sufficient that the assembly was of such a nature, and gathered together under such circumstances, that if they had done the act for the purpose of which they were assembled, it would have been a riot. R. v. James, 5 C. & P. 153.

2. Prove that silence was commanded, and proclamation made. The proclamation must be read correctly. Where the magistrate in reading the proclamation omitted the words "God save the King," it was held that persons remaining after the proclamation could not be capitally convicted. R. v. Child, 4 C. & P. 442. The offence is no longer capitally punishable. See ante, p. 1226.

3. Prove that the defendants, together with others, to the number of twelve or more, "unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously" remained and continued together for one hour or more after proclamation so made: computed from the first reading of the proclamation. R. v. Woolcock, 5 C. & P. 516.

The prosecution must be commenced (see ante, p. 63) within twelve months after the offence committed. 1 G. 1, st. 2, c. 5, s. 8. The expression "month" in this section means lunar month. See Lacon v. Hooper, 6 T. R. 224, 226: Bruner v. Moore [1904] 1 Ch. 305; 73 L. J. (Ch.) 377.

Sect. 4.

AFFRAY, ETC.

An affray is a public offence to the terror of the King's subjects. There may be an affray where no actual violence occurs, e.g., where a man arms himself with dangerous and unusual weapons in such a manner as will cause terror. 1 Hawk. c. 63, ss. 2, 4; 4 Bl. Com. 144; 3 Co. Inst. 158; Burn's Just. tit. Affray (I.).

Indictment for an Affray. (Common Law.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Affray.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B. and C. D., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, in a public street and highway, unlawfully fought and made an affray.

Misdemeanor at common law; fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246; and see 3 Co. Inst. 158; 1 Hawk. c. 63; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 427; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 54.

The words "public street and highway" have been held to be essential. R. v. O'Neill, Ir. Rep. 6 C. L. 1.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendants fought in a public street or highway; for if it is in private, it is an assault and battery merely, and not an affray. 1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 1. No quarrelsome or threatening words whatever will amount to an affray. Id. s. 2; 1 Hale, 456.

SECT. 5.

FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER.

A forcible entry is when a man enters into lands or tenements, manu forti. Co. Litt. 257; Com. Dig. Forcible Entry (A. 2). A forcible detainer is when a man who has entered peaceably, maintains his possession by force. Com. Dig. Justice (B. 1). See 3 Chit. Cr. L. 1135; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 441, et seq.

Statutes.

5 Ric. 2, st. 1, c. 7 (c. 8 in Ruffhead).—Forcible entries forbidden.]—And also the King defendeth, that none from henceforth make any entry into any lands and tenements, but in case where entry is given by the law; and in such case not with strong hand, nor with multitude of people, but only in peaceable and easy manner. And if any man from henceforth do to the contrary, and thereof be duly convict (sic), he shall be punished by imprisonment of his body and thereof ransomed at the King's will. (For indictment, see post, p. 1231.)

15 Ric. 2, c. 2.—Confirmation of statutes against riots or forcible entries.]—Item, it is accorded and assented, that the ordinances and statutes, made and not repealed, of those that make entries with strong hand into lands and tenements, or other possessions whatsoever, and them hold with force, and also of those that make insurrections or great ridings (sic), riots, routs, or assemblies, in disturbance of the peace, or of the common law, or in affray of the people, shall be holden and kept, and fully executed; joined to the same, that at all times that such forcible entry shall be made, and complaint thereof cometh to the justices of peace or to any of them, that the same justices or justice take sufficient power of the county, and go to the place where such force is made; and if they find any that hold such place forcibly after such entry made, they shall be taken and put in the next gaol, there to abide convict (sic) by the record of the same justices or justice, until they have made fine and ransom to the King: and that all the people of the county, as well the sheriffs as other, shall be attendant upon the same justices to go and assist the same justices to arrest such offenders, upon pain of imprisonment, and to make fine to the King. And in the same manner it shall be done of them that make such forcible entries in benefices or offices of Holy Church.

Indictment for a forcible Entry into a Freehold. (5 Ric. 2, st. 1, c. 7, ante, p. 1228.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Forcible entry, contrary to 5 Ric. 2, c. 7.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, with many other persons unknown, made a forcible entry upon the freehold land of C. D., of which he was in occupation, and expelled him from the possession thereof.

Counts for riot, affray, and assault may be added. A second count may be added for forcible detainer, see post, p. 1233.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment (with or without hard labour, ante, p. 240) and (or) ransom at the King's will (i.e., fine at the discretion of the Court). 5 Ric. 2, st. 1, c. 7, ante, p. 1228.

Evidence.

The prosecutor must prove:—First, that he was seised in fee of the premises in question, or otherwise in lawful possession, at the time of the forcible entry. The prosecutor's title is not part of the issue, and probably need not, for purposes of conviction, be stated with precision. See R. v. Child, 2 Cox, 102: R. v. Hoare, 6 M. & Sel. 266. And proof that he was in the actual occupation of the premises, or in the perception of the rents and profits, is sufficient primâ facie evidence of his seisin. See Lows v. Telford, 1 App. Cas. 414; 45 L. J. (Ex.) 613; 13 Cox, 225: Jayne v. Price, 5 Taunt, 326. This presumption, however, may be rebutted, either by direct evidence of his having a less estate, or by evidence of circumstances from which the jury may presume it. Jayne v. Price, supra. But it is immaterial whether the estate thus proved is an estate by right or by wrong; for even if the defendant has a right of entry, still his asserting that right "with strong hand, or with multitude of people," is equally an offence within the statute as if he had no right; and this is so even where a landlord forcibly ejects a tenant whose term has expired. Taunton v. Costar, 7 T. R. 431; and see Newton v. Harland, 1 Scott (N. R.), 474. If he was a mere trespasser, apparently the statute does not apply. Browne v. Dawson, 10 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 7; 12 A. & E. 624: Scott v. Brown, 51 L. T. (N. S.) 746: Collins v. Thomas, 1 F. & F. 416, Campbell, C.J.: R. v. Dillon, 2 Chit. (K. B.) 314. The statute, however, does not extend to a case where the party ousted had the bare custody of the premises for the defendant; 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 32; but it extends to the forcible ouster of one joint tenant, or tenant in common, by another. Id. s. 33. It may be considered a good general rule, also, that the statute extends to all hereditaments to which the defendant, if he had a right, might have asserted that right by a peaceable entry.

Secondly, the prosecutor must prove the forcible entry. An entry "with strong hand," or "with multitude of people," is the offence described in the statute. Therefore, an entry by breaking the doors or windows, etc., whether any person is in the house or not, especially if it is a dwelling-house, is a forcible entry within the statute. See 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 26. So, an entry where personal violence is done to the prosecutor, or to any of his family or servants, or to any person or persons keeping the possession for him (Id. s. 26), or even where it is accompanied with such threats of personal violence (either actual, or to be implied from the actions of the defendant, or from his being unusually armed or attended, or the like), as were likely to intimidate the prosecutor or his family, etc., and to deter them from defending their possession (Id. ss. 20, 21, 27 : Milner v. Maclean, 2 C. & P. 17), is a forcible entry within the statute. But an entry by an open window, or by opening the door with a key, or by mere trick or artifice, such as by enticing the owner out and then shutting the door upon him, or the like, without further violence; Com. Dig. Forc. Ent. (A. 3); 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 26; or if effected by threats to destroy the owner's goods or cattle merely, and not by threats of personal violence, 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 26; or if effected by threats to destroy the owner's goods will not support an indictment for forcible entry; there must be such force or show of force as is calculated to prevent resistance. R. v. Smyth, 5 C. & P. 201; 1 M. & Rob. 155. If, however, whilst the owner is out of his house, the defendant forcibly prevents him from returning to it, and in the meantime sends persons to take possession of it peaceably, this is said to be a forcible entry. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 26. Also, where a party having right, and whose entry is congéable, enters or makes claim, and the other party afterwards continues to hold possession by force; this is considered a forcible entry in the party so holding; because his estate is defeated by the entry or claim, and his continuance in possession is deemed a new entry. Id. ss. 22, 34; Co. Litt. 251.

Where the party entering has in fact no right of entry, all persons in his company, those who do not use violence as well as those who do, are equally guilty; but if he has a right of entry, then those only who use or threaten violence; 3 Bac. Abr. Forc. Ent. (B.); or who actually abet those who do, are guilty. A wife may be guilty of a forcible entry into the dwelling-house of her husband, and other persons also, if they assist her in the force, although her entry in itself is lawful. R. v. Smyth, supra.

Thirdly, as to the expulsion; it is necessary to prove the expulsion, and that the prosecutor is still kept out of possession, merely for the purpose of obtaining restitution of the premises; 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 41; but it is no part of the offence described by the statute, which mentions a forcible entry merely. No restitution shall be awarded, if the defendant has been permitted to remain quietly in possession for three years, previously to the finding of the indictment. 31 Eliz. c. 11 (ante, p. 1230).

Absence of title in the prosecutor is no defence, the gist of the offence being the force. R. v. Williams, 4 Man. & Ry. 471 : R. v. Studd, 14 W. R. 806; 14 L. T. (N. S.) 623 : Beddall v. Maitland, 17 Ch. D. 174 : cf. Edwick v. Hawkes, 18 Ch. D. 199.

A judge at the assize may, in his discretion, refuse to award restitution, after an indictment for forcible entry and detainer has been found by a grand jury; and the High Court will not review his decision. R. v. Harland, 2 M. & Rob. 141; 8 A. & E. 826; 1 Per. & D. 93; 8 L. J. (M. C.) 60: R. v. Hake, 4 Man. & Ry. 483 n. After conviction the writ is of right and as of course: see Short and Mellor, Cr. Fr. (2nd. ed.) 402. As to the form of a writ of restitution, see Id. s. 60; Dalt. c. 182.

Forcible Detainer under 8 H. 6, c. 9 (ante, p. 1229).—Evidence.]—Prove the seisin or possession, as in the two former cases. Prove an entry; whether peaceable or not is immaterial. Proof of the expulsion, which ex vi termini implies force, is not material, as the gist of the offence is the forcible detainer merely. Holding the premises from the prosecutor by force, however, must be proved: and the same violence or terror which will make an entry forcible, will also make a detainer forcible. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 30; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 448. But merely refusing to go out of the house (1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 30); or a tenant at will denying possession to his lessor; or a man keeping out of his land, by force, a person claiming common upon it (Com. Dig. Forc. Det. (B. 2)), is not a forcible holding within the meaning of the statutes. See R. v. Oakley, 4 B. & Ad. 307; 2 L. J. (M. C.) 24: R. v. Wilson, 1 A. & E. 627; 3 L. J. (M. C.) 96: R. v. Wilson, 3 A. & E. 817; 4 L. J. (M. C.) 114.

Forcible Entry and Detainer: Common Law.]—It is said that an indictment will lie at common law for a forcible entry, although it is generally brought on the statutes. R. v. Bake, 3 Burr. 1731, Wilmot, J.: but see R. v. Storr, 3 Burr. 1698. It is said to have been proper to indict at common law where the entry was made without legal title (1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 1: R. v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 357); or where the prosecutor would on an indictment under the old statutes have been incompetent as a witness. R. v. Williams, 9 B. & C. 549; 4 Man. & Ry. 471.

Misdemeanor at common law: fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour. See ante, pp. 239, 241, 246.

The evidence of the forcible entry, upon this indictment, must be stronger than is required to support an indictment on the statutes; that is to say, there must be proof of such a force as constitutes a public breach of the peace, or such proceedings as constitute a riot or unlawful assembly (ante, pp. 1218, 1221). R. v. Wilson, R. v. Bake, supra.

It is not necessary to set forth, or prove the particulars of the prosecutor's estate in the messuage, etc., because in this case there is no restitution: stating that J. N. was possessed, and proving his possession, will be sufficient. R. v. Wilson, 3 L. J. (M. C.) 96; 1 A. & E. 627, supra. For the same reason, it does not seem to be necessary to prove the expulsion or detainer, unless where the prosecutor has failed to prove the entry to have been forcible. (See ante, p. 1231.)

SECT. 6.

POUND-BREACH AND RESCUE OF DISTRESS.

Common Law.

Pound-breach is a misdemeanor indictable at common law. It consists in the forcible release of cattle, etc., lawfully placed in a proper pound (Green v. Duckett, 11 Q. B. D. 275; 52 L. J. (Q. B.) 435), or in forcibly damaging or destroying the pound with that object. 1 Co. Litt. 47 b; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 551; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 205; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), 121; Bullen on Distress (2nd ed.), 248: R. v. Bradshaw, 7 C. & P. 233: R. v. Butterfield, 17 Cox, 598. For precedents of indictments, see Cro. Circ. Comp. 199; 2 Chit. Cr. L. 205; 4 Went. 314. The offence is also summarily punishable under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 50, s. 75, so far as relates to cattle found trespassing on highways; and under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 30. Rescue of a distress for rent seems also to be an indictable misdemeanor at common law. R. v. Nicholson, 65 J. P. 298; and see R. v. Noonan, Ir. Rep. 10 C. L. 505; 10 Cox 302 (C. C. R. Ir.): R. v. Walshe, Ir. Rep. 10 C. L. 511. For precedent of indictment, see Cro. Circ. Comp. 198. It consists in forcibly taking away things legally distrained from the distrainor before they are impounded. Bullen on Distress (2nd ed.), 244. But it is usual to resort to the civil remedy by treble damages under 2 W. & M. c. 5, s. 3, and 11 G. 2, c. 19, s. 10: Kemp v. Christmas [1898] 79 L. T. (N. S.) 233; 14 T. L. R. 572. Rescue of a distress for rates appears also to be indictable. R. v. Brenan, 6 Cox, 381 (Ir.); 6 Ir. Jur. (O. S.) 307: R. v. Westropp, 2 Ir. C. L. Rep. 217. It is not necessary in such a case to prove the making of the rate, or that anything is due; and it is sufficient to prove a warrant in proper form. Id. If the distress warrant is bad, the rescue is justifiable. R. v. Boyle, 6 Ir. C. L. Rep. 598; 7 Cox, 428: and cf. R. v. Pigott, 1 Ir. C. L. Rep. 471.

SECT. 7.

CHALLENGE TO FIGHT.

Indictment for sending a Challenge. (Common Law.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Challenging to a duel.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, challenged C. D. to fight a duel with him.

Misdemeanor: fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour. See ante, pp. 239, 241, 246. See 1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 3; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.), 54: R. v. Philipps, 6 East, 464: R. v. O'Brien, Smith and Batty (K. B. Ir.), 79; and the precedents, Cro. Circ. Comp. 102-104; 4 Went. 315; 6 Went. 385-461; 3 Chit. Cr. L. 848.

Where the challenge is by letter, prove the letter and the handwriting. Prove also the delivery of it to C. D. Where the letter containing the challenge was put into the post-office in the county of Middlesex, to be delivered to the prosecutor in another county, Lord Ellenborough held, that the party might be indicted in Middlesex: for sending the challenge is the offence; whether it reaches the person to whom it is sent or not is immaterial. R v. Williams, 2 Camp. 506.

Provocation, however great, is no excuse or justification on the part of the defendant (R. v. Rice, 3 East, 581), however it may weigh with the Court in apportioning the punishment.

SECT. 8.

SENDING LETTERS CONTAINING THREATS TO MURDER OR TO INJURE PROPERTY.

Statutes.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Threatening to burn a house, contrary to section 50 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, sent or delivered to, or caused to be received by, C. D. a letter or writing, knowing the contents thereof, threatening to burn the house of the said C. D.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than ten nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 50; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 73 (ante, p. 740).

Evidence.

Prove that the prisoner sent or delivered the letter to C. D. as directed, ante, p. 683.

Sending a letter to A. B. threatening to burn a house of which he was owner, but let by him to and occupied by a tenant, was held not to be an offence within 4 G. 4, c. 54 (rep.), the words of which were "his or their houses," etc. R. v. Burridge, 2 M. & Rob. 296; sed quære; see R. v. Grimwade, 1 Den. 30; 1 C. & K. 592. The threat to burn any house, barn, etc., etc., is sufficient to satisfy 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 50.

Upon an indictment on 9 G. 1, c. 22 (rep.), the words of which were "to burn the dwelling-house, outhouses," etc., where the writer of the letter threatened to burn the prosecutor's mill, and to do all the injury he was able to his farms, and the prosecutor proved that he had no mill at the time, but that he had farms, and buildings upon them: the judges held clearly that, as to the mill, the letter was not within the statute; and the majority of the judges held that, even as to the farms, as the letter did not necessarily imply that the injury to them was to be effected by fire, it was not within the Act. R. v. Jepson, 2 East, P. C. 1115. Neither would this threat as to the farms satisfy the term "destroy" in the present statute. Compare the cases under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 29 (ante, pp. 683 et seq.).

Indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 16.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Threatening to murder, contrary to section 16 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, maliciously sent or delivered or caused to be received by C. D. a letter or writing, knowing the contents thereof, threatening to kill or murder him.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than ten nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 110, s. 16; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

Evidence.

Prove that the prisoner sent or delivered the letter to C. D. as directed, ante, p. 683.

It is for the jury to say whether the letter amounts to a threat to kill or murder. R. v. Girdwood, 2 East, P. C. 1120, 1121; 1 Leach, 142: R. v. Boucher, 4 C. & P. 562: R. v. Tyler, 1 Mood. 428.

The word "maliciously" implies the doing of that which a person has no legal right to do, and the doing of it in order to secure some object by means which are improper. R. v. Syme, 75 J. P. 535; 27 T. L. R. 562; 6 Cr. App. R. 257: R. v. Johnson, 9 Cr. App. R. 57.

SECT. 9.

DEFAMATORY LIBEL.

NOTE.—For seditious libel, see ante, p. 1114, for blasphemous libel, see ante, p. 1159; for libel affecting the administration of justice, see ante, p. 1215; for obscene libel, see post, p. 1318.

Statutes.

32 G. 3, c. 60 (Libel Act, 1792 (Fox's Act)), s. 1.]—Whereas doubts have arisen whether on the trial of an indictment or information for the making or publishing any libel, where an issue or issues are joined between the King and the defendant or defendants, on the plea of not guilty pleaded, it be competent to the jury impannelled to try the same to give their verdict on the whole matter in issue: be it therefore declared and enacted, etc., that on every such trial the jury sworn to try the issue may give a general verdict of guilty or not guilty upon the whole matter put in issue upon such indictment or information, and shall not be required or directed by the Court or judge, before whom such indictment or information shall be tried, to find the defendant or defendants guilty merely on the proof of the publication by such defendant or defendants of the paper charged to be a libel, and of the sense ascribed to the same in such indictment or information. [This Act is said to be declaratory of the common law. Capital and Counties Bank v. Henty, 5 C. P. D. 539; 49 L. J. (C. P.) 830, Brett, L.J. But it was passed in consequence of rulings to the effect that the question of libel or no libel was for the judge alone and not for the jury.]

Sect. 2.]—Provided always, that on every such trial the Court or judge before whom such indictment or information shall be tried shall, according to their or his discretion, give their or his opinion and direction to the jury on the matter in issue between the King and the defendant or defendants, in like manner as in other criminal cases.

Sect. 3.]—Provided also, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to prevent the jury from finding a special verdict, in their discretion, as in other criminal cases.

Sect. 4.]—Provided also, that in case the jury shall find the defendant or defendants guilty it shall and may be lawful for the said defendant or defendants to move in arrest of judgment, on such ground and in such manner as by law he or they might have done before the passing of this Act, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 96 (Libel Act, 1843), s. 4.—Punishment for knowingly publishing a false defamatory libel.]—If any person shall maliciously publish any defamatory libel, knowing the same to be false, every such person, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be imprisoned in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding two years, and to pay such fine as the Court shall award. [This section does not create or define a new offence, but merely prescribes the punishment for a common law offence. R. v. Munslow [1895] 1 Q. B. 758; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 138.]

Sect. 5.—Punishment for defamatory libel.]—If any person shall maliciously publish any defamatory libel, every such person, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to fine or imprisonment, or both, as the Court may award, such imprisonment not to exceed the term of one year. (See ante, pp. 240, 246.) See R. v. Mabin [1901] 20 N. Z. L. R. 451, discussing R. v. Munslow, supra, and Boaler v. R., 21 Q. B. D. 284; 57 L. J. (M. C.) 85.

Sect. 6.—Plea of justification, etc.]—On the trial of any indictment or information for a defamatory libel, the defendant having pleaded such plea as hereinafter mentioned, the truth of the matters charged may be inquired into, but shall not amount to a defence, unless it was for the public benefit that the said matters charged should be published; and to entitle the defendant to give evidence of the truth of such matters charged as a defence to such indictment or information it shall be necessary for the defendant, in pleading to the said indictment or information, to allege the truth of the said matters charged in the manner now required in pleading a justification to an action for defamation, and further to allege that it was for the public benefit that the said matters charged should be published, and the particular fact or facts by reason whereof it was for the public benefit that the said matters charged should be published; to which plea the prosecutor shall be at liberty to reply generally, denying the whole thereof; and if after such plea the defendant shall be convicted on such indictment or information, it shall be competent to the Court, in pronouncing sentence, to consider whether the guilt of the defendant is aggravated or mitigated by the said plea, and by the evidence given to prove or to disprove the same:

Provided always, that the truth of the matter charged in the alleged libel complained of by such indictment or information shall in no case be inquired into without such plea of justification:

Provided also, that in addition to such plea it shall be competent to the defendant also to plead a plea of not guilty:

Provided also, that nothing in this Act contained shall take away or prejudice any defence under the plea of not guilty, which it is now competent to the defendant to make under such plea to any action or indictment, or information for defamatory words or libel. (As to the law prior to this enactment, see notes to Wyatt v. Gore, Holt (N. P.), 299, 306. Until s. 6 was passed, the plea of not guilty was the only plea in bar allowed, and it was held that the basis of the proceeding was the actual or possible injury to the public peace.)

Sect. 7.—Evidence to rebut primâ facie case of publication by agent.]—Whensoever, upon the trial of any indictment or information for the publication of a libel, under the plea of not guilty, evidence shall have been given which shall establish a presumptive case of publication against the defendant by the act of any other person by his authority, it shall be competent to such defendant to prove that such publication was made without his authority, consent, or knowledge, and that the said publication did not arise from want of due care or caution on his part. [This section would seem not to be restricted to defamatory libel.]

Sect. 8.—Costs.]—Repealed as to England by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10, and sched. For substituted provisions, see ante, pp. 267 et seq. and post, p. 1253.

44 & 45 Vict. c. 60 (Newspaper Libel and Registration Act, 1881), s. 1.—Interpretation of "newspaper"—"Proprietor."]—In the construction of this Act, unless there is anything in the subject or context repugnant thereto, the several words and phrases hereinafter mentioned shall have and include the meanings following; (that is to say,) . . .

The word "newspaper" shall mean any paper containing public news, intelligence, or occurrences, or any remarks or observations therein printed for sale, and published in England or Ireland periodically, or in parts or numbers at intervals not exceeding twenty-six days between the publication of any two such papers, parts, or numbers. (See Att-Gen. v. Bradbury and Evans, 7 Ex. 97; 21 L. J. (Ex.) 12.) Also any paper printed in order to be dispersed, and made public weekly or oftener, or at intervals not exceeding twenty-six days, containing only or principally advertisements.

The word "proprietor" shall mean and include as well the sole proprietor of any newspaper, as also in the case of a divided proprietorship the persons who, as partners or otherwise, represent and are responsible for any share or interest in the newspaper as between themselves and the persons in like manner representing or responsible for the other shares or interests therein, and no other person.

Sect. 4.—Inquiry by court of summary jurisdiction as to newspaper libel being for public benefit or being true.]—A court of summary jurisdiction, upon the hearing of a charge against a proprietor, publisher, or editor, or any person responsible for the publication of a newspaper, for a libel published therein, may receive evidence as to the publication being for the public benefit, and as to the matters charged in the libel being true, and as to the report being fair and accurate, and published without malice, and as to any matter which under this or any other Act, or otherwise, might be given in evidence by way of defence by the person charged on his trial on indictment, and the Court, if of opinion after hearing such evidence that there is a strong or probable presumption that the jury on the trial would acquit the person charged, may dismiss the case. [In R. v. Carden, 5 Q. B. D. 1; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 1; 14 Cox, 359, it was held that a magistrate has no jurisdiction to receive evidence of the truth of the libel where the defendant is charged before him under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 5 (ante, p. 1239), with maliciously publishing a defamatory libel. The above enactment overrules that case as to newspaper libels. It seems that when the charge is under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 4 (ante, p. 1238), the truth can be inquired of by the justice. See R. v. Carden, 5 Q. B. D. 1; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 1, Lush, J.

Sect. 5.—Provision as to summary conviction for newspaper libel.]—If a court of summary jurisdiction upon the hearing of a charge against a proprietor, publisher, editor, or any person responsible for the publication of a newspaper for a libel published therein is of opinion that though the person charged is shown to have been guilty the libel was of a trivial character, and that the offence may be adequately punished by virtue of the powers of this section, the Court shall cause the charge to be reduced into writing and read to the person charged, and then address a question to him to the following effect: "Do you desire to be tried by a jury, or do you consent to the case being dealt with summarily?" And, if such person assents to the case being dealt with summarily, the Court may summarily convict him and adjudge him to pay a fine not exceeding fifty pounds. Section 27 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), shall, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, apply to every such proceeding as if it were herein enacted and extended to Ireland, as if the Summary Jurisdiction Acts were therein referred to instead of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43).

Sect. 6.—Application of Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17), to libels generally.]—Every libel or alleged libel, and every offence under this Act, shall be deemed to be an offence within and subject to the provisions of the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, ante, p. 67).

Sect. 15.—Copies of entries in and extracts from register of newspaper proprietors, to be evidence.]—Every copy of an entry in or extract from the register of newspaper proprietors, purporting to be certified by the registrar or his deputy for the time being, or under the official seal of the registrar, shall be received as conclusive evidence of the contents of the said register of newspaper proprietors, so far as the same appear in such copy or extract without proof of the signature thereto or of the seal of office affixed thereto, and every such certified copy or extract shall in all proceedings, civil or criminal, be accepted as sufficient primâ facie evidence of all the matters and things thereby appearing, unless and until the contrary thereof be shown.

Sect. 18.—The provisions as to the registration of newspaper proprietors contained in this Act shall not apply to the case of any newspaper which belongs to a joint-stock company duly incorporated under and subject to the provisions of the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1879 [now of the Companies Consolidation Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 69].

51 & 52 Vict. c. 64 (Law of Libel Amendment Act, 1888), s. 1.—Meaning of "newspaper."]—In the construction of this Act the word "newspaper" shall have the same meaning as in the Newspaper Libel and Registration Act, 1881. (Ante, p. 1240.)

Sect. 3.—Newspaper reports of proceedings in court privileged.]—A fair and accurate report in any newspaper of proceedings publicly heard before any court exercising judicial authority shall, if published contemporaneously with such proceedings, be privileged: Provided that nothing in this section shall authorize the publication of any blasphemous or indecent matter. (See Kimber v. Press Association [1893] 1 Q. B. 65; 62 L. J. (Q. B.) 152; and ante, p. 1124.)

Sect. 4.—Newspaper reports of proceedings of public meetings and of certain bodies and persons privileged.]—A fair and accurate report published in any newspaper of the proceedings of a public meeting, or (except where neither the public nor any newspaper reporter is admitted) of any meeting of a vestry, town council, school board, board of guardians, board or local authority formed or constituted under the provisions of any Act of Parliament, or of any committee appointed by any of the above-mentioned bodies, or of any meeting of any commissioners authorized to act by letters patent, Act of Parliament, warrant under the royal sign manual or other lawful warrant or authority, select committees of either house of parliament, justices of the peace in quarter sessions assembled for administrative or deliberative purposes, and the publication at the request of any government office or department, officer of state, commissioner of police, or chief constable of any notice or report issued by them for the information of the public, shall be privileged, unless it shall be proved that such report or publication was published or made maliciously: Provided that nothing in this section shall authorize the publication of any blasphemous or indecent matter: Provided also, that the protection intended to be afforded by this section shall not be available as a defence in any proceedings if it shall be proved that the defendant has been requested to insert in the newspaper in which the report or other publication complained of appeared a reasonable letter or statement by way of contradiction or explanation of such report or other publication, and has refused or neglected to insert the same: Provided further, that nothing in this section contained shall be deemed or construed to limit or abridge any privilege now by law existing, or to protect the publication of any matter not of public concern and the publication of which is not for the public benefit.

For the purposes of this section "public meeting" shall mean any meeting bonâ fide and lawfully held for a lawful purpose, and for the furtherance or discussion of any matter of public concern, whether the admission thereto shall be general or restricted.

Sect. 8.—Order of judge required for prosecution of newspaper proprietor, etc.]— . . . No criminal prosecution shall be commenced against any proprietor, publisher, editor, or any person responsible for the publication of a newspaper for any libel published therein without the order of a judge at chambers being first had and obtained.

Such application shall be made on notice to the person accused, who shall have an opportunity of being heard against such application. [The omitted words of this section repealed 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 3, as to which see ante, p. 136. This section appears to apply to newspapers published by joint-stock companies as well as to newspapers registered under 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60. See s. 18 of that Act, ante, p. 1241.]

Sect. 9. Person proceeded against criminally for libel a competent witness.]—Every person charged with the offence of libel before any court of criminal jurisdiction, and the husband or wife of the person so charged, shall be competent, but not compellable, witnesses on every hearing at every stage of such charge. [This enactment is virtually superseded as to England by the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36), q. v. ante, pp. 458 et seq.]

Indictment for a Defamatory Libel. (6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, ante, p. 1238.)

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Libel, contrary to section 4 of the Libel Act, 1843.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, published a defamatory libel concerning C. D., knowing it to be false, in the form of a letter addressed to E. F., which contained the following defamatory matters concerning the said C. D. :

1. Do you know that about the year 1886 your friend C. D. was in the employ of L. and M., and that his accounts were found to be all wrong? (meaning thereby that C. D. was guilty of acts of dishonesty and falsification of accounts whilst he was in the employ of L. and M.).

2. As soon as his defalcations were discovered and a warrant was applied for he fled to Rio (meaning thereby that the said C. D. was a fugitive from justice).

3. Some time after this he appears to have returned to England, for he was found to be keeping a disorderly house in the East End of London (meaning thereby that the said C. D. had committed the criminal offence of keeping a disorderly house).

Misdemeanor : imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and (or) fine. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 4; 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 16 (1) (ante, p. 240). If the prosecutor fails to prove the scienter, the defendant may nevertheless be convicted of publishing a defamatory libel (Boaler v. R. 21 Q. B. D. 284; 57 L. J. (M. C.) 85), and punished by imprisonment not exceeding one year, with or without hard labour, and (or) fine. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 5 (see ante, p. 1239). The defendant may, in addition to or in substitution for a sentence of imprisonment, be ordered to enter into recognizances and to find sureties to keep the peace for a specified period, and, in default of so doing, to be further imprisoned for the period during which he is so ordered to find sureties. R. v. Trueman [1913] 3 K. B. 164; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 916; 23 Cox, 550; 109 L. T. 413; 77 J. P. 428; 29 T. L. R. 599. It is desirable that a definite time be fixed for the duration of such recognizances. R. v. Edgar, 109 L. T. 416; 77 J. P. 356; 29 T. L. R. 512; 57 S. J. 519.

No criminal prosecution can be commenced against any proprietor, publisher, editor, or any person responsible for the publication of a newspaper as defined by 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 1, and 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 1 (ante, pp. 1240, 1241), for any libel published therein, without the order of a judge at chambers, the application for which shall be made on notice to the person accused, who shall have an opportunity of being heard against it. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 8 (ante, p. 1242). No appeal lies from the judge's decision. Ex parte Pulbrook [1892] 1 Q. B. 86; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 91.

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to defamatory libel. 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 6 (ante, p. 1241). As to prosecutions for newspaper libel, see ante, pp. 1240, 1241.

Defamatory libel is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

As to costs, see ante, pp. 267, 284, post.

Pleas and Replications.

General issue.]—The defendant was at common law entitled only to plead the general issue "not guilty." See ante, p. 165. If the prosecution is by information in the High Court, or the indictment is removed into the High Court, the plea of "not guilty" is in writing and signed by counsel or solicitor or the defendant in person.

Justification.]—Under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 6 (ante, p. 1239), the defendant, in addition to the plea of not guilty, may plead that the matters charged were true, and that it was for the public benefit that they should be published, setting forth the particular facts by reason of which the publication was for the public benefit (see the plea, infra); and if, after such plea, the defendant is convicted, the Court may take the plea, and evidence in support of it, into consideration, in aggravation, or in mitigation.

Plea for Justification.

A. B. says he is not guilty, and for a further plea he says that all the defamatory matters alleged in the indictment are true.

Particulars.

1. On the —— day of ——, A.D. 1886, C. D. received the sum of 2*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* from T. S., and on the —— day of ——, A.D. 1886, C. D. received the sum of 1,100*l.* from C. F. and the sum of 500*l.* from G. H. on behalf of his employers, L. and M., which he fraudulently omitted to enter in their books or to account for in any way.

2. On the —— day of ——, A.D. 1886, soon after C. D.'s defalcations were discovered, and a warrant was applied for against him upon charges of embezzling his employers' money and falsifying their books, C. D. left England on a ship called the Eagle bound for Rio de Janeiro.

3. On the —— day of ——, and on other days in the year 1911, C. D. kept a house at —— Street, Mile End, for the purpose of betting, contrary to the Betting Act, 1853.

And A. B. says it was for the public benefit that the defamatory matters charged in the said indictment should be published by reason of the fact that C. D. was at the time of the publication thereof a candidate for the public office of councillor of the Borough of ——.

Replication.

H. A., clerk of assize, joins issue on behalf of our Lord the King.

Definition of defamatory libel.]—A defamatory libel consists in the writing and publishing of defamatory words of any living person, or words calculated or intended to provoke him to wrath or to expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or to damage his reputation, or in the exhibition of a picture or effigy defamatory of him; Monson v. Tussauds, Ltd. [1894] 1 Q. B. 671; 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 454; and such a libel is an indictable misdemeanor if the publication or exhibition is calculated to cause a breach of the peace; Odgers on Libel (5th ed.), 455, and authorities there cited. As a general rule, to be indictable, the libel must also be actionable. The exceptions to this rule are stated post, pp. 1246, 1247, under heads 5, 6, 7, and 8. The law implies malice from the publication; but the allegation of malice is not essential in the indictment. R. v. Munslow [1895] 1 Q. B. 758, 762; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 138.

An indictment will not lie for a libel by a husband on his wife. R. v. Lord Mayor of London, 16 Q. B. D. 772; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 118. An indictment may be maintained for words written, for which an action could not be maintained if they were merely spoken. Thorley v. Lord Kerry, 4 Taunt, 355. As, for instance, if a man writes or prints, and publishes, of another, that he is a swindler (I'Anson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 748) or villain (Bell v. Stone, 1 B. & P. 331), it is libel, and punishable as such; although, if this were merely spoken, it would not be actionable without special damage. Savile v. Jardine, 2 H. Bl. 531. But no indictment will lie for words spoken and not reduced into writing even if an action would lie upon the speaking without proof of special damage (R. v. Bear, 2 Salk. 417: R. v. Langley, 6 Mod. 125), unless they are seditious (see ante, p. 1114), blasphemous (ante, p. 1159), grossly immoral or obscene (post, p. 1318), or uttered to a magistrate in the execution of his office (ante, p. 1215), or uttered as a challenge to fight a duel, or with an intention to provoke the other party to send a challenge (ante, p. 1234).

1. Words written and published are defamatory if they impute to the person of whom they are published the commission of any offence, whether indictable or summarily punishable. Webb v. Beavan, 11 Q. B. D. 609; 52 L. J. (Q. B.) 544: Leyman v. Latimer, 3 Ex. D. 15; 47 L. J. (Ex.) 470: Monson v. Tussauds, Ltd. [1894] 1 Q. B. 671; 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 454.

2. Such words are also defamatory if they impute fraud (short of crime), dishonesty, immorality, vice, or dishonourable conduct, or affliction by an infectious disorder, or anything calculated to exclude from society the person defamed; R. v. Leng, 34 J. P. 309, Blackburn, J.: Com. Dig., Action on Case for Defamation (D. 28, 29); or if they clearly tend to injure the person of whom they are published in his profession, calling, or trade.

3. Such words are also defamatory if they hold the person to whom they refer up to hatred, R. v. Cooper, 8 Q. B. 533; 15 L. J. (Q. B.) 206; ridicule, R. v. Rosenberg [1879], cited in Odgers on Libel (5th ed.), 20; or contempt, Parmiter v. Coupland, 9 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 202; 6 M. & W. 105. But it has been ruled not to be a criminal libel to publish a placard merely stating that a man owes money. R. v. Coghlan, 4 F. & F. 316, Bramwell, B. If, however, the placard asserted or implied his inability to pay it, it would seem that it would be libellous. Id.

4. Writings vilifying the character of persons in a public position in England, except where the writing amounts to sedition or contempt of court, appear to be in the same position as other defamatory libels on private persons, except that in a gross case an ex officio information or information by the Master of the Crown Office might be filed (ante, pp. 129, 131). The repeal of the Acts de scandalis magnatum by 50 & 51 Vict. c. 59, appears to mark the abolition of any distinction for this purpose between the character of public and private persons. See Short and Mellor, Cr. Pr. (2nd ed.) 153, 169.

5. Writings vilifying the characters of persons deceased are libels, and may be made the subject of an indictment; the case de libellis famosis, 5 Co. Rep. 125 a; 1 Hawk. c. 73, s. 1; 3 Chit. Cr. L. 868; cf. ante, pp. 681, 686. Where an application for a criminal information for a libel upon a deceased person was made by his representative, the Court refused in its discretion to grant it, and Lord Coleridge, C.J., in pronouncing judgment, said: "It must be, I think, some very unusual publication to justify an indictment or information for aspersing the character of the dead. If such a case should ever arise it must stand upon its own foot." R. v. Labouchere, 12 Q. B. D. 320; 53 L. J. (Q. B.) 362.

6. It is said that writings which tend to degrade, revile, and defame persons in considerable situations of power and dignity in foreign countries, may be proceeded upon here as libels, and the writers, publishers, etc., punished; particularly when such writings have a tendency to interrupt the pacific relations between the two countries. R. v. Peltier, 28 St. Tr. 529, where an information was filed against Peltier for a libel on Napoleon Buonaparte, then first consul of the French Republic; and the defendant was convicted; and see R. v. Vint, 27 St. Tr. 627; Holt on Libel, 78 (a libel on the Emperor of Russia): R. v. Gordon, 22 St. Tr. 177, 213 (a libel on Queen Marie Antoinette). In R. v. Most, 7 Q. B. D. 244; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 113; 14 Cox, 583, an indictment was preferred for a publication exulting over the murder of the Emperor of Russia, and the accused convicted; but on a case reserved the Court refrained from deciding whether the indictment charged any offence against English law. See R. v. Antonelli, 70 J. P. 4 (ante, p. 1117). In R. v. Bourtzeff, 127 Cent. Cr. Ct. Sess. Pap. 284 (February, 1898), a similar indictment was preferred and found, but not proceeded with. See also R. v. D'Eon, 1 W. Bl. 510; 3 Burr. 1513 (a libel on the French Ambassador in England).

7. Writings reflecting upon bodies of men, without mentioning any individual in particular, are indictable as libels, if they tend to stir up the hatred of the King's subjects against the members of the body generally, or to excite the individuals composing the body to a breach of the peace. R. v. Osborn, 2 Barnard. (K. B.) 138, 166: R. v. Gathercole, 2 Lew. 237: R. v. Feargus O'Connor, 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1299; and see ante, p. 1117.

8. Documents containing defamatory matter, even if published only to the person defamed, may be made the subject of indictment, though such publication would not give a cause of action. But the document must reasonably tend or be calculated to provoke a breach of the peace. Odgers on Libel (5th ed.), 455. A letter written and sent by a man to a young woman containing a proposal in plain terms that she should surrender her chastity to him for a sum of money is a defamatory libel, because it reasonably or probably tends to provoke a breach of the peace on her part or on the part of those connected with her. R. v. Adams, 22 Q. B. D. 66; 58 L. J. (M. C.) 1; 16 Cox, 544.

Form of imputation.]—It is immaterial whether the libel imputes crime, etc., to the prosecutor, in a direct manner, or indirectly, by such hints or modes of expression as are likely to convey the intended meaning to the person to whom the libel was published; taking the words in the same sense in which the rest of mankind would ordinarily understand them, it is for the jury to say whether, in their minds, they convey the idea imputed. R. v. Watson, 2 T. R. 199, 206, Buller, J. Therefore, where one man said of another that "his character was infamous; that delicacy forbade him from bringing a direct charge, but it was a male child who complained to him," such words were understood to mean a charge of unnatural practices, and to be sufficiently certain in themselves, without the aid of an innuendo. Woolnoth v. Meadows, 5 East, 463. So, if a man were to write or say of J. N., "There is a vast difference between my character and his; I never robbed my master," or the like; it would be the same as if he had directly charged J. N. with having robbed his master. See Snell v. Webling, 2 Lev. 150; 1 Vent. 276; Com. Dig., Action on the Case for Defamation (E. 8). And the same where the imputation is conveyed obliquely, Id. (E. 1), or indirectly, Id. (E. 7), or by way of question, Id. (E. 2), conjecture, Id. (E. 3), or exclamation, Id. (E. 6), or by irony, 1 Hawk. c. 73, s. 4, or the like. So a defamatory writing, expressing one or two letters only of a name, is as much a libel, and punishable as such, as if it expressed the name in full, if it appears evident upon the face of the libel, from the context, etc., what name was meant (1 Hawk. c. 73, s. 5), or if it appears from the evidence of persons acquainted with the parties what person was meant by such initials or letters.

In some cases it may be necessary to insert prefatory averments to explain the innuendoes. Thus, for instance, in an action on the case against a man for saying of another, "He has burnt my barn," the plaintiff cannot by way of innuendo, say "meaning my barn full of corn;" Barham's case, 4 Co. Rep. 20 a; because this is not an explanation derived from anything which preceded it on the record, but from the statement of an extrinsic fact which had not previously been stated. But if, in the introductory part of the declaration, it had been averred that the defendant had a barn full of corn, and that in a discourse about that barn he had spoken the above words of the plaintiff, an innuendo of its being a barn full of corn would have been good; for, by coupling the innuendo with the introductory averment, it would have made it complete. So, in an action for the words "He is a thief," you cannot explain the defendant's meaning in the use of the word "he," by an innuendo "meaning the prosecutor," or the like, unless something appear previously upon the record to ground that explanation; but if you had previously charged the words to have been spoken of and concerning the prosecutor, then such an innuendo would be correct; for, when it is alleged that the defendant said of the prosecutor, "He is a thief," this in an evident ground for the explanation given by the innuendo, that the prosecutor was referred to by the word "he." See 1 Rolle Abr. 83, pl. 7, 85, pl. 7; Cro. Jac. 39, 126; 1 Sid. 52; 2 Str. 934; 1 Wms. Saund. (6th ed.) 242 (b), n. 3: Clement v. Fisher, 6 L. J. (K. B.) 39; 7 B. & C. 459: Tomlinson v. Brittlebank, 4 B. & Ad. 630: Sweetapple v. Jesse, 5 B. & Ad. 27; 2 Nev. & M. 36: Curtis v. Curtis, 10 Bing. 477: Slowman v. Dutton, 10 Bing. 402. But where the words or libel are in the second person, and the libel is directed to the party slandered or libelled, and it is so alleged in the indictment—as, where a declaration charges that the defendant, in a discourse with the prosecutor, said to him, "You are a thief," it is unnecessary to aver that they were spoken or written of and concerning the prosecutor; nor is there any need of an innuendo, for it is plain enough without it that "you" means the prosecutor. Scutt v. Hawkins, 2 Rolle Rep. 243, 244; and see 1 Rolle Abr. 85, pl. 8. An indictment which charged that the defendant published a libel concerning A., the prosecutor, according to the tenor and effect following, viz., "A. (meaning the said A.), game and rabbit destroyer, and his wife (meaning C., the wife of the said A.), the seller of the same in country and town," was held bad, the words used not being primâ facie libellous, and there being no innuendoes or averments showing that such words were intended to charge the prosecutor with an indictable offence or with any improper conduct. R. v. Yates, 12 Cox, 233, Quain, J.

Evidence for the Prosecution.

The evidence for the prosecution is in substance the same as in an action for libel.

1. Publication.]—The prosecutor must prove the publication of the libel. As stated ante, pp. 1245, 1247, the publication proved may be to the prosecutor only or to third persons. Mere possession of a libel is not publication, and to constitute a publication there must be a sending or delivery or showing to another person by a person having knowledge of the contents of the libel. See Vizetelly v. Mudies, Ltd. [1900] 2 Q. B. 170 (C. A.); 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 645: Emmens v. Pottle, 16 Q. B. D. 354; 55 L. J. (Q. B.) 51: R. v. Topham, 4 T. R. 126: R. v. Harvey, 2 L. J. (K. B.) 4; 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 2 B. & C. 257: R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436. Where the publication is by an innocent agent, the person who procures it is liable as principal. (See post, p. 1432.) Where the person charged with publication is not the printer nor the first or main publisher, but has taken a subordinate part in the dissemination of the libel, to determine whether he is liable for publication it is necessary to consider the particular circumstances under which he disseminated the alleged libel. Vizetelly v. Mudies, Ltd. [1900] 2 Q. B. 170, 180, Romer, L.J.; 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 645. But the burden of proof is on the defendant in such a case. The posting of a sealed letter is not publication; but production of an open letter in the handwriting of the defendant, with the post-mark on it, has been held sufficient evidence of publication. And if the fact of posting is proved, it raises a presumption that the letter was received by the person to whom it was addressed. Warren v. Warren, 1 Cr. M. & R. 250. As to proof of handwriting, see ante, p. 446. Publication in a newspaper is proved by production of a copy of the paper and proof of its purchase from the defendant or at his place of business. Proof should also be given of the ownership of the paper by certificate under 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 15 (ante, p. 1241), or by certificate of the registration of the limited company which own it. (See 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 18, ante, p. 1241.) It is also necessary to produce the judge's order for the prosecution (see ante, p. 1242); but the fact that it has been obtained need not be averred in the indictment.

2. Position of the prosecutor.]—If the libel reflects on the character of a public officer or professional man, as such, it is not in general necessary to prove his appointment to the office, or admission to the profession, because that is almost in all cases either directly or impliedly admitted by the libel itself: see Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366: Smith v. Taylor, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 196, 208: Jones v. Stevens, 11 Price, 235: Pearce v. Whale, 5 B. & C. 38; and if it is not, proof that he was in the habit of acting as such officer or professional man would in that case be sufficient (see ante, p. 401). But if the effect of the libel is to charge the prosecutor with having acted as such officer or professional man, without a legal appointment, as, for instance, if a man libels a physician, by calling him a quack, it seems necessary to prove that he is legally qualified to practise medicine. See Smith v. Taylor, supra: Collins v. Carnegie, 3 L. J. (N. S.) K. B. 190; 1 A. & E. 695: Yrisarri v. Clement, 3 Bing. 432; 11 Moore (C. P.) 308; and see R. v. Sutton, 4 M. & Sel. 532, 548.

3. The libel and the innuendoes.]—The prosecutor must prove the words as laid in the indictment (see ante, pp. 351, 1122), that they apply to the prosecutor, and the innuendoes. The question whether the words can bear the innuendoes is for the judge; whether they do bear them, for the jury. 32 G. 3, c. 60, s. 1 (ante, p. 1238).

4. Falsity and malice.]—The falsity of the libel is immaterial unless justification is pleaded, and need not be proved, unless a primâ facie case of justification is made out. Nor need the prosecutor prove that the libel was maliciously published (R. v. Munslow [1895] 1 Q. B. 758), unless the defendants show that the occasion was privileged, in which case evidence of express malice is necessary (see infra). Evidence of the publication by the defendant of other libels, previously or subsequently to the publication of the libel charged in the indictment, is admissible to prove actual malice or deliberate publication. Pearson v. Lemaitre, 5 M. & Gr. 700; 6 Scott (N. R.), 607; Macleod v. Wakley, 3 C. & P. 311: Plunkett v. Cobbett, 5 Esp. 136: Hemmings v. Gasson, E. B. & E. 346; 27 L. J. (Q. B.) 252: Darby v. Ouseley, 25 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 227; 1 H. & N. 1. It seems, however, that evidence of subsequent libels will not be admitted, unless they distinctly refer to the libel set out in the indictment, or at least refer to the same subject-matter. Finnerty v. Tipper, 2 Camp. 72. It has been long established that the publication of false and defamatory matter concerning any person is itself evidence of malice. Vizetelly v. Mudies, Ltd. [1900] 2 Q. B. 170, 178; 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 645, Vaughan Williams, L.J.

Evidence for the Defence.

Under the plea of not guilty the defendant may prove (1) that the words are not defamatory; or (2) that they do not bear the innuendoes alleged; or (3) that the publication was accidental (Emmens v. Pottle, 16 Q. B. D. 354; 55 L. J. (Q. B.) 51: R. v. Munslow [1895] 1 Q. B. 758, 765; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 138, Wills, J.: Vizetelly v. Mudies, Ltd., supra); or (4) that the matters complained of are fair comment or criticism on a matter of public interest and concern, including criticism on literary or dramatic works subject to public judgment. McQuire v. Western Morning News [1903] 2 K. B. 100; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 612: Parmiter v. Coupland, 9 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 202; 6 M. & W. 105. The defence in strictness is not that the occasion is privileged, but that the words are not defamatory. Merivale v. Carson, 20 Q. B. D. 275: Hunt v. Star Newspaper Co. [1908] 2 K. B. 319; 77 L. J. (K. B.) 732: Dakhyl v. Labouchere [1908] 2 K. B. 325 n. (H. L.); 77 L. J. (K. B.) 728; (5) Under the plea of not guilty the defence may also be raised that the publication was on an occasion absolutely or otherwise privileged (R. v. Munslow [1895] 1 Q. B. 758, 761; 55 L. J. (Q. B.) 51; Russell, C.J.); and if the privilege was qualified, the defendant may prove that he published the libel without malice, believing it to be true: see R. v. Fitch, 61 J. P. 233.

Qualified privilege arises when the defendant has a duty or an interest to make the communication said to be defamatory, as where a master gives what he believes to be a correct character of a servant; Edmondson v. Stevenson, Bull. (N. P.) 8; 1 B. & P. 527, cit.: R. v. Hart, 1 W. Bl. 386: Hargrave v. Le Breton, 4 Burr. 2422, 2425: Weatherston v. Hawkins, 1 T. R. 110: Taylor v. Hawkins, 16 Q. B. 308; 20 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 313: Manby v. Witt, 18 C. B. 544; where a neighbour gives what he conceives to be a correct character of the credit and solvency of a tradesman; Bull. (N. P.) 8 or where a client makes a confidential representation injurious to a solicitor's professional character in the management of certain concerns, to other persons who are jointly interested in them with the client (1 Camp. 227), or the like. Also, if a writing, although injurious to another's character, is published, not maliciously or with intent to injure his character, but bonâ fide for the purpose of investigating a fact in which the person making it is interested, or, as it seems, in which the person to whom it is made is interested, or in the performance of a duty, it is privileged. See Fairman v. Ives, 5 B. & Ald. 642 : Harrison v. Bush, 5 E. & B. 344; 25 L. J. (Q. B.) 25 : Beatson v. Skene, 29 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 430; 5 H. & N. 838 : Dickeson v. Hilliard, 43 L. J. (Ex.) 37 : Waller v. Loch, 7 Q. B. D. 619; 51 L. J. (Q. B.) 274 : Laughton v. Bishop of Sodor and Man, 42 L. J. (P. C.) 11; L. R. 4 P. C. 495 : Hart v. Gumpach, L. R. 4 P. C. 439; 42 L. J. (N. S.) P. C. 25 : Jenoure v. Delmege [1891] A. C. 73; 60 L. J. (P. C.) 11 : Stuart v. Bell [1891] 2 Q. B. 341; 60 L. J. (Q. B.) 577 : Hebditch v. M'Ilwaine [1894] 2 Q. B. 54; 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 587 : Macintosh v. Dun [1908] A. C. 390; 77 L. J. (P. C.) 113. In an action for libel where the occasion is privileged, it is for the plaintiff to establish that the statements complained of were made from an indirect motive, such as anger, or with a knowledge that they were untrue, or without caring whether they were true or false, and not for the reason which would otherwise render them privileged; and if the defendant made the statements believing them to be true, he will not lose the protection arising from the privileged occasion, although he had no reasonable grounds for his belief. Clark v. Molyneux, 3 Q. B. D. 237; 47 L. J. (Q. B.) 230 : Pittard v. Oliver [1891] 1 Q. B. 474; 60 L. J. (Q. B.) 219. The rule is the same in the case of an indictment; i.e., where the defendant can show the occasion to be privileged the prosecution must give evidence of express malice.

Judicial proceedings.]—Defamatory statements made in the course of judicial proceedings are absolutely privileged, whether made by judge, party witness, or counsel. R. v. Skinner, Lofft. 55 : Dawkins v. Lord Rokeby, L. R. 7 H. L. 744; 45 L. J. (Q. B.) 81 : McCabe v. Joynt [1901] 2 Ir. Rep. 115, 127, Palles, C.B.

Fair report of judicial proceedings.]—The defence of fair and accurate report of judicial proceedings is now available even if the proceedings were ex parte. Kimber v. Press Association [1893] 1 Q. B. 65; 62 L. J. (Q. B.) 152. It is not necessary to prove that all the evidence is published if its effect is fairly stated; Milissich v. Lloyds, 46 L. J. (C. P.) 404; 13 Cox. 575; and a fair and accurate report of the judgment without the evidence is protected. Macdougall v. Knight, 17 Q. B. D. 636; 55 L. J. (Q. B.) 464, discussed and approved in Macdougall v. Knight, 25 Q. B. D. 1; 59 L. J. (Q. B.) 517. But it would seem that such report cannot be deemed fair or accurate if the judgment or summing-up did not give the reader reasonable opportunity of forming his own opinion as to the conclusion to be drawn from the evidence. Macdougall v. Knight, 14 App. Cas. 194; 58 L. J. (Q. B.) 537 : and see ante, pp. 1123, 1125. To be entitled to this privilege the report must be published contemporaneously; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 3 (ante p. 1241); and if the publication is in such a form as to be calculated to interfere with the trial on the merits, criminal liability may be incurred. See R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432, 438 : 72 L. J. (K. B.) 839 : R. v. Tibbits and Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 4; 20 Cox, 70.

Libels in newspapers.]—Formerly the proprietor of a newspaper was answerable, criminally as well as civilly, for the acts of his servants, in the publication of a libel, although it could be shown that such publication was without the privity of the proprietor. R. v. Walker, 3 Esp. 21 : R. v. Gutch, M. & M. 433. This rule has, however, been very materially altered by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 7 (ante, p. 1239). Under this section it has been held that the defendants, the proprietors of a newspaper, who have appointed a competent editor to conduct it, are not criminally responsible for the publication of a libel inserted by the editor in the newspaper, upon proof by them that the publication of the libel was made without their actual authority, consent, or knowledge, and did not arise from want of due care or caution on their part. R. v. Holbrook, 3 Q. B. D. 60; 47 L. J. (Q. B.) 35 : R. v. Holbrook, 4 Q. B. D. 42; 48 L. J. (Q B.) 113 : and see R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, 217 : R. v. Ramsay and Foote, 15 Cox, 231 : R. v. Allison, 16 Cox, 559; 37 W. R. 143 (C. C. R.). As to the qualified protection now afforded to reports published in newspapers of judicial proceedings, see 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 3 (ante, p.); and as to the qualified protection now afforded to newspaper reports of the proceedings of public meetings, and of certain bodies and persons, and notices and reports issued by certain public officers and published in newspapers, see 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 4 (ante, p. 1242).

Truth, etc.]—Evidence of the truth of the libel may be given only if a plea of justification is pleaded (see ante, p. 1244).

Evidence that the identical charges contained in a libel had, before the time of composing and publishing the libel which is the subject of the indictment, appeared in another publication which was brought to the prosecutor's knowledge, and against the publisher of which he took no legal proceedings, is not admissible under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 6 (ante, p. 1239). R. v. Newman, 22 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 156; Dears. 85; 1 E. & B. 268. Where the libel contains several charges, and the defendant fails in proof of the truth of any of the matters alleged in it, the jury must of necessity find a verdict for the Crown, and the Court, in giving judgment, is bound to consider whether the guilt of the defendant is aggravated or mitigated by the plea, and by the evidence given to prove or disprove it, and to form its own conclusion on the whole case. Id.; 1 E. & B. 558. In that case the libel contained a number of specific charges, and it was therefore necessary, in order to support the plea of justification, to prove the truth of all the charges. Where the libel is general, it is sufficient to prove so much of the plea as would justify the libel. R. v. Labouchere, 14 Cox, 419, Cockburn, C.J. Thus where the libel alleged generally that the prosecutor cheated at cards, without stating any specific instances of his doing so, and the plea of justification stated specific instances of the prosecutor's cheating at cards, the plea was held to be sufficiently proved by proof that in two of such instances the prosecutor did cheat at cards, although other instances alleged in the plea of his cheating were not proved. Id.

Costs.

Where a defendant is convicted on indictment or information for defamatory libel the Court may order him to pay the costs incurred in and about the prosecution, including the costs incurred before the examining justices. 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 6 (1), ante, p. 284. This order may be alternative to, or additional on, an order to pay the costs out of the local rate (ante, pp. 267 et seq.).

In the case of an indictment or information for libel by a private prosecutor, if the defendant is acquitted the Court may order a private prosecutor to pay the whole or any part of the costs incurred in or about the defence to be taxed by the officer of the Court, including proceedings before the examining justices (8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 6 (2), ante, p. 284), and the costs of preparing a justification : Anon., 44 L. J. Newsp. 164.

Orders made for costs under 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 6 (1), (2), are enforced under s. 6, sub-s. 5, ante, p. 285 (a).

(a) On a criminal information for a libel, the defendant, having recovered a verdict and judgment, was held entitled to costs under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 8 (rep.), though the only plea on the record was "not guilty," and though the judge had certified, under 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18, s. 2 (rep.), that there was reasonable cause for exhibiting the information. R. v. Latimer, 15 Q. B. 1077; 20 L. J. (Q. B.) 129 (see ante, p. 138). And on the trial of such an information, where judgment was given for the defendant, he was held entitled, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 8, to recover from the prosecutor not only costs incurred subsequently to filing the information, but also costs incurred previously to filing the information. R. v. Steel, 1 Q. B. D. 482; 45 L. J. (Q. B.) 391. Prior to the Judicature Acts the taxation, by the clerk of assize, of the costs of an indictment for libel tried on the Crown side at the assizes, was not reviewable in the Court of King's Bench. R. v. Newhouse, 22 L. J. (Q. B.) 127; 1 Bail Court C. 129. An action lay to recover the costs on an indictment for libel given by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 8. Richardson v. Willis (No. 2), 24 L. J. (Ex.) 68; L. R. 8 Ex. 69.

CHAPTER V.

OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC TRADE.

SECT. 1.

OFFENCES AGAINST BANKRUPTCY LAW, AND FRAUDS ON OR BY CREDITORS.

OFFENCES AGAINST BANKRUPTCY LAW.

Statutes.

4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 47 (Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1914), Part IV., s. 17.—Preferential payment to creditor by trustee.]—If a trustee under a deed of arrangement pays to any creditor out of the debtor's property a sum larger in proportion to the creditor's claim than that paid to other creditors entitled to the benefit of the deed, then, unless the deed authorises him to do so, or unless such payments are either made to a creditor entitled to enforce his claim by distress or are such as would be lawful in a bankruptcy, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 59 (Bankruptcy Act, 1914), Part VII., s. 154.—Fraudulent debtors.]—Any person who has been adjudged bankrupt or in respect of whose estate a receiving order has been made shall in each of the cases following be guilty of a misdemeanor :—

(1) If he does not to the best of his knowledge and belief fully and truly discover to the trustee all his property, real and personal, and how and to whom and for what consideration and when he disposed of any part thereof, except such part as has been disposed of in the ordinary way of his trade (if any) or laid out in the ordinary expense of his family, unless he proves that he had no intent to defraud :

(2) If he does not deliver up to the trustee, or as he directs, all such part of his real and personal property as is in his custody or under his control, and which he is required by law to deliver up, unless he proves that he had no intent to defraud :

(3) If he does not deliver up to the trustee, or as he directs, all books, documents, papers, and writings in his custody or under his control relating to his property or affairs, unless he proves that he had no intent to defraud :

(4) If after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him, or within six months next before such presentation, he conceals any part of his property to the value of ten pounds or upwards, or conceals any debt due to or from him, unless he proves that he had no intent to defraud :

(5) If after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him or within six months next before such presentation he fraudulently removes any part of his property to the value of ten pounds or upwards :

(6) If he makes any material omission in any statement relating to his affairs, unless he proves that he had no intent to defraud :

(7) If knowing or believing that a false debt has been proved by any person under the bankruptcy, he fails for the period of a month to inform the trustee thereof :

(8) If after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him he prevents the production of any book, document, paper or writing affecting or relating to his property or affairs, unless he proves that he had no intent to conceal the state of his affairs or to defeat the law :

(9) If after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him, or within six months next before such presentation, he conceals, destroys, mutilates, or falsifies, or is privy to the concealment, destruction, mutilation or falsification of any book or document affecting or relating to his property or affairs, unless he proves that he had no intent to conceal the state of his affairs or to defeat the law :

(10) If after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him, or within six months next before such presentation, he makes or is privy to the making of any false entry in any book or document affecting or relating to his property or affairs, unless he proves that he had no intent to conceal the state of his affairs or to defeat the law :

(11) If after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him, or within six months next before such presentation, he fraudulently parts with, alters, or makes any omission in, or is privy to the fraudulently parting with, altering, or making any omission in, any document affecting or relating to his property or affairs :

(12) If after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him, or at any meeting of his creditors within six months next before such presentation, he attempts to account for any part of his property by fictitious losses or expenses :

(13) If within six months next before the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him, or, in the case of a receiving order made under section one hundred and seven of this Act, before the date of the order, or after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition and before the making of a receiving order, he, by any false representation or other fraud, has obtained any property on credit and has not paid for the same :

(14) If within six months next before the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him, or, in the case of a receiving order made under section one hundred and seven of this Act, before the date of the order, or after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition and before the making of a receiving order, he obtains under the false pretence of carrying on business, and, if a trader, of dealing in the ordinary way of his trade, any property on credit and has not paid for the same, unless he proves that he had no intent to defraud :

(15) If within six months next before the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him, or, in the case of a receiving order made under section one hundred and seven of this Act, before the date of the order, or after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition and before the making of a receiving order, he pawns, pledges, or disposes of any property which he has obtained on credit and has not paid for, unless, in the case of a trader, such pawning, pledging, or disposing is in the ordinary way of his trade, and unless in any case he proves that he had no intent to defraud :

(16) If he is guilty of any false representation or other fraud for the purpose of obtaining the consent of his creditors or any of them to an agreement with reference to his affairs or to his bankruptcy.

For the purpose of this section the expression " trustee " means the official receiver of the debtor's estate or trustee administering his estate for the benefit of his creditors. [This section replaces 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 11, as amended by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 163; 53 & 54 Vict. c. 71, s. 26; 56 & 57 Vict. c. 54; and 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 34, s. 2; all of which are in substance repealed and re-enacted by the present consolidating Act.]

Sect. 107.—(4) Where, under section five of the Debtors Act, 1869, application is made by a judgment creditor to a court having bankruptcy jurisdiction for the committal of a judgment debtor, the court may, if it thinks fit, decline to commit, and in lieu thereof, with the consent of the judgment creditor and on payment by him of the prescribed fee, make a receiving order against the debtor. In such case the judgment debtor shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy at the time the order is made, and the provisions of this Act except Part VII. thereof shall apply as if for references to the presentation of a petition by or against a person there were substituted references to the making of such a receiving order. [This section replaces 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 103.]

Sect. 155.—Undischarged bankrupt obtaining credit.]—Where an undischarged bankrupt (a) either alone or jointly with any other person obtains credit to the extent of ten pounds or upwards from any person without informing that person that he is an undischarged bankrupt; or (b) engages in any trade or business under a name other than that under which he was adjudicated bankrupt without disclosing to all persons with whom he enters into any business transaction the name under which he was adjudicated bankrupt; he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [This section replaces 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 34, s. 5, which had previously replaced 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 31.]

Sect. 156.—Frauds by bankrupts, etc.]—If any person who has been adjudged bankrupt or in respect of whose estate a receiving order has been made—(a) in incurring any debt or liability has obtained credit under false pretences or by means of any other fraud; (b) with intent to defraud his creditors or any of them, has made or caused to be made any gift or transfer of, or charge on, his property; (c) with intent to defraud his creditors, has concealed or removed any part of his property since, or within two months before, the date of any unsatisfied judgment or order for payment of money obtained against him; he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [This section applies particularly to bankrupts, etc., the provisions of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13 (post, p. 1267). That section, which has not been repealed, applies to any person, whether bankrupt or not: R. v. Rowlands, 8 Q. B. D. 530; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 51; 15 Cox, 31; 46 L. T. 286; 46 J. P. 437; and accordingly the present section appears to be superfluous, especially as the punishment in the case of a bankrupt is still limited to one year's imprisonment by the proviso to s. 164 (1), post, p. 1260.]

Sect. 157.—Bankrupt guilty of gambling, etc.]—(1) Any person who has been adjudged bankrupt, or in respect of whose estate a receiving order has been made, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, if, having been engaged in any trade or business, and having outstanding at the date of the receiving order any debts contracted in the course and for the purposes of such trade or business, —(a) he has, within two years prior to the presentation of the bankruptcy petition, materially contributed to or increased the extent of his insolvency by gambling or by rash and hazardous speculations, and such gambling or speculations are unconnected with his trade or business; or (b) he has, between the date of the presentation of the petition and the date of the receiving order, lost any part of his estate by such gambling or rash and hazardous speculations as aforesaid; or (c) on being required by the Official Receiver at any time, or in the course of his public examination by the court, to account for the loss of any substantial part of his estate incurred within a period of a year next preceding the date of the presentation of the bankruptcy petition, or between that date and the date of the receiving order, he fails to give a satisfactory explanation of the manner in which such loss was incurred: Provided that, in determining for the purposes of this section whether any speculations were rash and hazardous, the financial position of the accused person at the time when he entered into the speculations shall be taken into consideration.

[In cases under sub-section (c) the jury should consider whether there is an intent to deceive or to evade the provisions of the Act in the failure to give a satisfactory explanation or whether the failure was due to inadvertence. R. v. Phillips, 85 J. P. 120—Dickens, C. S.]

(2) A prosecution shall not be instituted against any person under this section except by order of the court, nor where the receiving order in the bankruptcy is made within two years from the first day of April nineteen hundred and fourteen.

(3) Where a receiving order is made against a person under section one hundred and seven of this Act, this section shall apply as if for references to the presentation of a petition there were substituted references to the making of the receiving order. [This section replaces, with the addition of the words in sub-s. (3), 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 34, s. 4.]

Sect. 158.—Bankrupt failing to keep proper accounts.]—(1) If any person who has on any previous occasion been adjudged bankrupt or made a composition or arrangement with his creditors is adjudged bankrupt, or if a receiving order is made in respect of his estate, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, if, having during the whole or any part of the two years immediately preceding the date of the presentation of the bankruptcy petition been engaged in any trade or business, he has not kept proper books of account throughout those two years or such part thereof as aforesaid, and, if so engaged at the date of presentation of the petition, thereafter, whilst so engaged, up to the date of the receiving order, or has not preserved all books of account so kept : Provided that a person who has not kept or has not preserved such books of account shall not be convicted of an offence under this section if his unsecured liabilities at the date of the receiving order did not exceed one hundred pounds, or if he proves that in the circumstances in which he traded or carried on business the omission was honest and excusable.

(2) A prosecution shall not be instituted against any person under this section except by order of the court, nor where the receiving order in the bankruptcy is made within two years from the first day of April nineteen hundred and fourteen.

(3) For the purposes of this section, a person shall be deemed not to have kept proper books of account if he has not kept such books or accounts as are necessary to exhibit or explain his transactions and financial position in his trade or business, including a book or books containing entries from day to day in sufficient detail of all cash received and cash paid, and, where the trade or business has involved dealings in goods, also accounts of all goods sold and purchased, and statements of annual stocktakings.

(4) Paragraphs (9), (10), and (11) of section one hundred and fifty-four of this Act (which relate to the destruction, mutilation, and falsification and other fraudulent dealing with books and documents), [ante, p. 1255] shall, in their application to such books as aforesaid, have effect as if "two years next before the presentation of the bankruptcy petition" were substituted for the time mentioned in those paragraphs as the time prior to the presentation within which the acts or omissions specified in those paragraphs constitute an offence.

(5) Where a receiving order is made against a person under section one hundred and seven of this Act this section shall apply as if for references to the presentation of a petition there were substituted references to the making of the receiving order. [This section replaces, with the addition of the words in sub-s. (5), 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 34, s. 3.]

Sect. 159.—Bankrupt absconding with property.]—If any person who is adjudged bankrupt, or in respect of whose estate a receiving order has been made, after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition by or against him, or within six months before such presentation, quits England and takes with him, or attempts or makes preparation to quit England and take with him, any part of his property to the amount of twenty pounds or upwards, which ought by law to be divided amongst his creditors, he shall (unless he proves that he had no intent to defraud) be guilty of felony. [This section replaces 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 12, as amended by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 163 (2), and 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 34, s. 2 (1), (2). Where a debtor, after executing a deed of assignment of all his property to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, left England, taking with him a sum of money which had never come into the possession of the trustee, a conviction under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 12, was upheld. R. v. Humphris [1904] 2 K. B. 89; 73 L. J. (K. B.) 464; 20 Cox, 620; 90 L. T. 555; 68 J. P. 325; 20 T. L. R. 425.]

Sect. 160.—False claim, etc.]—If any creditor, or any person claiming to be a creditor, in any bankruptcy, wilfully and with intent to defraud makes any false claim, or any proof declaration or statement of account, which is untrue in any material particular, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction on indictment be liable to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding one year. [This section replaces 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 14, as amended by 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 34, s. 2 (6).

Sect. 161.—Order by court for prosecution on report of trustee.]—Where an official receiver or a trustee in a bankruptcy reports to any court exercising jurisdiction in bankruptcy that in his opinion a debtor who has been adjudged bankrupt or in respect of whose estate a receiving order has been made has been guilty of any offence under this Act or any enactment repealed by this Act, or where the court is satisfied upon the representation of any creditor or member of the committee of inspection that there is ground to believe that the debtor has been guilty of any such offence, the court shall, if it appears to the court that there is a reasonable probability that the debtor will be convicted, order the official receiver or trustee to prosecute the debtor for such offence. Provided that it shall not be obligatory on the court in the absence of any application by the official receiver for such an order to make an order under this section for the prosecution of an offence unless it appears to the court that the circumstances are such as to render a prosecution desirable. [This section replaces 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 16, as amended by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, ss. 163, 164 and 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 34, s. 2 (7). See Ex parte Marsden, 2 Ch. D. 786. The costs of a prosecution by the trustee without first getting an order of the Court will not, as a general rule, be allowed out of the estate even where the sanction of the committee of inspection has been given. In re Howes [1902] 2 K. B. 290; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 705.]

Sect. 162.—Criminal liability after discharge or composition.]—Where a debtor has been guilty of any criminal offence he shall not be exempt from being proceeded against therefor by reason that he has obtained his discharge or that a composition or scheme of arrangement has been accepted or approved. [This section replaces 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 167.]

Sect. 163.—Power for court to commit for trial.]—(1) Where there is, in the opinion of the court, ground to believe that the bankrupt or any other person has been guilty of any offence which is by statute made a misdemeanor in cases of bankruptcy, the court may commit the bankrupt or such other person for trial.

(2) For the purpose of committing the bankrupt or such other person for trial the court shall have all the powers of a stipendiary magistrate as to taking depositions, binding over witnesses to appear, admitting the accused to bail, or otherwise.

Nothing in this sub-section shall be construed as derogating from the powers or jurisdiction of the High Court. [This section replaces 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 165.]

Sect. 164.—Trial and punishment of offences.]—(1) A person guilty of an offence declared to be a felony or a misdemeanor under this Act in respect of which no special penalty is imposed by this Act shall be liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two years, or, on summary conviction, to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding six months. Provided that the maximum term of imprisonment with or without hard labour which may be awarded on conviction on indictment of a misdemeanor under section one hundred and fifty-six of this Act shall be one year. [See ante, p. 1257.]

(2) Summary proceedings in respect of any such offence shall not be instituted after one year from the first discovery thereof either by the official receiver or by the trustee in the bankruptcy, or, in the case of proceedings instituted by a creditor, by the creditor, nor in any case shall they be instituted after three years from the commission of the offence.

(3) Every misdemeanor under this Act shall be deemed to be an offence under and subject to the provisions of the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, and any Act amending that Act [ante, pp. 67 et seq.] and when any person is charged with any such misdemeanor before a court of summary jurisdiction the court shall take into consideration any evidence adduced before them tending to show that the act charged was not committed with a guilty intent.

(4) In an indictment for an offence under this Act, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence charged in the words of this Act specifying the offence, or as near thereto as circumstances admit, without alleging or setting forth any debt, act of bankruptcy, trading, adjudication, or any proceedings in, or order, warrant, or document of, any court acting under this Act or any Act rpealed by this Act. [See post, p. 1261.]

Sect. 165.—Public Prosecutor to act in certain cases.]—Where the court orders the prosecution of any person for any offence under this Act or any enactment repealed by this Act, or for any offence arising out of or connected with any bankruptcy proceedings, it shall be the duty of the Director of Public Prosecutions to institute and carry on the prosecution : Provided that, where the order of the court is made on the application of the official receiver and based on his report, the Board of Trade may themselves, or through the official receiver, institute the prosecution and carry on the proceedings, if or so long as those proceedings are conducted before a court of summary jurisdiction, unless in the course thereof circumstances arise which, in the opinion of such court or of the Board, render it desirable that the remainder of the proceedings should be carried on by the Director of Public Prosecutions. [This section replaces 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 166, as amended by 3 & 4 G. 5, c. 34, s. 1 (2).]

Sect. 166.—Evidence as to frauds by agents.]—See ante, p. 625.

Sect. 96.—Jurisdiction in Bankruptcy.]—(1) The courts having jurisdiction in bankruptcy shall be the High Court and the county courts. [Sub-ss. 2-5 deal with the exclusion of certain county courts from bankruptcy jurisdiction, and the regulation of the exercise of bankruptcy jurisdiction by those county courts which have it. Bankruptcy business in the High Court was assigned to the King's Bench Division by order of January 1*st*, 1884, under 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 94 (now replaced by 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 97).]

Sect. 167.—Interpretation.]—In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,—

"The court" means the court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy under this Act;

"Property" includes money, goods, things in action, land, and every description of property, whether real or personal and whether situate in England or elsewhere; also obligations, easements, and every description of estate, interest, and profit, present or future, vested or contingent, arising out of or incident to property as above defined:

Sect. 169.—Short title, etc.]—(1) This Act may be cited as the Bankruptcy Act, 1914.

(2) This Act shall not, except so far as is expressly provided, extend to Scotland or Ireland.

Indictment against a bankrupt for not discovering his property to the trustee, not delivering up to the trustee part of his property, and fraudulently removing part of his property. (4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 154 (1), (3), (5), ante, pp. 1254, 1255.)

THE KING v. A. B.

County of London Quarter Sessions.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offences:—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count:

Bankruptcy offence, contrary to section 154 (1) of Bankruptcy Act, 1914.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B. has been adjudged bankrupt, and on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, did not fully and truly discover to the trustee all his property, and how and to whom and for what consideration and when he had disposed of a piano, part thereof.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count :

Bankruptcy offence, contrary to section 154 (3) of Bankruptcy Act, 1914.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B. has been adjudged bankrupt, and on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, did not deliver up to the trustee a book called a ledger, relating to his property or affairs.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Third Count :

Bankruptcy offence, contrary to section 154 (5) of Bankruptcy Act, 1914.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, and within six months next before the presentation of a bankruptcy petition against him upon which he was adjudged bankrupt, in the county of ——, fraudulently removed a piano, value £20, part of his property.

Misdemeanor : imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 164 (1) (ante, p. 1260).

Offences against the bankruptcy laws are triable at quarter sessions. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 20 (post, p. 1268).

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to misdemeanors under 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59 : see s. 164 (3) (ante, p. 1260). As to costs, see ante, p. 267.

Evidence.

Petition.]—Prove the bankruptcy petition by producing the petition itself, or a copy thereof, verified as required by 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 139 (ante, p. 428).

Adjudication.]—Prove also the adjudication of bankruptcy by producing the adjudication under the seal of the Court (R. v. Thomas, 11 Cox, 535, Lush, J.), or a copy thereof verified as required by 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 139 (ante, p. 428), or a copy of the London Gazette containing notice of the order of adjudication, which is conclusive evidence of the order having been made. Cf. R. v. Levi, L. & C. 597 ; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 174. Id. s. 137, sub-s. 2 (ante, p. 428).

Appointment of trustee.]—Prove the appointment of the trustee, which is done by putting in the certificate of the Board of Trade of his appointment. 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 143 (ante, p. 428). For the purpose of this section the expression "trustee" means the official receiver of the debtor's estate or trustee administering his estate for the benefit of his creditors (s. 154).

Non-discovery to trustee.]—Prove also that the defendant did not fully and truly discover to the trustee the property, or some part thereof, and how he disposed of the property, and that it was not disposed of in the ordinary way of his trade, nor laid out in the ordinary expense of his family. The discovery mentioned in 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 154 (1), is not restricted to property in possession of the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy, but refers also to property which may have been disposed of by him previous to his bankruptcy, unless it has been disposed of in the ordinary way of his trade, or laid out in the ordinary expense of his family. R. v. Michell, 50 L. J. (M. C.) 76; 14 Cox, 490.

Locus pœnitentiæ.]—It had been ruled, that, up to and until his last examination, the bankrupt had a locus pœnitentiæ, and could not therefore, until that were passed, be indicted for concealing property which he might, upon his last examination, give up; R. v. Walters, 5 C. & P. 138; but that decision was overruled by the case of Courtiveron v. Meunier, 6 Ex. 74; 20 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 104, in which it was held that a secreting by a bankrupt of his goods, with intent to cheat his creditors, was a concealment sufficient to avoid his certificate under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 38 (rep.), although a full disclosure was made by him to the commissioners in bankruptcy before his last examination.

Intent to defraud.]—Upon proof of such non-discovery and concealment as is charged in the first and second counts the jury are to convict, unless the defendant proves that he had no intent to defraud (4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 154 (1), (3), ante, pp. 1254, 1255). This provision makes no change in the law, but merely gives statutory sanction to judicial interpretation of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 11. R. v. Thomas, 11 Cox, 535; 22 L. T. (N. S.) 138. Lush, J.: R. v. Bolus, 23 L. T. (N. S.) 339. Evidence that the defendant called a meeting of his creditors and disclosed to them and the trustee the transaction for the concealment of which he was indicted, is admissible on his behalf, as tending to negative his intent to defraud. R. v. Wiseman, 20 Cox, 144; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 128; 66 J. P. 40. As to the third count, the case is different. The prosecutor to support it must prove not merely a removal, but a fraudulent removal (4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 154 (5)). That the removal was fraudulent will generally be a matter of inference from the circumstances under which it took place.

The formal proof as to the second and third counts is the same as that on the first count. Prove also, as to the third count, that the defendant, after the presentation of the petition, fraudulently removed the property mentioned in the indictment, or some part thereof, and that the value of the property so removed is 10*l*. Where an indictment specified various articles, without stating the value, and added "one hundred other articles of furniture, and a certain debt due from J. T. to the prisoner, of the value of 20*l*. and upwards," the judges held that the indictment was bad on the ground of the property concealed not being all specified, and no distinct value having been put upon the articles enumerated; for it did not appear that those articles were of the value required by the statute. R. v. Forsyth, R. & R. 274. Chattels which have been assigned by a non-registered bill of sale, and which are left in the possession of the assignor, are not the chattels of the assignor, and a fraudulent removal by him of such chattels within four months next before the commencement of the liquidation of his affairs in bankruptcy, was held not to fall within sub-s. 5 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 11, although the bill of sale, not having been registered, is void as against the trustee in liquidation. R v. Creese, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 105; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 51; 12 Cox, 539. This case must be carefully distinguished from R. v. Humphris [1904] 2 K. B. 89 (ante, p. 1259). See Roome on Criminal Offences in Bankruptcy, pp. 41, 42.

Married women.]—By the Bankruptcy Act, 1914 (4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 59), s. 125 (1), every married woman who carries on a trade or business, whether separately from her husband or not, is made subject to the bankruptcy laws as if she were a feme sole. For the former law, see the 24th edition of this work, p. 1263.

Infants.]—The prisoner was convicted under s. 12 of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62). At the time when he quitted England and when he was adjudged bankrupt, he was an infant. The debts proved against his estate in the bankruptcy were trade debts, contracted since the passing of the Infants' Relief Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 62), and therefore void, and it did not appear that any debts for necessaries supplied to him existed. It was held that the conviction could not be upheld because the prisoner had no creditors amongst whom the property which he had taken with him ought by law to have been divided. R. v. Wilson, 5 Q. B. D. 28; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 13: and see Lovell v. Beauchamp [1894] A. C. 607; 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 802; and ante, p. 12.

Ordinary way of trade.]—Where the defendant was indicted for an offence against 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 11, sub-s. 15, and the facts proved were that he was a grocer who had obtained goods used in his trade upon credit, and that soon after receiving them and before they were paid for and within four months next before the presentation of a bankruptcy petition against him, he executed a bill of sale to a creditor in consideration of a pre-existing debt, which bill of sale included all his stock in trade and effects whatsoever, including the before-mentioned unpaid-for goods, it was held by Lush, J. (after conferring with Martin, B.), that disposing of the goods by bill of sale was not disposing of them in the "ordinary way of trade;" and, therefore, that as property which the defendant had obtained on credit, and had not paid for, had passed by the bill of sale, he same within sub-s. 15, unless he had no intent to defraud, but that the assigning the whole of his property to one creditor, reserving nothing for the others, showed an intent to defraud, even although it appeared that the bill of sale had been given in pursuance of a long antecedent promise to execute it when requested. R. v. Thomas, 11 Cox, 535; 22 L. T. (N. S.) 138. Where a trader being in insolvent circumstances purchased goods on credit and shipped them to Australia, and obtained advances by pledging the bills of lading, and within four months afterwards became bankrupt, stating in his examination that he could give no account of what had become of the purchase-money, it was held that there was no evidence that the goods were obtained (sub-s. 14), or disposed of (sub-s. 15), otherwise than in the ordinary way of his trade. Ex parte Brett, 1 Ch. D. 151; 45 L. J. (Bank.) 17; 13 Cox, 128 (C. A.). "The thing aimed at (in the repealed statute) was the obtaining of goods on credit, and then immediately selling them again at a loss; that is not in the ordinary course of business." Id., per Mellish, L.J., 1 Ch. D., at p. 153; see also Ex parte Stallard, L. R. 3 Ch. App. 408: Ex parte Marsden, 2 Ch. D. 786; 45 L. J. (Bank.) 141.

Any false representation or other fraud.]—The facts in Ex parte Brett (supra) were there held not to constitute evidence of an offence against 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 11, sub-s. 13. "To satisfy the words of that sub-section, I think there must be some active fraud on the part of the bankrupt similar to the making of a false representation, not simply the purchase of goods when he knows that he is not able to pay for them." Id., per Mellish, L.J. A false representation, to be within this section, must be fraudulent, and must be proved to have been knowingly made by the defendant. R. v. Cherry, 12 Cox, 32, Martin, B. In that case the indictment was drawn on the lines of an indictment under s. 88 of the Larceny Act, 1861; sed quære, whether it is not sufficient to follow the words of the statute, charging the representation as "false and fraudulent"; see 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 164 (4) (ante, p. 1260); R. v. Pierce, 16 Cox, 213; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 85. An indictment so drawn is good after verdict. R. v. Watkinson, 12 Cox, 271 (C. C. R.).

Examination of debtor.]—By 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 59 (Bankruptcy Act, 1914), s. 15, sub-s. 8, "The debtor shall be examined upon oath, and it shall be his duty to answer all such questions as the Court (i.e., the Court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy) may put or allow to be put to him. Such notes of the examination as the Court thinks proper shall be taken down in writing, and shall be read over to or by the debtor and signed by him, and may thereafter, save as in this Act provided, be used in evidence against him. . . ." The ordinary way of "using in evidence" the debtor's admissions on these notes is to call the shorthand writer who took the notes to prove the correctness of his transcript, or to produce the bankruptcy file containing such transcript, and then to prove the fact that the notes were read over to or by and signed by the debtor; but if they were in fact not so read over and signed, parol evidence of the person who took them may be given. R. v. Erdheim [1896] 2 Q. B. 260; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 176 (ante, p. 383); and see R. v. Pike [1902] 1 K. B. 552; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 287 (ante, pp. 384, 635).

Indictment against an undischarged bankrupt for obtaining credit to the extent of ten pounds or upwards without disclosing that he is an undischarged bankrupt. (4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 155 (a), ante, p. 1256.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1261

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count :

Bankrupt obtaining credit, contrary to section 155 (a) of the Bankruptcy Act 1914.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., being an undischarged bankrupt, on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, obtained credit from C. D. to the extent of £20 [ten pounds or upwards] without informing the said C. D. that he then was an undischarged bankrupt.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count :

Bankrupt engaging in trade, contrary to section 155 (b) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B. has been adjudged bankrupt in the name of A. B., and on the —— day of ——, and on other days between that date and the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, engaged in trade or business under the name of C. D., and entered into business transactions with E. F. without disclosing the name of A. B.

Misdemeanor : imprisonment with or without hard labour for not more than two years (4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 164 (1)), formerly one year, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13 (post, p. 1267). R. v. Turner [1904] 1 K. B. 181; 73 L. J. (K. B.) 46; 68 J. P. 15; 20 Cox, 590.

Venue.]—Where the defendant ordered goods by letter, he may be indicted in the county from which he wrote the letter and to which the goods were sent. R. v. Peters, 16 Q. B. D. 636; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 173; see R. v. Ellis [1899] 1 Q. B. 230; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 103; and ante, p. 37.

Evidence.

Prove that the defendant was adjudged bankrupt, ante, p. 1262, and that there is no order of discharge upon the file, and that he did not inform the person from whom he obtained credit that he was an undischarged bankrupt. An intent to defraud is immaterial. R. v. Dyson [1894] 2 Q. B. 176; 63 L. J. (M. C.) 124; 18 Cox, 1; 70 L. T. 877; 58 J. P. 528 : R. v. Brownlow, 74 J. P. 240; 26 T. L. R. 345; 4 Cr. App. R. 131.

Obtain credit.]—The prisoner, an undischarged bankrupt, living at Newcastle-on-Tyne, bought a horse from the prosecutor, a farmer in Ireland, for 22*l.*, free of expenses to the vendor, who, by the prisoner's direction, delivered the horse on board a steamer at Larne; no stipulation was made as to the time or mode of payment, and the prisoner did not disclose the fact that he was an undischarged bankrupt. He paid for the carriage of the horse on its delivery to him at Newcastle, and immediately sold it, and refused to pay the price to the prosecutor; it was held that he was guilty of "obtaining credit" within the 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 31 (rep.). R. v. Peters, 16 Q. B. D. 636; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 173. So also where the prisoner had ordered goods, the price of which would not amount to 20*l.*, and the vendor in execution of the order sent to him goods, the price of which amounted to 20*l.* and upwards, and the purchaser kept them without paying for them or informing the vendor that he was an undischarged bankrupt. R. v. Juby, 16 Cox, 160. It is not necessary, in order to support a charge under this section, that the goods in respect of which credit is obtained should all be supplied or ordered at the same time, provided that the total amount of credit obtained is 10*l.* or upwards, as appears from R. v. Juby (supra). Where the defendant induced persons to pay him cash by way of premiums for apprenticeship, which was not returnable, it was held that he had obtained money and not credit. R. v. Coyne, 69 J. P. 151, Fulton, Recorder. For cases decided under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13, see post, p. 1269.

(ante, pp. 67 et seq.); and when any person is charged with any such offence before any justice or justices, such justice or justices shall take into consideration any evidence adduced before him or them tending to show that the act charged was not committed with a guilty intent. (See R. v. Muirhead, 73 J. P. 31; 25 T. L. R. 88; 1 Cr. App. R. 189; R. v. Brownlow, 4 Cr. App. R. 131 (post, p. 1269)].

Sect. 20.—Jurisdiction of quarter sessions.]—[So much of the Quarter Sessions Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, ante, p. 106), as excludes from the jurisdiction of justices and recorders at sessions of the peace or adjournments thereof the trial of persons for offences against any provision of the laws relating to bankrupts, is hereby repealed as from the passing of this Act; and any offence under this Act shall be deemed to be within the jurisdiction of such justices and recorders. [The words between square brackets having been repealed by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 54 (Statute Law Revision Act, 1893), the remaining part of the section by itself is meaningless; but it is evident from the context that bankruptcy offences are still to be triable at quarter sessions.]

(Cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33, ante, p. 160.)

Indictment for obtaining Credit under False Pretences.
(32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13, sub-s. 1.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1261.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Obtaining credit, contrary to section 13 (1) of the Debtors Act, 1869.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, in incurring a debt or liability to C. D., obtained credit to the amount of £25 from the said C. D. under false pretences or by means of fraud other than false pretences.

An indictment under 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 156 (ante, p. 1257), can be framed from the above precedent, adding an averment that the defendant has been adjudged bankrupt or that a receiving order has been made in respect of his estate. If such averment be omitted, the indictment would still be good under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13 (supra), which applies to any person, whether bankrupt or not. R. v. Rowlands, 8 Q. B. D. 530; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 51.

Venue.]—The defendant, who carried on business in the county of Durham, obtained goods on credit in that county from a traveller of the prosecutors by means of false representations made by the defendant to the prosecutors in Glasgow, where they carried on business. An indictment against him for an offence under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13, sub-s. 1, was held to be properly triable in the county of Durham. R. v. Ellis [1899] 1 Q. B. 230; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 103; and see ante, p. 38.

Misdemeanor: imprisonment for not more than one year, with or without hard labour. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13, ante, p. 1267.

Evidence.

It is not necessary, in order to render a person liable under this section that he should be either a bankrupt or have liquidated his affairs by arrangement. R. v. Rowlands, 8 Q. B. D. 530; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 51. There are three elements which have to be considered in the construction of s. 13 (1). First, there must be the incurring of a debt or liability; secondly, there must be an obtaining of credit; and thirdly, there must be fraud: the conjunction of these three ingredients makes the offence. R. v. Jones [1898] 1 Q. B. 119, 124; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 41, Russell, C.J. In R. v. Muirhead, 73 J. P. 31; 25 T. L. R. 88; 1 Cr. App. R. 189, where the jury found that M. obtained credit by false pretences, but without an intention to defraud, the findings were held to amount to a verdict of not guilty. The Court held that to warrant a conviction an intention to defraud must be proved. The section differs from 6 & 7 G. 5, c. 50, s. 32 (ante, p. 691), by not containing the words "with intent to defraud," and closely follows the words of 4 & 5 G. 5, c. 59, s. 154 (13), in which the words "intent to defraud" are not used. In R. v. Brownlow 26 T. L. R. 345; 4 Cr. App. R. 131, it was held misdirection to tell the jury that there were only two ingredients in the offence, viz., the obtaining credit and the false pretences knowingly made, and that they need not take into account the existence or absence of an intent to defraud.

As to obtaining credit, see R. v. Peters, 16 Q. B. D. 636; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 173: R. v. Juby, 16 Cox, 160, ante, p. 1267.

Where an authorized clerk in the Stock Exchange induced stock jobbers to make bargains for sale of shares for the next account, and gave the names of members of the Stock Exchange not his employers as the purchasers, it was held that credit was given to them and not to the defendant, and that he was not guilty of an offence under this section. R. v. Bryant, 63 J. P. 376, Fulton, Common Serjeant. See also R. v. Steel, 5 Cr. App. R. 289. Obtaining a loan is obtaining credit within this section. Ex parte Salomons, Q. B. D. 28 L. J. Newsp. 879: R. v. Carpenter, 22 Cox, 618; 76 J. P. 158. Credit may be obtained, even though security for the debt is given. R. v. Fryer, 7 Cr. App. R. 183. To obtain goods in exchange for a cheque which it is falsely represented will be honoured on presentation, is obtaining goods, and is not obtaining credit under this section. R. v. Cosnett, 20 Cox, 6; 65 J. P. 472. The defendant, in pursuance of a fraudulent scheme, sold horses which he knew to be unsatisfactory, agreeing in each case to refund the purchase money if the horses were returned within a month. When the horses were returned he declined to refund the money. This was held not to be obtaining credit within s. 13, sub-s. 1 (ante, p. 1267). R. v. Green, 9 Cr. App. R. 127.

A person without means who orders a meal in a restaurant [though he makes no verbal representation at the time as to his ability to pay for the same], is liable to be convicted of "obtaining credit by means of fraud other than false pretences" under the latter part of the above sub-section (R. v. Jones, ante, p. 1269); but not of obtaining goods by means of false pretences under s. 32 of the Larceny Act, 1916. (See ante, pp. 705, 714.) Buying goods without any intention of paying may be evidence of "fraud other than false pretences." R. v. Thompson, 5 Cr. App. R. 9. To establish the offence of obtaining either money or credit by false pretences, there must be a misstatement of an existing fact, either by stating that a fact exists which does not exist, or by stating that a fact does not exist which does exist. It must be a statement of existing fact as distinguished from mere promise or statements about the future, expectations, and things of that sort. That is the main point which distinguishes the obtaining of money or credit by false pretences from obtaining credit by fraud other than false pretences. R. v. Carpenter, 22 Cox, 618; 76 J. P. 158, Channell, J.

Evidence of similar acts committed by the defendant at a period immediately preceding the commission of that charged in the indictment is admissible for the prosecution, in order to prove intent or to negative mistake. R. v. Wyatt [1904] 1 K. B. 88; 73 L. J. (K. B.) 15; 20 Cox, 462; 68 J. P. 31; and see ante, p. 361. But such evidence should be confined to similar transactions. R. v. Baird, 11 Cr. App. R. 186.

(b) Fraudulent Conveyances, Gifts, or Transfers of Property.

32 & 33 Vict. c. 62 (Debtors Act, 1869), s. 13.—Fraudulent transfer or concealment of property.]—Any person shall in each of the cases following be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be liable to be imprisoned for any time not exceeding one year, with or without hard labour; that is to say:

(1) . . . (see ante, p. 1267):

(2) If he has with intent to defraud his creditors, or any of them, made or caused to be made any gift, delivery, or transfer of or any charge on his property:

(3) If he has, with intent to defraud his creditors, concealed or removed any part of his property since or within two months before the date of any unsatisfied judgment or order for payment of money obtained against him.

Indictment and Evidence. (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13 (2), (3).)

It is not necessary in order to render a person liable under these sub-sections that he should be a bankrupt; R. v. Rowlands, 8 Q. B. D. 530; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 51; 15 Cox, 31; but to fall within the section it would seem that the transfer, etc., must be fraudulent within the bankruptcy laws or the statute of Elizabeth. Re Cranston, 9 Morrell, 160. A fictitious transfer seems to be within sub-s. (2). R. v. Richman, 4 Cr. App. R. 233. Where A., the defendant to an action for unliquidated damages, during the pendency of the action, but before judgment, gave a bill of sale over his furniture with intent to defeat any judgment which B. might obtain, it was held that B. was not, at the time of the execution of such bill of sale, a "creditor" within sub-s. 2 of this section, and that A. could not therefore be convicted thereunder. R. v. Hopkins [1896] 1 Q. B. 652; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 125.

SECT. 2.

COUNTERFEITING TRADE MARKS, OR USING FALSE TRADE DESCRIPTIONS.

Statutes.

50 & 51 Vict. c. 28 (Merchandise Marks Act, 1887), s. 2.—Offences as to trade marks and trade descriptions.—Punishment of such offences.]—(1) Every person who—

(a) forges any trade mark (see post, ss. 3, 4); or

(b) falsely applies to goods any trade mark or any mark so nearly resembling a trade mark as to be calculated to deceive; or

(c) makes any die, block, machine, or other instrument for the purpose of forging, or of being used for forging, a trade mark; or

(d) applies any false trade description to goods; or

(e) disposes of or has in his possession any die, block, machine, or other instrument for the purpose of forging a trade mark; or shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, and unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud, be guilty of an offence against this Act. (2) Every person who sells, or exposes for, or has in his possession for, sale, or any purpose of trade or manufacture, any goods or things to which any forged trade mark or false trade description (see post, ss. 3, 5) is applied, or to which any trade mark or mark so nearly resembling a trade mark as to be calculated to deceive is falsely applied, as the case may be, shall, unless he proves—

(f) causes any of the things above in this section mentioned to be done,

(a) that having taken all reasonable precautions against committing an offence against this Act, he had at the time of the commission of the alleged offence no reason to suspect the genuineness of the trade mark, mark, or trade description; and

(b) that on demand made by or on behalf of the prosecutor, he gave all the information in his power with respect to the persons from whom he obtained such goods or things; or

(c) that otherwise he had acted innocently;

(3) Every person guilty of an offence against this Act shall be liable—

(i.) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or to fine, or to both imprisonment and fine; and

(ii.) on summary conviction to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding four months, or to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds, and in the case of a second or subsequent conviction to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding six months, or to a fine not exceeding fifty pounds; and

(iii.) in any case, to forfeit to his Majesty every chattel, article, instrument, or thing by means of or in relation to which the offence has been committed.

(4) The Court before whom any person is convicted under this section may order any forfeited articles to be destroyed or otherwise disposed of as the Court thinks fit.

(5) If any person feels aggrieved by any conviction made by a court of summary jurisdiction, he may appeal therefrom to a court of quarter sessions.

(6) Any offence for which a person is under this Act liable to punishment on summary conviction may be prosecuted, and any articles liable to be forfeited under this Act by a court of summary jurisdiction may be forfeited, in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts: Provided that a person charged with an offence under this section before a court of summary jurisdiction shall, on appearing before the Court, and before the charge is gone into, be informed of his right to be tried on indictment, and if he requires, be so tried accordingly. Sect. 3.—Definitions of expressions used in this Act.]—(1) For the purposes of this Act the expression "trade mark" means a trade mark registered in the register of trade marks kept under the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), and includes any trade mark which, either with or without registration, is protected by law in any British possession or foreign state to which the provisions of the one hundred and third section of the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act, 1883, are, under order in council, for the time being applicable : [These orders in council are collected in the Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 8, tit. Merchandise Marks, and in the subsequent annual volumes of Statutory Rules and Orders.]

The expression "trade description" means any description, statement, or other indication, direct or indirect,

(a) as to the number, quantity, measure, gauge, or weight of any goods, or

(b) as to the place or country in which any goods were made or produced, or

(c) as to the mode of manufacturing or producing any goods, or

(d) as to the material of which any goods are composed, or

(e) as to any goods being the subject of an existing patent, privilege, or copyright, and the use of any figure, word, or mark which, according to the custom of the trade, is commonly taken to be an indication of any of the above matters, shall be deemed to be a trade description within the meaning of this Act.

The expression "false trade description" means a trade description which is false in a material respect as regards the goods to which it is applied, and includes every alteration of a trade description, whether by way of addition, effacement, or otherwise, where that alteration makes the description false in a material respect, and the fact that a trade description is a trade mark, or part of a trade mark, shall not prevent such trade description being a false trade description within the meaning of this Act.

The expression "goods" means anything which is the subject of trade, manufacture, or merchandise.

The expressions "person," "manufacturer, dealer, or trader," and "proprietor" include any body of persons corporate or unincorporate.

The expression "name" includes any abbreviation of a name. [The definition of "trade description" is extended to the customs entry of imported goods by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 15, s. 1, post, p. 1278; and includes a description in an invoice. Coppen v. Moore (No. 1) [1898] 2 Q. B. 300; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 689; and see Cameron v. Wiggins [1901] 1 K. B. 1; 70 L. J. (K. B.) 15; 19 Cox, 580.]

(2) The provisions of this Act respecting the application of a false trade description to goods shall extend to the application to goods of any such figures words or marks, or arrangement or combination thereof, whether including a trade mark or not, as are reasonably calculated to lead persons to believe that the goods are the manufacture or merchandise of some person other than the person whose manufacture or merchandise they really are.

(3) The provisions of this Act respecting the application of a false trade description to goods, or respecting goods to which a false trade description is applied, shall extend to the application to goods of any false name or initials of a person, and to goods with the false name or initials of a person applied, in like manner as if such name or initials were a trade description, and for the purpose of this enactment the expression "false name or initials" means as applied to any goods, any name or initials of a person which—

(a) are not a trade mark, or part of a trade mark, and

(b) are identical with, or a colourable imitation of the name or initials of a person carrying on business in connection with goods of the same description, and not having authorized the use of such name or initials, and

(c) are either those of a fictitious person or of some person not bonâ fide carrying on business in connection with such goods.

Sect. 4.—Meaning of "forge a trade mark."]—A person shall be deemed to forge a trade mark who either—

(a) without the assent of the proprietor of the trade mark makes that trade mark or a mark so nearly resembling that trade mark as to be calculated to deceive; or

(b) falsifies any genuine trade mark, whether by alteration, addition, effacement, or otherwise; and any trade mark or mark so made or falsified is in this Act referred to as a forged trade mark.

Provided that in any prosecution for forging a trade mark the burden of proving the assent of the proprietor shall lie on the defendant.

Sect. 5.—Meaning of the expression "apply a trade mark or mark or trade description to goods."]—(1) A person shall be deemed to apply a trade mark or mark or trade description to goods who—

(a) applies it to the goods themselves; or

(b) applies it to any covering, label, reel, or other thing in or with which the goods are sold or exposed or had in possession for any purpose of sale, trade, or manufacture; or

(c) places, encloses, or annexes any goods which are sold or exposed or had in possession for any purpose of sale, trade, or manufacture, in, with, or to any covering, label, reel, or other thing to which a trade mark or trade description has been applied; or

(d) uses a trade mark or mark or trade description in any manner calculated to lead to the belief that the goods in connection with which it is used are designated or described by that trade mark or mark or trade description.

(2) The expression "covering" includes any stopper, cask, bottle, vessel, box, cover, capsule, case, frame, or wrapper; and the expression "label" includes any band or ticket.

A trade mark, or mark, or trade description, shall be deemed to be applied whether it is woven, impressed, or otherwise worked into, or annexed, or affixed to the goods, or to any covering, label, reel, or other thing.

(3) A person shall be deemed to falsely apply to goods a trade mark or mark, who without the assent of the proprietor of a trade mark applies such trade mark, or a mark so nearly resembling it as to be calculated to deceive, but in any prosecution for falsely applying a trade mark or mark to goods the burden of proving the assent of the proprietor shall lie on the defendant.

Sect. 6.—Defences to charges under the Act where the defendant did the act complained of innocently in the ordinary course of his business.]—Where a defendant is charged with making any die, block, machine, or other instrument for the purpose of forging, or being used for forging, a trade mark, or with falsely applying to goods any trade mark or any mark so nearly resembling a trade mark as to be calculated to deceive, or with applying to goods any false trade description, or causing any of the things in this section to be done, and proves—

(a) That in the ordinary course of his business he is employed, on behalf of other persons, to make dies, blocks, machines, or other instruments for making, or being used in making, trade marks, or as the case may be, to apply marks or descriptions to goods, and that in the case which is the subject of the charge he was so employed by some person resident in the United Kingdom, and was not interested in the goods by way of profit or commission dependent on the sale of such goods; and

(b) that he took reasonable precautions against committing the offence charged; and

(c) that he had, at the time of the commission of the alleged offence, no reason to suspect the genuineness of the trade mark, mark, or trade description; and

(d) that he gave to the prosecutor all the information in his power with respect to the persons on whose behalf the trade mark, mark, or description was applied—he shall be discharged from the prosecution, but shall be liable to pay the costs incurred by the prosecutor, unless he has given due notice to him that he will rely on the above defence.

Sect. 7.—Application of the Act to watches.]—Where a watch case has thereon any words or marks which constitute, or are by common repute considered as constituting, a description of the country in which the watch was made, and the watch bears no description of the country where it was made, those words or marks shall primâ facie be deemed to be a description of that country within the meaning of this Act, and the provisions of this Act with respect to goods to which a false trade description has been applied, and with respect to selling or exposing for or having in possession for sale, or any purpose of trade or manufacture, goods with a false trade description, shall apply accordingly, and for the purposes of this section the expression "watch" means all that portion of a watch which is not the watch case.

Sect. 8.—False declaration at assay office of country or place where watch case was made.]—[Punishable on summary conviction only, since 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6.]

Sect. 9.—Pleading.—Trade mark how described in.—Copy or facsimile not necessary.]—In any indictment, pleading, proceeding, or document, in which any trade mark or forged trade mark is intended to be mentioned, it shall be sufficient, without further description and without any copy or facsimile, to state that trade mark or forged trade mark to be a trade mark or forged trade mark.

Sect. 10.—Evidence.—Defendant and wife or husband of defendant may be witnesses for defence.—Evidence in case of imported goods.]—In any prosecution for an offence against this Act—

(1) A defendant, and his wife or her husband, as the case may be, may, if the defendant thinks fit, be called as a witness, and, if called, shall be sworn and examined, and may be cross-examined and re-examined in like manner as any other witness. (See 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, ante, pp. 458 et seq.)

(2) In the case of imported goods, evidence of the port of shipment shall be primâ facie evidence of the place or country in which the goods were made or produced.

Sect. 11.—Accessories liable as principals.—Place of trial of.]—Any person who, being within the United Kingdom, procures, counsels, aids, abets, or is accessory to the commission, without the United Kingdom, of any act, which, if committed in the United Kingdom, would under this Act be a misdemeanor, shall be guilty of that misdemeanor as a principal, and be liable to be indicted, proceeded against, tried, and convicted in any county or place in the United Kingdom, in which he may be, as if the misdemeanor had been there committed. (See post, tit. Accessories before the fact to Felony.)

Sect. 12.—Search warrants.

Sect. 13.—Vexatious Indictments Acts applicable to offences under this Act.]—The Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, extended by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 1), shall apply to any offence punishable on indictment under this Act, in like manner as if such offence were one of the offences specified in s. 1 of that Act, but this section shall not apply to Scotland. (See ante, pp. 67 et seq.)

Sect. 14.—Costs.]—Repealed as to England, 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10. For substituted provisions, see ante, pp. 267 et seq.

Sect. 15.—Limitation of time for prosecutions.]—No prosecution for an offence against this Act shall be commenced after the expiration of three years next after the commission of the offence, or one year next after the first discovery thereof by the prosecutor, whichever expiration first happens. (See ante, p. 65.)

Sect. 18.—Certain trade descriptions lawfully used at the passing of this Act exempted from its operation.—Proviso.]—Where, at the passing of this Act, a trade description is lawfully and generally applied to goods of a particular class, or manufactured by a particular method, to indicate the particular class or method of manufacture of such goods, the provisions of this Act with respect to false trade descriptions shall not apply to such trade description when so applied (see Gridley v. Swinborne, 52 J. P. 739, 791): Provided that where such trade description includes the name of a place or country, and is calculated to mislead as to the place or country where the goods to which it is applied were actually made or produced, and the goods are not actually made or produced in that place or country, this section shall not apply unless there is added to the trade description, immediately before or after the name of that place or country, in an equally conspicuous manner with that name, the name of the place or county in which the goods were actually made or produced, with a statement that they were made or produced there. [This section only applies to goods which in the course of time have obtained a secondary name. Gridley v. Swinborne, 52 J. P. 791; 5 T. L. R. 71 : R. v. Butcher, 99 L. T. 622; 1 Cr. App. R. 54.]

Sect. 19.—Act not to exempt persons from civil proceedings,—nor to exempt persons from refusing to answer interrogatories in action, but answers not admissible in evidence in prosecution. Act not to render liable servant acting bonâ fide.]—(1) This Act shall not exempt any person from any action, suit, or other proceeding which might, but for the provisions of this Act, be brought against him.

(2) Nothing in this Act shall entitle any person to refuse to make a complete discovery, or to answer any question or interrogatory in any action, but such discovery or answer shall not be admissible in evidence against such person in any prosecution for an offence against this Act.

(3) Nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to render liable to any prosecution or punishment any servant of a master resident in the United Kingdom, who bonâ fide acts in obedience to the instructions of such master, and, on demand made by or on behalf of the prosecutor, has given full information as to his master.

54 & 55 Vict. c. 15 (Merchandise Marks Act, 1891), s. 1.—Customs entry to be trade descriptions.]—The customs entry relating to imported goods shall for the purpose of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, be deemed to be a trade description applied to the goods.

Sect. 2.—Prosecution of offences by Board of Trade.]—(1) The Board of Trade may, with the concurrence of the lord chancellor, make regulations providing that in cases appearing to the Board to affect the general interests of the country, or of a section of the community, or of a trade, the prosecution of offences under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, shall be undertaken by the Board of Trade, and prescribing the conditions on which such prosecutions are to be so undertaken. The expenses of prosecutions so undertaken shall be paid out of moneys provided by parliament.

(2) All regulations made under this section shall be laid before parliament within three weeks after they are made if parliament is then sitting, and if parliament is not then sitting, within three weeks after the beginning of the next session of parliament, and shall be judicially noticed, and shall have effect as if enacted by this Act, and shall be published under the authority of his Majesty's stationery office. [The regulations in force, made May 21, 1892, are printed in the Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 8, tit. Merchandise Marks, p. 13.]

(3) Nothing in this Act shall affect the power of any person or authority to undertake prosecutions otherwise than under the said regulations.

57 & 58 Vict. c. 19 (Merchandise Marks Prosecution Act, 1894), s. 1.—Prosecution of certain offences by Board of Agriculture.]—The power exercisable by the Board of Trade under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1891 (supra), with respect to the prosecution of offences under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (supra), may in cases which appear to the Board of Agriculture to relate to agricultural or horticultural produce [and the produce of any fishing industry (a)] be exercised by that board, and in such cases the former Act shall apply as if the Board of Agriculture were referred to therein instead of the Board of Trade. [The regulations in force, made October 27, 1894, are printed in Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 8, tit. Merchandise Marks, p. 14.]

Sect. 2.]—This Act shall not extend to Ireland.

5 Edw. 7, c. 15 (Trade Marks Act, 1905), s. 66.]—Making or causing to be made a false entry in the register of trade marks kept under the Act, or a writing falsely purporting to be a copy of an entry in any such register, or producing or causing to be produced or tendered in evidence any such writing knowing the entry or writing to be false, misdemeanor.

9 Edw. 7, c. 24 (Merchandise Marks (Ireland) Act, 1909), s. 1.]—Provision for official prosecutions under the Act of 1887 in Ireland by the Department of Agricultural and Technical Instruction for Ireland.

62 & 63 Vict. c. 51 (Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1899), s. 1.]—Precautions against importation of margarine, margarine cheese, adulterated or impoverished butter, condensed separated or skimmed milk, or any adulterated or impoverished food, unless sufficiently marked with a name or description indicating the nature of the article, or that it has been adulterated or impoverished.

7 Edw. 7, c. 21 (Butter and Margarine Act, 1907), s. 5 (1)].—Extends 62 & 63 Vict. c. 51, s. 1, to other forms of pretended or adulterated butter, etc., and alters the maximum penalties and the rules of evidence.

SECT. 3.

OFFENCES ARISING OUT OF RELATION BETWEEN EMPLOYERS AND WORKMEN.

Former Law.

The law relating to combinations by workmen for the purpose of raising wages, shortening the hours of labour, dictating to masters what workmen they shall employ, and for other purposes, interfering with the free course of trade, was formerly regulated by the common law relating to conspiracy, and by the repealed statutes 6 G. 4, c. 129; 22 Vict. c. 34; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 41; and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 32, s. 1. As to that law, see the following cases, viz.: R. v. Bykerdyke, 1 M. & Rob. 179: R. v. Rowlands, 17 Q. B. 671; 2 Den. 364; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 81: R. v. Duffield, 5 Cox, 404: Walsby v. Anley, 30 L. J. (M. C.) 121: O'Neill v. Longman, 32 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 259; 4 B. & S. 376: O'Neill v. Kruger, 4 B. & S. 389: Wood v. Bowron, L. R. 2 Q. B. 21; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 5: R. v. Druitt, 10 Cox, 592, 601, 602 (dissented from in Gibson v. Lawson [1891] 2 Q. B. 545; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 9): R. v. Shepherd, 11 Cox, 325. The history of the law is fully dealt with in Wright on Conspiracy; and see Encycl. Eng. Law. (2nd ed.), tits. Conspiracy and Trade Union. Complaints as to the unfairness of the law led to the appointment of a Royal Commission in 1867; on its report in 1869 were passed the Trade Union Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, infra), and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 32. Sect. 7 of the latter Act repealed 6 G. 4, c. 129; 22 & 23 Vict. c. 34; and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 41, as to assaults in pursuance of an unlawful conspiracy to raise the rate of wages, but did not affect 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 39, 40, as to assaults with intent to obstruct sale or transit of grain, or assaults on seamen to prevent their exercise of their lawful trade. 34 & 35 Vict. c. 32 was repealed by 38 & 39 Vict. c. 86, s. 17, in consequence of the decision of Brett, J., in R. v. Bunn, 12 Cox, 316 (the Gas-stokers' case), that an improper combination to control a master was still a common law offence; and 38 & 39 Vict. c. 86 (infra), was passed on the recommendation of a Royal Commission appointed in 1874. Another Royal Commission reported on the subject in 1906 (Parl. Pap. 1906, C. 2825).

(a) Added by 3 Edw. 7, c. 31, s. 1 (8).

Statutes.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 31 (Trade Union Act, 1871), s. 2.—Trade union not criminal.] —The purposes of any trade union [defined 39 & 40 Vict. c. 22, s. 16, infra] shall not, by reason merely that they are in restraint of trade, be deemed to be unlawful, so as to render any member of such trade union liable to criminal prosecution for conspiracy or otherwise.

39 & 40 Vict. c. 22 (Trade Union Act, 1876), s. 16.—Definition of trade union].—So much of s. 23 of the principal Act (34 & 35 Vict. c. 31) as defines the term "trade union," except the proviso qualifying such definition (see infra), is hereby repealed, and in lieu thereof be it enacted as follows:—The term "trade union" means any combination, whether temporary or permanent, for regulating the relations between workmen and master, or between workmen and workmen, or between masters and masters, or for imposing restrictive conditions on the conduct of any trade or business, whether such combination would or would not, if the principal Act (34 & 35 Vict. c. 31) had not been passed, have been deemed to have been an unlawful combination by reason of some one or more of its purposes being in restraint of trade.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, s. 23.]— . . . [Proviso referred to in 39 & 40 Vict. c. 22, s. 16, supra]—Provided that this Act shall not affect—1. Any agreement between partners as to their own business; 2. Any agreement between an employer and those employed by him as to such employment; 3. Any agreement in consideration of the sale of the goodwill of a business, or of instruction in any profession, trade, or handicraft.

38 & 39 Vict. c. 86 (Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875), s. 3.—Amendment of law as to conspiracy in trade disputes.]—An agreement or combination by two or more persons to do or procure to be done any act in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute [between employers and workmen] shall not be indictable as a conspiracy if such act committed by one person would not be punishable as a crime. [The words between brackets were repealed by 6 Edw. 7, c. 47, s. 5 (3).]

An act done in pursuance of an agreement or combination by two or more persons shall, if done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute, not be actionable unless the act, if done without any such agreement or combination, would be actionable. [This paragraph was added here by 6 Edw. 7, c. 47, s. 1, infra.]

Nothing in this section shall exempt from punishment any persons guilty of a conspiracy for which a punishment is awarded by any Act of Parliament.

Nothing in this section shall affect the law relating to riot (ante, p. 1221), unlawful assembly (ante, p. 1218), breach of the peace, or sedition (ante, p. 1114), or any offence against the state or the sovereign (ante, p. 1053 et seq.).

A crime for the purposes of this section means an offence punishable on indictment, or an offence which is punishable on summary conviction, and for the commission of which the offender is liable, under the statute making the offence punishable, to be imprisoned either absolutely or at the discretion of the Court as an alternative for some other punishment.

Where a person is convicted of any such agreement or combination as aforesaid to do or procure to be done an act which is punishable only on summary conviction, and is sentenced to imprisonment, the imprisonment shall not exceed three months, or such longer time, if any, as may have been prescribed by the statute for the punishment of the said act when committed by one person.

6 Edw. 7, c. 47 (Trade Disputes Act, 1906), s. 5 (3).—Construction.]—In this Act and in the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875, the expression "trade dispute" means any dispute between employers and workmen, or between workmen and workmen, which is connected with the employment or non-employment, or the terms of the employment, or with the conditions of labour, of any person, and the expression "workmen" means all persons employed in trade or industry, whether or not in the employment of the employer with whom a trade dispute arises. . . .

38 & 39 Vict. c. 86 (Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875), s. 4.—Breach of contract of service by persons employed by municipal authority, etc., in supply of gas or water.]—Where a person employed by a municipal authority [defined s. 14, post, p. 1286], or by any company or contractor upon whom is imposed by Act of Parliament the duty [interpreted s. 14, post. p. 1286], or who have otherwise assumed the duty of supplying any city, borough, town, or place, or any part thereof, with gas or water, wilfully and maliciously [defined s. 15, post, p. 1286] breaks a contract of service with that authority or company or contractor, knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that the probable consequences of his so doing, either alone or in combination with others, will be to deprive the inhabitants of that city, borough, town, place, or part, wholly or to a great extent of their supply of gas or water, he shall on conviction thereof by a court of summary jurisdiction, or on indictment as hereinafter mentioned [s. 9, post, p. 1285], be liable either to pay a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, or to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour.

Every such municipal authority, company, or contractor as is mentioned in this section, shall cause to be posted up, at the gasworks or waterworks, as the case may be, belonging to such authority, or company or contractor, a printed copy of this section in some conspicuous place where the same may be conveniently read by the persons employed, and as often as such copy becomes defaced, obliterated, or destroyed, shall cause it to be renewed with all reasonable despatch.

If any municipal authority or company or contractor make default in complying with the provisions of this section in relation to such notice as aforesaid, they or he shall incur, on summary conviction, a penalty not exceeding five pounds for every day during which such default continues, and every person who unlawfully injures, defaces, or covers up any notice so posted up as aforesaid in pursuance of this Act, shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

Sect. 5.—Breach of contract of service involving serious injury to person or property.]—Where any person wilfully and maliciously [defined s. 15, post, p. 1286] breaks a contract of service or of hiring, knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that the probable consequences of his so doing, either alone or in combination with others, will be to endanger human life, or cause serious bodily injury, or to expose valuable property, whether real or personal, to destruction or serious injury, he shall on conviction thereof by a court of summary jurisdiction, or on indictment as hereinafter mentioned [s. 9, post,

p. 1285], be liable either to pay a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, or to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour.

Sect. 7.—Intimidation, etc., to compel any person to abstain from doing or to do any act which he has a right to do or abstain from doing.]—Every person who, with a view to compel any other person to abstain from doing or to do any act which such other person has a legal right to do or abstain from doing, wrongfully and without legal authority,—

1. Uses violence to or intimidates such other person or his wife or children, or injures his property; or
2. Persistently follows such other person about from place to place;
3. Hides any tools, clothes, or other property owned or used by such other person, or deprives him of or hinders him in the use thereof; or
4. Watches or besets the house or other place where such other person resides, or works, or carries on business, or happens to be, or the approach to such house or place; or
5. Follows such other person with two or more other persons in a disorderly manner in or through any street or road, shall, on conviction thereof by a court of summary jurisdiction or on indictment as hereinafter mentioned [s. 9, post, p. 1285], be liable either to pay a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, or to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour.

[Attending at or near the house or place where a person resides, or works, or carries on business, or happens to be, or the approach to such house or place, in order merely to obtain or communicate information, shall not be deemed a watching or besetting within the meaning of this section.] (These words are repealed by 6 Edw. 7, c. 47, s. 2 (2); see post, p. 1285.)

6 Edw. 7, c. 47 (Trade Disputes Act, 1906), s. 2 (1).—Peaceful Picketing.]—It shall be lawful for one or more persons, acting on their own behalf or on behalf of a trade union or of an individual employer or firm in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute, to attend at or near a house or place where a person resides or works or carries on business or happens to be, if they so attend merely for the purpose of peaceably obtaining or communicating information, or of peacefully persuading any person to work or abstain from working. [This section has been held not to apply as regards the "watching" of the private residence of an employer. R. v. Wall, 21 Cox (Ir.), 401, supra.]

Sect. 3.—Removal of liability for interfering with another person's business, etc.]—An act done by a person in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute shall not be actionable on the ground only that it induces some other person to break a contract of employment or that it is an interference with the trade, business, or employment of some other person, or with the right of some other person to dispose of his capital or his labour as he wills.

Sect. 5 (2).—In this Act the expression "trade union" has the same meaning as in the Trade Union Acts, 1871 and 1876, and shall include any combination as therein defined, notwithstanding that such combination may be the branch of a trade union.

Sect. 11.—Evidence.]—Provided, that upon the hearing and determining of any indictment or information under ss. 4, 5 and 6 of this Act, the respective parties to the contract of service, their husbands or wives, shall be deemed and considered as competent witnesses. (As to England see 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, ante, pp. 458 et seq.)

Sect. 12.—Appeal to quarter sessions.

Sect. 14.—Meaning of "municipal authority," "company," and "contractor."]—The expression "municipal authority" in this Act means any of the following authorities, that is to say, the Metropolitan Board of Works, the Common Council of the City of London, the Commissioners of Sewers of the City of London, the town council of any borough for the time being subject to the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), and any Act amending the same, any commissioners, trustees, or other persons invested by any local Act of Parliament with powers of improving, cleansing, lighting, or paving any town, and any local board. [The Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, was substituted for 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 76 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 242 (3)).]

Any municipal authority or company or contractor who has obtained authority by or in pursuance of any general or local Act of Parliament to supply the streets of any city, borough, town, or place, or of any part thereof, with gas, or which is required by or in pursuance of any general or local Act of Parliament to supply water on demand to the inhabitants of any city, borough, town, or place, or any part thereof, shall for the purposes of this Act be deemed to be a municipal authority or company or contractor upon whom is imposed by Act of Parliament the duty of supplying such city, borough, town, or place, or part thereof, with gas or water.

Sect. 15.—Construction of word "maliciously."]—The word "maliciously" used in reference to any offence under this Act shall be construed in the same manner as it is required by the 58th section (ante, p. 738) of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), to be construed in reference to any offence committed under such last-mentioned Act. (See ante, pp. 741, 800.)

Sect. 16.]—Nothing in this Act shall apply to seamen or to apprentices to the sea service. [This section does not exempt a person who is not a seaman from being charged with and being liable to punishment under the Act for an offence committed by him against a seaman. Kennedy v. Cowie [1891] 1 Q. B. 771; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 170. "Seamen" in this section has the same meaning as in the Merchant Shipping Acts, i.e., persons actually employed or engaged on a ship, and not merely persons whose calling or occupation is the sea, but who are not actually employed or engaged on a ship. R. v. Lynch [1898] 1 Q. B. 61; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 59.

SECT. 4.

OFFENCES AS TO THE SALE OF FOOD AND DRUGS.

Common Law.

It is a misdemeanor at common law to sell food or drink with knowledge that it is dangerous or unfit for human consumption. R. v. Dixon, 3 M. & Sel. 11; 4 Camp. 12: R. v. Mackarty, 2 Ld. Raym. 1179; 3 Id. 487; cited arguendo 6 East, 126, 133, 141, criticized 2 East, P. C., ch. 18, s. 5: R. v. Southerton, 6 East, 126, 133, 141, explaining R. v. Mackarty: R. v. Haynes 4 M. & Sel. 214: Shillito v. Thompson, 1 Q. B. D. 12; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 18; and see post, tit. Nuisance, p. 1308. If death ensues from eating such food, the seller is indictable for manslaughter. R. v. Stevenson, 3 F. & F. 106: R. v. Kempson, Oxford Circuit, 1893; 28 L. J. Newsp. 477. Sale by a false description is indictable as a common law cheat (ante, p. 720), or under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (ante, p. 1272), or as obtaining money by false pretences. See ante, pp. 691, 701. These common law offences are not abolished by the statutes set out below. See 38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, s. 28 (post, p. 1288).

Statutes.

NOTE.—The ordinary procedure under the Acts relating to the sale of bread, food, and drugs is before a court of summary jurisdiction. Only those sections under which an indictment may be preferred are given below. As to the cases on the Acts, see Bell, on Sale of Food and Drugs Acts (6th ed.).

38 & 39 Vict. c. 63 (Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875), s. 2.—Definition of "drug."]—. . . The term "drug" shall include medicine for internal or external use. . . . (As to what is or is not a drug, see Fowle v. Fowle, 18 Cox, 462; 60 J. P. 278: Houghton v. Taplin, 13 T. L. R. 386.)

62 & 63 Vict. c. 51 (Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1899), s. 26.—Definition of "food."]—For the purposes of the Sale of Food and Drugs Acts, the expression "food" shall include every article used for food or drink by man other than drugs or water, and any article which ordinarily enters into or is used in the composition or preparation of human food, and shall also include flavouring matters and condiments.

38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, s. 3.—Mixing food with ingredient injurious to health or selling food so mixed.—Second offence a misdemeanor.]—No person shall mix, colour, stain or powder, or order or permit any other person to mix, colour, stain, or powder, any article of food with any ingredient or material so as to render the article injurious to health, with intent that the same may be sold in that state, and no person shall sell any such article so mixed, coloured, stained, or powdered, under a penalty in each case not exceeding fifty pounds for the first offence. Every offence, after a conviction for a first offence, shall be a misdemeanor, for which the person, on conviction, shall be imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months with hard labour.

Sect. 4.—Mixing drug with injurious ingredient or selling drug so mixed.—Second offence a misdemeanor.]—No person shall, except for the purpose of compounding as hereinafter described, mix, colour, stain, or powder, or order or permit any other person to mix, colour, stain, or powder, any drug with any ingredient or material so as to affect injuriously the quality or potency of such drug, with intent that the same may be sold in that state, and no person shall sell any such drug so mixed, coloured, stained, or powdered, under the same penalty in each case respectively as in the preceding section for a first and subsequent offence.

Sect. 5.—Exemptions.]—Provided that no person shall be liable to be convicted under either of the two last foregoing sections of this Act in respect of the sale of any article of food, or of any drug, if he shows to the satisfaction of the justice or court before whom he is charged that he did not know of the article of food or drug sold by him being so mixed, coloured, stained, or powdered as in either of those sections mentioned, and that he could not with reasonable diligence have obtained that knowledge.

Sect. 8.—Further exemptions.—Labels.]—Provided that no person shall be guilty of any such offence as aforesaid (see s. 3) in respect of the sale of an article of food or a drug mixed with any matter or ingredient not injurious to health, and not intended fraudulently to increase its bulk, weight, or measure, or conceal its inferior quality, if at the time of delivering such article or drug he shall supply to the person receiving the same a notice, by a label distinctly and legibly written or printed on or with the article or drug, to the effect that the same is mixed. [See Batchelour v. Gee, 30 T. L. R. 506.]

62 & 63 Vict. c. 51, s. 12.—Labels.]—The label referred to in s. 8 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (supra), shall not be deemed to be distinctly and legibly written or printed within the meaning of that section unless it is so written or printed that the notice of mixture given by the label is not obscured by other matter on the label: Provided that nothing in this enactment shall hinder or affect the use of any registered trade mark, or of any label which has been continuously in use for at least seven years before the commencement of this Act (1*st Jan.*, 1900): but the Controller-General of Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks shall not register any trade mark purporting to describe a mixture unless it complies with the requirements of this enactment.

38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, s. 28.]—Nothing in this Act contained shall affect the power of proceeding by indictment or take away any other remedy against any offender under this Act, or in any way interfere with contracts and bargains between individuals, and the rights and remedies belonging thereto. . . . (Cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33, ante, p. 160.)

C.) 153 (where the defendant had elected to be tried on indictment). R. v. Dennis was criticized in Grivell v. Malpas [1906] 2 K. B. 32; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 647. 62 & 63 Vict. c. 51, s. 19.—Time for proceedings and regulations as to summons.]—(1) When any article of food or drug has been purchased from any person for test purposes, any prosecution under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act in respect of the sale thereof, notwithstanding anything contained in s. 20 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, shall not be instituted after the expiration of twenty-eight days from the time of the purchase. [The prosecution is instituted when the information is laid. Brooks v. Bagshaw [1904] 2 K. B. 798; 73 L. J. (K. B.) 839; 68 J. P. 514.]

(2) In any prosecution under the Sale of Food and Drugs Acts the summons shall state particulars of the offence or offences alleged, and also the name of the prosecutor, and shall not be made returnable in less time than fourteen days from the day on which it is served, and there must be served therewith a copy of any analyst's certificate obtained on behalf of the prosecutor. (See McQueen v. Jackson [1903] 2 K. B. 163; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 606.)

62 & 63 Vict. c. 51, s. 20.—Defence of warranty.]—(1) A warranty or invoice shall not be available as a defence to any proceeding under the Sale of Food and Drugs Acts unless the defendant has, within seven days after service of the summons, sent to the purchaser a copy of such warranty or invoice with a written notice stating that he intends to rely on the warranty or invoice, and specifying the name and address of the person from whom he received it, and has also sent a like notice of his intention to such person. (2) The person by whom such warranty or invoice is alleged to have been given shall be entitled to appear at the hearing and to give evidence, and the Court may, if it think fit, adjourn the hearing to enable him to do so. (3) A warranty or invoice given by a person resident outside the United Kingdom shall not be available as a defence in any proceeding under the Sale of Food and Drugs Acts unless the defendant proves that he had taken reasonable steps to ascertain and did in fact believe in the accuracy of the statement contained in the warranty or invoice. (4) Where the defendant is a servant of the person who purchased the article under a warranty or invoice, he shall, subject to the provisions of this section, be entitled to rely on s. 25 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, and s. 7 of the Margarine Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 29), in the same way as his employer or master would have been entitled to do if he had been the defendant, provided that the servant further proves that he had no reason to believe that the article was otherwise than that demanded by the prosecutor. (5) Where the defendant in a prosecution under the Sale of Food and Drugs Acts has been discharged under the provisions of s. 25 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, as amended by this Act, any proceedings under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act for giving the warranty relied on by the defendant in such prosecution may be taken as well before a court having jurisdiction in the place where the article of food or drug to which the warranty relates was purchased for analysis as before a court having jurisdiction in the place where the warranty was given. (6) Every person who, in respect of any article of food or drug sold by him as principal or agent, gives to the purchaser a false warranty in writing, shall be liable on summary conviction, for the first offence to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds, for the second offence to a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, and for any subsequent offence to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds, unless he proves to the satisfaction of the Court that when he gave the warranty he had reason to believe that the statements or descriptions contained therein were true. CHAPTER VI.

OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC MORALS AND POLICE.

SECT. 1.

(i.) BIGAMY.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 (Offences against the Person Act, 1861), s. 57.—Definition and punishment of bigamy.]—"Whosoever, being married, shall marry any other person during the life of the former husband or wife, whether the second marriage shall have taken place in England or Ireland or elsewhere (a), shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years;"

[The words "or elsewhere" mean "in any other part of the world," and are not confined to the King's dominions. Earl Russell's case [1901] A. C. 446; 70 L. J. (K. B.) 998; 20 Cox, 51. A British subject resident in England was held to be liable to be indicted and convicted of bigamy in England though both marriages were solemnized in Scotland. R. v. Topping, Dears. 647; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 72, decided under 9 Geo 4, c. 31, s. 22, of which this section is a re-enactment.]

Venue.]—"And any such offence may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined and punished in any county or place in England or Ireland where the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if the offence had been actually committed in that county or place;

"Provided that nothing in this section contained shall extend to any second marriage contracted elsewhere than in England and Ireland by any other than a subject of his Majesty or to any person marrying a second time, whose husband or wife shall have been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years then last past, and shall not have been known by such person to be living within that time, or shall extend to any person who, at the time of such second marriage, shall have been divorced from the bond of the first marriage, or to any person whose former marriage shall have been declared void by the sentence of any court of competent jurisdiction." [Bigamy was first made felony by 1 Jac. 1, c. 11, repealed and re-enacted by 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 22, which is reproduced in the above enactment. The Act of James applied only to second marriages within England and Wales. Kel. (J.) 79, 80 : 1 Hawk. c. 42, s. 5. It excepted marriage after divorce a mensâ et thoro; 1 Hale, 694; and marriages within the age of consent. 3 Co. Inst. 59. See post, p. 1298.]

4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58 (Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914), s. 28 (3).]—The wife or husband of a person charged with bigamy may be called as a witness either for the prosecution or defence and without the consent of the person charged.

(a) As to the powers of colonial legislatures to punish extra-territorial bigamy, see McLeod v. Att.-Gen. for N. S. W. [1891] A. C. 453: Re Bigamy Laws of Canada, 26 Canada, 461; R. v. Hilaire [1903] 3 N. S. W. State Rep. 228: R. v. Brinkley [1907] 12 Canada Cr. Cas. 454.

Indictment.

THE KING v. A. B.

Central Criminal Court.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Bigamy, contrary to section 57 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, married C. D. during the life of his wife, E. F.

Felony: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). As to recognizances and sureties for keeping the peace, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 71 (ante, p. 865).

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence for the Prosecution.

The following matters must be proved on the part of the prosecution :— 1. Celebration of the first marriage and identity of the parties. 2. Validity of the first marriage. 3. That it subsisted at the date of the second marriage. 4 Celebration of the second marriage. The first wife or husband was not a competent witness for the prosecution on any part of the case, either at common law (1 Hawk. c. 42, s. 8) or under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (ante, pp. 458 et seq.) R. v. Green, Hertford Assizes, Nov. 18, 1889, 34 L. J. Newsp. 622, Wills, J. But the law in this respect has now been altered by 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 28 (3) (ante, p. 1292), and the wife or husband of a person charged with bigamy may be called as a witness either for the prosecution or defence and without the consent of the person charged. Such wife or husband is not, however, a compellable witness against the person charged. R. v. Leach [1912] A. C. 305; 81 L. J. (K. B.) 616; 22 Cox, 721 (decided on similar words in 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36 (Criminal Evidence Act, 1898), s. 4, sub-s. 1, ante, p. 465).

1. Celebration of the first marriage.]—It is immaterial when or where the first marriage was celebrated, whether in England or elsewhere, 2 Hale, 692; 1 Hawk. c. 42, s. 7; 3 Chit. Cr. L. 720.

There must be evidence of celebration: as evidence of acknowledgment, cohabitation or repute will not suffice. Morris v. Miller, 4 Burr. 2057, 2058, Lord Mansfield, C.J. In R. v. Wilson, 3 F. & F. 119, 122 n., however, the contrary seems to have been decided. To prove the celebration, it is not essential to prove that banns were published or a licence obtained or the marriage registered; R. v. Allison, R. & R. 109: R. v. Manwaring, 26 L. J. (M. C.) 10; and it is sufficient to call a person present at the ceremony, who can describe it so as to enable the judge to determine whether it would constitute a marriage in law; R. v. Allison (supra): R. v. Millis, 10 Cl. & F. 534; and can identify the parties. R. v. Manwaring (supra): R. v. Simpson, 15 Cox, 323. Since the establishment of a complete system of registration of marriages it is, however, now simpler and more satisfactory, and more usual to prove the celebration by a certified copy of the marriage register obtained from the general register office, or from the custodian of the particular register.

Identity.]—Evidence of the identity of the parties must also be given, and should be by persons who were present at the ceremony, or have other adequate means of knowing the parties to the marriage. Identification by photograph has been allowed; R. v. Tolson, 4 F. & F. 103; but is unsatisfactory, and in matrimonial cases is not acted on unless corroborated by other evidence. Frith v. Frith [1896] Prob. 74; 65 L. J. (P.) 53. Proof from the register of marriages that a person of the same name as the prisoner married R., and that the prisoner had subsequently cohabitated with R., and acknowledged and alluded to her as his wife, has been held to be sufficient evidence of identification. R. v. Birtles, 75 J. P. 288; 27 T. L. R. 402.

The special modes of proving marriages by particular ceremonies are as hereunder stated.

Marriage in Church of England.]—If celebrated in England, according to the rites of the Established Church, the marriage may be proved by the production of the original register of the marriage from the proper custody, that is, from the church itself, or from the custody of the "rector, vicar, curate or other officiating minister;" Doe v. Fowler, 14 Q. B. 700; or by a copy thereof, or extract therefrom, provided it is proved to be an examined copy or extract or provided it purports to be signed and certified as a true copy or extract by the officer to whose custody the original is entrusted; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14 (ante, p.): Sayer v. Glossop, 2 C. & K. 694: Re Hall's Estate, 22 L. J. (Ch.) 177: Re Porter's Trusts, 25 L. J. (Ch.) 688; together with some proof either direct or presumptive of the identity of the parties. See ante, p. .

Where it was proved that the marriage was solemnized, not in the parish church, but in a chamber in a building a few yards from the church, while the church was under repair, and it was further proved that divine service had several times been performed in the building in question, it was held that the building must be presumed to have been licensed, and that therefore the marriage might properly be solemnized there. R. v. Cresswell, 1 Q. B. D. 446; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 77. As to marriages by banns in chapels, see R. v. Bowen, 2 C. & K. 227.

With respect to the places where the banns may be published and a marriage solemnized, see the Marriage Acts of 1823 (4 G. 4, c. 76), 1825 (6 G. 4, c. 92), and 1836 (6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85). The non-residence of the parties where the banns were published, or, if the marriage was by licence, where the marriage was solemnized, is immaterial. 4 G. 4, c. 76, s. 26; R. v. Hind, R. & R. 253; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 119, s. 17. The Act of 1823 (4 G. 4, c. 76) does not apply to marriages beyond sea or in Scotland. See R. v. Topping, Dears. 647.

As to marriages of illegitimate children by licence in England, see Priestly v. Hughes, 11 East, 1.

In Church of Rome.]—Where the marriage to be proved has been celebrated in accordance with the rites of the Church of Rome, in some part of the United Kingdom, it is not sufficient to prove the marriage by a certificate from the officiating priest; but it is also necessary to prove that the statutory requirements in the case of such marriages have been complied with; i.e., that the marriage has been celebrated (1) in the presence of the registrar under 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85, s. 20, or (2) in accordance with the Marriage Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 58). In R. v. Savage, 13 Cox. 178, it was held by Lush, J., that in an indictment for bigamy everything must be proved most strictly, and therefore that evidence of the first marriage in Scotland, by a Roman Catholic priest who had many times previously performed similar ceremonies there, would not suffice, without proof of the law of Scotland as to such marriage, and this decision was followed by Walton, J., in R. v. Lindsay, 66 J. P. 505; 18 T. L. R. 761; and see R. v. Povey, Dears. 32; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 19; 6 Cox, 83 (post, p. 1300). But where the only evidence of the second marriage was that of the second wife, who proved that she had been married to the prisoner in the State of Illinois by a Roman Catholic priest according to the rites of his Church, this was held to be sufficient evidence of the second marriage, without proof of the law of that state relating to marriage. R. v. Griffin, 14 Cox, 308; 4 L. R. Ir. 497. Where the first marriage was celebrated abroad, it is submitted that evidence should be given to prove that a religious marriage according to the rites of the Church of Rome was accepted as valid by the civil authorities of the state in which it was celebrated. But in R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 282; followed in R. v. Griffin (supra), it would seem to have been considered that proof that the ceremony was performed by a person appearing and officiating as a priest, and that it was understood by the parties to be the marriage ceremony according to the rites and customs of the foreign country, would be sufficient presumptive evidence of it, so as to throw upon the defendant the onus of impugning its validity. Where a man and woman were married in Ireland with the ceremonies making a marriage of Roman Catholics valid, they declaring themselves to be Roman Catholics, it was held that the man could not, on an indictment for bigamy, set up his alleged Protestantism to defeat such marriage. R. v. Orgill, 9 C. & P. 80.

In Greek Church.]—A first marriage in England according to the rites of the Greek Church must be proved under the Marriage Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c 58), if the marriage took place under the provisions of that Act, otherwise a proof of marriage in the presence of or before a registrar (6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85, s. 20) will be necessary to establish the validity of the marriage in England. See Greek Marriages Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 20). Where the second marriage was according to the Greek rite, it is submitted that it is enough to prove celebration (see post, p. 1303).

Of Jews.]—Marriages between persons of the Jewish faith were excepted from 4 G. 4, c. 76 (see s. 31), and 61 & 62 Vict. c. 58 (see s. 13); but are provided for by 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85, ss. 2, 16, 39; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 72, s. 5; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 119, ss. 20-22. As to such marriages, see Lindo v. Belisario, 1 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 216; Goldsmid v. Bromer, Id. 324: Ruding v. Smith, 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 371; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1053, 1064, 1065, Lord Stowell: R. v. Millis, 10 Cl. & F. 534; 8 Eng. Rep. 844. Where the marriage is alleged to have been celebrated according to Jewish law, it has been ruled that evidence must be given of a written contract between the parties; Horn v. Noel, 1 Camp. 61: R. v. Althausen, 17 Cox, 630: R. v. Nasillski, 61 J. P. 520: R. v. Weinberg, 33 L. J. Newsp. 239; and that the witnesses of the marriage were not blood relations of the parties. These rulings are doubtful, and seem inconsistent with Lindo v. Belisario, 1 Hagg. Consist. Cas. 227, and Nathan v. Woolf, 15 T. L. R. 250. See Henriques, Jewish Marriages and the English Law, p. 48. Even if good law, the rulings do not apply when the marriage has been registered under an Act of Parliament, and must be limited to Jewish marriages celebrated abroad. Jews domiciled in England cannot validly contract a marriage within the degrees prohibited by English law. Re De Wilton [1900] 2 Ch. 481; 69 L. J. (Ch.) 717; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 998.

Of Quakers.]—Marriages between Quakers (see Deane v. Thomas, M. & M. 361) are excepted from 4 G. 4, c. 76 (see s. 31), and 61 & 62 Vict. c. 58 (see s. 13); but are provided for by 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85, ss. 2, 16, 39; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 72, s. 5; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 119, ss. 20, 21; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 18; 35 & 36 Vict. c. 10. The two last-mentioned Acts apply even when one only or neither of the parties is a Quaker.

Of Protestant dissenters.]—Where the marriage was celebrated under the Marriage Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 58), in a registered building without the presence of the registrar, it may be proved by a certified copy from the general register office given under 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 86, s. 38, or by a certified copy given by the minister in charge of the register belonging to the building.

Where the marriage was celebrated in a registered building in the presence of the registrar under ss. 18-21 of the Marriage Act, 1836 (6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85), it may be proved by certified copies of the register from the general registry office at Somerset House (6 & 7 W. 4, c. 86, s. 38), or from the registrar who has custody of the original register (Id. s. 35).

Where the marriage was solemnized under 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85, the certificate authorized by the 7th section of that Act (now rep.), and under 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 86, s. 38, coupled with evidence of the identity of the parties by persons present at the marriage, was held to be sufficient primâ facie evidence of a valid marriage. R. v. Hawes, 1 Den. 270; 2 Cox, 432. Proof of marriage before a registrar, or in a chapel not duly licensed, has been held sufficient. R. v. Tilson, 1 F. & F. 54. Proof that the marriage took place in a dissenting chapel, in the presence of the registrar, that the entry in the registrar's book was signed by a person who proved the fact of the marriage, as a witness to the marriage, and that the parties afterwards cohabited for some years, was held to be sufficient primâ facie evidence that the chapel was duly registered, and was a place in which marriages might be lawfully solemnized under the above Act. R. v. Manwaring, Dears. & B. 132; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 10. So where it was proved that the marriage was celebrated in a dissenting chapel by a dissenting minister in the presence of the registrar of the district and two witnesses, and the certificate was produced, it was held unnecessary to prove that the chapel was registered. R. v. Cradock, 3 F. & F. 837.

By registrar.]—A marriage solemnized before a registrar under s. 21 of the Marriage Act, 1836 (6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85), may be proved by certified copies under ss. 35 or 38 of the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act, 1836 (6 & 7 W. 4, c. 86), coupled with proof of the identity of the parties. As to certificates of marriages in the presence of the registrar and in buildings registered under s. 18 of the Marriage Act, 1836, vide supra.

Marriages in Scotland.]—Regular marriages in Scotland are best proved by certified extracts from the marriage register given under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 80, ss. 56, 58, 62; 18 Vict. c. 29; and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 85, which, if authenticated as required, are admissible in evidence in all parts of the King's dominions. See 10 Edw. 7 & 1 Geo. 5, c. 32, s. 1; see also Lyell v. Kennedy [1889] 14 App. Cas. 437, 449.

Marriages in Ireland.]—A marriage in Ireland, if according to the rites of the Church of Rome, is best proved by certified copies from the general register office or the superintendent registrar of the district in which the marriage was celebrated: 26 & 27 Vict. c. 90, ss. 17, 18. Marriages in Ireland (other than Roman Catholic) are best proved by certified copies of the register under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 81, ss. 68, 69, 70.

Marriages abroad.]—A marriage celebrated abroad may be proved by any person who was present at it; circumstances should also be proved from which the jury may infer that it was a valid marriage according to the laws of the country in which it was celebrated, or according to the national law of the parties if celebrated outside the state to which they belong. On this subject oral but not written evidence by experts is admissible. Sussex Peerage Claim, 6 St. Tr. (N. S.) 79; 11 Cl. & F. 85: 8 Eng. Rep. 1034. As to French marriages, see Lacon v. Higgins, D. & R. (N. P.) 38; 3 Stark (N. P.) 178. Marriages celebrated abroad by British officials under the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 23), are proved under s. 13 of that Act.

2. Validity of the marriage.]—The second marriage is not bigamous unless the first marriage was valid; and the validity of the first marriage must be proved by the prosecution: R. v. Kay, 16 Cox, 292; for the law will not presume it in the case of bigamy, as it will in civil cases. Smith v. Huson, 1 Phillimore, 287. And the first marriage must also have been a monogamous marriage as understood in Christian countries. See Ardaseer Cursetjee v. Perozeboye, 10 Moore P.C. 575; 14 Eng. Rep. 533: Re Ullee, 54 L. T. (N. S.) 286: Re Bethell, 38 Ch. D. 220; 56 L. J. (Ch.) 334: Hyde v. Hyde, L. R. 1 P. & D. 130; 35 L. J. (P. & M.) 57: Brinkley v. Att.-Gen., 15 P. D. 76; 57 L. J. (Ch.) 487; Mayne, Ind. Cr. L. (ed. 1896), p. 772; Dicey, Conflict of Laws (2nd ed.).

In R. v. Newton, 2 M. & Rob. 503, the prisoner's admission of a prior marriage was held to be evidence that it was lawfully solemnized. See same case reported as R. v. Simmonsto, 1 C. & K. 164; and as R. v. Simmonite, 1 Cox, 30. But in R. v. Savage, 13 Cox, 178, Lush, J., refused to act upon R. v. Newton, as being inconsistent with the Sussex Peerage Claim, 11 Cl. & F. 85, 134; 8 Eng. Rep. 1034; and held that the prisoner's admission upon being apprehended that he had been married to his first wife in Scotland, was no evidence that that marriage had been lawfully solemnized, and this view seems to be supported by R. v. Truman, 1 East, P. C. 470: R. v. Flaherty, 2 C. & K. 782, and was adopted by Walton, J., in R. v. Lindsay, 66 J. P. 505; 18 T. L. R. 761.

Proof.]—The validity of a marriage in point of form is substantially the same as due celebration, and in the case of a marriage in England no further proof is needed except that the persons married were not within the prohibited degrees, or were not already married. If the defence seeks to defeat the validity of the marriage by setting up an earlier and subsisting marriage of one of the parties, they must prove it. Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 54: R. v. Millis, 10 Cl. & F. 504; 8 Eng. Rep. 844.

It was decided in R. v. Millis (supra) that by the common law of England a marriage between British subjects is void unless solemnized in the presence of a person in holy orders or episcopally ordained in the Anglican, Greek, or Roman Churches, and therefore that all marriages not so solemnized in those parts of the British dominions to which the Marriage Act, 26 G. 2, c. 33 (rep.), did not extend, were void, and would not subject the parties, if they afterwards contracted a second marriage in the lifetime of both parties, to the penalties of bigamy. The decision in R. v. Millis has been much doubted, but binds English courts in cases where a statutory authority for the form of marriage in question does not exist. See Dicey, Conflict of Laws (2nd ed.), 621, note (i). See also Lautour v. Teesdale, 8 Taunt. 830: Re McLoughlin, 1 L. R. Ir. 421. A priest in holy orders cannot lawfully solemnize a marriage between himself and another person. Beamish v. Beamish, 9 H. L. C. 274; 11 Eng. Rep. 735.

A marriage is valid at common law if celebrated on a British ship at sea by an episcopally-ordained minister; Culling v. Culling [1896] Prob. 116; 63 L. J. (P.) 59: Du Moulin v. Druitt, 13 Ir. C. L. Rep. 212; or on a British ship in accordance with the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 23); or within the lines of the British army in a foreign country, if celebrated by an episcopally-ordained minister and if one party is subject to military law.

R. v. Brampton (Inhabitants), 10 East, 282 : Burn v. Farrar, 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 369 : Ruding v. Smith, 2 Id. 371; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1053 : Waldegrave Peerage Claim, 4 Cl. & F. 649. Such a marriage is also valid if celebrated as prescribed by the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892, s. 22.

A marriage abroad between British subjects is not valid at common law if celebrated before a layman (Catherwood v. Caslon, 13 M. & W. 261; but see Catterall v. Catterall, 1 Rob. Eccl. 304; 3 Id. 580 : Burt v. Burt, 29 L. J. (Matr.) 133); but may be validly celebrated by a marriage officer under the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 23). As to forms and regulations, see Stat. Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 8, tit. Marriage, p. 36.

To be valid the marriage, if contracted in England, must have been celebrated in a manner recognized by the law of England and between persons capable of contracting marriage, and who might lawfully intermarry; and if contracted elsewhere must have been according to the lex loci contractûs, or if contracted abroad must be valid under English law as to such marriages so contracted (55 & 56 Vict. c. 23, s. 19), or if celebrated in England not in accordance with English law, then only if celebrated in a foreign embassy or embassy chapel between subjects of the ambassador's sovereign. Ruding v. Smith, 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 371; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1066 : Pertreis v. Tondear, 1 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 136. The latter class of marriage is treated as extra-territorial. Dicey, Conflict of Laws (2nd ed.), 618 et seq.

Consent.]—It is not necessary in order to establish the validity of a marriage in England between parties, of whom one or both are minors, to prove that the consent of parent or guardian required by law has been given. See Marriage Act, 1823 (4 G. 4, c. 76), s. 14 : R. v. Birmingham, 8 B. & C. 29 : Marriage Registration Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 119), s. 17, which applies to marriages celebrated under that Act or the Acts of 1836 (6 & 7 W. 4. c. 85), 1837 (7 W. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 22), and 1840 (3 & 4 Vict. c. 72) : Prowse v. Spurway, 46 L. J. (Prob.) 49. In the case of an illegitimate minor for whom no guardian has been appointed, no consent has ever been needed. Horner v. Horner, 1 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 337 : Priestley v. Hughes, 11 East, 1 (and see 4 G. 4, c. 76, ss. 14, 16, 17.). In the case of a marriage in a foreign country where the consent of parents, etc., is necessary for a valid marriage, it is submitted that such consent must be proved on a prosecution in England for bigamy.

If the marriage was celebrated in England, under English law, between foreigners not domiciled here, and in defiance of their national law, it would seem to be valid for purposes of a prosecution for bigamy. But this cannot be treated as absolutely settled. See Sottomayor v. De Barros, 5 P. D. 94; 49 L. J. (P. D. & A.) 1 : Scott v. Att.-Gen., 11 P. D. 128; 55 L. J. (P. D. & A.) 57 : Warter v. Warter, 15 P. D. 152; 59 L. J. (P. D. & A.) 87 : Ogden v. Ogden [1908] P. 46; 77 L. J. (P.) 34.

Effect of marriage in false name or without due notice.]—Under the Marriage Act, 1823 (4 G. 4, c. 76, s. 22), in order to invalidate a marriage for want of due publication of the banns, the misdescription in the banns must be knowingly and wilfully consented to by both parties. The rule under Lord Hardwicke's Act (26 G. 2, c. 33, rep.) was different. See R. v. Tibshelf, 1 B. & Ad. 190 : R. v. Wroxton, 4 B. & Ad. 640 : R. v. Clarke, 10 Cox, 474; 15 W. R. 796. Upon a prosecution for bigamy it appeared that the first marriage was by banns, and that the prisoner on procuring the publication of the banns fraudulently misstated the name of his intended wife, and that she was married in that name. There being no affirmative evidence that the woman was unaware of the misstatement, it was held that the first marriage was void. R. v. Kay, 16 Cox, 292, Huddleston, B.; sed quære. Under the same enactment, to invalidate a marriage for want of a licence, it must be established affirmatively that at the time the ceremony was solemnized both the parties were cognizant of the fact that the licence had not issued, and, knowing that fact, that they wilfully intermarried. Greaves v. Greaves, 41 L. J. (P. & M.) 66. To render a marriage invalid within 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85, s. 42, which enacts, "that if any persons shall knowingly and wilfully intermarry under the provisions of this Act (inter alia), without due notice to the superintendent registrar, the marriage of such persons shall be null and void," it must be contracted with a knowledge by both parties that no due notice had been given; and therefore when one of the parties under s. 4 of the Act, which requires that the notice shall state (inter alia) the name and surname of each of the parties intending marriage, gave a notice stating therein a false christian name for such party, but it did not appear that that was done with the knowledge of the other party, the marriage was held to be valid. R. v. Rea, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 365; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 92 : and see Re Knox, 23 L. R. Ir. 542 : R. v. Clarke (supra). So also where a marriage notice given under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 119 was false to the knowledge of both parties as to the name of the woman and in other respects, the marriage was held to be valid. Re Rutter [1907] 2 Ch. 592; 77 L. J. (Ch.) 34.

Scotch marriages.]—As to what is necessary to constitute a valid marriage in Scotch law, see R. v. Graham, 2 Lew. 97 : R. v. Savage, 13 Cox, 178 : Dalrymple v. Dalrymple (ante, p. 1298); Ruding v. Smith, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1053; 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 371, 376 : Ilderton v. Ilderton, 2 H. Bl. 145 : Crompton v. Bearcroft, Bull. (N. P.) 113 : R. v. Povey, Dears. 32; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 19 : R. v. Topping, Dears. 647; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 72; Fraser on Husband and Wife (2nd ed.). Gretna Green marriages were treated as valid in England until 1856, when they were made invalid unless celebrated in compliance with 19 & 20 Vict. c. 96. Crompton v. Bearcroft (supra) : Lawford v. Davis, 4 P. D. 61; 47 L. J. (P. D. & A.) 38. The validity of a Scotch marriage must be proved by an expert in Scots law. R. v. Povey, Dears. 32; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 19.

Irish marriages.]—In Ireland marriages between Protestant Episcopalians, or where one party is such, are regulated by 33 & 34 Vict. c. 110; between Presbyterians, by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 81; between Roman Catholics, by the law of their Church; R. v. Orgill, 9 C. & P. 80; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 81, s. 3; or in case of mixed marriages, by 33 & 34 Vict. c. 49, and 33 & 34 Vict. c. 110 : and see Re Knox, 23 L. R. Ir. 542. These statutes override the decision in R. v. Harley, Carr. Supp. 254. As to the view of the Irish courts as to Irish law. see R. v. Fanning, 17 Ir. C. L. R. 289; 10 Cox, 411 (C. C. R.) : disapproved in R. v. Allen, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 367; 47 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 97 : and in R. v. Wright, 28 Ir. L. T. R. 131, which followed R. v. Allen, supra: R. v. Griffin. 14 Cox, 308; 4 L. R. Ir. 497; and as to mixed marriages, see R. v. Sunderland, 2 Lew. 109.

Foreign marriages.]—In addition to proof of celebration, expert evidence as to the validity of the marriage must be called. R. v. Naguib [1917] 1 K. B. 359; 86 L. J. (K. B.) 709; 81 J. P. 116; 25 Cox 712; 12 Cr. App. R. 187. And this applies equally to the defendant who relies on a foreign marriage as a defence to the charge of bigamy. Id. Marriages between Christians in the Ottoman empire are valid if in accordance with the ecclesiastical law of their communion. Parapano v. Happaz [1894] A. C. 165. But such a marriage abroad between persons domiciled in England would appear to be insufficient to support a prosecution for bigamy. Mette v. Mette. 28 L. J. (Matr.) 117; 1 Sw. & Tr. 416; Dicey, Conflict of Laws (2nd ed.), 633.

Colonial marriages.]—The validity of marriages in a British possession should be proved by an expert in the law of the colony (see ante, p. 405, and Westlake v. Westlake [1910] P. 167; 79 L. J. (P.) 36) except in the case of Church of England marriages. Perry v. Perry [1920] P. 361.

Void and voidable marriages.]—A marriage between persons within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity is absolutely void under Lord Lyndhurst's Act (5 & 6 W. 4, c. 54) if celebrated in England; R. v. Chadwick. 11 Q. B. 173; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 33; 2 Cox, 381; or if celebrated abroad between British subjects who at the time of celebration were domiciled in England. Re De Wilton [1900] 2 Ch. 481: Brook v. Brook, 9 H. L. C. 193; 11 Eng. Rep. 703. It would seem that if a marriage was validly celebrated in the country of the husband's domicile between persons who are within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity according to English law, the parties would be indictable in England on a second marriage there, as the first marriage would be valid in England for succession to personalty (Brook v. Brook, supra); though not for succession to realty. In 1898 a domiciled Englishwoman went through a ceremony of marriage in England with P., a domiciled Frenchman. This marriage was annulled by the French Court in 1901, and P. subsequently married a Frenchwoman in France. In 1904 the Englishwoman went through a ceremony of marriage in England with O., a domiciled Englishman, describing herself as a widow. Held, that the lex loci contractus must prevail, and that this later marriage was bigamous and must be annulled at the suit of O. Ogden v. Ogden [1908] P. 46; 77 L. J. (P.) 34. Proof of a marriage which is voidable merely, will support an indictment for bigamy. 3 Co. Inst. 88. Thus a marriage by a minor in Ireland, without consent, which by the Irish Marriage Act was voidable only within a year, will support a conviction for bigamy, if the marriage is not vacated (R. v. Jacobs, 1 Mood.

140), and the same rule applies to a marriage voidable for impotence of one of the parties. B., alias A. v. B., 27 L. R. Ir. 587, 608. But it is otherwise if the marriage is not voidable merely, but void; as, for instance, if a woman marries A., and in the lifetime of A. marries B.; and after the death of A., and whilst B. is alive, she marries C., she cannot be indicted for bigamy, in her marriage with C., because her marriage with B. was a mere nullity. 1 Hale, 693. And so if a man marries A., and in the lifetime of A. marries B., and afterwards in the lifetime of A. and B., marries C., he cannot be indicted for bigamy in marrying C., his wife "B." being then alive, because the marriage with B. was void. See R. v. Willshire, 6 Q. B. D. 366; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 57. So the marriage of an idiot, or of a lunatic not in a lucid interval, is void, because he is deemed in law incapable of entering into such a contract, 1 Bl. Com. 438, 439 : Durham (Earl) v. Durham (Countess), 10 P. D. 80. The law on this subject is fully considered in Wood Renton on Lunacy, 17-28. If a boy under fourteen or a girl under twelve contracts matrimony it is void, unless both husband and wife consent to and confirm the marriage after the minor arrives at the age of consent. Co. Litt. 79. See R. v. Gordon, R. & R. 48.

In 1864 W. married A. In 1868 he was charged with bigamy in marrying B in 1868, his wife A. being then alive, and was on such charge convicted. In 1879 he married C., and in 1880, C. being then alive, he married D. Afterwards, upon a charge of bigamy in marrying D., C. being then alive, W. was convicted, it being held by the presiding judge that there was no evidence that A. was alive when W. married C., or that the marriage with C. was invalid by reason of A. being then alive. It was held that the conviction could not be sustained, as the question should have been left to the jury whether upon the above facts A. was alive or not when W. married C. R. v. Willshire, 6 Q. B. D. 366; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 57. See also R. v. Lumley, infra.

3. That the first marriage was subsisting.]—On the trial of an indictment for bigamy the prosecution must prove the fact that the first wife (or husband) was alive at the date of the second marriage. This may be done by some one who was acquainted with him or her, or saw him or her at the time of the second marriage or afterwards, or by his or her production in court and identification as the first husband or wife. The existence of the first husband or wife at a period antecedent to the second marriage may or may not afford a reasonable inference that he or she was living at the time of the second marriage. If, for example, it was proved that he or she was in good health on the day preceding the second marriage, the inference would be strong, almost irresistible, that he or she was living on the day of the second marriage, and the jury would in all probability find that he or she was so. If, on the other hand, it was proved that he or she was in a dying condition on the day preceding the second marriage, and nothing further was proved, they would probably decline to draw the inference that he or she was living on the day of the second marriage. The question is entirely for the jury, and the law makes no presumption either way. R. v. Lumley, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 196; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 86. Therefore, where, on the trial of a woman for bigamy, the proof was that the second marriage took place in 1847, and that the first husband had been last seen alive in 1843, and the judge directed the jury that, there being no circumstances leading to any reasonable inference that he had died, he must be presumed to have been living at the date of the second marriage, this direction was held to be erroneous, and the jury having found the prisoner guilty, the conviction was quashed. Id. See also R. v. Willshire, ante, p. 1302.

Though the defendant cannot be convicted unless the jury are satisfied that the defendant knew that the first wife (or husband) was alive, the prosecution need not as a general rule prove this affirmatively. R. v. Jones, 11 Cox, 358: R. v. Ellis, 1 F. & F. 309: and see post, p. 1305.

The defence may prove that the first marriage was validly dissolved before the celebration of the second. See post, p. 1305.

A marriage is a subsisting marriage even after a decree nisi for its dissolution and until the decree is made absolute. Hulse v. Hulse, L. R. 2 P. & D. 259; 40 L. J. (N. S.) P. & M. 51.

4. The subsequent marriage.]—The prosecutor must prove the defendant's subsequent marriage with M. Y. (i.e., that the defendant went through a form of marriage with M. Y.). Though the subsequent marriage would have been void, as for consanguinity or the like, the defendant is guilty of bigamy. R. v. Brawn, 1 C. & K. 144.

Where a person already bound by an existing marriage goes through a form of marriage known to and recognized by the law as capable of producing a valid marriage, for the purpose of a pretended and fictitious marriage, the case is not the less within the statute (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57, ante, p. 1292) by reason of any special circumstances, which independently of the bigamous character of the marriage may constitute a legal disability in the particular parties, or make the form of marriage resorted to specially inapplicable to their individual case. R. v. Allen, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 367, 369; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 101. And therefore where A., having a wife living, married another woman, to whom he stood within the prohibited degrees of affinity, so that the second marriage, even if not bigamous, would have been void under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 54, s. 2, he was held to be guilty of bigamy. Id. (a).

Under the Act of James I. the second marriage must have been proved to have taken place in England; for it is the second marriage which constitutes the offence ((1 Hale, 692, 693); but under the present enactment (ante, p. 1292) it is immaterial whether the second marriage takes place in England, or elsewhere, provided that, if the second marriage takes place out of England, the defendant is a subject of his Majesty. Earl Russell's case [1901] A. C. 446; 70 L. J. (K. B.) 998; 20 Cox, 51. The celebration of the second marriage is proved in the same manner as that of the first (ante, pp. 1293 et seq.). Proof of marriage merely by evidence of acknowledgment, cohabitation, or reputation is insufficient. 1 Hawk. c. 42, s. 9 (and see ante, p. 1293).

The offence will be complete though the defendant assumes a fictitious name at the second marriage. R. v. Allison, R. & R. 109. And where, upon an indictment for marrying Anna T., the defendant's first wife being alive, it appeared that her name was not Anna but Susanna; but the defendant wrote her name Anna in the note for the publication of banns, and signed the register in which she was so called; it was held, that, although her name might not be Anna, he could not defend himself on the ground that he did not marry Anna T. R. v. Edwards, R. & R. 283. So, also, where the second wife was married by the name of Eliza Thick, which name she had assumed when the banns were published, purposely, that she might not be known to be the person intended (her name being Eliza Brown), Gurney, B., held it to be no answer to the charge. R. v. Penson, 5 C. & P. 412. And a man who, being married, marries a woman after stating a false name in his notice to the registrar without it appearing that she knew of that fact at the time, is guilty of bigamy. R. v. Rea, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 365; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 92.

Evidence for the Defence.

The first wife or husband is a competent witness for the defence, and may be called on the application of the defendant. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (ante, pp. 458 et seq.).

The following are good defences to an indictment for bigamy :—

1. Seven years' absence.]—That the wife or husband of the party indicted has been "continually absent from the other for the space of seven years then last past, and has not been known to the other to be living within that time" (i.e., has not been known at any period during the seven years to be alive, R. v. Cullen, 9 C. & P. 681). 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57 (ante, p. 1292). Where the defendant's first wife had left him sixteen years, and it was proved by the second wife that she had known him for nine years living as a single man, and had never heard of the first wife, who it appeared had been living seventeen miles from where the defendant (a poor labouring man) resided; he was held entitled to an acquittal under this proviso. R. v. Jones, C. & Mar. 614. On the trial of a woman for bigamy, whose first husband had been absent from her for more than seven years, the jury found that they had no evidence that, at the time of her second marriage, she knew that he was alive; but that she had the means of acquiring knowledge of that fact, had she chosen to make use of them. It was held that upon this finding the conviction could not be supported. R. v. Briggs, Dears. & B. 98; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 7. See R. v. Dane, 1 F. & F. 323: R. v. Cross, Id. 510. As to presumptions in favour of the accused in such cases, see R. v. Twyning, 2 B. & Ald. 386.

Where, on a trial for bigamy, absence for seven years is proved, it is for the prosecution to show that the prisoner knew his wife to be alive at some time during the seven years, and if they fail in doing so, the prisoner is entitled to an acquittal. R. v. Curgerwen, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 1; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 58: R. v. Heaton, 3 F. & F. 819. R. v. Lund, 16 Cr. App R. 31. But where on the trial of an indictment for bigamy, it was proved that the prisoner had married W. in 1865, and lived with her after the marriage, but for how long was not known; that in 1882, W. being still alive, prisoner had gone through the form of marriage with another woman, but there was no evidence as to the prisoner and W. having ever separated, or as to when, if separated, they last saw each other, it was held that the prisoner was rightly convicted. R. v. Jones, 11 Q. B. D. 118; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 96; 15 Cox, 284.

2. Bonâ fide belief of death.]—That the prisoner, even though the seven years have not elapsed before the second marriage, at the time of the second marriage, in good faith and on reasonable grounds, believed that his first wife was dead. R. v. Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168; 58 L. J. (M. C.) 97; 16 Cox, 629. But such bonâ fide belief is not sufficient unless proper and reasonable inquiries have in fact been made by the prisoner. R. v. Thomson [1905] 70 J. P. 6, Bosanquet, Common Serjeant. (a) In R. v. Faulkes, 19 T. L. R. 250; 114 L. T. J. 383, 413, 439. Kennedy, J., held that the fact that the prisoner had wilfully deserted his first wife did not deprive him of this defence. (b)

3. Dissolution of marriage.]—That, before the second marriage, the party indicted was divorced from the bond of the first marriage. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57 (ante, p. 1292). The English courts will accept as valid a divorce a vinculo granted by any competent court of the country in which the husband was bonâ fide domiciled at the time of the grant of the decree, but will treat as invalid divorces granted by a court having jurisdiction only by reason of the so-called "matrimonial domicile," or when resort has been had to the jurisdiction merely for the purpose of divorce. Le Mesurier v. Le Mesurier [1895] A. C. 517; 64 L. J. (P. C.) 97: Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55; 37 L. J. (N. S.) Ch. 433: Green v. Green [1893] P. 89; 62 L. J. (P.) 112: Harvey v. Farnie, 8 App. Cas. 43; 52 L. J. (P.) 33. The grounds of divorce in the state where the husband was domiciled when he obtained the decree need not be those recognized by English law, but the decree must have been obtained in good faith, and without fraud or collusion. See Armitage v. Att.-Gen. [1906] P. 135: Bater v. Bater [1906] P. 209. In R. v. Lolley, R. & R. 237; 2 Cl. & F. 567 n.; it had been resolved by the judges that "no sentence or Act of any foreign country or any state can dissolve an English marriage a vinculo matrimonii for grounds on which it is not liable to be dissolved a vinculo matrimonii in England." But this resolution was criticized, if not overruled in Harvey v. Farnie (supra), and it was pointed out in the judgment of the Court of Appeal in that case (6 P. D. 35) that the Scotch divorce a vinculo, on the ground of the husband's adultery, which in R. v. Lolley was held to be invalid in England, was that of persons whose marriage had not only been solemnized in England, but whose domicile at the time of the divorce was English, so that the rule as above laid down in R. v. Lolley went much further than, and was not necessary to support, the actual decision in that case. See also Le Mesurier v. Le Mesurier [1895] A. C. 517 (ante, p. 1305); 64 L. J. (P. C.) 97; and Bater v. Bater [1906] P. 209, 229, where R. v. Lolley was considered. A bonâ fide belief on reasonable grounds that the accused has been divorced when in fact he has not, affords no defence in law to a charge of bigamy, though it may afford good reason for the infliction of a nominal punishment. R. v. Wheat and Stocks [1921] 2 K. B. 119; 90 L. J. (K. B.) 583; 85 J. P. 203; 37 T. L. R. 417; 124 L. T. 820; 15 Cr. App. R. 134.

4. Nullity of first marriage.]—That the former marriage was absolutely null and void by reason of the consanguinity or affinity of the parties (ante, p. 1301), or because of the incapacity of one or both of the parties to contract the marriage by reason of a prior subsisting marriage; Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 54: R. v. Millis, 10 Cl. & F. 534; or of non-age or lunacy (ante, pp. 1301, 1302), or that the former marriage was declared to be void by the sentence of a court of competent jurisdiction. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57. The corresponding clause of 1 Jac. 1, c. 11, s. 3 (rep.), was held not to extend to the sentence of an ecclesiastical court in a cause of jactitation; Duchess of Kingston's case, 20 St. Tr. 355; 3 Sm. L. C. (11th ed.) 731, 739 (see ante, p. 426); and even sentences within this clause of the Act may be impeached on the part of the Crown, upon the ground of fraud or collusion. Id. It has been pointed out (ante, p. 1301) that it is not enough for the defence to prove the first marriage voidable. (a)

The proof of a prior subsisting marriage lies on the prisoner so soon as the first and second marriages are proved, R. v. Thomson, 70 J. P. 6, Bosanquet, Common Serjeant. The prisoner's belief in the existence of such prior marriage affords him no defence. R. v. Wheat and Stocks, supra.

(ii.) OFFENCES AGAINST THE MARRIAGE ACTS.

As to liability of the clergy to prosecution for refusing to celebrate a marriage according to the directions of 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85, and as to the requisites of indictment and evidence in such cases, see R. v. James, 2 Den. 1; 3 C. & K. 167; 19 L. (a) In the United States it has been held no defence to a charge of bigamy that the defendant by his religion was under an obligation to commit polygamy. See Reynolds v. U. S. [1878] 98 U. S. 145, where a woman was held to have been rightly convicted of bigamy. But if the first marriage was non-Christian, a second marriage would not be bigamy (see ante, p. 1297).

Sect. 2.

PUBLIC NUISANCE.

Common Law.

Every person is guilty of a misdemeanor at common law, known as common nuisance, who (a) does an act not warranted by law, or (b) omits to discharge a legal duty, if the effect of the act or omission is to endanger the life, health, property, morals, or comfort of the public, or to obstruct the public in the exercise or enjoyment of rights common to all his Majesty's subjects. 2 Chit. Cr. L. 565; 1 Hawk. c. 75; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.), p. 140: Hubert v.

Groves, 1 Esp. 147, and earlier cases there collected : Wilkes v. Hungerford Market Co., 2 Bing. (N. C.) 281 : Barber v. Penley [1893] 2 Ch. 447; 62 L. J. (Ch.) 623. It is immaterial whether the annoyance arises from noise, stench, unwholesomeness, or interference with public comfort or convenience. See Att.-Gen. v. Keymer Brick & Tile Co., 67 J. P. 431; 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1833 et seq.

If the legal duty does not exist at common law, and a particular penalty is imposed by the statute creating the duty. the remedy by indictment for common nuisance would seem to be excluded. Bulbrook v. Goodere, 3 Burr. 1768, 1770; and cf. Saunders v. Holborn District Board [1895] 1 Q. B. 64; 61 L. J. (Q. B.) 101.

The object with which the act or omission is done or made is immaterial if the probable result is to affect injuriously, in any of the ways above stated, the public (R. v. Moore, 3 B. & Ad. 184 : R. v. Carlile, 6 C. & P. 636 : Barber v. Penley [1893] 2 Ch. 447; 62 L. J. (Ch.) 623); or any appreciable part of it (R. v. Lloyd, 4 Esp. 200), and if the effect is such, the nuisance cannot be legalized by long continuance. Dewell v. Saunders, Cro. Jac. 490 : R. v. Cross, 3 Camp. 227 : Foster v. Warblington District Council [1906] 1 K. B. 665; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 514. It is only in this respect, and in the quantum of annoyance, that public differs from private nuisance.

Many forms of nuisance can now be punished summarily under statutes or by laws, but with few, if any, exceptions the remedy by indictment is preserved. See 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33 (ante, p. 160).

Some acts which have been treated as nuisances are difficult to classify at all —i.e., the offences of eavesdropping; 1 Hawk. c. 61, s. 4; Burn's Justice (30th ed.), tit. Eavesdropping; being a common scold (communis rixatrix), 1 Hawk. c. 61, ss. 4, 15; 2 Russ. Cr. L. (7th ed.) 1841; 4 Bl. Comm. 109; night-walking; 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 58; refusal by a common innkeeper to admit traveller when he has accommodation. R. v. Rymer, 2 Q. B. D. 136; 46 L. J. (M. R. 158; 7 T. L. R. 135).

Public nuisances which are indictable may be thus classified :—

(a) Interference with comfort, enjoyment, or health (post, p. 1310).

(b) Acts dangerous to public safety (post, p. 1315).

(c) Acts injurious to public morals or decency (post, p. 1317).

(d) Unlawful treatment of dead bodies (post, p. 1345).

(e) Inteference with public rights of passage by land or water (post, p. 1347).

(a) NUISANCES TO PUBLIC COMFORT, ENJOYMENT, OR HEALTH.

Statutes.

1 & 2 G. 4, c. 41 (Steam Engine Furnaces Act, 1821), s. 1.—Costs of prosecution.]—Whereas great inconvenience has arisen, and a great degree of injury has been and is now sustained by his Majesty's subjects, in various parts of the United Empire, from the improper construction as well as from the negligent use of furnaces employed in the working of engines by steam: and whereas by law every such nuisance, being of a public nature, is abateable as such by indictment; but the expense attending the prosecution thereof has deterred parties suffering thereby from seeking the remedy given by law: be it therefore enacted, etc., that it shall and may be lawful for the Court by which judgment ought to be pronounced in case of conviction of any such indictment to award such costs as shall be deemed proper and reasonable to the prosecutor or prosecutors, to be paid by the party or parties so convicted as aforesaid, such award to be made either before or at the time of pronouncing final judgment as to the Court may seem fit. [This section is not repealed by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10. See that Act, ante, pp. 267 et seq.]

Sect. 2.—Order to prevent repetition of nuisance.]—If it shall appear to the Court by which judgment ought to be pronounced, in case of conviction on any such indictment, that the grievance may be remedied by altering the construction of the furnace so employed in the working of engines by steam, it shall be lawful for the Court, without the consent of the prosecutor, to make such order touching the premises, as shall be by the said Court thought expedient for preventing the nuisance in future, before passing final sentence upon the defendant or defendants so convicted. (See 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1839.)

Sect. 3.—Exemptions from the Act.]—Provided always, that the provisions of this Act, so far as they relate to the payment of costs and the alteration of furnaces, shall not extend or be construed to extend to the owners, or proprietors, or occupiers of any furnaces of steam-engines erected solely for the purpose of working mines of different descriptions, or employed solely in the smelting of ores and minerals, or in the manufacturing of the produce of such ores or minerals, on or immediately adjoining the premises where they are raised.

Sect. 111.]—The provisions of this Act relating to nuisances shall be deemed to be in addition to, and not to abridge or affect, any right remedy or proceeding under any other provision of this Act or under any other Act, or at law or in equity. Provided that no person shall be punished for the same offence both under the provisions of this Act relating to nuisances, and under any other law or enactment. Cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33 (ante, p. 160). [Provisions similar to those of ss. 91, 111, are contained in the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 138.]

Indictment for carrying on an Offensive Trade. (Common Law.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Public nuisance.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, and on other days between that date and the —— day of ——, in the county of London, caused a nuisance to the public by allowing offensive or unwholesome smells to be emitted from furnaces or boilers in which tripe was being burnt or boiled by the said A. B., which nuisance the said A. B. still continues.

Examples: for using a shop in a public market as a slaughter-house, Cro. Circ. Comp. 301, and see 4 Went. 224; and R. v. Watts, 2 C. & P. 486;—for erecting a manufactory for hartshorn, Cro. Circ. Comp. 311;—for erecting a privy near the highway, 3 Went. 225;—for making sulphuric acid near a highway, R. v. White, 1 Burr. 333;—for polluting water, R. v. Medley, 6 C. & P. 292;—for placing putrid carrion near the highway, 4 Went. 213;—for keeping a corpse unburied, R. v. Vann, 2 Den. 331; 21 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 39 (see post, p. 1345);—for keeping animals (dogs or fowls) to the annoyance of the public by their noise or the unwholesomeness of their kennels or coops;—for keeping hogs near a public street and feeding them with offal, Cro. Circ. Comp. 305, and see 2 Ld. Raym. 1163;—for bringing a horse diseased with glanders into a public place, to the danger of infecting the King's subjects, R. v. Henson, Dears. 24;—for exposing in the public streets a person infected with smallpox or any infectious disease, R. v. Vantandillo, 4 M. & Sel. 73: Metropolitan Asylums Managers v. Hill, 6 App. Cas. 193, 204; 50 L. J. (Q. B.) 353, Lord Blackburn.

Burning arsenic so as to emit poisonous fumes is indictable. R. v. Garland, 5 Cox, 165: and see the Alkali, &c., Works Regulation Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 14).

Misdemeanor at common law: fine, and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246); and judgment for "prostration" or abatement if the nuisance is alleged and proved to be then continuing. See R. v. Incledon, 13 East, 164. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 18, by which any order of quarter sessions may be removed into the High Court (K. B. D.) and enforced as a rule of court, does not apply to an order of quarter sessions to abate a nuisance made after the trial of an indictment for such nuisance. R. v. Bateman, 8 E. & B. 584; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 95.

Evidence

Prove that the defendant erected the boiler in question, or that he continued it after being erected by some other person; prove that he used it for the purposes alleged in the indictment; prove that the smoke or smell arising from it was either injurious to health, or so offensive as to detract sensibly from the enjoyment of life and property in its neighbourhood; see R. v. White, 1 Burr. 333; it is not necessary that the smells produced by it should be injurious to health, it is sufficient if they are offensive to the senses; R. v. Neil, 2 C. & P. 485 : Malton Local Board v. Malton Farmers' Trading Co., 4 Ex. D. 302; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 90 : Bishop Auckland L. B. v. Bishop Auckland Iron Co., 10 Q. B. D. 138; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 38. Prove also that it is in a populous neighbourhood, or near a highway; R. v. Pappineau, 2 Str. 686; for its being a nuisance depends in a great measure upon the number of houses and the concourse of people in its vicinity, which is a matter of fact to be determined by the jury. R. v. White (supra). As to the quantum of annoyance necessary to justify proceedings, see St. Helens Smelting Co. v. Tipping, 11 H. L. C. 642; 11 Eng. Rep. 1483; 35 L. J. (Q. B.) 66. Nuisance by noise, if sufficiently great, is indictable (see Walker v. Brewster, L. R. 5 Eq. 25; 37 L. J. (Ch.) 33 : Bellamy v. Wells, 39 W. R. 158; 7 T. L. R. 135 : Christie v. Davey [1893] 1 Ch. 316; 62 L. J. (Ch.) 339), unless made in exercise of statutory powers and without negligence. Harrison v. Southwark and Vauxhall W. W. Co. [1891] 2 Ch. 409; 60 L. J. (Ch.) 630 : Colwell v. Mayor, etc., of St. Pancras [1904] 1 Ch. 707; 73 L. J. (Ch.) 275; 68 J. P. 286.

A distinction has been drawn between quiet and noisy neighbourhoods in considering whether the quantum of noise is sufficient to justify legal proceedings. Sturges v. Bridgman, 11 Ch. D. 852; 48 L. J. (Ch.) 875. But whether the noise amounts to a nuisance is a question of fact in each case, Polsue & Alfieri, Ltd. v. Rushmer [1907] A. C. 121; 76 L. J. (Ch.) 365.

It has been held that the defendant may prove that the business complained of as a nuisance was set up before the houses were built, or the roads constructed. R. v. Cross, 2 C. & P. 483. But in Hole v. Barlow, as reported in 27 L. J. (C. P.) 208, Byles, J., said that "it used to be thought that if a man knew there was a nuisance, and went and lived near it, he could not recover, because it was said it is he that goes to the nuisance, and not the nuisance to him. That used to be thought one hundred years ago to be the law. That, however, is not the law now." But proof of its long continuance may justify a finding that it is not a nuisance in fact. Id. In R. v. Russell, 6 B. & C. 566; 9 D. & R. 566; 5 L. J. (K. B.) 221; it was said if a private person who goes to a nuisance may maintain an action in respect of it, it is difficult to see why, where the public go to a nuisance, an indictment may not be sustained for its continuance : or in a neighbourhood where there were already established other trades, etc., emitting smells extremely offensive or insalubrious, and which smells were not perceptibly increased by the alleged nuisance in question. R. v. Neville, Peake (3rd ed.), 125 : R. v. Watts, M. & M. 281. It is no defence to say that the alleged nuisance has existed for a number of years : for no length of time will legalize a public nuisance. Dewell v. Saunders, Cro. Jac. 490 : R. v. Cross (supra) : and see Weld v. Hornby, 7 East, 195, 199, Ellenborough, C.J. : Bliss v. Hall, 4 Bing. (N. C.) 183 : Foster v. Warblington District Council [1906] 1 K. B. 665; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 514; 7th Rep. Crim. Law Commissioners, 59. In R. v. Russell (supra), it was said that in judging of a public nuisance the public good it does might in some cases, where the public health was not concerned, be taken into consideration, to see if the public benefit outweighed the public annoyance; but this doctrine was overruled in R. v. Ward, 4 A. & E. 384; 5 L. J. (K. B.) 221, where it was held to be no answer to an indictment for a nuisance in a harbour, by erecting an embankment, that although the work was in some degree a hindrance to navigation, it was advantageous in a greater degree to the other uses of the port. See also the observations of Jessel, M.R., on R. v. Russell, in Att.-Gen. v. Terry, L. R. 9 Ch. 423, 426 n.: and see Att.-Gen. v. L. & N. W. R. [1900] 2 Q. B. 78; 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 26. R. v. Morris, 1 B. & Ad. 441: R. v. Tindall, 6 A. & E. 143; 6 L. J. (M. C.) 97: R. v. Randall, C. & Mar. 496: R. v. Betts, 16 Q. B. 1022: R. v. Train, 2 B. & S. 640; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 169; 9 Cox, 180. A statute may, however, authorize and legalise acts which would otherwise amount to a nuisance. Defendants were authorized by Act of Parliament to make a railway, which ran by the side of a highway, and to use locomotives upon the railway. Horses upon the highway were frightened by the locomotives, but it was held, by the Court of King's Bench, that the defendants were not liable to be indicted for a nuisance, as the Act of Parliament had given them unqualified authority to use the locomotives. R. v. Pease, 4 B. & Ad. 30; 2 L. J. (M. C.) 26. The authority of R. v. Pease was impugned by Bramwell, B., in Powell v. Fall, 5 Q. B. D. 597; 49 L. J. (Q. B.) 428, but appears to be fully established by the decisions of the House of Lords in Hammersmith, etc., Rail. Co. v. Brand, L. R. 4 H. L. 171; 38 L. J. (Q. B.) 265, and London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. v. Truman, 11 App. Cas. 45; 55 L. J. (Ch.) 354: Withington L. B. v. Mayor, etc., of Manchester [1893] 2 Ch. 19; 62 L. J. (Ch.) 393: Att.-Gen. v. Mayor, etc., of Nottingham [1904] 1 Ch. 673; 73 L. J. (Ch.) 512. But the statutory authority will not protect those who have it unless (1) it is given specifically or by necessary implication (Metrop. Asylums Managers v. Hill, 6 App. Cas. 193; 50 L. J. (Q. B.) 353, and cases above cited: Canadian Pacific Rail. Co. v. Parke [1899] A. C. 535; 68 L. J. (P. C.) 89); and (2) the manner of doing it follows the authority of the statute, and avoids causing a nuisance if it can be avoided by reasonable care. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. v. Truman, 11 App. Cas. 45; 55 L. J. (Ch.) 354; Beven, Negligence (3rd ed.); Craies on Statute Law (ed. 1907), 245 et seq. It is not unusual for a statute expressly to reserve liability to indictment for nuisance. This is done as to gasworks by the Gas Works Clauses Acts, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, s. 29) and 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 41, s. 9). See Att.-Gen. v. Gas Light and Coke Co., 7 Ch. D. 217; 47 L. J. (Ch.) 534: Jordeson v. Hull Gas Co. [1899] 2 Ch. 217; 68 L. J. (Ch.) 457: and as to electric lighting authorities by their provisional orders or special Acts, see Colwell v. Mayor, etc., of St. Pancras [1904] 1 Ch. 707; 73 L. J. (Ch.) 275; and as to the use of locomotives on highways by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 70, s. 13; 28 & 29 Vict. c. 83, s. 12 (post, p. 1352); and as to alkali works by 6 Edw. 7, c. 14.

The provisions for summary prosecution of nuisances under the Public Health Act, 1875, do not take away the remedy by indictment. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 111 (ante, p. 1310); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 76, s. 138 (London): Att.-Gen.

v. Logan [1891] 2 Q. B. 100. A summary conviction for causing noxious effluvia by a trade process has been held inadmissible in favour of the Crown on a subsequent indictment at common law for the same offence. R. v. Fairrie, 8 Cox, 66.

It was laid down in Hole v. Barlow, 4 C. B. (N. S.) 334; 27 L. J. (C. P.) 208, that an action does not lie for the reasonable use of a lawful trade in a convenient place, although it may annoy another. But this case was overruled by Bamford v. Turnley, 3 B. & S. 62, 66; 31 L. J. (Q. B.) 286 (Ex. Ch.). See also Cavey v. Leadbitter, 13 C. B. (N. S.) 470; 32 L. J. (C. P.) 104; St. Helens Smelting Co., Ltd. v. Tipping, 11 H. L. C. 642; 35 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 66: Shotts Iron Co. v. Inglis, 7 App. Cas. 518: Att.-Gen. v. Cole, [1901] 1 Ch. 205; 70 L. J. (Ch.) 148; Polsue & Alfieri, Ltd. v. Rushmer [1907] A. C. 121; 76 L. J. (Ch.) 365. These decisions appear to apply equally to indictments.

Where works are so carried on as to be a nuisance, it is no answer to an indictment against the master for the nuisance, that he did not personally superintend the works, and that he had given express orders to the workmen that they should be carried on in a mode which, if followed, would have prevented their causing a nuisance. R. v. Stephens, L. R. 1 Q. B. 702; 35 L. J. (Q. B.) 251; 11 Cox, 340. It was, however, held that an employer was not criminally responsible for a smoke nuisance caused by his servant using a furnace in a negligent manner, and that the employer could not be convicted under such circumstances of an offence under the Smoke Nuisance (Metropolis) Act (16 & 17 Vict. c. 128), s. 1 (rep.). Chisholm v. Doulton, 22 Q. B. D. 736; 58 L. J. (M. C.) 133 (and see ante, p. 25). That Act is repealed and superseded by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 76, s. 23.

Selling Food unfit for Human Consumption. (Common Law.)

The offence is now usually dealt with summarily under ss. 116-119 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), and in London under s. 47 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891. Under the latter section the defendant can elect to be indicted (see 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17, ante, p. 7). To expose for sale, or to have possession of, with intent to sell, meat unfit for food, is a nuisance at common law; Shillito v. Thompson, 1 Q. B. D. 12; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 18, and cases collected ante, p. 1287; and if death results from eating such meat, the seller may be indicted for manslaughter. R. v. Stevenson, 3 F. & F. 106; R. v. Kempson, 28 L. J. Newsp. 477 (ante, p. 888). It may be questioned whether the offence is a public nuisance or a common law cheat, as to which see ante, p. 721, and R. v. Roebuck, Dears. & B. 24; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 101 (ante, p. 713). If the latter, knowledge of the condition of the food is essential.

(b) ACTS DANGEROUS TO PUBLIC SAFETY.

Common Law.

Under this head fall such cases as keeping a fierce and unruly bull in a field crossed by a public footway, Cro. Circ. Comp. 310; keeping a ferocious dog unmuzzled, Cro. Circ. Comp. 311; baiting a bull in the highway, 4 Went. 213; keeping naphtha in a populous place in such quantities as to cause terror or danger, R. v. Lister, D. & B. 209; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 196 : see, too, Williams v. H. E. I. C., 3 East, 192; keeping gunpowder or other explosives in dangerous proximity to streets or houses, 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1855 n. : R. v. Taylor, 2 Str. 1167; allowing a house near a highway to be ruinous, R. v. Watts, 1 Salk. 357 : R. v. Watson, 2 Ld. Raym. 856; having an unfenced excavation near a highway, Hardcastle v. South Yorks Rail. Co., 28 L. J. (N. S.) 1 Ex. 139; 4 H. & N. 67 : Barnes v. Ward, 9 C. B. 392; 19 L. J. (N. S.) C. P. 195. Negligently blasting stone in a quarry, and thereby projecting large pieces of stone so as to endanger the safety of persons in houses and on the highways adjoining the quarry, is a misdemeanor indictable at common law. R. v. Mutters, L. & C. 491; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 22. As to allowing a quarry near a highway to be unfenced, see Hounsell v. Smith, 7 C. B. (N. S.) 731; 29 L. J. (C. P.) 203 : R. v. Clerk of Assize of Oxford Circuit [1897] 1 Q. B. 373; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 271; 18 Cox, 518. The making and selling of fireworks or throwing them about in the street was declared a common nuisance by 9 & 10 W. 3, c. 7 (rep.). R. v. Bennett, Bell, 1; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 27; 8 Cox, 74. Their manufacture is now regulated by the Explosives Act, 1875, and lighting them in a street is summarily punishable under s. 80 of that Act, but apparently without prejudice to a remedy by indictment where a nuisance is created. (See infra.) In R. v. Meade [1903] 19 T. L. R. 540. Wills, J., held an indictment good which contained a count for going abroad in a public street armed without lawful occasion so as to be a nuisance and terror to the public (and see ante, p. 1227).

Statutes.

Storage of petroleum.]—The Petroleum Acts, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 105), 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 47), and 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 67), which are to be read together, provide numerous penalties summarily recoverable for breach of their regulations as to storage, carriage, etc., of inflammable substances. The penalties are for the most part recoverable summarily (see 34 & 35 Vict. c. 105, s. 15), but s. 18 of the Act of 1871 provides "that nothing in this Act contained shall be deemed to exempt any person from any penalty to which he would otherwise be subject in respect of a nuisance." In the case of petroleum, etc., for the use of light locomotives, the Acts apply only subject to Home Office regulations under 59 and 60 Vict. c. 36, s. 5. See Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 8, tit. Locomotive, p. 3.

Storage of explosives.]—The Explosives Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 17), is "an Act to amend the law with respect to manufacturing, keeping, selling, carrying, and importing gunpowder, nitro-glycerine, and other explosive substances," and contains a variety of regulations on all these subjects, enforcing them by forfeitures and pecuniary penalties, with the alternative of imprisonment. In order to give a complete view of the subject, it would be necessary to insert the whole statute; but as the branch of law to which it relates is not likely, excepting in few cases, to form the subject of inquiry on indictment, as it may generally be enforced by courts of summary jurisdiction, it has not been thought desirable to do more than insert the following sections, which show when offences against the Act may, and when they must, be prosecuted by indictment.

Sect. 91.—Summary proceedings.]—Every offence under this Act may be prosecuted, and every penalty under this Act may be recovered, and all explosives and ingredients liable to be forfeited under this Act may be forfeited either on indictment or before a court of summary jurisdiction, in manner directed by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts. Provided that the penalty imposed by a court of summary jurisdiction shall not exceed one hundred pounds exclusive of costs, and exclusive of any forfeiture or penalty in lieu of forfeiture, and the term of imprisonment imposed by any such court shall not exceed one month. . . .

Sect. 92.—Election to be tried on indictment.]—Where a person is accused before a court of summary jurisdiction of any offence under this Act, the penalty for which offence as assigned by this Act, exclusive of forfeiture, exceeds one hundred pounds, the accused may, on appearing before the Court of summary jurisdiction, declare that he objects to being tried for such offence by a court of summary jurisdiction, and thereupon the Court of summary jurisdiction may deal with the case in all respects as if the accused were charged with an indictable offence, and not an offence punishable on summary conviction, and the offence may be prosecuted on indictment accordingly. (See ante, pp. 7, 8, and R. v. Chambers, 65 L. J. (M. C.) 214; 18 Cox, 401, ante, p. 1285).

Sect. 102.—. . . This Act shall not exempt any person from any indictment or other proceeding for a nuisance, or for an offence which is indictable at common law, or by any Act of Parliament other than this Act, so that no person be punished twice for the same offence. (See 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33, ante, p. 160).

When proceedings are taken before any court against any person in respect of any offence under this Act which is also an offence at common law, or by some Act of Parliament other than this Act, the Court may direct that, instead of such proceedings being continued, proceedings shall be taken for indicting such person at common law or under some Act of Parliament other than this Act. . . .

(c) ACTS INJURIOUS TO PUBLIC DECENCY, MORALS, OR ORDER.
OPEN AND NOTORIOUS LEWDNESS.

Common Law.

It is a misdemeanor indictable at common law publicly to expose the naked person. R. v. Sedley, 17 St. Tr. 155 n.; 1 Sid. 168; 1 Keb. 620; and see 1 East, P. C. 3: R. v. Gallard, 1 Sess. Cas. 231: R. v. Newcastle-on-Tyne Justices, 1 B. & Ad. 933: R. v. Rowed, 3 Q. B. 180; 11 L. J. (M. C.) 74 (see ante, p. 1048).

An indecent exposure, though in a place of public resort, if visible only by one person, is not indictable as a common nuisance. R. v. Webb, 1 Den. 338; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 39; 2 C. & K. 933; 3 Cox, 183: R. v. Watson, 2 Cox, 376: see R. v. Elliott, L. & C. 103: R. v. Farrell, 9 Cox, 446 (C. C. R. Ir.). An omnibus is a public place sufficient to support the indictment. R. v. Holmes, Dears. 207; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 122. In R. v. Orchard, 3 Cox, 248, an enclosed urinal, to which the public had free access, in a public market, was held not to be a public place. But in R. v. Harris, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 282; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 67, Bovill, C.J., said that he could not think that all the facts had been stated in the report of R. v. Orchard, and that he could not understand that case as reported. In R. v. Harris (supra) it was held, that a urinal open to the public and approached by a gate opening from a public footpath, but built in compartments, is such a public place as to make an act of indecency committed in the urinal and witnessed by two persons an indictable nuisance. It is not necessary that the exposure should be made in a place open to the public; it is sufficient if it is made where a number of persons may be offended by it, and several see it. R. v. Thallman, L. & C. 326; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 58; 9 Cox, 388. The prisoner was convicted of indecently exposing his person to divers subjects of the Queen in a certain public place, upon evidence showing that the place in question was out of sight of the public footpath, but was a place to which the prisoner had gone with several little girls, though without any legal right to go there, and was a place to which persons were in the habit of going without any strict legal right so to do, and that persons so going were never in any way hindered or interfered with. On a case reserved, the Court held that the conviction was correct, and that the jury were justified in finding that the place was public. R. v. Wellard, 14 Q. B. D. 63; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 14. Semble, that the offence of indecent exposure of the person may be indictable if committed before several persons, even if the place is not public. Id. (a) Men who bathe without any screen or covering, so near to a public footpath that exposure of their persons must necessarily occur, are guilty of an indictable nuisance. R. v. Reed, 12 Cox, 1, Cockburn, C.J.; and see 41 & 42 Vict. c. 14, s. 11. Nor is it any defence that there has been, so long as living memory extends, an usage so to bathe at the place, and that there has been no exposure beyond what is necessarily incidental to such bathing. *Id. Indictment against a Man for publicly exposing his Naked Person.

(a) In R. v. Madercine [1899] 20 N. S. W. Rep. (Law) 36, on a case reserved, it was held that exposure of the person on the verandah of a private house, in the presence of a number of children, was indictable at common law, and it seems to have been considered that the word "public" in the indictment was unnecessary. The Court relied on the dicta of the judges in R. v. Wellard, and on R. v. Bunyan, 1 Cox, 74, where a conviction took place on evidence that two persons had locked themselves in a room in a public-house, and had been seen behaving indecently through the window of another room by a servant, who fetched a constable.

(Common Law.)

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Exposing person.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, unlawfully, wilfully and publicly exposed his naked person in Oxford Street.

Misdemeanor at common law: fine and (or) imprisonment (ante, pp. 239, 246). Hard labour may be imposed: 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 29 (ante, p. 242; post, p. 1320).

The offence is now usually punished summarily under s. 4 of the Vagrancy Act, 1824 (5 G. 4, c. 83), where the intent is to insult any female; cf. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 54 (12); 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89, s. 28 (which is applied to urban districts by 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 171); and 41 & 42 Vict. c. 14, s. 11.

OBSCENE LIBELS, EXHIBITIONS, ETC.

Common Law.

Libels.]—The publication of any obscene libel is a misdemeanor punishable at common law on indictment or information. 1 Hawk. c. 73, s. 9: R. v. Curl, 2 Str. 788: R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 2574: R. v. Hicklin, L. R. 3 Q. B. 360; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 80. "The test of obscenity (a) is whether the tendency of the matter charged as obscenity is to deprave and corrupt those whose minds are open to such immoral influences and into whose hands a publication of this sort may fall." R. v. Hicklin, L. R. 3 Q. B. at p. 371; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 89, Cockburn, C.J.: R. v. Barraclough [1906] 1 K. B. 201, 211; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 77, Alverstone, C.J.

(a) "Obscene" is defined in the Oxford Dictionary, s.v., as "offensive to modesty," expressing or suggesting unchaste or lustful ideas, impure, indecent, lewd." See R. v. Beaver [1905] 9 Canada Cr. Cas. 415, 421, Osler, J. A.

In R. v. Thompson, 64 J. P. 456, a prosecution for publishing the Heptameron, Bosanquet, Common Serjeant, directed the jury to consider the book as a whole, as well as the extracts referred to in the particulars, and to consider the circumstances of the publication and the nature of the general business of the defendant before deciding whether the publication was with "intent to corrupt" public morals.

The obtaining and procuring of obscene prints, with intent to sell them, is a misdemeanor (see post, p. 1324); but the mere keeping of them with that intent is not; Dugdale v. R., 1 E. & B. 435; Dears. 64; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 50; but may be the subject of summary proceedings under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 83, s. 1 (post, p. 1320). The defendant inserted in a newspaper, of which he was editor, advertisements which, though not obscene in themselves, related, as he knew, to the sale of obscene books and photographs. A police officer wrote to the addresses given in the advertisements, and received from the advertisers, who were foreigners resident abroad, obscene books and photographs. It was held that the defendant was rightly convicted of causing and procuring obscene books and photographs to be sold and published. R. v. De Marny [1907] 1 K. B. 388; 76 L. J. (K. B.) 210; 71 J. P. 14.

The indiscriminate publication of a pamphlet, half of which relates to controversial questions which are not obscene, but the other half of which is obscene, as relating to impure acts and words, is a misdemeanor, and proper to be prosecuted as such, although the publisher does not sell the pamphlet for the purposes of gain, nor to prejudice good morals,—although the indiscriminate sale of it is calculated to have that effect,—but sells it as a member of a politico-religious society, to promote the objects of that society, and to expose what he deems to be the errors of the Church of Rome, and particularly the immorality of the confessional. R. v. Hicklin, ante, p. 1318: Steele v. Brannan, L. R. 7 C. P. 261; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 85. And the publication of an accurate report of a trial for the misdemeanor of publishing an obscene pamphlet, in which report such obscene pamphlet, which was in evidence on the trial, is fully set out, is not privileged on the ground of being a report of proceedings in a court of justice, but such publication of the trial is itself an indictable misdemeanor. Steele v. Brannan (supra). 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 3 (ante, p. 1241), which gives a modified protection to newspaper reports of judicial proceedings, and s. 4 of the same statute (ante, p. 1242), which gives a modified protection to newspaper reports of public meetings; both contain provisoes that nothing in those sections shall authorize the publication of any indecent matter. As to whether such a publication can in any case be justified, see Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), pp. 133, 134.

Exhibitions.]—The prisoners were indicted in one count for keeping a booth for the purpose of showing an indecent exhibition; in a second, for showing for gain an indecent exhibition in a booth; in a third, for showing an indecent exhibition in a public place. It was proved that during the Epsom races the prisoners kept a booth on Epsom Downs for the purpose of an indecent exhibition, that they invited people to enter, and that those who paid entered and saw an indecent exhibition. It was held that the prisoners had committed an indictable offence, and that it was well laid in the indictment. R. v. Saunders, 1 Q. B. D. 15; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 11; 13 Cox, 116. Where the exhibition is exposed to view in a street, road, highway, or public place, or in the window or other part of any shop or building situate in any street, etc., it is also punishable under s. 4 of the Vagrancy Act, 1824 (5 G. 4, c. 83), and s. 2 of the Vagrancy Act, 1838 (1 & 2 Vict. c. 38).

A herbalist who publicly exposes in his shop, on a highway, a picture of a man naked to his waist and covered with sores, is guilty of a nuisance although there is nothing immoral or indecent in the picture, and the motive for its exhibition is innocent. R. v. Grey, 4 F. & F. 73; and see R. v. Clark, 15 Cox, 170 (post, p. 1345).

Statutes.

14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 29.—When any person shall be convicted of . . . any public selling or exposing for public sale or to public view of any obscene book, print, picture, or other indecent exhibition, it shall be lawful for the Court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned for any term now warranted by law and also to be kept to hard labour during the whole or any part of such term of imprisonment. [Sending by post is not public selling or exposure within this section. R. v. Jackson, 3 Cr. App. R. 192.]

20 & 21 Vict. c. 83 (Obscene Publications Act, 1857: "Lord Campbell's Act"), s. 1.]—Search under warrant for, and destruction of, obscene prints, —"Whereas it is expedient to give additional powers for the suppression of the trade in obscene books, prints, drawings, and other obscene articles:" be it enacted as follows:

1. It shall be lawful for any metropolitan police magistrate, or other stipendiary magistrate, or for any two justices of the peace, upon complaint made before him or them upon oath that the complainant has reason to believe, and does believe, that any obscene books, papers, writings, prints, pictures, drawings, or other representations are kept in any house, shop, room, or other place within the limits of the jurisdiction of any such magistrate or justices, for the purpose of sale or distribution, exhibition for purposes of gain, lending upon hire, or being otherwise published for purposes of gain, which complainant shall also state upon oath that one or more articles of the like character have been sold, distributed, exhibited, lent, or otherwise published as aforesaid, at or in connection with such place so as to satisfy such magistrate or justices that the belief of the said complainant is well founded, and upon such magistrate or justices being also satisfied that any of such articles so kept for any of the purposes aforesaid are of such a character and description that the publication of them would be a misdemeanor and proper to be prosecuted as such, to give authority by special warrant to any constable or police officer into such house, shop, room, or other place, with such assistance as may be necessary, to enter in the daytime, and if necessary to use force, by breaking open doors or otherwise, and to search for and seize all such books, papers, writings, prints, pictures, drawings, or other representations as aforesaid found in such house, shop, room, or other place, and to carry all the articles so seized before the magistrate or justices issuing the said warrant, or some other magistrate or justices exercising the same jurisdiction; and such magistrate or justices shall thereupon issue a summons calling upon the occupier of the house or other place which may have been so entered by virtue of the said warrant to appear within seven days before such police, stipendiary magistrate, or any two justices in petty sessions for the district, to show cause why the articles so seized should not be destroyed; and if such occupier or some other person claiming to be the owner of the said articles shall not appear within the time aforesaid, or shall appear, and such magistrate or justices shall be satisfied that such articles or any of them are of the character stated in the warrant, and that such or any of them have been kept for any of the purposes aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the said magistrate or justices, and he or they are hereby required to order the articles so seized, except such of them as he or they may consider necessary to be preserved as evidence in some further proceeding, to be destroyed at the expiration of the time hereinafter allowed for lodging an appeal (see s. 4), unless notice of appeal as hereinafter mentioned be given, and such articles shall be in the meantime impounded; and if such magistrate or justices shall be satisfied that the articles seized are not of the character stated in the warrant or have not been kept for any of the purposes aforesaid, he or they shall forthwith direct them to be restored to the occupier of the house or other place in which they were seized. [A warrant or an order under the section is bad unless it states that the prints, etc., ordered to be destroyed are of such a character that the publication would be a misdemeanor fit to be prosecuted as such. Ex parte Bradlaugh, 3 Q. B. D. 509; 47 L. J. (M. C.) 107.]

Sect. 4.]—Appeal to quarter sessions within seven days by either party against order or determination of magistrate, etc.

8 Edw. 7, c. 48 (Post Office Act, 1908), s. 63.—Prohibition of sending by post . . . indecent prints, words, etc.]—(1) A person shall not send or attempt to send a postal packet which either—

(a) encloses explosives, etc. (ante, p. 583); or

(b) encloses any indecent or obscene print, painting, photograph, lithograph, engraving, book, or card, or of any indecent or obscene article, whether similar to the above or not; or

(c) has on the packet, or on the cover thereof, any words, marks, or designs of an indecent, obscene, or grossly offensive character.

(2) If any person acts in contravention of this section, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding ten pounds, and on conviction on indictment to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding twelve months.

(3) The detention in the Post Office of any postal packet on the ground of its being in contravention of this section shall not exempt the sender thereof from any proceedings which might have been taken if the packet had been delivered in due course of post. [This section re-enacts 47 & 48 Vict. c. 76, s. 4. For definition of postal packet, see s. 89, ante, p. 585. As to detention of packets, see s. 16 of the Act. As to soliciting another to commit an offence against this section, see s. 69, ante, p. 583, and R. v. De Marny, ante, p. 1319.]

7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 21 (Venereal Disease Act, 1917), s. 1.—Prevention of the treatment of venereal disease otherwise than by duly qualified persons.]—(1) In any area in which this section is in operation, a person shall not, unless he is a duly qualified medical practitioner, for reward either direct or indirect, treat any person for venereal disease or prescribe any remedy therefor, or give any advice in connection with the treatment thereof, whether the advice is given to the person to be treated or to any other person.—[Recommendation of a medicine, drug, &c., as "good" for venereal disease may amount to "advice" within the meaning of s. 1. R. v. Shadforth, 14 Cr. App. R. 77.]

(2) This section shall operate in any area to which it is applied by order of the Local Government Board (a), or, in Scotland and Ireland, the Local Government Board for Scotland and Ireland respectively :

Provided that no order shall be made in respect of any area until a scheme for the gratuitous treatment of persons in that area suffering from venereal disease has been approved by the Local Government Board (a), or, in Scotland and Ireland, the Local Government Board for Scotland and Ireland respectively, and is already in operation.

Sect. 2.—Restriction on advertisements, &c.]—(1) A person shall not by any advertisement or any public notice or announcement treat or offer to treat any person for venereal disease, or prescribe or offer to prescribe any remedy therefor, or offer to give or give any advice in connection with the treatment thereof.

(2) On and after the first day of November nineteen hundred and seventeen a person shall not hold out or recommend to the public by any notice or advertisement, or by any written or printed papers or handbills, or by any label or words written or printed, affixed to or delivered with, any packet, box, bottle, phial, or other inclosure containing the same, any pills, capsules, powders, lozenges, tinctures, potions, cordials, electuaries, plaisters, unguents, salves, ointments, drops, lotions, oils, spirits, medicated herbs and waters, chemical and officinal preparations whatsoever, to be used or applied externally or internally as medicines or medicaments for the prevention, cure, or relief of any venereal disease :

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply to any advertisement, notification, announcement, recommendation, or holding out made or published by any local or public authority or made or published with the sanction of the Local Government Board, or in Scotland and Ireland the Local Government Board for Scotland and Ireland respectively, or to any publication sent only to duly qualified medical practitioners or to wholesale or retail chemists for the purposes of their business.

(a) Now the Ministry of Health (9 & 10 Geo. V. c. 21), s. 3 (1) (a).

Sect. 3.—Penalties.]—If any person acts in contravention of any of the provisions of this Act, he shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds, or to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding six months.

Sect. 4.—Definition.]—In this Act the expression "venereal disease" means syphilis, gonorrhœa, or soft chancre.

Sect. 5.—Short title.]—This Act may be cited as the Venereal Disease Act, 1917.

Indictment for publicly selling an Obscene Print. (Common Law.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Selling obscene prints.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, at his shop in Shaftesbury Avenue, unlawfully sold, published or uttered to C. D. obscene prints entitled [state titles if any].

R. v. Barraclough [1906] 1 K. B. 201; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 77. 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 6 (ante, p. 1241), seems to apply the Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) to this indictment.

A count charging possession of an obscene print "with intent to publish" states no indictable offence. R. v. Rosenstein, 2 C. & P. 414; 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1876 n.: Dugdale v. R., Dears. 64 (ante, p. 1319). But such possession may be the subject of summary proceedings under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 83, s. 1 (ante, p. 1320).

Where the print or picture is publicly exposed to view in a street, highway, road, or public place, or in a shop window, the publication is also punishable summarily under s. 4 of the Vagrancy Act, 1824 (5 G. 4, c. 83, s. 4): see the Vagrancy Act, 1838 (1 & 2 Vict. c. 38, s. 2).

Misdemeanor at common law: fine and (or) imprisonment with or without hard labour (ante, pp. 239, 241, 247); R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 2574.

Indictment for selling and publishing Obscene Books, etc. (Common Law.)

As in last example, but stating the book as " an obscene libel in the form of a book intituled " [state the title].

A second count may be added for unlawfully obtaining the book for the purpose of selling it, etc., or causing it to be sold, etc.

As to this count, see Dugdale v. R. (ante, p. 1319). It seems to be no defence that the libel is in a foreign language. R. v. Hirsch, London County Sessions, March, 1899, 34 L. J. Newsp. 132. But if it is, a translation of the obscene words must be included in the particulars. See R. v. Peltier, 28 St. Tr. 529; and ante, p. 1246. As to application of Vexatious Indictments Act, see ante, p. 67.

In an indictment for " procuring an obscene libel with intent to publish " it, it seems still to be necessary to set out the obscene matter.

In an indictment for " publishing " an obscene libel, it is sufficient to deposit with the indictment particulars of the obscene matter, which may be in the following form:—

THE KING v. ——.

Particulars of Obscene Libels contained in (Books) intituled ——.

Count 1 of indictment]—book intituled the ——, beginning at p. ——, line ——, and ending at p. ——, line ——, with the words —— (and so on with other counts and passages).

The particulars must be handed in with the indictment when it is delivered to the clerk of the Court, unless they have already been deposited with him as an exhibit attached to the depositions. R. v. Barraclough [1906] 1 K. B. 201, 211.

Evidence.

Under the indictment on p. 1323 give the print in evidence, and prove that C. D. purchased it of the defendant, or of his servant, at his shop.

Put in evidence the print or book, or the passages of the book included in the particulars, and prove that it was purchased of the defendant, or his servant, or at his shop, or otherwise published by him. As to publication of libels generally, see ante, pp. 1121, 1248.

The tables and contents of other books on sale upon the premises where the book is said to have been sold may be admissible in evidence on the question whether the sale was with intent to corrupt public morals. R. v. Thompson, 64 J. P. 546, Bosanquet, Common Serjeant.

DISORDERLY HOUSES: INCLUDING BAWDY-HOUSES, GAMING-HOUSES, BETTING-HOUSES, BETTING AND GAMBLING.

General Statutory Provisions as to Disorderly Houses.

25 G. 2, c. 36 (Disorderly Houses Act, 1751), s. 2.—Unlicensed places of public entertainment within certain limits declared disorderly houses.]—And whereas the multitude of places of entertainment for the lower sort of people is another great cause of thefts and robberies, as they are thereby tempted to spend their small substance in riotous pleasures, and in consequence are put on unlawful methods of supplying their wants and renewing their pleasures: in order, therefore, to prevent the said temptation to thefts and robberies, and to correct as far as may be the habit of idleness which is becoming general over the whole kingdom, and is productive of much mischief and inconvenience, be it enacted by the authority aforesaid that:

From and after the 1st day of December, 1752, any house, room, garden, or other place kept for public dancing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind, in the cities of London and Westminster, or within twenty miles thereof [except in the administrative county of Middlesex, 56 & 57 Vict. c. 15], without a licence had for that purpose from the last preceding Michaelmas quarter sessions of the peace to be holden for the county, city, riding, liberty, or division in which such house, room, garden, or other place is situate (who are hereby authorized and empowered to grant such licence as they in their discretion shall think proper), signified under the hands and seals of four or more of the justices there assembled, shall be deemed a disorderly house or place . . . [provisions as to mode of granting licence and entry of police] . . . and every person keeping such house, room, garden, or other place without such licence as aforesaid shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.* to such person as will sue for the same, and be otherwise punishable as the law directs in cases of disorderly houses. See R. v. Tucker, 2 Q. B. D. 417; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 197; 13 Cox, 600. [*This enactment applies only to the old cities of London and Westminster, and places within twenty miles thereof. Sect. 8.—Persons to be deemed to keep disorderly houses.]—And whereas, by reason of the many subtle and crafty contrivances of persons keepy bawdy-houses, gaming-houses, or other disorderly houses, it is difficult to prove who is the real owner or keeper thereof, by which means many notorious offenders have escaped punishment: be it enacted, etc., that any person who shall at any time hereafter appear, act, or behave him or herself as master or mistress, or as the person having the care, government, or management of any bawdy-house, gaming-house, or other disorderly house, shall be deemed and taken to be the keeper thereof, and shall be liable to be prosecuted and punished as such, notwithstanding he or she shall not in fact be the real owner or keeper thereof.

Sect. 10.—No certiorari.]—And . . . no indictment which shall at any time after the said 1st day of June [1752] be preferred against any person for keeping a bawdy-house, gaming-house, or other disorderly house, shall be removed by any writ of certiorari into any other court; but such indictment shall be heard, tried, and finally determined at the same general or quarter session (sic) or assizes where such indictment shall have been preferred (unless the Court shall think proper, upon cause shown, to adjourn the same), any such writ or allowance thereof notwithstanding.

22 & 23 Vict. c. 17 (Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859).]—See ante, p. 67.

Bawdy-houses.

A common bawdy-house is a house or room, or set of rooms in any house, kept for purposes of prostitution. Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.), p. 142. A "brothel" is the same thing as a "bawdy-house," and is a term which in its legal acceptance applies to a place resorted to by persons of both sexes for the purposes of prostitution. Singleton v. Ellison [1895] 1 Q. B. 608; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 123, Wright, J. (a) A woman who occupies a house frequented by men for the purpose of committing fornication with her, cannot be convicted of keeping a "brothel." Id.: Caldwell v. Leech, 23 Cox, 510; 109 L. T. 188; 77 J. P. 254; 29 T. L. R. 457. But where a porter was employed to look after a block of eighteen flats, among the tenants of which were twelve women who were in the habit of bringing different men nightly to the premises for the purpose of prostitution, it was held that he could be convicted under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 13 (3), of being wilfully a party to the continued use of the premises or part thereof as a brothel. Durose v. Wilson [1907] 71 J. P. 263. Until the passing of 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 13; infra, the offence of keeping a bawdy-house was only punishable on indictment at common law.

(a) Cf. R. v. Thick [1907] Queensland State Reports, 198, on a colonial enactment in the same terms.

Statutes.

48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885), s. 13.—Suppression of brothels, etc.]—Any person who—

(1) Keeps or manages or assists in the management of a brothel; or

(2) Being the tenant, lessee, or occupier [or person in charge] of any premises, knowingly permits such premises or any part thereof to be used as a brothel or for the purposes of habitual prostitution; or

(3) Being the lessor or landlord of any premises, or the agent of such lessor or landlord, lets the same or any part thereof with the knowledge that such premises or some part thereof are or is to be used as a brothel, or is wilfully a party to the continued use of such premises or any part thereof as a brothel, shall on summary conviction, in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, be liable—

(1) To a penalty not exceeding 20*l.*, or, in the discretion of the Court, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour; and

Indictment for keeping a Bawdy-house. (Common Law.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Keeping a bawdy-house.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of——, and on other days between that date and the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, for the purpose of gain, kept and maintained a bawdy-house called No. 37 St. Martin's Lane.

Misdemeanor at common law: fine and (or) imprisonment (which may be with hard labour, 3 G. 4, c. 114, ante, p. 242). Counts may be joined for keeping a disorderly house other than a bawdy-house, or for keeping several bawdy-houses. 1 Burn's Justice (30th ed.), 1395; and see R. v. Higginson, 2 Burr. 1232, and 2 Chit. Cr. L. 39. The indictment may be in general terms, but particulars may be ordered. I'Anson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 748, 752: Clarke v. Periam, 2 Atk. 337, 339. See ante, p. 26. If proceedings are taken under 25 G. 2, c. 36, ss. 5, 6, the magistrate need not take any depositions. A married woman may be indicted with her husband for this offence. R. v. Williams, 1 Salk. 384; 10 Mod. 63: R. v. Dixon, 10 Mod. 335.

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to this indictment. The indictment shall not be removed by certiorari: 25 G. 2, c. 36, s. 10 (ante, p. 1326); unless upon the part of the Crown; R. v. Davies, 5 T. R. 626; and it shall be determined at the same sessions or assizes at which it is preferred, unless the Court, upon cause shown, thinks proper to adjourn the same. 25 G. 2, c. 36, s. 10 (ante, p. 1326): see 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 27 (ante, p. 102). This offence is triable at borough quarter sessions. R. v. Charles, L. & C. 90; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 69; 9 Cox, 18. Where the offence is committed within the limits of 25 G. 2, c. 36, s. 2 (ante, p. 1325), except the administrative county of Middlesex (ante, p. 1325), the indictment, if the facts so warrant, may also contain a count for keeping the house for public music or dancing without a licence of the county council or other licensing authority. As to allowing children or young persons to be in brothels. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 16 (ante, p. 1026). As to detaining women in brothels, see 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 8 (ante, p. 1035). As to procuring women to enter brothels, see s. 2 (ante, p. 1034).

Evidence.

Prove that the house in question, or a room or rooms in it, were let out for the purposes mentioned in the indictment. And if a lodger lets her apartment for the purpose of indiscriminate prostitution, it is as much a bawdy-house as if she held the whole house. R. v. Peirson, 2 Ld. Raym. 1197; 1 Salk. 382; 3 Co. Inst. 204. It is not necessary that there should be evidence of any indecency or disorderly conduct being perceptible from the exterior of the house. R. v. Rice, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 21; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 93: l'Anson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 748. (a).

Prove also that the defendants "acted or behaved as master or mistress, or as the persons having the care, government, or management" of the house in question; which is sufficient evidence that the defendants kept the house. 25 G. 2, c. 36, s. 8 (ante, p. 1326). Mere frequenters of the house seem not to be indictable; but see Wood's Inst. bk. 3, c. 3: Dalton, Country Justice, c. 124.

If a weekly tenant of a house uses it as a brothel, and the landlord receives no additional rent by reason of its immoral occupation, the latter cannot be convicted of keeping a brothel merely because, having notice of the nature of the occupation, he does not give the tenant notice to quit: R. v. Barrett, L. & C. 263; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 36; 9 Cox, 255; nor would the landlord be liable to be so convicted even if at the time he let the house he knew that it was to be used for purposes of prostitution, and, by reason of its occupation as such, received an additional rent. R. v. Stannard, L. & C. 349; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 61; 9 Cox, 405: but the facts in this case would justify proceedings under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 13 (ante, p. 1327).

On an indictment under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 13, the evidence appears to be in substance the same as above.

Gaming-houses.

33 H. 8, c. 9.—Punishment of unlawful games.]—Excessive gaming, per se, is no longer a criminal offence, but may be evidence of unlawful gaming. As to what is an unlawful game, see Jenks v. Turpin, 13 Q. B. D. 505; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 161: R. v. Rogier, 1 B. & C. 272; 2 D. & R. 431; and post, p. 1334.

playing therein at any unlawful game, and that a bank is kept there by one or more of the players, exclusively of the others, or that the chances of any game played therein are not alike favourable to all the players, including among the players the banker or other person by whom the game is managed, or against whom the other players stake, play or bet; and every such house or place shall be deemed a common gaming-house, such as is contrary to law, and forbidden to be kept by the said Act of King Henry VIII. (33 H. 8, c. 9), and by all other Acts containing any provision against unlawful games or gaming-houses.

Sect. 4.—Penalty for keeping common gaming-house.]—The owner or keeper of any common gaming-house, and every person having the care or management thereof, and also every banker, croupier, and other person who shall act in any manner in conducting the business of any common gaming-house, shall on conviction thereof, by his own confession, or by the oath of one or more credible witnesses, before any two justices of the peace, beside any penalty or punishment to which he may be liable under the provisions of the said Act of King Henry VIII. (33 H. 8, c. 9), be liable to forfeit and pay such penalty, not more than 100*l.* as shall be adjudged by the justices before whom he shall be convicted, or, in the discretion of the justices before whom he shall be convicted, may be committed to the house of correction, with or without hard labour, for any time not more than six calendar months [levy of penalties by distress] . . . Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall prevent any proceeding by indictment against the owner or keeper, or other person having the care or management of a common gaming-house: but no person who shall have been summarily convicted of any such offence shall be liable to be proceeded against by indictment for the same offence. [On a charge under this section the accused may elect to be indicted. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17, ante, p. 7; and see note to s. 4 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 38, post, p. 1332.]

Sect. 5.—Evidence.]—It shall not be necessary, in support of any information for gaming in, or suffering any games or gaming in, or for keeping or using, or being concerned in the management or conduct of, a common gaming-house, to prove that any person found playing at any game was playing for any money, wager, or stake.

Indictment for keeping a Common Gaming-house. (Common Law.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Keeping a common gaming-house.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, and on other days between that date and the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, for gain kept and maintained a common gaming-house or gaming-room at No. 44, Leicester Square.

The offence is a continuing offence. See Onley v. Gee, 30 L. J. (M. C.) 222; Ex parte Burnby [1901] 2 K. B. 458; 70 L. J. (K. B.) 739; 20 Cox, 28. In R. v. Rogier, ante, p. 1329, Holroyd, J., said that, in his opinion, it would be sufficient merely to have alleged that the defendant kept a common gaming-house.

Misdemeanor: fine and (or) imprisonment. Hard labour may be imposed (3 G. 4, c. 114, ante, p. 242).

A married woman may be indicted with her husband for this offence. R. v. Dixon, 10 Mod. 335. The indictment shall not be removed by certiorari; 25 G. 2, c. 36, s. 10; unless on the part of the Crown; R. v. Davies, 5 T. R. 626; and it shall be determined at the same sessions or assizes at which it is preferred, unless the Court upon cause shown thinks proper to adjourn the same. 25 G. 2, c. 36, s. 10.

The Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 67) applies to this indictment.

This offence is triable at borough quarter sessions. R. v. Charles, L. & C. 90; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 69; 9 Cox, 18. (See ante, p. 106 et seq.)

Evidence.

Prove that the house in question, or a room or rooms in it, were used as a "common gaming-house." See 5 T. R. 338. As to the evidence sufficient for this purpose, see 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, ss. 2, 5, 8, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 38, s. 2 (ante, pp. 1329—1331).

Prove that the defendant "acted or behaved as master or mistress, or as the person having the care, government, or management" of the house or room in question; which is sufficient evidence that the house or room was kept by the defendant. 25 G. 2, c. 36, s. 8, ante, p. 1326.

To constitute "unlawful gaming," it is not necessary that the games played should be "unlawful games"; it is enough that the play is carried on in a "common gaming-house." Jenks v. Turpin, 13 Q. B. D. 505; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 161. It makes no difference that play is confined to members of a club; it is not a public but a common gaming-house that is prohibited. Id., and see post, p. 1335.

After an indictment for keeping a gaming-house has been preferred by a private prosecutor, the Court will allow any other person to go on with it, even against the consent of the prosecutor. R. v. Wood, 3 B. & Ad. 657; 1 L. J. (M. C.) 93.

Statute.

17 & 18 Vict. c. 38 (Gaming Houses Act, 1854), s. 4.—Penalty for keeping or using house, etc., for unlawful gaming.]—Any person being the owner or occupier or having the use of any house, room, or place, who shall open, keep, or use the same for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein, and any person who being the owner or occupier of any house or room, shall knowingly and wilfully permit the same to be opened, kept, or used by any other person for the purpose aforesaid, and any person having the care or management of or in any manner assisting in conducting the business of any house, room, or place opened, kept, or used for the purpose aforesaid, and any person who shall advance or furnish money for the purpose of gaming with persons frequenting such house, room, or place, may, on summary conviction thereof before any two justices of the peace, be adjudged by such justices to forfeit and pay such penalty, not exceeding 500*l.*, as to such justices shall seem fit, and may be further adjudged by such justices to pay such costs attending such conviction as to them shall seem reasonable: and [on non-payment of such penalty and costs, or in the first instance (rep. 47 & 48 Vict. c. 43, s. 4)], if to the said justices shall seem fit, may be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding twelve calendar months. [The accused may elect to be tried on indictment. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17, ante, p. 7. And the fact of election need not be averred. R. v. Chambers, 65 L. J. (M. C.) 214; 18 Cox, 401, ante, p. 1327. As to scope of this section, see Jenks v. Turpin, 13 Q. B. D. 505.]

Indictment under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 38, s. 4.

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count:

Keeping a gaming-house, contrary to section 4 of the Gaming Houses Act, 1854.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., being the owner or occupier or having the use of [give the designation of the house or room, giving the county also], on the —— day of ——, and on other days between that date and the —— day of ——, kept or used it for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count:

Permitting the keeping of a gaming-house, contrary [as in first count].

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

C. D., being the owner or occupier of [as in first count] on the [as in first count], knowingly and wilfully permitted A. B. to keep or maintain it for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein.

Add counts, if necessary, charging E. F. with "having the care and management," or "assisting in conducting the business" of the house, as the case may be: also a count charging the keeping of a common gaming-house (ante, p. 1331).

Misdemeanor: punishment, fine not exceeding 500*l.*, and in default of payment, or in the first instance, imprisonment for not more than twelve months, with or without hard labour. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 38, s. 4.

Evidence.

See evidence in support of indictment for keeping a common gaming-house, ante, p. 1332.

Unlawful games.]—Various games have been made unlawful by 33 H. 8, c. 9, and other statutes, some of which have been repealed. The effect of this legislation is considered in Jenks v. Turpin, 13 Q. B. D. 505; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 161. "The unlawful games now are—ace of hearts, faro, basset, hazard, passage, roulette, every game of dice except backgammon, and every game of cards which is not a game of mere skill; and, I incline to add, any other game of mere chance." Id., p. 524, Hawkins, J. Baccarat is an unlawful game. Id. "To play at a game of cards for money in a common gaming-house is unlawful gaming." Id., p. 531, A. L. Smith, J., and see Fairtlough v. Whitmore, 64 L. J. (Ch.) 386: Lockwood v. Cooper [1903] 2 K. B. 428; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 690. Welton v. Raffles, 26 Cox, 534. As to progressive whist, see R. v. Hendrick, 15 Cr. App. R. 149. The question whether a particular game of cards is an unlawful game is a question of law for the judge, and not of fact for the jury, who must apply the facts to the definition of the law given by the judge. R. v. Davies [1897] 2 Q. B. 199; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 513. See also Morris v. Godfrey, 23 Cox, 40; 106 L. T. 890; 76 J. P. 297; 28 T. L. R. 401.

Keep or use.]—Where the defendant with three friends went to his house and after playing whist there, played an unlawful game of cards, but there was no evidence that they or any one else had ever played an unlawful game of cards at the defendant's house, or on any other occasion, it was held that he could not be convicted of opening, keeping, or using the room within s. 4. R. v. Davies (supra); cf. Martin v. Benjamin [1907] 1 K. B. 64; 76 L. J. (K. B.) 81; cf. R. v. Mean, 69 J. P. 27; 21 T. L. R. 417 (post, p. 1340). Where the defendant kept in his shop an automatic machine, by means of insertion of a penny into which money would be won or lost without the exercise of skill on the part of the operator, it was held that he was rightly convicted of keeping, etc., his shop for the purpose of unlawful gaming within s. 4. Fielding v. Turner [1903] 1 K. B. 867; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 542; 67 J. P. 252: approved and followed in Donaghy v. Walsh [1914] 2 Ir. R. 261. See also Forsyth v. Ross [1919] 2 I. R. 335 and post, p. 1340.

Care and management—assisting in conducting the business.]—In Jenks v. Turpin (supra) it was held that the mere players at an unlawful game in a club which was a common gaming-house, as distinct from the proprietor and committee men of the club, were not liable to be summarily convicted of an offence under this branch of the section. But a "banker" at faro, who has "bought the bank," is a person assisting in conducting the business, etc., within this section. Derby v. Bloomfield, 20 Cox, 674; 68 J. P. 391.

Betting-houses, and betting with infants, or in streets.

16 & 17 Vict. c. 119 (Betting Act, 1853), s. 1.—Betting-houses a common nuisance.]—No house, office, room, or other place, shall be opened, kept, or used for the purpose of the owner, occupier, or keeper thereof, or any person using the same, or any person procured or employed by or acting for or on behalf of such owner, occupier, or keeper, or person using the same, or of any person having the care or management, or in any manner conducting the business thereof betting with persons resorting thereto;

Or for the purpose of any money or valuable thing being received by or on behalf of such owner, occupier, keeper, or person aforesaid, as or for the consideration for any assurance, undertaking, promise or agreement, express or implied, to pay or give thereafter any money or valuable thing on any event or contingency of or relating to any horse-race, or other race, fight, game, sport, or exercise, or as or for the consideration for securing the paying or giving by some other person of any money or valuable thing on any such event or contingency as aforesaid:

And every house, office, room, or other place opened, kept, or used for the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, is hereby declared to be a common nuisance and contrary to law. [An offence declared to be a nuisance is indictable as such, though the statute creating the offence renders it punishable on summary conviction. R. v. Crawshaw, Bell, 303; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 58; 8 Cox, 375.]

Sect. 2.—Betting-houses to be deemed gaming-houses within 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109.]—Every house, room, office, or place opened, kept, or used for the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, shall be taken and deemed to be a common gaming-house within the meaning of the Gaming Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 109). (As to what is evidence of a house being a common gaming-house, see ss. 2, 5, and 8 of that statute, ante, pp. 1329—1331).

Sect. 3.—Penalty on owner or occupier of betting-house.]—Any person who being the owner or occupier of any house, office, room, or other place, or a person using the same, shall open, keep, or use the same for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, or either of them; and any person who being the owner or occupier of any house, room, office, or other place, shall knowingly and wilfully permit the same to be opened, kept, or used by any other person for the purposes aforesaid, or either of them; and any person having the care or management of or in any manner assisting in conducting the business of any house, office, room, or place, opened, kept, or used for the purposes aforesaid, or either of them, shall on summary conviction thereof before any two justices of the peace, be liable to forfeit and pay such penalty, not exceeding 100*l.*, as shall be adjudged by such justices, and may be further adjudged by such justices to pay such costs attending such conviction as to the said justices shall seem reasonable; [and on the non-payment of such penalty and costs] or in the first instance, if to the said justices it shall seem fit, may be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding six calendar months. [Words in italics rep. 47 & 48 Vict. c. 43, s. 4.] The accused may elect to be tried on indictment (vide ante, p. 7), and the election to be so tried need not be averred. R. v. Chambers, 65 L. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 15 (Betting Act, 1874.)]—Extension of provisions as to penalties for advertising as to betting.

55 & 56 Vict. c. 4 (Betting and Loans (Infants) Act, 1892), s. 1.—Sending documents to an infant inviting him to bet.—(1) If any one, for the purpose of earning commission, reward, or other profit, sends or causes to be sent to a person whom he knows to be an infant any circular, notice, advertisement, letter, telegram, or other document which invites or may reasonably be implied to invite the person receiving it to make any bet or wager, or to enter into or take any share or interest in any betting or wagering transaction, or to apply to any person or at any place with a view to obtaining information or advice for the purpose of any bet or wager, or for information as to any race, fight, game, sport, or other contingency upon which betting or wagering is generally carried on, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable, if convicted on indictment, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds, or to both imprisonment and fine, and if convicted on summary conviction, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding one month, or to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds, or to both imprisonment and fine.

(2) If any such circular, notice, advertisement, letter, telegram, or other document as in this section mentioned, names or refers to any one as a person to whom any payment may be made, or from whom information may be obtained, for the purpose of or in relation to betting, or wagering, the person so named or referred to shall be deemed to have sent or caused to be sent such document as aforesaid, unless he proves that he had not consented to be so named, and that he was not in any way a party to, and was wholly ignorant of, the sending of such document.

Sect. 2.—Sending to infants circulars inviting to borrow money.]—(1) If any one, for the purpose of earning interest, commission, reward, or other profit, sends or causes to be sent to a person whom he knows to be an infant any circular, notice, advertisement, letter, telegram, or other document which invites or may reasonably be implied to invite the person receiving it to borrow money, or to enter into any transaction involving the borrowing of money, or to apply to any person or at any place with a view to obtaining information or advice as to borrowing money, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable, if convicted on indictment, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds, or to both imprisonment and fine, and if convicted, on summary conviction, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding one month, or to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds, or to both imprisonment and fine.

(2) If any such document as above in this section mentioned sent to an infant purports to issue from any address named therein, or indicates any address as the place at which application is to be made with reference to the subject-matter of the document, and at that place there is carried on any business connected with loans, whether making or procuring loans or otherwise, every person who attends at such place for the purpose of taking part in or who takes part in or assists in the carrying on of such business shall be deemed to have sent or caused to be sent such document as aforesaid, unless he proves that he was not in any way a party to and was wholly ignorant of the sending of such document.

Sect. 3.—Presumption of knowledge of infancy.]—If any such circular, notice, advertisement, letter, telegram, or other document as in the preceding sections or either of them mentioned is sent to any person at any university, college, school, or other place of education, and such person is an infant, the person sending or causing the same to be sent shall be deemed to have known that such person was an infant, unless he proves that he had reasonable ground for believing such person to be of full age. [See Milton v. Studd [1910] 2 K. B. 118; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 638; 74 J. P. 217; 26 T. L. R. 392.]

63 & 64 Vict. c. 51 (Money Lenders Act, 1900), s. 5.—Presumption of knowledge of infancy.]—Where in any proceeding under s. 2 of the Betting and Loans (Infants) Act, 1892, it is proved that the person to whom the document was sent was an infant the person charged shall be deemed to have known that the person to whom the document was sent was an infant, unless he proves that he had reasonable ground for believing the infant to be of full age. [See Director of Public Prosecutions v. Witkowski, 104 L. T. 453; 75 J. P. 171; 27 T. L. R. 211.

55 & 56 Vict. c. 4, s. 4.—Soliciting infant to make affidavit in connection with loan.]—If any one, except under the authority of any court, solicits an infant to make an affidavit or statutory declaration for the purpose of or in connection with any loan, he shall be liable, if convicted on summary conviction, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding one month, or to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds, or to both imprisonment and fine, and if convicted on indictment, to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds.

Sect. 6.—Defendant and wife or husband of defendant a competent witness.] —In any proceeding against any person for an offence under this Act such person and his wife or husband, as the case may be, may, if such person thinks fit, be called, sworn, examined, and cross-examined as an ordinary witness in the case. [This enactment seems to be superseded in England by the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36), ante, pp. 458 et seq.]

6 Edw. 7, c. 43 (Street Betting Act, 1906), s. 1.—Any person frequenting or loitering in streets or public places on behalf either of himself or of any other person for the purpose of bookmaking, or betting, or wagering, or agreeing to bet or wager, or paying, or receiving, or settling bets, shall—

(a) in the case of a first offence be liable on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to a fine not exceeding 10*l.*;

(b) in the case of a second offence be liable on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to a fine not exceeding 20*l.*; and

(c) in the case of a third or subsequent offence, or in any case where it is proved that the person whilst committing the offence had any betting transaction with a person under the age of sixteen years, be liable on conviction on indictment to a fine not exceeding 50*l.*, or to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding six months without the option of a fine, or on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to a fine not exceeding 30*l.*, or to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding three months, without the option of a fine;

and shall in any case be liable to forfeit all books, cards, paper, and other articles relating to betting which may be found in his possession. The accused may elect to be tried on indictment* (ante, p. 7). The increased punishment for second or subsequent offences can be inflicted only when the prior convictions were for offences under this Act. R. v. Stone, 21 Cox, 653; 72 J. P. 388.]

(2) Any constable may take into custody without warrant any person found committing an offence under this Act, and may seize and detain any article liable to be forfeited under this Act.

(3) Any person who appears to the Court to be under the age of sixteen years shall for the purpose of this section be deemed to be under that age unless the contrary be proved, or unless the person charged shall satisfy the Court that he had reasonable ground for believing otherwise. [Cf. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 123, ante, p. 992.]

(4) For the purpose of this section the word "street" shall include any highway and any public bridge, road, lane, footway, square, court, alley, or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not; and the words "public place" shall include any public park, garden, or sea-beach, and any unenclosed ground to which the public for the time being have unrestricted access, and shall also include every enclosed place (not being a public park or garden) to which the public have a restricted right of access, whether on payment or otherwise, if at or near every public entrance there is conspicuously exhibited by the owners or persons having the control of the place a notice prohibiting betting therein. [See ante, p. 1317, as to public place.]

Sect. 2.—Nothing contained in this Act shall apply to any ground used for the purpose of a racecourse for racing with horses or adjacent thereto on the days on which races take place. [See Stead v. Aykroyd [1911] 1 K. B. 57; 80 L. J. (K. B.) 78; 103 L. T. 727; 74 J. P. 482.]

Indictment for using a Room contrary to 16 & 17 Vict. c. 119, s. 1 (ante, p. 1334).

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

First Count:

Keeping a betting-house, contrary to section 1 of the Betting Act, 1853.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, and on other days between that date and the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, being the occupier of a public house called the Golden Lion, used the said house or a room in it for the purpose of C. D., a person using the said house or room, betting with persons resorting thereto.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Second Count:

As in first count.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

As in first count, except altering the purpose to for the purpose of money being received by or on behalf of C. D., a person using the said house or room as or for the consideration for a promise or agreement to pay money on events relating to horse races.

Misdemeanor: punishment, fine not exceeding 100*l.*, and in default of payment, or in the first instance, imprisonment for not more than six months with or without hard labour. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 119, s. 3.

Evidence.

The two branches of the section create distinct offences. Bond v. Plumb [1894] 1 Q. B. 169. As to its scope and effect, see Powell v. Kempton Park Racecourse Co. [1899] A. C. 143; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 392: Brown v. Patch

[1899] 1 Q. B. 892; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 588. Various forms of "coupon competitions" have been held to be within the section. See R. v. Stoddart [1901] 1 K. B. 177; 70 L. J. (Q. B.) 189; 19 Cox, 587; 64 J. P. 774: Mackenzie v. Hawke [1902] 2 K. B. 216; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 565; 66 J. P. 709: Lennox v. Stoddart [1902] 2 K. B. 21; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 747; 66 J. P. 469; Stoddart v. Hawke [1902] 1 K. B. 353; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 133; 20 Cox, 111; 66 J. P. 469: Hawke v. Hulton, 22 T. L. R. 169. So has an automatic machine kept in a shop for the purpose of persons resorting to the shop playing with the machine. Peers v. Caldwell, Taylor v. Caldwell [1916] 1 K. B. 371; 85 L. J. (K. B.) 754; 114 L. T. 609; 80 J. P. 181: R. v. Peers and Brown, 81 J. P. 143; 33 T. L. R. 231; 12 Cr. App. R. 210.

House, office, room, or other place.]—Prove that the business of betting is definitely localised. Powell v. Kempton Park Racecourse Co. [1899] A. C. 143; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 392: Brown v. Patch [1899] 1 Q. B. 892; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 588: R. v. Deaville [1903] 1 K. B. 468; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 272. Localisation is a question of fact. R. v. Fisher, 9 Cr. App. R. 164.

Use.]—In order to convict a bookmaker of using the bar of a public-house within this section it is not enough to prove mere physical user. The defendant must "have something in the nature of a right or licence to use the bar for the purposes of his betting business over and above the right of an ordinary member of the public to resort there." Belton v. Busby [1899] 2 Q. B. 380; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 859: Troman v. Hodkinson [1903] 1 K. B. 30; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 21: R. v. Russell, 69 J. P. 247: R. v. Moss, 4 Cr. App. R. 112; 26 T. L. R. 323. Where therefore it was proved that the defendant was in the habit of frequenting the bar of a public-house for the purpose of carrying on a business of ready money betting with persons resorting thereto, but for the purposes of his business did not occupy any specific portion of the bar, it was held that the question whether he was guilty of "using" the bar within the section depended upon whether he carried on his betting business there with the knowledge and consent of the occupier of the house. R. v. Deaville, supra: R. v. Worton [1895] 1 Q. B. 227; 64 L. J. (Q. B.) 74: Buxton v. Scott, 73 J. P. 133. "If you get sufficient localisation of the betting business, as is the case where the betting man is in possession of the particular plot of ground or structure on which he carries on his business, the question of the permission or licence of the owner of that plot or structure to use it for betting purposes is immaterial." R. v. Deaville, supra, Alverstone, C.J.; approved in R. v. Fisher, 9 Cr. App. R. 167. A man who acts as a mere conduit pipe for making bets between a bookmaker and his customers, though he has no pecuniary interest in the transactions, may be guilty of using premises where he is employed within this section. R. v. Wyton, 5 Cr. App. R. 287. The contents of betting slips and other documents found upon the defendants, or in the house which they are charged with using, are admissible in evidence against them, though such documents do not relate to the days on which the offence is alleged in the indictment to have been committed. R. v. Mean, 69 J. P. 27; 21 T. L. R. 417: R. v. Mortimer [1911] 1 K. B. 70; 80 L. J. (K. B.) 76; 22 Cox, 359; 103 L. T. 910; 75 J. P. 37; 27 T. L. R. 17.

Resorting.]—An offence against this branch of the section may be proved by showing that the house was opened and advertised as a betting-house, although no person ever physically resorted thereto. But where "resorting" is relied upon as evidence of the offence there must be some evidence of a physical resorting, and it is not sufficient to show that letters and telegrams were sent to the defendant directing him to make bets with the senders. R. v. Brown [1895] 1 Q. B. 119; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 1; 18 Cox, 81. On the other hand, it is not necessary that the person resorting should actually effect an entrance into the house. Taylor v. Monk [1914] 2 K. B. 817; 80 L. J. (K. B.) 1125; 78 J. P. 194; 30 T. L. R. 367.

Paying in the bar of a public-house bets previously made elsewhere is not using such bar for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto within the section. Bradford v. Dawson [1897] 1 Q. B. 307; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 191; but see Lennox v. Stoddart, infra.

Receipt of money.]—It has been held that in order to convict under the second branch of s. 1, the money must be received in the house; Davis v. Stephenson, 24 Q. B. D. 529; but proof that the house has been used by the occupier for an essential part of operations carried on for the purpose of money being received by him in contravention of the section is sufficient. Lennox v. Stoddart [1902] 2 K. B. 21, ante, p. 1340. Where an advertising agent in London allowed his office to be used by the London agents of a company (which carried on a betting business in Holland), solely for the purpose of saving postal expenses, the address of the London office nowhere appearing on any of the company's literature nor being known to the company's English customers, it was held that the office had been used as an essential part of the betting business of the company and was a common gaming-house. R. v. Andrews, 74 J. P. 255, Bosanquet, Common Serjeant. A sweepstake is not within the section. R. v. Hobbs [1898] 2 Q. B. 647; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 928. Quære, whether postal orders are "money" within the section. R. v. Mortimer, ante, p. 1340.

Where an automatic machine is kept in a shop for the purpose of persons resorting to the shop playing with the machine for payment and receiving a prize if successful, the shop is kept for the purpose of the proprietor receiving money as or for the consideration for a promise to give a valuable thing on a certain event or contingency, and whether the game played with the machine be one of skill or otherwise an offence within the section is committed. R. v. Peers and Brown, 81 J. P. 143; 33 T. L. R. 231; 12 Cr. App. R. 210.

Betting in clubs.]—Members of a bonâ fide club who make bets with other members upon the club premises cannot be convicted of using the club for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto within the section. Downes v. Johnson [1895] 2 Q. B. 203; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 238. But where the jury found that the club was "used as a blind for betting purposes," and there was evidence that the members of the club were divided into two classes, the defendants being the bookmakers, and other members going there to bet with them, it was held that the defendants were properly convicted under the section.

R. v. Corrie and Watson, 68 J. P. 294 (C. C. R.), and see R. v. Bradley, 1 Cr. App. R. 146 : R. v. Hitchin, Id. 161 : Jackson v. Roth [1919] 1 K. B. 102; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 397; 83 J. P. 26; 26 Cox, 340.

ILLEGAL LOTTERIES.

The offence of keeping a lottery is rarely punished on indictment. For a precedent, see R. v. Crawshaw, Bell, 303; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 58; 8 Cox, 375.

Statutes.

10 W. 3, c. 23 (10 & 11 W. 3, c. 17, Ruffhead), s. 1 (1698).]—All lotteries declared to be common and public nuisances. As to definition of lottery within this Act, see Att.-Gen. v. Mutual Loan Agency Fund [1909] 9 N. S. W. State Rep. 148.

[Sects. 2, 3 impose specific penalties on persons opening or drawing at lotteries. These and subsequent enactments of a similar character do not take away the right to indict for a common and public nuisance under s. 1. R. v. Crawshaw, Bell, 303; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 58; 8 Cox, 375.].

[See Bottomley v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 79 J. P. 153; 24 Cox, 578.]

Evidence.

A lottery is a distribution of prizes by lot or chance without the use of any skill. See R. v. Harris, 10 Cox, 352 (" The Eastern Bazaar "): Taylor v. Smetten, 11 Q. B. D. 207; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 101 (sale of pound packages of tea with prize coupon): Caminada v. Hulton, 60 L. J. (M. C.) 116: 17 Cox, 307 (racing coupon competition): but see R. v. Stoddart [1901] 1 K. B. 177: Barclay v. Pearson [1893] 2 Ch. 154: 62 L. J. (Ch.) 636 (" missing word competition "): Stoddart v. Sagar [1895] 2 Q. B. 474; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 234 (racing coupon competition) : Hall v. Cox [1899] 1 Q. B. 198; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 167 (C. A.) (prediction of coming event) : Hall v. McWilliam, 20 Cox, 33; 65 J. P. 742 (" spot " competition in newspaper) : Barrett v. Burden, 63 L. J. (M. C.) 33 (distributing coins in packets of sweets) : Willis v. Young [1907] 1 K. B. 448; 76 L. J. (K. B.) 390 (distributing medals entitling to prizes in certain events) : Re International Securities Corporation, Ltd., 24 T. L. R. 837 (dealing in premium bonds) : Blyth v. Hulton, Ltd., 72 J. P. 401; 24 T. L. R. 719 : Smith's Advertising Agency v. Leeds Laboratory Co., 26 T. L. R. 335 (advertisements of " Limerick " and letter-writing competitions) : Mintz v. Silvester, 79 J. P. 543; 31 T. L. R. 589; 25 Cox, 247 (distribution of postal orders in a theatre). If a number of tickets are sold, one of which entitles the holder to a chance of a prize, that constitutes a lottery. It is not an essential ingredient in the offence that the money got for the tickets should be used for the purchase of the prize. Bartlett v. Parker [1912] 2 K. B. 497; 81 L. J. (K. B.) 857; 106 L. T. 869; 76 J. P. 280. Where the competition involves a certain amount of skill, and the adjudication is not a determination by mere chance, the scheme is not a lottery. Scott v. Director of Public Prosecutions [1914] 2 K. B. 868; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 1025; 78 J. P. 267; 30 T. L. R. 396.

A publican who promotes a sweepstakes on his premises is guilty of an offence against s. 2 of the Gaming Act, 1802 (42 G. 3, c. 119), ante, p. 1343, at all events if he makes any profit out of the transaction. Hardwicke v. Lane [1904] 1 K. B. 204; 73 L. J. (K. B.) 96; 68 J. P. 94 : cf. R. v. Hobbs [1898] 2 Q. B. 647; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 928.

As to breach of the Lottery Acts by societies or public companies, see Sykes v. Beadon, 11 Ch. D. 170; 48 L. J. (Ch.) 822 : Wallingford v. Mutual Benefit Society, 5 App. Cas. 685; 60 L. J. (d) OFFENCES AS TO CORPSES.

Common Law.

There is no property in a corpse (a); it is therefore not the subject of larceny (see ante, p. 543); though the executors have a right to its possession. Williams v. Williams, 20 Ch. D. 659; 51 L. J. (Ch.) 385; 15 Cox, 39. But larceny may be committed with respect to coffins, shrouds, or property interred with the corpse. As to laying the property in such goods, see ante, p. 47.

To leave unburied the corpse of a person for whom the defendant was bound to provide "Christian burial" (which probably means only "decent burial:" Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.), p. 138), such as a wife or child, is also an indictable misdemeanor, if he is shown to have been of ability to provide such burial. R. v. Vann, 2 Den. 325; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 39; 5 Cox, 379: R. v. Stewart, 12 A. & E. 773, 778; 4 P. & D. 349: Jenkins v. Tucker, 1 H. Bl. 90. But the mere burning of a dead body, instead of burying it, is not a misdemeanor; yet if it is burnt in such a place and such a manner as to annoy persons passing along public roads or other places where they have a right to go, this is an indictable nuisance. R. v. Price [1884] 12 Q. B. D. 247; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 51; 15 Cox, 389. The indictment must allege a nuisance to the public, and not merely to private individuals. R. v. Byers, 71 J. P. 205, post, p. 1347. See 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 31; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 103, ss. 16, 17, as to the burial of poor persons by parish officers; and 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122, s. 13; 53 & 54 Vict. c. 5, s. 297, as to burial of idiots or lunatics dying in asylums; and as to burial of persons dying of infectious disease, etc., 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 142; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 76, s. 89. As to preventing burial, see 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1872. The burning of dead bodies is regulated by the Cremation Act, 1902 (2 Edw. 7, c. 8) (vide infra), which (s. 10) expressly provides that nothing therein contained shall authorize the creation or permission of a nuisance.

Any disposition of a corpse with intent to obstruct or prevent a coroner's inquest (b), when one ought to be held, is a misdemeanor at common law. R. v. Stephenson, 13 Q. B. D. 331; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 176: R. v. Price, (supra).

Exposing the naked dead body of a child in or near, and within view of, the highway is a common law nuisance. R. v. Clark, 15 Cox, 171. As to secret disposition of the bodies of newly-born infants with intent to conceal their birth, see ante, pp. 919-920.

It is a misdemeanor at common law to remove, without lawful authority, a corpse from a grave, whether in a churchyard or in the burial-ground of a

(a) See Doodeward v. Spence [1907] 7 N. S. W. St. Rep. 727; 6 Aust. C. L. R. 406 and ante, p. 543, for a full discussion of the law as to property in corpses. The case arose out of a claim to ownership of the body of a still-born child preserved in spirits. And see Kenny, Outlines of Criminal Law, p. 192; Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (6th ed.), p. 253.

(b) The coroner at common law can legally direct disinterment for the purposes of an inquest (ante, p. 142). R. v. Clerk [1702] Cas. temp. Holt, 167: R. v. Bond [1716] 1 Str. 22; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23; Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 27, 28. But in practice the disinterment is made under the authority of the Home Secretary under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, s. 25, or of the High Court under s. 6 of the Coroners Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 71). See Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), pp. 53-56.

congregation of Protestant dissenters; and it is no defence to such a charge that the motives of the defendant were pious and laudable. R. v. Sharpe, Dears. & B. 160; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 47; 7 Cox, 214. In R. v. Kenyon [1901] 36 L. J. Newsp. 571, four persons were indicted before Phillimore, J., for unlawfully, wilfully, and indecently digging open graves in a Roman Catholic burial-ground, which had been closed for burials by order in council in 1859, and for taking out portions of bodies of deceased persons interred therein. The indictment also contained a count for contravening the Disused Burial Grounds Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 72), by building on the disused burial-ground in question. Pleas of guilty were entered, and sentences of imprisonment imposed. For precedent of indictment in such cases, see R. v. Jacobson, 14 Cox, 522. Penalties are imposed by s. 25 of the Burials Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 81), for removal of bodies from any place of burial without the licence of a Secretary of State, except in the cases of removal under faculty from one consecrated place of burial to another. R. v. Tristram [1898] 2 Q. B. 371; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 637. These penalties appear to be alternative to the common law remedy (see 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33, ante, p. 160). A person who without lawful authority disposes of a dead body for the purpose of dissection, is indictable at common law. R. v. Lynn, 2 T. R. 733; 1 Leach, 497: R. v. Gilles, R. & R. 366 n. It appears to be immaterial whether the body was disposed of for gain or not. R. v. Cundick, Dowl. & Ry. (N. P.) 13. But where the master of a workhouse, having as such the lawful possession of the bodies of paupers who died therein, and who therefore was authorized under the 7th section of the Anatomy Act (2 & 3 W. 4, c. 75), to permit the bodies of such paupers to undergo anatomical examination, unless to his knowledge the deceased person had expressed in his lifetime, in the manner therein mentioned, his desire to the contrary, " or unless the surviving husband or wife, or any known relative of the deceased person, should require the body to be interred without such examination,"—in order to prevent the relatives of the deceased paupers from making this requirement, and to lead them to believe that the bodies were buried without dissection, showed the bodies to the relatives in coffins, and caused the appearance of a funeral to be gone through; and, having by this fraud prevented the relatives from making the requirement, then sold the bodies for dissection; he was held not to be indictable at common law. R. v. Feist, Dears. & B. 590; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 164; 8 Cox, 18. [Sed quære; see 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1871, n.]

Statute.

2 Edw. 7, c. 8 (Cremation Act, 1902), s. 8, sub-s. (1).]—Every person who shall contravene any such regulation as aforesaid, or shall knowingly carry out or procure or take part in the burning of any human remains except in accordance with such regulations and the provisions of this Act, shall (in addition to any liability or penalty which he may otherwise incur) be liable, on summary conviction, to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds. . . . [Appeal to quarter sessions. See regulations contained in Stat. Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 4, tit. Cremation, E.]

(2) Every person who shall wilfully make any false . . . representation, or sign or utter any false certificate, with a view to procuring the burning of any human remains, shall (in addition to any penalty or liability which he may otherwise incur) be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. [The words omitted have been repealed by 1 & 2 G. 5, c. 6 (Perjury Act, 1911).]

(3) Every person who, with intent to conceal the commission or impede the prosecution of any offence, procures or attempts to procure the cremation of any body, or, with such intent, makes any declaration or gives any certificate under this Act, shall be liable on conviction on indictment to penal servitude for a term not exceeding five years. As to minimum term of penal servitude and term of imprisonment, see 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, ante, pp. 238, 239. [It would seem that "cremation" here means burning in a crematorium. Where the evidence was that the bodies of children were burnt by the prisoner in a kitchen range or stove in the prisoner's own house, it was held that there was no evidence "of procuring the cremation of any body" to go to the jury. R. v. Byers [1907] 71 J. P. 205, Kennedy, J.]

(e) INTERFERENCE WITH PUBLIC RIGHTS OF PASSAGE. NUISANCE TO HIGHWAYS.

Common Law.

The common law remedy for obstruction of, or general interference by non-repair with, public rights of passage by land or water, i.e., over highways, navigable rivers, and public bridges, is by indictment of the persons responsible for the nuisances caused to the public whether by misfeasance or non-feasance. Cowley v. Newmarket Local Board [1892] A. C. 345; 62 L. J. (Q. B.) 65; Sydney Municipal Council v. Bourke [1895] A. C. 433, 443; 64 L. J. (P. C.) 140: Maguire v. Mayor, etc., of Liverpool [1905] 1 K. B. 767; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 369. The procedure, though criminal in form, is now treated as in substance civil for most purposes of evidence and appeal; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 14 (post, p. 1352); 7 Edw. 7, c. 23, s. 20 (3), post, p. 1353. As to what constitutes a highway, see post, pp. 1360—1364.

41 & 42 Vict. c. 77 (Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878), s. 10.—Mode of proceeding where county authority has made an order for the repair of a highway on a highway authority, and the highway authority disputes its liability to repair.]—Where complaint is made to the county authority (i.e., the county council) that the highway authority of any highway area within their jurisdiction has made default in maintaining or repairing all or any of the highways within their jurisdiction, the county authority, if satisfied after due inquiry and report by their surveyor that the authority has been guilty of the alleged default, shall make an order limiting a time for the performance of the duty of the highway authority in the matter of such complaint. . . .

Where an order has been made by a county authority for the repair of a highway on a highway authority alleged to be in default, if such authority, within ten days after service on them of the order of the county authority, give notice to the clerk of the peace that they decline to comply with the requisitions of such order until their liability to repair the highway in respect to which they are alleged to have made default has been determined by a jury, it shall be the duty of the county authority either to satisfy the defaulting authority by cancelling or modifying in such manner as the authority may desire the order of the county authority, or else to submit to a jury the question of the liability of the defaulting authority to repair the highway.

If the county authority decide to submit the question to a jury, they shall direct a bill of indictment to be preferred to the next practicable assizes to be holden in and for their county, with a view to try the liability of the defaulting authority to repair the highway. Until the trial of the indictment is concluded the order of the county authority shall be suspended. On the conclusion of the trial, if the jury find the defendants guilty, the order of the county authority shall forthwith be deemed to come into force; but if the jury acquit the defendants the order of the county authority shall forthwith become void.

The costs of the indictment, and of the proceedings consequent thereon, shall be paid by such parties to the proceedings as the Court before whom the case is tried may direct. Any costs directed to be paid by the county authority shall be deemed to be expenses properly incurred by such authority, and shall be paid accordingly out of the county rate; and any costs directed to be paid by the highway authority shall be deemed to be expenses properly incurred by such authority in maintenance of the roads within their jurisdiction, and shall be paid out of the funds applicable to the maintenance of such roads.

28 & 29 Vict. c. 83 (Locomotives Act, 1865), s. 12.]—Nothing in this Act contained shall authorize any person to use a locomotive which may be so constructed or used as to be a public nuisance at common law; and nothing herein contained shall affect the right of any person to recover damages in respect of any injury he may have sustained in consequence of the use of a locomotive.

59 & 60 Vict. c. 36 (Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896), s. 1.]—(1) The enactments mentioned in the schedule to this Act, and any other enactment restricting the use of locomotives on highways and contained in any public general or local and personal Act in force at the passing of this Act [14th August, 1896], shall not apply to any vehicle propelled by mechanical power if it is under three tons in weight unladen, and is not used for the purpose of drawing more than one vehicle (such vehicle without its locomotive not to exceed in weight unladen four tons), and is so constructed that no smoke or other visible vapour is emitted therefrom except from any temporary or accidental cause; and vehicles so exempted, whether locomotives or drawn by locomotives, are in this Act referred to as light locomotives.

Provided that (a) the council of any county or county borough shall have power to make bye-laws preventing or restricting the use of such locomotives upon any bridge within their area, where such council are satisfied that such use would be attended with damage to the bridge or danger to the public.

(b) A light locomotive shall be deemed to be a carriage within the meaning of any Act of Parliament, whether public, general, or local, and of any rule, regulation, or bye-law made under any Act of Parliament, and, if used as a carriage of any particular class, shall be deemed to be a carriage of that class, and the law relating to carriages of that class shall apply accordingly. (See ante, pp. 892, 954.)

(2) In calculating for the purposes of this Act the weight of a vehicle unladen, the weight of any water, fuel or accumulators used for the purpose of propulsion shall not be included.

NUISANCE BY OBSTRUCTION.

Indictment for obstructing a Common Highway. (Common Law.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Obstructing a Highway..

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of —— [and on other days between that date and the —— day of ——], in the county of ——, obstructed or caused to be obstructed the common highway called the Strand by [state in ordinary language the obstruction.]

Evidence.

The defendant and his wife are admissible as witnesses and compellable to give evidence on the trial of this indictment. 40 & 41 Vict. c. 14, s. 1 (ante, p. 457).

Prove the way in question to be a common highway. (See post, pp. 1360—1364.) Old maps may be evidence of reputation, but are not so of the exact boundaries of the highway. R. v. Berger [1894] 1 Q. B. 823; 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 529; 17 Cox, 761. (See ante, p. 412.) Prove the obstruction, as stated in the indictment; and prove that it was productive of inconvenience to persons passing through the street, either in carriages or on foot. Where a waggoner occupied one side of a public street in a city, before his warehouses, in loading and unloading his waggons, for several hours at a time, both day and night, and having one waggon at least usually standing before his warehouses, so that no carriages could pass on that side of the street, and sometimes even foot passengers were incommoded by cumbrous goods lying upon the ground ready for loading; this was held to be a public nuisance, although it appeared that there was room for two carriages to pass on the opposite side of the street. R. v. Russell, 6 East, 427: and see R. v. Jones, 3 Camp. 230: R. v. Cross, 3 Camp. 224: Harris v. Mobbs, 3 Ex. D. 273: Fritz v. Hobson, 14 Ch. D. 542; 49 L. J. (Ch.) 321: Att.-Gen. v. Brighton and Hove Co-operative Supply Association [1900] 1 Ch. 276; 69 L. J. (Ch.) 204. As to the uses to which a highway may lawfully be put, see Hadwell v. Righton [1907] 2 K. B. 345; 76 L. J. (K. B.) 891. Where a highway runs between fences, the right of passage which the public have along it extends primâ facie, and unless there be evidence to the contrary, over the whole space between the fences. Steel v. Prickett, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 463: R. v. Wright, 3 B. & Ad. 681: R. v. United Kingdom Electric Telegraph Co. (supra): Locke-King v. Woking U. D. C., 14 T. L. R. 32; 62 J. P. 167: Harvey v. Truro R. D. C. [1903] 2 Ch. 638; 72 L. J. (Ch.) 705; 68 J. P. 51. But the mere existence of fences on either side of a highway is not conclusive; in order to raise the presumption, it must be proved that there is nothing to show that they were not put up as boundaries of the highway. Offin v. Rochford R. D. C. [1906] 1 Ch. 342; 75 L. J. (Ch.) 348. The nature of the district, the width and level of the margins, and the regularity of the lines of fence are circumstances to be taken into account in determining the fact of dedication. There is no invariable presumption. Countess of Belmore v. Kent C. C. [1901] 1 Ch. 873; 70 L. J. (Ch.) 501. The case of Neeld v. Hendon U. D. C., 81 L. T. 405; 63 J. P. 724, which is discussed in Offin v. Rochford R. D. C. [1906] 1 Ch. 342; 75 L. J. (Ch.) 348, turned on the fact that the strips were proved to be waste of a manor, and that there was ample evidence to rebut the presumption if it existed. Where a fence was not put up with reference to a highway, but was the original boundary of a close through which the highway was made, it was held that the presumption that the fence was the boundary of the highway was rebutted, and that, in the absence of sufficient evidence of public user to found the inference of dedication, the open waste land between the fence and the metalled part of the highway was not part of the highway. Att.-Gen v. Moorsom-Roberts [1908] 72 J. P. 123. Where the road runs over unfenced land, there is no such presumption. Easton v. Richmond Highway Board, L. R. 7 Q. B. 69; 41 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 25; and see Pratt on Highways (15th ed.), pp. 36, 37. A permanent obstruction erected upon a highway without lawful authority, and which renders the way less commodious than before to the public, is a public nuisance at common law. R. v. United Kingdom Electric Telegraph Co., ante, p. 1355. Where, therefore, the defendants placed telegraph posts upon a highway and permanently kept them there, such posts being of such size and solidity as to obstruct the passage of carriages and horses, or foot passengers, upon the parts of the highway where they stood, the defendants were held liable to be found guilty upon an indictment for a nuisance. And it was also held, that it made no difference in the defendants' liability to conviction that the posts were not placed upon the hard or metalled part of the highway, or upon a footpath artificially formed upon it, or that sufficient space was left for the public traffic. Id. On an indictment for the continuance of a nuisance, viz., the continuance of a wall obstructing a highway, the record of the judgment on a former indictment for the same nuisance against the same defendant on which he was convicted is conclusive evidence that the locus in quo is a highway, and that the wall is a nuisance. R. v. Maybury, 4 F. & F. 90. Although an Act of Parliament authorizes alterations in a public highway, yet if those alterations are not made with reasonable care, and cause unnecessary danger to persons using the highway, the contractor executing the works may be indicted for obstructing the highway. R. v. Burt, 11 Cox, 399, Hawkins, J.

The use of locomotives and motor-cars on highways and other roads is regulated by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 70, and 28 & 29 Vict. c. 83, and by 41 & 42 Vict. c. 77, Part II.; 59 & 60 Vict. c. 36; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 29, and 3 Edw. 7, c. 36; but the two first-mentioned Acts in ss. 13 and 12 respectively (ante, p. 1352) forbid the construction or use of such machines so as to be a nuisance at common law. It has been held that the use of locomotives and trucks on a highway does not amount to a nuisance by obstruction to the highway, unless such use creates a substantial obstruction, and occasions delay and inconvenience to the public substantially greater than would have been caused by horses and carts. R. v. Chittenden, 15 Cox, 725, Hawkins, J. Uninterrupted use of part of a street as a fair or market for rags has been held an answer to an indictment for obstruction. R. v. Smith [1802] 4 Esp. 111 (Rag Fair case), Ellenborough, C.J.

Where a statute enacted, that the erection of a building within certain limits should be deemed a "common nuisance," and also gave a summary remedy, by proceedings before magistrates, it was held that the offender might be indicted for the nuisance. R. v. Gregory, 5 B. & Ad. 555; 3 L. J. (M. C.) 25. (See ante, p. 5; and R. v. Charlesworth, 16 Q. B. 1012.)

The obstruction to warrant a conviction must be appreciable. R. v. Bartholomew, 72 J. P. 79 (C. C. R.) : R. v. Leprue, 30 J. P. 723.

Where the way is proved to be a highway, and to be obstructed, the only defence is the existence of statutory authority to obstruct it, or that it has been closed by order of justices under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 50, s. 84, or in London under Michael Angelo Taylor's Act (57 G. 3, c. xxix.), with the consents required by that Act and the Local Government Acts of 1888 and 1894. See Pratt on Highways (15th ed.), chap. vi.; or that, if it is a street in a town, it has been closed under s. 66 of the Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 89). See R. v. Platts, 49 L. J. (Q. B.) 848; 28 W. R. 915.

Upon the trial of an indictment for obstructing a highway, an agreement was approved by the judge that the prosecutor should consent to a verdict of "not guilty" if defendants restored the highway within seven years. The defendants did not carry out their part of the agreement, and an action was thereupon brought against them for specific performance or damages. It was held, however, that the action would not lie, as the consideration, the consenting to the verdict of "not guilty," was illegal. Windhill Local Board v. Vint, 45 Ch. D. 351; 59 L. J. (Ch.) 608.

In some cases the consent of the highway authority may be an answer to an indictment for encroachment or obstruction. See R. v. Burrell, 10 Cox, 462 (C. C. R.) : R. v. Bartholomew [1908] 1 K. B. 554; 72 J. P. 79.

Indictment for obstructing the Navigation of a Public River.

(Common Law.)

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

As in last precedent, substituting for the street "that part of the River Thames, being a public navigable river lying between —— and ——."

Misdemeanor: fine and (or) imprisonment with or without hard labour (see ante, pp. 239, 241, 246). Also, to divert a part of a public river, whereby the current of it is weakened, and rendered incapable of carrying vessels of the same burthen as it could before, is a common nuisance. 1 Hawk. c. 75, s. 11. See R. v. Grosvenor, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 511, an indictment for erecting a wharf in the Thames to the injury of navigation: R. v. Ward, 4 A. & E. 384; 5 L. J. (N. S.) K. B. 221 : Att.-Gen. v. Terry, L. R. 9 Ch. App. 423, 426 (disapproving R. v. Russell, 6 B. & C. 566; 5 L. J. (K. B.) 221) : R. v. Tindall, 6 A. & E. 143; 1 Nev. & P. 719; 6 L. J. (M. C.) 97 : R. v. Morris, 1 B. & Ad. 441 : and R. v. Randall, C. & Mar. 496 (ante, p. 1313). If a ship or other vessel sinks by accident in a river, although it obstruct the navigation, yet the owner is not indictable, as for a nuisance, for not removing it. R. v. Watts, 2 Esp. 675. As to the remedy in such cases, see The Crystal [1894] A. C. 508; 63 L. J. (P. D. & A.) 146 : Barraclough v. Brown [1897] A. C. 615; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 672.

Evidence.

The defendant and his wife are admissible as witnesses and compellable to give evidence on the trial of this indictment. 40 & 41 Vict. c. 14, s. 1 (ante, p. 457).

Prove that the river in question is public and navigable in that part of it which was obstructed (see R. v. Betts, 16 Q. B. 1022: Simpson v. Att.-Gen. [1904] A. C. 476); and prove the obstruction stated in the indictment, in the same manner as under the last precedent. Upon the trial of an indictment for a nuisance in a navigable river, by erecting staiths therein, for loading ships with coals, the jury were directed to acquit the defendant, if they thought the abridgment of the right of passage occasioned by these staiths was for a public purpose, and occasioned a public benefit; and if the erections were in a reasonable situation, and a reasonable space was left for the passage of vessels on the river; and the judge pointed out to the jury that, by reason of the staiths, the coals were supplied better and at a cheaper rate than they otherwise could be, which was a public benefit; and it was held that this direction was right. R. v. Russell (ante, p. 1357), Tenterden, C.J., diss. But the opinion of the majority was dissented from in R. v. Ward, 4 A. & E. 384; in R. v. Betts, 16 Q. B. 1022, and in Att.-Gen. v. Terry (supra); and see Mayor, etc., Norwich v. Norfolk Rail. Co., 24 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 105; 4 E. & B. 397, 440, and the cases collected (supra).

The building of a bridge, or of a wall or embankment, partly in the bed of a navigable river, does not necessarily constitute a nuisance; the question whether in fact it is so or not in the particular instance is for a jury; and where the verdict of a jury negatives any actual obstruction, that is in effect an acquittal. R. v. Betts, 16 Q. B. 1022: see R. v. Charlesworth, Id. 1012. Where the judge at the trial asked the jury whether they thought the erection would be "a material nuisance," in which case they were to find a verdict of guilty: but told them that if they thought the "nuisance" was so slight, uncertain and rare, that the defendant ought not to be made criminally liable for it, they should acquit him; and the jury saying that they considered the erection, "although a nuisance, was not sufficiently so to render the defendant criminally liable," he directed an acquittal: the Court held that the charge was to be understood as meaning, not that a party may legally commit a small nuisance, but that an obstruction might be so insignificant as not to constitute a nuisance; and that the jury must be understood as finding that the obstruction in question was so insignificant; and so that there was not a misdirection which would warrant a new trial. R. v. Russell, 3 E. & B. 942; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 173; and see R. v. Tindall, 6 A. & E. 143, 152; 6 L. J. (M. C.) 97. It is a defence to an indictment for obstructing a public navigable river to prove that the obstruction was erected under statutory authority. Jolliffe v. Wallasey L. B., L. R. 9 C. P. 62, 82; 43 L. J. (N. S.) C. P. 41: Lyon v. Fishmongers Co., 1 App. Cas. 662; 46 L. J. (Ch.) 68.

Where the workmen of the defendant, in working his colliery, stacked the refuse in such a manner that it fell into and obstructed a navigable river, and the defendant was indicted for a nuisance in causing such obstruction, it was held, that the fact of his not having personally superintended the works, of his having given express orders to the workmen that the refuse should be deposited in a particular place where it would not do any harm, and that it was not to be thrown into the river, would not relieve him from liability upon the indictment. R. v. Stephens, L. R. 1 Q. B. 702; 35 L. J. (Q. B.) 251; 7 B. & S. 710; 10 Cox, 340. Cf. Chisholm v. Doulton, 22 Q. B. D. 736; 58 L. J. (M. C.) 133 (ante, p. 25).

NON-REPAIR OF HIGHWAYS.

Indictment against a Parish for not repairing a Highway.

(Common Law.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Non-repair of Highway.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

The inhabitants of the parish of ——, in the county of ——, on divers days between the —— day of —— and —— day of ——, neglected to repair that part of the King's highway leading from —— to —— within the said parish, and thereby caused danger or a nuisance to persons using the said highway.

Where a public footway led from A. to the gate of a churchyard, and communicated through that gate by a public path which in one part of it formed an acute angle with the church, it was held that it might be described as a footway leading from A. towards and unto the church. R. v. Marchioness of Downshire, 4 A. & E. 232; 5 Nev. & M. 662. Where the highway was described as leading from the village of T. to the village of E., and the evidence was that it led from the village of T. into a turnpike road from A. to B., and then, after passing along it for some distance, branched off to the village of E., it was held well described. R. v. Turweston, 16 Q. B. 109; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 46. Where the indictment stated the way to be a carriage-way leading from the town of A., in the county of B., towards and unto the village of E., in the same county, and the part charged to be out of repair was a portion of a lane called F. lane, and it appeared in evidence that, to go from the town of A. to the village of E. with a carriage, a person must go four miles along the C. turnpike road, then all along F. lane, and then cross the W. turnpike road, and for a short distance go along a road which goes from the W. turnpike road to the village of E.: it was held, that the road was not misdescribed. R. v. Steventon, 1 C. & K. 55. Where an indictment charged the obstruction of a footway from A. to C., and it appeared that the way was a carriage-way from A. to B., and a footway from B. to C., the obstruction being between B. and C., this was held, if a misdescription, amendable under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 (rep.). R. v. Sturge, 3 E. & B. 734; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 172. The indictment, however, must show with certainty the part of the road which is out of repair, etc. 1 Hawk. c. 76, ss. 234, 235; but see 2 Wms. Saund. 158 (d); and that it is within the parish; see R. v. Hartford, 1 Cowp. 111: R. v. Gamlingay, 3 T. R. 513: R. v. Knight, 6 L. J. (M. C.) 19; 7 B. & C. 413: R. v. Upton-on-Severn, 6 C. & P. 133. If the parish was situate part in one county and part in another, the indictment must be against the whole parish, although the road out of repair were in a part of the parish lying in one county only; R. v. Clifton, 5 T. R. 498: sed. contra R. v. Weston, 4 Burr. 2507. In R. v. Landulph, 1 M. & Rob. 393, it was held that where two parishes are separated by a river, the medium filum aquæ is the presumptive boundary between them. But this view was doubted in Bridgwater Trustees v. Bootle, L. R. 2 Q. B. 4, 7. Where a public way crosses the bed of a river which washes over it at every tide, and leaves a deposit of mud, the parish is not bound to make it good. R. v. Landulph (supra). It has been held that the liability of the inhabitants of a parish to indictment has not been transferred to the parish council by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73 (Local Government Act, 1894); R. v. Shipley Parish Council, 18 Cox, 531; 61 J. P. 488; but still exists. R. v. Morse [1904] W. N. 114 (K. B. D.). As to the liability to indictment of district councils, including borough councils, see ante, p. 1351.

Misdemeanor: fine. As to the levying and application of such fine, see 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 50, s. 96, ante, p. 1349; and cases there cited.

Plea of General Issue.

And J. S. and J. N., two of the inhabitants of the said parish of ——, by A. B., their solicitor, for themselves and the rest of the inhabitants of the said parish, say they are not guilty of the offence charged against them in the indictment.

Evidence for the Prosecution under the General Issue.

The parishioners of the defendant parish and their wives may be compelled to give evidence for the prosecution. 40 & 41 Vict. c. 14, s. 1 (ante, p. 457).

1. The prosecutor must prove that the road or street in question is a public highway—that is to say, a way open and common to all persons. 1 Hawk. c. 76, s. 1; see 3 Chit. Cr. L. 565 et seq.: R. v. Richards, 8 T. R. 634: Rugby Charity Trustees v. Merryweather, 11 East, 376 n.; 5 Taunt. 125: R. v. Lloyd, 1 Camp. 260: R. v. Barr, 4 Camp. 16; R. v. St. Benedict's, Cambridge, 4 B. & Ald. 447: R. v. Mellor, 1 B. & Ad. 32: R. v. Paul, 2 M. & Rob. 307. A highway may be so by prescription—i.e., user as a highway for the time of legal memory—or by dedication and acceptance. Highways are not within the Prescription Act, 1832 (2 & 3 W. 4, c. 71), and proof of common law prescription is in practice never now given, proof of dedication being simpler. See Mann v. Brodie, 10 App. Cas. 378, 386. Once the way is proved to be a highway, mere disuse for however long does not deprive the public of their right of way. Harvey v. Truro R. D. C. [1903] 2 Ch. 638 : 72 L. J. (Ch.) 705 : R. v. Edwards [1847] 11 J. P. 602. Where a footway was laid out under an inclosure award, it was held that user by wheeled traffic for forty or fifty years was in its inception illegal, and could not be legalized by length of time. Sheringham U. D. C. v. Halsey [1904] 68 J. P. 395. As to the admissibility and effect of maps, see ante, pp. 412, 1355. A road or street may in law be a public highway, though it is not a thoroughfare; it is a question of fact for the jury in each case whether it is so or not. Bateman v. Bluck, 18 Q. B. 870; 21 L. J. (Q. B.) 406 : Bourke v. Davis, 44 Ch. D. 110, 123 : Robinson v. Cowpen, L. B., 62 L. J. (Q. B.) 619. In rural districts it is doubtful whether a way which is not a thoroughfare can be a highway. Eyre v. New Forest Highway Board, 56 J. P. 518. But although the lawful stoppage of access to one end of a highway does not make it cease to be a highway (Wood v. Veal, 5 B. & Ald. 454 : R. v. Downshire (Marquis), 5 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 72; 4 A. & E. 698), a highway ceases to be such where the access to it at both ends has become impassable by reason of other highways leading to it having been legally stopped up. Bailey v. Jamieson, 1 C. P. D. 329. A road dedicated to and used by the public becomes (subject to 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 50, s. 23) a highway repairable by the parish, although neither such dedication nor such use has been adopted or acquiesced in by the parish, and although the parish may in fact never have repaired the road. R. v. Leake, 5 B. & Ad. 469; 2 Nev. & M. 583 : R. v. Newbold, 11 Cox, 231 : see Roberts v. Hunt, 15 Q. B. 17 : R. v. Lordsmere, 15 Q. B. 689; 89 L. J. (M. C.) 215. The absence of repair by the parish is, however, a circumstance (to be weighed with the other evidence in the case) going to prove that the road is not a public one. R. v. Leake: R. v. Newbold (supra). Public user of a road for many years is evidence from which the jury may infer a dedication, though it may not be clear in whom the ownership of the soil is vested. R. v. East Mark, 11 Q. B. 877; 11 L. J. (Q. B.) 177 : see Poole v. Huskinson, 11 M. & W. 827 : R. v. Petrie, 24 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 167; 4 E. & B. 737. A public user, even for less than twenty years, may be sufficient evidence for this purpose, if clearly shown to have been acquiesced in by the owner of the soil. R. v. Chorley, 12 Q. B. 515. Such user, if uninterrupted and with the knowledge and consent of the owner, is sufficient evidence of intention to dedicate. Leckhampton Quarries Co. v. Ballinger, 68 J. P. 464, Eady, J.; affirmed as to costs by Court of Appeal, 69 J. P. 377. Where the user of a road by the public had been such as would have warranted a presumption of dedication as against an owner in fee in possession, it was held that the consent of the tenant for life and remainderman must be presumed, although in fact the tenant for life had no knowledge of the user of the road by the public. Farquhar v. Newbury R. D. C. [1909] 1 Ch. 12; 78 L. J. (Ch.) 170; 100 L. T. 17; 73 J. P. 1. Persons entitled to a right of passage by way of easement or licence over a driftway or other private road are not "occupiers" of the way within the meaning of s. 36 of the Highway Act, 1862, and their consent is not necessary to an application to justices for a declaration converting the way into a public highway. R. v. Somers [1906] 1 K. B. 326; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 144. The Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 W. 4, c. 50), does not apply retrospectively to roads completely public by dedication before the Act, but only to roads then made, and in progress of dedication. R. v. West Mark, 2 M. & Rob. 305. Where a road has been dedicated to the public, but the conditions have not yet been fulfilled which, under the 23rd section of that Act, make it repairable by the parish, the owner of the soil is not liable for its repair. R. v. Wilson, 18 Q. B. 348; 21 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 281: see Roberts v. Hunt, 15 Q. B. 17. A road newly formed, or continued under an award made under an Inclosure Act, is not repairable by the parish until it has been declared by justices in special sessions to be fully and sufficiently formed, completed, and repaired, under 41 G. 3, c. 109, s. 9: R. v. Hatfield, 4 A. & E. 156; even though the parish had in fact repaired it before and after the award, which was made eighteen years ago. R. v. East Hagbourne, Bell, 135; 8 Cox, 135 (C. C. R.), As to proof of dedication of a cul-de-sac as a highway, see Whitehouse v. Hugh [1906] 1 Ch. 253; 75 L. J. (Ch.) 677. And see Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus [1905] 2 Ch. 188, at p. 207; 74 L. J. (Ch.) 599, Farwell, J. There is no such inconsistency between the powers and duties of commissioners of sewers to keep up a sea or river wall, and a right of way enjoyed by the public along such a wall, as to prevent such a right of way being acquired:—evidence of long and uninterrupted user may establish the right of way in such a case as well as in the ordinary case of a right of way claimed and used over the land of an individual. Greenwich District Board of Works v. Maudslay, L. R. 5 Q. B. 397; 39 L. J. (Q. B.) 205. The public have no common law right to use the foreshore or to pass and repass thereon for the purpose of bathing in the sea, whether the foreshore is the property of the Crown or of a private owner. Brinkman v. Matley [1904] 2 Ch. 313; 73 L. J. (Ch.) 160.

There cannot in law be a dedication to a part of the public, but it seems that there may be a dedication partial as to the use of the road by the whole public; e.g., that it shall be used on foot only; or for all purposes except carrying coals; or that it shall continue subject to such use of portions of it as the occupiers of adjoining houses had been accustomed to make. See Marquis of Stafford v. Coyney, 5 L. J. (K. B.) 285; 7 B. & C. 257: Le Neve v. Vestry of Mile End Old Town, 27 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 208; 8 E. &.B. 1054: Morant v. Chamberlin, 6 H. & N. 541. Or there may be dedication of a highway subject to a partial interruption during the continuance of a fair or market for a certain limited and not unreasonable time. Elwood v. Bullock, 6 Q. B. 383: Gingell v. Stepney Borough Council [1906] 2 K. B. 468; 77 L. J. (K. B.) 347. So a foot road may legally be dedicated to and accepted by the public as a highway, subject to the inconvenience of being occasionally ploughed up. Mercer v. Woodgate, L. R. 5 Q. B. 26; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 21. There cannot in point of law be a dedication to the public for a limited time. R. v. Lordsmere, 15 Q. B. 689; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 220, Byles, J.: Corsellis v. London County Council [1907] 1 Ch. 704; [1908] 1 Ch. 13; 77 L. J. (Ch.) 120. There must be acceptance by the public. Att.-Gen. v. Biphosphated Guano Co., 11 Ch. D. 327; 49 L. J. (Ch.) 68: Cubitt v. Maxse, L. R. 8 C. P. 715; 42 L. J. (C. P.) 278.

Where a highway is supported by a wall, and such wall becomes dangerous by reason of non-repair, the inhabitants of the place in which such highway is situate, if liable to repair the highway, can be convicted upon an indictment for non-repair, it being a question for the jury whether the wall forms part of the highway or not. R. v. Lordsmere, 16 Cox, 65 (C. C. R.). Cf. Kent County Council v. Sandgate U. D. C., 61 J. P. 517; 79 L. T. 425 (C. A.): Att.-Gen. v. Staffordshire County Council [1905] 1 Ch. 336; 74 L. J. Ch. 153.

The powers of companies created by statute, and possessing statutory authority to carry on railways or canals, to dedicate land for highways depend on a consideration of the statutes relating to the company. Att.-Gen. v. London and South Western Rail. Co., 69 J. P. 110: Taff Vale Rail. Co. v. Pontypridd U. D. C., 93 L. T. 126; 69 J. P. 351: Coats v. Herefordshire County Council [1909] 2 Ch. 579; 78 L. J. (Ch.) 781. But such a statutory body has power to dedicate a right of way along the embankment of a reservoir where such dedication need not result in the cost of the upkeep being materially increased. Lancs and Yorks Rail. Co. v. Davenport [1906] 70 J. P. 129. As to widening highways or bridges over railways, see Rhondda U. D. C. v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. [1908] 1 K. B. 239; 78 L. J. (K. B.) 647; 71 J. P. 189. As to fires caused by sparks from railway engines, see 5 Edw. 7, c. 11 (Railway Fires Act, 1905). A parish cannot be convicted for not rebuilding a sea wall washed away by the sea, over the top of which the alleged highway used to pass. R. v. Paul, 2 M. & Rob. 307. So, where part of a highway had, at the time when the indictment was preferred, been destroyed by the encroachments of the sea, and the surface of the existing road was in good repair up to the point from which it had been destroyed, at which point the road was terminated by a perpendicular cliff, caused by successive encroachments; it was held that there was no obligation on the parish to provide an available carriage-way from that point, in the line of the former road, down to the beach. R. v. Hornsea, Dears. 291; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 59: see also R. v. Bamber, 5 Q. B. 279; 1 Dav. & M. 367; 13 L. J. (M. C.) 13 (post, p. 1370). Where, however, part of a highway which ran along the slope of a hill several hundred feet above the level of a valley beneath, was carried away into the valley by a landslip and its place filled up with débris, but the line of the part of the highway so carried away was known and admitted, and there was evidence that it was practicable to form a road along the old track of a similar character to the adjoining part of the old road at a cost of 341*l.*, it was held that there was no proof of such destruction of the highway as to exempt the parish from their liability to repair it. R. v. Greenhow, 1 Q. B. D. 703; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 141.

The record of a former conviction of the parish or of a former judgment against them on a presentment for non-repair of the same road is, when not guilty alone is pleaded, conclusive evidence against the defendants (in the absence of fraud or want of notice) that the highway is in the parish, and that the parish is liable to repair it. R. v. St. Pancras, Peake (3rd ed.), 286: R. v. Whitney, 7 C. & P. 208: R. v. Haughton, 22 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 89; 1 E. & B. 501; 6 Cox, 101. And a conviction on an indictment against an adjoining parish, for non-repair of a piece of road in continuation of the way in question, was held admissible in evidence to prove that the way in question was a highway. R. v. Brightside Bierlow, 13 Q. B. 933; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 50.

2. He must prove that that part of the road in question which is out of repair, is within the parish charged by the indictment. A previous conviction for non-repair has been held conclusive that the highway is within the parish. R. v. Nether Hallam, 6 Cox, 435. Want of certainty in such description cannot be taken advantage of under the general issue. R. v. Hammersmith, 1 Stark. (N. P.) 357.

3. He must prove the part of the road so described to be out of repair, as stated in the indictment. See R. v. Stretford, 2 Ld. Raym. 1169. The liability either at common law or by statute is general to repair and maintain the highway, leaving the person liable to find out the best or an adequate means of discharging the liability. See Att.-Gen. v. Staffordshire County Council [1905] 1 Ch. 336; 74 L. J. Ch. 153, and cases there cited. The proprietary right of the highway authority in the soil of a highway, by virtue of s. 149 of the Public Health Act, 1875, is confined to what is necessary to maintain the road as a highway. Wednesbury Corporation v. Lodge Holes Colliery Co. [1905] 2 K. B. 823; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 112, Jelf, J., affirmed [1908] A. C. 323.

4. It is not necessary to prove the liability of the parish to repair; for the law presumes that until the contrary is shown. R. v. Great Broughton, 5 Burr. 2700 : R. v. Leake, 5 B. & Ald. 469. And this primary liability of the inhabitants of the parish was held not to be taken away even by a statute which imposed on a canal company the liability to repair the same highway out of tolls granted to them for that purpose. R. v. Brightside Bierlow, 13 Q. B. 933; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 50. In the case of highways created since 1835, the liability of the parish, etc., to repair must be proved. As to the effect of the transfer to rural district councils and parish councils of the control of highways, etc., under the Local Government Act, 1894, see R. v. Shipley Parish Council, 18 Cox, 531; 61 J. P. 488; and see R. v. Morse (ante, p. 1348).

Evidence for the Parish, under the General Issue.

The parishioners of the defendant parish and their wives are competent and compellable witnesses. 40 & 41 Vict. c. 14, s. 1 (ante, p. 457).

Under the general issue, the parish may prove that the road in question is not a common highway, or that it is in good and sufficient repair, or that the part out of repair is not within the parish. 2 Wms. Saund. 158 (a), in notis: R. v. Norwich, 1 Str. 177, 181. As to rebutting the presumption of dedication, see Neeld v. Hendon U. D. C. [1899] 63 J. P. 724; 81 L. T. 481, explained in Harvey v. Truro R. D. C. [1903] 2 Ch. 638; 72 L. J. (Ch.) 705; and see Countess of Belmore v. Kent County Council [1901] 1 Ch. 873; 70 L. J. (Ch.) 501 : Offin v. Rochford R. D. C. [1906] 1 Ch. 342; 75 L. J. (Ch.) 348 (ante, p. 1355). As to presumption with reference to ownership of ditches, see R. v. Waring [1899] 63 J. P. 788 : Simcox v. Yardley R. D. C. [1905] 69 J. P. 66; and of the soil of the highway, see Mappin Bros. v. Liberty & Co. [1903] 1 Ch. 118; 72 L. J. (Ch.) 63. There is no rule of law that a ditch running alongside a highway between the road and the fence cannot be dedicated as part of the highway merely because it is not part of the roadway and cannot be used by the public for purposes of passage. Chorley Corporation v. Nightingale [1907] 2 K. B. 637; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 793. They cannot prove the liability of particular persons, ratione tenuræ, or the like, or the liability of a particular part of the parish by custom, to repair the road in question; for those defences must be made the subject of a special plea in all cases; R. v. St. Andrew's, Holborn, 1 Mod. 112; Keb. 301 (as to which see R. v. Weston, 4 Burr. 2511, Lord Mansfield: Anon., 1 Vent. 256; 1 Hawk. c. 76, s. 9; 2 Wms. Saund. 159 (a), n. (10): R. v. Sheffield, 2 T. R. 106: R. v. Penderryn, Id. 513: R. v. Hatfield, 4 B. & Ald. 75: R. v. Netherthong, 2 B. & Ald. 179; unless the parish have been relieved of their liability by a public statute. R. v. St. George, Hanover Square, 3 Camp. 222.

The inhabitants of a parish are not bound to repair a way used by the public and repaired by the parish for twenty years if there is no owner who could dedicate it, and the repairs by the parish are shown to have been begun and continued under a mistaken notion of the liability to repair. R. v. Edmonton, 1 M. & Rob. 24. See R. v. Leake (ante, p. 1364).

Plea that others, ratione tenuræ, are bound to repair.

And J. S. and J. N., two of the inhabitants of the said parish of ——, by A. B., their solicitor, for themselves and the rest of the inhabitants of the said parish (excepting one A. C.), say, that our lord the King ought not further to prosecute the said indictment against the inhabitants of the parish aforesaid (excepting the said A. C. as aforesaid); because they say, that the said A. C., by reason of his tenure of certain lands and tenements called ——, lying and being in the said parish, ought to repair and amend the part of the said highway set out in the indictment.

Prescription to bind an individual to repair a highway must be in respect of the tenure of his land, taking of toll or other profit. 2 Wms. Saund. 158 (f), n. (9). It seems that a parish cannot be liable by prescription to repair a highway situate in another parish. R. v. Ashby Folville, L. R. 1 Q. B. 213; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 154. Nor can a parish get rid of its liability to repair, and throw the liability to indictment upon an individual by reason of any agreement between the individual and others. R. v. Liverpool (Mayor, etc.), 3 East, 86: R. v. Beeby, 8 L. J. (M. C.) 38. It is therefore necessary, in all cases where the parish in which the road is situate seeks to throw the liability to repair upon an individual or upon another parish, etc., to state in the plea the consideration for such liability. Merely stating a prescription will not be sufficient, except in the case of a corporation sole or aggregate, who may be bound by a prescription or usage, without consideration: R. v. St. Giles, Cambridge, 5 M. & Sel. 260: R. v. Ashby Folville, L. R. 1 Q. B. 213; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 154; and except, also, where the liability is thrown upon a district or township in the same parish, there an immemorial custom for the district to repair all the roads within it may be pleaded, without expressly stating any consideration for it, for the consideration appears sufficiently upon the face of it. R. v. Ecclesfield, 1 B. & Ald. 348; and R. v. W. R. of Yorkshire, 4 B. & Ald. 623. To an indictment against the inhabitants of the parish of A. for the non-repair of a highway within the parish, there was a plea that the inhabitants of the parish of G. from time immemorial, and in consideration of levying and receiving certain rates in respect of certain lands in the parish of A. adjacent to the highway, had repaired and ought to repair the highway so often as there should be occasion. Replication, that the agreement in the plea mentioned was duly determined by notice. On demurrer to the replication the plea was held bad, since the alleged consideration was insufficient to support the liability of G., because it could not be enforced, and because it could not from its nature be immemorial, and the repairs must have been done by G. under some arrangement between the two parishes which might be, and had been, put an end to. R. v. Ashby Folville (supra). See also R. v. Ardsley (post, p. 1371).

Form of Replication.

H. A. [the clerk of the Court], who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf, joins issue.

Evidence.

In order to support this plea, the defendants must prove that A. C. is the occupier of the lands and tenements mentioned in the plea: for it is the occupier who is liable, whether he be owner or not. R. v. Watts, 1 Salk. 357: R. v. Watson, 2 Ld. Raym. 856: R. v. Bucknell; 7 Mod. 55: R. v. Barker, 25 Q. B. D. 213; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 106 (post, p. 1369). Prove also, either that these lands were formerly granted to be holden by the service of repairing this part of the highway in question, or that A. C., or those who occupied the land before him, were always used and accustomed to repair it, from which circumstance such a grant will be presumed. A grant from the Crown may be a legal origin of an obligation to repair ratione tenuræ; Esher U. D. C. v. Marks, 71 L. J. (K. B.) 309; and prescription is not the only way of proving the obligation. But in cases where prescription is relied on the liability must exist from time out of memory; and therefore, if it appears that the tenement in respect of which the liability is charged originated within time of memory, the plea will not be supported. R. v. Hayman, M. & M. 401. Evidence of reputation is admissible to prove the liability ratione tenuræ. R. v. Sutton, 7 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 205; 8 A. & E. 516: R. v. Bedfordshire, 24 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 81; 4 E. & B. 535 (overruling R. v. Wavertree, 2 M. & Rob. 353): R. v. Cotton, 3 Camp. 444. Where the occupier of land is bound, ratione tenuræ, to repair a highway, and the land is afterwards divided among several occupiers, each occupier is liable for the repair of the whole, and he may have his remedy over against the others for contribution. R. v. Bucklugh (Duchess), 1 Salk. 358; 2 Wms. Saund. 159 n. An indictment for the non-repair of a highway in parish A., alleging the liability by reason of the tenure of lands in A., is not supported by proof of a liability to repair a way extending through A. and other parishes, by reason of the tenure of a farm made up of lands in A. and the other parishes. R. v. Mizen, 2 M. & Rob. 382.

The record of an acquittal upon a former indictment against the parish, with respect to the same piece of highway, is not evidence for the defendants; for it might have proceeded upon other grounds than the non-liability of the parish to repair. R. v. St. Pancras, Peake (3rd ed.), 286. So, the record of a former conviction, although conclusive against the parish upon the plea of not guilty; Id.: R. v. Whitney, 7 C. & P. 208: R. v. Haughton, 1 E. & B. 501; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 89; unless fraud or want of notice can be shown; 2 Wms. Saund. 160 (a) n.; yet is not, it would seem, evidence against them, when they plead specially that an individual or corporation, etc., are bound to repair. But the record of a judgment after verdict against the parish upon such a plea would, it would seem, be conclusive evidence against the parish, upon their pleading the same plea to any subsequent indictment. See R. v. Eardisland, 2 Camp. 494.

Plea that a particular Division of the Parish is bound to repair.

And J. S. and J. N., two of the inhabitants of a certain district or township called A. in the parish of ——, by A. B., their solicitor, for themselves and the rest of the inhabitants of the said district or township, say, that our lord the King ought not further to prosecute the said indictment, so far as respects the inhabitants of the district or township aforesaid; because they say that the said parish of —— is, and, from time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, hitherto hath been, divided into two districts or townships called A. and C.; and that the inhabitants respectively of the several districts or townships of A. and C. have, from time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, hitherto been used and accustomed to repair and amend the several and respective highways situate and lying in their said respective districts or townships independently of each other; and that the said part of the highway referred to in the said indictment lies in that part of the said parish of —— called the district or township of C.; and that the inhabitants of the said district or township of C. ought to repair and amend the part of the said highway last aforesaid, independently of the inhabitants of the said district or township of A., in the said parish. If the plea alleges that the particular district has been accustomed to repair all the roads within it, which otherwise would be repairable by the parish at large, it must show not only that the road in question is within the particular district, but also that it is one which, but for the custom, would be repairable by the parish. R. v. Eastrington, 5 A. & E. 765; 6 L. J. (M. C.) 17; and see R. v. Ecclesfield (ante, p. 1365). It is necessary that the prescription should be pleaded: for if judgment were given against the parish, whether after verdict on the general issue, or by default, it would be conclusive evidence afterwards that the whole parish is bound to repair; R. v. St. Pancras, Peake (3rd ed.), 286: R. v. Whitney, 7 C. & P. 208; unless fraud could be shown; Id.: or unless the defence in the former case were managed by the district in which the road lay, and the other districts had no notice of the prosecution, in which case the Court would give leave to the other districts to plead the prescription to the subsequent indictment. R. v. But it was held to be no objection that the three townships were charged conjointly.* R. v. Bishop Auckland, 1 A. & E. 744.

Evidence.

Prove that the districts of A. and C. have been accustomed, as far as aged witnesses can recollect, each to repair the highways within its own district. The liability is an exception to the primâ facie liability of the parish as a whole. R. v. Barnoldswick, 4 Q. B. 499; 12 L. J. (M. C.) 44. Proof of a highway extinguished, as such, sixty years before, by an Inclosure Act, but since used by the public, and repaired by the district charged, is not sufficient to support the indictment. R. v. West Mark, 2 M. & Rob. 305. That the way is out of repair is impliedly admitted by the plea, and that the part in question lies within the district of C. is impliedly admitted by the above replication.

Proof of immemorial exemption of a township from highway rate, without proof that it has repaired its own highways, is not sufficient to establish usage charging it with its own highways and exempting it from the highway rate. R. v. Rollet, L. R. 10 Q. B. 469; 44 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 190.

Proof of a previous conviction of the inhabitants of a hamlet for non-repair is evidence of the customary liability. R. v. Lordsmere, 16 Cox, 65 (C. C. R.); and see ante, p. 1364.

Quære, whether, on an indictment against inhabitants of a district, charging them with liability to repair a highway out of the district, it is necessary to prove a specific consideration for such liability, or whether consideration may be inferred from the fact of repair without other evidence. Semble, it may. R. v. Denton, 18 Q. B. 761; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 207 n.; 1 Dears. 3: but see R. v. Ardsley (post, p. 1371).

Indictment against an Individual for not repairing ratione tenuræ (a).

As in precedent on p. 1359, except substituting for the inhabitants of the parish, "A. C., of the parish of ——, being by reason of his tenure of certain lands lying in the said parish, liable to repair, etc."

If land adjoining a highway not inclosed be afterwards inclosed by the owner (not being done by virtue of a writ of ad quod damnum [now disused; see Glen on Highways (2nd ed.), 416, 417; Pratt on Highways (15th ed.)] or other legal proceedings), he thereby renders himself liable during the continuance of the

(a) Instead of trying liability ratione tenuræ by indictment, it is now usual to try it by civil proceedings under 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 25 (2). See Esher U. D. C. v. Marks, 71 L. J. (K. B.) 309; 66 J. P. 243, and note, ante, p. 1352.

inclosure to repair that part of the highway adjoining the land so inclosed; 2 Wms. Saund. 161 n. (2); and he may be indicted for allowing it to be out of repair. The indictment must set out the special matter. And these or the like considerations for the liability to repair must be stated in all cases where the indictment is against an individual, or against another parish than that in which the road is situate. To state a prescription alone is not sufficient, except in the case of a corporation sole or aggregate, which may be bound to repair by prescription or usage, without consideration. R. v. St. Giles, Cambridge, 5 M. & Sel. 260; 1 Hawk. c. 76, s. 8.

General Issue.

"And the said A. C., by A. B., his solicitor, says, that he is not guilty."

Evidence.

A. C. and his wife are admissible witnesses and compellable to give evidence. 40 & 41 Vict. c. 14, s. 1 (ante, pp. 457, 1352).

Prove the liability of A. C. to repair the part of the highway in question ratione tenuræ, as directed ante, p. 1366. If it appears that the tenement in respect of which the liability is charged originated within the time of legal memory, the defendant must be acquitted. R. v. Hayman, M. & M. 401: see R. v. Sheffield Canal Co., 13 Q. B. 913; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 44: R. v. Ramsden, E. B. & E. 949; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 296. Prove that A. C. is the occupier of the lands, for an owner of lands who is not the occupier of them cannot be charged ratione tenuræ with the repair of a common highway. R. v. Barker, 25 Q. B. D. 213; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 105: Daventry R. D. C. v. Parker [1900] 1 Q. B. 1; 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 105. And prove the highway to be out of repair, as directed ante, p. 1364.

The defendant may prove, under the general issue, either that the road is not out of repair, or that, instead of his being bound to repair it, the parish at large, or some district of it, by prescription or custom, or some individual ratione tenuræ, is bound to repair it; a special plea is not necessary in such a case. 2 Wms. Saund. 159 n. (10). If he pleads specially, after pleading the liability of the parish, district, or person, he must conclude with a special traverse of his own liability. Id. 159 (a) n. (10).

An infant, whose guardian in socage is in possession of the property, is not such owner or occupier of the land as to be chargeable ratione tenuræ for the non-repair of a bridge or highway: the guardian must be charged. R. v. Sutton, 3 A. & E. 597; 4 L. J. (K. B.) 215. But it seems that infancy would not exempt if there were no other person against whom the performance of the repairs could be enforced. Id.

Where, on an indictment in the common form for not repairing a highway, alleging the defendant's liability ratione tenuræ, it was found by a special verdict that the defendant's land adjoined the sea: that anciently a highway went over this land, and that the defendant's predecessors had repaired it, etc.: that within living memory the sea had encroached, and that the ancient highway was covered by the sea; that the defendant's predecessors had from time to time gradually removed the ancient highway as the sea encroached, and appropriated other parts of the estate for the site of a highway, so as to keep a highway along the sea-coast, and that they had always repaired such highway; that the highway mentioned in the indictment passed over a different part of the estate from that formerly occupied by any part of the ancient road; that the sea had, shortly before the finding of the indictment, made an encroachment and washed away part of the highway alleged to be out of repair, and washed away large quantities of the earth, so that the residue of the road was too narrow for passage, and was made to stand at the edge of a precipitous bank of about seventy feet; it was held that the defendant was entitled to judgment. R. v. Bamber, 5 Q. B. 279; 13 L. J. (M. C.) 13. Where a highway repairable ratione tenuræ is, under statutory powers, as under a Turnpike Act, so altered in its nature and course as to be practically destroyed, the liability to repair ratione tenuræ ceases. R. v. Barker, 25 Q. B. D. 213; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 105: Heath v. Weaverham Overseers [1894] 2 Q. B. 108; 63 L. J. (M. C.) 187. Payment under s. 35 of the Highway Act, 1862, of a composition in respect of liability to repair ratione tenuræ, does not extinguish a previous exemption from highway rates. N. E. Rail. Co. v. Dalton Overseers [1900] A. C. 345; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 715. Liability to repair ratione tenuræ and exemption from highway rate often co-exist. R. v. Browne [1845] 13 Q. B. 654. But liability to repair a highway ratione tenuræ can exist with or without exemption from other burdens, and the existence of any such exemption is in each case a matter of fact to be proved by the person claiming it. Bingley U. D. C. v. Ferrand, 67 J. P. 370.

Where the defendant was charged with a liability to repair a highway by reason of his tenure of land called Saw-pit Field, evidence of the conviction of a former owner and occupier of the Saw-pit Field, for the non-repair of the same highway (on a presentment preferred against him, alleging his liability to repair it ratione tenuræ, to which he pleaded guilty): together with evidence of the subsequent repair of the highway by the occupiers of the same lands, and of the sale of them, with public notice that they were subject to such liability; was held sufficiently to prove the liability charged: and some of the judges thought that the conviction was an estoppel on the defendant, although not pleaded. R. v. Blakemore, 2 Den. 410; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 60: see R. v. St. Pancras (ante, p. 1367).

The liability to repair a highway ratione clausuræ is only on the occupier of the lands inclosed, and not on the owner. R. v. Ramsden, E. B. & E. 949; 27 L. J. (M C.) 296. As to this form of liability, see Pratt, Highways (15th ed.), 78: Glen, Highways (2nd ed.), 141.

Where the indictment is against a particular district of a parish, e.g., the township of C., prove the liability of the township of C. to repair the part of the highway in question, by proving that the township has been used and accustomed to do so heretofore. (See ante, p. 1367). Townships are now in most, if not all, cases poor-law parishes, and might be combined by justices under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 101, s. 7, into highway parishes. Under the Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), highway parishes have now, in all cases, been included in urban or rural districts, and no separate highway rate is levied for townships or parishes in such districts. See Pratt on Highways (15th ed.), 650. It is now well established that a township may be liable, to the same extent and in the same way as if it were a parish, to maintain its highways. R. v. Ardsley, 3 Q. B. D. 255, 257; 47 L. J. (M. C.) 65. Prove the highway to be out of repair, as directed ante, p. 1364.

The defendants, under the general issue, may prove either that the road is in repair, or that, instead of their district being bound to repair it, the parish at large, or some other district in the parish (see R. v. Ardsley, supra), or some individual ratione tenuræ, is bound to repair it. A special plea is not necessary in such a case. 2 Wms. Saund. 159 n. (10). If a special plea is put in, it must, after pleading the liability of the parish, district, or person, conclude with a special traverse of the liability of the district indicted. Id. 159 (a) n. (10). See the precedents, 4 Went. 161, 166; 6 Went. 414. If the indictment charges the district or township with the repair of all roads within it generally, a special plea would be necessary; for such a prescription makes the township, for all legal purposes, as to the repair of roads, a parish, and they must plead, etc.; in the same manner as a parish would under the same circumstances. R. v. Hatfield, 4 B. & Ald. 75: R. v. Lordsmere, 16 Cox, 65 (C. C. R.). And where the indictment charges the district or township with the repair of all the highways within it generally, and there is no special plea that some individuals ratione tenuræ are bound to repair the highway in question, evidence of repairs to such highway by individuals is inadmissible. R. v. Hatfield (supra). Evidence of a previous conviction of the inhabitants of a particular district in a parish for the non-repair of one of the highways in such district is admissible to prove that the district is liable by immemorial custom to repair all the highways within its limits, for the repair of which the inhabitants of the whole common law parish would be otherwise primâ facie liable. Id. Upon the trial of an indictment against the township of A. for the non-repair of a highway within it, it appeared that A. was one of seven townships forming the parish of D. The parish itself had never repaired any highway, nor levied highway rates, nor appointed surveyors, each township having appointed its own surveyors and levied its own highway rates. With the exception of the highway in question, and one other, each of the seven townships had from time immemorial repaired its own highways. The highway in question had always been repaired by the adjoining township of W., but there was no evidence of any consideration for such repair. It was held that A. was liable, for it must be presumed that the repairs had been done by W. under some arrangement between the two townships, and such arrangement, in the absence of sufficient consideration, was not binding on W. R. v. Ardsley, 3 Q. B. D. 255: 47 L. J. (M. C.) 65.

25 & 26 Vict. c. 61, s. 32, does not subject places formerly extra-parochial to the common law liability to indictment for non-repair of highways. R. v. Central Wingland, 2 Q. B. D. 349; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 282.

COSTS.

The power to award costs on highway indictments rests wholly on statute. There are now two enactments giving such power. 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 9 (3) (ante, p. 1353), authorizes the Court to allow the costs on conviction or acquittal as if the parties were respectively plaintiff and defendant in a civil action. Sect. 10 of the same Act repeals the provisions as to costs contained in 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 50, ss. 95, 96, 98, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 61, s. 19 (a). 41 & 42 Vict. c. 77, s. 10 (ante, p. 1350), empowers the Court of trial to direct by whom the costs of an indictment under the section are to be paid. This section is not repealed by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10.

APPEALS.

On a conviction on indictment or criminal information at common law for obstruction or non-repair of a highway, public bridge or navigable river, the defendant may now appeal to the Court of Civil Appeal in all respects as if the conviction were a verdict in a civil action tried at the assizes. It is immaterial whether the indictment was tried at quarter sessions or in a court of assize or in the King's Bench Division. 7 Edw. 7, c. 23, s. 20 (3) (ante, p. 1353).

The time for appealing and the procedure on the appeal are regulated by R. S. C., Ord. 58: Ann. Pr.

By the Crown Office Rules, 1908, r. 17 a—" (a) appeals under the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, s. 20 (3), from convictions on highway indictments, shall be set down and entered at the Crown Office.

(b) On the setting down of an appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, s. 20 (3), if the indictment has not already been removed into the King's Bench Division for the purpose of trial, a writ of certiorari (see ante, p. 110) shall be issued to the appellant, as a matter of course, to remove the indictment and all things touching the same into the King's Bench Division for the purpose of appeal to the Court of Appeal without any order or recognizances."

The Court of Appeal has power to order a new trial. Ord. 58, r. 5. Where a new trial is asked for it would seem necessary to specify the notice of appeal. Ord. 39, r. 3. And a new trial will not be granted for misdirection or improper admission or rejection of evidence, or because the verdict of the jury was not taken on a question which the judge at the trial was not asked to leave to the jury unless the Court of Appeal consider that some substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice was thereby caused at the trial. Ord. 39, r. 6. The grounds on which the Court of Civil Appeal can grant a new trial on conviction on a highway indictment are substantially the same as those on which the Court of King's Bench could grant a new trial under the former practice (b).

(a) For decisions on the repealed enactments see Archb. Cr. Pl. (23rd ed.) 1234.

(b) Under that practice a new trial might, after conviction, be moved for on the ground that the prosecutor had omitted to give due notice of trial, or that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence, after allowing for presumptions in favour of innocence (see 1 Taylor, Evidence (11th ed.), s. 112: Best, Evidence (11th ed.), 335; R. v. Stytche [1901] 20 N. Z. L. R. 744), or contrary to evidence, or to the direction of the judge, or on the ground that there was no evidence to warrant the conviction (R. v. Sandoval, 3 T. L. R. 411; 16 Cox, 206), or for the improper reception or rejection of evidence (R. v. Berger [1894] 1 Q. B. 823; 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 529), or for any other mistake or misdirection of the judge, or for any gross misbehaviour of the jury among themselves, or for surprise, or for any other cause, where it shall appear to the Court that a new trial will further the ends of justice (3 Bl. Com. 387; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 654; Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. (2nd ed.) 142: R. v. Whitehouse, Dears. 1).

After acquittal of the defendant, in general, a new trial was not granted. R. v. Mann, 4 M. & Sel. 337; R. v. Wandsworth, 1 B. & Ald. 63; R. v. Sutton, 5 B. & Ad. 52; 2 L. J. (M. C.) 75. R. v. Tremearne, 5 B. & C. 254, seems to have been a case of venire de novo (see ante, p. 346). Where the object of the proceeding substantially was to try a civil right, and the verdict would bind the right, as in cases of indictments for non-repair of a highway or bridge, it was held that a new trial might be had after verdict for the defendant, if evidence had been improperly received, or there had been misdirection, or a verdict contrary to the evidence. R. v. Yorkshire (West Riding), 2 East, 353 n.: R. v. Chorley, 12 Q. B. 515: R. v. Cricklade, 3 E. & B. 947 n. An indictment for obstructing a navigation, or a highway, was held not to be within this latter rule, inasmuch as in such a case the defendant was liable on conviction to fine and imprisonment, and the verdict of acquittal did not bind any right. R. v. Russell, 3 E. & B. 942; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 173: R. v. Johnson, 2 E. & E. 613: 29 L. J. (M. C.) 133: R. v. Duncan, 7 Q. B. D. 198; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 95.. And even where the object of the proceeding was to try a civil right, and the verdict would bind the right, as in cases of indictments for non-repair of a highway or bridge, it was held that after a verdict of not guilty had been returned a new trial would not be granted; but that under very special circumstances the Court might order all proceedings upon the judgment to be suspended, so as to give an opportunity for the question to be again raised upon a fresh indictment. R. v. Southampton (Inhabitants), 19 Q. B. D. 590; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 112, 118. In R. v. North Eastern Rail. Co., 70 L. J. (K. B.) 584; 19 Cox, 682, the defendants were indicted for obstructing a highway. The judge at the trial directed the jury to acquit on the first count on the ground that the defendants were by their special Acts entitled to do the acts on which the count was framed, and the jury acquitted on the other counts. A motion to stay entry of judgment on the ground of misdirection was refused, on the ground that the entry of judgment would not prevent the prosecutors from indicting again if the obstruction continued.

In R. v. Norfolk County Council, 26 T. L. R. 269, the defendant had been indicted for non-repair of Magdalen Bridge, crossing the river Ouse. The indictment was removed into the King's Bench Division and tried at Norfolk Assizes in January, 1910, when the jury found a verdict for the defendants, finding the bridge to be private. A rule nisi was granted to show cause why judgment on the indictment should not be suspended till further order on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence, and that there was no evidence that the bridge was private. The rule was discharged on April 20, 1910, by Lord Alverstone, C.J., Bray and Pickford, JJ., without expressing a decided opinion on the question whether proceedings can now be taken to review a verdict of not guilty on such an indictment.

NON-REPAIR OF BRIDGES.

Common Law.

At common law and under the early statutes (post, p. 1375) the primary liability for the repair of a bridge falls on the inhabitants of the county, city, or town corporate within which the bridge lies (see 2 Chit. Cr. L. 588), unless they can prove under a special plea sufficient to throw the burden on the inhabitants of a parish (R. v. Hendon, 4 B. & Ad. 628; 2 L. J. (M. C.) 55), or township (R. v. Yorkshire (W. R.), 4 B &. Ald. 623), or district of the county (such as a hundred; R. v. Oswestry, 6 M. & Sel. 361), as being bound to repair it by immemorial usage (R. v. Sutton, 3 A. & E. 597; 4 L. J. (K. B.) 215); or upon some individual or body corporate or politic bound to repair it ratione tenuræ (R. v. Kerrison, 1 M. & Sel. 435), or by prescription (R. v. Yorkshire (W. R.), 7 East, 588), or by the terms on which they have received statutory powers to interfere with public rights. R. v. Kerrison, 3 M. & Sel. 526. The liability of the inhabitants of a county appears to be transferred to the county council by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 79 (2) (post, p. 1380); but that of the inhabitants of a borough, parish, or township to be unaltered. R. v. Poole (Mayor, etc.), 19 Q. B. D. 602; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 131; 16 Cox, 323. The pleas and evidence are the same, mutatis mutandis, with the pleas and evidence in the case of an indictment for not repairing a highway. (See ante, pp. 1360—1366). The liability extends to bridges built by private individuals prior to 43 G. 3, c. 59, if of utility to and used by the county. R. v. Wilts, 6 Mod. 307: R. v. Yorkshire (W. R.), 5 Burr. 2594: R. v. Yorkshire (W. R.), 2 East, 342: R. v. Bucks, 12 East, 192: R. v. Salop, 13 East, 95: R. v. Kent, 13 East, 220: R. v. Devon, 14 East, 477: R. v. Oxfordshire, 16 East, 223: R. v. Same, 4 B. & C. 194: R. v. Same, 1 B. & Ad. 297 n.: R. v. Kent, 2 M. & Sel. 513: R. v. Isle of Ely, 15 Q. B. 827; Burn's Justice (30th ed.), tit. Bridges; Pratt on Highways (15th ed.), 84. A bridge always open to the public, but only used in time of flood, has been held to be a public bridge. R. v. Devon, Ry. & M. 144. Where a bridge has been built on a public highway before 1803, the county can only avoid its common law liability by proving that it has been cast on some other person. Att.-Gen. v. West Riding of Yorkshire County Council, 67 J. P. 103; 1 Loc. Govt. Rep. 223: Yorkshire (W. R.) v. R., 2 Dow. (H. L.), 1; 3 Eng. Rep. 767. As to the liability of the county to repair a bridge built by a private individual and used by the public, and the evidence necessary to support such liability, see R. v. Southampton, 17 Q. B. D. 424; 19 Q. B. D. 590. In that case it was held that there must be evidence of acceptance by the county: hereon see Pratt on Highways (15th ed.), 90. Bridges built since 43 G. 3, c. 59, cannot become county bridges except under that Act, or under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 73, s. 12, or 41 & 42 Vict. c. 77, s. 21, or 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, ss. 6, 11 (post, p. 1378). And see New Windsor (Mayor, etc.) v. Taylor [1899] A. C. 41; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 87. As to partial dedication of a bridge, see R. v. Northampton, 2 M. & Sel. 262.

As to what is a bridge, and what a culvert, and so part of the highway, see R. v. Oxfordshire, 1 B. & Ad. 289: R. v. Whitney, 3 A. & E. 69; 4 L. J. (M. C.) 86; 7 C. & P. 208: R. v. Derbyshire, 2 Q. B. 745; 11 L. J. (M. C.) 51: R. v. Lancaster, 32 J. P. 711. A footbridge formed by three planks nine or ten feet long, and a hand-rail, which carried a public footpath over a small stream, was held not to be such a bridge as the county was bound to repair. R. v. Southampton, 18 Q. B. 841; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 201. Where a county bridge, which had been washed away, was, after 43 G. 3, c. 59, built wider than before, and without notice to the county surveyor, by the parish, partly with the old materials, and in the same line of passage over the river, it was held that this was not a new bridge within the meaning of the Act, and that the county was still liable to repair it. R. v. Devon, 5 B. & Ad. 383; 2 L. J. (M. C.) 74; 2 Nev. & M. 212: see R. v. Adderbury East, Dav. & M. 324; 13 L. J. (M. C.) 9. The county is not compellable to widen a bridge; R. v. Devon, 4 B. & C. 670; but if a county bridge is accidentally destroyed, the county is liable to rebuild it. R. v. Yorkshire (W. R.), 5 Burr. 2594. As to widening bridges over railways, see Rhondda U. D. C. v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. [1908] 1 K. B. 239; 78 L. J. (K. B.) 647: 71 J. P. 189. The Locomotives Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 70, s. 7), does not apply to public bridges repairable by the inhabitants of a county so as to relieve them from their common law liability to repair, or to render the owner of a locomotive liable to an indictment for non-repair of a county bridge damaged by such locomotive. R. v. Kitchener, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 88; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 9. The transfer of a part of a county to another county transfers the liability as to bridges within the transferred portion, unless the liability rested on statute or prescription. R. v. Breconshire, 15 Q. B. 941; 15 L. J. (M. C.) 15: see 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 119 (post, p. 1379).

POACHING.

TAKING GAME BY NIGHT AFTER TWO PREVIOUS CONVICTIONS.

Statutes.

9 G. 4, c. 69 (Night Poaching Act, 1828), s. 1.]—[Whereas the practice of going out by night, for the purpose of destroying game has very much increased of late years, and has in very many instances led to the commission of murder, and of other grievous offences; and it is expedient to make more effectual provisions than now by law exist for repressing such practice (rep.).]—If any person shall, by night, unlawfully take or destroy any game or rabbits in any land, whether open or inclosed, or shall by night unlawfully enter or be in any land whether open or inclosed, with any gun, net, engine, or other instrument for the purpose of taking or destroying game, such offender shall, upon conviction thereof before two justices of the peace, be committed, for the first offence, to the common gaol or house of correction, for any period not exceeding three calendar months, there to be kept to hard labour, and at the expiration of such period shall find sureties by recognizance, or in Scotland by bond of caution, himself in ten pounds, and two sureties in five pounds each, or one surety in ten pounds, for his not so offending again for the space of one year next following; and in case of not finding such sureties, shall be further imprisoned and kept to hard labour for the space of six calendar months, unless such sureties are sooner found; and in case such person shall so offend a second time, and shall be thereof convicted before two justices of the peace, he shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction for any period not exceeding six calendar months, there to be kept to hard labour, and at the expiration of such period shall find sureties by recognizance or bond as aforesaid, himself in twenty pounds, and two sureties in ten pounds each, or one surety in twenty pounds, for his not so offending again for the space of two years next following; and in case of not finding such sureties, shall be further imprisoned and kept to hard labour for the space of one year, unless such sureties are sooner found; and in case such person shall so offend a third time, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond seas for seven years, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding two years; and in Scotland, if any person shall so offend a first, second, or third time, he shall be liable to be punished in like manner as is hereby provided in each case.

Sect. 4.—Limitation of prosecution.]— . . . The prosecution for every offence punishable upon indictment, or otherwise than upon summary conviction, by virtue of this Act, shall be commenced within twelve calendar months after the commission of such offence. [Rep. as to summary proceedings in England, 47 & 48 Vict. c. 43, s. 4. For cases on this section, see ante, p. 66.]

Sect. 8.—Conviction: Evidence.]—On every conviction under this Act for a first or second offence, the convicting justices shall return the same to the next quarter sessions for the county, riding, division, city, or place wherein such offence shall have been committed: and the record of such conviction, or any copy thereof, shall be evidence in any prosecution to be instituted against the party thereby convicted for a second or third offence: and the clerk of the peace shall immediately on such return make, or cause to be made, a memorandum of such conviction in a register to be kept by him of the names and places of abode of the persons so convicted, and shall state whether such conviction be the first or second conviction of the offending party. (See ante, p. 421.)

Sect. 9.—Three or more persons armed taking game, etc.]—If any persons, to the number of three or more together, shall by night unlawfully enter or be in any land, whether open or inclosed, for the purpose of taking or destroying game or rabbits, any of such persons being armed with any gun, cross-bow, fire-arms, bludgeon, or any other offensive weapon, each and every of such persons shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof before the justices of gaol delivery [or of the court of great sessions (abolished)] of the county or place in which the offence shall be committed, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years, nor less than seven years, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for any term not exceeding three years; and in Scotland any person so offending shall be liable to be punished in like manner. (See ante, pp. 236 et seq.)

Sect. 12.—"Night" defined.]—Provided always that, for the purpose of this Act, the night shall be considered and is hereby declared to commence at the expiration of the first hour after sunset, and to conclude at the beginning of the last hour before sunrise. [The computation seems to be by the actual time of sunset at the place, and not by Greenwich mean time, under 43 & 44 Vict. c. 9, s. 1 (ante, p. 655); see Gordon v. Cann, 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 434; 63 J. P. 234: Curtis v. Marsh, 28 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 36; 3 H. & N. 866.]

Sect. 13.—"Game" defined.]—For the purposes of this Act, the word "game" shall be deemed to include hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse, heath or moor game, black game, and bustards. [This is the same as in the Game Act, 1831 (1 & 2 W. 4, c. 32, s. 2), but is narrower than the definition in the Poaching Prevention Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 114), s. 1, which also includes woodcock, snipe and rabbits, and the eggs of pheasants, partridges, grouse and black game.]

7 & 8 Vict. c. 29 (Night Poaching Act, 1844), s. 1.—Taking game or rabbits on highways, etc.]—All the pains, punishments, and forfeitures imposed by the said Act (9 G. 4, c. 69), upon persons by night unlawfully taking or destroying any game or rabbits in any land open or inclosed, as therein set forth, shall be applicable to and imposed upon any person by night unlawfully taking or destroying any game or rabbits on any public road, highway, or path, or the sides thereof, or at the openings, outlets, or gates, from any such land into any such public road, highway, or path, in the like manner as upon any such land, open or inclosed; and it shall be lawful for the owner or occupier of any land adjoining either side of that part of such road, highway, or path, where the offender shall be, and the gamekeeper or servant of such owner or occupier, and any person assisting such gamekeeper or servant, and for all the persons authorized by the said Act to apprehend any offender against the provisions thereof, to seize and apprehend any person offending against the said Act or this Act; and the said Act, and all the powers, provisions, authorities, and jurisdictions therein or thereby contained or given, shall be as applicable for carrying this Act into execution, as if the same had been herein specially set forth. [This seems to override R. v. Meadham, 2 C. & K. 633.]

Indictment under 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 1 (ante, p. 1380).

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Night poaching, contrary to section 1 of the Night Poaching Act, 1828.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, by night unlawfully took or destroyed game in land occupied by C. D., or was in the said land by night with a gun for the purpose of unlawfully taking or destroying game.

A. B. has been twice previously convicted of an offence under section one of the Night Poaching Act, 1828, namely on ——, at ——, and on—— at ——.

[Previous convictions under s. 9 will not suffice. R. v. Lines [1902] 1 K. B. 199; 731 L. J. (K. B.) 125; 20 Cox, 142; 66 J. P. 24: nor under s. 2 R. v. McLauchlan, 75 J. P. 8.] If the offence was committed on any public road, highway, or path, or the sides thereof, or at any opening, outlet, or gate from any land into any such road, etc., state it accordingly. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, ante, p. 1382.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 1; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante. pp. 238, 239).

Evidence.

Prove the offence as stated in the indictment. It must also be proved that the offence was committed within twelve months before the prosecution. See the evidence under the next precedent. In R. v. Woodfield, 16 Cox, 314, Hawkins, J., refused to allow evidence to be given of the previous convictions, until the jury had found the prisoner guilty of the third offence. The offence must have been committed in the night-time—that is, some time between the expiration of the first hour after sunset, and the beginning of the last hour before sunrise; 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 12 (and see ante, pp. 967, 1382). Prove the two former convictions under s. 1 by the production of the originals, or by examined copies (see ante, p. 403, and 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 8, ante, p. 1381), or in the manner prescribed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 13 (ante, p. 421), or by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, p. 422). A conviction for an offence under s. 9 (ante, p. 1381), following on two convictions under s. 1, cannot be treated as a conviction under s. 1 so as to enable the Court to deal with the prisoner as for a third offence under s. 1. R. v. Lines [1902] 1 K. B. 199; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 125; 20 Cox, 142. And see R. v. McLauchlan, 75 J. P. 8. As to what is a sufficient averment of a previous conviction, see R. v. Merry, 2 Cox, 240: Fletcher v. Calthrop, 6 Q. B. 880; 14 L. J. (Q. B.) 95; Cureton v. R. (post, p. 1384). Prove the identity of the defendant.

Indictment under 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 9 (ante, p. 1381).

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Night poaching, contrary to section 9 of the Night Poaching Act, 1828.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., C. D., and E. F., and other persons unknown, on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, by night unlawfully entered or were in land occupied by G. H. for the purpose of taking or destroying game or rabbits, A. B. being armed with a gun and C. D. being armed with a bludgeon.

A count for assaulting a gamekeeper may be added if necessary: see ante, p. 966; and R. v. Handley, 5 C. & P. 565.

This offence is of a local nature, and the indictment should describe the land by name or occupation; R. v. Ridley, R. & R. 515; or ownership. R. v. Riley, 3 C. & K. 116. It is not, however, necessary to state both the name and the occupation of the land.

Misdemeanor: penal servitude for not more than fourteen nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than three years, with or without hard labour. 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 9; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 242); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239). A court of quarter sessions has no jurisdiction over this offence. 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 9 (ante, p. 1382; and see p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove that the defendants, with others, in all three or more, entered and were, in the night-time (that is to say, some time between the expiration of the first hour after sunset, and the beginning of the last hour before sunrise; 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 12, ante, p. 1382), in certain land in the occupation of G. H., and situate as described in the indictment.

Prove that they entered the land for the purpose of taking and destroying game (that is, hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse, heath or moor game, black game or bustards: 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 13, ante, p. 1382) or rabbits there. Upon an indictment on 57 G. 3, c. 90 (rep.), for having entered a close, etc., with intent then and there illegally to destroy game, etc., the jury found that the defendant was in pursuit of game, but could not say whether in the close mentioned in the indictment or not; and the defendant having been convicted, the judges held the conviction wrong, because the entry with intent to kill was confined by the indictment to the close specified, and it was therefore necessary to prove the intent as to that close. R. v. Barham, 1 Mood. 151: see R. v. Capewell, 5 C. & P. 549: R. v. Gainer, 7 C. & P. 231: Fletcher v. Calthrop, 6 Q. B. 880; 14 L. J. (M. C.) 95: sed quære; see Cureton v. R., 1 B. & S. 208; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 149, Hill, J. Where people are out at night in pursuit of game, intending to take it when they can find any, they are in pursuit of game in every field through which they pass. If they are out with a general intent to take game, there is an intent to take it in any field they may pass through where game may be expected to be found. R. v. Higgs, 10 Cox, 527, Willes, J.: R. v. Sutton, 13 Cox, 648, Lindley, J. And therefore where the prisoners were charged with being by night, armed, in a certain close for the purpose of destroying game therein, and the evidence was that they passed through the close without doing anything to it, and that after being lost sight of for two hours, they were found three miles off with game in their possession, it was held that there was evidence that they were in the close mentioned in the indictment for the purpose of destroying game. R. v. Higgins (supra). The intent is proved by circumstances from which the jury may infer it, as that the land was a preserve for game, or that the defendants discharged guns there, or had nets or dogs; R. v. Turner, 3 Cox, 304; or that they actually took game or rabbits there, which is the best possible evidence of the intent. All who are at the place, each acting his part with the common intent of taking game in the land mentioned in the indictment, are equally guilty, though some of them only are bodily on the land; if, therefore, some (though less than three) enter the land described in the indictment (whether it be open land, or consist of one or more closures or inclosures) armed, and others be watching on the outside of the land to give an alarm if necessary, they may equally be convicted with those who actually enter the land, on an indictment charging them all with having entered the land armed. R. v. Passey, 7 C. & P. 282: R. v. Lockett, Id. 300: R. v. Andrews, 2 M. & Rob. 37: R. v. Whittaker, 1 Den. 310; 2 C. & K. 636; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 127: R. v. Scotton, 5 Q. B. 493; 13 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 58: R. v. Uezzell, 2 Den. 274; 3 C. & K. 150; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 192. See now 7 & 8 Vict. c. 29, s. 1 (ante, p. 1382). But not so if, some of them being on the land in question, another is poaching independently of them on adjoining land. R. v. Nickless, 8 C. & P. 757, Patteson, J. And where the indictment charged that the prisoners were with others on Redborough-hill Brake, and one only was seen there, the others being in a wood separated therefrom by a high-road, Patteson, J., held the indictment not proved. R. v. Dowsell, 6 C. & P. 398. The sending in of a dog to drive hares into a net set in the fence is not an entering of the land within the statute. R. v. Nickless (supra); see R. v. Pratt, 24 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 113; 4 E. & B. 860; Dears. 502. It is not necessary, in order to prove that the defendants were on the land unlawfully, to negative any permission to them by the owner or tenant of the land to be there. R. v. Wood, Dears. & B. 1; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 96.

"Armed," etc.]—Prove that the defendants, or some or one of them, were armed with a gun or other offensive weapon, as stated in the indictment. See ante, p. 1381. A stick or bludgeon is not an offensive weapon, unless the jury find that the defendant took it with him for the purpose of offence. R. v. Palmer, 1 M. & Rob. 70: R. v. Fry, 2 M. & Rob. 42: R. v. Turner, 3 Cox, 304: R. v. Williams, 14 Cox, 59. Large stones are offensive weapons, if the jury are satisfied that they were of a description capable of inflicting serious injury if used offensively, and that they were brought and used by the defendants for that purpose. R. v. Grice, 7 C. & P. 803. Indeed, any instrument, however innocent in its ordinary use, may be an offensive weapon, if brought out by poachers for offensive purposes, although they may also intend to use it for other purposes. R. v. Sutton, 13 Cox, 648, Lindley, J. The words of the statute are "any of such persons being armed," etc.: and if one of the party is armed with the knowledge of the rest, it will support the allegation that they were all armed; R. v. Smith, R. & R. 368: R. v. Goodfellow, 1 Den. 81; 1 C. & K. 724; and it is not necessary that any of the party should be actually armed at the moment they are discovered, if there is evidence to satisfy the jury that they were armed on the land. Upon an indictment on the repealed statute, for being found armed, it appeared that the flash of a gun was seen in a wood, but before the defendants were discovered, they had abandoned their arms, and were found creeping away upon their knees; the judges held that they were armed within the meaning of that statute. R. v. Nash, R. & R. 386. It would be within the words of this statute if one of the party was armed without the knowledge of his companions; but the contrary was decided upon the repealed statute; R. v. Southern, R. & R. 444; and it may be doubtful how far such a case would come within the intention of the legislature in this particular Act. Where the indictment charged that the defendants A. and B., together with another person, entered certain land, "the said A. and B. then and there being armed," it was held that this allegation was not supported by proof that the third person was armed, and that A. and B. were not so. R. v. Davis, 8 C. & P. 759: but see R. v. Goodfellow, 1 Den. 81; 1 C. & K. 724, contra.

Lastly, it must be proved that the offence was committed within twelve calendar months next before the prosecution. 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 4 (ante, p. 1381). See the cases collected, ante, p. 66.

SECT. 4.

REFUSING TO EXECUTE A PUBLIC OFFICE.

Common Law.

It is a misdemeanor indictable at common law to refuse to serve a public office. 2 Chit. Cr. L. 266: R. v. Bower, 1 L. J. (K. B.) 174; 1 B. & C. 585; 2 D. & R. 842: R. v. Denison, 2 Ld. Kenyon, 259. As to refusal of sheriff to serve, R. v. Woodrow, 2 T. R. 731; and see ante, p. 133. As to refusal to serve the offices of high constable or parish constable, see R. v. Bower (supra): R. v. Mosley, 3 A. & E. 488; 4 L. J. (M. C.) 106: R. v. Brain, 3 B. & Ad. 614; 1 L. J. (M. C.) 53. In the case of municipal office, a fine on non-acceptance is now provided in the case of county councils by 51 & 52 Vict. c 41, s. 75, in the case of town councils by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 34, in the case of metropolitan borough councils by 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14, ss. 7 (1), 34, and in the case of the councils of urban and rural districts and of parishes by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 48. But the fact of there being such a fine seems not to have been conclusive at common law against liability to indictment. R. v. Denison (supra): R. v. Bower (supra).

Upon an indictment against a defendant, for refusing to serve the office of overseer, it was held that he was a substantial householder (i.e., a person occupying as a tenant and not as a servant) within the Poor Relief Act, 1601 (43 Eliz. c. 2), and liable to serve such office, although he occupied a house and paid rent and taxes in the parish by means of a clerk only, and slept in another parish. R. v. Poynder, 1 B. & C. 178; 2 D. & R. 258: and see R. v. Hall, 1 B. & C. 123; 2 D. & R. 241: R. v. Mosley, 3 A. & E. 488; Stephenson v. Langston, 1 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 379.

For the defence it may be proved that the defendant is disqualified to serve, or exempt from serving. (a) The following persons are disqualified from serving as overseers: Assistant overseers (29 & 30 Vict. c. 113, s. 10); masters

(a) Immunity from service in a parochial office exists in favour of the following classes of persons:—

1. Peers and members of parliament. Gibson, 215: Stephenson v. Langston, 1 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 380.

2. Sheriffs. Stephenson v. Langston, 1 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 380 n.

3. Acting justices of the peace. See R. v. Gayer, 1 Burr. 245; 1 Ld. Raym. 492: R. v. Pateman, 2 T. R. 777, 779.

5. Officers of the navy, army, or marines, even if on half-pay. See R. v. Gayer, 1 Burr. 245.

6. Persons in the regular militia. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 49, s. 41. Non-commissioned officers and privates in the local militia. 52 G. 3, c. 38, s. 197.

7. Men in the army reserve (45 & 46 Vict. c. 48, s. 7), the royal naval volunteers (22 & 23 Vict. c. 40, s. 7), the royal naval coast volunteers (16 & 17 Vict. c. 73, s. 8), the royal naval volunteer reserve (3 Edw. 7, c. 6, s. 1), and the territorial force (7 Edw. 7, c. 9, s. 23 (4)).

8. The postmaster-general and officers of the post-office (8 Edw. 7, c. 48, s. 43).

9. Commissioners or officers of customs (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 9) or of inland revenue (53 & 54 Vict. c. 21, s. 8).

10. Income tax commissioners if certified. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, s. 35.

11. Clergymen. Lee's case, 1 Ventr. 105; 1 Mod. 282; 2 Keb. 693: Chambers's case, Andr. 353.

12. Protestant dissenting ministers who do not follow any trade or occupation for a livelihood except that of a schoolmaster. 52 G. 3, c. 155, s. 9. See Kenward v. Knowles [1744] Willes, 463.

13. Roman Catholic clergy who have taken the prescribed oaths. 31 G. 3, c. 32, s. 8; see 31 & 32 Vict. c. 72, s. 9; 34 & 35 Vict. c. 48.

14. Aldermen of London. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 40. They would be exempt as justices.

15. Practising barristers and solicitors. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 39; 1 Rolle Rep. 368. See R. v. Derbyshire JJ. [1909] 1 K. B. 449.

16. Practising members of the College of Physicians. 32 H. 8, c. 40, s. 1; 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 44; and see 3 H. 8, c. 11; 5 H. 8, c. 6.

of workhouses and relieving officers (13 & 14 Vict. c. 101, s. 18); persons directly or indirectly concerned in a contract for the supply of goods for the workhouse or the relief of the poor of the union in which the parish is (12 & 13 Vict. c. 103, s. 6); undischarged bankrupts (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 32), and persons convicted of felony, fraud, or perjury (4 & 5 W. 4, c. 76, s. 48), or on indictment for corrupt practices at elections (46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 6 (3); 47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, ss. 2, 3, 36).

SECT. 5.

SENDING UNSEAWORTHY SHIP TO SEA.

Statute.

57 & 58 Vict. c. 60 (Merchant Shipping Act, 1894), s. 457.—Sending unseaworthy ship to sea a misdemeanor.]—(1) If any person sends or attempts to send, or is party to sending or attempting to send a British ship to sea in such an unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely to be thereby endangered, he shall, in respect of each offence, be guilty of a misdemeanor, unless he proves either that he used all reasonable means to ensure her being sent to sea in a seaworthy state, or that her going to sea in such an unseaworthy state was, under the circumstances, reasonable and justifiable, and for the purpose of giving that proof he may give evidence in the same manner as any other witness. (As to limits of owner's liability, see Massey v. Morriss [1894] 2 Q. B. 412; 63 L. J. (M. C.) 185.)

(2) If the master of a British ship knowingly takes the same to sea in such an unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely to be thereby endangered, he shall, in respect of each offence, be guilty of a misdemeanor, unless he proves that her going to sea in such an unseaworthy state was, under the circumstances, reasonable and justifiable, and for the purpose of giving that proof he may give evidence in the same manner as any other witness. (See R. v. Freeman, Ir. Rep. 9 C. L. 527; and as to evidence by the defendant, ante, pp. 458 et seq.)

(3) A prosecution under this section shall not, except in Scotland, be instituted otherwise than by, or with the consent of, the Board of Trade, or of the governor of the British possession in which the prosecution takes place.

(4) A misdemeanor under this section shall not be punishable upon summary conviction. [This section is a re-enactment, with verbal alterations, of 39 & 40 Vict. c. 80, s. 4 (rep.). As to what constitutes seaworthiness, see Hedley v. Pinkney SS. Co. [1894] A. C. 222; 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 419.]

SECT. 6.

CORRUPT PRACTICES AND OTHER INDICTABLE OFFENCES AT PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS.

Common Law.

Treating appears to be indictable at common law. Hughes v. Marshall, 2 Cr. & J. 118; 5 C. & P. 150: R. v. Hollis, 20 St. Tr. 1225. In R. v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1335; 1 W. Bl. 380, there is said to be no precedent of an indictment at common law for bribery at a parliamentary election; but in R. v. Hollis (supra), will be found a precedent of an information, and in R. v. Pitt, 3 Burr. at 1338, Lord Mansfield said that bribery at parliamentary elections must undoubtedly always have been a crime at common law. See 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 627, 638. In R. v. Bent, 1 Den. 157; 2 C. & K. 179, it was held that fraudulent personation at a municipal election was not an offence at common law. In R. v. Clarke [1900] 2 Ir. Rep. 304, Palles, C.B., refused to follow R. v. Bent.

Statutes.

46 & 47 Vict. c. 51.—Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883.]—This Act was temporary, but has been made permanent by 7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 64, s. 35.

Sect. 64.—"Election" and "indictment" defined.]—In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires—The expression "election" means the election of a member or members to serve in parliament; . . . The expression "indictment" includes information. . . .

Sect. 1.—"Treating" defined.]—(1) Any person who corruptly by himself or by any other person, either before, during, or after an election, directly or indirectly gives or provides, or pays wholly or in part the expense of giving or providing, any meat, drink, entertainment or provision to or for any person, for the purpose of corruptly influencing that person or any other person to give or refrain from giving his vote at the election, or on account of such person or any other person having voted or refrained from voting, or being about to vote or refrain from voting at such election, shall be guilty of treating.

(2) And every elector who corruptly accepts or takes any such meat, drink, entertainment, or provision shall be guilty of treating.

Sect. 2.—"Undue influence" defined.]—Every person who shall directly or indirectly, by himself or by any other person on his behalf, make use of or threaten to make use of any force, violence, or restraint, or inflict or threaten to inflict, by himself or by any other person, any temporal or spiritual injury, damage, harm, or loss upon or against any person in order to induce or compel such person to vote or refrain from voting, or on account of such person having voted or refrained from voting at any election, or who shall by abduction, duress, or any fraudulent device or contrivance impede or prevent the free exercise of the franchise of any elector, or shall thereby compel, induce or prevail upon any elector either to give or to refrain from giving his vote at any election, shall be guilty of undue influence. (See H.M. Advocate v. Douglas, 5 Irvine, 265; Borough of Lisburn, Wolf. & B. 221.)

Sect. 3.—"Corrupt practice" defined.]—The expression "corrupt practice" as used in this Act means any of the following offences; namely, treating and undue influence, as defined by this Act, and bribery, and personation, as defined by the enactments set forth in Part III. of the third schedule to this Act (post, p. 1396), and aiding, abetting, counselling, and procuring the commission of the offence of personation, and every offence which is a corrupt practice within the meaning of this Act shall be a corrupt practice within the meaning of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 125). [By 7 & 8 Geo. 5. c. 64 (Representation of the People Act, 1918), s. 34, the incurring of election expenses by any unauthorised person is a corrupt practice other than personation.]

Sect. 6.—Punishment of person convicted on indictment of corrupt practices.]—(1) A person who commits any corrupt practice other than personation, or aiding, abetting, counselling, or procuring the commission of the offence of personation, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction on indictment shall be liable to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding one year, or to be fined any sum not exceeding two hundred pounds.

(2) A person who commits the offence of personation (see post, p. 1397), or of aiding, abetting, counselling, or procuring the commission of that offence, shall be guilty of felony, and any person convicted thereof on indictment shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, together with hard labour.

(3) A person who is convicted on indictment of any corrupt practice shall (in addition to any punishment as above provided) be not capable during a period of seven years from the date of his conviction :—

(a) of being registered as an elector or voting at any election in the United Kingdom, whether it be a parliamentary election or an election for any public office within the meaning of this Act; or

(b) of holding any public or judicial office within the meaning of this Act, and if he holds any such office the office shall be vacated.

(4) Any person so convicted of a corrupt practice in reference to any election shall also be incapable of being elected to and of sitting in the House of Commons during the seven years next after the date of his conviction, and if at that date he has been elected to the House of Commons his election shall be vacated from the time of such conviction.

Sect. 33, sub-s. 7.—False declaration respecting election expenses.]—If any candidate or election agent knowingly makes the declaration [respecting election expenses] required by this section falsely, he shall be guilty of an offence, . . . such offence shall also be deemed to be a corrupt practice within the meaning of this Act. [The words omitted have been repealed by 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6 (Perjury Act, 1911).]

Sect. 38, sub-s. 8.—Bribery or treating by licensed person on licensed premises.]—With respect to a person holding a licence or certificate under the Licensing Acts (in this section referred to as a licensed person) the following provisions shall have effect :—

(a) If it appears to the Court by which any licensed person is convicted of the offence of bribery or treating that such offence was committed on his licensed premises, the Court shall direct such conviction to be entered in the proper register of licences. . . .

[The expression "Licensing Acts" is defined by s. 64 to mean the Licensing Acts, 1872 to 1874. As to the register of licences, see 10 Edw. 7 and 1 Geo. 5, c. 24, s. 50.]

Sect. 41, sub-s. 4.—Fraudulent withdrawal of election petition.]—If any person makes any agreement or terms, or enters into any undertaking, in relation to the withdrawal of an election petition, and such agreement, terms, or undertaking is or are for the withdrawal of the election petition in consideration of any payment, or in consideration that the seat shall at any time be vacated, or in consideration of the withdrawal of any other election petition, or is or are (whether lawful or unlawful) not mentioned in the aforesaid affidavits [i.e., the affidavits mentioned in the former part of this section], he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding twelve months, and to a fine not exceeding two hundred pounds.

Sect. 43.—Attendance of director of public prosecutions on trial of election petition, and prosecution by him of offenders.]—(1) On every trial of an election petition the director of public prosecutions shall by himself, or by his assistant, or by such representative as hereinafter mentioned, attend at the trial, and it shall be the duty of such director to obey any directions given to him by the election court with respect to the summoning and examination of any witness to give evidence on such trial, and with respect to the prosecution by him of offenders, and with respect to any person to whom notice is given to attend with a view to report him as guilty of any corrupt or illegal practice.

(2) It shall also be the duty of such director, without any direction from the election court, if it appears to him that any person is able to give material evidence as to the subject of the trial, to cause such person to attend the trial, and with the leave of the Court to examine such person as a witness.

(3) It shall also be the duty of the said director, without any direction from the election court, if it appears to him that any person who has not received a certificate of indemnity has been guilty of a corrupt or illegal practice, to prosecute such person for the offence before the said Court, or if he thinks it expedient in the interests of justice before any other competent court.

(4) Where a person is prosecuted before an election court for any corrupt or illegal practice, and such person appears before the Court, the Court shall proceed to try him summarily for the said offence, and such person, if convicted thereof upon such trial, shall be subject to the same incapacities as he is rendered subject to under this Act upon conviction, whether on indictment or in any other proceeding for the said offence; and further, may be adjudged by the Court, if the offence is a corrupt practice, to be imprisoned with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding six months, or to pay a fine not exceeding two hundred pounds, and if the offence is an illegal practice, to pay such fine as is fixed by this Act for the offence:

Provided that, in the case of a corrupt practice, the Court, before proceeding to try summarily any person, shall give such person the option of being tried by a jury.

(5) Where a person is so prosecuted for any such offence, and either he elects to be tried by a jury, or he does not appear before the Court, or the Court thinks it in the interests of justice expedient that he should be tried before some other court, the Court, if of opinion that the evidence is sufficient to put the said person upon his trial for the offence, shall order such person to be prosecuted on indictment or before a court of summary jurisdiction, as the case may require, for the said offence; and in either case may order him to be prosecuted before such court as may be named in the order; and for all purposes preliminary and of and incidental to such prosecution the offence shall be deemed to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the Court so named. (See R. v. Ripley, 17 Cox, 120 (C. C. R.), post, p. 1404).

(6) Upon such order being made,

(a) If the accused person is present before the Court, and the offence is an indictable offence, the Court shall commit him to take his trial, or cause him to give bail to appear and take his trial for the said offence; and

(b) If the accused person is present before the Court, and the offence is not an indictable offence, the Court shall order him to be brought before the Court of summary jurisdiction before whom he is to be prosecuted, or cause him to give bail to appear before that court; and

(c) If the accused person is not present before the Court, the Court shall as circumstances require issue a summons for his attendance, or a warrant to apprehend him and bring him before a court of summary jurisdiction, and that court, if the offence is an indictable offence, shall on proof only of the summons or warrant and the identity of the accused, commit him to take his trial, or cause him to give bail to appear and take his trial for the said offence, or if the offence is punishable on summary conviction, shall proceed to hear the case, or if such court be not the Court before whom he is directed to be prosecuted, shall order him to be brought before that court.

(7) The director of public prosecutions may nominate, with the approval of the attorney-general, a barrister or solicitor of not less than ten years' standing to be his representative for the purpose of this section, and that representative shall, receive such remuneration as the . . . Treasury may approve. There shall be allowed to the director and his assistant or representative, for the purposes of this section, such allowance for expenses as the Treasury may approve.

(8) The costs incurred in defraying the expenses of the director of public prosecutions under this section (including the remuneration of his representative) shall, in the first instance, be paid by the . . . Treasury, and so far as they are not in the case of any prosecution paid by the defendant (see ante, p. 284) shall be deemed to be expenses of the election court; but if for any reasonable cause it seems just to the Court so to do, the Court shall order all or part of the said costs to be repaid to the . . . Treasury by the parties to the petition, or such of them as the Court may direct.

Sect. 45.—Duty of director of public prosecutions to institute prosecutions for corrupt practices.]—Where information is given to the director of public prosecutions that any corrupt or illegal practices have prevailed in reference to any election, it shall be his duty, subject to the regulations under the Prosecution of Offences Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 22), to make such inquiries and to institute such prosecutions as the circumstances of the case appear to him to require. (For these regulations see Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 4, tit. Criminal Procedure, E., pp. 7, 9.)

Sect. 50.—Trial in Central Criminal Court or at Royal Courts of Justice of indictment for corrupt practices at instance of attorney-general.]—Where an indictment, as defined by this Act (see s. 64, ante, p. 1389), for any offence under the Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts (a) or this Act is instituted in the High Court or is removed into the High Court by a writ of certiorari issued at the instance of the attorney-general, and the attorney-general suggests on the part of the Crown that it is expedient for the purposes of justice that the indictment should be tried in the Central Criminal Court, or if a special jury is ordered, that it should be tried before a judge and jury at the Royal Courts of Justice, the High Court may, if it think fit, order that such indictment shall be so tried upon such terms as the Court may think just, and the High Court may make such orders as appear to the Court necessary or proper for carrying into effect the order for such trial.

Sect. 51.—Limitation of time for prosecution.]—(1) A proceeding against a person in respect of the offence of a corrupt or illegal practice or any other offence under the Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts or this Act shall be commenced (see ante, p. 66) within one year after the offence was committed, or if it was committed in reference to an election with respect to which an inquiry is held by election commissioners shall be commenced within one year after the offence was committed, or within three months after the report of such commissioners is made, whichever period last expires, so that it be commenced within two years after the offence was committed, and the time so limited by this section shall, in the case of any proceeding under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts for any such offence, whether before an election court or otherwise, be substituted for any limitation of time contained in the last-mentioned Acts.

(2) For the purposes of this section the issue of a summons, warrant, writ, or other process shall be deemed to be a commencement of a proceeding, where the service or execution of the same on or against the alleged offender is prevented by the absconding or concealment or act of the alleged offender, but save as aforesaid the service or execution of the same on or against the alleged offender, and not the issue thereof, shall be deemed to be the commencement of the proceeding.

(a) By s. 65, the enactments described in the third schedule to this Act (post, p. 1396) are in this Act referred to as the "Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts." The enactments described in that schedule are 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102; 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29; 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125; 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, part 3; and 42 & 43 Vict. c. 75, so far as they are unrepealed; and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, ss. 11, 49, 50. So far as those statutes relate to indictable offences and are still in force, they will be found set out in sched. 3, part 3 (post, pp. 1396 et seq.), and in the series of enactments beginning with 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 10 (post, p. 1398), and ending with 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, s. 24 (post, 1399).

Sect. 52.—Verdict of guilty of illegal practice on indictment for corrupt practice.]—Any person charged with a corrupt practice may, if the circumstances warrant such finding, be found guilty of an illegal practice [as to what are illegal practices punishable on summary conviction under s. 10 of this Act, see ss. 7 to 12 of this Act, and ss. 1, 2 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1895 (58 & 59 Vict. c. 40), and s. 1 (1) of the Public Meetings Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 66) and s. 22 of the Representation of the People Act, 1918 (7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 64)] (which offence shall for that purpose be an indictable offence), and any person charged with an illegal practice may be found guilty of that offence, notwithstanding that the act constituting the offence amounted to a corrupt practice, and a person charged with illegal payment, employment, or hiring, may be found guilty of that offence, notwithstanding that the act constituting the offence amounted to a corrupt or illegal-practice.

Sect. 53.—Application of enactments of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, and 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, relating to prosecutions for bribery.—Evidence.]—(1) Sect. 10 of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, post, p. 1398), and s. 6 of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, post, p. 1398) (which relate to prosecutions for bribery and other offences under those Acts), shall extend to any prosecution on indictment for the offence of any corrupt practice within the meaning of this Act, and to any action for any pecuniary forfeiture for an offence under this Act, in like manner as if such offence were bribery within the meaning of those Acts, and such indictment or action were the indictment or action in those sections mentioned, and an order under the said s. 10 may be made on the defendant; but the director of public prosecutions or any persons instituting any prosecution in his behalf or by direction of an election court shall not be deemed to be a private prosecutor, nor required under the said sections to give any security.

(2) On any prosecution under this Act, whether on indictment or summarily, and whether before an election court or otherwise, and in any action for a pecuniary forfeiture under this Act, the person prosecuted or sued, and the husband or wife of such person, may, if he or she think fit, be examined as an ordinary witness in the case. (See ante, pp. 458 et seq.)

(3) On any such prosecution or action as aforesaid it shall be sufficient to allege that the person charged was guilty of an illegal practice, payment, employment, or hiring within the meaning of this Act, as the case may be, and the certificate of the returning officer at an election that the election mentioned in the certificate was duly held, and that the person named in the certificate was a candidate at such election, shall be sufficient evidence of the facts therein stated. [Sects. 10, 12, and 13 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, were repealed as to costs in England by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10. As to costs, see ante, p. 284.]

Sect. 56.—Exercise of jurisdiction of High Court.]—(1) Subject to any rules of court, any jurisdiction vested by this Act in the High Court may, so far as it relates to indictments or other criminal proceedings, be exercised by any judge of the King's Bench Division. . . .

Sect. 57.—Director of public prosecutions and expenses of prosecutions.]—(1) The director of public prosecutions in performing any duty under this Act shall act in accordance with the regulations under the Prosecution of Offences Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 22 : the regulations are printed in Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 4, tit. Criminal Procedure, E., pp. 7, 9), and subject thereto in accordance with the directions (if any) given to him by the attorney-general; and any assistant or representative of the director of public prosecutions in performing any duty under this Act shall act in accordance with the said regulations and directions, if any, and with the directions given to him by the director of public prosecutions.

(2) Costs.]—Rep. 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10. As to recovery of costs by person acquitted, see 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 6 (2) (ante, p. 284).

Sect. 58.—Recovery of costs ordered to be paid by any person.]—(2) Where any costs or other sums are, under the order of an election court or otherwise under this Act, to be paid by any person, those costs shall be a simple contract debt due from such person to the person or persons to whom they are to be paid, and if payable to the Treasury shall be a debt to his Majesty, and in either case may be recovered accordingly [see s. 53, ante, p. 1394; 8 Edw. 7. c. 15, s. 6 (ante, p. 284), which takes the place of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, ss. 10, 12, 13, as to costs in England].

Sect. 59.—Obligation of witness to answer and certificate of indemnity.—Evidence.]—(1) A person who is called as a witness respecting an election before any election court shall not be excused from answering any question relating to any offence at or connected with such election, on the ground that the answer thereto may criminate or tend to criminate himself or on the ground of privilege;

Provided that—

(a) A witness who answers truly all questions which he is required by the election court to answer shall be entitled to receive a certificate of indemnity under the hand of a member of the Court, stating that such witness has so answered : and

(b) An answer by a person to a question put by or before any election court shall not, except in the case of any criminal proceeding for perjury in respect of such evidence, be in any proceeding, civil or criminal, admissible in evidence against him :

(2) Where a person has received such a certificate of indemnity in relation to an election, and any legal proceeding is at any time instituted against him for any offence under the Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts or this Act committed by him previously to the date of the certificate at or in relation to the said election, the Court having cognizance of the case shall on proof of the certificate stay the proceeding, and may in their discretion award to the said person such costs as he may have been put to in the proceeding :

(3) Nothing in this section shall be taken to relieve a person receiving a certificate of indemnity from any incapacity under this Act or from any proceeding to enforce such incapacity (other than a criminal prosecution) :

(4) This section shall apply in the case of a witness before any election commissioners, in like manner as if the expression "election court" in this section included election commissioners.

(5) Where a solicitor or person lawfully acting as agent for any party to an election petition respecting any election for a county or borough has not taken any part or been concerned in such election, the election commissioners inquiring into such election shall not be entitled to examine such solicitor or agent respecting matters which came to his knowledge by reason only of his being concerned as solicitor or agent for a party to such petition.

Sect. 60.—Submission of report of election court or commissioners to attorney-general.]—An election court or election commissioners, when reporting that certain persons have been guilty of any corrupt or illegal practice, shall report whether those persons have or have not been furnished with certificates of indemnity; and such report shall be laid before the attorney-general (accompanied in the case of the commissioners with the evidence on which such report was based) with a view to his instituting or directing a prosecution against such persons as have not received certificates of indemnity, if the evidence should, in his opinion, be sufficient to support a prosecution.

Third Schedule.—Part III.

Enactments defining the offences of Bribery and Personation.

The Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 102), ss. 2, 3.

Sect. 2.—Bribery.]—The following persons shall be deemed guilty of bribery, and shall be punished accordingly :—

(1) Every person who shall, directly or indirectly, by himself, or by any other person on his behalf, give, lend, or agree to give or lend, or shall offer, promise, or promise to procure or to endeavour to procure, any money or valuable consideration to or for any voter, or to or for any person on behalf of any voter, or to or for any other person in order to induce any voter to vote or refrain from voting, or shall corruptly do any such act as aforesaid on account of such voter having voted or refrained from voting at any election :

(2) Every person who shall, directly or indirectly, by himself, or by any other person on his behalf, give or procure, or agree to give or procure, or offer, promise, or promise to procure or to endeavour to procure, any office, place, or employment to or for any voter, or to or for any person on behalf of any voter, or to or for any other person in order to induce such voter to vote or refrain from voting, or shall corruptly do any such act as aforesaid on account of any voter having voted or refrained from voting at any election :

(3) Every person who shall, directly or indirectly, by himself, or by any other person on his behalf, make any such gift, loan, offer, promise, procurement, or agreement as aforesaid to or for any person, in order to induce such person to procure or endeavour to procure the return of any person to serve in parliament, or the vote of any voter at any election :

(As to former law, see Henslow v. Fawcett, 4 L. J. (N. S.) K. B. 147; 3 A. & E. 51: Harding v. Stokes, 6 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 76; 2 M. & W. 233.)

(4) Every person who shall, upon or in consequence of any such gift, loan, offer, promise, procurement, or agreement, procure or engage, promise, or endeavour to procure the return of any person to serve in parliament, or the vote of any voter at any election:

(5) Every person who shall advance or pay, or cause to be paid, any money to or to the use of any other person with the intent that such money or any part thereof shall be expended in bribery at any election, or who shall knowingly pay or cause to be paid any money to any person in discharge or repayment of any money wholly or in part expended in bribery at any election. Provided always, that the aforesaid enactment shall not extend or be construed to extend to any money paid or agreed to be paid for or on account of any legal expenses bonâ fide incurred at or concerning any election. (As to the meaning of the section, see Cooper v. Slade, 27 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 449; 6 H. L. C. 746.)

Sect. 3.—Bribery.]—The following persons shall also be deemed guilty of bribery, and shall be punishable accordingly:—

(1) Every voter who shall, before or during any election, directly or indirectly, by himself or by any other person on his behalf, receive, agree, or contract for any money, gift, loan, or valuable consideration, office, place, or employment, for himself or for any other person, for voting or agreeing to vote, or for refraining or agreeing to refrain from voting at any election:

(2) Every person who shall, after any election, directly or indirectly, by himself or by any other person on his behalf, receive any money or valuable consideration on account of any person having voted or refrained from voting, or having induced any other person to vote or refrain from voting at any election. (See 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 28.)

30 & 31 Vict. c. 102 (Representation of the People Act, 1867), s. 49.—Bribery.]—Any person, either directly or indirectly, corruptly paying any rate on behalf of any ratepayer for the purpose of enabling him to be registered as a voter, thereby to influence his vote at any future election, and any candidate or other person, either directly or indirectly, paying any rate on behalf of any voter for the purpose of inducing him to vote or refrain from voting, shall be guilty of bribery, and be punishable accordingly; and any person on whose behalf and with whose privity any such payment as in this section is mentioned is made, shall also be guilty of bribery, and punishable accordingly.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 33 (Ballot Act, 1872), s. 24.—Personation.]—A person shall for all purposes of the laws relating to parliamentary and municipal elections be deemed to be guilty of the offence of personation who, at an election for a county or borough, or at a municipal election, applies for a ballot paper in the name of some other person, whether that name be that of a person living or dead, or of a fictitious person, or who, having voted once at any such election, applies at the same election for a ballot paper in his own name. . . . (As to extension of this enactment to other elections, see post, p. 1407.)

OTHER ENACTMENTS REFERRED TO IN 46 & 47 VICT. C. 51.

17 & 18 Vict. c. 102 (Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854), s. 10.—Indictment for bribery or undue influence not triable at quarter sessions.]—No indictment for bribery or undue influence shall be triable before any court of quarter sessions. [The rest of the section is repealed as to England by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10; see ante, pp. 267 et seq.]

Sects. 12, 13.—Costs.]—Repealed as to England by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10 (see ante, p. 272).

26 & 27 Vict. c. 29 (Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1863), s. 6.—Evidence.]—. . . in any criminal or civil proceedings in relation to any such offence [viz., bribery, treating, or undue influence, (the earlier part of the section having been repealed by the Indictments Act, 1915)], the certificate of the returning officer in this behalf shall be sufficient evidence of the due holding of the election, and of any person therein named having been a candidate thereat. [See 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 53 (ante, p. 1394). As to proof of register of voters, see Reed v. Lamb, 6 H. & N. 75 : R. v. Clarke, 1 F. & F. 654.]

30 & 31 Vict. c. 102 (Representation of the People Act, 1867), s. 50.—Returning officer, his deputy, partner, or clerk, acting as agent, a misdemeanor.]—No returning officer for any county or borough, nor his deputy, nor any partner or clerk of either of them, shall act as agent for any candidate in the management or conduct of his election as a member to serve in parliament for such county or borough; and if any returning officer, his deputy, the partner or clerk of either of them, shall so act, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (See also 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, s. 11, post, p. 1400.)

6 & 7 Vict. c. 18 (Parliamentary Registration Act, 1843), s. 81.]—In all elections whatever of a member or members to serve in parliament for any county, riding, parts or division of a county, or for any city or borough, in England or Wales, no inquiry shall be permitted at the time of polling as to the right of any person to vote, except only as follows; (that is to say) that the returning officer or his respective deputy shall, if required on behalf of any candidate, put to any voter at the time of his tendering his vote, and not afterwards, the following questions or either of them :

1. Are you the same person whose name appears as A. B. on the register of voters now in force for the county of ——— [or for the riding, parts or division of the county of] or for the city [or borough] of [as the case may be]?

2. Have you already voted, either here or elsewhere at this election for the county of [or for the riding, parts or division of the county of] or for the city [or borough] of [as the case may be]?

. . . [these words have been repealed by 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6 (Perjury Act, 1911)]; and the returning officer or his deputy . . . shall, if required on behalf of any candidate at the time aforesaid, administer an oath to any voter in the following form :

You do swear [or affirm as the case may be] that you are the same person whose name appears as A. B. on the register of voters now in force for the county of [or for the riding, parts or division of the county of], or of the city [or borough] of [as the case may be], and that you have not before voted, either here or elsewhere, at the present election for the county of [or for the riding, parts or division of the county of] or for the city [or borough] of [as the case may be.].

So help you God.

R. v. Lucy, Id. 511.]

35 & 36 Vict. c. 33 (Ballot Act, 1872), s. 24.—Definition of personation.—Institution of prosecution.]—The following enactments shall be made with respect to personation at parliamentary and municipal elections :

A person shall for all purposes of the laws relating to parliamentary and municipal elections be deemed to be guilty of the offence of personation (ante, pp. 1390, 1396), who at an election for a county or borough, or at a municipal election, applies for a ballot paper in the name of some other person, whether that name be that of a person living or dead, or of a fictitious person, or who having voted at any such election applies at the same election for a ballot paper in his own name. [Provisions as to punishment rep. 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 66, and replaced by s. 6 (2) of that Act, ante, p. 1390.] It shall be the duty of the returning officer to institute a prosecution against any person whom he may believe to have been guilty of personation, or of aiding, abetting, counselling, or procuring the commission of the offence of personation by any person, at the election for which he is returning officer. [Words omitted rep. as to England, 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10; see ante, p. 272.]

[This section supersedes 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, ss. 83, 84, but not ss. 85-89. For cases on former law, see R. v. Hague, 4 B. & S. 715; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 81 (parliamentary elections) : R. v. Thompson, 2 M. & Rob. 355 : R. v. Bent, 1 Den. 157; 2 C. & K. 179 : R. v. Haslam, 1 Den. 73 : R. v. Goodman, 1 F. & F. 502 (municipal elections). For precedents of indictments under this section, see R. v. Fox, 16 Cox, 166 : R. v. Turner, 12 Cox, 313. Two witnesses are necessary to prove the offence. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 88 (ante, p. 480).

If a person applies for a ballot paper in a name other than his own, or the name by which he is generally known, but in a name which appears on the register of voters, and which was inserted therein by the overseers in the belief that it was the name of the applicant, and for the purpose of putting him on the register, he is entitled to vote and is not guilty of the offence of personation within this section. OTHER ENACTMENTS RELATING TO OFFENCES AT PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 33 (a) (Ballot Act, 1872), s. 3.—Offences in respect of nomination papers, ballot papers, and ballot boxes.—Attempts to commit such offences.—Form of indictment.]—Every person who—(1) . . . fraudulently defaces or fraudulently destroys any nomination paper, . . .; or (2) . . . counterfeits, or fraudulently defaces, or fraudulently destroys any ballot paper or the official mark on any ballot paper; or (3) Without due authority supplies any ballot paper to any person; or (4) Fraudulently puts into any ballot box any paper other than the ballot paper which he is authorized by law to put in; or (5) Fraudulently takes out of the polling station any ballot paper; or (6) Without due authority destroys, takes, opens, or otherwise interferes with any ballot box or packet of ballot papers then in use for the purposes of the election, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable, if he is a returning officer or clerk in attendance at a polling station, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and if he is any other person, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour.

Any attempt to commit any offence specified in this section shall be punishable in the manner in which the offence itself is punishable.

In any indictment or other prosecution for an offence in relation to the nomination papers, ballot boxes, ballot papers, and marking instruments at an election, the property in such papers, boxes, and instruments may be stated to be in the returning officer at such election, as well as the property in the counterfoils.

[The words omitted have been repealed by 3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. 27 (Forgery Act, 1913). For precedent of indictment under this section, and as to the meaning of the word "packet," see R. v. Chaplin, 74 J. P. 71.

As to the mode of securing the production of ballot papers, etc., for the purpose of a prosecution, see 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, sched. 1, Part I., rules 40 and 41, and sched. 1, Part II., rule 64 (b), and R. v. Beardsall, 1 Q. B. D. 452; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 157; 13 Cox, 193.]

Sect. 11 (a).—Extension of s. 50 of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102.]—Sect. 50 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867 (ante, p. 1398) (which relates to the acting of any returning officer, or his partner or clerk, as agent for a candidate), shall apply to any returning officer or officer appointed by him in pursuance of this Act, and to his partner or clerk.

(a) Made permanent by 7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 64, s. 35.

7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 64 (Representation of the People Act, 1918), s. 38.—Punishment of offences committed outside the United Kingdom.]—Where any person commits out of the United Kingdom any act which if that act had been committed in the United Kingdom would have rendered that person liable to prosecution and punishment under the Ballot Act, 1872, or the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883 (as amended by any subsequent Act) or under this Act, that person shall be liable to be proceeded against and punished as though the act had been committed in the United Kingdom at any place where that person may for the time being be. For the purposes of any such prosecution any period prescribed as the period within which proceedings may be commenced shall be reckoned as from the date on which the person charged returned to the United Kingdom next after the commission of the offence.

SECT. 7.

CORRUPT PRACTICES AND OTHER INDICTABLE OFFENCES AT MUNICIPAL AND CERTAIN OTHER ELECTIONS.

Common Law.

Bribery in municipal elections is a misdemeanor indictable at common law. R. v. Plympton, 2 Ld. Raym. 1377. So is payment or promise of payment for votes at the election of an assistant overseer of a parish. R. v. Lancaster, 16 Cox, 377, Wills, J.; see 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 627.

Statutes.

47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, s. 1.—Short Title.]—This Act may be cited as the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884.

Sect. 34.—Definitions.]—In this Act expressions have the same meaning as in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, and in the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883 (ante, p. 1390); except that the words "borough," "election petition," "election court," and "candidate," shall, unless the context otherwise requires, have the meaning given by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), and not the meaning given by the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 51); and except that "election" shall, unless the context otherwise requires, mean a municipal election.

Sect. 35.—Application of Act to city of London.]—This Act and Part IV. of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, shall apply to a municipal election in the city of London, subject as follows . . . (See now 50 & 51 Vict. c. xiii., as to elections in the city of London.)

Sect. 36.—Application of Act to certain other elections.]—(1) Subject as hereinafter mentioned, the provisions of this Act and of Part IV. of the Muncipal Corporations Act, 1882, as amended by this Act, shall extend to elections for the offices mentioned in the first column (post, p. 1405) of the first schedule to this Act as if re-enacted herein and in terms made applicable thereto, and petitions may be presented and tried, and offences prosecuted and punished, and incapacities incurred in reference to each such election accordingly.

Sect. 2.—Definition and punishment of corrupt practices at municipal elections.]—(1) The expression "corrupt practice" in this Act means any of the following offences, namely, treating, undue influence, bribery, and personation as defined by the enactments set forth in Part I. of the third schedule to this Act (post, p. 1406), and aiding, abetting, counselling, and procuring the commission of the offence of personation. (As to the common law, see post, p. 1443. As to the law in Ireland, see R. v. Clarke [1900] 2 Ir. 304.)

(2) A person who commits any corrupt practice in reference to a municipal election shall be guilty of the like offence, and shall on conviction be liable to the like punishment, and subject to the like incapacities, as if the corrupt practice had been committed in reference to a parliamentary election.

Sect. 21, sub-s. 5.—Candidate knowingly making false declaration respecting election expenses.]—If the candidate without such authorized excuse as is mentioned in this Act fails to make the said return and declaration he shall be guilty of an illegal practice, and if he knowingly makes the said declaration [respecting election expenses] falsely he shall be guilty of an offence, . . . and such offence shall also be deemed to be a corrupt practice within the meaning of this Act. [The words omitted have been repealed by 1 & 2 G. 5, c. 6 (Perjury Act, 1911).]

Sect. 23.—Application of ss. 37 and 38 of 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51.]—So much of ss. 37 and 38 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, as is set forth in Part II. of the third schedule to this Act (post, p. 1406) shall apply as part of this Act.

Sect. 26, sub-s. 4.—Fraudulent wirthdrawal of election petition.]—If any person makes any agreement or terms, or enters into any undertaking, in relation to the withdrawal of an election petition, and such agreement, terms or undertaking is or are for the withdrawal of the election petition in consideration of any payment, or in consideration that the seat shall at any time be vacated, or in consideration of the withdrawal of any other election petition, or is or are (whether lawful or unlawful) not mentioned in the aforesaid affidavits [i.e., the affidavits mentioned in the former part of this section], he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding twelve months, and to a fine not exceeding two hundred pounds.

Sect. 28.—Attendance by director of public prosecutions on trial of election petition, and prosecution by him of offenders.]—(1) On every trial of a municipal election petition the director of public prosecutions shall by himself or by his assistant, or by such representative as hereinafter mentioned, attend at the trial, and it shall be the duty of such director to obey any directions given to him by the election court with respect to the summoning and examination of any witness to give evidence on such trial, and with respect to the prosecution by him of offenders, and with respect to any person to whom notice is given to attend with a view to report him as guilty of any corrupt or illegal practice.

(2) It shall also be the duty of such director, without any direction from the election court, if it appears to him that any person is able to give material evidence as to the subject of the trial, to cause such person to attend the trial, and with the leave of the Court to examine such a person as a witness.

(3) It shall also be the duty of the said director, without any direction from the election court, if he thinks it expedient in the interests of justice so to do, to prosecute, either before the said Court or before any other competent court, any person who has not received a certificate of indemnity, and who appears to him to have been guilty of a corrupt or illegal practice at a municipal election.

(4) Where a person is prosecuted before an election court for any corrupt or illegal practice, and such person appears before the Court, the Court shall proceed to try him summarily for the said offence, and such person, if convicted thereof upon such trial, shall be subject to the same incapacities as he is subject to under this or any other Act, upon conviction, whether on indictment or in any other proceeding for the said offence; and further, may be adjudged by the Court, if the offence is a corrupt practice, to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding six months, or to pay a fine not exceeding two hundred pounds, and if the offence is an illegal practice, to pay such fine as is fixed by this Act for the offence:

Provided that, in the case of a corrupt practice, the Court, before proceeding to try summarily any person, shall give such person the option of being tried by jury.

(5) Where a person is so prosecuted for any such offence, and either he elects to be tried by a jury or he does not appear before the Court, or the Court thinks it in the interests of justice expedient that he should be tried before some other court, the Court, if of opinion that the evidence is sufficient to put the said person upon his trial for the offence, shall order such person to be prosecuted on indictment or before a court of summary jurisdiction, as the case may require, for the said offence; and in either case may order him to be prosecuted before such court as may be named in the order; and for all purposes preliminary and of and incidental to such prosecution the offence shall be deemed to be have been committed within the jurisdiction of the Court so named.

(6) Upon such order being made,

(a) if the accused person is present before the Court, and the offence is an indictable offence, the Court shall commit him to take his trial, or cause him to give bail to appear and take his trial for the said offence; and

(b) if the accused person is present before the Court, and the offence is not an indictable offence, the Court shall order him to be brought before the Court of summary jurisdiction before whom he is to be prosecuted, or cause him to give bail to appear before that court; and

(c) if the accused person is not present before the Court, the Court shall as circumstances require issue a summons for his attendance, or a warrant to apprehend him and bring him before a court of summary jurisdiction, and that court, if the offence is an indictable offence, shall, on proof only of the summons or warrant and the identity of the accused, commit him to take his trial, or cause him to give bail to appear and take his trial for the said offence, or if the offence is punishable on summary conviction, shall proceed to hear the case, or if such court be not the Court before whom he is directed to be prosecuted shall order him to be brought before that court.

(7) Any order or act of an election court under this section shall not be subject to be discharged or varied under sub-s. 6 of s. 92 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50).

(8) The director of public prosecutions may nominate, with the approval of the attorney-general, any barristers or solicitors of not less than ten years' standing, one of whom shall, when required, act as the representative for the purposes of this section of such director, and when so acting shall receive such remuneration as the Treasury may approve. There shall be allowed to the director and his assistant or representative, for the purposes of this section, such allowance for expenses as the Treasury may approve.

(9) The costs incurred in defraying the expenses of the director of public prosecutions under this section (including the remuneration of his representatives) shall, in the first instance, be paid by the Treasury, and so far as they are not in the case of any prosecution paid by the defendant, shall be deemed to be expenses of the election court, and shall be paid as the expenses of that court are directed by s. 101 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, to be paid; but if for any reasonable cause it seems just to the Court so to do, the Court shall order all or part of the said costs to be repaid to the Treasury by the parties to the petition or such of them as the Court may direct.

[In the case of the trial of a petition against a municipal election, the election court may, under sub-s. 5 of s. 28, order a person, against whom it directs a prosecution, to be tried in a county other than that in which the borough out of which the petition arises is situate, and the venue in the margin of the indictment is properly laid in the county in which the election court directs the trial to take place, and the mere fact that in the body of the indictment the offence is alleged to have been committed, as it actually was, in another county than that mentioned in the venue in the margin, is immaterial. R. v. Ripley, 17 Cox, 120 (C. C. R.). The indictment in such a case is properly preferred before the grand jury of the county in which the election court orders the trial to take place, and it is unnecessary that it should set out in the face of it facts which conferred the power to indict and try in that county. Id. Where the order of the election court directs the prosecution of the defendant for "a corrupt practice," this is sufficient to authorize the charging of the defendant in several counts of the indictment with several separate and distinct corrupt practices. Id. An indictment for corrupt practices at a municipal election need not state the date of the election. R. v. Yeoman, 20 T. L. R 266.]

Sect. 30.—General provisions as to prosecution of offences under this Act.]—Subject to the other provisions of this Act, the procedure for the prosecution of a corrupt or illegal practice or any illegal payment, employment, or hiring committed in reference to a municipal election, and the removal of any incapacity incurred by reason of a conviction or report relating to any such offence, and the duties of the director of public prosecutions in relation to any such offence, and all other proceedings in relation thereto (including the grant to a witness of a certificate of indemnity), shall be the same as if such offence had been committed in reference to a parliamentary election; and ss. 45 (ante, p. 1393) and 46 and ss. 50 to 57 (ante, pp. 1393—1395) (both inclusive) and ss. 59 and 60 (ante, pp. 1395, 1396) of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, shall apply accordingly as if they were re-enacted in this Act with the necessary modifications, and with the following additions:—

(a) Where the director of public prosecutions considers that the circumstances of any case require him to institute a prosecution before any court other than an election court for any offence other than a corrupt practice committed in reference to a municipal election in any borough, he may, by himself or his assistant, institute such prosecution before any court of summary jurisdiction in the county in which the said borough is situate or to which it adjoins, and the offence shall be deemed for all purposes to have been committed within the jurisdiction of such court; and

(b) General rules for the purposes of Part IV. of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, shall be made by the same authority as rules of court under the said sections; and

(c) The giving or refusal to give a certificate of indemnity to a witness by the election court shall be final and conclusive.

[This section applied to prosecutions for a corrupt practice at a municipal election: the provisions as to costs of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102. R. v. Law [1900] 1 Q. B. 605; 69 L. J. (Q. Sect. 32, sub-s. 2.—Recovery of costs ordered to be paid by any person.]—Where any costs or other sums are, under the order of an election court or otherwise under this Act, to be paid by any person, those costs shall be a simple contract debt due from such person to the person or persons to whom they are to be paid, and if payable to the Treasury shall be a debt to his Majesty, and in either case may be recovered accordingly.

SECT. 8.

BRIBERY AND CORRUPTION OF OR BY MEMBERS AND SERVANTS OF CERTAIN PUBLIC BODIES.

Common Law.

As to the cases in which the bribery of public officials is punishable at common law, see ante, pp. 130, 1205, and 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.), 601, 627.

Statute.

52 & 53 Vict. c. 69 (Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889), after reciting that it is expedient more effectually to provide for the prevention and punishment of bribery and corruption of and by members, officers, or servants of corporations, councils, boards, commissions, or other public bodies, enacts that :—

Sect. 1.—Corruption of or by members or servants of public bodies a misdemeanor.]—(1) Every person who shall by himself or by or in conjunction with any other person corruptly solicit or receive, or agree to receive, for himself, or for any other person, any gift, loan, fee, reward, or advantage whatever as an inducement to, or reward for, or otherwise on account of any member, officer, or servant of a public body as in this Act defined (see post, p. 1410), doing or forbearing to do anything in respect of any matter or transaction whatsoever, actual or proposed, in which the said public body is concerned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(2) Every person who shall by himself or by or in conjunction with any other person corruptly give, promise, or offer any gift, loan, fee, reward, or advantage whatsoever to any person, whether for the benefit of that person or of another person, as an inducement to or reward for or otherwise on account of any member, officer, or servant of any public body as in this Act defined, doing or forbearing to do anything in respect of any matter or transaction whatsoever, actual or proposed, in which such public body as aforesaid is concerned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (See Mayor, etc., of Salford v. Lever, 25 Q. B. D. 363; [1891] 1 Q. B. 168; 60 L. J. (Q. B.) 39.)

Sect. 2.—Punishment of misdemeanors mentioned in s. 1.]—Any person on conviction for offending as aforesaid shall, at the discretion of the Court before which he is convicted, (a) be liable to be imprisoned for any period not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred pounds, or to both such imprisonment and such fine; and (b) in addition be liable to be ordered to pay to such body, and in such manner as the Court directs, the amount or value of any gift, loan, fee, or reward received by him or any part thereof; and (c) be liable to be adjudged incapable of being elected or appointed to any public office for seven years from the date of his conviction, and to forfeit any such office held by him at the time of his conviction; and (d) in the event of a second conviction for a like offence he shall, in addition to the foregoing penalties, be liable to be adjudged to be for ever incapable of holding any public office, and to be incapable for seven years of being registered as an elector, or voting at an election either of members to serve in parliament or of members of any public body, and the enactments for preventing the voting and registration of persons declared by reason of corrupt practices to be incapable of voting shall apply to a person adjudged in pursuance of this section to be incapable of voting; and (e) if such person is an officer or servant in the employ of any public body upon such conviction he shall, at the discretion of the Court, be liable to forfeit his right and claim to any compensation or pension to which he would otherwise have been entitled. [As to the punishment where the offence relates to a contract with his Majesty or any Government Department, see the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. 5), c. 64, post, p. 1412.]

Sect. 3.—Right to prosecute at common law or under any other enactment preserved.—Invalidity of appointment to office no bar to prosecution.]—(1) Where an offence under this Act is also punishable under any other enactment, or at common law, such offence may be prosecuted and punished either under this Act, or under the other enactment, or at common law, but so that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence (cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 33, ante, p. 160). (2) A person shall not be exempt from punishment under this Act by reason of the invalidity of the appointment or election of a person to a public office.

Sect. 4.—Attorney-general's consent necessary to institution of prosecution.]—(1) A prosecution for an offence under this Act shall not be instituted except by or with the consent of the attorney-general. (2) In this section the expression "attorney-general" means the Attorney or Solicitor General for England and as respects Scotland means the Lord Advocate, and as respects Ireland means the Attorney or Solicitor General for Ireland.

Sect. 5.—Costs.—Repealed as to England, 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10. See ante, pp. 272 et seq.

Sect. 6.—Jurisdiction of quarter sessions.]—A court of general or quarter sessions shall in England have jurisdiction to inquire of, hear, and determine an offence under this Act. (See ante, p. 106.)

Sect. 7.—Interpretation.]—In this Act—

The expression "public body" means any council of a county or county of a city or town, any council of a municipal borough, also any board, commissioners, select vestry, or other body which has power to act under and for the purposes of any Act relating to local government, or the public health, or to poor law, or otherwise to administer money raised by rates in pursuance of any public general Act [including the Metropolitan Police Acts (R. v. Silberston [1899] 129 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 372; 34 L. J. (Newsp. 232)], but does not include any public body as above defined existing elsewhere than in the United Kingdom :

The expression "public office" means any office or employment of a person as a member, officer, or servant of such public body :

The expression "person" includes a body of persons, corporate or unincorporate :

The expression "advantage" includes any office or dignity, and any forbearance to demand any money or money's worth or valuable thing, and includes any aid, vote, consent, or influence, or pretended aid, vote, consent, or influence, and also includes any promise or procurement of or agreement or endeavour to procure, or the holding out of any expectation of any gift, loan, fee, reward, or advantage, as before defined.

[As to presumption of corruption in certain cases, see the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 64), s. 2, post, p. 1412.]

Indictment for corrupt practice. (52 & 53 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, ante, p. 1408.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1293.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Corruption, contrary to section 1 (1) of the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., being a food and drugs inspector of the town council of the borough of ——, on the —— day of ——, 19—, in the county of ——, did corruptly solicit or receive or agree to receive for himself the sum of £10 as a fee or reward for forbearing to prosecute C. D. for adulteration of milk.

SECT. 9.

CORRUPTION OF AND BY AGENTS.

6 Edw. 7, c. 34 (Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906 (a)), s. 1.]—(1) If any agent corruptly accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, from any person, for himself or for any other person, any gift or consideration as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do, any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favour or disfavour to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business; or if any person corruptly gives or agrees to give or offers any gift or consideration to any agent as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do, any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favour or disfavour to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business; or if any person knowingly gives to any agent, or if any agent knowingly uses with intent to deceive his principal, any receipt, account, or other document in respect of which the principal is interested, and which contains any statement which is false or erroneous or defective in any material particular, and which to his knowledge is intended to mislead the principal: he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine not exceeding five hundred pounds, or to both such imprisonment and such fine, or on summary conviction to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding four months, or to a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, or to both such imprisonment and such fine.

[The giver of a false document commits an offence under the section, although the agent to whom the document is given is not corrupted nor intended to be corrupted, nor is it essential that the agent should know of the falsity of the statement in the document. Sage v. Eicholz [1919] 2 K. B. 171; 83 J. P. 170; 121 L. T. 151.]

(2) For the purposes of this Act the expression "consideration" includes valuable consideration of any kind; the expression "agent" includes any person employed by or acting for another; and the expression "principal" includes an employer.

(3) A person serving under the Crown or under any corporation or any municipal, borough, county, or district council, or any board of guardians, is an agent within the meaning of this Act.

Sect. 2.—Prosecution of offences.]—(1) A prosecution for an offence under this Act shall not be instituted without the consent, in England of the attorney-general or solicitor-general, and in Ireland of the Attorney-General or Solicitor-General for Ireland. [See ante, pp. 68, 122.]

(2) The Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17), as amended by any subsequent enactment, shall apply to offences under this Act as if they were included among the offences mentioned in s. 1 of that Act (see ante, p. 67).

(3) Every information for any offence under this Act shall be upon oath.

(4) Costs.]—Repealed as to England by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 10 (see ante, pp. 272 et seq).

(5) A court of quarter sessions shall not have jurisdiction to inquire of, hear and determine prosecutions on indictments for offences against this Act. [This seems to prevent the finding of a bill at quarter sessions; see ante, p. 106.]

(6) Appeals against summary convictions.

[An indictment under this statute can easily be framed from the precedent on p. 1410.]

6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 64 (Prevention of Corruption Act, 1916), s. 1.—Increase of maximum penalty in certain cases.]—A person convicted on indictment of a misdemeanor under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906 [ante, p. 1411], or the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889 [ante, p. 1408], shall, where the matter or transaction in relation to which the offence was committed was a contract or a proposal for a contract with his Majesty or any Government Department or any public body or a sub-contract to execute any work comprised in such a contract, be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven nor less than three years: Provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the infliction in addition to penal servitude of such punishment as under the above-mentioned Acts may be inflicted in addition to imprisonment, or prevent the infliction in lieu of penal servitude of any punishment which may be inflicted under the said Acts.

Sect. 2.—Presumption of corruption in certain cases.]—Where in any proceedings against a person for an offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, or the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, it is proved that any money, gift, or other consideration has been paid or given to or received by a person in the employment of his Majesty or any Government Department or a public body by or from a person, or agent of a person, holding or seeking to obtain a contract from his Majesty or any Government Department or public body, the money, gift, or consideration shall be deemed to have been paid or given and received corruptly as such inducement or reward as is mentioned in such Act unless the contrary is proved.

Sect. 3.—Time for taking proceedings.]—Notwithstanding anything in the Summary Jurisdiction Acts proceedings under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, instituted with a view to obtaining a summary conviction for an offence thereunder may be commenced at any time before the expiration of six months after the first discovery of the offence by the prosecutor.

Sect. 4.—Short title and interpretation.]—(1) This Act may be cited as the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1916, and the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, and this Act may be cited together as the Prevention of Corruption Acts, 1889 to 1916.

(2) In this Act and in the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, the expression "public body" includes in addition to the bodies mentioned in the last-mentioned Act, local and public authorities of all descriptions. [See ante, p. 1411.]

(3) A person serving under any such public body is an agent within the meaning of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, and the expressions "agent" and "consideration" in this Act have the same meaning as in the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, as amended by this Act. [See ante, p. 1411.]

PART III.

CONSPIRACY: ATTEMPT, AND INCITEMENT, TO COMMIT CRIME.

SECT. 1.

CONSPIRACY.

Statutes.

33 Edw. 1.—Ordinacio de Conspiratoribus.]—Conspirators be they that do confeder or bind themselves by oath, covenant, or other alliance that every of them shall aid and sustain the enterprise of the other, falsely and maliciously to indict or cause to be indicted or falsely to acquit people, or falsely to move or maintain pleas (and also such as cause children within age to appeal men of felony whereby they are imprisoned and sore grieved), and such as retain men in the country with liveries or fees for to maintain their malicious enterprises and to drown the truth: and this extendeth as well to the takers as to the givers, and stewards and bailiffs of great lords which by their seigniory, office or power undertake to maintain or support pleas or quarrels for parties other than such as touch the estate of their lords or themselves. This ordinance and final definition of conspirators was made and finally accorded by the King and his council in this parliament the 33rd year of his reign, and it was further ordained that justices assigned to the hearing and determining of felonies and trespasses in the several counties of England should have the transcript hereof. [The definition of conspiracies in this ordinance is not exhaustive. R. v. Tibbits and Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77, 89; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 5; 20 Cox, 70, Alverstone, C.J. The ordinance was repealed by 6 G. 4, c. 129, s. 2, so far as it related to combinations to obtain an advance, or to fix the rate, of wages.]

7 & 8 Vict. c. 24, s. 1.]—. . . After the passing of this Act (4th July, 1844) the several offences of badgering, engrossing, forestalling, and regrating be utterly taken away and abolished, and . . . no information, indictment, suit, or prosecution shall lie either at common law or by virtue of any statute, or be commenced or prosecuted against any person for or by reason of any of the said offences or supposed offences.

Sect. 4.]—Provided always, and be it enacted, that nothing in this Act shall be construed to apply to the offence of knowingly spreading or conspiring to spread any false rumour with intent to enhance or decry the price of any goods or merchandise (post, pp. 1419, 1420), or to the offence of preventing or endeavouring to prevent by force or threats any goods, wares, or merchandise being brought to any fair or market, but that every such offence may be inquired of, tried and punished as if this Act had not been made.

[These sections were repealed by 55 & 56 Vict. c. 19 (S. L. R.), but the repeal does not revive the offences or affect the proviso. See 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 38 (2); 55 & 56 Vict. c. 19, s. 1.]

Common Law.

Conspiracy is an indictable misdemeanor, consisting in the agreement of two or more persons (1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 8) to do an unlawful act, or to do a lawful act by unlawful means. Unless two persons are found to have combined there can be no conviction. R. v. Thorp, 5 Mod. 221; Comb. 458: R. v. Plummer [1902] 2 K. B. 339; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 805; 20 Cox, 269; 66 J. P. 647. So long as such a design rests in intention only it is not indictable. When two agree to carry it into effect the very plot is an act itself, and the act of each of the parties, promise against promise, actus contra actum, capable of being enforced if lawful, is punishable if for a criminal object or the use of criminal means.

Willes, J., in Mulcahy v. R., L. R. 3 H. L. 306, 317: and see R. v. Warburton, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 274; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 22 (post, p. 1419): R. v. Tibbits and Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77, 89; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 5; 20 Cox, 70. The offence cannot exist without the consent of two or more persons (not being husband and wife, 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 8), and their agreement is an advancement of the intention which each has conceived in his mind, which then passes from a secret intention to the overt act of mutual consultation and agreement. R. v. Mulcahy, L. R. 3 H. L. 328, Lord Chelmsford. Thus an engagement by two or more is conspiracy, even if the conspirators do nothing in pursuance of the engagement. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 11 Cl. & F. 155; 8 Eng. Rep. 155; 1 Cox, 413.

Some forms of conspiracy were indictable as early as 1293 (see 1 Rot. Parl. 96). The origin of the offence is by some traced to the Ordinacio de Conspiratoribus (33 Edw. 1. ante, p. 1415), which deals with certain forms of combination to abuse or pervert justice, and forms the foundation of the action of malicious prosecution. The history of the offence is fully dealt with in Wright on Conspiracies; 3 Steph. Hist. Cr. Law, 201; Encycl. Eng. Law (2nd ed.), vol. 3, tit. Conspiracy; Halsbury's Laws of England, vol. ix., tit. Criminal Law, 260, 500, 708; and see 3 Chit. Cr. Law, 1138. The term "unlawful" in the definition has been held to include civil wrongs as well as acts punishable criminally if done by one person. R. v. Rowlands, 17 Q. B. 671; 21 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 81: R. v. Parnell, 14 Cox, 508 (Ir.): O'Connell v. R. (supra). But so far as this rule affected combinations in restraint of trade, it has been abrogated by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, and 38 & 39 Vict. c. 86 (ante, pp. 1280, 1281).

The forms of indictable conspiracy may be classified under the following heads :—

1. Conspiracy to commit an offence punishable by law (infra).
2. Conspiracy to cheat and defraud (post, p. 1419).
3. Conspiracy to injure individuals by wrongful acts otherwise than by fraud (post, p. 1421).
4. Conspiracy to prevent, obstruct, pervert, or defeat justice (post, p. 1422).
5. Conspiracy or combination affecting trade (post, p. 1422).

1. Conspiracy to commit any offence punishable by law.]—Every agreement between two or more persons to commit any offence is conspiracy, and indictable whether the offence is punishable on indictment or on summary conviction. R. v. Pollman, 2 Camp. 229: R. v. Whitchurch, 24 Q. B. D. 420; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 77; 16 Cox, 743: R. v. Connolly, 79 L. J. (K. B.) 90; 3 Cr. App. R. 27; 26 T. L. R. 31. It is immaterial that the offence agreed on is one which one of the conspirators could not singly commit. Thus a woman who, believing herself but not being with child, conspires with other persons to administer drugs to herself, or to use instruments on herself, with intent to procure abortion, is liable to be convicted of conspiracy to procure abortion, although if she had merely done the acts to herself with like intent, and had not been party to any conspiracy, she could not have been convicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58, of the felony created by that section, she not being with child. R. v. Whitchurch (supra): and see R. v. Mackenzie and Higginson, 75 J. P.

159; 27 T. L. R. 152; 6 Cr. App. R. 64. So it has been held that no immunity of one of the parties to a conspiracy to do an unlawful act would prevent the other party from being convicted of such conspiracy. R. v. Duguid, 75 L. J. (K. B.) 470; 21 Cox, 200; 70 J. P. 294. And the further question whether a person who is exempt from prosecution for an offence committed alone can be convicted of conspiring to commit the offence with another person not similarly exempt has been declared to be "well worthy of argument." R. v. Crossman, Ex parte Chetwynd, 72 J. P. 250; 24 T. L. R. 507. Conspiracy to commit treason is an overt act of treason, and may be tried as treason (ante, p. 1053), or as treason felony under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12 (ante, p. 1077): see Mulcahy v. R., L. R. 3 H. L. 306: R. v. Stone, 6 T. R. 527; 25 St. Tr. 1155: R. v. O'Donnell, 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 637: R. v. Davitt, 11 Cox, 676; but the fact that the overt acts of an offence charged as a conspiracy amount to treason does not make the indictment bad. R. v. O'Donnell (supra): R. v. Deasy, 15 Cox, 334. As to seditious conspiracy, see R. v. Cooper, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1249: O'Connell v. R. (ante, p. 1417). As to conspiracy to commit a breach of the peace, see R. v. Holberry, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1347, and ante, pp. 1127, 1218. Conspiracies to commit murder are now statutory misdemeanors. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4 (ante, p. 906). As to conspiracy to kill an unborn child, see R. v. Banks, 12 Cox, 393. It is an indictable conspiracy to combine to violate the provisions of a statute or a bye-law made under statutory authority, or of a proclamation made under like authority (R. v. O'Connell, 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 629: R. v. Thompson, 16 Q. B. 832; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 183), if the violation of the statute or bye-law would be a misdemeanor at common law, or is criminally punishable in some specific manner. See R. v. Bunn, 12 Cox, 316: R. v. Whitchurch (ante, p. 1417). In many cases it has been held indictable to conspire to do acts which at the time of the decision were probably offences at common law or under ecclesiastical law, but which are now offences by statute. (See 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 2: R. v. Best, 2 Ld. Raym. 1167; 1 Salk. 174). Thus it is indictable to conspire to obtain money by procuring an appointment to an office in the customs. R. v. Pollman, 2 Camp. 229; and see R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494; 49 G. 3, c. 126 (ante, p. 1205); or to conspire by violence, threats, contrivances, or other sinister means to induce a pauper in one parish to marry a pauper in another parish in order to saddle one of the parishes with the maintenance of both paupers. R. v. Tarrant, 4 Burr. 2106: R. v. Seward, 1 A. & E. 706; 3 L. J. (M. C.) 103: R. v. Herbert, 2 Ld. Ken. 466: R. v. Watson, 1 Wils. (K. B.) 41; and see 1 East, P. C. 461; 8 Mod. 320. As to other conspiracies to bring about a marriage, see R. v. Wakefield, 2 Lew. 1: Wade v. Broughton, 3 V. & B. 172. By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 8, the endeavour, by any officer of any union, parish, or place, to induce any person to contract a marriage, by threat or promise respecting any application to be made, or any order to be enforced, with respect to the maintenance of any bastard child, is in itself a misdemeanor.

Conspiracies to do acts against public morals or decency may be said to fall under this head, because the acts would at one time have been punishable in the ecclesiastical courts, if not in the common law courts. Thus it has been held indictable to conspire to entice a woman under age from her father's house to live in fornication, or even to carry her off with her own approval for that purpose; R. v. Lord Grey, 9 St. Tr. 127; 1 East, P. C. 460; or to conspire to induce a woman, whether chaste or not, to become a common prostitute; R. v. Howell, 4 F. & F. 160; or to defile a girl; R. v. Mears, 2 Den. 79; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 59; 4 Cox, 423; or to assign a female apprentice, even by her own consent, for purposes of prostitution. R. v. Delaval, 3 Burr. 1434; 1 W. Bl. 410, 439. Most, if not all, of these acts are offences by statute if done by one person. See 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, ss. 2, 3 (ante, p. 1034). Conspiracy to marry under a false name, with a view to obtaining property by personation, was held indictable at common law. R. v. Robinson, 1 Leach, 37; 2 East, P. C. 1010. Marriage under a false name is now criminal. 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 6, s. 3 (ante, p. 1188).

2. Conspiracy to cheat and defraud.]—Many of the decisions that a conspiracy to cheat or defraud is indictable turn on facts which proved that the cheat or fraud itself was indictable at common law or by statute. Thus it has been held that although it may not be a criminal offence at common law for a person to cheat his partner, yet where one of two partners combines, during the continuance of the partnership, with a third party to enable the one partner to cheat the other with regard to the division of the partnership property on a contemplated dissolution of the partnership, this combination is a conspiracy. R. v. Warburton, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 274; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 22; 11 Cox, 584. And where two persons agreed that the one should purchase, and the other should aid him in purchasing, goods on credit, apparently as an ordinary purchaser, but the purchaser did not intend to pay for such goods, and the other person knew that he did not intend to pay for them, this was held to be a conspiracy, because buying goods with intention not to pay was an unlawful act, though possibly not (before the passing of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13 (1): see R. v. Jones [1898] 1 Q. B. 119; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 41; ante, p. 1269) criminally punishable. R. v. Orman, 14 Cox, 381, Bramwell, L.J.

And if the parties conspire to obtain money by false pretences of existing facts, it seems to be no objection to the indictment for conspiracy that the money was to be obtained through the medium of a contract. R. v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49; Dav. & M. 208; 12 L. J. (M. C.) 135.

The following conspiracies have been held indictable:—A conspiracy to impose pretended wine upon a man, as and for true and good Portugal wine, in exchange for goods; R. v. Mackarty, 2 Ld. Raym. 1179; 3 Id. 325; a conspiracy by false and fraudulent representations that a horse bought by one of the defendants from the prosecutor was unsound, to induce him to accept a less sum for the horse than the agreed price; R. v. Carlisle, Dears. 337; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 109; a conspiracy to raise the prices of the public funds (or of any vendible commodity: see the judgment of Brett, J.A., in Aspinall v. R., 2 Q. B. D. 48, at p. 59; 46 L. J. (M. C.) at 150) by false rumours, as being a fraud upon the public; R. v. De Berenger, 3 M. & Sel. 67; an agreement to induce would-be buyers of shares to believe there is a market for the shares; Scott v. Brown [1892] 2 Q. B. 724; 61 L. J. (Q. B.) 738; a conspiracy by the promoters of a joint-stock company to cheat and defraud, by means of false pretences, those liege subjects who might buy shares in the company; Aspinall v. R., 1 Q. B. D. 730; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 129; 2 Q. B. D. 48; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 145 : and see R. v. Gurney, 11 Cox, 414 : R. v. Parker and Bulteel, 25 Cox, 145; a conspiracy to produce a public mischief by obtaining a passport by false pretences; R. v. Brailsford [1905] 2 K. B. 730; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 64; 69 J. P. 370; a conspiracy by persons to cause themselves to be reputed persons of property in order to defraud tradesmen and lodging-house keepers; R. v. Roberts, 1 Camp. 399 : R. v. Whitehouse, 6 Cox, 38; a conspiracy to defraud by means of false representations of the solvency of a bank or other mercantile establishment; R. v. Esdaile, 1 F. & F. 213 : S. C. sub nom. R. v. Brown, 7 Cox, 442; a conspiracy to make and put forth false statements as to the affairs of a bank; R. v. Burch, 4 F. & F. 407; a conspiracy to defraud the public by issuing and negotiating bills in the name of a fictitious and pretended banking firm; R. v. Hevey, 2 East, P. C. 858 n.; 1 Leach, 229; a conspiracy by traders to dispose of their goods in contemplation of bankruptcy, with intent to defraud their creditors; R. v. Hall, 1 F. & F. 33 : Heymann v. R., L. R. 8 Q. B. 102; a conspiracy to fabricate shares in a company in addition to those lawfully issuable; R. v. Mott, 2 C. & P. 521; a conspiracy between a money-lender and a solicitor by abuse of legal process to enforce payment of a sum known not to be legally due; R. v. Taylor, 15 Cox, 265, 268; a conspiracy to defeat a judgment creditor of the fruits of his judgment; R. v. Richardson, 1 M. & Rob. 402 : R. v. Cox and Railton, 14 Q. B. D. 153; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 41; 15 Cox, 611; a conspiracy by false representations to induce a person to forego a legal claim; R. v. Carlisle, Dears. 337; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 109; 6 Cox, 366; a conspiracy to contravene the Servants' Character Act, 1792 (32 G. 3, c. 56) : R. v. Connolly, 74 J. P. 15; 3 Cr. App. R. 27; 26 T. L. R. 31. As to conspiracies to deal fraudulently in railway tickets, see R. v. Absolon, 1 F. & F. 498. As to conspiracies to defraud of houses, see R. v. Whitehouse, 6 Cox, 129. As to conspiracy to diminish the King's revenue, see R. v. Starling, 1 Sid. 174; 1 Lev. 125.

Mock auctions and "knock-outs."]—In R. v. Lewis, 11 Cox, 404, Willes, J., held it to be indictable to conspire to defraud the public by means of a mock auction, i.e., an auction with sham bidders who pretend to be real bidders, for the purpose of selling goods at prices grossly above their real value. In Levi v. Levi, 6 C. & P. 239, Gurney, B., said that a proceeding known as a "knock-out," whereby several brokers agree before an auction that only one of them shall bid for each article sold, and that all articles thus bought by any of them shall be sold again among themselves at a fair price, and the difference between the auction price and the fair price divided among them, was indictable. But in Doolubdass v. Ram Loll, 5 Moore, Ind. App. 109; 18 Eng. Rep. 836, this ruling was declared by the Judicial Committee (per Parke, B.) to be an unreliable nisi prius dictum. In Leopard v. Litoun, K. B. D., May 31, 1897 (Hart on Auctioneers, pp. 135-140), Wright, J., in adopting the view of Parke, B., as above stated, said that he had withdrawn from circulation his treatise on Criminal Conspiracies (1873) because after publication he had found that his acceptance (see p. 34) of Levi v. Levi (supra) was not warranted by Doolubdass v. Ram Loll, which he had not found at the time of publication.

In Galton v. Emuss, 13 L. J. (Ch.) 388, B. and C. agreed not to oppose each other in bidding for the estate of A., at an auction, on the terms that if B. was declared the purchaser he would give C. an option to buy it at a certain price. This agreement was held legal and enforceable. In Re Carew's Estate, 26 Beav. 187, and Heffer v. Martyn, 15 W. R. 390, similar agreements were held not to be inequitable. At a sale by public auction of surplus stores belonging to the Government the plaintiff and defendant agreed, in order to avoid competition, that the defendant alone should bid for certain goods, and that the goods, if purchased, should be divided equally between them. Accordingly, the plaintiff abstained from bidding, and the goods were knocked down to the defendant, who subsequently repudiated the agreement. In an action by the plaintiff to recover half of the goods purchased or their value over and above the price paid at the auction, Shearman, J., held that, at any rate where the goods sold were the property of the public, it was against public policy that persons should combine at an auction to procure the goods to be sold at a price below the fair value, with the necessary result that the public were defrauded, and he ruled that the agreement was unenforceable. On appeal, however, it was held by Bankes and Atkin, L.JJ. (Scrutton, L.J., dissenting), that the agreement was not illegal, and that judgment must be entered for the plaintiff. Rawlings v. General Trading Co. [1921] 1 K. B. 635; 90 L. J. (K. B.) 404; 124 L. T. 562; 27 T. L. R. 252.

3. Conspiracy to injure individuals by wrongful acts otherwise than by fraud.]—It has been held that an indictment will not lie for a conspiracy to commit a mere civil trespass; R. v. Turner, 13 East, 228; or for a conspiracy to deprive a man of an office under an illegal trading company. R. v. Stratton, 1 Camp. 549 n. In R. v. Rowlands, 17 Q. B. 671, Lord Campbell said that R. v. Turner was wrongly decided, and it was held that a conspiracy to injure a man in his civil rights by wrongful as distinct from criminal means is indictable. Id., at p. 686. It is not necessary, in order to constitute a conspiracy, that the acts agreed to be done should be acts which if done would be criminal. It is enough if the acts agreed to be done, although not criminal, are wrongful, i.e., amount to a civil wrong. R. v. Warburton, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 274; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 22; 10 Cox, 584: R. v. Whitaker [1914] 3 K. B. 1283; 84 L. J. (K. B.) 225; 24 Cox, 272; 79 J. P. 28; 30 T. L. R. 627; 10 Cr. App. R. 245. The House of Lords in Mogul Steamship Co. v. MacGregor, Gow & Co. [1892] A. C. 25; 61 L. J. (Q. B.) 295, and Allen v. Flood [1898] A. C. 1, decided that a man may do acts prejudicial to the civil rights of others so long as no unlawful act is done or unlawful means employed, and that the fact that he does the acts with actual malice does not subject him to any civil consequence. The effect of these two cases was fully considered in Quinn v. Leathem [1901] A. C. 495: 70 L. J. (P. C.) 76. Allen v. Flood was there stated by Lord Halsbury, L.C. (at p. 507), to have been decided upon the view of the facts that what was alleged to be done was the independent and single action of the defendant: and it would seem that the Mogul case and Allen v. Flood do not affect the law as laid down in R. v. Rowlands (supra): Mulcahy v. R. (ante, pp. 1416, 1418), and R. v. Warburton (supra); see per Lord Brampton, at p. 529: Glamorgan Coal Co. v. South Wales Miners' Federation [1903] 1 K. B. 118; 2 K. B. 545; affirmed [1905] A. C. 239; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 528. A conspiracy to make pirated music for sale, and so to obtain profits out of that music to which the conspirators have no right, is indictable as a conspiracy to deprive the owner of the copyright of his property. R. v. Willetts, 70 J. P. 127, Bosanquet, Common Serjeant.

4. Conspiracy to prevent, obstruct, pervert, or defeat the course of public justice.]—These conspiracies appear to some extent to have been made punishable by or in consequence of 33 Edw. 1, ante, p. 1415. They were recognized by parliament as existing by the provision as to imposing a sentence of hard labour for such conspiracies contained in 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 29 (ante, p. 242). They include conspiracies to charge a man falsely with any crime. Poulterer's case, 9 Co. Rep. 55 b: R. v. Spragg, 2 Burr. 993, 1027: R. v. Macdaniel, Fost. 121, 130; 1 Leach, 44; 19 St. Tr. 745: and see R. v. Rispal, 3 Burr. 1320; 1 W. Bl. 368, which was a conspiracy to indict for robbery with a view to obtaining a statutory reward. It seems immaterial whether the conspiracy proceeds so far as actually indicting the person falsely accused; and if the object of the conspiracy is extortion, the truth or falsity of the charge is immaterial. R. v. Hollingberry, 4 B. & C. 329.

The publication of matter calculated to interfere with a fair trial being indictable (R. v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563; and see ante, p. 1215), a combination to publish such matter is an indictable conspiracy, R. v. Tibbits and Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 5; 20 Cox, 70.

The following have also been held indictable: a conspiracy by justices of the peace to certify a highway to be in repair when they did not know it to be so; R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619; conspiracy to prevent a witness from giving evidence; R. v. Steventon, 2 East, 362: cf. 2 Chit. Cr. L. 235; 3 Chit. Cr. L. 1151; conspiracy by a witness bound over to attend a trial with others to absent himself from the trial. R. v. Hamp, 6 Cox, 167. If the necessary effect of the agreement is to defeat the ends of justice, that must be taken to be the object. Id., per Campbell, C.J. A conspiracy to indemnify bail is indictable as a conspiracy to cause a public mischief, even without alleging or proving intent to defeat justice or enable the principal to abscond. R. v. Porter [1910] 1 K. B. 369; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 241; 74 J. P. 159; 3 Cr. App. R. 237. (a)

As to conspiracy falsely to charge a man as a father of a bastard, see 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 2; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 157.

5. Conspiracy or combination affecting trade.]—So far as these arise out of disputes between employer and workmen, they have been dealt with ante, pp. 1279 et seq. Many forms of combination to interfere with trade appear no longer to be indictable, owing to the repeal by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 24, s. 1 (ante, p. 1416), of the old laws against forestalling, regrating, etc., except where they involve the use of fraud (7 & 8 Vict. c. 24, s. 4, ante, p. 1416) or of force or intimidation (see ante, pp. 1283 et seq.).

A combination by two or more without justification or excuse to injure a man in his trade, by inducing his customers or servants to break their contracts with him, or not to deal with him, nor continue in his employment, is actionable if it results in damage to him. Quinn v. Leathem [1901] A. C. 495; 70 L. J. (P. C.) 76: South Wales Miners' Federation v. Glamorgan Coal Co. [1905] A. C. 239; 74 L. J. (K. B.) 525. As to criminal remedies, this statement of the law must be read subject to the provisions of the Trade Union Act, 1871, the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875 (ante, pp. 1281 et seq.), and the Trade Disputes Act, 1906 (ante, p. 1285); but it is submitted that such a combination as above stated is still indictable. Id. 526, 527, Ld. Brampton. At common law it certainly was indictable. See Re Heaphy, 22 L. R. Ir. 500, 524, Palles, C.B.: R. v. Rowlands (infra): R. v. Eccles, 1 Leach, 274.

See precedents, of conspiracies to withdraw customers from a brewer, 4 Went. 106; to injure gunmakers in their trade, 4 Went. 439; to ruin or injure a man in his trade or profession, 6 Went. 443; R. v. Eccles, 1 Leach, 274.

Indictment for Conspiracy.

1. The indictment must in the first place charge the conspiracy. In stating the object of the conspiracy, the same certainty is not required as in an indictment for the offence, etc., conspired to be committed; see R. v. Rispal, 3 Burr. 1320; 1 W. Bl. 368: R. v. Blake, 6 Q. B. 126; 13 L. J. (M. C.) 131: Sydserff v. R., 11 Q. B. 245. So, an indictment charging a conspiracy "by divers false pretences and indirect means to cheat and defraud A. of his moneys" was held good; R. v. Gompertz, 9 Q. B. 824; 16 L. J. (Q. B.) 121; 2 Cox, 145: R. v. Gill, 2 B. & Ald. 204: Aspinall v. R., 2 Q. B. D. 48, 60; and it is not necessary, in order to sustain such an indictment, to prove such a false pretence as would, if money had been obtained on it by one person alone, have been sufficient to sustain an indictment against him for obtaining money by false pretences. R. v. Hudson, Bell, 263; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 145; 8 Cox, 305. In an indictment for conspiracy at common law, to effect objects prohibited by a statute, it is sufficient to follow the words of the statute. Therefore, an indictment which charged a conspiracy to force workmen to depart from their employment, to raise the rate of wages, etc., by "molesting," by "threats," by "intimidation," by "obstructing," etc., in violation of 6 G. 4, c. 129 (rep.), was held sufficient, as it followed the words of the statute though it did not set out the means used to molest, intimidate, or obstruct, or the threats held out. R. v. Rowlands, 17 Q. B. 671; 2 Den. 364; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 81. The strictness of the former practice with regard to indictments has been greatly relaxed by the Indictments Act, 1915 (5 & 6 G. 5, c. 90). See ante, pp. 27 et seq.

2. Overt acts.—Particulars.]—The overt acts need not now be set out. The conspiracy is the offence, and it is immaterial whether anything has been done in pursuance of it. R. v. Gill, 2 B. & Ald. 204 : R. v. Gompertz, 9 Q. B. 824; 16 L. J. (Q. B.) 121; 2 Cox, 145 : R. v. Whitehouse, 6 Cox, 38, 45, 47 : R. v. Seward, 1 A. & E. 706; 3 L. J. (M. C.) 103 : R. v. Richardson, 1 M. & Rob. 402 : R. v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49; Dav. & M. 208; 12 L. J. (M. C.) 135 : and see 2 Ld. Raym. 1167 : R. v. Spragg, 2 Burr. 993 : R. v. Rispal, 3 Burr. 1320; 1 W. Bl. 368 : R. v. Eccles, 1 Leach, 274; 13 East, 230 n. : Wright v. R., 14 Q. B. 148; 16 L. J. (Q. B.) 10; 2 Cox, 91. On a general count not alleging any overt act the Court can order particulars if satisfied by affidavit that the defendant will not without them have sufficient information for his defence (see ante, pp. 27, 45). The provisions of the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (ante, p. 67), which apply to all conspiracies, render particulars unnecessary in most cases. As to the effect of the particulars in limiting the case for the prosecution, see R. v. Stapylton, R. v. Esdaile, R. v. Brown, 8 Cox, 69. Overt acts, which are proved against some of the defendants, may be looked at as against all of them, to show the nature and objects of the conspiracy. R. v. Esdaile (supra). An indictment for conspiracy to defraud should state the means by which the fraud is to be carried out. R. v. Peck, 9 A. & E. 686 : Peck v. R., 1 Per. & D. 508; 8 L. J. (M. C.) 22; and see post, p. 1426.

3. Conspiracy to accuse of crime.]—In an indictment for a conspiracy to indict or charge a man with an offence, it is not necessary to aver that the man is innocent of the offence; R. v. Kinnersley, 1 Str. 193; for he shall be presumed to be innocent until the contrary appear. See R. v. Best, 2 Ld. Raym. 1167; 1 Salk. 174 : R. v. Spragg, 2 Burr. 993. According to R. v. Best, it is immaterial whether the offence to be charged is temporal or ecclesiastical. In an indictment for conspiring to pervert the course of justice, by producing a false certificate of justices of peace that a road was in repair, in order to influence the judgment of the Court, it is not necessary to allege that the defendants knew the certificate to be false; it is sufficient that they agreed to certify the fact as true without knowing it to be so. R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619.

4. Venue.]—The venue may be laid in the county in which the conspiracy actually took place, or in any county in which any one of the defendants did an act in furtherance of the common object of the conspirators (ante, p. 37). A foreigner may be indicted in this country for conspiring here to cast away a foreign ship, provided that the conspiracy be not limited to doing the act abroad. R. v. Kohn, 4 F. & F. 68 : see R. v. Bernard, 8 St. Tr. (N. S.) 887. As to trial of a conspiracy alleged to have been entered into on the high seas, see R. v. Brisac, 4 East, 164 (ante, p. 38), and R. v. Kohn, 4 F. & F. 68 (ante, p. 34).

5. Trial.]—It has already been stated (ante, p. 1416), that a conspiracy must be between two persons at least. And where two persons are indicted for conspiring together, and they are tried together, both must be acquitted or both convicted; R. v. Manning, 12 Q. B. D. 241; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 85: R. v. Plummer [1902] 2 K. B. 339; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 805; unless they are also charged with conspiring with persons unknown, in which case the conspiracy must be alleged to be with a certain person (or persons) to the jurors unknown (see ante, p. 49; and see 3 Chit. Cr. L. 1141). And one person alone may be tried for a conspiracy, provided that the indictment charges him with conspiring with others who have not appeared; R. v. Kinnersley, 1 Str. 193: R. v. Plummer (supra); or who are since dead; R. v. Nichols, or Niccolls, 13 East, 412 n.; 2 Str. 1227; or whose names are to the jurors unknown; and persons jointly indicted may be severally tried; R. v. Ahearne, 6 Cox, 6 (Ir.) (and see ante, p. 200). The death of one of two conspirators does not affect the right to try the other, whether the death happens before indictment or during trial. R. v. Nichols, 13 East, 412 n.; R. v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49; 12 L. J. (M. C.) 135. Where the indictment charged that A., B. and C. conspired together, and with divers other persons to the jurors unknown, etc., and the jury found that A. had conspired with either B. or C., but they could not say which, and there was no evidence against any other persons than the three defendants, A. was held entitled to an acquittal. R. v. Thompson, 16 Q. B. 832; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 183; 5 Cox, 166. And where a count in an indictment charged eight defendants with one conspiracy to effect certain objects, a finding that three of the defendants were guilty generally, and that five of them were guilty of conspiracy to effect some of these objects, and not guilty as to the residue, was held bad and repugnant. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1; 11 Cl. & F. 155; 8 Eng. Rep. 155; 1 Cox, 413. But where several persons are charged with conspiring together, a verdict is not repugnant which finds that some, but not all, conspired as alleged; R. v. Quinn, 19 Cox, 78 (Ir.), Fitzgibbon, L. J.; the principle underlying that decision being that where there are two or more persons charged with conspiracy in the same count, the count is a single and complete count and cannot be separated into parts. R. v. Manning, 12 Q. B. D. 241: 53 L. J. (M. C.) 85, Coleridge, C.J.; and see R. v. Plummer [1902] 2 K. B. 339; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 805.

Indictment for conspiracy to defraud.

THE KING v. A. B. AND C. D.

Berks Assizes held at Reading.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. and C. D. are charged with the following offence:—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Conspiracy to defraud.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B. and C. D., on divers days between the —— day of ——, and the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, conspired together, and with other persons unknown, to defraud such persons as should thereafter be induced to part with money to the said A. B. and C. D. by false representations, that A. B. and C. D. were then carrying on a genuine business as jewellers at ——, and that they were then willing and prepared to supply articles of jewellery to such persons.

Misdemeanor: fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246). Where a person is convicted of any agreement or combination by two or more persons to do or procure to be done any act which is punishable only on summary conviction in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute, and is sentenced to imprisonment, the imprisonment shall not exceed three months, or such longer time, if any, as may have been prescribed by the statute for the punishment of the said act when committed by one person. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 86, s. 3 (ante, p. 1281). As to present definition of trade dispute, see ante, p. 1282.

Indictments for conspiracy are subject to the Vexatious Indictments Acts (see ante, p. 67).

Venue: the county in which the conspiracy was formed or in which any act was done by the conspirators in furtherance of the common design. R. v. Brisac, 4 East, 164; and see ante, p. 1425.

Persons indicted together for conspiracy may be separately tried, and are not entitled to have judgment stayed on conviction till the others are tried. R. v. Ahearne, 6 Cox, 6 (Ir.); but see R. v. Plummer [1902] 2 K. B. 339, 344; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 805.

Courts of quarter sessions have no jurisdiction to try an indictment for conspiracy unless the conspiracy is to commit any offence which they have jurisdiction to try when committed by one person. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1 (ante, p. 106).

Evidence.

Prove the conspiracy as described in the indictment, and that the defendants were engaged in it; or prove circumstances from which the jury may presume it. R. v. Parsons, 1 W. Bl. 392: R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 297. Proof of the existence of a conspiracy is generally a "matter of inference deduced from certain criminal acts of the parties accused, done in pursuance of an apparent criminal purpose in common between them." R. v. Brisac, 4 East, 164, 171, Grose, J., cited with approval by Willes, J., in delivering the opinion of the judges in Mulcahy v. R., L. R. 3 H. L. 306, 317. In order to convict of conspiracy, it is not necessary that the defendants should have concocted the scheme the subject of the charge, nor that they should have originated it. If a conspiracy is formed and a person joins it afterwards, he is equally guilty with the original conspirators. R. v. Murphy (supra, at p. 311), Coleridge, J. The prosecutor may go into general evidence of the nature of the conspiracy, before he gives evidence to connect the defendant with it. R. v. Hammond, 2 Esp. 719; and see R. v. Salter, 5 Esp. 125: R. v. Brittain, 3 Cox, 76 : Queen Caroline's case, 2 B. & B. 284, 302; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1348. But conspiracy involves concert, and it is a misdirection to discuss the case of each defendant separately without reference to the alleged concert. R. v. Bailey and Underwood, 9 Cr. App. R. 94.

The acts and declarations, also, of any of the conspirators in furtherance of the common design, may be given in evidence against all (ante, p. 354) : see R. v. Shellard, 9 C. & P. 277; 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1386 : R. v. Blake, 6 Q. B. 126; 13 L. J. (M. C.) 131; and this principle applies when the charge is one of a crime committed in pursuance of a conspiracy, whether the indictment contains a count for conspiracy or not. Cf. R. v. Jessop, 16 Cox, 204 : R. v. Charles, 17 Cox, 499 : R. v. Desmond, 11 Cox, 146. This rule extends to admit printed handbills or placards of speeches of co-conspirators and resolutions at their meetings. R. v. Duffield, 5 Cox, 404; and see R. v. Hunt, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 171; 3 B. & Ald. 566 : R. v. Vincent, 9 C. & P. 275. As to the use of correspondence between the defendants to exculpate one of them, see R. v. Whitehead, 1 C. & P. 67.

If any one overt act is proved in the county where the venue is laid, other overt acts, either of the same or others of the conspirators, may be given in evidence, although committed in other counties. (Ante, p. 37). R. v. Bowes, 4 East, 171, cit. In R. v. Boulton, 12 Cox, 87, Cockburn, C.J., refused to allow the acts of alleged conspirators in a foreign country (Scotland) to be given in evidence, on the ground that the English courts have no jurisdiction as to what may have taken place in Scotland; and see R. v. Ellis [1899] 1 Q. B. 230; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 105, Wright, J. In a charge of conspiracy between M. and H. to commit a misdemeanor against the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, evidence was given that M., a woman, issued advertisements in Scotland for a lady's maid, and that X., having answered an advertisement and been engaged by M. in Dundee, came to London, and was taken to a house where M. and H. resided, and that H. subsequently had unlawful carnal connection with X. It was held that the act of procuration was not complete in Scotland outside the jurisdiction, but that the offence was a continuing one. No objection appears to have been taken to the admissibility in evidence of the acts of M. in Scotland. R. v. Mackenzie and Higginson, 75 J. P. 159; 27 T. L. R. 152; 6 Cr. App. R. 54. Before evidence can be given of the acts of one conspirator against another, the existence of the conspiracy must be proved that the parties were members of the same conspiracy, and that the act done in question was done in furtherance of the common design. (Ante, p. 354).

On an indictment for conspiracy to defraud certain persons named therein, evidence of attempts of a similar nature to defraud other persons not named is admissible, on the general principles stated ante, p. 355, and it has been so held in R. v. Stenson, 12 Cox, 111 (C. C. R.).

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud A. of bills accepted by him has been held to be proved where the evidence was that the bills were never delivered to A., but were always in the hands of the defendants, and merely presented to A. for signature. R. v. Gompertz, 9 Q. B. 824; 16 L. J. (Q. B.) 121; 2 Cox, 145. See R. v. Gill, 2 B. & Ald. 204 (ante, p. 1424).

On a conspiracy to cheat by false representations of the solvency of another, it is not necessary to prove a representation in writing. R. v. Timothy, 1 F. & F. 39.

Although the evidence in support of an indictment for a conspiracy shows the object of the conspiracy to have been felonious, and even that a felony was actually committed in the course of it, the defendants were not, even before 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12 (ante, p. 213), entitled to be acquitted on the ground that the misdemeanor had merged in the felony; nor was or is it any ground for arresting the judgment that, on the face of the indictment itself, the object of the conspiracy amounts to a felony, the gist of the offence charged being a conspiracy. R. v. Button, 11 Q. B. 929; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 19; 3 Cox, 229: see R. v. Neale, 1 Den. 36; 1 C. & K. 591.

A count for conspiracy is not bad because one of the overt acts charged would support an indictment for treason. R. v. O'Donnell, 7 St. Tr. (N. S.) 637.

Where two defendants are jointly indicted for conspiracy, and one of them pleads guilty and the other not guilty, the defendant who has pleaded guilty is admissible as a witness against the other defendant. R. v. Gallagher, 15 Cox, 291 (C. C. R.); and see R. v. Plummer [1902] 2 K. B. 339; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 805.

The fact that persons charged with conspiracy to defraud derived no personal benefit from the transactions impugned is not conclusive evidence of an absence of intent to defraud. See the summing up of Campbell, C.J., in the Royal British Bank case, R. v. Brown, 7 Cox, 442: sub nom. R. v. Esdaile, 1 F. & F. 213: R. v. Beall, 34 L. J. Newsp. 623, Channell, J.; and ante, pp. 630, 710.

SECT. 2.

SOLICITING OR INCITING TO COMMIT A CRIME.

Common Law.

To solicit or incite another to commit a felony or misdemeanor is an indictable misdemeanor at common law, even though the solicitation or incitement has no effect. R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 5: R. v. Scofield, Cald. 397: R. v. Quail, 4 F. & F. 1076: R. v. Gregory, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 77; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 60; 10 Cox, 459; and see 3 Chit. Cr. L. 688; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 39. This includes an offer of a bribe to a person to commit an offence. Wade v. Broughton, 3 V. & B. 172: and an attempt to incite to the commission of felony or misdemeanor is also an indictable misdemeanor at common law. R. v. Ransford, 13 Cox, 9 (C. C. R.). It is immaterial whether the principal offence is one existing by the common law or is created by statute. See also 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 203: R. v. Campbell [1908] Victoria L. R. 136. As to incitement to murder, see ante, p. 906.

Indictment for soliciting and inciting a Person to commit an Offence. (Common Law.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1425.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Inciting to Steal.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, unlawfully incited C. D., a servant of E. F., to steal the goods of the said E. F.

A count may be added charging an attempt to solicit and incite, which is a misdemeanor at common law; R. v. Ransford, 13 Cox, 9 (post, p. 1430); or the defendant may be convicted of the attempt on the above indictment.

Misdemeanor at common law: fine and (or) imprisonment, with or without hard labour (see ante, pp. 239, 241, 246). R. v. Higgins, ante, p. 1428. Soliciting or inciting a person to commit a felony, where no felony is in fact committed by the person so solicited, is a misdemeanor only, notwithstanding 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2 (post, p. 1446). R. v. Gregory, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 77; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 60. Where a defendant is indicted for a misdemeanor committed by the soliciting another to do an act which, if done, would amount to a felony, and render the defendant, as an accessory before the fact, also guilty of felony, it is unnecessary to negative the doing of the act, for it cannot be intended that a felony has been committed where none is charged. 1 Stark. Cr. Pl. 148, 149 (2nd ed.): R. v. Higgins, ante, p. 1428. See 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 204. For a form of count for soliciting to conspire to cheat and defraud, see R. v. De Kromme, 17 Cox, 492; 56 J. P. 682 (C. C. R.).

Evidence.

Prove the soliciting or inciting as alleged in the indictment. Prove it in the same manner as you would prove the offence of accessory before the fact, except that this offence is committed, although the larceny was not in fact committed. It is no defence to the above indictment that the servant purposely submitted himself to the incitement with intent to betray his master. R. v. Quail, 4 F. & F. 1076.

Attempting to incite a person to commit an offence.]—An attempt to solicit a person to commit an offence, or to attempt or conspire to commit an offence, is an indictable misdemeanor; R. v. Ransford, 13 Cox, 9 (C. C. R.).

Intercepted letters.]—Where a letter is sent soliciting and inciting the addressee to commit a crime, but is not proved to have reached the intended recipient, the sender may be properly convicted of an attempt to incite to the commission of the crime. R. v. Banks, 12 Cox, 393 : R. v. Ransford, 13 Cox, 9 : R. v. Krause, 66 J. P. 121. Where the crime the commission of which is so solicited is murder it was held that there must be some evidence of communication between the sender and recipient of the letter to render the sender guilty of the statutory offence of "soliciting to murder" under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4; and that in the absence of such evidence he is guilty only of the common law misdemeanor of attempting to commit that offence. R. v. Krause (supra), Alverstone, C.J. : cf. R. v. Banks (supra).

Inciting a person to attempt to commit an offence.]—On an indictment charging the defendants that they "unlawfully did incite, counsel, procure, and aid one H. S., she the said H. S. then being a woman with child, to commit a certain misdemeanor, to wit, unlawfully to attempt feloniously and unlawfully to administer to herself certain noxious things, to wit, divers drugs, capable of procuring the abortion of pregnant women, the names of which drugs are to the jurors aforesaid unknown, with intent thereby to procure her own miscarriage" (see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58 (ante, p. 922)), and with conspiracy to incite her to attempt feloniously and unlawfully to administer, etc., it was held (a) that if the woman believing that she was taking a noxious thing within the meaning of the statute did, with intent to procure her own abortion, take a thing in fact harmless, she was guilty of an attempt to commit an offence against 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58; but (b) that if the defendants in supplying the drug to the woman, though they well knew that she would take it in the belief that it was a "noxious thing," and with intention of procuring her own abortion, did not themselves believe that it was capable of procuring her own abortion, they could not be convicted of inciting her to commit the said offence, although if they had so believed it would have been otherwise. R. v. Brown, 63 J. P. 790; 34 L. J. Newsp. 644, Darling, J. : cf. the fifth count in R. v. Ransford, supra; and see post, p. 1432.

As to incitement to commit perjury or give false evidence, see ante, p. 1190.

SECT. 3.

ATTEMPT TO COMMIT CRIME.

Mere intention to commit an offence is not indictable, except in the case of high treason, as to which it is said that under 25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2, voluntas reputatur pro facto; but in all cases where the intent to commit a crime is manifested by any overt act, the party may be indicted for an attempt to commit the offence. 1 Deacon, Cr. L. 643 : R. v. Scofield, Cald. 397 : R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 5, 21 : R. v. Chapman, 1 Den. 432; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 152; 3 Cox, 467 : R. v. Taylor, 1 F. & F. 511 : R. v. Duckworth [1892] 2 Q. B. 83; 17 Cox, 495; and see 1 Russ. Cr (7th ed.) 140. And every attempt (not every intention) to commit a felony or misdemeanor is a misdemeanor at common law, whether the crime attempted is one by statute or at common law. R. v. Hensler, 11 Cox, 570 (C. C. R.) : R. v. Roderick, 7 C. & P. 795, Parke, B. : R. v. Martin, 2 Mood. 123; 9 C. & P. 213, 215 : R. v. Ransford, 13 Cox, 9 (C. C. R.) : R. v. Cartwright, R. & R. 107 n. : R. v. Butler, 6 C. & P. 368. This doctrine has been applied to an attempt to commit suicide. R. v. Doody, 6 Cox, 463 : R. v. Burgess, L. & C. 258; 9 Cox, 302; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 185. As to the necessity of distinguishing between an attempt and an intention, see R. v. Landow, 23 Cox, 457; 109 L. T. 48; 77 J. P. 364; 29 T. L. R. 375.

It is said that there cannot, ex vi termini, be an attempt to commit perjury : but an attempt to suborn perjury is indictable (see ante, p. 1190); so are certain attempts to bribe (ante, p. 1205).

To constitute an attempt the act done must be immediately connected with the commission of the offence. R. v. Eagleton, Dears. 515; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 158 : R. v. Cheeseman, L. & C. 140; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 89; 9 Cox, 100 : R. v. Roberts, Dears. 539; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 17 : R. v. Robinson [1915] 2 K. B. 342 (ante, p. 718). (a) Thus, the procuring of indecent prints with intent to sell them is an indictable misdemeanor; but the merely keeping and preserving them with that intent is not. Dugdale v. R., 1 E. & B. 435; Dears. 64; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 50. So the procuring of base coin with intent to utter is indictable at common law (R. v. Fuller, R. & R. 308), but the mere possession of base coin with intent to utter it is not indictable at common law. R. v. Stewart, R. & R. 288 : R. v. Heath, R. & R. 184; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 142, 143, 148, though under certain circumstances it is indictable under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 11 (ante, p. 1107).

Attempts to commit certain crimes are also punishable by statute: e.g., attempts to murder (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 11-15, ante, pp. 907—917); to commit unnatural offences (ante, p. 1048); or offences against girls under thirteen, or between thirteen and sixteen (ante, p. 1024); or incest (ante, p. 1042).

(a) In R. v. Baker, 28 N. Z. L. R. 536, the Court had to consider the criminal responsibility of a man who had written to another a letter explaining how to open a safe by the use of explosives. No particular safe was in the contemplation of either man when the letter was written; but the recipient subsequently tried to open a safe in accordance with the directions in the letter. The Court held both men equally guilty, the writer of the letter apparently as having counselled or procured the particular attempt.

Under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (ante, p. 215), any person indicted for felony or misdemeanor may be convicted of the attempt to commit the offence charged, if the jury is satisfied that the offence was not completed. See R. v. McPherson, Dears. & B. 197; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 134; 7 Cox, 281: R. v. Hapgood, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 221; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 83. It is therefore unusual to prefer an indictment for the attempt to commit an offence (e.g., to obtain money by false pretences) where the full offence is charged.

In R. v. White [1910] 2 K. B. 124; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 854; 26 T. L. R. 466; 4 Cr. App. R. 257, on an indictment for murder, Darling, J., directed the jury that they might convict of an attempt to murder, and on their finding a verdict of guilty of attempt to murder the prisoner was sentenced to penal servitude as for a statutory felony within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 11-15. This ruling was upheld on appeal on the ground that the offences described in ss. 11-15 fell within the definition of attempts to murder, and that on an indictment for murder it was admissible under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, to convict of such attempt. (a).

Indictment for an Attempt to commit an Offence.

An indictment for the common law misdemeanor of an attempt to commit a felony or misdemeanor can be framed on the precedents for the full offence by inserting the words "attempted to" before the words charging the full offence.

An indictment for attempting to obtain money by false pretences must set out the pretences. R. v. Marsh, 1 Den. 505.

Misdemeanor: fine and (or) imprisonment (ante, pp. 239, 241, 246), with or without hard labour.

Evidence.

Mere intention to commit an offence does not constitute an attempt; some act must be proved to have been done by the defendant immediately connected with the offence. R. v. Eagleton, Dears. 515, 538; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 158; 6 Cox, 559 (ante, p. 718): R. v. Roberts, Dears. 539; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 17: R. v. Cheeseman, L. & C. 140, 145; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 89; 9 Cox, 100: R. v. Robinson [1915] 2 K. B. 342 (ante, p. 718). It is not necessary to prove that if no interruption had taken place, the accused could have completed the offence attempted; for it is no defence to an indictment for attempting to commit a crime to prove that it was physically impossible to commit the complete offence. R. v. Brown, 24 Q. B. D. 357; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 47;

(a) R. v. Connell, 6 Cox, 178, was distinguished and was held not to apply to the offences under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 11-15. It had already been criticized in R. v. Cook, 20 N. S. W. Rep. (Law) 264; 2 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 1967.

16 Cox, 715 (C. C. R.) : R. v. Ring, 61 L. J. (M. C.) 116; 17 Cox, 491. It is submitted that these decisions overrule R. v. Collins, L. & C. 471; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 177; 9 Cox, 497. (a) See also R. v. Duckworth [1892] 2 Q. B. 83; 17 Cox, 495; and the observations of Hawkins and Cave, JJ., in R. v. Williams [1893] 1 Q. B. 320; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 29. In the Draft Criminal Code, prepared by Lord Blackburn, and Barry, Lush, and Stephen, JJ., the following definition appears (art. 74) :—" An attempt to commit an offence is an act done or omitted with intent to commit that offence, forming part of a series of acts or omissions which would have constituted the offence if such series of acts or omissions had not been interrupted either by the voluntary determination of the offender not to complete the offence or by some other cause. (b) Every one who, believing that a certain state of facts exists, does or omits an act the doing or omitting of which would, if that state of facts existed, be an attempt to commit an offence, attempts to commit that offence, although its commission in the manner proposed was by reason of the non-existence of that state of facts at the time of the act or omission impossible. The question whether an act done or omitted with intent to commit an offence is or is not only preparation for the commission of that offence, and too remote to constitute an attempt to commit it, is a question of law." (c) To this definition the commissioners appended a note to the effect that the passage between the asterisks " declares the law differently from R. v. Collins " (supra), which at the date of the drafting of the code had not been overruled. Cf. Steph. Dig. Crim. Law (6th ed.), p. 39. As to what is " too remote " see R. v. Eagleton, and the cases cited ante, pp. 1431, 1432. from which it would seem that it is material to consider on this point whether there is any further act on the defendant's part remaining to be done before the completion of the crime. See R. v. Eagleton, Dears. at p. 538 : R. v. Cheeseman, L. & C. at p. 145; 31 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 89; and the observations of Alderson, B., in R. v. Roebuck, Dears. & B. 24; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 101; 7 Cox, 126, 127; and cf. R. v. Hensler, 11 Cox, 570 (C. C. R.) (ante, p. 713). In accordance with the above definition, it was held that if a pregnant woman believing she is taking a " noxious thing " within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58, does with intent to procure her own abortion take a thing in fact harmless, she is guilty of attempting to commit an offence against the first part of that section. R. v. Brown, 63 J. P. 790; 34 L. J. Newsp. 644, Darling, J. (ante, p. 1430).

(a) In which it was ruled that it was not indictable to attempt to pick a pocket which turned out to be empty. The learned editors of the second edition of Pritchard's Quarter Sessions, at pp. 900-903, contend that R. v. Brown and R. v. Ring have not completely overruled R. v. Collins.

(b) The first part of this definition was accepted in R. v. Laitwood, 4 Cr. App. R. 248, 252.

(c) The completion of one of a series of acts intended by a man to result in killing is an attempt to murder even although this completed act would not unless followed by the other acts result in killing. R. v. White [1910] 2 K. B. 124; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 854; 4 Cr. App. R. 257; 26 T. L. R. 466. In this case the Court seem to have regarded as doubtful the distinction drawn by Kennedy, J. in R. v. Linneker [1906] 2 K. B. 99; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 385, between acts done with intent to murder and attempts to murder.

PART IV.

PRINCIPALS IN THE SECOND DEGREE: ACCESSORIES, ABETTORS, ETC.

SECT. 1.

PRINCIPALS IN THE SECOND DEGREE IN FELONY.

Common Law.

Principals in the first degree.]—A principal in the first degree is one who is the actor, or actual perpetrator of the fact. 1 Hale, 233, 615. It is not necessary that he should be actually present when the offence is consummated; for if one lays poison purposely for another who takes it and is killed, he who laid the poison, though absent when it was taken, is a principal in the first degree. Vaux's case, 4 Co. Rep. 44 b; Fost, 349: R. v. Harley, 4 C. & P. 369. Nor is it necessary that the act should be perpetrated with his own hands; for if an offence is committed through the medium of an innocent agent, the employer, though absent when the act is done, is answerable as a principal in the first degree. See R. v. Giles, 1 Mood. 166: R. v. Michael, 2 Mood. 120: 9 C. & P. 356: R. v. Mazeau, 9 C. & P. 676: R. v. Bull, 1 Cox, 281: R. v. Manley, Id. 104: R. v. Clifford, 2 C. & K. 202: R. v. Bleasdale, Id. 765: R. v. Butt, 15 Cox, 564 (C. C. R.). Thus, if a child, under the age of discretion, or any other person who is not criminally responsible, by defect of understanding, ignorance of the facts or other cause, is incited to the commission of any crime, the inciter, though absent when the act was committed, is liable for the act of his agent, and is a principal in the first degree. Fost. 349; 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 7: R v. Palmer, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 96; 2 Leach, 978: R. v. Butcher, Bell, 6; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 14; 8 Cox, 77; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 104. But if the agent is aware of the nature, etc., of his act, he is a principal in the first degree, and the employer, if absent when the act is committed, is an accessory before the fact: R. v. Stewart, R. & R. 363: R. v. Williams, 1 Den. 39: 1 C. & K. 589; or, if present, is liable as a principal in the second degree; Fost. 349; unless the agent concurs in the act merely for the purpose of detecting and punishing his principal, in which case the agent is considered to be innocent. R. v. Bannen, 2 Mood. 309; 1 C. & K. 295: R. v. Johnson, C. & Mar. 218: and see R. v. Dannelly, R. & R. 310, where one of three persons who had agreed to commit a burglary informed the police, and though present at the burglary was held not liable to conviction.

Principals in the second degree.]—Principals in the second degree are those who are present at the commission of the offence, and aid and abet its commission.

A person may be a principal in the second degree even if from sex or age incapable of being a principal in the first degree. R. v. Ram, 17 Cox, 609, Bowen, L.J. : Lord Baltimore's case, 4 Burr. 2179 : R. v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396.

Presence, in this sense, may be either actual or constructive. It is not necessary that the party should be actually present, an eye-witness or ear-witness of the transaction; he is, in construction of law, present, aiding and abetting, if, with the intention of giving assistance, he is near enough to afford it, should occasion arise. Thus, if he is outside the house, watching, to prevent surprise, or the like, whilst his companions are in the house committing a felony, such constructive presence is sufficient to make him a principal in the second degree. Fost. 347, 350; 2 Hawk. c. 29, ss. 7, 8; 1 Hale, 555; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 108 : see R. v. Borthwick, 1 Doug. 207 : Coalheavers' case, 1 Leach, 64; 1 East, P. C. 343 : R. v. Gogerly, R. & R. 343 : R. v. Owen, 1 Mood. 96. But he must be near enough to give assistance; R. v. Stewart, R. & R. 363; and the mere circumstance of a party going towards a place where a felony is to be committed, in order to assist to carry off the property, and assisting in carrying it off, will not make him a principal in the second degree, unless, at the time of the felonious taking, he was within such a distance as to be able to assist in it. R. v. Kelly, R. & R. 421; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 110. So, where two persons broke open a warehouse, and stole thereout a quantity of butter, which they carried along the street thirty yards, and then fetched the prisoner, who being apprised of the robbery, assisted in carrying away the property, it was held that he was not a principal, but only an accessory. R. v. King, R. & R. 332. See R. v. M'Makin, R. & R. 333 n. : R. v. Dyer, 2 East, P. C. 767. And even where a felonious act is committed in pursuance of a preconcerted plan between the parties, those who are not present, or near enough to be able to afford aid and assistance at the time when the act is done, are not principals, but accessories before the fact. R. v. Soares, R. & R. 25 : R. v. Davis, Id. 113 : R. v. Else, Id. 142 : R. v. Badcock, Id. 249 : R. v. Hurse, 2 M. & Rob. 360 : R. v. Manners, 7 C. & P. 801 : R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437; 3 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1087 : R. v. Tuckwell, C. & Mar. 215. So, if one of two who are acting in concert is apprehended before the other commits the offence, he can be considered only as an accessory before the fact. R. v. Johnson, C. & Mar. 218. Presence during the whole of the transaction is not necessary; for instance, if several combine to forge an instrument, and each executes by himself a distinct part of the forgery, and they are not together when the instrument is completed, they are, nevertheless, all guilty as principals. R. v. Bingley, R. & R. 446 : R. v. Atwell, 2 East, P. C. 768. Thus, if A. counsels B. to make the paper, C. to engrave the plate, and D. to fill up the names of a forged note, and they do so, each without knowing that the others are employed for that purpose, B., C., and D. may be indicted for the forgery, and A. as an accessory; R. v. Dade, 1 Mood. 307; for, if several make distinct parts of a forged instrument, each is a principal, though he does not know by whom the other parts are executed, and though it is finished by one alone in the absence of the others. R. v. Kirkwood, 1 Mood. 304. See R. v. Kelly, 2 C. & K. 379. "Although the prisoner might not be able to write himself, yet if he got any one to write the name, he is as much guilty of forgery as if he wrote it himself." R. v. James, 4 Cox, 90, Erle, J.

There must also be a participation in the act; for even if a man is present whilst a felony is committed, if he takes no part in it and does not act in concert with those who commit it, he will not be a principal in the second degree, merely because he did not endeavour to prevent the felony, or failed to apprehend the felon. 1 Hale, 439; Fost. 350; R. v. Fretwell, L. & C. 161; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 145; 9 Cox, 152. See post, p. 1455, "Misprision." It is not necessary, however, to prove that the party actually aided in the commission of the offence; if he watched for his companions in order to prevent surprise, or remained at a convenient distance, in order to favour their escape, if necessary, or was in such a situation as to be able readily to come to their assistance, the knowledge of which was calculated to give additional confidence to his companions, he was, in contemplation of law, present aiding and abetting. So, a participation, the result of a concerted design to commit a specific offence, is sufficient to constitute a principal in the second degree. Thus, if several act in concert to steal goods, and the owner is induced by fraud to trust one of them, in the presence of the others, with the possession of the goods, and then another of the party entices the owner away in order that he who has the goods may carry them off, all are guilty as principals. R. v. Standley, R. & R. 305; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 112: R. v. Passey, 7 C. & P. 282: R. v. Lockett, Id. 300. So it has been held, that to aid and assist a person, to the jurors unknown, to obtain money by ring-dropping, is felony, if the jury find that the prisoner was a confederate of the person unknown to obtain the money by means of the practice. R. v. Moore, 1 Leach, 314: 2 East, P. C. 679. And where "the servant opens a window to let in a thief, who comes in and steals, burglary in the stranger, but robbery in the servant." Hale's Summary of the Pleas of the Crown, 81; Cornwall's case, 2 Str. 881: Saqui v. Stearns [1911] 1 K. B. 426; 80 L. J. (K. B.) 451. So, if two persons driving carriages incite each other to drive furiously, and one of them runs over and kills a man, it is manslaughter in both. R. v. Swindall, 2 C. & K. 230; 2 Cox, 141. So, also if three persons amuse themselves by shooting with a rifle at a target, without taking proper precautions to prevent injury to others, and one of the shots kills a man, all three are guilty of manslaughter, although there is no proof which of the three fired the fatal shot. R. v. Salmon, 6 Q. B. D. 79; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 25: 14 Cox, 494. If one encourages another to commit suicide, and is present abetting him while he does so, such person is guilty of murder as a principal; and if two persons encourage each other to self-murder, and one kills himself, but the other fails in the attempt, the latter is a principal in the murder of the other. R. v. Dyson, R. & R. 523; R. v. Alison, 8 C. & P. 418: R. v. Jessop, 16 Cox, 204, Field, J.; R. v. Stormonth, 61 J. P. 729; Ridley, J.: R. v. Abbott, 67 J. P. 151, Kennedy, J. So, if several persons combine for an unlawful purpose, or for a lawful purpose to be effected by unlawful means; see Fost. 351, 352; particularly, if it is to be effected notwithstanding any opposition that may be offered against it; Fost. 353, 354; and one of them, in the prosecution of it, kills a man, it is murder in all who are present, whether they actually aid or abet or not (Sissinghurst-house case, 1 Hale, 462) provided that the death was caused by the act of some one of the party in the course of his endeavours to effect the common object of the assembly. 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 52: R. v. Hodgson, 1 Leach, 6; 1 East, P. C. 258: R. v. Plummer, Kel. (J.) 109; Fost. 352: R. v. Rubens, 2 Cr. App. R. 213. But it is not sufficient that the common purpose should be merely unlawful: it must either be felonious, or, if it is to commit a misdemeanor, then there must be evidence to show that the parties engaged intended to carry it out at all hazards. R. v. Skeet, 4 F. & F. 931: see R. v. Luck, 3 F. & F. 483: R. v. Doddridge, 8 Cox, 335. And the act must be the result of the confederacy; for, if several are out for the purpose of committing a felony, and, upon alarm and pursuit, run different ways, and one of them kills a pursuer to avoid being taken, the others are not to be considered as principals in that offence. R. v. White, R. & R. 99. Thus, where a gang of poachers, consisting of the prisoners and Williams, attacked a gamekeeper, beat him, and left him senseless upon the ground, but Williams returned, and whilst the gamekeeper was insensible upon the ground, took from him his gun, pocket-book, and money, Park, J., held, that this was robbery in Williams only. R. v. Hawkins, 3 C. & P. 392. (a) The means must also be unlawful; for, if the original object is lawful, and is prosecuted by lawful means, should one of the party in the prosecution of it kill a man, although the party killing, and all those who actually aid and abet him in the act, may, according to circumstances, be guilty of murder or manslaughter, yet, the other persons who are present, and who do not actually aid and abet, are not guilty as principals in the second degree. Fost. 354, 355; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 9.

A mere participation in the act, without a felonious participation in the design, will not be sufficient. 1 East, P. C. 258: R. v. Plummer, Kel. (J.) 109. Thus, if a master assaults another with malice prepense, and the servant, ignorant of his master's felonious design, takes part with him and kills the other, it is only manslaughter in the servant, though it is murder in the master. 1 Hale, 446; and see Wilson v. Stewart, 32 L. J. (M. C.) 198.

In the case of murder by duelling, both of the seconds are principals in the second degree, as they give aid and assistance by their countenance and encouragement of the principals in the first degree, the actual fighters. R. v. Young, 8 C. & P. 644: R. v. Cuddy, 1 C. & K. 210, although Lord Hale considered, that, as far as relates to the second of the party killed, the rule of law in this respect had been too far strained; and he seems to doubt whether a second be deemed a principal in the second degree. 1 Hale, 452, 453. A prize-fight is illegal, and all persons present, aiding and abetting therein, are guilty of assault as principals in the second degree. R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534;

(a) R. v. Price, 8 Cox, 96, in which Byles, J., stated the proper directions for the jury in such a case, is said to be inaccurately reported. See 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 762 (k).

51 L. J. (M. C.) 66. It was once held, that all persons present at a prize-fight, having gone thither with the purpose of seeing the prize-fighters strike each other, were principals in the breach of the peace, and guilty of an assault; R. v. Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537, Patteson, J.; see R. v. Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103. But it is now settled that mere voluntary presence as spectators at a prize-fight, does not as a matter of law necessarily render persons so present guilty of an assault as aiders and abettors of the fight: R. v. Coney, ante, p. 1438; although, semble, that the mere presence of a person, unexplained, at a prize-fight affords some evidence for the consideration of a jury of aiding and abetting in the fight. Id.

It has been ruled that if the principal was insane at the commission of the act, no person can be convicted as an aider and abettor of his act. R. v. Tyler, 8 C. & P. 616. In R. v. Coombes [1895] Cent. Crim. Court (Wood-Renton on Lunacy, 913), Kennedy, J., ruled that a man could not be convicted as accessory after the fact to a murder committed by an insane boy. It is submitted that in consequence of the alteration of the verdict in cases of insanity by the Trial of Lunatics Act, 1883 (ante, p. 217), these two rulings are not in accordance with the present law. And in R. v. Tyler, (supra), where an insane man collected together a number of persons, who armed themselves with a common purpose of resisting the lawful authorities, and in their presence he shot a peace-officer who came to apprehend him under a warrant, it was held that they were guilty of murder as principals in the first degree; and that no apprehension of personal danger to themselves from him furnished any excuse to them for assisting in his illegal acts. Cf. McGrowther's case, Fost. 13, 217; 18 St. Tr. 391.

It was at one time considered that aiders and abettors (also described as accessories at the fact) could not be tried until the principal had been convicted or outlawed. Fost. 347. But it has long been established that those present aiding and abetting when a felony is committed, are principals in the second degree, and may be arraigned and tried before the principal in the first degree has been found guilty: 2 Hale, 323; and may be convicted, though the party charged as principal in the first degree is acquitted. R. v. Taylor, 1 Leach, 360; 1 East, P. C. 351: Banson v. Offley, 2 Show, 510; 3 Mod. 121: R. v. Wallis, 1 Salk. 334: R. v. Towle, R. & R. 314; 2 Marsh. 465; 3 Price, 145.

In Stephen's Digest of the Criminal Law (6th ed.), p. 36, it is stated that principals in the second degree in felony, may in all cases be indicted as principals in the first degree. But where by particular statutes the punishment is different (of which it would be difficult now to find an instance), then principals in the second degree must be indicted specially as aiders and abettors. 1 East, P. C. 348, 350: R. v. Sterne, 1 Leach, 473; 2 East, P. C. 701. See, however, R. v. Manning, 2 C. & K. 903 n. If indicted as aiders and abettors, an indictment charging that A. gave the mortal blow, and that B., C. and D. were present aiding and abetting, would be sustained by evidence that B. gave the blow, and that A., C. and D. were present aiding and abetting; and even if it appeared that the act was committed by a person not named in the indictment, the aiders and abettors might nevertheless be convicted. R. v. Borthwick, 1 Doug. 207; 1 East, P. C. 350. See R. v. Swindall, 2 C. & K. 230; 2 Cox, 141. And the legal result is the same even where the jury say that they are not satisfied who gave the blow, if they are satisfied that one of them did, and that the others were present aiding and abetting. R. v. Downing, 1 Den. 52; 2 C. & K. 382: and see R. v. Salmon (ante, p. 1437). Where a prisoner was convicted upon an indictment which charged him with rape as a principal in the first count, and as an aider and abettor in the second, it was held that the conviction upon the first count was good. R. v. Folkes, 1 Mood. 354: R. v. Gray, 7 C. & P. 164. See R. v. Crisham, C. & Mar. 187: R. v. Downing, supra.

In treason, and in offences below felony, and in all felonies in which the punishment of principals in the first degree and of principals in the second degree is the same, the indictment may charge all who are present and abet the fact as principals in the first degree; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 64: Mackalley's case, 9 Co. Rep. 67 b: R. v. Rogers, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 136; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 83; provided the offence permits of a participation; Fost. 345; or specially as aiders and abettors. R. v. Crisham, supra. Where a man is charged as a principal in the first degree evidence of his being a principal in the second degree will support the indictment. Id.; and see Fost. 351; Plowd. 98. By the Accessories, etc. Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 94), s. 8, "whoever shall aid, abet, counsel or procure the commission of any misdemeanor, whether the same be a misdemeanor at common law, or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, shall be liable to be tried, indicted and punished as a principal offender." Where, therefore, upon the trial of an indictment charging A. with feloniously wounding, and B. with feloniously aiding and abetting him in the felony, the jury found A. guilty of the misdemeanor of unlawful wounding, it was held that B. was properly convicted of aiding and abetting in the misdemeanor. R. v. Waudby [1895] 2 Q. B. 482; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 251. If the abettor and principal in a misdemeanor are indicted together as principals, the abettor may be convicted, although the principal is acquitted. R. v. Burton, 13 Cox, 71 (C. C. R.).

Indictment of Principal in the Second Degree.

After stating the offence of the principal in the first degree, and immediately before the conclusion of the indictment, charge the principal in the second degree, thus :

C. D., on the same date, was present, aiding, abetting, and assisting the said A. B. to commit the said crime.

Punishment. (a) By 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 7, "no person convicted of felony

(a) Apart from the statutes printed on pp. 1440-1442, and before abolition of benefit of clergy by the Criminal Law Act, 1827 (7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28), s. 6, the rule adopted seems to have been that where a statute created a felony and punished with death persons guilty thereof, or imposed the penalty of death for a specified common law felony, shall suffer death unless it be for some offence which was excluded from the benefit of clergy before or on the first day of the present session of parliament, or which hath been or shall be made punishable by death by some statute passed after that day" (see ante, p. 235).

Where, upon the construction of any statute, principals in the second degree are not punishable with death, and no punishment is prescribed by the statute, then principals in the second degree may be sentenced to penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or to imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 8 (ante, p. 236); 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

In the case of a felony at common law not punishable with death, and in cases of felony at common law or by statute, where the principal in the first degree is expressly, and the principal in the second degree is by construction of law, punishable with death (vide supra), the pleader may charge the principal in the second degree either as principal in the first degree, for proof that he was present aiding and abetting will in such a case maintain an indictment charging him with having actually committed the offence; see Mackalley's case, 9 Co. Rep. 67 b; 1 Hale, 438: R. v. Towle, R. & R. 314: or as being present aiding and abetting, as in the form above given, at his option. R. v. Crisham, C. & Mar. 187 (ante, p. 1440): R. v. Downing, 1 Den. 52; 2 C. & K. 382 (ante, p. 1440). A., B. and C. were indicted for murder: in the first count, as principals in the first degree; and in the second, A. was indicted as a principal in the first degree; and B. and C. as principals in the second degree; the grand jury ignored the first count as to B. and C., and found a true bill on the second count against all; it seems that B. and C. might be convicted on the second count, though A. was acquitted. R. v. Phelps, C. & Mar. 180. It has never been necessary that the principal in the first degree should be joined in the indictment with the principal in the second degree or have been made amenable to justice. Plowd. 97.

SECT. 2.

ACCESSORIES BEFORE THE FACT TO FELONY.

Common Law.

An accessory before the fact is one who, though absent at the time of the felony committed, doth yet procure, counsel, command or abet another to commit a felony. 1 Hale, 615: R. v. Macdaniel, 19 St. Tr. 745; Fost. 121;

without making specific provisoes as to persons present aiding and abetting, they were liable to the death penalty, though not named in the statute. R. v. Midwinter, Fost. App. 415: The Coalheavers' case, 1 Leach, 64; 1 East, P. C. 413: and see 1 Hale, 537; Fost. 359. But a distinction was drawn where the penalty was imposed on the person committing the offence, and not on the offence by name (Fost. 356, 357), unless the accessory were expressly within the statute. R. v. Gogerly, R. & R. 343. Under 12 G. 3, c. 24, s. 1, ante, p. 748, aiders and abettors are liable to capital punishment.

1 East, P. C. 352; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 262; and see Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 33. There must be a procurement for the particular felony charged in the indictment. R. v. Lomas, 23 Cox, 765; 30 T. L. R. 125; 9 Cr. App. R. 220.

The term "accessory" is used only with reference to felonies: in high treason, every instance of incitement, etc., which in felony would make a man an accessory before the fact, will make him a principal traitor; Fost. 341-346; and he must be indicted as such. 1 Hale, 233. In point of law there is no such person as an accessory to misdemeanor. R. v. Burton, 13 Cox, 71, Blackburn, J.: Du Cros v. Lambourne [1907] 1 K. B. 40, 43; 76 L. J. (K. B.) 50; but see Gould & Co., Ltd. v. Houghton [1921] 1 K. B. 509, at p. 520, per Darling, J.; and all those who in felony would be accessories before the fact, in offences under felony are principals and indictable as such. 4 Bl. Com. 36; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 138: R. v. Clayton, 1 C. & K. 128: R. v. Moland, 2 Mood. 276: R. v. Greenwood, 2 Den. 453; Gould & Co., Ltd. v. Houghton (supra); 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 8 (post, p. 1456).

If the party is actually or constructively present when the felony is committed, he is, as we have seen (ante, pp. 1436 et seq.), an aider and abettor, and not an accessory before the fact; for it is essential, to constitute the offence of accessory, that the party should be absent at the time the offence is committed. 1 Hale, 615: R. v. Gordon, 1 Leach, 515; 1 East, P. C. 315, 352. Acting upon this rule, Coleridge, C.J., directed the acquittal of a woman indicted as accessory before the fact to a murder, it being proved that she was present at the time when the murder was committed, and was therefore liable, if at all, as a principal. R. v. Brown, 14 Cox, 144. It is submitted that she might properly have been convicted as a principal.

The procurement may be personal, or through the intervention of a third person; Fost. 125: R. v. Earl of Somerset, 2 St. Tr. 965; 19 St. Tr. 804, cit.: R. v. Cooper, C. & P. 535.

It may also be direct, by hire, counsel, command, or conspiracy: or indirect, by evincing an express liking, approbation, or assent to another's felonious design of committing a felony; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 16; but the bare concealment of a felony contemplated by another will not make the party concealing it an accessory before the fact; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 23; nor will a tacit acquiescence, or words which amount to a bare permission, be sufficient to constitute this offence. 1 Hale, 616.

The procurement must be continuing; for if the procurer of a felony repents, and before the felony is committed, actually countermands his order, and the principal notwithstanding commits the felony, the original contriver will not be an accessory. 1 Hale, 618; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 125.

If the accessory orders or advises one crime, and the principal intentionally commits another; as, for instance, if he is ordered or advised to burn a house, and instead thereof commits larceny; or, to commit a crime against A., and instead of so doing commits the same against B.,—the accessory will not be answerable; 1 Hale, 617; but if the principal commits the same offence against B. by mistake, instead of A., it seems it would be otherwise. Fost. 370 et seq.; but see 1 Hale, 617; 3 Co. Inst. 51; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 35; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 124. But it is clear that the accessory is liable for all that ensues upon the execution of the unlawful act commanded; as, for instance, if A. commands B. to beat C., and he beats him so that he dies, A. is accessory to the murder. 4 Bl. Com. 37; 1 Hale, 617. Or if A. commands B. to burn the house of C., and in doing so the house of D. is also burnt, A. is accessory to the burning of D.'s house. R. v. Saunders, Plowd. 473. So, if the offence commanded is in fact committed, although by different means from those commanded: as, for instance, if J. W. hires J. S. to poison A., and instead of poisoning him, he shoots him, J. W. is, nevertheless, liable as accessory. Fost. 369, 370. Where the procurement is through an intermediate agent, it is not necessary that the accessory should name the person to be procured to do the act. R. v. Cooper, 5 C. & P. 535. If the agent is innocent the person procuring his act is a principal and not an accessory. R. v. Bull, 1 Cox, 281: R. v. Manley, 1 Cox, 104; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 104.

To support an indictment for being accessory before the fact, there must be some active proceeding on the part of the defendant; i.e., he must procure, incite, or in some other way encourage the act done by the principal. Therefore where T. acted as stakeholder on the occasion of a prize-fight which ended in the death of one of the fighters, but was not present at the fight and took no other part in the circumstances attending it than to hold the stakes and afterwards hand them over to the winner, it was held that he was not liable to be convicted as accessory before the fact to the manslaughter. R. v. Taylor, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 147; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 67; 13 Cox, 68.

Several persons may be convicted on a joint charge against them as accessories before the fact to a particular felony, though the only evidence against them is of separate acts done by each at separate times and places. R. v. Barber, 1 C. & K. 442.

In manslaughter, it has been said, there can be no accessories before the fact, for the offence is sudden and unpremeditated; and therefore where A. is indicted for murder, and B. as accessory, if the jury find A. guilty of manslaughter, they must acquit B. 1 Hale, 437, 466, 615; 1 Hawk. c. 30, s. 2. The doctrine rests on Bibithe's case, 4 Co. Rep. 43 b: Goose's case, Moore (K. B.), 461: Goff v. Byby, Cro. Eliz. 540; and is controverted by the late Mr. Greaves. Crim. Cons. Acts (1st ed.), p. 23. And where a man procured and gave a woman poison in order that she might take it and so procure abortion, and she did take it in his absence, and died of its effects, it was held that he might be convicted as an accessory before the fact to the crime of manslaughter. R. v. Gaylor, Dears. & B. 288; 7 Cox, 253. In the course of the argument in that case, Bramwell, B., said, "Suppose a man for mischief gives another a strong dose of medicine, not intending any further injury than to cause him to be sick and uncomfortable, and death ensues, would not that be manslaughter? Suppose, then, that another had counselled him to do it, would not he who counselled be an accessory before the fact?"

At common law an accessory could not, without his own consent, unless tried with the principal, be brought to trial until the guilt of his principal had been legally ascertained by conviction (1 Anne, st. 2, c. 9, s. 1, rep.) or outlawry. Plowden, 97: Fost. 360: 1 Hale, 623. The matter is now regulated by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2, post, p. 1446. An indictment will not lie under this section where no felony is in fact committed. R. v. Gregory, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 77; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 60. See also ss. 5, 7, post, p. 1447. A person who induces a servant of the post-office to intercept and hand over to him a letter, which is in course of transmission by post, is either guilty, together with the post-office servant, of larceny as a principal, or is accessory before the fact to the larceny committed by the post-office servant, and in either view can be convicted on an indictment charging him with larceny of the letter. R. v. James, 24 Q. B. D. 439; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 96. Where the principal and accessory are tried together, one being charged as principal and the other as accessory before the fact (which now rarely, if ever, occurs), if the principal pleaded otherwise than the general issue, the accessory was not bound to answer until the principal's plea had been determined. 9 H. 7, c. 19 (rep.) : 1 Hale, 624 : 2 Co. Inst. 184. Where the principal was indicted for burglary and larceny in a dwelling-house, and the accessory was charged in the same indictment as accessory before the fact to the said "felony and burglary," and the jury acquitted the principal of the burglary, but found him guilty of the larceny; it seems the judges were of opinion that the accessory should have been acquitted; for the indictment charged him as accessory to the burglary only, and the principal being acquitted of that, the accessory should have been acquitted also. R. v. Dannelly, R. & R. 310; 2 Marsh, 571.

If a man is indicted as accessory to several persons in the same felony, and is found accessory to one, it is a good verdict, and judgment may be passed upon him. R. v. Lord Sanchar, 9 Co. Rep. 119; Fost. 361; 1 Hale, 624.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 94 (Accessories and Abettors Act, 1861), s. 1.—Accessories before the fact indictable as principals.]—Whosoever shall become an accessory before the fact to any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law, or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, may be indicted, tried, convicted and punished in all respects as if he were a principal felon. [Under this section, which re-enacts 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 1 (as to which see R. v. Hughes, 8 Cox, 278), the conviction of the principal is no longer a condition precedent to the conviction of the accessory. Where an offence is declared felony, it appears clear that such a common law incident as that of the liability of accessories is implied. R. v. Sadi, 1 Leach, 468. A similar provision is made by s. 5 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43), as to offences punishable on summary conviction. The enactment applies to all felonies, and the doubts raised as to murder under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 1 (rep.), seem to have no substance. R. v. Chadwick, Staff. Summer Assizes, 1850, Williams, J.; Greaves, Crim. Law Cons. Acts (2nd ed.), 20.]

Sect. 2.—Accessories before the fact may be indicted as such, or as substantive felons.]—Whosoever shall counsel, procure, or command any other person to commit any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, shall be guilty of felony, and may be indicted and convicted either as an accessory before the fact to the principal felony, together with the principal felon, or after the conviction of the principal felon, or may be indicted and convicted of a substantive felony whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice, and may thereupon be punished in the same manner as any accessory before the fact to the same felony, if convicted as an accessory, may be punished. [This section re-enacts 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 9, which altered the common law rule on the subject, stated ante, p. 1445; and see Saqui v. Stearns, 26 T. L. Sect. 5.—Prosecution of accessory after principal has been convicted, but not attainted.]—If any principal offender shall be in anywise convicted of any felony, it shall be lawful to proceed against any accessory, either before or after the fact, in the same manner as if such principal felon had been attainted thereof, notwithstanding such principal felon shall die, or be pardoned, or otherwise delivered before attainder; and every such accessory shall upon conviction suffer the same punishment as he would have suffered if the principal had been attainted. [This section re-enacts 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 11. Attainder was abolished in 1870; see ante, p. 164.]

Sect. 6.—Trial of accessories.]—Any number of accessories at different times to any felony, and any number of receivers at different times of property stolen at one time, may be charged with substantive felonies in the same indictment, and may be tried together, notwithstanding the principal felon shall not be included in the same indictment, or shall not be in custody or amenable to justice. [This section re-enacts 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 15, with the additions italicized. As to receivers, see ante, pp. 697 et seq.]

Sect. 7.—Trial of accessories.]—Where any felony shall have been wholly (a) committed within England or Ireland, the offence of any person who shall be an accessory either before or after the fact to any such felony may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished by any court which shall have jurisdiction to try the principal felony, or any felonies committed in any county or place in which the act by reason whereof such person shall have become such accessory shall have been committed: and in every other case the offence of any person who shall be an accessory either before or after the fact to any felony may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined and punished by any court which shall have jurisdiction to try the principal felony or any felonies committed in any county or place in which such person shall be apprehended or be in custody, whether the principal felony shall have been committed on the sea or on the land, or begun on the sea and completed on the land, or begun on the land and completed on the sea, and whether within Indictment of Accessory before the Fact together with the Principal.

(24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2, ante, p. 1446.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1425.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

A. B., arson, contrary to section 3 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.
C. D., accessory before the fact to same offence.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, set fire to a house with intent to injure or defraud.

C. D., on the same day, in the county of ——, did counsel, procure, and command the said A. B. to commit the said offence.

A man may be indicted as accessory to one of several principals, or to all: and if he is indicted as accessory to all, he may be convicted on such indictment as accessory to one or some of them. Lord Sanchar's case, 9 Co. Rep. 119; Fost. 361; 1 Hale, 624. (See ante, p. 1446.) As to the venue, see ante, pp. 41, 1447.

The offence of accessory before the fact is felony, and such accessory now in all cases may be indicted, tried, convicted and punished in all respects as if he were a principal felon. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1 (ante, p. 1446). See R. v. Chadwick, Stafford Sum. Ass., 1850 (ante, p. 1446): R. v. James, 24 Q. B. D. 439; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 96 (ante, p. 1446). Punishment: as directed by the statute if any specifically providing for the punishment, or where no specific punishment is provided, by penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour for the whole or any part of the imprisonment. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 8 (ante, p. 236): 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

Evidence.

Prove first the commission of the principal felony by A. B.; secondly, that C D. had previously to its commission counselled, procured, [incited, moved, aided, hired,] or commanded A. B. to commit the principal felony: whether he did so directly or through a third person is immaterial. See R. v. Macdaniel, Fost, 121, 125; 19 St. Tr. 745, and ante, p. 1444.

To support an indictment for being accessory before the fact to manslaughter (as to which see R. v. Gaylor, Dears. & B. 288, and ante, p. 1445), or to any other felony, it must be proved that the defendant procured, incited, or in some other way encouraged the act of the principal. See R. v. Taylor, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 147; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 67; 13 Cox, 68 (ante, p. 1445).

As it is essential to constitute the offence of accessory that the party should be absent at the time the offence was committed (see ante, p. 1443), if it is proved that C. D. was present when the felony in question was committed, he must, if indicted as an accessory, be acquitted. R. v. Gordon, 1 Leach, 515; 1 East, P. C. 352: R. v. Brown, 14 Cox, 144.

The accessory may controvert the guilt of his principal, and cannot be convicted on this indictment unless the principal is found guilty. See 1 Hale, 624; 2 Co. Inst. 184; Fost. 365. So, the accessory may prove that, after he had so counselled, procured, incited, hired, or commanded J. S., he repented of it, and actually countermanded the order, etc. 1 Hale, 618. The accessory may prove that he ordered or advised one crime, and that the principal committed another (see ante, p. 1444). But the accessory is liable for all that ensues upon the execution of the unlawful act commanded by him; as for instance, if A. commmanded B. to beat C., and he beats him so that he dies, A. is accessory to the murder. 4 Bl. Com. 37; 1 Hale, 617. Or if A. commands B. to burn the house of C., and in doing so the house of D. is also burnt, A. is accessory to the burning of D.'s house. R. v. Saunders, Plowd. 473, 475. It is no defence that the crime was committed by means different from those ordered (ante, p. 1445). As to procurement through intermediate agents, see ante, p. 1445.

Indictment against an Accessory before the Fact, as for a Substantive Felony, (24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2, ante, p. 1450.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1425.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Accessory before the fact to larceny.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A.B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, did counsel, procure, and command C. D., servant to E. F., to steal from the said E. F. ten cases of sugar.

Any number of accessories at different times may be charged together on this indictment. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 6 (ante, p. 1447).

SECT. 3.

ACCESSORIES AFTER THE FACT TO FELONY.

Common Law.

In high treason there are no accessories after the fact, those who in felony would be accessories after the fact being principals in high treason (ante, p. 1444); yet in their progress to conviction they must be treated as accessories, and indicted specially for the receiving, etc., and not as principal traitors. 1 Hale, 238. And see 1 Chit. Cr. L. 264; Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.) 36; So, in offences under felony there are no accessories after the fact: 1 Hale, 613; although, if the act of the receiver amounts to a rescue, or to obstructing an officer of justice in the execution of his duty, or the like, he would undoubtedly be indictable for it as for a misdemeanor. 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 4; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 127.

An accessory after the fact is one who, knowing a felony to have been committed by another, receives, relieves, comforts, or assists the felon. 3 Co. Inst. 138 : 1 Hale, 618 : 4 Bl. Com. 37 : Fost. 373 : 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 1 : 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 126 : R. v. Burridge, 3 P. Wms. 439, 475; 24 Eng. Rep. 1133, 1146. The principal felony must be complete at the time of the harbouring, etc. 2 Hawk. c. 29, ss. 26 et seq. Any assistance given to one known to be a felon, in order to hinder his apprehension, trial, or punishment, is sufficient to make a man an accessory after the fact; as, for instance, that he concealed him in the house; Dalt. c. 161; or shut the door against his pursuers, until he should have an opportunity of escaping; 1 Hale, 619; or took money from him to allow him to escape; Y. B. 9 H. 4, pl. 1; or supplied him with money, a horse, or other necessaries, in order to enable him to escape; Hale's Sum. 218 : 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 26; or, the principal being in prison, J. W. bribed the gaoler to let him escape, or conveyed instruments to him to enable him to break prison and escape; 1 Hale, 621; or removed evidence of his guilt. R. v. Levy [1912] 1 K. B. 158; 81 L. J. (K. B.) 264; 22 Cox, 702; 106 L. T. 192; 76 J. P. 123; 28 T. L. R. 93.

But merely suffering the principal to escape will not make the party an accessory after the fact; for it amounts at most but to a mere omission. Y. B. 9 H. 4, pl. 1 : 1 Hale, 619 : and see post, p. 1455. So, if a person supplies a felon in prison with victuals or other necessaries for his sustenance; 1 Hale, 620; or relieves and maintains him if he is bailed out of prison; Id. : or if a physician or surgeon professionally attends a felon sick or wounded, though he knows him to be a felon; 1 Hale, 332; or if a person speaks or writes in order to obtain a felon's pardon or deliverance; 26 Ass. 47; or advises his friends to write to the witnesses not to appear against him at his trial, and they write accordingly; 3 Co. Inst. 139 : 1 Hale, 621; or even if he himself agrees for money not to give evidence against the felon: Moore (K. B.) 8; or knows of the felony and does not discover it; 1 Hale, 371, 618: none of these acts would be sufficient to make the party an accessory after the fact. He must be proved to have done some act to assist the felon personally. R. v. Chapple, 9 C. & P. 355. But if he employs another person to do so, he will be equally guilty as if he harboured or relieved him himself. R. v. Jarvis, 2 M. & Rob. 40.

A wife is not punishable as accessory for receiving, etc., her husband, although she knew him to have committed felony; 1 Hale, 48, 621: R. v. Manning, 2 C. & K. 903 n.: R. v. Good, 1 C. & K. 185: R. v. McClarens, 3 Cox, 425 (see ante, p. 23), for she is presumed to act under his coercion. She may, however, be convicted as a principal felon with her husband if in the part which she took in the commission of the felony she was acting independently of her husband. R. v. Mary Baines, 69 L. J. (Q. B.) 681; 19 Cox, 542 (ante, p. 23). No other relation of persons can excuse the wilful receipt or assistance of felons; a father cannot assist his child, a child his parent, a husband his wife, a brother his brother, a master his servant, or a servant his master. Id. Even one may make himself an accessory after the fact to a larceny of his own goods, or to a robbery on himself, by harbouring the thief, or assisting in his escape. Fost. 123: Crom. 41 b, pl. 4 and 5. If the wife alone, the husband being ignorant of it, receives a felon, the wife is accessory, and not the husband. 1 Hale, 621. And if the husband and wife both receive a felon knowingly, it shall be adjudged only the act of the husband, and the wife shall be acquitted. Id.

To constitute this offence, it is necessary that the accessory at the time when he assists or comforts the felon, should have notice, direct or implied, that he had committed a felony. 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 32. It is also necessary that the felony should be complete at the time the assistance is given; for, if one wounds another mortally, and after the wound given, but before death ensues, a person assists or receives the delinquent, this does not make him accessory to the homicide; for until death ensues no murder or manslaughter is committed. 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 35: 4 Bl. Com. 38.

Accessories after the fact can be tried before the conviction of the principal. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 3, infra.

On an indictment charging a man as a principal felon only, he cannot be convicted of the offence of being an accessory after the fact. R. v. Fallon, L. & C. 217; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 66: Richards v. R., 61 J. P. 389: R. v. Watson, [1916] 2 K. B. 385. Where several persons are tried upon one indictment, some as principals in murder, others as accessories after the fact to the murder, and the principals are convicted of manslaughter only, the persons charged as accessories may be convicted as accessories to the manslaughter. R. v. Richards, 2 Q. B. D. 311; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 200; 13 Cox, 611.

As to the joinder of several accessories after the fact in the same indictment, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 6 (ante, p. 1447).

Receiver.]—The receipt of stolen goods did not at common law constitute the receiver an accessory, but was a distinct misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment; 1 Hale, 620. In R. v. Cross, 1 Ld. Raym. 711, 712 (ante, p. 722), it was held that the common law misdemeanor of receiving merged in the felony created by 3 W. & M. c. 9. But it was held in R. v. Payne [1906] 1 K. B. 97; 75 L. J. (K. B.) 115, that an indictment for the common law misdemeanor of receiving lay in the case of a larceny not referred to in s. 91 of the Larceny Act, 1861, repealed and now replaced by s. 33 of the Larceny Act, 1916 (ante, p. 723); and in R. v. Garland [1910] 1 K. B. 154; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 239; on an indictment for receiving as a common law misdemeanor, it was held that a conviction could be upheld although the facts proved felonious receiving.

Statutes.

Indictment against an Accessory after the Fact with the Principal.
(24 & 25 Vict c. 94, s. 3, ante, p. 1453.)

Commencement as ante, p. 1425.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

A. B., arson, contrary to section 3 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861.
C. D., accessory after the fact to same offence.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, set fire to a house with intent to injure or defraud.

C. D., on the same day, and on other days afterwards, did receive, harbour, maintain, the said A. B., knowing that he had committed the said offence.

On an indictment charging a man as a principal felon only, he cannot be convicted of being an accessory after the fact. R. v. Fallon, L. & C. 217; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 66: Richards v. R., 61 J. P. 389: R. v. Bubb, 70 J. P. 143 (C. C. R.): R. v. Watson, 32 T. L. R. 580; 12 Cr. App. R. 62. Where several persons are tried upon one indictment, some as principals in murder, others as accessories after the fact to the murder, and the principals are convicted of manslaughter only, the prisoners charged as accessories may be convicted as accessories to the manslaughter. R. v. Richards, 2 Q. B. D. 311; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 200; 13 Cox, 611.

The offence of the accessory after the fact is felony whether the principal offence is felony at common law or by statute. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 3 (ante, p. 1453). Accessories after the fact to murder may be kept in penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 67 (ante, p. 1442). Accessories after the fact to larceny, arson and malicious injuries, forgery, to coinage offences, to offences against the person, and to piracy, are liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. See the statutes, ante, pp. 1440—1442. So are accessories after the fact to any felony whether at common law or by statute, unless it is otherwise specially enacted. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 4 (ante, p. 1453). There seem now to be no cases in which an accessory after the fact can be punished capitally or in the same way as the principal offender. As to former law, see ante, p. 1451, and 3 Co. Inst. 59; 1 Hale, 235, 236, 328; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 14. Accessories after the fact are now triable (1) as accessories after the fact to the principal felony, together with the principal felon, or after his conviction; or (2) as for a substantive felony irrespective of the principal felon. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 3 (ante, p. 1453).

Any number of accessories to the same felony may be charged with substantive felonies in the same indictment. Id., s. 6; ante, p. 1447.

Evidence.

1. The prosecutor must prove the principal guilty of the felony charged against him by the indictment, as in ordinary cases.

2. To justify conviction of an accessory after the fact, it must be proved that after the commission of the principal felony, he did some act to assist the felon personally (R. v. Chapple, 9 C. & P. 355), or employed another person to harbour or relieve the felon. R. v. Greenacre, 8 C. & P. 35: R. v. Butterfield, 1 Cox, 39; R. v. Lee, 6 C. & P. 536, and ante, p. 1451: R. v. Jarvis, 2 M. & Rob. 40. As to what acts constitute harbouring, see ante, p. 1451; and as to the special position of the wife of a felon, see ante, pp. 23, 1452.

3. It must be proved that C. D., at the time he received or assisted the principal felon, knew that he had committed a felony. This knowledge may be proved either from the defendant's admissions, or the like, or by evidence of circumstances from which the jury may fairly presume it. (See ante, p. 396). R. v. Burridge, 3 P. Wms. 439; 2 Hawk. c. 29, ss. 32, 33.

Prove the commission of the principal felony by A. B., and then prove the offence of the accessory as directed, ante, p. 1450.

Sect. 4.

MISPRISION OF TREASON OR FELONY.

Misprision of treason consists in the concealment or keeping secret of high treason (1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 10, s. 6, ante, p. 1056), or failing with due diligence to inform of treasons committed or threatened by others without the assent of the accused, or any active part in rescuing traitors from justice. Fourth Report Crim. Law Commissioners, 1848, p. 79. As to misprisions generally, see Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (6th ed.), pp. 121, 122, 401; 3 Co. Inst. 140; 1 Russ. Cr. (7th ed.) 129; Encycl. Engl. Law (2nd ed.), vol. ix., p. 269; 1 Hawk. c. 20; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 23.

The offence is a misdemeanor at common law, punishable by imprisonment for life, and absolute forfeiture of the goods and forfeiture for life of the profits of the lands of the offender. The punishment is not affected by 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 1. The offence is not triable at quarter sessions (5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1, ante, p. 106).

The procedure on prosecution for misprision of treason is the same as for treason. See the statutes collected under that title, ante, pp. 1053 et seq.

Misprision of felony.]—Misprision of felony consists in concealing or procuring the concealment of a felony known to have been committed. 1 Hawk. cc. 20, 59; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 3. The offence is a misdemeanor at common law; it seems to be triable at quarter sessions, and is punishable by fine and imprisonment, the punishment under 3 Edw. 1, c. 9, having been repealed by 50 & 51 Vict. c. 55, s. 39, as to sheriffs and their officers. There do not appear to be any authorities as to what will constitute concealment; but the offence appears to be founded on a duty to inform the King's officers of the commission of a felony, and to differ from that of an accessory after the fact in that no actual assistance to the felon need be proved, and from that of an accessory before the fact in that no privity to the commission of the felony need be proved. See 3 Co. Inst. 140; 1 Hale, 373. Prosecutions for misprision of felony have not been instituted of recent years. See Williams v. Bayley, L. R. 1 H. L. 200, 220; 35 L. J. (Ch.) 717, Lord Westbury. There is no modern precedent of an indictment for the offence. For an old precedent, see 2 Chit. Cr. L. 232. As to compounding felonies, etc., see ante, p. 1208.

ABETTORS IN MISDEMEANOR.

Statutes.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 94 (Accessories and Abettors Act, 1861), s. 8.]—Whosoever shall aid, abet, counsel or procure the commission of any misdemeanor, whether the same be a misdemeanor at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, shall be liable to be tried, indicted and punished as a principal offender. Indictment.

Commencement as ante, p. 1425.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

A. B., undischarged bankrupt obtaining credit, contrary to section 155 (a) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914.

C. D., being accessory to same offence.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., etc., as on p. 1266.

C. D., at the same time and place, did aid, abet, counsel, and procure A. B. to commit the said offence.

It is now usual to indict aiders, etc., within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 8, as principals. See R. v. Burton, 13 Cox, 71; 39 J. P. 532: Benford v. Sims [1898] 2 Q. B. 641; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 655, decided on similar provisions contained in s. 5 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43); which was followed in Du Cros v. Lambourne (supra); and cf. R. v. Clayton, 1 C. & K. 128: R. v. Moland, 2 Mood. 276. But in certain cases, e.g., where the principal offence is that of a bankrupt under the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, it is still necessary to indict the abettor in the above form.

Evidence.

Prove that the principal offence was committed, and that the defendant aided, abetted, counselled, or procured its commission (as ante, p. 1450). In support of an information, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 5, against A. for aiding and abetting B. to commit the offence of trespass in pursuit of game, there was evidence that A. drove B. in a trap along a turnpike road for a lawful purpose, that B. got out, and entered a field and shot a hare, which he gave to A. on returning to the trap, and that A. then drove on; it was held that there was evidence on which A. might be convicted. Stacey v. Whitehurst, 34 L. J. (M. C.) 94.

SECT. 1.

OFFENCES COMMITTED AFTER PREVIOUS CONVICTION, AND OFFENCES BY CONVICTS ON LICENCE OR UNDER POLICE SUPERVISION.

Statutes.

7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28 (Criminal Law Act, 1827), s. 11.—Punishment of felony after a previous conviction for felony.]—(Whereas it is expedient to provide for the more exemplary punishment of offenders who commit felony after a previous conviction of felony, whether such conviction shall have taken place before or after the commencement of this Act [1st July, 1827] : be it therefore enacted, that) if any person shall be convicted of any felony, not punishable with death, committed after a previous conviction for felony, such person shall, on such subsequent conviction, be liable . . . to be transported beyond the seas for life. . . . hand and seal of any justice of the peace of the said county, borough, or place, and shall be liable to be there dealt with in all respects as if such term of penal servitude had formed part of his original sentence.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 112 (Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871), s. 5.—Convict under licence to notify residence to police.]—Every holder of a licence granted under the Penal Servitude Acts, who is at large in Great Britain or Ireland, shall notify the place of his residence to the chief officer of police of the district in which his residence is situated, and shall whenever he changes such residence within the same police district, notify such change to the chief officer of police of that district, and whenever he is about to leave a police district, he shall notify such his intention to the chief officer of police of that district, stating the place to which he is going, and also, if required, and so far as is practicable, his address at that place; and whenever he arrives in any police district he shall forthwith notify his place of residence to the chief officer of police of such last-mentioned district; moreover, every male holder of such licence as aforesaid shall, once in each month, report himself at such time as may be prescribed by the chief officer of police of the district in which such holder may be, either to such chief officer himself or to such other person as that officer may direct, and such report may, according as such officer directs, be required to be made personally or by letter. If any person to whom this section applies fails to comply with any of the requisitions of this section, he shall, in any such case, be guilty of an offence against this Act, unless he proves to the satisfaction of the Court before whom he is tried, either that being on a journey he tarried

no longer in the place, in respect of which he is charged with failing to notify his place of residence, than was reasonably necessary, or that otherwise he did his best to act in conformity with the law; and on conviction of such offence it shall be lawful for the Court in its discretion either to forfeit his licence, or to sentence him to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding one year. [The words in italics in this section were substituted for the original provisions of the section by s. 4 (1) of the Penal Servitude Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 69).]

42 & 43 Vict. c. 55 (Prevention of Crime Act, 1879), s. 2.]—After reciting 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, ss. 5, 8, enacts that :—Any holder of a licence required under s. 5 (supra), and any person subject to the supervision of the police required under s. 8 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871 (post, p. 1464), to notify his residence or any change of his residence to a chief officer of police, shall comply with such requirement by personally presenting himself and declaring his place of residence to the constable or person who at the time when such notification is made is in charge of the police station or office of which notice has been given to such holder or person as the place for receiving his notification, or if no such notice has been given, in charge of the chief office of such chief officer of police.

The power of the chief officer of a police district to direct that the reports required by ss. 5 and 8 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871, to be made by holders of licences and persons subject to the supervision of the police shall be made to some other person, shall extend to authorize him to direct such reports to be made to the constable or person in charge of any particular police station or office without naming the individual person.

Any appointment, direction, or authority purporting to be signed by the chief officer of police, and to have been made or given for the purposes of this Act, or of ss. 5 and 8 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871, or one of them, shall be evidence until the contrary is proved, that the appointment, direction, or authority thereby made or given was duly made or given by the chief officer of police, and evidence that it appears from the records kept by authority of the chief officer of police that a person required as above mentioned to notify his residence or change of residence, or make a report, has failed to comply with such requirement, shall be primâ facie evidence that the person has not complied with such requirement; but if the person charged alleges that he made such notification or report to any particular person or at any particular time, the Court shall require the attendance of such persons as may be necessary to prove the truth or falsehood of such allegation.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 7.—Special offences by persons twice convicted of crime.]—Where any person is convicted on indictment of a crime [defined s. 20, post, p. 1467], and a previous conviction of a crime is proved against him, he shall, at any time within seven years immediately after the expiration of the sentence passed on him for the last of such crimes, be guilty of an offence under this Act, and be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding one year, under the following circumstances, or any of them :—

First.—If, on his being charged by a constable with getting his livelihood by dishonest means, and being brought before a court of summary jurisdiction, it appears to such court that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the person so charged is getting his livelihood by dishonest means : or,

Secondly.—If, on being charged with any offence punishable on indictment or summary conviction, and on being required by a court of summary jurisdiction to give his name and address, he refuses to do so, or gives a false name or a false address : or,

Thirdly.—If he is found in any place, whether public or private, under such circumstances as to satisfy the Court before whom he is brought that he was about to commit or to aid in the commission of any offence punishable on indictment or summary conviction ; or was waiting for an opportunity to commit or aid in the commission of any offence punishable on indictment or summary conviction : or,

Fourthly.—If he is found in or upon any dwelling-house, or any building, yard, or premises, being parcel of or attached to such dwelling-house, or in or upon any shop, warehouse, counting-house, or other place of business, or in any garden, orchard, pleasure-ground, or nursery-ground, or in any building or erection in any garden, orchard, pleasure-ground, or nursery-ground, without being able to account to the satisfaction of the Court before whom he is brought for his being found on such premises.

Any person charged with being guilty of any offence against this Act mentioned in this section may be taken into custody as follows : (that is to say),

In the case of any such offence against this Act as is first in this section mentioned, by any constable without warrant, if such constable is authorised so to do by the chief officer of police of his district ;

In the case of any such offence against this Act as is thirdly in this section mentioned, by any constable without warrant, although such constable is not specially authorized to take him into custody.

Also, where any person is charged with being guilty of an offence against this Act fourthly in this section mentioned, he may, without warrant, be apprehended by any constable, or by the owner or occupier of the property on which he is found, or by the servants of the owner or occupier, or by any other person authorized by the owner or occupier, and may be detained until he can be delivered into the custody of a constable.

[The provisions of this section, being very stringent, must not be invoked on mere suspicion. There must be positive testimony to enable the police to bring a prosecution. R. v. Pavitt, 75 J. P. 432 (C. C. A.). The defendant can elect to be tried on indictment, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49. s. 17 (ante, p. 7).

Indictment.

THE KING v. A. B.

Hants Quarter Sessions held at Winchester.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

A. B. is charged with the following offence :—

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Waiting for an opportunity to commit an offence, contrary to section 7 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, was convicted on indictment of burglary at the Central Criminal Court, and a previous conviction of larceny was then and there proved against him.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, A.D. —— ("within seven years immediately after the expiration of the sentence passed on him for the last of such crimes"), in the county of ——, was found in a public place, namely, —— Street, waiting for an opportunity to commit or aid in the commission of larceny.

The previous convictions must be given in evidence to the jury on the trial for the subsequent offence, as their proof is essential to establish the complete offence. R. v. Penfold [1902] 1 K. B. 547; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 306; 20 Cox, 161; 66 J. P. 248, overruling R. v. Brown, 65 J. P. 136. The punishment under this section is altered by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 6, infra.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 8.—Sentence of supervision of the police, when it may be passed.]—Where any person is convicted on indictment of a "crime" [as defined in s. 20, post, p. 1467], and a previous conviction of a crime is proved against him, the Court, having cognizance of such indictment, may, in addition to any other punishment which it may award to him, direct that he is to be subject to the supervision of the police for a period of seven years, or such less period as the Court may direct, commencing immediately after the expiration of the sentence passed on him for the last of such crimes. Every person subject to the supervision of the police, who is at large in Great Britain or Ireland, shall notify the place of his residence to the chief officer of police of the district in which his residence is situated, and shall, whenever he changes such residence within the same police district, notify such change to the chief officer of police of that district, and whenever he is about to leave a police district he shall notify such his intention to the chief officer of police of that district, stating the place to which he is going, and also, if required, and so far as is practicable, his address at that place, and whenever he arrives in any police district he shall forthwith notify his place of residence to the chief officer of police of such last-mentioned district; moreover, every person subject to the supervision of the police if a male shall once in each month report himself, at such time as may be prescribed by the chief officer of police of the district in which such holder may be, either to such chief officer himself, or to such other person as that officer may direct, and such report may, according as such chief officer directs, be required to be made personally or by letter. [The words in italics were substituted for the former words by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 4 (1). The penalty for non-compliance with this section is contained in the last paragraph printed under s. 5 (ante, p. 1461), which was by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 4 (1), substituted for the penalty clause of the present section.]

54 & 55 Vict. c. 69 (Penal Servitude Act, 1891), s. 2.]—Any constable may take into custody without warrant any holder of a licence under the Penal Servitude Acts (16 & 17 Vict. c. 99; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); and 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, see ante, p. 1460, and this Act), or any person under the supervision of the police in pursuance of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871, whom he reasonably suspects of having committed any offence, and may take him before a court of summary jurisdiction to be dealt with according to law. Any convict may be convicted before a court of summary jurisdiction of an offence against s. 3 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871, although he was brought before the Court on some other charge or not in manner provided by that section.

Sect. 4, sub-s. 1.]—Incorporated with 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, ss. 5 (ante, p. 1461) and 8 (ante, p. 1464), which it amends.

Sub-sect. 2.]—His Majesty may by order under the hand of a secretary of state, remit any of the requirements of ss. 5 and 8 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871, either generally or in the case of any holder of a licence or person subject to the supervision of the police. [See 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 26 (1).]

Sect. 6.—Extension of 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 7].—A person who has been convicted on indictment of a crime within the meaning of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871 (see s. 20, post, p. 1467), and against whom a previous conviction of such a crime is proved shall, (a) if the second sentence is to a term of imprisonment, then at any time within seven years after the expiration of the sentence: and (b) if the second sentence is to a term of penal servitude then whilst at large on licence under that sentence, and also at any time within seven years after the expiration of the sentence, be guilty of an offence against the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871, under the circumstances stated in s. 7 of that Act (ante, p. 1462), or any of them, and may be taken into custody in manner provided by that section. [See R. v. Penfold [1902] 1 K. B. 547; 71 L. J. (K. B.) 306, ante, p. 1464.]

34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 9.—Form of, and proceedings upon, indictment charging previous conviction.]—The rules contained in the one hundred and sixteenth section of the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), (ante, p. 172), in relation to the form of and the proceedings upon an indictment for any offence punishable under that Act committed after previous conviction, shall, with the necessary variations, apply to any indictment for committing a crime as defined by this Act after previous conviction for a crime, whether the crime charged in such indictment or the crime to which such previous conviction relates be or be not punishable under the Larceny Act, 1861. (a) [This section does not apply to an indictment for an offence under s. 7. R. v. Penfold, ante, p. 1464. In Faulkner v. R. [1905] 2 K. B. 76; 74 L. J. (K. P. 6 (ante, p. 1327).]

Sect. 14.—Care of children of women convicted of crime after a previous conviction.]—Rep. 8 Edw. 7, c. 67, s. 134. See s. 58 of that Act.

Sect. 18.—How previous convictions may be proved.]—A previous conviction may be proved in any legal proceeding whatever against any person by producing a record or extract of such conviction and by giving proof of the identity of the person against whom the conviction is sought to be proved with the person appearing in the record or extract of conviction to have been convicted.

A record or extract of a conviction shall, in the case of an indictable offence, consist of a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction, and purporting to be signed by the clerk of the Court, or other officer having the custody of the records of the Court by which such conviction was made, or purporting to be signed by the deputy of such clerk or officer; and in the case of a summary conviction shall consist of a copy of such conviction purporting to be signed by any justice of the peace having jurisdiction over the offence in respect of which such conviction was made, or to be signed by the proper officer of the Court by which such conviction was made, or by the clerk or other officer of any court to which such conviction had been returned.

A record or extract of any conviction made in pursuance of this section shall be admissible in evidence without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same.

A previous conviction in any one part of the United Kingdom may be proved against a prisoner in any other part of the United Kingdom; and a conviction before the passing of this Act shall be admissible in the same manner as if it had taken place after the passing thereof.

A fee not exceeding five shillings may be charged for a record of a conviction given in pursuance of this section.

The mode of proving a previous conviction authorized by this section shall be in addition to and not in exclusion of any other authorized mode of proving such conviction. [See ante, pp. 421-424; Commissioner of Metropolitan Police v. Donovan [1903] 1 K. B. 895; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 545; 20 Cox, 435; Martin v. White [1910] 1 K. B. 665; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 553.]

(a) This section put an end to controversies as to the proper course to be pursued under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11, and 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 111, as to which see Archb. Cr. Pl. (23rd ed.) 1320 n.; 2 Russ. Cr. (4th ed., by Greaves) 349; Greaves, Crim. Law Cons. Acts (2nd ed.), 201.

eighteen of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871, may in the case of a summary conviction consist of a copy of the minute or memorandum of the conviction entered in the register required to be kept under section twenty-two of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court by whom the register is kept.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 20.—Interpretation.]—The expression "crime" means, in England and Ireland, any felony, or the offence of uttering false or counterfeit coin, or of possessing counterfeit gold or silver coin, or the offence of obtaining goods or money by false pretences, or the offence of conspiracy to defraud, or any misdemeanor under the fifty-eighth section of the Larceny Act, 1861 (now the twenty-eighth section of the Larceny Act, 1916, ante, p. 654); and in Scotland, any of the pleas of the Crown, any theft which, in respect of any aggravation, or of the amount in value of the money, goods, or thing stolen, may be punished with penal servitude, any forgery, and any uttering of any forged writing, falsehood, fraud and wilful imposition, uttering base coin, or the possession of such coin with intent to utter the same. [This definition is incorporated in Part II. of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 59), post, pp. 1469, 1470.]

The expression "offence" means any act or omission which is not a crime as defined by this Act, and is punishable on indictment or summary conviction.

Indictment for Felony after a Previous Conviction for Felony.

After charging the subsequent offence or offences, state at the conclusion of the indictment:—

A. B. has been previously convicted of felony, to wit, burglary, on the —— day of ——, A.D. ——, at the Assizes held at Reading. [See 5 & 6 G. 5, c. 90, r. 11, ante, p. 53.]

The subsequent offence must be first charged in any indictment for committing a crime as defined by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 20 (supra), after previous conviction for a crime (34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 9, ante, p. 1465, and see post, p. 1470). Any number of previous convictions may be laid and proved. R. v. Clark, Dears. 198; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 135; 6 Cox, 210. In R. v. Garland, Ir. Rep. 3 Ch. 383; 11 Cox, 224, the Irish Court for Crown Cases Reserved held that a previous conviction for felony could not be charged in an indictment for a subsequent misdemeanor, and quashed the conviction upon an indictment so framed, but the English Court of Crown Cases Reserved affirmed a conviction in a like case. R. v. Deane, 46 L. J. (M. C.) 155. This case, however, seems to have turned upon a different point, namely, the question of punishment, nor does R. v. Garland appear to have been cited to the Court. It is submitted that R. v. Garland was correctly decided. See R. v. Deane, 46 L. J. (M. C.) at p. 156, note, and Roscoe, Cr. Ev. (13th ed.) 162.

Punishment.]—Where the indictment is for a felony not punishable with death, and not being simple larceny, committed after a previous conviction for felony, the punishment is penal servitude for life or for not less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour for the whole or any part of the imprisonment. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11 (ante, p. 1459); 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 (ante, p. 237); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, pp. 238, 239).

Where the indictment is for simple larceny committed after a previous conviction for felony, the punishment under 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 37 (1), (3), (4), ante, p. 501, is penal servitude for any term not exceeding ten years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour; and, in the case of a male under sixteen, whipping in addition.

Where the indictment is for simple larceny (or any offence made punishable like simple larceny), committed after a previous conviction of any indictable misdemeanor punishable under the Larceny Act, 1916, the punishment is penal servitude for not more than seven years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, in the case of a male under sixteen, whipping in addition, 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 50, s. 37 (2) (a), (3), (4) (ante, p. 501).

Under the Larceny Act, 1861, it was held that "any offence made punishable like simple larceny" was intended to apply to the offences referred to in ss. 31, 32, 33, and 36 of the Larceny Act, 1861, and did not include the offence of obtaining goods, etc., by false pretences. R. v. Horn, 15 Cox, 205 (C. C. R.). See now s. 37 of the Larceny Act, 1916, ante, p. 501. The only effect of charging a previous conviction for an indictable misdemeanor punishable under the Larceny Act, 1916, in an indictment for obtaining goods, etc., by false pretences is to enable the Court to pass a sentence of police supervision, obtaining goods, etc., by false pretences being a "crime" within s. 20 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871 (ante, p. 1467).

Where the indictment is for simple larceny, or any offence made punishable like simple larceny, committed after two summary convictions of any offence punishable upon summary conviction under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, or 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, or 6 & 7 G. 5, c. 50, the punishment is penal servitude for not more than seven years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, in the case of a male under sixteen, whipping in addition. 6 & 7 G. 5, c. 50, s. 37 (2) (b), (3), (4) (ante, p. 501).

Police supervision.]—The Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 112), s. 8 (ante, p. 1464), as explained by s. 20 (ante, p. 1467), prescribes, as an addition to the sentence which may be passed in certain cases of subsequent conviction, the sentence of subjection to the supervision of the police. The circumstances under which that sentence may be passed, and its duration, are fully set out in the sections above referred to. As to the form of and the proceedings upon the indictment in such cases, see s. 9 (ante, p. 1465).

As to the form of indictment and the punishment in the case of subsequent coinage offences, see ante, pp. 1090 et seq.

Evidence.

The allegations in the order in which they occur in the indictment are—1. The subsequent felony, which is proved as in other cases. See the different titles. 2. The previous conviction, which is proved by a certificate or, in the case of a summary conviction, by a copy (7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11 (ante, p. 1459); 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 116; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 37 (ante, p. 1090); 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, pp. 422, 1466)), with evidence of the identity of the defendant. To prove the identity, it is not essential to call a witness who was present at the trial to which the certificate refers: it is sufficient to prove that the defendant is the person who was convicted as stated in the certificate, R. v. Crofts, 9 C. & P. 219: R. v. Leng, 1 F. & F. 77; S. C. as R. v. Levy, 8 Cox, 73. See Martin v. White [1910] 1 K. B. 665; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 553. In R. v. Ackroyd, 1 C. & K. 158: R. v. Stonnell, 1 Cox, 142, it was held that the certificate must state that judgment was given for the previous felony; and that it was insufficient to state a conviction. But these decisions if not overruled do not apply where a previous verdict or plea of guilty has been entered under the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861, even if not followed by a judgment. R. v. Blaby [1894] 2 Q. B. 170; 63 L. J. (M. C.) 133; 18 Cox, 5. As to what constitutes a conviction at common law, or under the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, see ante, pp. 230, 334, and Felstead v. R. [1914] A. C. 534; 83 L. J. (K. B.) 1132.

OFFENCES BY HABITUAL CRIMINALS.

8 Edw. 7, c. 59 (Prevention of Crime Act, 1908), s. 10.—Power of court to pass sentence of preventive detention in addition to penal servitude.]—(1) Where a person is convicted on indictment of a crime, committed after the passing of this Act, and subsequently the offender admits that he is or is found by the jury to be a habitual criminal, and the Court passes a sentence of penal servitude, the Court, if of opinion that by reason of his criminal habits and mode of life it is expedient for the protection of the public that the offender should be kept in detention for a lengthened period of years, may pass a further sentence ordering that on the determination of the sentence of penal servitude he be detained for such period not exceeding ten nor less than five years, as the Court may determine, and such detention is hereinafter referred to as preventive detention, and a person on whom such a sentence is passed shall, whilst undergoing both the sentence of penal servitude and the sentence of preventive detention, be deemed for the purposes of the Forfeiture Act, 1870, and for all other purposes, to be a person convicted of felony. [The words "a crime committed after the passing of this Act" refer to the date of the royal assent (December 21, 1908), and not to the coming into operation of the Act (August 1, 1909, by s. 19 (2)), so that persons convicted of crimes committed after December 21, 1908, may be prosecuted as habitual criminals. R. v. Smith [1910] 1 K. B. 17; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 1; 26 T. L. R. 23; 3 Cr. App. R. 40.]

(2) A person shall not be found to be a habitual criminal unless the jury finds on evidence—

(a) that since attaining the age of sixteen years he has at least three times previously to the conviction of the crime charged in the said indictment been convicted of a crime, whether any such previous conviction was before or after the passing of this Act, and that he is leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life; or

(b) that he has on such a previous conviction been found to be a habitual criminal and sentenced to preventive detention.

(3) Repealed by the Indictments Act, 1915. [See 5 & 6 G. 5, c. 90, r. 11, ante, p. 53.]

(4) In the proceedings on the indictment the offender shall in the first instance be arraigned on so much only of the indictment as charges the crime, and if on arraignment he pleads guilty or is found guilty by the jury, the jury shall, unless he pleads guilty to being a habitual criminal, be charged to inquire whether he is a habitual criminal, and in that case it shall not be necessary to swear the jury again. [Where the accused pleads guilty to the primary charge against him, but pleads not guilty to being a habitual criminal, it is sufficient to swear the jury in the ordinary way as for misdemeanor only. R. v. Turner [1910] 1 K. B. 346; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 176; 26 T. L. R. 212; 74 J. P. 81; 3 Cr. App. R. 103. Where two persons are jointly charged with the primary crime, and each is also charged as a habitual criminal, it is advisable that each should, on conviction of the primary crime, be separately arraigned and tried on the charge of being a habitual criminal. R. v. Taylor, 5 Cr. App. R. 168, explaining R. v. Blake, 4 Cr. App. R. 275. The proceedings relating to the crime charged in the indictment, and to the charge of being a habitual criminal must be before the same jury. R. v. Hunter [1921] 1 K. B. 555; 85 J. P. 147:

Provided that a charge of being a habitual criminal shall not be inserted in an indictment—

(a) without the consent of the director of public prosecutions; and

(b) unless not less than seven days' notice has been given to the proper officer of the Court by which the offender is to be tried, and to the offender, that it is intended to insert such a charge;

and the notice to the offender shall specify the previous convictions and the other grounds upon which it is intended to found the charge. [In Scotland a different procedure is followed; see s. 17 (3).]

(5) Without prejudice to any right of the accused to tender evidence as to his character and repute, evidence of character and repute may, if the Court thinks fit, be admitted as evidence on the question whether the accused is or is not leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life.

(6) For the purposes of this section the expression "crime" has the same meaning as in the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871 (ante, p. 1467), and the definition of "crime" in that Act, set out in the schedule to this Act, shall apply accordingly. [This sub-section does not apply to Scotland; see s. 17 (4).]

Schedule.—The expression "crime" means, in England and Ireland, any felony or the offence of uttering false or counterfeit coin (a), or of possessing counterfeit gold or silver coin (b), or the offence of obtaining goods or money by false pretences, or the offence of conspiracy to defraud (c), or any misdemeanor under the fifty-eighth section of the Larceny Act, 1861 (now the twenty-eighth section of the Larceny Act, 1916, ante, p. 654).

Sect. 11.—Appeal against sentence to Court of Criminal Appeal.]—A person sentenced to preventive detention may, notwithstanding anything in the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907 (ante, pp. 300 et seq.), appeal against the sentence without the leave of the Court of Criminal Appeal. [Different provisions are made as to Scotland (s. 17 (5)) and Ireland (s. 18 (f)). The Court of Criminal Appeal has decided to treat this provision as including a right to appeal against the primary sentence of penal servitude, which is made, by s. 10 (1) of this Act, a condition precedent to a sentence of preventive detention. R. v. Smith [1910] 1 K. B. 17; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 1; 26 T. L. R. 23; 3 Cr. App. R. 40.]

Sect. 12.—Powers in certain cases to commute penal servitude to preventive detention.]—Where a person has been sentenced, whether before or after the passing of this Act, to penal servitude for a term of five years or upwards, and he appears to the Secretary of State to have been a habitual criminal within the meaning of this Act, the Secretary of State may, if he thinks fit, at any time after three years of the term of penal servitude have expired, commute the whole or any part of the residue of the sentence to a sentence of preventive detention, so, however, that the total term of the sentence when so commuted shall not exceed the term of penal servitude originally awarded. [Such sentence must be passed for the offence "on its merits," and not with a view to recommending the Secretary of State to exercise his powers under this section in the case of a convict who has not been tried as a habitual criminal. R. v. Flicker, 26 T. L. R. 540; and see R. v. Raybould, 73 J. P. 334; 2 Cr. App. R. 184.]

Sect. 13.—Effect and execution of sentence.]—(1) The sentence of preventive detention shall take effect immediately on the determination of the sentence of penal servitude, whether that sentence is determined by effluxion of time or by order of the Secretary of State at such earlier date as the Secretary of State, having regard to the circumstances of the case and in particular to the time at which the convict, if sentenced to penal servitude alone, would ordinarily have been licensed to be at large, may direct. [Sub-ss. (2), (3) and (4) deal with the treatment of prisoners under sentence of preventive detention.]

Sect. 14.—Power to discharge on licence.]—(1) The Secretary of State shall, once at least in every three years during which a person is detained in custody under a sentence of preventive detention, take into consideration the condition, history, and circumstances of that person with a view to determining whether he shall be placed out on licence, and, if so, on what conditions. [Sub-ss. (2), (3), (4), (5) and (6) give power to the Secretary of State to discharge on licence and regulate supervision, etc., of persons so discharged.]

(b) Possessing counterfeit gold or silver coin is punishable by penal servitude under s. 11.

(c) This offence is not punishable by penal servitude. Consequently it would seem that no sentence of preventive detention can be passed on a primary conviction for this offence, even if the offender is proved to be a habitual criminal.

(7) The provisions relating to licences to be at large granted to persons undergoing penal servitude (ante, pp. 1460-1462) shall not apply to persons undergoing preventive detention.

Sect. 15.—Provisions as to persons placed out on licence.

Indictment for being a Habitual Criminal.

After charging the primary crime, add:—"A. B. is a habitual criminal." 5 & 6 G. 5, c. 90, r. 11 (ante, p. 53). This is not a count in the indictment, but an allegation as to the status of the accused. R. v. Hunter, infra.

Where the primary "crime" is not one for which penal servitude can be imposed (see ante, p. 1471 and notes), a sentence of preventive detention cannot be passed, and it is useless to charge the offender as a habitual criminal. When a prisoner has been tried and convicted of the substantive offence charged in the indictment the trial of the charge of being a habitual criminal cannot be adjourned to a subsequent session; R. v. Hunter [1921] 1 K. B. 555; 85 J. P. 147; but the judge can discharge the jury from giving a verdict on the whole indictment and direct that the whole case be tried at a subsequent session of the Court. R. v. Jennings, 74 J. P. 245; 4 Cr. App. R. 120.

Punishment: preventive detention for not less than five nor more than ten years, to take effect on the determination of a sentence of penal servitude (for not less than three years) for the primary crime charged in the indictment. (See 8 Edw. 7, c. 59, s. 10 (1), ante, p. 1469). The sentence on the primary charge should not be pronounced before the trial of the charge of being a habitual criminal. R. v. Turner [1910] 1 K. B. 346; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 176; 26 T. L. R. 112; 3 Cr. App. R. 103; 74 J. P. 81: R. v. Walker, 27 T. L. R. 51; 5 Cr. App. R. 231. It is not proper to increase the sentence for the primary offence so as to enable the Court to pass sentence of preventive detention. R. v. Jones, 27 T. L. R. 108; 6 Cr. App. R. 1: R. v. Bell, 30 T. L. R. 645; 10 Cr. App. R. 262. Before these decisions doubt had been expressed in the case of R. v. Sweeney, 4 Cr. App. R. 70, 72. It is to be observed that there are three conditions precedent to passing a sentence of preventive detention, viz., (1) the offender must be convicted on indictment of a crime committed after the passing of 8 Edw. 7, c. 59 (viz., December 21, 1908, R. v. Smith, [1910] 1 K. B. 17); (2) he must subsequently admit that he is, or must be found by the jury to be, a habitual criminal; (3) a sentence of penal servitude must be lawful in respect of the primary offence and must be passed by the Court.

Sentences of penal servitude for more than three years have in several cases been reduced to three years where preventive detention has also been ordered. R. v. Smith [1910] 1 K. B. 17, 27: R. v. Smith, 3 Cr. App. R. 90. R. v. Walker, 27 T. L. R. 51; 5 Cr. App. R. 231.

As to the principles to be observed in determining the length of the period of preventive detention, see R. v. Crowley, and R. v. Sullivan, 83 L. J. (K. B.) 298; 78 J. P. 142; 30 T. L. R. 94; 9 Cr. App. R. 201.

Evidence.

Consent of director of public prosecutions.]—By s. 10 (4) (a) the consent of the director of public prosecutions is required for the insertion in the indictment of a charge of being a habitual criminal. This is essential: See R. v. Harris and others, 38 T. L. R. 343; but such consent need not be averred in the indictment. See s. 10 (3); R. v. Waller [1910] 1 K. B. 364; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 184; 26 T. L. R. 142; 3 Cr. App. R. 213; 74 J. P. 81. The consent of the assistant director is made equivalent by 8 Edw. 7. c. 3, s. 1 (5). Such consent is given in writing signed by the director or assistant director.

The prosecution is not bound to prove the consent of the director of public prosecutions as a part of the case before the petty jury, and the Court may assume that such consent has been given, unless objection is taken on behalf of the prisoner. R. v. Waller (supra). Cf. Knowlden v. R., 5 B. & S. 532; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 219; 10 L. T. 691; 9 Cox, 483. If objection is taken, a document purporting to be signed by the director must be produced and proved. The Court of Criminal Appeal has declined to lay down any general rule as to the exact method of proof required, but has held that it would be sufficient to call a person who had been in communication with the director, and had received the document produced in the ordinary course. R. v. Turner [1910] 1 K. B. 346; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 176; 26 T. L. R. 112; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 176; 3 Cr. App. R. 103. Judicial notice cannot be taken of the signature of the director of public prosecutions under the Evidence Acts of 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 1) or 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14). R. v. Waller (supra).

Seven days' notice.]—By s. 10 (4) (b) not less than seven days' notice must have been given to the proper officer of the Court, by which the accused is to be tried, and to the accused himself, that it is intended to insert such a charge in the indictment. The seven days must be seven clear days. R. v. Turner (supra). Any objection to the notice on this ground must be taken at the trial, or it will not be entertained by the Court of Criminal Appeal. R. v. Weston [1910] 1 K. B. 17; 79 L. J. (K. B.) 1; 3 Cr. App. R. 53. See also R. v. Jones, 5 Cr. App. R. 29.

To the proper officer of the Court.]—Receipt of the notice may be proved by the person who gave it, or by a person in the office of the clerk of the Court, without calling the clerk himself, but it must be proved in some shape or other. R. v. Turner (supra). It seems, however, that if no objection to the absence of this evidence is taken at the trial, the Court of Criminal Appeal will not interfere with the verdict. R. v. Foster, 3 Cr. App. R. 173.

To the accused.]—By s. 10 (4) (b) the notice to the offender shall specify the previous convictions and the other grounds upon which it is intended to found the charge. The three previous convictions relied upon for this purpose must be specifically stated, but the other grounds (if any) may be stated in a general way as grounds, not as evidence:—e.g., that the accused is a habitual associate of thieves. R. v. Turner (supra); and see R. v. Webber [1913] 1 K. B. 33; 23 Cox, 323; 82 L. J. (K. B.) 108; and R. v. Harris and others, 38 T. L. R. 343. It is not sufficient to say that the accused has been persistently leading a dishonest or a criminal life. Id. Where the three previous convictions alone are relied upon by the prosecution as affording sufficient proof that the accused is a habitual criminal (see infra), other grounds need not be specified in the notice. R. v. Waller, ante, p. 1473. If the notice given to the prisoner is not produced at the trial, secondary evidence of its contents may be given. R. v. Turner, ante, p. 1473.

Evidence cannot be given of a nature not suggested by the grounds set out in the notice, and where such evidence has been given the conviction may be quashed on appeal. R. v. Fawcett, 74 J. P. 444; 5 Cr. App. R. 115 : R. v. Moran, 75 J. P. 110; 5 Cr. App. R. 110 : R. v. Maxfield, 28 T. L. R. 404; 7 Cr. App. R. 230 : R. v. Wilson, 28 T. L. R. 561; 8 Cr. App. R. 20 : R. v. Fowler, 77 J. P. 379; 29 T. L. R. 422; 8 Cr. App. R. 240 : R. v. Neilson, 23 Cox, 685; 78 J. P. 158; 30 T. L. R. 125; 9 Cr. App. R. 218; R. v. Westfall, 85 J. P. 116; R. v. Wilkins, 16 Cr. App. R. 96; unless the Court hold that it cannot have had any effect on the jury. R. v. Westwood, 29 T. L. R. 492; 8 Cr. App. R. 273 : R. v. Heron, 77 J. P. 380; 9 Cr. App. R. 29 : R. v. Russell, 12 Cr. App. R. 271; and see R. v. Harris and others, ante, p. 1473.

These preliminary requirements having been satisfied, prove the charge as defined by s. 10 (2) (a) (ante, p. 1469).

Age.]—The age of the accused must be proved unless it is obvious from his appearance that he was over sixteen at the time of the first in date of the three previous convictions relied upon by the prosecution and specified in the notice above referred to. A prison official may be called to prove that the age, as shown in the calendar, was so stated on the authority of the accused. R. v. Turner, ante, p. 1473.

Three previous convictions.]—Prove the three previous convictions precisely as specified in the notice given to the accused. R. v. Turner, ante, p. 1473. These must be strictly proved. R. v. Franklin, 3 Cr. App. R. 48; 74 J. P. 24 : R. v. Stewart, 74 J. P. 246; 4 Cr. App. R. 175. As to the mode of proving previous convictions, see ante, pp. 421-424.

Other convictions.]—It is not necessary to prove any other convictions which are set out in the notice served on the appellant with the same strictness. R. v. Franklin (supra) : R. v. Chatway, 5 Cr. App. R. 151 : R. v. Summers, 10 Cr. App. R. 11.

Leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life.]—The evidence that the accused is leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life must be brought down to the time of arrest. R. v. Turner, ante, p. 1473 : R. v. Brown, 23 Cox, 615; 78 J. P. 79; 30 T. L. R. 40; 9 Cr. App. R. 161. But evidence may be given of his past conduct generally. Id. By s. 10 (5) evidence of character and repute may be given; and other convictions, in addition to the three above referred to, may be proved in order to show his habit of life. R. v. Franklin (supra) : R. v. Brummitt, 4 Cr. App. R. 192 : R. v. Sullivan, 30 T. L. R. 94; 9 Cr. App. R. 201. The three previous convictions specified in the notice alone may in some cases, from the nature of the crimes and the surrounding circumstances, be sufficient proof of dishonesty or criminality of life. R. v. Waller, ante, p. 1473. And see R. v. Foster, 3 Cr. App. R. 173 : R. v. Everitt, 27 T. L. R. 570; 6 Cr. App. R. 267 : R. v. Heard, 22 Cox, 725; 76 J. P. 232;

106 L. T. 304; 28 T. L. R. 154; 7 Cr. App. R. 80: R. v. Keane, 8 Cr. App. R. 12: R. v. Wilson, 28 T. L. R. 562; 8 Cr. App. R. 20; though as a rule some other evidence is required. R. v. Mitchell, 23 Cox, 284; 108 L. T. 224; 76 J. P. 423; 28 T. L. R. 484; 7 Cr. App. R. 283, as explained in R. v. Wilson, 28 T. L. R. 562; 8 Cr. App. R. 20; and see R. v. Harris and others, 38 T. L. R. 343. Where, however, nine months had elapsed since the accused last came out of prison, and the prosecution gave no evidence as to his conduct during that period, the conviction for being a habitual criminal was quashed. R. v. Kelly, 26 T. L. R. 196; 74 J. P. 167; 3 Cr. App. R. 248: R. v. Wells, 5 Cr. App. R. 33. But where in a similar case the prisoner himself gave evidence, and was cross-examined as to his conduct during the interval between his last release and subsequent arrest, his conviction as a habitual criminal was affirmed; and this in spite of the fact that he gave no evidence on his own behalf, but was called by his co-defendant. R. v. Rowland, 26 T. L. R. 202; 3 Cr. App. R. 277. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to the length of time the interval must be to make it essential to have evidence other than previous conviction to establish persistence in crime. R. v. Heard, supra; and see R. v. Williams, 8 Cr. App. R. 49. The failure to report by a convict on licence is not in itself sufficient other evidence where it is required. R. v. Mitchell (supra), as explained in R. v. Wilson (supra). Where the prisoner after expiration of a sentence of penal servitude went to an asylum and some two months after his discharge therefrom committed the primary offence (shopbreaking), the Court held that he had not been proved to be persistently leading a dishonest life, it appearing that he had been kept by the charity of his friends during the two months, and the Court not considering his last offence one which, like coining, would in itself be evidence of persistent criminality. R. v. Baggott, 26 T. L. R. 266; 4 Cr. App. R. 67. For other illustrations see R. v. Condon, 4 Cr. App. R. 109: R. v. Martin, 5 Cr. App. R. 31: R. v. Jones, Id., 29: R. v. Jennings, 74 J. P. 245: R. v. Wells, 5 Cr. App. R. 33: R. v. Marshall, 74 J. P. 380; 5 Cr. App. R. 25; R. v. Hammersley, 14 Cr. App. R. 118.

It is important that the judge should take great care in his summing up to explain correctly to the jury what the essential matters are which the Crown must prove in order to establish the allegation against the defendant of being a habitual criminal, and the Court should also be careful to safeguard him as much as possible, since from the nature of the charge and the trial the jury may well be predisposed against him. R. v. Young, 23 Cox, 624; 78 J. P. 80; 30 T. L. R. 69; 9 Cr. App. R. 185; and see also R. v. Brown, 23 Cox, 624; 78 J. P. 79; 30 T. L. R. 40: R. v. Sullivan, 30 T. L. R. 94; 9 Cr. App. R. 201.

By s. 10 (2) (b), (ante, p. 1470), the charge of being a habitual criminal may also be proved by showing that the accused has on a previous conviction been found to be a habitual criminal and sentenced to preventive detention. R. v. Davis [1917] 2 K. B. 855; 89 L. J. (K. B.) 119; 13 Cr. App. R. 10.

But the Court has a discretion as to whether it shall pass a sentence of preventive detention. R. v. Stanley [1920] 2 K. B. 235; 84 J. P. 119; 14 Cr. App. R. 141; R. v. Wilkins, 16 Cr. App. R. 96.

SECT. 3.

OFFENCES BY HABITUAL DRUNKARDS.

Statutes.

42 & 43 Vict. c. 19 (Inebriates Act, 1879), s. 3.—Definition of habitual drunkard.]— . . . "Habitual drunkard" means a person who not being amenable to any jurisdiction in lunacy is, notwithstanding, by reason of habitual intemperate drinking of intoxicating liquor, at times dangerous to himself or herself or to others, or incapable of managing himself or herself and his or her affairs. As to who are amenable to jurisdiction in lunacy, see 53 & 54 Vict. c. 5, s. 116; Wood-Renton on Lunacy, 392, 954. [A man may be a habitual drunkard within this definition if habitually given to bouts of drinking, although during intervals between the bouts he is a sober man, and capable of managing his affairs. Eaton v. Best [1909] 1 K. B. 632; 78 L. J. (K. B.) 425; 73 J. P. 113; 25 T. L. R. 244.]

61 & 62 Vict. c. 60 (Inebriates Act, 1898), s. 1.—(1) Power where a habitual drunkard is convicted on indictment for an offence to which drunkenness is a contributory cause, to order detention in an inebriate reformatory.]—Where a person is convicted on indictment of an offence punishable with imprisonment or penal servitude, if the Court is satisfied from the evidence that the offence was committed under the influence of drink, or that drunkenness was a contributing cause of the offence, and the offender admits that he is, or is found by the jury to be, a habitual drunkard (see supra), the Court may, in addition to or in substitution for any other sentence, order that he be detained for a term not exceeding three years in any state inebriate reformatory, or in any certified inebriate reformatory the managers of which are willing to receive him. [The Irish Court for Crown Cases Reserved has held that the word "convicted" includes a plea of guilty, and that the word "evidence" includes the sworn depositions. R. v. Mehan [1905] 2 Ir. Rep. 577.]

(2) . . . In the proceedings on the indictment the offender shall, in the first instance, be arraigned on so much only of the indictment as charges the said offence, and if on arraignment he pleads guilty or is found guilty by the jury, the jury shall, unless the offender admits that he is a habitual drunkard, be charged to inquire whether he is a habitual drunkard, and in that case it shall not be necessary to swear the jury again. Provided that, unless evidence that the offender is a habitual drunkard has been given before he is committed for trial, not less than seven days' notice shall be given to the proper officer of the Court by which the offender is to be tried, and to the offender, that it is intended to charge habitual drunkenness in the indictment. [Words omitted rep. Indictments Act, 1915. The use of the word "given" seems to mean that the notice need not be in writing. See R. v. Shurmer, 17 Q. B. D. 323; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 153 (ante, p. 436).]

Sect. 2.—Power to detain in an inebriate reformatory a habitual drunkard four times convicted of drunkenness, etc.]—(1) Any person who commits any of the offences mentioned in the first schedule to this Act, and who within the twelve months preceding the date of the commission of the offence has been convicted summarily at least three times of any offences so mentioned, and who is a habitual drunkard, shall be liable on conviction on indictment, or if he consents to be dealt with summarily (see 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 12), on summary conviction, to be detained for a term not exceeding three years in any certified inebriate reformatory the managers of which are willing to receive him. [The consent of the defendant to be tried summarily under this section is necessary before a magistrate can make an order under s. 6, sub-s. 1, of the Licensing Act, 1902. Commissioner of Metropolitan Police v. Donovan [1903] 1 K. B. 895; 72 L. J. (K. B.) 545; 20 Cox, 435.]

(2) The Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), shall apply to proceedings under this section as if the offence charged were specified in the second column of the first schedule to the Act [which relates to indictable offences by adults who consent to be summarily tried. Under this clause the offender must be informed of his right to be tried on indictment: see 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (ante, p. 7), and R. v. Cockshott [1898] 1 Q. B. 582; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 467. There is no power under this section to order imprisonment as well as detention in a certified inebriate reformatory, as the words of s. 1 (1) "in addition to or in substitution for any other sentence" are not inserted in this section. R. v. Briggs [1909] 1 K. B. 381; 78 L. J. (K. B.) 116; 73 J. P. 31; 43 L. J. Newsp. 737].

Sect. 3.—Power of Secretary of State to establish state inebriate reformatories.]—Such reformatories have been established, at Aylesbury Prison for women, and at Warwick Prison for men. See Parl. Pap. 1904 (C. 2285), p. 91; Parl. Pap. 1909 (C. 4438, 4439).

Sect. 4.—Power of Secretary of State to make rules and regulations for the management of state inebriate reformatories.]—Exercised as to England 21*st June*, 1901, 8*th June*, 1902, 29*th Dec.*, 1903, and 29*th April*. 1904. See Stat. Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 6, tit. Inebriate, p. 51, and Stat. Rules and Orders, 1904, p. 261.

Sects. 5, 6, 21.—Power of Secretary of State to certify inebriate reformatories and to make regulations for certified inebriate reformatories.]—Model regulations have been framed for such institutions (Id. p. 51), but the regulations for each institution are separately certified, and are printed as statutory rules. Regulations have also been made (6*th Dec.*, 1900) as to the absence of inmates on leave and (4*th June*, 1902) as to transfer of inmates from one such reformatory to another and from such reformatories to state inebriate reformatories; and (July 1, 1904) as to photographing inmates.

Sect. 8.—Power of Treasury to contribute to the expenses of persons detained in certified inebriate reformatories.]—Such contributions are made.

Sect. 9.—Power of county or borough councils to contribute to or maintain certified inebriate reformatories.]—See Parl. Pap. 1909 (C. 4438, 4439). for a report on these Acts.

Sect. 29.—Short title and construction.]—This Act may be cited as the Inebriates Act, 1898, and shall be construed as one with the Inebriates Acts, 1879 and 1888.

62 & 63 Vict. c. 35 (Inebriates Act, 1899), s. 1.—Costs.]—The expenses of any prosecution on indictment under s. 2 of the Inebriates Act, 1898, shall be payable as in cases of indictment for felony, and where any case under that section is dealt with summarily, the expenses of the prosecution shall be payable in manner provided by s. 28 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49). [This section is adapted to the present practice as to costs by 8 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 9 (6), ante, p. 271.]

FIRST SCHEDULE TO 61 & 62 VICT. C. 60.

Being found drunk in a highway or other public place, whether a building or not, or on licensed premises.	Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 12.

FIRST SCHEDULE—continued.

Being drunk and persisting, after being refused admission on that account, in attempting to enter a passenger steamer.	Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), s. 287.
Being drunk on board a passenger steamer, and refusing to leave such steamer when requested.
[Being found drunk on any highway or other public place, whether a building or not, or on any licensed premises, while having the charge of a child under the age of seven years.	Licensing Act, 1902 (2 Edw. 7, c. 28), s. 2, sub-s. 3 (E).]
[Being found in a state of intoxication and incapable of taking care of himself and not under the care or protection of some suitable person, in any street, thoroughfare, or public place, whether a building or not, or on any licensed premises.	Licensing (Scotland) Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 70, sub-ss. 1, 3, 5, 6. (a)]
[Being drunk while in charge in any street or other place of any carriage, horse, cattle, or steam-engine, or when in the possession of any loaded firearms.	Licensing (Scotland) Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 70, sub-ss. 1, 3. (b)]
[Behaving while drunk in a riotous or disorderly manner in any street, thoroughfare, or public place, whether a building or not, or on any licensed premises, or while drunk in any street, etc., using any obscene or indecent language to the annoyance of any person.	Licensing (Scotland) Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 70, sub-ss. 1, 3. (c)]
[Being found drunk in any street, thoroughfare, or public place, whether a building or not, while having the charge of a child apparently under the age of seven years.	Licensing (Scotland) Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 70, sub-ss. 2, 3, 5, 6.]
[Being found in any shebeen drunk.	Public Houses Acts Amendment (Scotland) Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 35), s. 19. (d)]
Refusing or neglecting when drunk to quit any premises or places licensed under the Refreshment Houses (Ireland) Act, 1860, when requested.	Refreshment Houses (Ireland) Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 107), s. 42.
Being drunk in any street or public thoroughfare within the Dublin police district, or being guilty while drunk of any riotous or indecent behaviour.	Dublin Police Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 24), s. 15.
Being found drunk in any street, square, lane, road, way, or other public thoroughfare or place.	Licensing (Ireland) Act, 1836 (6 & 7 W. 4, c. 38), s. 12.
All similar offences in local Acts.

(a) Substituted for 25 & 26 Vict. c. 35, s. 23 (rep.), and 55 & 56 Vict. c. 55, s. 381 (24) (rep.).

(b) Substituted for 55 & 56 Vict. c. 55, s. 380 (11), by 3 Edw. 7, c. 25, ss. 70 (4), 110.

(c) Substituted for 63 & 64 Vict. c. 28, s. 2 (rep.).

(d) 25 & 26 Vict. c. 35, s. 19, was repealed by 3 Edw. 7, c. 25, s. 110.

8 Edw. 7, c. 67 (Children Act, 1908), s. 26.—Power as to habitual drunkards.] —Where it appears to the Court by or before which any person is convicted of an offence of cruelty, or of any of the offences mentioned in the first schedule to this Act (ante, p. 994), that that person is a parent of the child or young person in respect of whom the offence was committed, or is living with the parent of the child or young person, and is a habitual drunkard within the meaning of the Inebriates Acts, 1879 to 1900, the Court, in lieu of sentencing that person to imprisonment, may, if it thinks fit, make an order for his detention in a retreat under the said Acts, the licensee of which is willing to receive him, for any period named in the order, not exceeding two years, and the said order shall have the like effect, and copies thereof shall be sent to the local authority and Secretary of State in like manner, as if it were an application duly made by that person and duly attested by a justice under the said Acts; and the Court may order an officer of the Court or constable to remove that person to the retreat, and on his reception the said Acts shall have effect as if he had been admitted in pursuance of an application so made and attested as aforesaid: Provided that—

(a) an order for the detention of a person in a retreat shall not be made under this section unless that person, having had such notice as the Court deems sufficient of the intention to allege habitual drunkenness, consents to the order being made; and

(b) if the wife or husband of such person, being present at the hearing of the charge, objects to the order being made, the Court shall, before making the order, take into consideration any representation made to it by the wife or husband; and

(c) before making the order the Court shall, to such extent as it may deem reasonably sufficient, be satisfied that provision will be made for defraying the expenses of such person during detention in a retreat; and

(d) nothing in this section shall affect any power of the Court to order the person convicted to be detained in a certified inebriate reformatory [under 61 & 62 Vict. c. 60, supra].

[This section is a re-enactment of 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 11, with the addition of (d).]

Charge in indictment (ante, p. 1476).

After charging the offence, add "A. B. is a habitual drunkard." 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90, r. 11, ante, p. 53.

Evidence.

As to the proof of the offence charged, see ante, passim. Prove also that the offence was committed under the influence of drink, or that drunkenness was a contributing cause of the offence. To prove that the offender is a habitual drunkard, call evidence to show that he is addicted to the intemperate use of intoxicants, and that he has consequently on specified occasions been dangerous to himself or others, or incapable of managing his affairs, and that he has not been certified as insane, nor otherwise rendered amenable to jurisdiction in lunacy. Previous convictions of offences within the first schedule seem to be admissible. Seven days' notice prior to the trial (see ante, p. 1476) of the intention to charge habitual drunkenness must be given to the accused person and to the proper officer of the Court of trial, unless evidence of habitual drunkenness has been given before the magistrates.

Indictment under 61 & 62 Vict. c. 60, s. 2 (ante, p. 1476).

Commencement as ante, p. 1464.

STATEMENT OF OFFENCE.

Habitual drunkard, contrary to section 2 of the Inebriates Act, 1898.

PARTICULARS OF OFFENCE.

A. B., on the —— day of ——, in the county of ——, was found drunk in a highway.

A. B. has been three times summarily convicted, within the twelve months preceding the ——day of ——, of being found drunk in a highway, namely, on —— day of ——, at ——; on the —— day of ——, at ——; and on the —— day of ——, at ——.

A. B., is a habitual drunkard.

Evidence.

Prove the commission of the subsequent offence. Prove the previous convictions by producing a record or extract, with evidence to identify the defendant with the person convicted. See 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, pp. 422, 1466). Convictions in Scotland or Ireland appear to be admissible. The register of the Court of summary jurisdiction is sufficient proof on a trial on indictment. 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58, s. 28 (1) (ante, p. 423). Prove that the accused is a habitual drunkard as directed under the last precedent.

APPENDICES.

APPENDIX A.

Indictments Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 90).

1.—Rules as to indictments.—The rules contained in the First Schedule to this Act with respect to indictments shall have effect as if enacted in this Act, but those rules may be added to, varied, or annulled by further rules made by the rule committee under this Act.

2.—Powers of rule committee.—(1) There shall be established for the purposes of this Act a rule committee consisting of the Lord Chief Justice of England for the time being, and of a judge of the High Court, a chairman of quarter sessions, a recorder, a clerk of assize, a clerk of the peace, and another person having experience in criminal procedure, appointed in each case by the Lord Chief Justice.

(2) The rule committee shall have power from time to time, subject to the approval of the Lord Chancellor, to make rules varying or annulling the rules contained in the First Schedule to this Act and to make further rules with respect to the matters dealt with in those rules, and those rules shall have effect subject to any modifications or additions so made.

(3) Any rules made by the rule committee shall be laid, as soon as may be, before both Houses of Parliament, and, if within forty days on which either House has sat since the rules were so laid before the House a petition is presented to His Majesty by that House praying that the rules or any part of them may be annulled, His Majesty may thereupon by Order in Council annul the same, and the same shall thenceforth be void, but without prejudice to the validity of anything done thereunder.

(4) The term of office of any person who is a member of the committee by virtue of appointment shall be such as may be specified in the appointment.

3.—General provisions as to indictments.—(1) Every indictment shall contain, and shall be sufficient if it contains, a statement of the specific offence or offences with which the accused person is charged, together with such particulars as may be necessary for giving reasonable information as to the nature of the charge.

(2) Notwithstanding any rule of law or practice, an indictment shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, not be open to objection in respect of its form or contents if it is framed in accordance with the rules under this Act.

4.—Joinder of charges in the same indictment.—Subject to the provisions of the rules under this Act, charges for more than one felony or for more than one misdemeanor, and charges for both felonies and misdemeanors, may be joined in the same indictment, but where a felony is tried together with any misdemeanor, the jury shall be sworn and the person accused shall have the same right of challenging jurors as if all the offences charged in the indictment were felonies.

5.—Orders for amendment of indictment, separate trial, and postponement of trial.—(1) Where, before trial, or at any stage of a trial, it appears to the court that the indictment is defective, the court shall make such order for the amendment of the indictment as the court thinks necessary to meet the circumstances of the case, unless, having regard to the merits of the case, the required amendments cannot be made without injustice, and may make such order as to the payment of any costs incurred owing to the necessity for amendment as the court thinks fit.

(2) Where an indictment is so amended, a note of the order for amendment shall be endorsed on the indictment, and the indictment shall be treated for the purposes of the trial and for the purposes of all proceedings in connection therewith as having been found by the grand jury in the amended form.

(3) Where, before trial, or at any stage of a trial, the court is of opinion that a person accused may be prejudiced or embarrassed in his defence by reason of being charged with more than one offence in the same indictment, or that for any other reason it is desirable to direct that the person should be tried separately for any one or more offences charged in an indictment, the court may order a separate trial of any count or counts of such indictment.

(4) Where, before trial, or at any stage of a trial, the court is of opinion that the postponement of the trial of a person accused is expedient as a consequence of the exercise of any power of the court under this Act to amend an indictment or to order a separate trial of a count, the court shall make such order as to the postponement of the trial as appears necessary.

(5) Where an order of the court is made under this section for a separate trial or for the postponement of a trial—

(a) if such an order is made during a trial the court may order that the jury are to be discharged from giving a verdict on the count or counts the trial of which is postponed or on the indictment, as the case may be; and

(b) the procedure on the separate trial of a count shall be the same in all respects as if the count had been found in a separate indictment, and the procedure on the postponed trial shall be the same in all respects (if the jury has been discharged) as if the trial had not commenced; and

(c) the court may make such order as to costs and as to admitting the accused person to bail, and as to the enlargement of recognizances and otherwise as the court thinks fit.

(6) Any power of the court under this section shall be in addition to and not in derogation of any other power of the court for the same or similar purposes.

6.—Costs of defective or redundant indictments.—Where it appears to the court that an indictment contains unnecessary matter, or is of unnecessary length, or is materially defective in any respect, the court may make such order as to the payment of that part of the costs of the prosecution which has been incurred by reason of the indictment so containing unnecessary matter, or being of unnecessary length, or being materially defective as the court thinks fit.

7.—Provision as to Vexatious Indictments Acts.—Nothing in this Act shall prevent an indictment being open to objection if it contravenes or fails to comply with the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17), as amended by section one of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 35), or any other enactment: Provided that an indictment shall not be open to objection under those Acts on the ground that a count is joined with the rest of the indictment which could not at the time of the passing of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1867, be lawfully joined, if that count can be lawfully joined under the law for the time being in force.

8.—Savings and interpretation.—(1) Nothing in this Act or the rules thereunder shall affect the law or practice relating to the jurisdiction of a court or the place where an accused person can be tried, nor prejudice or diminish in any respect the obligation to establish by evidence according to law any acts, omissions, or intentions which are legally necessary to constitute the offence with which the person accused is charged, nor otherwise affect the laws of evidence in criminal cases.

(2) In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires, the expression "the court" means the court before which any indictable offence is tried or prosecuted.

(3) The provisions of this Act relating to indictments shall apply to criminal informations in the High Court and inquisitions, and also to any plea, replication, or other criminal pleading, with such modifications as may be made by rules under this Act.

9.—Repeal, extent, short title, and commencement.—(1) The enactments specified in the Second Schedule to this Act are hereby repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column of that schedule.

(2) This Act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland.

(3) This Act may be cited as the Indictments Act, 1915.

(4) This Act shall come into operation on the first day of April nineteen hundred and sixteen, but shall not apply to indictments in the case of persons committed for trial before that date, or to the trial of any such person.

SCHEDULES.

First Schedule.

Rules.

1.—Material, &c., for indictments.—(1) An indictment may be on parchment or durable paper, and may be either written or printed, or partly written and partly printed.

(2) Each sheet on which an indictment is set out shall be not more than 12 and not less than 6 inches in length, and not more than 14 and not less than 12 inches in width, and if more than one sheet is required, the sheets shall be fastened together in book form.

(3) A proper margin not less than 3 inches in width shall be kept on the left-hand side of each sheet.

(4) Figures and abbreviations may be used in an indictment for expressing anything which is commonly expressed thereby.

(5) There shall be endorsed on the back of an indictment the name of every witness examined or intended to be examined by the grand jury, and the foreman of the grand jury shall write his initials against the name of each witness so examined.

(6) An indictment shall not be open to objection by reason only of any failure to comply with this rule.

2.—Commencement of the indictment.—The commencement of the indictment shall be in the following form :—

The King v. A. B.

Court of Trial [e.g., Central Criminal Court, [or] In the High Court of Justice, King's Bench Division, [or] Durham County Assizes held at Durham, [or] Hants Quarter Sessions held at Winchester].

Presentment of the Grand Jury.

A. B. is charged with the following offence [offences] :—

3.—Joining of charges in one indictment. Charges for any offences, whether felonies or misdemeanors, may be joined in the same indictment if those charges are founded on the same facts, or form or are a part of a series of offences of the same or a similar character.

4. Mode in which offences are to be charged.—(1) A description of the offence charged in an indictment, or where more than one offence is charged in an indictment, of each offence so charged, shall be set out in the indictment in a separate paragraph called a count.

(2) A count of an indictment shall commence with a statement of the offence charged, called the statement of offence.

(3) The statement of offence shall describe the offence shortly in ordinary language, avoiding as far as possible the use of technical terms, and without necessarily stating all the essential elements of the offence, and if the offence charged is one created by statute, shall contain a reference to the section of the statute creating the offence.

(4) After the statement of the offence, particulars of such offence shall be set out in ordinary language, in which the use of technical terms shall not be necessary :

Provided that where any rule of law or any statute limits the particulars of an offence which are required to be given in an indictment, nothing in this rule shall require any more particulars to be given than those so required.

(5) The forms set out in the appendix to these rules or forms conforming thereto as nearly as may be shall be used in cases to which they are applicable, and in other cases forms to the like effect or conforming thereto as nearly as may be shall be used, the statement of offence and the particulars of offence being varied according to the circumstances in each case.

(6) Where an indictment contains more than one count, the counts shall be numbered consecutively.

5.—Provisions as to statutory offences.—(1) Where an enactment constituting an offence states the offence to be the doing or the omission to do any one of any different acts in the alternative, or the doing or the omission to do any act in any one of any different capacities, or with any one of any different intentions, or states any part of the offence in the alternative, the acts, omissions, capacities, or intentions, or other matters stated in the alternative in the enactment, may be stated in the alternative in the count charging the offence.

(2) It shall not be necessary, in any count charging a statutory offence, to negative any exception or exemption from or qualification to the operation of the statute creating the offence.

6.—Description of property.—(1) The description of property in a count in an indictment shall be in ordinary language and such as to indicate with reasonable clearness the property referred to, and if the property is so described it shall not be necessary (except when required for the purpose of describing an offence depending on any special ownership of property or special value of property) to name the person to whom the property belongs or the value of the property.

(2) Where property is vested in more than one person, and the owners of the property are referred to in an indictment it shall be sufficient to describe the property as owned by one of those persons by name with others, and if the persons owing the property are a body of persons with a collective name, such as " Inhabitants," " Trustees," " Commissioners," or " Club " or other such name, it shall be sufficient to use the collective name without naming any individual.

7.—Description of persons.—The description or designation in an indictment of the accused person, or of any other person to whom reference is made therein, shall be such as is reasonably sufficient to identify him, without necessarily stating his correct name, or his abode, style, degree, or occupation; and if, owing to the name of the person not being known, or for any other reason, it is impracticable to give such a description or designation, such description or designation shall be given as is reasonably practicable in the circumstances, or such person may be described as "a person unknown."

8.—Description of document.—Where it is necessary to refer to any document or instrument in an indictment, it shall be sufficient to describe it by any name or designation by which it is usually known, or by the purport thereof, without setting out any copy thereof.

9.—General rule as to description.—Subject to any other provisions of these rules, it shall be sufficient to describe any place, time, thing, matter, act or omission whatsoever to which it is necessary to refer in any indictment, in ordinary language in such a manner as to indicate with reasonable clearness the place, time, thing, matter, act or omission referred to.

10.—Statement of intent.—It shall not be necessary in stating any intent to defraud, deceive or injure to state an intent to defraud, deceive or injure any particular person where the statute creating the offence does not make an intent to defraud, deceive or injure a particular person an essential ingredient of the offence.

11.—Charge of previous convictions, &c.—Any charge of a previous conviction of an offence or of being a habitual criminal or a habitual drunkard shall be charged at the end of the indictment by means of a statement—in the case of a previous conviction that the person accused has been previously convicted of that offence at a certain time and place without stating the particulars of the offence, and in the case of a habitual criminal or habitual drunkard, that the offender is a habitual criminal or a habitual drunkard, as the case may be.

12.—Saving for s. 32 (4) of 8 Edw. 7, c. 67. Nothing in these rules or in any rules made under section two of this Act shall affect the provisions of subsection (4) of section thirty-two of the Children Act, 1908.

13.—Duty to furnish copy of indictment.—(1) It shall be the duty of the clerk of assize, after a true bill has been found on any indictment, to supply to the accused person, on request, a copy of the indictment free of charge.

(2) The cost of any copy supplied to the accused person whether under this rule or otherwise shall be treated as part of the costs of the prosecution for the purpose of section one of the Costs in Criminal Cases Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 15).

(3) In the application of this rule to quarter sessions, the clerk of the peace shall be substituted for the clerk of assize.

14.—Interpretation.—The Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63), applies for the interpretation of these rules, as it applies for the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

15.—Short title.—These rules may be cited as the Indictment Rules, 1915, and these rules, together with any rules made under section two of this Act, may be cited together by such collective title as may be prescribed by the last-mentioned rules.

THE INDICTMENT RULES, 1916, DATED MAY 3, 1916, BEING RULES MADE BY THE RULE COMMITTEE ESTABLISHED UNDER THE INDICTMENTS ACT, 1915 (5 & 6 GEO. 5, C. 90). STATUTORY RULES AND ORDERS, 1916. (No. 282—L. 11.)

We, the Rule Committee established under section 2 of the Indictments Act, 1915, hereby make the following Rules :—

1.—(1) Forms 2, 9, 13 and 22 appended to the Indictment Rules, 1915, are hereby annulled, and the forms appended hereto and bearing the numbers 2, 9, 13 and 27 are respectively substituted therefor.

(2) Additional forms numbered 28, 29, 30, 31 and 32 respectively, and appended hereto, shall be used in cases to which they are applicable in accordance with Rule 4 (5).

2.—(1) These rules may be cited as the Indictment Rules, 1916, and, together with the Indictment Rules, 1915, as the Indictment Rules, 1915-16.

(2) These rules shall not apply to indictments in the case of persons committed for trial before the first day of April, 1916, or to the trial of any such person.

THE INDICTMENT (CRIMINAL INFORMATIONS AND INQUISITIONS) RULES, 1916, DATED MAY 23, 1916, RELATING TO CRIMINAL INFORMATIONS AND INQUISITIONS, MADE BY THE RULE COMMITTEE ESTABLISHED UNDER THE INDICTMENTS ACT, 1915 (5 & 6 GEO. 5, C. 90). STATUTORY RULES AND ORDERS, 1916. (No. 323 —L. 12.)

We, the Rule Committee established under section 2 of the Indictments Act, 1915 (hereinafter called "the Act"), hereby make the following Rules :—

1. Rule 1 (5) in the First Schedule to the Act shall not apply to Criminal Informations in the High Court.

Rule 2 in the First Schedule to the Act shall apply to such Criminal Informations, substituting for the words " Presentment of the Grand Jury " the words " Criminal Information filed by the King's Attorney-General " or " The King's Coroner and Attorney."

2. The King's Attorney-General or any person procuring any Criminal Information to be exhibited, received, or filed at the Crown Office shall deliver to the Master of the Crown Office a true copy thereof for each accused person who shall on request be supplied therewith free of charge.

3.—(1) Rule 1 (5) and Rule 2 in the First Schedule to the Act shall not apply to Coroners' Inquisitions.

(2) In Coroners' Inquisitions the form of Inquisition provided by the Coroners' Act, 1887, may be used with such alterations as may be made under that Act, but any offence charged therein shall be stated in accordance with the form of indictment relating thereto prescribed by the Indictment Rules, 1915-16.

4. It shall be the duty of the Clerk of Assize to supply on request free of charge to a person committed for trial on a Coroners' Inquisition a copy of so much of the Inquisition as charges him with an offence, and the cost of such copy shall be treated as part of the costs of the prosecution for the purpose of section one of the Costs in Criminal Cases Act, 1908.

5. Except as in these Rules otherwise provided the Indictment Rules, 1915-16, relating to Indictments shall apply to Criminal Informations in the High Court and to Inquisitions and also to any plea replication or other pleading relating thereto.

6.—(1) These Rules may be cited as the Indictment (Criminal Informations and Inquisitions) Rules, 1916, and together with the Indictment Rules, 1915, and the Indictment Rules, 1916, as the Indictment Rules, 1915-16.

(2) These Rules shall not apply to Criminal Informations in the High Court filed before the 1st day of May, 1916, nor to Inquisitions found before that date, nor to the trial of any person upon any such Criminal Information or Inquisition.

APPENDIX C.

NOTE AS TO DIFFERENT KINDS OF PUNISHMENT.

PENAL SERVITUDE.

There are two divisions of convict sentences to penal servitude—

A. The Ordinary Division.

B. The Long-sentence Division for convicts sentenced to 8 years or more.

Convicts immediately after sentence are placed in the Ordinary Division in either (a) the Star Class, for those not previously convicted or not habitually criminal or of corrupt habits; (b) the Intermediate Class, for first offenders who, owing to their general character and antecedents, are not considered suitable for the Star Class, or for offenders previously convicted but not of grave or persistent crime; (c) Recidivist Class, for those previously sentenced to penal servitude, or who have been guilty of grave or persistent crime.

Convicts sentenced to more than 8 years may be placed in long-sentence division after serving more than 5 years provided their general character and conduct in prison are satisfactory. They are then kept in a separate part of the prison and allowed to earn gratuity continuously, a portion of which may be expended in the purchase of comforts at the prison store. They may also be allowed to have their meals in association, and converse with each other at exercise or meals.

Young convicts under 21 may be transferred to a Borstal Institution (Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, s. 3, ante, p. 255). Those who serve their sentence in a convict prison may be given special treatment and instruction in education and useful trades and industries to fit them to earn their livelihood on release.

All male convicts pass the first part of their sentence in separate confinement for periods not exceeding 3 months, according to the class they are placed in. During this period they are employed in suitable industrial labour. After its completion they are transferred to a Public Works Prison where they may be employed in association in workshops or the usual prison industries or out of doors on quarrying or farm or building work. Weak-minded convicts who cannot be certified as actually insane are given special treatment. A male convict by good conduct and industry may earn a remission of sentence of one fourth of his total sentence; a female convict one third, and in addition female convicts under sentences of 5 years and upwards are in certain cases transferred to Refuges nine months before the ordinary time for their release. In the case of life sentences the ordinary rules as to remission do not apply, but each case is considered on its merits at intervals, and especially at the end of 20 years.

The remission earned by convicts differs from the remission in the case of a sentence of imprisonment, not only as to its length (see infra) but also as to its nature. In the case of a sentence of imprisonment the remission is absolute, but in the case of penal servitude the remission is conditional only, and may be forfeited (see ante, p. 1460).

IMPRISONMENT.

Without hard labour.—Persons sentenced to imprisonment without hard labour are classed in three divisions—First, Second, and Third.

Prisoners in the First Division are treated in very much the same way as prisoners awaiting trial.

Prisoners in the Second Division are kept separate from other prisoners, wear a different dress, and are allowed more frequent letters and visits, and a mattress to sleep on throughout their sentence. They are employed on industrial work.

The Third Division includes all convicted persons not sentenced to penal servitude or imprisonment with hard labour. Their treatment differs but little from prisoners sentenced to hard labour except for the first month. They are employed on industrial labour throughout their sentence and may work either in their cells or in association, and are not required to sleep without a mattress.

With hard labour.—A prisoner sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour serves the first 28 days in strict separation and is employed on hard bodily or manual labour during that time. After that period he is eligible for employment in association either at his trade or at some suitable industrial labour. If under 60 he may be required to sleep without a mattress for the first 14 days.

Remission of sentence.—A prisoner sentenced to imprisonment for more than one month may by special industry and good conduct earn a remission of a part of his sentence not exceeding one sixth of the whole. The sentence is deemed to expire on the day when he is discharged, and the remission is therefore not conditional as in the case of a sentence of penal servitude.

THE BORSTAL SYSTEM.

The following are the principal features of the system :—

(1) Trade instruction.—Special workshop accommodation is provided and every juvenile-adult works at, and if necessary is taught in association under a competent officer, some useful industry such as carpentry, building, blacksmithing, tinsmithing, baking, or market gardening and other agricultural work.

(2) Education.—Special and personal attention is given by the chaplain and schoolmaster to the matter of the inmates' education and instruction. Every juvenile-adult who has not passed Standard III. receives instruction in association, and those who have passed Standard III. receive further special instruction in evening classes. Every inmate is encouraged to use the carefully selected literature provided in the library. Lectures and addresses are arranged from time to time.

(3) Drill.—Every juvenile-adult who is medically fit is exercised regularly during his sentence in physical and military marching drill under competent instructors.

(4) Scheme of rewards and encouragement to industry and good conduct.—This scheme comprises a special classification into grades, and a system of marks according to which promotion is adjudged and certain privileges awarded, and it has been carefully devised with a view to stimulating and encouraging the inmate to profit from the reformatory influences which are brought to bear on him. There are three grades of juvenile-adults—Ordinary, Special, and Penal. Each inmate commences on the Ordinary Grade. He may for good conduct and industry be promoted to the Special Grade, or if he is ill-conducted he may be degraded by order of the Governor or the Prison Commissioners to the Penal Grade.

As an adjunct quite indispensable to any scheme for the reclamation of young criminals there must always be effective means of supervision and rehabilitation in honest life after discharge from the Institution. In the case of the Borstal System this is provided by a voluntary association known as the Borstal Association (assisted by paid agents), which devotes much labour and care to the lads, visiting them whilst still in the Institution, arranging suitable employment for them against their discharge, assisting them with advice, and in every way possible encouraging them to take honourable places in the community.

A person undergoing detention in Borstal Institutions does not earn remission of sentence as a matter of course, but is eligible for consideration for licence after he has earned marks representing not less than six months' sentence. The Institution Board (composed of such officials of the Institution the Prison Commissioners may select) consider each case on its merits and submit it to the Visiting Committee, who, if they think fit, may recommend to the Prison Commissioners that he be discharged from the Institution on licence.

The time spent under training necessarily varies with the individual, and remission is only granted where it appears that the prisoner is likely to benefit by release rather than by serving under the system the whole of his sentence, and in this connection special regard is paid to the report of the Borstal Association on the arrangements which can be made for his employment and on his prospects generally.

The following classes of prisoners are, as a rule, not regarded as suitable for Borstal treatment :—

(a) Young prisoners whose previous character is good and who might suffer more by association with recidivists and " hooligans " than they would gain by the special training.

(b) Young persons who have already served a term in a Borstal Institution and failed to profit by it.

(c) Ex-reformatory boys or girls where it seems impossible that further training will have any good effect.

(d) Aliens.

Modified Borstal System.—Where juvenile-adults are sentenced to imprisonment of the ordinary kind they may at the discretion of the Prison Commissioners serve their sentence under a system similar to the Borstal system with modifications.

HABITUAL CRIMINALS.

RULES, DATED APRIL 24, 1911, MADE BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE UNDER THE PRISON ACT, 1898 (61-2 VICT. C. 41), AND THE PREVENTION OF CRIME ACT, 1908 (8 EDW. 7. C. 59), FOR PERSONS UNDERGOING PREVENTIVE DETENTION.

(1) Persons undergoing Preventive Detention shall be divided into three Grades, Ordinary, Special, and Disciplinary. On entering upon Preventive Detention, they shall be placed in the Ordinary Grade.

(2) After every six months passed in the Ordinary Grade with exemplary conduct a prisoner who has shown zeal and industry in the work assigned to him may be awarded a certificate of industry and conduct. Four of these certificates will entitle him to promotion to the Special Grade. With each certificate a prisoner will receive a good conduct stripe carrying privileges or a small money payment.

(3) A prisoner may be placed in the Disciplinary Grade by order of the Governor as part of a punishment for misconduct, or because he is known to be exercising a bad influence on others, and may be kept there as long as may be necessary in the interests of himself and of others. While in the Disciplinary Grade he may be employed in association if his conduct justifies association, but he will not be associated with others except at labour.

(4) Prisoners will be employed either at useful trades in which they will be instructed, or at agricultural work, or in the service of the prison, and those in the Ordinary and Special Grades will be allowed to earn gratuity by their work. They will be allowed to spend a portion of their gratuity in the purchase of additions to their dietary, or to send it to their families, or to accumulate it for use on their discharge.

(5) A prisoner who is in hospital, or medically unfit for full work will, on the recommendation of the medical officer who will certify that the disability was genuine and not caused by the prisoner's own fault, be credited with gratuity in proportion to his earnings when in health or calculated on his general disposition to work, coupled with good conduct.

(6) A canteen will be opened in the prison at which prisoners in the Ordinary and Special Grades may purchase articles of food, and other small articles at prices to be fixed by the directors. The cost of such articles will be charged against each prisoner's gratuity. The privilege of purchasing articles in the canteen may at any time be limited or withdrawn by the Governor.

(7) Prisoners who have obtained three certificates of industry will be eligible to have a garden allotment assigned to them which they may cultivate at such times as may be prescribed. The produce of these allotments will, if possible, be purchased for use in prisons at market rates, and the proceeds credited to the prisoner.

(8) Prisoners in the Ordinary Grade may be allowed to associate at meal times and also, after gaining the second certificate, in the evenings. Prisoners in the Special Grade may also be allowed to associate at meal times and in the evenings, and shall be allowed such additional relaxations of a literary and social character as may be prescribed from time to time.

(9) Any of the privileges prescribed in these special rules or gratuity earned may be forfeited for misconduct. A prisoner has no legal claim upon his gratuity, which will be expended for his benefit, or may be withheld at the discretion of the society or person under whose supervision he is placed.

(10) It will be the duty of the chaplain and prison minister to see each prisoner individually from time to time during his detention and to promote the reformation of those under their spiritual charge. Divine Service will be held weekly in the prison, and there will be in addition such mission services, lectures and addresses on religious, moral, and secular subjects as may be arranged.

(11) Prisoners shall receive the diets which the directors may prescribe from time to time.

(12) Prisoners will be allowed to write and receive a letter and to receive a visit at fixed intervals according to their grade.
